FROM A BIRD'S EYE VIEW
by Don. Hall

In my last editorial in "The ENQUIRY" a direct reference was made to a controversy in Bostwick Hall. In the following guest editorial David Robinson, a hall manager in Bostwick, explicates the current situation and comments on the implications involved therein. The ENQUIRY editors endorse his statements which immediately follow.

SINGLE PEOPLE'S RIGHTS AT SOUTHEASTERN:
ADDRESSING THE ISSUE by David Robinson

I would like to address the issue of single people's rights, especially as they relate to the controversy in Bostwick. It seems that we have been ascribed to the status of being irresponsible adolescents simply because we have elected not to be married. It seems to matter little that a number of us are older and in many ways are more mature than some of the married students of this seminary family.

I say that to say this. Earlier in the semester the residents of third floor Bostwick unanimously petitioned the administration for a lounge in a presently unused area and for visiting rights in our kitchen. This petition was shuffled around, never properly presented in Administrative Council and eventually rejected. The reasons were twofold. One, since a lounge would be provided next year, there was no real need for something now. Two, it would not be in compliance with existing regulations of Johnson and Women's dormitories.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The administration's response should have been to equalize the total situation by granting our simple request. I realize this sounds absurd, but why don't they close Johnson lobby and not allow men in the Women's Dorm kitchen if they want regulations to be equal?

How can the administration talk about equality when so many are discriminated against? This is a much broader matter than the situation in Bostwick. Why are speeches made by a married resident of Wake Forest in FORUM about alcohol in dorms without his mention of the married student housing? If married students aren't "policed," then why are singles? Why do divorcees have to be interrogated before they can be admitted into this institution? I even wonder how much respect this administration has for the institution of marriage by using it as a cure-all. I am referring to the numerous times that "you ought to get married" has been the answer for my questions concerning singles' rights. I have more respect for marriage than as a license to sleep with someone.

It is my hope that this institution will examine the ethics of the regulations it enforces and proposes to enforce. It is a shame that economics is more important than human rights. I wonder what would happen if the financial supporters of this institution were presented with this issue--and they agreed with our position.

ALL STUDENTS ARE INVITED TO ALL STUDENT COUNCIL MEETINGS. ONE SUCH GATHERING WILL BE IN SESSION FRIDAY, MARCH 25 AT 10:00 a.m. IN MACKIE HALL'S CONFERENCE ROOM.

TRUSTEE'S MEETING (MARCH 14-15)
by Jim Brown

In their semianual meeting the trustees of SEBTS made some important decisions. Some of which were: Increased matriculation fee from $100 to $150 per semester (Concurrent with the other five S.B. seminaries), Approved the request of the town of Wake Forest for annexation of seminary land, And approved the Long Range Planning Steering Committee's Plan of Action. A complete listing of Trustee actions is given at another point in this issue.

A Report From And Concerning the Students of Southeastern was sent to the Trustees on March 1. The Trustees asked questions concerning this report at the Trustee's full board meeting on Tuesday, March 15. Jim Brown responded to questions such as, "What is the feeling of students concerning the increase in enrollment?" Jim responded that there was an increased "collegiate" type atmosphere on campus, but also a feeling of frustration because of insufficient housing. "Why do students feel they need less academic pressure?" Many students attempt to carry a full academic load and at the same time pastor a church or work part-time. "Do the students of Southeastern sense the need for a chair of evangelism?" In a survey taken in the spring of 1976, 75% of the students surveyed said that the seminary was not adequately equipping them in the area of personal evangelism. I assume that most of these students would be interested in a course in evangelism.

The Report From and Concerning the Students of Southeastern is posted on various bulletin boards on campus and is available, upon request, from Jim Brown.

STARGAZER

This is another in the series of articles designed to attract your attention and cause you to say, "What does he mean by that?" I knew that some people complained of the food in the cafeteria, but did you notice that someone, (or something) killed a pigeon on the campus.

Speaking of the cafeteria, I was asked the other day, Founders Day to be exact, had I ever seen so many of the faculty testing the facility. Personally I had the liver and on...no! I have to say that the onions were very sparse. the liver was excellent, but the advertising was bad.

They had a forum on Ethics. I was surprised to hear about cheating. I'm too busy writing to cheat. And cutting up the library books! I thought that was what the copying machine was for. Live and learn, but then a razor blade costs more than a nickel.

Have you noticed John Trent's charisma? Every time there is a group gathered, John seems to be the center. Tell us John, How do you do it?

I've been listening on the CB lately and I have noticed some of the seminary call signs: Stargazer, Green Apple, Green Ghost, Good News Fisherman, Good Shepherd and Scatterbrain to name a few. Does the handle fit?

It was with some regret that we learned that Dr. Colin Harris will be leaving for Mercer University in the Fall. We will all miss his pleasant manner in the classroom and his friendly counsel.

The next time you go by the Binkley Chapel, look at the columns. Do you know whether they are Galatian, Corinthian, Roman, or Gothic/Doric? I'll tell you next time. While you are waiting for chapel to start, can you tell me how many bits of dentil molding there are from the window to the interior column? Answer next week.

If you have any little words that you want to lay on the Stargazer, you can drop them off at the Enquiry or box 2055. Until next week, remember that the Stargazer doesn't look just at the stars.

NOTE TO "STARGAZER"
by S. Sherbert

In reference to your use of the dictionary, it is ironic that the word is not only misspelled, but it is the wrong form of the word! The correct answer would be OPHTHALMOLOGY.

BOOK REVIEW

Robert W. Funk poses the question: "Of whom is Jesus an authentic precursor?" Who among the wise of modern western tradition frees Jesus from the weight of the ecclesiastical tradition and liberates him for a new place in history? As a teller of parables Jesus may be a precursor of Franz Kafka and Jorge Luis Borges themselves.

As a "saunterer" he may be a predecessor of Henry David Thoreau. As magician he foreshadows the Magus of John Fowles' novel. As one on a journey to Ixtlan, he anticipates Carlos Castaneda. As one driven to speech but tempted by silence he is a precursor of Nietzsche, Camus, Kafka, Henry Miller, and Ludwig Wittgenstein. As one slowed by a decaying language he is an ancestor of Samuel Beckett.

In each of the essays in Part 1 of this book, the attempt has been made to juxtapose Jesus and a more recent figure. The juxtaposition occurs differently in the various essays and no doubt with varying success. The treatment of Jesus in "Jesus and Kafka" goes together with the theme "precursors" as sketched by Borges. Indeed, the essays are informed by this fundamental insight. In the four pairs of essays Funk reveals the notion of the hidden precursor more progressively, and Jesus figures more explicitly.

The studies of Waiting For God at and the Parable of the Mustard Seed are set side by side because the latter appeared to be thematic in the former: the inept tree. Two literary forms so divergent can scarcely be compared. Yet, the two invite comparison, on the grounds that one may be understood as a precursor of the other.

It would be too much to claim that these essays endeavor to interpret Jesus and Kafka, Jesus and Beckett, etc. To interpret is to say what something or someone means. Funk says that this work does not aspire to do so much. To see what is really there in a text, one is inclined to stare, unblinking. But when one is on the lookout for precursors, the subject matter will tolerate no more than a glimpse. "Precursors," says Funk, "are fleeting."

To describe Jesus is to let him speak for himself. But he can not easily do so from out of and under a long tradition of interpretation which may have muffled his voice. Hence, it seems necessary to Jesus' real successors discover him to us. In doing so, Jesus is also identified as precursor.

TRUSTEES SET $100,000 GOAL FOR THEMSELVES IN APPROVING CAMPAIGN FOR EVANGELISM PROFESSORSHIP

(ID)--In its semi-annual meeting here last week, the Board of Trustees voted to give or to generate $100,000 of a $500,000 goal for the Professorship in Evangelism, joined in the dedication of the enlarged and renovated Denny Library building, adopted a $2,394,288 budget for 1977-78, and held a joint meeting with the newly formed Development Council for the Seminary.

In 1976, the Board had accepted a gift of $100,000 and approved a Professorship in Evangelism. This time, they voted to launch a fund-raising drive to secure a minimum of $300,000 and a maximum of $500,000 by December 31, 1978. Of this goal, the trustees adopted a motion by its Gifts and Endowments committee that the members be responsible for giving or generating at least $100,000. The date set for trustee pledges was March, 1978.

The $2,394,288 budget for the 1977-78 fiscal year is the highest in the school's history. Included in the new budget are five additional teaching positions, and salary increases for all faculty and staff. Of the Seminary's income, 76% is received from the Southern Baptist Convention's Cooperative Program, 4% from endowment and investments income, 11% from auxiliary enterprises, and 8% from student fees. Other than modest fees, no tuition is charged by the Seminary.

The enlarged and renovated Emery B. Denny Building, which houses the Southeastern Library, was dedicated during the trustees' meeting. Costing more than $1,200,000, the new facility will increase study space by more than 60% and provide shelf space for more than 200,000 volumes. The majority of construction costs were provided by capital funds from the Southern Baptist Cooperative Program.

Other action by the trustees included an increase in the matriculation fee from $100 to $150 per semester. This increase will be made jointly with the other five Southern Baptist seminaries.

The trustees established a Citation for Excellence in Christian Ministry award, by which recognition will be given from time to time to persons who personify the values which the Seminary seeks to uphold.

Two gifts were received by the trustees to establish the William Carr Roberts Scholarship Fund and the Roy S. Liner Memorial Scholarship Fund.

SOUTHEASTERN SEMINARY NAMES 17 TO DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL; HOPE ELECTED CHAIRMAN

(ID)--Seventeen business leaders have just concluded the inaugural meeting of the newly formed Development Council of Southeastern. Meeting in conjunction with the Seminary's board of trustees, the Council was introduced to the history and purpose of the 26-year old Southern Baptist seminary, heard the concluding report and adoption of the long range planning project, elected officers and set its next meeting.

"The role of the Council," according to President W. Randall Lolley, "is to assist the Seminary in developing its gifts and endowments program." "The 17," Lolley continued, "have shown a deep commitment to the local church as well as to theological education. Their proven abilities (Continued on next page)

FOUNDER'S DAY IS SETTING FOR LIBRARY DEDICATION

(ID)--Commenting on the events of the day, Trustee Chairman Tom S. Brandon said, "the Lord has been good to Southeastern Seminary." His remarks were made during the dedication of the school's enlarged and renovated $1,200,000 Denny Library Building held during Founder's Day observance.

In his comments following presentation of the building by architect J. Russell Bailey, the Sherman, Texas pastor said "this is just one more evidence of God's blessing on this school."

In his response, librarian Dr. Eugene McCleod commented, "The building which we dedicate today will serve Southeastern well for many years to come." McCleod outlined the advantages of the new building and the history of the expansion program. He recognized the contributions of President Randall Lolley, former President O.T. Binkley, the Board of Trustees, the churches, and others toward the success of the program.

Dr. Lolley recalled the contributions of Dr. Emery B. Denny, former Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court and trustee of Southeaster, for whom the library building is named. Several members of the Denny family were recognized. Lolley also pointed out that this facility is ranked among the top twenty theological libraries in the U. S.

Appropriately for Founder's Day, the keynote address was delivered by Southeastern's first graduate, Frank Askins. A member of the class of 1954, Askins now serves as Chaplain at Umstead Hospital in Butner, N.C.

Reminiscing about the Seminary's early years, Askins recalled the closeness of the small student body and the relatively limited facilities. "At that time," he commented, "one could not dream of a facility such as Denny Library."

"The job of the Seminary," said Askins, "must be to train students to help members of their congregations find their own ministries." This view toward the Seminary's purpose was a dominant theme of Askins' address. "The purpose of the Seminary has to do with enabling the people to find themselves and their purposes, preparing the people for positions of leadership in various ministries. "It's up to us," he continued, "to validate our identity with the kingdom or priests rather than with the order of priesthood."

Askins drew a distinction between the term "workman" and "craft-man", describing a craftsman as one who can make decisions and complete a task on his own without the necessity of specific instructions. Referring to his experience as a student, he recalled that, "Instructions here were not enough, nor were they intended to be, but here was most resourceful place for those who would become craftsmen."

Following the program, an open house and reception was held in the new Denny Library.

The Founders' Day observance and Library dedication were held in conjunction with the semi-annual meeting of the Seminary's Board of Trustees and the newly-formed Development Council.

SPORTS AT SOUTHEASTERN

SPORTS WORLD-COMMENTARY
by Mike Barker

Although I terribly enjoy pro-football and college basketball, baseball has to be my favorite sport. To watch a guy slide in home only to be tagged out by a long thrown ball, or watching a guy hit a home run really gives me excitement. But what used to be "America's favorite past-time" is now turning into a revised version of "Let's Make a Deal." Instead of playing for the love of the game, players are going after the "Almighty dollar." Sure they have to live and support a family, but they do not have to live in a mansion. And if the managers keep going after the top players, you are pretty soon going to have a half-a-dozen teams with all the players. It is pretty ridiculous when athletes make more than the President of the U.S.

So, I for one want to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Bowie Kuhn for his action against Charles O. "Mouth" Finley. Regulation on buying and selling player and contracts must be made at once. So, go Bowie, and while Charlie is mouthing off at you, give him a Certs for a breath test. Or for a real test, give him one for intoxication, because anyone selling three ball players for what he asked must have something wrong with him.

And while we are on this subject, let us look at one more group of people. I hope the fans who tend to get rowdy will stay home, or else learn to control themselves. The ballpark is no place for this type of person. Besides, I would hate to see the Schlitz Malt Liguor Bull come out on the ball field, especially while the Cincinnati Reds are playing.

BATTLING DUKES RETREAT
by Lawrence Dennis

The Battling Dukes came out firing from their corner of the court but their ammunition quickly ran out. Scoring 14 points in the first quarter, the Dukes seemed to be on their way to a victory by holding the Court Jesters to only 4 points. Alas, the B.D.'s bubble burst when in the second quarter the Jesters put their first team in. For the last three quarters of the game, the Dukes scored only 14 other points. Equalling their first period output.

The Court Jesters scored 23 points in each half but still managed to keep the overflow crowd (snicker) in suspense until the last four minutes of the game. They had only held a 7 point lead up to that point. But a fast breaking offence with a full-court press as a catalyst brought them a 22 point difference in the score at the end.

Sports: Jay Lawson, editor, Lawrence
Terry Myers, and Institutional Development office.

Bob Marchant had 20 points to lead the Jesters while the Dukes' high point man was Brad Owen with 10. If you haven't figured the final score out already, it was 46-28.
