Dear Brother:

As the time draws closer for the Annual Fall Apologetics Lectures, we need to obtain a little more information for our public relations department.

First: We need a subject for the series, and then titles for each lecture in the series of five lectures.

Second: We need a glossy photograph of your face. Our public relations man received the picture of you sitting perhaps on the edge of a table, and he is using this in some of the publicity, but he feels a face portrait is needed for the lectureship brochure.

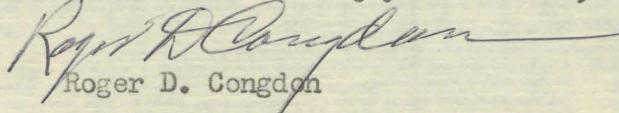

Concerning subject and titles: You have sent some suggestions before, e.g., "The Relevance of Legal Reasoning," and "Analytical Philosophy in the Apologetic Task," etc. These are good. However, we need to have these and other titles fitted together as follows:

- I. Subject for the whole week
 - A. Title for Monday's lecture
 - B. Title for Tuesday's lecture
 - C. Title for Wednesday's lecture
 - D. Title for Thursday's lecture
 - E. Title for Friday's lecture

Concerning your audience: About 1000 persons, most of them college students required to attend. They will be unprepared academically for complex or intellectually sophisticated lectures. They will need a simplified diet. We recommend that our lecturers remember the words of Jesus: "Feed my lambs," when speaking to our students. We also suggest the use of audio-visual aids where possible (we have equipment available).

Thank you for your visit last spring, John. Because of this visit, we are assured that you are able to maintain audience attention and you are able to communicate valuable truths. We anticipate with great joy your coming to us this November.

Yours in Christ's joyful service,

Roger D. Congdon
