storm, as she was afflicted with what she believed was heart trouble. I had witnessed many sudden and severe attacks from which she rallied, but the last one came just as she predicted. She was held in a very violent way, but it lasted only a few minutes. She died sitting on her bed. She had no breath to talk, but knew the time had come. I know not how better to express myself than to say that I feel to be torn in two, and by far the better half of me is gone. Our once happy and cheerful home is lonely and dreary. That lonely feeling is with me at home and abroad, whether in trying to speak to the people or mingling with the multitude. No man could have a more devoted companion than mine was to me, nor children a more fond mother. I think I can say that I have been kept from that rebellious disposition which I so much dread, which was the case at the death of my child some years ago. The Lord has been good and merciful unto us, and in many ways his hand is seen in his providential dealings with us. The waymarks are still in remembrance by which we have been led along. Our family is two sons and five daughters, three of whom are members of the same church. All are at home with me except one, and are kind to me and to each other. Elder Chick attended with us on the funeral occasion, and contrasted our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, with that eternal weight of glory which shall be revealed.

She sleeps in the old Harford churchyard, and I have no doubt but she is better off than we who remain.

WM. GRAFTON.

FOREST HILL, Md., May 15, 1893.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Chemung Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at Otego, Otsego Co., N. Y., on Wednesday before the third Sunday in June (14th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming will be met on the arrival of trains on Tuesday and taken care of by the brethren. Our meeting-house is within eighty rods of the depot.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

G. M. FRENCH, Clerk.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

ELDER WM. L. BEEBE—DEAR BROTHER AND PASTOR:—In behalf of the Beulah church, I am authorized to request that notice be given through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that you are expected to attend our meeting at the usual place on Saturday and Sunday, June 17th and 18th, 1893.

All who desire to meet with us are cordially invited to attend. May the grace of God enable us to dwell together in unity, forbearing one another in love.

Your unworthy brother,
ARCHIBALD McALPINE, Clerk.
AUGHRIM, Ontario, May 7, 1893.

THERE will be a two days' meeting held with the Old School Baptist Church at Riker's Hollow, Steuben Co., N. Y., on the third Sunday and Monday in June (18th and 19th). A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to meet with us.

Ministers on their way from the Chemung Association to Canada will please stop over with us, and as many others as can. Friends will be met at Atlanta Station, formerly Blood's, on arrival of both Erie and D., L. & W. R. R. trains on Saturday, June 17th.

GEORGE WELD, Clerk.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1811 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1893.

NO. 24.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GIRARDVILLE, Pa., May 2, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The inclosed verses were written by Mrs. Bella Cooke, of New York city, who has long been an invalid. It was in early life that she, with her husband and little ones, came from her native England, leaving her father and mother with all home associations. It was indeed a heart-rending journey, as before they reached the American shore death had claimed a precious treasure, and a lovely little daughter was buried in the sea. While the youthful mother's heart was breaking under this crushing sorrow, she was relieved by these words, "The sea shall give up its dead." These, with other precious promises from the sacred word, sank into her troubled mind like a soothing balm. Yet she could never again bear to look upon the cruel foaming waves, or listen to the angry dashing billows. She was but a few years in this, to her, strange land, struggling with poverty, toil and pain, when her children were left fatherless, and she a widow indeed. Sorrows multiplied, and afflictions increased, till she became prostrate. It is now more than twenty years that this stricken, suffering one has been on a bed of languishing, and a number of times it was thought she was passing within the veil. The great Physician has at times lifted her far above her sufferings, enabling her to praise his adorable name in most exalting strains, causing those around her to wonder in amazement at his power, while her soul-inspiring words have comforted many a sorrowing one.

"Shut in," did you say, my sisters?

Oh, no! Only led away
Out of the dust and turmoil,
The burden and heat of the day,
Into the cool, green pastures,
By the waters calm and still,
Where I may lie down in quiet,
And yield to my Father's will.

Earth's ministering ones come round me,
With faces kind and sweet,
And we sit and learn together,
At the loving Savior's feet;
And we talk of life's holy duties,
Of the crosses that lie in the way,
And they must go out and do them,
While I lie still and pray.

I am not shut in, my sisters,
For the four walls fade away,
And my soul goes out in gladness,
To bask in the glorious day.
This wasting, suffering body,
With its weight of weary pain,
Can never dim my vision,
My spirit cannot restrain.

I wait the rapturous ending,
Or, rather, the entering in Through the gates that stand wide open,
But admit no pain or sin;
I am only waiting, sisters,
Till the Father calls, "Come home!"
Waiting, with my lamp all burning,
Till the blessed Bridegroom come.

This song of praise by one tried in the fire, and come forth as gold, I am sure will find an echo in the hearts of many who read the SIGNS. Especially will there be a soul-response from those who, like the writer, have not taken a step for many years, some of whom have often enriched your columns, and one whose name has become a household word among the readers of our most welcome weekly messenger, our dear suffering sister Mary Parker, whose soul-stirring letters have, through this medium, and her two books, entered many homes in our own country, and also in distant lands. Her heart-history has not been told; it could not be; but the glimpse she has given in her "Reminiscences," has caused strong hearts to tremble with emotions of tender sympathy for one "shut in" with pain and sorrow from all the pleasures of this bright world. She has borne with meekness and fortitude the afflictions which have been laid upon her through long dreary days and weary nights till they have become weary years. She, through her sweet messages of love, has become dear to many who have never looked upon her face, nor met the glance of her gently speaking eyes, some of whom would feel it a pleasant privilege to smooth her pillow, soothe her pain, and listen to her talk of Jesus and the wonders of his love and grace. It was in early youth that she learned the exceeding bitterness of sin, and also of sorrow and bereavement; for storms of affliction rained upon her youthful head. When the light of a heavenly hope dawned upon her soul, the peace that passeth knowledge gladdened all her being. She was in a "large room," even the "Banqueting-house," and the banner over her was love. Since this solemn, happy season she has been a faithful follower of him who was meek and lowly in heart; yet so long chained by disease, so that she could not meet in the assembly of the saints, or mingle her voice with her kindred in Christ in singing sweet hymns of praise to his most holy name.

From the letters I have received from sister Mary during the past few months, it seems that her clear perception has not been dimmed, nor her powers of expression lessened. I will take the liberty to copy a few extracts, that her many friends who read the SIGNS may know something of her present health and some of her many changes. She, with all who have been chosen in the furnace of affliction, has often to grieve over her unlikeness to the blessed Immanuel, and mourn an absent God. He hides the face of his throne, and spreads a cloud upon it, and we are in darkness and sorrow. Then again he comes leaping upon the mountains and skipping upon the hills, and "Lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, and the time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land." January 6th she says, "My beloved sister, how I have yearned for your presence the past few weeks, that I might lean upon you and find solace in your words of love." But it cannot be; such real earthly bliss is denied me. Yet I know there is One very pitiful, and of tender mercy, who loveth at all times, and sticketh closer than a brother, a very present help in trouble; who, having been tempted in all points as we, knows how to succor us; to whom I ought to go, and on whose loving breast alone I should desire to lean, and in whose own pitying ear I should pour all my troubles, all my bitter trials and painful heart-aches. But of late I have felt so far from him, so sinful, so unworthy to lift my eyes to him in prayer. Then it seemed my sorrows would take away my reason. O how lonely I have felt, how void of spiritual life and light, with no reason of hope, so that my soul did really hunger and thirst after righteousness, and pant after the living waters. So sad, deserted and lonely did I feel that it was reflected in my countenance, and was commented upon by those about me; for 'The waters do wear the stones.' I could not keep back the tears, even when surrounded by my friends. But it has pleased my precious Savior to remove the darkness, and permit me to again bask in the warmth and sunlight of his love; and this morning I feel as if my soul were in sweet communion with Jesus and the dear saints that surround the great white throne, lifted above the clouds and mists of earth to the bright land where holy angels sing the song of Moses and the Lamb, and chant the high praises of our adorable King. Oh! the Lord is so good to me. May he bless all who remember me in my sore affliction."

February 14th she writes, "I have suffered so much, and felt so weak from pain and loss of sleep, it has seemed impossible to use my pen. I have wanted so much to write to your dear brother, but have not been able."

In speaking of a number of ladies who sent for the book at the same time, she says, "Was it not good of the dear Lord to thus put it into their hearts to send for our little book? Since my property is no longer bringing me anything, I have been troubled at times as to how I am to meet the many imperative needs my sore affliction lays upon me. But it is sinful, when Jesus, the same yesterday, to-day and forever, loveth at all times, and sticketh closer than a brother. His promises are yea and amen. He will never leave nor forsake. O! bless his holy name. Surely I do love him, and he is my dear Savior and Redeemer, my Lord, my life, my all. Dear sister, in the bright celestial clime we will see him as he is, and praise him as we ought. Until that happy time arrives we can only long and wait and love each other in our poor prisons of clay; but there, my dear one, we will see face to face, and bask in the sunlight of the Redeemer's love, in endless joy and peace."

Later she says, "Thank you for your kindly admonition that I no more give way to gloomy forebodings in regard to my future. I must confess I was unduly disturbed when I found I was without even a meagre income. Have I grieved my dear Savior? I have suffered for my wrong, and have humbly begged forgiveness; and I have felt that he who knows all things, who knows I am but flesh, who has promised to make perfect our weakness through his strength, has forgiven me, and I no longer feel to doubt but that he will care for me, and give all that he in wisdom sees that I need. I am most thankful for the publication of our little book, and I wish I could acquaint you all with the deep sense of gratitude I do feel. It has indeed been a blessing to me, and has brought me many temporal comforts; and have we not cause to think it a blessing to others also? as I can hardly think it mere flattery that causes so many to speak in that way."

In speaking of a dear sister who has supplied her with delicacies, and many things for her comfort, she says, "She is altogether too self-sacrificing toward one so undeserving as I feel myself to be. She is indeed most generous and kind. O! the blessed Lord is so good to me, how can I praise him enough? How precious is his love and care! How wonderful his existence and power! How cheering the sunshine of his never-changing love! To be brought into close communion with him, and into union and fellowship with his redeemed people through the intercession of his dear son Jesus, O, is it not sweet? It is most precious and blessed indeed. Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, do I sometimes trust this precious gift of grace is given, which is most marvelous and wondrous of all."

March 1st she writes, "A very dear sister from Deer Creek Church came to see me last Saturday, and spent the day. She gave me her order for a book, and it is to send it to you that I attempt to write this morning; for I am not nearly so well, and in no way fit to write. In our early girlhood days, and until after she was married, ten years ago, this dear sister and I were bosom friends. She had not visited me for nearly three years, and I was so glad to see her, so happy in her society, that the pleasureable emotions, and my unusual efforts in conversing with her, quite overcame me, and for two days I could hardly live; although during her stay the entire day I was unusually well and bright. Is it not singular what an exhausting effect joy, as well as sorrow, will have upon the sick? No doubt you have seen such things in others, and felt it yourself, when prostrated by sickness. This beloved sister seemed animated and made glad, as well as myself, by our sweet, uninterrupted intercourse, christian love and fellowship, and I think she went away feeling that where two or three are met together in Jesus' name, he is in the midst of them. O the sweetness, the tenderness of those binding cords. How precious and infinite and eternal they are. What music does this heavenly influence send into the deepest recesses of the soul, and how we like to linger over its beauty and sweetness, and drink from its inexhaustible fountain. But I did not intend to write a letter. Your sinful afflicted sister."

April 6th she writes, "I have thought of you so much during this forced silence, and of your dear ones in Florida, and my heart ever goes out to you all in fervent love. But, dear one, I have suffered so terribly, and become so weak from repeated bad attacks, that I have no life, no strength, but just living, and taking care of my afflicted body; and what a task it is for me. My correspondence has had to be neglected the past month; and as I must soon prepare to move into my summer room, I fear I shall be unable to reply to the many dear epistles of love that have so cheered and comforted me; and, dear sister, I so much fear some trembling little one will feel neglected. My poor, dear sister, Mrs. Lewis, is rapidly failing, and at times the thought of parting with her almost crushes me. Ever since I could form words with a pen I have written and received letters from her, and now she cannot even write to me. She is a firm Old School Baptist, and her hope is founded on the Rock of ages. She realizes her condition, and seems to calmly view her passage over the uncrossed sea to the happy land where all is bright and pure, where "Our Father who art in heaven,

In the beautiful city of gold,
Where eternity's waters are sparkling,
And the tree of life will unfold."

It cannot be long at the farthest, even if she crosses over first, before I may hope to follow; and then how close will be our union, how sweet the meeting with all the shining angels, and the Savior and Redeemer whom we so love, worship and adore. Please overlook this brief, dull letter, and believe that my love for you fills each line. Pray for your devoted Mary."

Here is a portion of her deeply interesting and touching letters since this year began. She ever manifests a deep and tender regard for all who are in any kind of affliction, having "A heart at leisure from itself,

To soothe and sympathize."

But, with many who are in the path of tribulation, she grows faint in the journey, such a weary way, and "pants for purer air and fresher springs." There is a shadow for her on the brightest treasures of earth, and there is no food for her soul but the bread of life; no refreshing drink but in the eternal Fountain; and no rest but in Jesus. Do we not recognize in the life of this dear sister the whispers of a loving Father?

"I am bringing my child to a heavenly land,
I am leading her day by day,
And am asking her now, while I hold her hand,
To come home by a rugged way.
By a way that she never herself would choose;
For its beauties she may not see;
And she knows not yet what her soul would lose,
If she trod not this path with me."

With affectionate remembrance to our kindred in Christ, and to all who love the name of Jesus, I am, I trust, your sister,

BESSIE DURAND.

272 CLINTON AVE., ALBANY, N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you a letter written by brother Peter S. Kinney, of Schoharie, N. Y. I have not his consent to have it published, but I have had such comfort and enjoyment in it that I thought it might be a blessing to some of the children of our heavenly Father in this world of trouble and affliction. If you think it worthy, publish it. I leave it to your better judgment.

In hope of the heavenly inheritance, your brother,

L. HECKER.

SCHOHARIE N. Y., Feb. 26, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER HECKER:—If you do not despise owning such a relationship spiritually. It is with misgivings and doubts that I ever address one whom I hold in high esteem for the truth's sake. I have been thinking of you very much of late, and wishing it could be so that you would come and talk with me again as in days gone by. I think you owe me a letter; and if you will write me two in one on the receipt of this I will forgive you the debt. On account of the late storms we were unable to attend our regular meeting yesterday and to-day. It was a great disappointment to me, having looked forward anxiously to the time, when I expected to meet those whom I believe to be the children of God, whether I have any claim to that relationship or not. While feeling somewhat discontented because deprived of thus meeting with them, I was led to think of many who, if not entirely deprived of going to the house of worship, do not enjoy the privileges that I do; for since the death of Elder Earl, a year ago last fall, Elder Clark has not missed more than three or four appointments. And now as I am writing to you the village bells are pealing out their tunes, calling the people to their various places of worship, while here I sit, with no desire to go and hear their so-called wonderful and learned ministers. It seems the more strange when looking back only ten or twelve years, when I found myself of their number, my name being then enrolled upon their church record, trying to do my part in the great so-called work of bringing souls to Christ, and having, to the best of my ability, served as a teacher and superintendent in their Sunday Schools, as well as an officer in their church. I have had it explained to me in this way, that it all came about by my marrying an Old School Baptist for a wife. Of course that view of the case is in perfect harmony with the popular belief that conversions take place through human agencies. All I have to say on that subject is, that if any part of my christian experience (if I ever had any) has been the result of man, I am yet a miserable object of pity. I recollect once making the remark to my former wife that the Old School Baptist people were dying off rapidly; and though there were a few scattered here and there, they would soon exist only in name as a thing of the past; and, despising their doctrine as I did at that time, I prayed that the wheels of time would hasten the happy event. My only answer as to how I came to be where I am to day is, "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." Yet I am often led to wonder why this is so, that so many are indulging a hope of a salvation obtained by their consent, or by acts of obedience and faithfulness on their part, while so few are led to hope in a salvation through grace, independent of the works of the creature; whose subjects are saved with an everlasting salvation, loved with an everlasting love, and that before the world began; having their names engraven on the palms of the hands of their Savior; not lest he might forget to fulfill his covenant concerning the salvation of his people, for he has declared that while a mother may forget her sucking child, yet will he not forget Jerusalem. He will visit their transgressions with the rod, yet will he not utterly withdraw his loving-kindness from them. He remembereth their frame, and considereth that they are but dust; for as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth those that fear him. When on account of their sins and vileness they are brought low in distress, self-aborrence and repentance before God their Father, they hear his loving voice saying, "Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still; therefore my bowels are troubled for him. I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord." While the Lord is of purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look on iniquity, and must hate even our best thoughts, how precious is the hope that if we are subjects of his redeeming love nothing shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Those whom he has once loved he will love to the end. They are heirs with Christ to an inheritance which is incorruptible, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for all who love his appearing. Had I the same abiding assurance of my own salvation that I have for those for whom I hope I have christian fellowship, I would be less harrassed by perplexing doubts and fears as to whether one so vile and sinful as I feel myself to be could be one of those who are born, not of the will of man, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God; born of an incorruptible seed, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

In conclusion, let me repeat that my only hope of a blessed immortality beyond the grave is in the finished and complete salvation purchased at the cost of the sufferings and cruel death of the Son of God on the cross, when he cried, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost. O! who is there in this world that can tell, that can give me the least ray of hope, that my name was included in that glorious plan of salvation, which the angels could not comprehend, but only look on in wonder and adoration? I have been reading some this morning from the psalms of David, and received comfort from his experience; so many passages in which he poured out his soul in prayer and repentance to God for his sustaining grace, mingled with the hope that as his days so his strength would be. Read the sixty-ninth Psalm.

Well, I will tire your patience, and will stop. If I could write anything that would be of any benefit to anyone I would be well paid. If I ever have, give God the glory. Give my love to your wife and brethren Schade and Livingston when you see them. Hoping that when it is well with you, you will remember me, I remain yours in hope of eternal life, if not deceived,

P. S. KINNEY.

OZARK, Ala., May 2, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Having been asked by a number of the precious ones about my health, I will take this medium of informing them that my health is very poor. I enjoyed better health than usual through the cold weather; but since the warm weather began my health is very poor indeed. I have suffered more with my heart this spring than ever before. There seems to be such a pressure upon my heart that I can scarcely breathe. When those severe pains and pressures come on I get perfectly numb, my heart seems to stop acting, and my brain becomes so numb that I can hardly walk or have any mind. Those spells last from about one to three hours at a time. Sometimes, recently, I have despaired of life, and felt that I was nearing my eternal home. Another trouble is that my legs, from my knees down, have almost been paralyzed from the dregs of typhoid fever, so that I could scarcely walk. Not long since I was wishing that I was able to perform manual labor, so that I could support my little family more easily; but it occurred to me, This affliction is for your good, and is of the Lord. I pray for humility, and when the Lord smites me, and causes me to feel humble, I am not satisfied with it; I want it otherwise. Ah, when I was made to feel that this affliction is all for Christ's sake, I could rejoice then in tribulation, "knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts." David said, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word." Hence we are taught that it is good to be afflicted. Every conflict and affliction is in the pathway of the christian, and we have them all to bear before we fill up our cup of suffering here. These sore afflictions that come upon us daily remind us that this is not the christian's home; and sometimes while suffering so severely we can thank God that we shall not always be burdened with this earthly tabernacle, filled with its many cares and groans. Paul says, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." Were it not for these trials we would be content to live here forever; but all these things are for our good, and show us where our dependence is. Bless the Lord, we are not our own keepers. We are kept by that omnipotent hand which never slumbers nor sleeps; yea, he keeps us as the apple of his eye. When we can feel his sweet presence, how patiently we can endure our afflictions. But O! this vile and wretched heart of unbelief that causes me so often to doubt my hope in Jesus, and to fear I am mistaken in that whole matter. I have been so often in such a state of infidelity as to deny my hope in Christ, to doubt the existence of God, and the authenticity of the Scriptures; but I was always afraid to say anything about it, for fear God's people would lose confidence in me; till last spring in Maryland, you, dear brother Beebe, preached and spoke of the state of infidelity you had gotten in. I felt like I could see for what purpose I had gone north. It was to hear that precious sermon, which I have been feasting upon ever since. O that I could get rid of that murmuring spirit, and at all times be resigned to God's gracious will, and say with Job, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." But this old nature cannot act above itself. It takes all these things to show me what I am, and that my salvation is wholly in the Lord. I can never get exactly right. Sometimes I am lifeless and indifferent, and cannot shed a tear. I do not want to be in such a mood as that. Sometimes I am low down in the valley, having more trouble than I can bear. I am not contented in such a frame as that. One thing I desire above all things on earth, and that is to remain in the fellowship of the dear people of God what few days I remain here.

Brethren and sisters, please remember poor me at the throne of grace, that I may be kept humble and at the feet of Jesus, and be resigned to his holy will and providential dealings with me, that I may sweetly rest in this hope,

"A few more days on earth to spend,
Then all my toils and cares shall end."

It takes tribulation to bring us to the feet of Jesus, and be enabled to say, "Thy will be done." We can learn these things merely by head study, and not know a syllable of the truth of them; but O! when those deep afflictions of soul come upon us, and it seems that the hand of God is against us, and smiting us justly, too, we are made to feel as did David, "For my days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are burned as an hearth. My heart is smitten, and withered like grass, so that I forget to eat my bread. I am like a pelican of the wilderness; I am like an owl of the desert. I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the house top." When our strength seems gone, and the billows of trouble overflow us, and we go to the bottom of the mountains, the weeds being wrapped about our heads, and we see no way of escape, we then cry unto him from the very belly of hell, with pantings of soul for his gracious presence again, "O Lord, do thou deliver my soul." And when we can see our Beloved coming, skipping over those mighty mountains and hills of unbelief and sore conflicts, bringing that precious food, that manna from heaven, immediately we hear him saying, "I am come into my garden, my sister, my spouse. I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey. I have drunk my wine with my milk. Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved." O what a precious repast to that soul having the sweet privilege of communing with Jesus, feeling that all is well. He is so revived that he feels willing to bear all the afflictions that the Lord sends upon him. Yes, I feel that it is all of the Lord, and for my good. Why do we mourn the absence of our precious Savior so much? Because we love him. You do not mourn for those whom you do not love. When he comes to our souls he always brings such precious food, that which is so adapted to our wants.

"The food my spirit wants, Thy hand alone can give."
Yours in affliction.

LEE HANKS.

HOLMES, North Dak., Jan. 8, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed please find draft, and apply two dollars to my subscription, and use the balance toward continuing the weekly SIGNS. I do hope the Lord will put it into the hearts of the brethren to do their duty, as the Lord has prospered them, to assist you in the publication of the only medium we have of holding sweet communion with the brethren of like precious faith. It is like good news from a far country, especially when one is cast, as it were, in a desert, and the tongue is parched with thirst for the waters of salvation by grace, through the once crucified but now risen Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, whom to know is life eternal. This song is forever new, the same yesterday, to-day and forever. The more we sing it, the more interesting it becomes, unlike any other that was ever heard.

"And none can learn the same,
But ransomed slaves and sinners, who
From tribulation came."

Church privileges are not appreciated as they should be until one becomes isolated, and then they begin to feel like they were stranded, or on the great deep without a compass, hardly knowing which way to look for help, until the still small voice whispers, "It is I, be not afraid." And, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint." The Lord speaks, and it is done; he commands, and it stands fast. We walk by faith, and not by sight. The things that are seen are natural; but the things that are not seen are eternal.

Speaking of church privileges, I am led to exclaim with one of old, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." I was much pleased with Elder Durand's, letter in a recent number of the SIGNS, wherein he stirs up the pure minds of the brethren by way of remembrance. I am free to confess that I have not done my full duty to the ministering servants, by whom I have been fed with their spiritual things; but since I have been isolated from the privilege of hearing preaching, I have looked at the support of the ministry in a different light than ever before. When we look up the Scripture on that subject we find it ordained that they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel. "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn." "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox." The Scriptures are so plain that he who reads may run. I am not at liberty to say that brother so and so is able to assist, but that I need all I have to assist myself. I should believe in God's promises. He says, "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Do we believe this? Then let us show our faith by our works. We do not work in order to obtain life, but because we have life. Our life is hid with Christ in God, so there is no danger of our losing it. We should obey his commandments; and "to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." He has given to his children the care of his house, with instructions in every detail as to how to keep it. He has also set the proper gifts in order, and they should not become careless. They are required to assemble themselves often together, to speak to themselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, making melody in their hearts to the Lord; and he has promised to be with them. Brethren, do you not believe that many times the candlestick is removed in consequence of the church wandering away from her first love, being careless of the ordinances, not heeding the divine commands? The Lord is a jealous God. He says he will be inquired of by the house of Israel.

I conclude it is not the whole duty of the deacons to pass the bread and wine. It seems to me that as officers in the church they should look after the details and matters of finance. In the case of a minister feeling an impression to visit a certain church, yet feeling he cannot spare the

(Continued on page 191.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 14, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

YOUR REASONABLE SERVICE.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."—Rom. xii. 1, 2.

That infinite wisdom moved the inspired servants who recorded the holy Scriptures is clearly shown in the whole arrangement of the testimony therein given; so that there is no excuse for the perversion of their teaching even by those who have only the light of the literal words for their instruction. But in the divine appointment even this exhibition of truth is made to expose the utter inability of the natural man to receive the things of Jesus as taught by his Spirit. Opposers of the doctrine of the unlimited sovereignty of God in the election of his chosen people, by one consent charge that the effect of that belief is to encourage men in the service of sin. However plausible in the sight of natural reason this charge may be, it is shown by this text that the Spirit of truth deduces exactly the reverse conclusion from the presentation of that principle of the doctrine of God our Savior. It is impossible that language should express more positively the very truth which is denied by all carnal worshipers, than it is expressed in the chapters immediately preceding our text; yet the conclusion drawn from that doctrine is embraced in the earnest exhortation so affectionately stated by the apostle. He does not say that since the salvation of sinners is secured by the eternal choice of God, therefore you had as well be engaged in evil works, and continue in the service of sin. Neither does he flipantly urge that "If you are to be saved you will be saved anyhow." It is worthy of careful observation that this pathetic and strong appeal immediately follows the conclusive demonstration of the doctrine of eternal predestination and election. No efforts of the adversaries have even seemed to refute that inspired statement of the true doctrine of salvation by sovereign grace. God himself has established the foundation of the whole system of salvation upon the immutable determination of his own will. This is demonstrated in the preceding context; and the entreaty above quoted is the conclusion drawn by inspiration from that doctrine.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God." The tenderness of this expression manifests the love and humility which characterize the subjects of that election of grace so forcibly declared in this whole epistle to the saints at Rome. Paul does not say, "I command you by the apostolic authority vested in me." Nowhere does the word of grace rest upon that terror by which the law of Moses was enforced. The King in Zion is himself The Prince of peace. He makes the officers of his everlasting kingdom that very same Peace. "I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise."—Isa. lx. 17, 18. When any subject of this salvation can resist the appeal of love and mercy, it is certain that he is in a foreign land where the commandments of the Prince of peace are not obeyed. Indeed, under such a spirit of carnality he is already shut up in the very depths of hell, from which he can never be delivered until it is the pleasure of the Prince of peace to open those heavy gates, of which he holds the keys. On the other hand, there is not a single case in which this appeal of our text is effectual, but that it is because that individual who feels its power is led by the Spirit of God, and is therefore a son of God. If the mercies of God draw you to love him and keep his commandments, the fact is beyond controversy that the Spirit of Christ dwells in you. If the belief of the truth affords you an occasion to live after the flesh, the evidence is that the love of God has no place in you. To those brethren who love righteousness the tender words of this expression have irresistible power. They need no terror to enforce their authority.

"That ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." This service is not called reasonable because it has the approval of the carnal mind; for every step in the pathway of righteousness is in opposition to the direction of that guide. If the natural man could know the things of the Spirit, there would be no warfare between the flesh and the spirit in the experience of the saints. As used in this clause of the text, the expression signifies the same truth which is spoken by our Lord himself when he says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for MY YOKE IS EASY, AND MY BURDEN IS LIGHT."—Matt. xi. 28-30. By the Spirit of Christ which is given to them every subject of grace is made to hunger and thirst after righteousness; therefore it is the highest privilege which they can enjoy when they are enabled to obey the commandments of their dear Redeemer. These are all fulfilled in following in the way of truth and holiness marked out by his perfect example. It is certainly no unreasonable service which demands nothing but what is gratifying to the subject to render. It will be observed that these brethren are not entreated to bring any oblations, such as were required by the law of Moses. Such service would have been unreasonable, since those to whom the exhortation is addressed are so utterly destitute of resources that they have not even a dove to offer. They would have been shut up in despair by the interposition of any condition to be fulfilled by their own works as the ground of their deliverance from condemnation. In presenting their bodies a living sacrifice, the saints are not admonished to make themselves free from the corruption of the body of this death. However earnestly they long for such liberty, they must endure the vanity to which they are subjected until they are released from the bondage of mortality. Under this burden Paul himself groaned, and none of the apostles or prophets was able to attain to freedom from it until the Captain of their salvation was pleased to appear for their help in giving them the victory through the gate of death. But the grace of God does strengthen the saints in all their conflict, so that they are enabled to walk as pilgrims and strangers in their sojourn in this evil world. They are not required to direct their steps, nor to devise their own way. There could be no sacrifice at all in any service which should be consistent with the direction of their own mind and will. In denying self all dependence upon the natural mind must be rejected. The first requirement in following Jesus forever bars the way against every sinner who has not the mind of Christ. In order to "deny himself" the love of God must subdue the love of self in the character who would be a disciple of Jesus. None but those who have the Spirit of Christ can bear this mark. To every one who has this fruit of the Spirit the exhortation of our text is addressed. There is no duty enjoined by the law of Christ but that its performance is the most perfect liberty of those in whom God works both to will and to do of his good pleasure. In compliance with this exhortation the grace of God is magnified in the crucifying of the old man with all his affections and lusts. Thus the body is presented "a living sacrifice." All the typical offerings under the ceremonial law were dead sacrifices. When they had been once presented there was no life in them. The saints are not to offer such lifeless types under the gospel dispensation. In so doing they would be denying the sufficiency of the blood of Christ to take away the sins of his people. It is in a higher and more glorious manner that they are to offer their bodies, not as dead sacrifices slain by the sword of a violated law; but as walking in that newness of life by which they are risen with their crucified and risen Savior. Since they are thus redeemed by the precious blood of Jesus, they are not their own; they have no right to choose their own way, but should ever seek to obey the commandments of him who has bought them at the inconceivable cost of the sacrifice of his own precious blood. In presenting their bodies a living sacrifice the brethren to whom this appeal is addressed only yield that service which is due to their rightful Master. "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again."—2 Cor. v. 14, 15. There can be nothing in such service but what is manifestly just and right.

No service can be acceptable to God unless it is holy as rendered in subjection to his commandment and performed in that perfect love of God which can be produced only by his Spirit that dwells in all his chosen people. The humble disciple who is obedient to this exhortation does not feel that he is better than his fellow-men; his holiness consists in being cut off from all other dependence but that which rests in the finished work and complete redemption revealed in Jesus Christ. The very knowledge of his own sinfulness results from the grace of God by which he is separated from dependence upon the law for justification. Relying exclusively upon the righteousness of the Lord Jesus, it is only consistent that he should confess that all his confidence is in the grace of God as it shines in the face of Jesus Christ. Hence it is clearly reasonable that every one who has this hope in him should confess his allegiance to his Redeemer by denying himself and obeying implicitly the will of him who has bought him. This devotion to the law of Christ is the holiness enjoined as acceptable to God. Jesus says, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John xv. 14. Thus in obedience to the law of his perfect love the saints are holy, in the way which is "acceptable to God." In their own experience they can attest that such holiness is the sweetest privilege that could be afforded them, and therefore it is their "reasonable service."

"And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." It is absurd to suppose that the duty is imposed upon the saints that they must transform themselves; but in the express reading of the text is stated the power by which this transformation is effected. Notice particularly that it is not by improving the natural mind. That mind remains enmity against God, and cannot be subject to his law. No reformation can make it seek after righteousness; its very element is sin. It is of the earth, and minds earthly things. Only by the renewing of their mind can the saints be so transformed that they are not conformed to the world. That renewing is the operation of God by his Spirit which dwells in all the sons of God. In walking in the Spirit they who love God declare their conformity to holiness, and show themselves to be transformed by the renewing of their mind. Their old mind was corrupt, earthly, sensual, and conformed to this world. It can never be anything better than this. But the love of holiness, which causes hunger and thirst after righteousness, can be produced only by the renewing of the mind. To those who are led by the Spirit is given the mind of Christ. This is not a change of the old, or carnal mind; it is an entirely new mind, by which the sinner is made to love righteousness and hate iniquity. In contrasting the two principles, both abiding in himself, Paul designates this carnal mind as "the flesh;" while "the mind" signifies that holy Spirit by which he serves the law of God; this mind is also called "Christ in you the hope of glory."—Rom. vii. 25; Col. i. 27. In obedience to the direction of this holy mind, the saints are never conformed to this world. They are practically transformed by the renewing of their mind when they deny self, and walk in newness of life. Then they have the answer of a good conscience toward God, whereby they experimentally "prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Not even the chosen vessels of divine mercy can have the enjoyment of this personal knowledge of heavenly comfort while living after the flesh. It is a very strong indication that one is totally blind when he professes to see in the darkness of midnight. So, it is evidence that one knows nothing of the true approval of that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God, if he claims to receive this assuring knowledge while living in conformity to this world. Sometimes it may be that the subjects of salvation are so blinded that they mistake the exultation of their own carnal nature for this assured knowledge of God. When thus deceived, they are captivated by their wily adversary, and can never be released until their great Deliverer shall be pleased to appear for their help. There is never any suggestion of disobedience to the commandment of our Lord, in doctrine or in practice, but that it is a device of the tempter, by which he seeks to betray the victim of his wiles. The earnest appeal of the apostle in our text shows how great importance was involved in the entreaty. It is above all earthly considerations. The Spirit of Christ does not misrepresent the subject. The Spirit says to the churches, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked for what a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Gal. vi. 7-9. In giving the more earnest heed to the admonitions and exhortations of the inspired word well may the saints be transformed by the renewing of their mind. Walking in the Spirit they shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. So shall they glorify God in their body and in their spirit, which are God's. There can be no controversy upon the fact that this is their reasonable service.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

KEEP IT.

PLEASE destroy your old Supplements and keep the last one, and read it carefully. We especially request our brethren and friends to note the fourth paragraph, and to assist us all they can in accordance with the terms given therein. If you cannot attend to the matter yourself you are at liberty to authorize some one else to act in your name.

When two or more new subscribers are sent at the same time, in accordance with terms given in Supplement of April 12th, 1893, and one is in compliance with the second or third paragraph, and the others on terms given in fourth paragraph, it is very essential to state which name is sent according to terms of the second or third paragraph, as that name is credited to the end of 1893, while the others are credited one year from the time their subscription begins.

NOTICES.

MAY'S MILL, N. Y., June 5, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS:—Please say in the SIGNS that there will be no meeting of the church at May's Mill on the fourth Sunday in June. Our next meeting will be July 23d.

J. MAY, Clerk.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Baltimore Old School Baptist Association, convened with the Black Rock Church, Baltimore Co., Md., May 17th, 18th and 19th, 1893, to the churches composing the same, sends greeting.

BELOVED IN THE LORD:—As an association we are again privileged to meet, through the love and mercy of our God and Savior, who commands, "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."—James ii. 12. How sad to know that in this day of darkness and delusion there are some who, like the priests and professors of old, in the days of typical Israel, would forbid us ascribing all honor, power and glory to our God, which is manifest in the wisdom, sovereignty, foreknowledge, immutability, love and mercy, and all the fullness of the Godhead, by which we know that in him we live and move and have our being; who declares by the apostle Paul, "Being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will; that we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ."—Eph. i. 11, 12. As the Lord by his prophet commanded Israel, so may we also hear and heed, "Remember this, and show yourselves men: bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors. Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." &c.—Isa. xli. 8-10. We hear this glorious predestinating God declaring, "I am God, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." It is our joy and privilege to call your thoughts to the great and grand truth given us in Romans xi. 33-36, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory forever. Amen." The Scriptures of truth thoroughly furnish us with instruction, reproof and correction, and we can only keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace by abiding steadfastly in the truth. The way of holiness is the only way in which the redeemed shall enter the portals of unsullied glory. "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there:

and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."—Isa. xxxv. 8-10. We believe that God is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. We therefore believe in his absolute sovereignty over angels, men and devils, and over every event that transpires. We delight to rely on the wisdom, love and mercy of our God to guide and keep us through all this mortal life; yet we find our carnal mind enmity against him, not subject to his law, neither indeed can be. It is written, "The government shall be upon his shoulder." Again, "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." "O Lord, correct me, but with judgment; not in anger, lest thou bring me to nothing." Christ, the Truth, speaks words of truth to comfort us in all our weary pilgrimage through this sin-cursed world to the holy, sinless heaven. We are witnesses of his gracious promise, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." Having a new life implanted, we love holiness and hate sin. This is contrary to nature, or the old man, which wars against this new or inward man, who delights in the law of God. Sometimes in this fearful warfare the old man seems to get the victory, and we are constrained to cry, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But behold the love of God, whose love exceeds the love of a mother for her child. He gives us this sweet and comforting truth, "My grace is sufficient for thee." Thus we enjoy peace through our great Prince of peace; and through this mortal life of conflict we gain the victory through the great Captain of our salvation, who has promised that he will never leave us nor forsake us. He encourages us with many great and precious promises, telling us to "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." On this battle-ground we learn many great truths, for it is through much tribulation that we must enter the kingdom of God. "These things," says Jesus, "I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."—John xvi. 33. Hear patient Job say, "What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips."—Job ii. 10. The apostle, addressing the church at Corinth, and the church of God in all places, says, "But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead: who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us." Ought we not all be as sanguine and trustful as the writer of that epistle? Have we not the same faith, love and hope? For Christ is entered into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us. How wonderful! Yes, it accords with the prophetic declaration, "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor," &c. Yes, our loving Advocate and powerful Intercessor proclaims from his majestic throne to all his chosen, blood-washed church, in all time and places where they may have their appointed dwelling, "Because I live, ye shall live also." The apostle says, "We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak; knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you. For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God. For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."—2 Cor. iv. 13-18. The apostle, after reciting the correction of our natural fathers, and our reverence for them, says, "Shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure, but he [God, the Father] for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby."—Heb. xii. 9-11. Therefore we are driven to our restful shade of the great Rock in this weary land, and cry out in strains of rapturous love and praise, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah. There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early. The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah."

WM. GRAFTON, Mod.

F. A. CHICK, Clerk.

To the several churches composing the Delaware Baptist Association the following letter is addressed as an annual Circular.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The condition of the churches when the country was new and the population scattered suggested the propriety, and it would seem necessity also, of correspondence between them. Some of them in an isolated condition, with their own members scattered far asunder, unless they should write sometimes, might not be heard from at all during the year. A year is long enough time for many troubles and disorders to creep in; and when these creep in, peace and joy and the comforts of fellowship will be likely to go out. Then it was desirable and seemingly necessary that the several churches, if they valued their standing, should write and satisfy their brethren that they were still walking orderly, and enjoying that fellowship which is in the truth. In this day, and particularly in this thickly settled portion of our country, the churches are generally well acquainted with each other. A letter stating particulars will probably not convey any information but what the churches are all conversant with; still we need not stop writing. There may be other important matters to deal with. We know that in time past errors and innovations have obtained footing in the churches, and in some of them no warning voice had ever apprised them of danger. The Savior has taught us that because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. It is hardly likely that the iniquity here spoken of refers to profligacy and vice, but rather to worldly influence, popularity, and the applause of men. We do not any of us want to encounter persecution and reproach, nor to be reduced in numbers, so as to see cause of discouragement; but we know that these things have an effect in calling forth the graces of the Spirit. They cause the love to each other to wax warm. When members enjoy much worldly prosperity, and find themselves becoming wealthy, an indifference to church privileges is apt to steal upon them, and their love to the brethren and to their meetings becomes cool. The world and the church are essentially different. Each one provides for its own. A spiritual church presents no attractions to the world; but its provisions ought to satisfy its own people, without conformity to the vain and empty show and hollow mockery of the world. We are in the world, and have need of comforts that the world provides; but while we have need to use the things of the world, we should not let them get the mastery over us. Where our treasure is our hearts are quite apt to be. It is quite difficult to possess much of this world without our minds and affections being absorbed more or less with it. It is more especially so when wealth is accumulating; but worldliness abounding among others around us is calculated to sometimes cast a gloom over our minds. So excellent and spiritual minded a man as Asaph confesses to this gloom and despondency. He says he was envious at the foolish, when he saw the prosperity of the wicked. The lot of the Lord's people has not been one of what the world would call prosperity, but rather a bitter cup, with waters of adversity and discouragement wrung out to them. In the writings of the late Elder John Leland may be found something of the same kind. Fretting because of the outward prosperity and increase in numbers and wealth of those about him, yet of them he would no doubt have said, "Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world and increase in riches." In the light of the sanctuary these things are understood, and the end of them is seen. Church prosperity and worldly prosperity are very different things; and those who had ever been in the sanctuary might readily see the difference. The world loves its own; and if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him; that is, when love to the world is paramount. If the sight of these things affects us to be envious and fretted, we are nearing danger. We are susceptible of temptation; and if we crave the kind of increase and prosperity that we see among others, we know exactly how to obtain it. The garments of salvation are not admired and applauded by the world. There are other garments also worn by the saints, as those of humility and of praise; neither are these appreciated by the world. We are admonished to let them be always white. They are white when we are clothed with them, and will remain so if we do not stain them. Those who do not defile their garments shall walk with their Redeemer in white. A long season of quiet and comfort tends to make us forgetful, and we do not appreciate our privileges as we were wont. Then we are in more danger of being allured by the various worldly enticements that surround us. Those fruits that John the Baptist called for are precious, and should be sought for and prized. They endure and grow on trees that do not cease from yielding fruit. The branches that bear fruit should be pruned and nourished, that they bring forth more fruit. The clothing that the saints are said to wear is not wrought by their own wisdom or labor, neither is it put on by their own effort, or as the result of their own volition. Folks do not be meek and humble as the result of persuasion or volition. Meekness, humility and contrition are the results of divine teaching, and the effects of the work of grace upon our hearts; and as we are said to be clothed with them, they characterize us, and appear whenever and wherever we are seen. The garments of salvation and the robe of righteousness are not essentially different from these.

They embrace all the varied and beauteous graces of the Spirit. These garments are appropriate to the bride, to be worn on the festival occasion and at the marriage supper. These several garments characterize the wearers. It is the King's daughter whose clothing is of wrought gold, and it is because she is the King's daughter. Such garments are not put upon us to hide deformity, or for the purpose of deception, to cover up a carnal heart and self-righteous spirit. The priestly robes did not make a priest, but they were provided for and put upon a priest because he was a priest. So the saints are said to be priests. It is of the weaknesses of men to follow men. If we would follow only those who walk in Wisdom's way no harm would result; but men are more apt to be led astray by ambitious and designing men, who aim to head a party or start a new sect, and show themselves to be some great one. This may be because faithful servants of the people are not disposed to turn aside to crooked ways. The tree is known by the fruit it bears. The ministry that the Lord provided for his people and sent to them tends to building them up and uniting and confirming them in the faith of the gospel, and never tends to the production of confusion and strife. It was designed to be a needed and profitable service to them. The vineyard wants genial showers and sunshine in order that the vine may flourish and the pomegranates bud; and if the north wind should sometimes be aroused against the garden it does not proceed from this God-given ministry. Besides sunshine and shower, there must sometimes be a need that the vineyard be pruned and digged; not, however, to injure the plants that the Lord hath planted, but to root out and prevent the growth of briars and thorns, and any and every root of bitterness. It becomes us to be satisfied with the provision that the Lord has made for his people in his church. It is called the goodness of his house. This provision does not consist of a collection and display of ornaments and decorations that charm and attract the world, nor of lavish expenditure that loads the people with grievous burdens. He provides all of it himself, and he bestows it all. While we do not expect the fruits of the Spirit and the milk and honey of the gospel land to attract the world, we rightfully expect it to attract the saints. The apostle calls our attention to the manner of some in forsaking the assembling of themselves together. This manner of some has not been entirely rooted out of the churches by the apostle's admonition, but may be yet traced as the manner of some to this very day. The admonition does not seem to have any particular reference to preaching or attendance upon the ministry; and while we attach vast importance to the gospel ministry, and readily concede the interest it awakens in the breasts of believers, and the blessed results even to themselves of a faithful attendance upon it, yet the expression "assemble yourselves" does not seem to embrace the idea of an appointment for preaching. It certainly does not confine us to that. Good preaching, of course, is to be commended always; but the good things exist all the same when they are not preached. There is nothing to preach but what exists all the while in the gospel of the grace of God. It would be no use to preach the kingdom of God if the kingdom of God did not exist; and ye are the kingdom of God yourselves. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" It ought not to be necessary to be repeatedly exhorting saints to assemble themselves together. It is rather desirable that they should find the disposition to assemble in their own hearts, and find the reward in their own life; and where assembling themselves together is forsaken, while yet time and occasion is found to attend to all worldly claims, and follow after various worldly attractions, it argues certainly that there is something wrong. They have left their first love, or else it has waxen cold. If we love more than others, if we have something more to love, and more worthy of our love, than others have, we should so live and act as to give evidence that we have been with Jesus and learned of him. "What do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so?"

The above reflections are submitted.

E. RITTENHOUSE, Mod.
P. M. SHERWOOD, Clerk.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Baltimore Old School or Primitive Baptist Association, assembled with the Black Rock Church, Baltimore Co., Md., May 17th, 18th and 19th, 1893, to the several associations and meetings with which we correspond, sends love in the Lord.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—God is love, and because of that love we are here, and have been made glad and to rejoice in the proclamation by the messengers of our God from different parts of the globe, of the love, purpose, dominion and power of God over all his creatures, in this same power. With one voice they have testified of the wonderful works of God in the children of men. We have been made glad by the coming of your messengers and messages of love, and greatly desire their continuance in the same spirit of love. Our meeting has been good and harmonious, and the business very little. We do feel that God has been with us, directing not only the word spoken, but all our transactions.

We have appointed our next meeting to be held with the Harford Church, Harford Co., Md., where we hope to meet not only those with us now, but others also.

WM. GRAFTON, Mod.
F. A. CHICK, Clerk.

The churches composing the Delaware Baptist Association, in session with the church at Welsh Tract, New Castle Co., Del., May 24th, 25th and 26th, 1893, to our sister associations with whom we correspond, send christian salutation.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—Through the abounding goodness and mercy of our God we have once more been permitted to meet in an associated capacity, for the purpose, as we humbly hope, of worshipping God in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth. Our session has been one of peace and harmony, and love flowed from heart to heart. We trust the Lord has made the place of his feet glorious, while we have been permitted to sit under the droppings of the sanctuary. Your messengers have come to us in love, and in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. We desire a continuance of your correspondence, and hope you will receive ours in the same love and fellowship that we feel to extend toward yours, and all who love our Lord Jesus Christ.

Our next association is appointed to be held with our sister church at Rock Springs, Lancaster Co., Pa., on Wednesday before the fourth Sunday in May, 1894, when and where we hope to meet your messengers again.

E. RITTENHOUSE, Mod.
P. M. SHERWOOD, Clerk.

The Delaware River Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Kingwood Church, to the associations, corresponding meetings and churches with whom we correspond, Greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—"Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God," and heirs to an incorruptible crown that fadeth not away, and that we are preserved in Jesus Christ, and kept in the faith of the gospel and the fellowship of the saints, and are again brought together, according to appointment, to receive your Minutes and messengers, who came to us laden with the fruit of the Spirit, love, joy and peace. We send you our Minutes in the same spirit of love; and although they show no great ingatherings in our churches, you will see that we are in peace, and it is written, "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Ministers from several states of this broad land have attended our meeting, and preached with the Spirit's power the unsearchable riches of Christ, to the comfort of God's believing children, the poor in spirit but rich in faith. There is one Lord, one faith and one baptism; and we trust that the harmony which has prevailed throughout this meeting witnesseth that we are gathered together in the unity of the faith and knowledge of the Son of God.

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory forever and ever."

Our next session is appointed to be held with the Southampton Church, at Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., commencing on Wednesday before the first Sunday in June, 1894, at ten o'clock a. m., and continue three days, when we hope to receive your correspondence, messengers and ministering brethren in love and fellowship.

WM. J. PURINGTON, Mod.
ELIJAH LEIGH, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscriptions to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

LENGTHY OBITUARY NOTICES.

WHILE we feel to sympathize with those who are called to part with near and dear relatives and friends in death, yet we must request that in writing obituary notices they will be as brief as possible. A little reflection on this matter will, we think, be sufficient to show how unnecessary are long accounts of the minor incidents in the life of the deceased. Aside from the immediate friends of the subject of the notice they are not of general interest; and those to whom they are of any importance are about all acquainted with the facts without publishing them. A short notice is more likely to receive early insertion in the paper, as our obituary department as a rule is very much crowded; and it frequently occurs that owing to the extreme length of the notices, the publication of some are delayed for two or three numbers.

(Continued from page 187.)

means, if the command was heeded by the church to "lay by in store as God has prospered," there would be all that was necessary, and the ministers would not once question whether he could afford it, knowing that the brethren were forward in supplying the things necessary. If the deacons would attend to these matters the minister would not need to go in distress; or if he mentioned it, he would not appear to be begging.

The selection of a deacon should never appeal to the fleshly mind of the brethren; only the Scriptural rule should be followed in the matter, as given in Paul's letter to Timothy.

Then, again, the church would feel at liberty to question a ministering brother if he neglected them, or became careless of his charge. It is impossible for him to serve two masters. But you will agree with me that it would seem out of order for the church to censure him for trying to provide for his own house, even his own family, while their own mouths were stopped, as their neglect of him had simply compelled him to do so. Some one might say that if the minister was looked after it might encourage some to press into the service whom the Lord had not called. I hardly think any would be tempted so to do, as I do not believe the amount would be very flattering. At least it would do no harm to give it a fair trial. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." All the members have a place to fill and a duty to perform; and when faith is in lively exercise, and the church of God is in order, we are made to exclaim with the poet,

"How sweet, how heavenly is the sight,
When those who love the Lord
In one another's peace delight,
And thus fulfill his word."

My harp has hung upon the willows for a long time, and I am made to exclaim, O that it were with me as in times past, when I washed my steps with butter, and the Rock poured me out rivers of oil; when all the day long Jesus was my joy and my song. Now I see scarcely a ray of light. If I am permitted a glimpse of the soul-cheering presence of Jesus, I have hours to suffer. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Pardon me for taking so much of your valuable time. I intended only to write a few lines in regard to my remittance. Wishing you a prosperous and happy new year, I subscribe myself

Your brother in hope,

B. F. BUTLER.

MARRIAGES.

On May 30th, 1893, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mt. Ivy, Rockland Co., N. Y., Mr. Joseph W. Eakins, of Paterson, N. J., and Miss Delia A., daughter of Mr. James Mather.

POETRY.

WASTED YEARS.

By JESSIE MACGREGOR.

THE wonderful love of God to me
Hath urged me over the deep Red Sea;
Hath been a light, a brooding breast,
When skies were troubled or feet would rest;
Hath lured me on through wilderness
years,
In spite of failures of mine and fears.
I saw not love in the pillared fire,
Nor God's consent to my own desire;
Beyond the veil that enwrapped the day
Far more of terror than comfort lay.
What desert stretched through the wasted
years,
When fear made failures, and failure fears!

'Twas wonderful love that pressed me still
To the land of promise against my will;
Lo, making a cross of accusing fears,
I clung to that through the wasted years;
Now weaned at last from Egyptian straw,
God's law is love, and his love is law.
Did God his wonderful love disguise?
'Twas I who, looking with sin-barred eyes,
Saw frowns, or never his face at all;
My groanings smothered his tender call.
Yet he hath wrapped, I see through tears,
In wonderful love these wasted years.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

ELDER WM. L. BEEBE—DEAR BROTHER AND PASTOR:—In behalf of the Beulah church, I am authorized to request that notice be given through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that you are expected to attend our meeting at the usual place on Saturday and Sunday, June 17th and 18th, 1893.

All who desire to meet with us are cordially invited to attend. May the grace of God enable us to dwell together in unity, forbearing one another in love.
Your unworthy brother,

ARCHIBALD McALPINE, Clerk.
AUGHRIM, Ontario, May 7, 1893.

THERE will be a two days' meeting held with the Old School Baptist Church at Riker's Hollow, Steuben Co., N. Y., on the third Sunday and Monday in June (18th and 19th). A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to meet with us.

Ministers on their way from the Chemung Association to Canada will please stop over with us, and as many others as can. Friends will be met at Atlanta Station, formerly Blood's, on arrival of both Erie and D., L. & W. R. R. trains on Saturday, June 17th.

GEORGE WELD, Clerk.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CON-VENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No
9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn.
Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"
FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book.
Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks
Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00.
Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY EL-DERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid,
$1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks
Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1893.

NO. 25.

CORRESPONDENCE.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y., March 2, 1893.

FRED S. BRINK—DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—Though strangers one to another in the flesh, yet having heard of you through Elders Hubbell and Jenkins, I have felt interested in you, especially because of your former connection with the New School Baptists. I was for some years associated with those religionists; and though I found here and there one that I esteemed as a subject of God's grace, yet with the great body of the people I had no home. There was no concord or fellowship between us. I will not attempt to narrate the particulars of my life among the New School Baptists. In No's. 8 and 14 of Vol. 49 of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES I wrote an account of the Lord's dealings with me, and of my joining and withdrawing from that people; and in Vol. 53, No. 8, is a letter of mine published, in which more fully I have set forth why I cannot look upon the congregations of that denomination as being the churches of Christ.

I shall not soon forget my first intercourse with what is denominated Old School Baptists, and of my first acquaintance with Elder W. L. Beebe. I was then preaching in connection with the New School in a neighborhood where I had lately come to live; and here I found several members of the Old School Baptists. No sooner did we get into conversation than there was a union felt, which deepened as our intercourse one with another continued. If there is one thing that we are taught of God, it is that "Salvation is of the Lord;" and though denominations may profess to assent to this, in their doctrines and practices they deny it. Indeed, since the time that I withdrew from the New School Baptists they have degenerated (if possible) more and more. Almost every ism is propagated or tolerated among them. But they cannot tolerate the simplicity of the gospel of Christ. The truth as it is in Jesus, like the cake of barley-bread that tumbled into the host of Midian, would soon overturn their enterprises, and put them in confusion. Judges vii. 13. Of old it was said concerning the ministers of Christ, that they "turned the world up side down."—Acts xvii. 6. So opposite is the doctrine of Christ from all preconceived ideas of the natural mind, and all the inventions and philosophies of the religious world.

In manifold ways how manifest it is that "Jehovah doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel."—Exod. xi. 7. As I view the wondrous and gracious dealing of the Lord with his people, and, as I hope, with me, I am humbled before our God. Who am I, and what am I, that I have been so signally favored, and taught of God? Fleshly boasting is excluded. The apostle Paul wrote to the saints at Corinth, "Who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" If we, dear brother, have been given an experimental inheritance in the doctrine of God our Savior, then our glorying will be in the Lord.

Some years have now glided by since I united with the church. The fellowship and love of the household of God has been a sweet solace to my soul. I am satisfied, my brother, that you will find a home among the churches. With them all will not be sunshine. It will not be to be "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease." There will be reproaches for Christ's sake, persecutions (Mark x. 30) among the very churches of Christ. Offences must needs come (Matt. xviii. 7), heresies will arise (1 Cor. xi.), and these things you may have to witness and experience. But if your heart is bound up with the life and welfare of the dear people of God, as (notwithstanding all my unworthiness) I verily believe mine is, you will rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep. In times of manifest felt peace and prosperity you will rejoice with Jerusalem. But when afflictions come, and complainings are heard in our streets (Psalm cxliv.), when the gold is become dim (Lam. iv.), and the ways of Zion do mourn, your heart will weep, and mourn for her.—Isaiah lxvi. 10. Whether therefore prosperity or adversity be the portion of the saints, in my heart I have said, "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces: for my brethren and companions' sakes I will now say, Peace be within thee. Because of the house of the Lord our God, I will seek thy good."

But I will not burden you with my writing, but repeat that I felt glad to hear about you from brother Hubbell, and glad to hear through brother Jenkins of your uniting with the church. I shall be very glad to receive a few lines from you, and hope before a great while to see you face to face. Brother Jenkins tells me that you intend to make your abode in Middletown. I am glad of this, for you will have the companionship of some precious saints of God living there, and the privileges of the church assembling in that place. Wishing you and your wife and mother every blessing in Christ Jesus,

I am, I hope your brother in the fellowship of the gospel,

FRED W. KEENE.

CORNWALL, N. Y., March 20, 1893.

ELDER F. W. KEENE—MY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Your very welcome letter of recent date was received, and was indeed "As cold water to a thirsty soul." I have thought many times that I would sit down and write you something of my own experience, if I could; but the many cares incident to our removal to Middletown April 1st have hindered me until now, and this afternoon I experience the truth of Solomon's words, "The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord;" and I feel how helpless I am even to tell of what I hope the Lord has done for me; for I do indeed know that "Salvation belongeth unto the Lord."

Previous to the winter of 1886 I was "dead in trespasses and sin," conscious of moral sin, but living among a people that believed and taught that a person could be saved if they would only believe, and that salvation depended upon the act of the creature in accepting that which God was continually offering to the sinner. I put off my own acceptance, as I thought, until I had had a good time in this world; for I did not believe that indulgence in worldly amusements and pleasures was consistent with the Christian's profession of faith and hope in Christ. I had been an attendant at Sunday School from my earliest childhood, and had no thought or anxiety but that if given a few hours at some distant time I could make my peace with God. But thanks to the God of our salvation, I was not to continue thus under cunningly devised fables and delusions of men. During the early part of that winter I had a deeper sense of my sin than ever before, but still thinking that I could be saved as soon as I wanted to, if I would give up my worldly associates and pleasures. This increased consciousness of sin only led me to give a little more attention to reading the letter of the Bible, and, when convenient, a more frequent attendance at public meeting. When the new year opened I was most earnestly invited to attend the services during the "week of prayer;" but I went away visiting that week, so that I could offer the excuse of absence from town to those who were so desirous of my presence at the meetings. I returned after a week's visit, not having attended a single meeting of any kind, nor having met a single professed Christian, to my knowledge, but with a deep sense of my lost condition because of sin, and my whole life darkened because I felt there was no hope for me. I well remember going to the church of which my mother was a member, Tuesday evening, Jan. 4th, 1887, and at the close of the service requesting the prayers of the church that I might be saved; but I could not have told one hour after the service closed of anything that was said there that evening. I left the church feeling to hope that since I had done my duty in manifesting my desire to become a Christian, that I would soon be saved. But O the darkness of those two following weeks! God brought me to feel the vanity of depending upon man for help; and though I was frequently instructed by my spiritual advisers (?) how to pray, the only prayer I could utter was that of the publican; and with the deep sense of my sin came the consciousness that I had no right to ask forgiveness, for I had willfully transgressed the law of God many times. Only those who have had a similar experience can know anything about the sadness of those days when I believe God gave me repentance. For two long weeks I continued in the darkness of sin, and then I believe God gave me reason to hope in Christ as my Savior. I soon told the church what I hoped the Lord had done for me, though it was so independent of anything done by man that I hesitated lest they would reject me because I could not explain how I came to have a hope. I was accepted as a candidate for membership, and on Sunday evening, Jan. 30th, was immersed in warmed water in the baptistry, by the pastor, and rejoiced in my heart over the counterfeit as much as though it were genuine; and indeed I thought it was. Soon I felt the burden of the ministry laid upon me, and the woe if I did not preach the gospel. I fought it as long as I could; for while I had natural desires to have the pre-eminence among my brethren, I did not feel that I could preach. I could not see that I had a gift to speak, and I knew that my education had not qualified me to discharge the duties of a minister with credit to myself, and so I tried to believe that it was a temptation of the flesh that ever gave me the idea that I was called to preach; but at last I found that I could not escape the duty given me of God, and was made willing to do his will, who had called me to the work. But even though God had graciously granted me a deeper experience of his power than had been given to many, I was not yet to be liberated from the inventions and traditions of man, and so I went to take a course of instruction at the college and theological seminary; for the agents of those institutions who came with the title of "D. D." told me that that was the way God had opened for those whom he called to preach, to fulfill Paul's instruction to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Naturally enough, I thought that men who had given themselves to the work of the ministry, and who went to college and seminary for the purpose of preparing themselves for that work, would have little time for anything else. But to my surprise I found that the responsibilities of that work were taken from the student when he entered upon his course of instruction, and caused him but little thought, compared with the desire to stand at the head of his class and to graduate with honor from his fellow-men.

"Rev. Dr." A. C. Osborn, pastor of the New School Baptist Church at Albion, N. Y., said in The Examiner of Jan. 19th 1893, "Our educational system tends to make scholars rather than preachers; it awakens the ambition and the pride of scholarship, rather than a hungering and thirsting after souls; it looks more to sermonizing than to evangelizing. The minister should be the man of one book. Whatever else he may know, or fail to know, he should be familiar with the Book. Yet, if we are not greatly mistaken, men are going forth from our seminaries every year who have never even read the whole of the Bible; who, although receiving the holy Book as the word of God, have spent far more time over the Iliad of Homer than over the Psalms of David; who know more of the political and social economy, and civil and military history of Greece and Rome, than of the chosen people of God; who have studied the history of emperors and popes more than that of Israel's kings and prophets."

I believe this confession to be the truth. My own acquaintance with many graduates of those institutions would corroborate it. Well, I became sick of the whole arrangement, and quickly graduated without diploma, but with something of infinitely greater value, the evidence of my heavenly Father's guidance. When I felt so dissatisfied with the plan of "ministerial education," which I plainly saw was only a scheme to put money into the pockets of its projectors, that I could not stay longer, I had no idea that I ever would preach. You may be able to imagine something of the state of my mind at the time, believing myself called of God to preach, and yet kept by him from the only way I know of preparing for the ministry.

These were some of my experiences during the winter of 1887. I returned home, engaged in business for awhile, for the time being gave up all plans for preaching, was led of the Lord to my helpmate, married and, as I thought, settled down for life. During the summer of 1890 I heard of the church at Shushan, N. Y., desiring a pastor, and felt led of God to offer myself to them. No less than sixty men did the same thing. But God in his providence led them to call me to become their pastor, and on Nov. 20th, 1890, I was set apart publicly to the work of the ministry. Time passed, and my acquaintance with the denomination and its practices widened, and my disgust deepened; and though I had myself spoken with contempt of the "Hard Shells," the Lord led me to them for his truth. How well do I remember my first attendance upon the ministry of Elder Jenkins. We were visiting in Middletown at the time. One Sunday afternoon in October, 1891, I went to the Old School meeting. Brother Jenkins did not know me at that time, nor do I think he saw me that afternoon; but his sermon was a message to me direct. If I had ever before heard the gospel, certainly I never had had the hearing ear until then. And when at the close of service I asked if I might at some convenient season have further conversation with him, and he consented, I was glad indeed. The next afternoon at an early hour I was at his office by appointment, and never shall I forget the kindness and honesty with which he answered my multitude of questions. How I did appreciate his counsels; but for a long time I could not understand why, when he so frankly talked with me, that he never hinted that he would like to see me an Old Baptist, although he could not help but see that I was an Old Baptist in sympathy, and he had expressed a spiritual fellowship for me. As the months passed, and the Lord graciously gave me increased light upon his truth, I was given strength to preach it as he gave it to me. As yet I did not see the order of the church as the visibly organized kingdom of Christ, and thought that I could continue to preach the truth the Lord gave me, and that it would be acceptable to New School Baptists, and I could retain the relationship I then sustained to the church by which I was ordained. But my plans soon fell. I was not as popular as I had been. In fact, members of the church said that I was trying to break up the church, and soon I felt the application of the Master's words, "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." I closed my labors and severed my relation as pastor of the church, not knowing where the Lord would have me go. Upon invitation of the church at Cornwall I came to them, and during the term of our relationship as pastor and people their kindness to me was greatly to be commended. But God had other plans for me. He had shown me his church, and likewise my own misplacement, speaking after the manner of men. Our pleasant relationship was to be severed. I frankly told the church of my convictions of duty, and offered my resignation; but, greatly to my surprise, they refused to accept it, and desired me to continue as I had been, preaching the eternal truths of God's word; and so strong was our friendship that until I had shown them that the indorsement of my preaching would disfellowship the church from the denomination, they would not consent to my departure. I have spiritual fellowship for many here in this church, and believe them to be true subjects of God's grace; but, as I was, when with them, walking in disorder. I closed my work here Feb. 12th, and at the next meeting of the Middletown Church, on Saturday, Feb. 23th, offered myself to them; and though I felt my unworthiness to have a name with them, they accepted me. My wife, who had long been exercised about my change and her own position, was enabled to offer herself at the same time, and was received by the church, as was also my step-mother, who had been for many years a Congregationalist; and, strange as it might seem to one with only the natural discernment, we did not know that she expected to offer herself to the church then, nor did she have any knowledge of our intention; in fact, as neither had knowledge of the experience of the other, I had never had conversation with her regarding her hope, until after she had told the church of her experience. On Sunday afternoon we were buried with Christ in baptism by Elder Jenkins, in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist church at Middletown. The baptism was administered at the cemetery pond, where a place had been prepared by cutting the ice, and it did seem more symbolic of a burial than it would at almost any other time. The men who prepare the graves had prepared the place for our liquid burial, and as the icy walls rose above the water the resemblance was marked.

My brother, it is needless that I continue this poor letter, to tell you of the sweetness of the love and fellowship of the Lord's people to us. It did seem as though the cup of our blessing was running over, so great was the goodness of God to us; but I doubt not that this has been your experience too, and so I will not needlessly try your time and patience to read this.

We have been on the mountain-top, and then again deep down in the valley; but our God has not suffered us to be tempted above that we are able, but has also prepared a way of escape. The experience of Paul as recorded in Rom. vii. has afforded me much comfort; but it often staggers my faith to believe that even he had any such conception as I have of the truth of the statement, "I am carnal, sold under sin." My crooked paths and many missteps cause me great sorrow; but thanks be to God that "He hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." "Of him are ye [we, by grace] in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption; that, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

My dear brother, I have written at great length; but now that I have finished, honestly I am ashamed to send so poor an answer to your good letter; but I do not know that I could do better if I should try again; so I will send this, and hope that you will overlook its shortcomings, and write me more of your experience.

I very much enjoy the SIGNS. The letters from the brethren and sisters come as "good news from a far country."

God willing, I hope to see you on your visit at Middletown.

Kindly give our love to brother Hubbell, and all the members of the household of faith.

Yours in hope by grace,

F. S. BRINK.

DILLE, Washington Co., Oregon.

MUCH ESTEEMED BRETHREN BEEBE, AND ALL LOVERS OF THE TRUTH AS IT IS IN CHRIST JESUS:—Unworthy though I feel myself to be of the least of all graces, I will, if it be according to the will and purpose of Almighty God, communicate with you once more by letter, though I wish not to crowd out better and more edifying material for publication in our dear family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I often wonder why we are more apt to write with a view to comfort our people, while in a spirit of gladness, because of a lifting of our souls on high, rather than when we are enveloped in spiritual gloom and general depression. Persons who know nothing of the conflicts daily fought between the flesh and the Spirit, who have no doubts, no fears of being in the wrong, or of being children of the evil one, draw not upon our love or sympathy, but appear so foreign to our views, that we are content to travel alone, rather than be seen traveling in their company. They are not fellow-pilgrims, nor even friends, being of different nationality; and our language is not comprehended by any except the manifest children of the same spiritual Father, who is the source of all light and knowledge enjoyed by the heirs of glory. But, on the other hand, many of us look forward to a day of rejoicing, as travelers in a desert land look forward to the little oases scattered here and there, where we may slake our thirst and refresh our weary souls. My dear, tried people, we are fellow-travelers in this world of sin and woe, and the way seems long, and we often grow faint, and our weary feet lag; and sometimes, when doubts of our being true followers of Jesus assail us, and we fear we are blind instruments of Satan's power, used to deceive the saints, and to bring reproach upon the cause of God, we feel that we have forsaken the strait and narrow way, and are wandering in by and forbidden paths, and by our actions proclaim our ignorance rather than our light. How often our path seems to lie through the valley and shadow of death, and our hope seems to mock us from afar, and with the dear old apostle Paul we are made to cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Hope glimmers now and then in the distance, as swift rushing clouds pass between it and our view. But now and then woe-laden, murky, black clouds lower around us and shut from our sight our hope, with all the evidences of a heaven-born state. O! what shall we, what can we, do now? Then a still small voice commands us, "Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." Even when we least expect it, and while we wonder how long this dreadful gloom will last, the clouds are lifted, and the bright beams of the presence of the Sun of glory penetrate and illumine our poor souls, and hope once more revives our drooping spirits, and we pursue our pilgrimage, content to suffer all things for Jesus' sake. Fellow-sufferers and strangers scattered about through the length and breadth of the land, is it any wonder that we cleave together as one family, and look forward to our little meetings with joyful thoughts, hoping to feel the glory of Jesus' presence, where two or three are gathered together in his name? Is it any wonder that we cherish this, our dear "family paper," as a medium of communication with strangers in the flesh, but kindred in spirit, and feast on the good things contained therein? Not only on the articles written by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit through our authorized ministers, but often we are comforted in the simplest and unassuming manner, on hearing the cry of babes, speaking in the mother tongue. But methinks that saddest of all ordeals we are called to pass through in this time state is the lukewarm condition, so easy to fall into, and so hard to extricate ourselves from. Who of my brethren or sisters has not felt it in a more or less degree? Many of the dear children can and do testify to the hard and unfeeling sense of wickedness, of depression we cannot successfully combat, an indifferent, careless inclination to attend meeting, with a skeptical feeling in watching the conduct of the brethren. The easy influence of evil over us, while in this state, is appalling. We rush hither and yon, with a view to distracting our minds from graver reflections. No comfort is derived from reading our Bible, for if it is not sealed to our understanding, all the good promises in which we once delighted apply to others and not to us. Some take up with the now alluring institutions of man, which emanate from the devil (but were decreed by the foreknowledge and determinate counsel of almighty God, that his counsel might stand and his pleasure be done), and they, the saints of the most high God, are again led captive, and apparently dwell contentedly even in the midst of Babylon. They drink of her wine and revel in her halls, calling themselves by different names assumed by secret and other orders, but all of a worldly nature, and in collusion with the arch enemy and his angels. There many strange gods are worshiped, and the captive strangers bow their heads in submission, and by their presence bid them God-speed. Some even enter the hot-houses of Satan, Sunday Schools, and so far forget their first love as to take part in the programme. Not only this, but many children of our heavenly King get into the habit of going to hear the paid emissaries of Satan defame, rob and strip our Father, the King of glory, of honor, of power, and all divine attributes, and array themselves in stolen goods, to strut and pose before the people as missionaries and ministers of the gospel of the Son of God. O! my beloved people, who were bought with the blood of Jesus, we are commanded to come out of her, and be not partakers of her iniquity. The king (Satan) who reigns over Babylon arrays the different kindred institutions in many colored and costly garments, to allure and fascinate the unsuspecting, and to hold in thrall those already in the meshes of his power. Death to spiritual life takes place at the threshold of this strange dominion, and often the poor subject is so drunken on the wine prevalent that he does not know the dreadful calamity that has befallen him, until the influence of the deadly drug has passed away, and then what dreadful remorse overtakes the benighted soul. It is often said that the child that is burned dreads the fire; but, my friends, we all know there are many degrees of burns, and there are many degrees of drunkenness. Living in the outskirts of the great city Babylon, and only taking a sip of her wine now and then, is no more following the commands of our Lord and Master than if we revel in her dens of infamy. It is not being separate, and the odor of her smoke which clings to us will sooner or later show our hypocrisy to our brethren, to our undoing and their sorrow. But should we by any means succeed in deceiving our brethren, our sin has soon found us out. In the language of the poet we are made to cry,

"Where is the blessedness I knew
When first I saw the Lord?
Where is the soul-refreshing view
Of Jesus and his word?"

"What peaceful hours I then enjoyed!
How sweet their memory still!
But now I find an aching void
The world can never fill.

"Return, O holy Dove, return,
Sweet messenger of rest;
I hate the sins that make me mourn,
And so disturb my breast."

Children of one Father, though led in diverse directions, are brethren still, in the holy relationship existing now and in all eternity. Thank God for the assurance that their life is hid with Christ in God. O! my erring brethren and sisters, blessed are we, in that we have not power to touch or destroy that life. Watts says,

"We are a garden walled around,
Chosen and made peculiar ground;
A little spot inclosed by grace,
Out of the world's wide wilderness."

There is no doubt but that our worst enemy is an element that dwells in and is inseparable from us. It is in and through this element or nature that the devil works. In fact, it is his home and feeding ground. Now, we are told by divine writ that if we have not Christ in us we are none of his. Some might wonder how this could be. But we who have felt the divine influence of the one, and the baleful, peace-destroying power of the other, can readily understand that the one dwells in the Spirit, and the other in the flesh. The apostle Paul says, "In me, that is, in my flesh, there dwells no good thing." Then, if that be so (and we feel to add our testimony to his), the divine influence cannot dwell in the flesh. But there is a warfare in the breast of every heaven-born soul, which is evidence sufficient to the child of God of the presence of two distinct elements; and no man can serve two masters. If we yield to the inclinations of the flesh, we are serving the devil and cheating the spiritual mind of the peace and joy derived only in performing the duty of an obedient child. My dear friends, I am no pattern for an example to others. My path has been crooked, and my tongue has ever been an unruly member, more ready to serve the law that rules my members, than to render thanks and adorable praise to him who is worthy of all honor and glory forever. And though the Spirit of God dwells in us, this fleshly nature is not changed; and while we are tossed here and there, beset with doubts and assailed with fears, in fact as long as we are in active trouble of mind, with here and there a precious gleam of light to cheer our drooping mind, there is much to rejoice in; for the fierceness of the warfare shows the life and strenght of the Spirit. But if the warfare ceases, and the lukewarm, indifferent condition takes its place, we may be sure a fearful thing has befallen us. Have we not noted the removal of the candlestick of Jehovah, and felt the fiery indignation of his wrath? O that we might be kept in that strait and narrow way, that reproach may not come through us. While we have the spirit of prayer and supplication we will not go far wrong; but that can come only from the fountain head of all good; therefore God alone can keep us in the right way. Were we to have the assurance that we might make but one step in the right direction, there would be some honor due us. God in his wisdom foreknew all things, and perfected his work before time; and time continues for the purpose of the manifestation of that work. With the poet Cowper we will sing,

"His purposes will ripen fast,
Unfolding every hour;
The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

Brethren, I submit the above to your judgment.

MRS. J. K. BOYD.

WAITING ON THE LORD.

THERE are none of Adam's race so far advanced in science or religion that they can bring God under any obligation to them, either in providence or grace, or, in plain terms, prevail on God to do as the creature wills, and at the time he wills. He can neither control the winds of heaven nor the waves of the sea; he cannot make it rain as he wills, nor stop it as he wills. These things the natural man comprehends, and must own that his power is too limited to control. Much less has man the power to prevail with God to cause his Spirit to operate on the heart or conscience of man; that is, to bring God down at the will of the creature, and to bless him with his presence just when the creature wills that he should come. The experience of every child of grace can bear testimony that it was not of any power or merit that he possessed that caused God to have mercy on him; but because it just pleased God at his own appointed time and in his own way, that he was enabled to hear the joyful sound that "salvation is of the Lord;" and that there could not possibly be a way for him to taste that the Lord is gracious but "the way" that it pleased the

(Continued on page 199.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 21, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FIRST LAST, AND LAST FIRST.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Will you please give your views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES on the text, Matt. xix. 30, and oblige one who desires to know the truth?

MILTON, Ohio, March, 1893.

R E P L Y .

"But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first."—Matt. xix. 30.

However willing to comply with requests of our readers, experience in the past has impressed upon the editors of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES their destitution of ability to answer the numerous applications received. If our patrons were not kind enough to consider our weakness and ignorance in the things of the kingdom of Christ, we should long since have forfeited their esteem and confidence. Encouraged by their forbearance, we are willing to present such thoughts as are given us upon the subject of the words of our Lord above quoted. It is not claimed that in what is written the declaration is expounded in all its fullness. It will afford us satisfaction to receive further comments from our inquiring correspondent or from any of the lovers of revealed truth who read these lines. Nothing but truth is profitable to the saints; and when the Lord shows his truth to one believer, it is given to profit with all. The saints are all alike interested in the consideration of every expression which bears witness of the glory of Jesus. There is no portion of that revelation which can be appropriated exclusively by any one of the subjects of divine grace. It is the common property of the whole family of the redeemed. Hence, whatever understanding of the words may bring comfort to one believer, it is his privilege to submit that view for the judgment and profit of all who have obtained like precious faith.

In considering the words submitted for our discussion it is essential that they should be taken in the connection in which they were spoken by our Lord Jesus. In the preceding verses we are told of the case of the young man who went away sorrowful because he was commanded, if he would be perfect, to sell that which he had and give to the poor, and come and follow Jesus. The cause of his sorrow was that he had great possessions. If he had been poor, his sorrow might not have been so intense; and if he had been entirely destitute, there would have been no sacrifice required in following the Lord. "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Immediately after their amazed inquiry, "Who then can be saved?" Peter asked the selfish question, "Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" There is no doubt but that this was the inquiry of each of the disciples, as carnal covetousness has suggested the same desire for personal advantage in the heart of many another tried believer since. Jesus answered first for the twelve apostles, and then for all in every age and in every place, who should walk in his footsteps. "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Then Jesus added the words of our text, as explanatory of the manner in which the gift of divine grace should be ministered unto his chosen disciples. It is apparent that this order is exactly the reverse of the way which seems right to reason. While they had indeed left all and followed Jesus, the chosen apostles could claim no reward for what they had done, since they had only done that which the grace of God made them choose as their highest privilege. The reward of their obedience was abundantly ministered unto them in the experience of the answer of a good conscience toward God in the service they were favored to render.

Under the legal system of works, the reward of obedience was reckoned of debt, and the servant who was approved by the law received the commendation of its judgment. "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them."—Rom. x. 5. According to the decision of that law the most strict observance of every requirement secured the first place in its commendation. Hence the first in claims of merit was first in enjoyment of legal justification. This is the way which seems right to man in this age, as it did then to those disciples of Moses who trusted in the Sinai law for acceptance before God. Nothing but the revelation which is made through divine grace by the Spirit of truth, can deliver those who are under the bondage of legal slavery. Until that light shines in their heart to the manifestation of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, not even the subjects of electing love can know that the grace of God is independent of all considerations of merit on the part of those on whom it is bestowed. Indeed, it is needful that the saints should still have constantly renewed instruction to remind them of that fundamental truth, that it is exclusively by grace they are saved. This can never be comprehended by natural reason. The principle of reward for services of obedience, as intimated in the question of Peter, is inseparable from all the thoughts of the carnal mind. While the gift of God to his called and chosen ones does infinitely exceed all their losses and sufferings, it is not upon the principle of reward for such sacrifices that they are favored with that gift. Only by faith can they receive the joy of divine approval in walking in the pathway of obedience, as it is plainly stated by the inspired reproof to the Ephesian saints. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." If anything had depended upon their works, then the order must have been just the reverse of that stated in our text. Those who were first would have had the precedence, and those who were last would be less favored in reward. Since the whole gospel system is based upon the unmerited favor of God, there can be no place found therein for the legal principle of reward for duties performed.

In the possession of the oracles of God, in their relationship to the fathers, and in hearing the messages which were sent by the prophets under the old dispensation, the natural Israelites had much advantage every way, as compared with the Gentile nations. But when the typical testimony of all those oracles was fulfilled in the revelation of the day of gospel light, those advantages bore witness against the proud Pharisees, making more manifestly glaring their enmity against the righteousness of God. So Jesus denounced the rulers of that legal order of worshipers, saying, "Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you; for John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not; but the publicans and the harlots believed him; and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him." Since they thus counted themselves unworthy of the kingdom of God, the Gentiles were brought into the enjoyment of the privileges of the gospel church before those who had possessed such superior advantages. In this way the declaration of our text was manifestly fulfilled.

But there is still a sense in which the saints prove the same truth in their individual and personal experience even in the present time. Under the control of their own prudence and watchfulness they may become exalted with the imagination of their success in walking worthy of their profession. When thus self-satisfied, the children of divine grace can never enter into the kingdom of God in the experience of that joy which is found in self-denying humility. While puffed up with confidence in their own excellence, and considering themselves first in exemplary conduct, it is impossible that they should be in the humble and contrite spirit of Christ, in which alone the grace of our Lord Jesus gives assurance of the favor of God. Very often it is the case in the experience of the buffeted followers of Jesus, that they may be deceived by their carnal mind so as to mistake the satisfaction of the selfish pride of their natural heart for the answer of a good conscience toward God. So effectually does this delusion blind those who are under its power that they never for a moment question the principle by which they are controlled. It can only be detected by the effect which it produces in its deluded victims. While their comfortable feeling of self-confidence affords a sort of exultation, it very soon develops a disposition to severely criticize others who do not appear to be so circumspect and exemplary in their deportment, and in whom are discovered faults in proportion to the superior excellence seen in themselves by the blinded captives of the adversary. The result of such subjection to the guidance of carnal pride is invariably to debar the saint who is under its power from entering by present experience into the kingdom of God. They may be confident that there is no error in themselves, and feel to be first in their performance of every commandment of their Lord, so that they can refer to what they have sacrificed in following Jesus; but there is an insuperable barrier in the way of any subject of divine grace, by which he is forbidden to enter into the kingdom of God so long as he can find any claim to merit in himself. That legal principle belongs to the house of bondage from which the saints are redeemed; and it is the pride of the flesh which originates the desire to seek approval by works of righteousness performed by the sinners who are saved by grace alone. This was represented in the type by the lusting of the children of Israel after the fleshpots of Egypt, "the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick." The food which God gave them was despised in their hungering after their former food in their Egyptian servitude. The judgment of God in giving them flesh to eat, was but a shadow of his dealing with the evil longings of his spiritual Israel when they seek for comfort in their own works of righteousness. While they are indeed in a manner satisfied with their own attainments, the Lord will never fail to make them feel the death which is inseparable from all such departures from the shelter of his own abounding grace. Only when conscious of their own utter destitution of merit can the saints enter into that kingdom of God which is "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

It is in the inheritance of everlasting life in this experimental sense, as obedient children of God, that the saints do receive an hundred fold recompense for every sacrifice which they are called to suffer. The gift of eternal life to every one of his chosen people is nowhere in the Scriptures represented as a reward. If it depended upon merit on the part of its recipients there could be no grace at all in its bestowal. But since there could be no justification of sinners by the deeds of the law, "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham." In the perfect law of liberty, which is the only law to which the saints owe allegiance, every requirement is the highest privilege to which they can aspire. In keeping the commandments of Jesus there is great reward, and those who are led by the Spirit in the pathway of righteousness have the answer of a good conscience toward God, which can never be known to those subjects of grace who walk in disobedience. While they are not under the law of sin and death, they are yet judged by the perfect law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. Since God works in all who are led by his Spirit, they have the will to follow Jesus; but if they yield their members servants to the flesh, and walk in disobedience to the direction of that holy commandment, they thereby sow to the flesh, and must of the flesh reap corruption. In the obedience of faith all the reward is experienced in the service rendered. The conscious sinner can conceive of no greater reward than freedom from sin; and this reward is found in keeping the commandments of Jesus. The bestowal of this blessed privilege is exclusively by the sovereign grace of the Lord Jesus. It is not determined by the choice nor yet by the works of those who are called to receive the divine favor. This doctrine of grace is contrary to the natural mind of even the saints themselves. It ascribes praise and glory alone to the Lord, while it shows the subjects of salvation indebted to divine love and mercy for the very obedience in which they find the answer of a good conscience toward God. There is none who can claim anything as due to himself in consideration of his own works; every manifestation of divine favor must be exclusively by grace. Hence the blessings of the gospel dispensation are bestowed without regard to the works of men, whether good or bad. "Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first." This is determined by the sovereign grace of the King in Zion.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Elders and messengers of the churches composing the Delaware River Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Kingwood Church, at Locktown, Hunterdon Co., N. J., May 31st and June 1st and 2d, 1893, to the churches whose messengers we are, send christian salutation.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Through the abounding goodness and watchful care of our unchanging and covenant-keeping God we are spared to meet again, according to our previous appointment, for which great privilege we surely ought to render thanks to him who keepeth Israel in safety, and supplies all our needs, bestowing every blessing, both temporal and spiritual.

As it has been our established rule, from our organization to the present time, to present an annual address by letter, we would now call your attention to the subject of associations, what are the objects of such assemblies, and why we thus continue them annually, and have chosen the following declarations of Scripture to base our remarks upon: "And let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." We are not able to discover any impropriety in our using the name association, as applied to our annual meetings; and while the word associate is only once recorded in the Scriptures, and applies to the wicked devices of men; for it reads, "Associate yourselves, O ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear, all ye of far countries; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; take counsel together and it shall come to naught; speak the word and it shall not stand; for God is with us." The assembling together of God's dear children is for a very different purpose; for our associations are not what is popularly called religious conventions, composed of delegates to make laws for the churches, and revise articles of faith to conform to the advancement of society, and remove the offensive expressions in our articles of faith, and with power to enact laws for the rule of the churches; but our associations are composed of messengers from the churches comprising the same; also to hear from the various churches by letter as to their prosperity, and from sister associations by messengers and minutes; and the real object of such meetings is for the mutual comfort and edification of God's dear children while journeying onward to their eternal home in heaven.

How different the motives that actuate the meek and humble followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, in thus assembling themselves together, from the votaries of antichrist, who meet for the only purpose to gain numbers and worldly power, and clearly show by their conduct that they know nothing about the vital unity that binds the children of God to Christ, their immortal Head, and to each other; for the apostle said, "We are members one of another." When idolatrous Israel had gone so far as to make void the commandments of God, had actually covered up or buried the law by their traditions, there was a little remnant still left that feared God; for "Then [that very day of abominable idolatry] they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it; and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name; and they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

Dearly beloved brethren, we are now living in a time when the New Testament Scriptures are ignored or set aside by the so-called religious community; therefore may the words of the apostle Peter be unto us of vast importance; for said he "to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ, Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue."

"And let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and to good works." When thus assembled, and his servants are enabled to proclaim the gospel, it surely will stir us up by putting us in remembrance of the gracious dealings of the Lord with us. How profitable and edifying when, to the children of God, the experience through which they have passed is brought before them, by having their minds stirred up; and although some things are brought to their remembrance, which are sorrowful, yet such matters are blessed to their comfort; and no persons can remember what they never knew. Therefore the joys, the sorrows, the fears and doubts, which God's dear children are made thus to remember, are treated with indifference by all religious characters who have had no such experience. The Savior said to his disciples, "But the Comforter (which is) the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." The prophet Jeremiah in his lamentations said, "My strength and my hope is perished from the Lord; remembering mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall. My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is humbled in me. This

I recall to my mind, therefore have I hope." If the prophet had not tasted the wormwood and the gall, he could not have remembered them; and the remembrance of those things was blessed to him, and he had hope; and when the children of God in times of sorrow remember what they have passed through, it causes hope to spring up afresh; for when his ministering servants "come in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ," their minds will be so stirred that they can say, Surely I have hope; for as their trials and joys are clearly set forth, and the Lord Jesus Christ has all the glory given to him, they then know that "As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man." The word provoke is here used in the sense of calling forth, stimulating to action, to arouse, &c. How important that all lovers of gospel truth should, so far as God may enable them, especially his ministering servants, "preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine; for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Not only should the watchmen be found at their post, but exhortation, reproof and rebuke should be given by the individual members of the churches, thus warning each other of the day now approaching; for there are ominous signs of a day of dire calamity approaching, when the truth of God will be so offensive that, as it was in the apostle's day, we shall need to be warned; for said he, "Being defamed, we entreat; we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day. I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you."

Now, while thus assembled, as an association, may we be enabled to encourage each other in all things pertaining to our walk in this life as the professed followers of the meek and lowly Lamb of God, and although we are a sect that is everywhere spoken against, we should not attempt, under any circumstances, to so "soften down" the pointed declarations of the Scriptures as to please the carnal ideas of any persons. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Also, "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." The psalmist said, "I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers." How encouraging in this day of abounding error and delusion to have the great blessing conferred upon us of meeting together as dear brethren, and being not ashamed nor afraid because we are not reckoned among the nations. Not being reckoned among the nations religiously causes the scorn and contempt of carnal religionists to be heaped upon us; but, dearly beloved, these things are evidences for us and not against us. Our dear Redeemer said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." The beloved John said, "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

Sometimes it is the case, when families have been in strife and confusion, that sore afflictions bring them to a condition to see how vilely unthankful they have been in not appreciating the great blessings they have been the recipients of; and the vile passions of their depraved natures are so sharply rebuked that peace, love and harmony are restored. And the dear children of God are sometimes much alienated in their feelings; but in the purpose of our heavenly Lover he sends amongst us sorrow, trouble and deep distress, caused by the departure of some from the simplicity of the gospel; others that we have had so much confidence in become traitors, and so far as they are permitted, sow the seeds of discord and strife among us; but what will be the final result with the meek, broken-hearted, who fear God and desire to keep his commandments? Will it separate them widely asunder? No; but it will cause them to love each other more dearly, and clearly manifest that they are "strangers and pilgrims on the earth;" and such have learned by experience "that the friendship of the world is enmity with God; whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God. However humiliating it may be to the proud heart of man, God's dear children feel to say, as did the inspired psalmist, "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." When living faith is in lively exercise, true believers cannot be separated by the scoffing and contumely of the carnal enemies of the gospel, but in their measure feel like Moses did when he turned away from all the glories of Egypt; for "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward." After the apostles had been beaten, and commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, they let them go; but did such conduct and threatening deter the apostles from preaching in the name of Jesus? No; for great grace was upon them. "And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name. And daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." The course the enemies of God's truth have taken in ancient as well as modern times, has been blessed to the sustaining and upholding of Zion's pilgrims in this world; and often they feel the sweetness and divine power of God as expressed in the words of the inspired penman, "For we know that all things work together [not separate] for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

Beloved brethren, may our association be blessed to our mutual comfort and edification, and we feel individually to say, It was a precious season to me; and be led to rejoice in the words penned by the inspired psalmist, "They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and shall sing of thy righteousness. The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works. All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord, and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom."

WM. J. PURINGTON, Mod.
ELIJAH LEIGH, Clerk.

The Warwick Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Middletown & Wallkill Church, in the city of Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y., June 7th, 8th and 9th, 1893, to the several churches of which she is composed, Greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED:—Once more the God of all grace has permitted us to assemble according to appointment. In infinite mercy the Lord has added to our number of such as shall be saved, and in many ways we have been made to realize the care which God takes of his children. While with thankful hearts we would adore and praise his holy and reverend name, we feel that we are living in the age which the apostle speaks of as "the last days." As we look around us and note the condition of the world at large (religiously), we realize that prophecy is rapidly being fulfilled. In the language of the apostle James we would say, "Brethren, be patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Surely the hour is fast approaching when the church will experience the perfect and complete redemption she has in Christ Jesus, and be forever with her Lord. But until her Lord comes to take her home to himself she is surrounded by enemies of the truth; and if ever there has been a time when the children of God have been made to realize this fact, and to appreciate the comfort and sweetness of fellowship, it is the day in which we live. In this our annual epistle we would therefore express a few thoughts on the subject of the fellowship of the saints.

1st. By fellowship we understand agreement, union, harmony, &c.; and we all know by experience that where these principles are absent true fellowship cannot exist.

2d. The fellowship of the saints is in the gospel; and hence the apostle, when writing to his Philippian brethren, tells them plainly that in every prayer of his for them this precious fact was in his mind.—Phil. i. 4, 5.

3d. The fellowship of the saints being in the gospel, it proves itself to be the fellowship of the apostles; and so we read in Acts ii. 42 of a continuing steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship.

4th. If the fellowship of the apostles and the fellowship of the saints are one, then it necessarily follows that the fellowship of Jesus Christ is the portion of the saints; for it is written, "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord."—1 Cor. i. 9.

5th. The fellowship of the saints is also the fellowship of the Spirit.—Phil. ii. 1.

6th. The saints having the fellowship of the apostles of Jesus Christ, and of the Spirit, they should not fellowship anything that is not in perfect harmony with the teaching which they as heaven-born souls have received. The apostle John tells us that our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ; and if we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth.

7th. Brethren, let us be careful that our conversation be such as becometh the gospel, that our walk be orderly and circumspect, to the end that we may have fellowship one with another; and unto him who is able to keep us from falling, and to present us faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

WM. L. BEEBE, Mod.
BENTON JENKINS, Clerk.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Warwick Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y., June 7th, 8th and 9th, 1893, to the associations and churches with which we correspond, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—While in the providence of God we have been permitted to meet again, we hope that it has been for the express purpose of hearing of him out of his word from those of his ministers that have been called and qualified according to his own determinate counsel; and indeed they have come to us as clouds that are filled with water. We feel to thank our God for the sweet privilege of sitting together and hearing of his glorious work which he himself hath done, and not another. The whole theme has been salvation by grace, and it has cheered our hearts and comforted our souls; and "Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever." We desire a continuance of your correspondence by messengers and Minutes.

Our next session is appointed to be held with the church at Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., to begin on Wednesday before the second Sunday in June, 1894, when we hope to meet your messengers in love and fellowship.

WM. L. BEEBE, Mod.
BENTON JENKINS, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscriptions to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

LENGTHY OBITUARY NOTICES.

WHILE we feel to sympathize with those who are called to part with near and dear relatives and friends in death, yet we must request that in writing obituary notices they will be as brief as possible. A little reflection on this matter will, we think, be sufficient to show how unnecessary are long accounts of the minor incidents in the life of the deceased. Aside from the immediate friends of the subject of the notice they are not of general interest; and those to whom they are of any importance are about all acquainted with the facts without publishing them. A short notice is more likely to receive early insertion in the paper, as our obituary department as a rule is very much crowded; and it frequently occurs that owing to the extreme length of the notices, the publication of some are delayed for two or three numbers.

(Continued from page 195.)

Father he should find without searching. The way which only is known by revelation, and the time of this revelation, no man can hasten, because the most favored sinner in his best estate must wait for the pleasure of the Lord; and there is a set time to favor Zion, and every son and daughter born in her. There is a fullness of time for every vessel of mercy to know the quickening power of the Spirit, and that time shall never fail, neither shall it be premature nor slack; but at the appointed moment shall it be, and all creation shall not be able to bring about a single event to prolong or hasten this sovereign act of our God. All the anxiety of the poor creature himself cannot hasten the work of the Lord, for he shall wait on the Lord; and because he is enabled to wait the Lord blesses him in it. The conditionalist rejects the Bible doctrine of waiting for the Lord, and says that if you wait for the Lord you will never be saved; but to be saved you must be up at work, and embrace the "invitations of the gospel," because God has done all that he can or will do. Such a sentiment as this does not accord with the plain and positive teaching of the apostles that salvation is all of grace. The Scriptures contain so many passages that teach this waiting for the Lord, that the man of God is thoroughly furnished with Bible truth of this important principle, which harmonizes with free grace doctrine, and which would not seem to need any argument at all, so clearly is it taught throughout the Bible. "Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed." "On thee do I wait all the day."—Psalm xxv. 3, 5. "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart. Wait, I say, on the Lord." "So he that waiteth on his Master shall be honored."—Psalm xxvii. 14, 18. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him." "But those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth."—Psalm xxxvii. 7, 9. "Our soul waiteth for the Lord; he is our help and our shield."—Psalm xxxiii. 20. "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry."—Psalm xl. 1. "And I will wait on thy name; for it is good before thy saints."—Psalm lii. 9. "Truly my soul waiteth upon God; from him cometh my salvation: he only is my rock and my salvation." "My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him."—Psalm lxii. 1, 2, 5. "Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of hosts, be ashamed for my sake."—Psalm lxi. 6. "These wait all upon thee, that thou mayest give them their meat in due season."—Psalm civ. 27. "They [children of Israel] soon forgot his works: they waited not for his counsel."—Psalm cvi. 13. "So our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, until that he have mercy upon us."—Psalm cxiii. 2. "I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope; my soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning."—Psalm cxxx. 5, 6. "And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us. This is the Lord, we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. xxv. 9. "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint."—Isa. xl. 31. "And the isles shall wait for his law."—Isa. xlii. 4. "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."—Lam. iii. 26. "Blessed is he that waiteth."—Dan. xii. 12. "So the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the Lord."—Zech. xi. 11. "Joseph of Arimathea, an honorable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God."—Mark xv. 43. "There was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel."—Luke ii. 25. "And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke xxiv. 49. "But wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me."—Acts i. 4. "But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."—Rom. viii. 25. "For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith."—Gal. v. 5. "And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead."—1 Thess. i. 10.

Many more passages of Scripture might be quoted to show how the Lord's people wait, and are instructed to wait on the Lord for all things that they receive from his bountiful hand; but enough Scripture has been given to convince every lover of truth that God is not waiting to find out what sinners will do about their soul's salvation, so that he may know how many will embrace the opportunities set before them, but that the poor, helpless creature "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." This waiting on the Lord is set forth by the above Scriptures as a joyful service, and shows that the love of God attends all the waiting subjects of that mysterious kingdom which is not of this world. There is a waiting of necessity by all the saints almost every day of their lives, even after they "have tasted the powers of the world to come." If it were not so, where would be the warfare, the flesh striving against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh? If it were not for the rays of light that occasionally illuminate the dark recesses of our being (for the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness comprehends it not) we should faint by the way; but these refreshing seasons from his presence are as glades in the wilderness to the weary traveler. We cannot control the Spirit, but must wait for his pleasure, and sometimes feel like saying, "Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out." The whole pilgrimage of the saints is one continual hoping and waiting for the Lord to fill us with his righteousness, when we shall have no more severe conflicts, but shall realize that the victory is complete over sin, and the ruin wrought by it. How we shall appear, and what we shall be, is not fully made known to us while we walk by faith. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him; but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit." May we not conclude that the foretaste of the joys to come is such that the recipient cannot explain it to another nor to himself? But there is an intuition that is full of light and beauty above the brightness of the sun, which draws his affections from afar to desire to sit at Jesus' feet, and wait the pleasure of his Lord and Master. Then, on the other hand, as it were, there is sadness, a groaning to be clothed upon with our house from heaven. We are burdened all the way in this vale of tears, yet have rest in Jesus. We are not only waiting to be delivered from the corruptions of earth, but to be clothed with that perfect robe of righteousness, which, I think, is the glorified body which shall be like our Lord Jesus. "Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

What I have written, brethren Beebe, I submit to your judgment, desiring the prosperity of the SIGNS.

I am, as ever, yours in fellowship,
J. BEEMAN.

KETTERMAN, Mo., April 2, 1893.

MARRIAGES.

On June 3d, 1893, by Elder Wm. J. Purington, at his residence in Hopewell Borough, Mr. John H. Moore and Miss Jane E. Holcombe, both of West Amwell, N. J.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Wm. Been was born in Tennessee, Oct. 28th, 1808, and afterward moved to Itawamba Co., Miss., which county he represented for sixteen years. He then moved to Freestone Co., Texas, in 1859, where he died Oct. 28th, 1892. He was widely known as a Primitive Baptist. He would never yield a point of truth, and was loved by all who knew him.

J. L. MONROE.
JEWETT, Texas, May 17, 1893.

OUR dear son, Hezekiah Keller, was born Sept. 7th, 1872, and died April 10th, 1893.

It was hard for us to give him up; but he longed to go and be with Jesus. He did not fear death, and said he was prepared to die. In all his sickness he never murmured nor complained, but seemed perfectly reconciled to go and be at rest. The Lord's will has to be done in earth as it is in heaven. Bless his holy name.

H. & D. KELLER.
MONTROSE, W. Va.

SISTER Alice T. Horton, wife of Mr. Loton Horton, departed this mortal life at her residence, 117 West Seventy-Seventh St., New York, on Thursday p. m., June 15th, 1893, aged 36 years and 2 months.

She is survived by her devoted husband and four children, besides other relatives, to mourn their irreparable loss. May the God of all grace and consolation support them in their sore bereavement.

Sister Horton was baptized in the fellowship of the Ebenezer Church, New York City, by Elder Wm. L. Beebe, on Monday after the third Sunday in September, 1887, at Rockaway Beach. About one month previous she was called to resign her youngest child and only daughter, to which her affection was more than ordinarily devoted. She seemed at that time deeply exercised in mind in regard to her condition as a sinner before God; and when God revealed himself to her as her Savior, shortly afterward, she rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory. The relation of her christian experience, in a series of letters to Elder Beebe, was published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES OF Nov. 1st, 1887. We all esteemed her as a precious sister in Christ, and sorrow most of all that we shall see her sweet face and hear her voice no more on earth.

Funeral services were held at her late residence in the city of New York on Saturday evening, June 17th, and on Sunday p. m. at Middletown, N. Y., being conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins; after which her mortal remains were laid in the grave, by the side of her little daughter Gabrielle, in Hillside Cemetery, this city.

"Peace! 'tis the Lord Jehovah's hand
That blasts our joys in death,
Changes the visage once so dear,
And gathers back the breath."

"Silent we own Jehovah's name,
We kiss the scourging hand,
And yield our comforts and our life
To his supreme command."

—ED.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I now forward for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES a notice of the death of Mrs. Ann C. Savidge, wife of our dear brother, Reuben Savidge, who departed this life May 12th, 1893, aged 73 years, 7 months and 9 days.

The subject of this notice had been a member of the First Baptist Church of Hopewell for a long time (the number of years I do not know), and during the time she was a member, unless something providential prevented, she always filled her seat in our meetings; and while she was mild, she was firm, and had no use for any theory that did not give to God all the glory in the redemption and salvation of the church. During her last illness there were times when her bodily suffering was very severe, yet borne with much patience; and she would frequently say, "It is all right." More than a year ago she began to decline, and all that sympathy, kind and faithful friends and physicians could do did not restore her to health. A few days before she died her suffering at times was excruciating, but was borne calmly; and a short time before she expired she said in a firm tone of voice, "Thy will be done."

Our dear brother Savidge has lost a true, devoted and faithful companion, who has truly been a helpmeet for him and to him in the toils and cares of this life, the dear children an affectionate mother, the church one of its worthy members, and society at large an excellent citizen and neighbor. She has left her husband, five children, two sisters, as well as other relatives, and the loss is keenly felt by us all; but for her to die was gain. Her funeral was May 15th, and numerous attended. The text used on the sad occasion was 2 Corinthians v. 1-5.

WM. J. PURINGTON.
HOPEWELL, N. J., June 13, 1893.

DIED—Near Pine Bluff, Jefferson Co., Ark., Nov. 30th, 1892, Mr. Joseph W. Morris, in the 40th year of his age.

He was the son of brother Benjamin E. Morris, formerly of Mississippi, and was born in that state. In early childhood his father moved to Drew Co., Ark., and remained there until about the time he was of age, when they moved to Jefferson Co., Ark., near Pine Bluff. He was married to sister Lizzie Hayden, daughter of brother Elisha and sister Nancy Ann Hayden, near Bastrop, Morehouse Parish, La., Nov. 25th, 1885, and the fruit of that union was four children, three of whom survive him. He was not a member of the church, but gave satisfactory evidence that he was a child of grace. He and I were once going to the New Hope Association, and he talked freely of his love for the people of God, and of his troubles and doubts; and I was satisfied that the Lord had shown him something which flesh and blood could not teach. He was a firm believer in the doctrine advocated by the editors of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES; and he seldom could read it and sister Mary Parker's book without shedding tears. His disease was congestion, and he only lived three days after being taken. He was greatly loved by all who knew him. He was a devoted husband, a kind and loving father, and a useful man in his neighborhood and county. He leaves his dear companion, three children, three sisters, and many other relatives and friends, to mourn the loss of one so good and kind. Inasmuch as we believe that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord, and are the called according to his purpose, in this bereavement may the Lord be a husband to his dear companion and a father to the fatherless, is the desire of the unworthy writer.

G. W. CALDWELL.

HAMBURGH, Ark.

APPOINTMENTS.

ELDER W. R. Welborn, providence permitting, will fill the following appointments in Texas:

Acton, 1st and 2d of July, 1893; at brother Preston Staggs, 3d, at night; Weatherford, 4th; Mineral Wells, 5th; Zion Hill, 6th; Poolville, 7th, 8th and 9th; Garrett's Creek, 10th and 11th; Springtown, 12th and 13th; Silver Creek, 15th and 16th; Joshua, 21st, 22d and 23d.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Clovesville Old School Baptist Church, of the Lexington Association, on the first Saturday and Sunday in July (1st and 2d). A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth as it is in Jesus.

Those coming by rail will be met at Fleischmann's Station.

O. F. BALLARD, Clerk.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1893.

NO. 26.

D. L. Blackwell June 28, 1893

CORRESPONDENCE.

MARK XIV. 8.

"SHE hath done what she could."

DEAR BRETHREN:—A sister in Texas, who wishes her name withheld, has requested me to write for the SIGNS in connection with the words quoted above, which she says have seemed to her applicable to some extent to her own experience; and to-day I feel like trying to comply with her request. I surely need not repeat again and again the statement of my feeling of inability and weakness, and of incompetency, when trying to comply with such requests, or when in any way attempting to deal with the deep things of God. This is such an abiding state of mind with me that it seems needless to speak of it at any special time. I will say this, however, that if I ever feel impressed deeply with anything, it is that I am not sufficient of myself to interpret any Scripture to the edification of any of the children of God, and this feeling, I doubt not, is also common to all who speak in the name of the Lord; but if called of God to speak at all, a feeling of incompetency is no excuse for silence, but rather the best of all preparations for speaking humbly, yet boldly, the word of the Lord, in dependence upon his grace to give light and strength, and to apply his word to prepared hearts.

I wish also to say that I have never (if I had time and opportunity) felt at liberty to pass by in silence such requests as the one to which I am now responding, unless I felt that I had no light at all upon the subject named. If God has stirred up the heart of one of his people to meditate upon a portion of his word, and also has given him a desire to hear a word from me upon that Scripture, who am I that I should pass it by in silence? I often fear that I am not called to this work at all; but if I am, I am also most surely but the servant of my brethren in it. I have never in all my life felt that it would be less than sin in me to fail to respond as best I could when called upon to speak or write in the name of the Lord; and so I feel like trying to write as requested upon the words named at the head of this article. I trust that the words may be also true of me in writing this letter, "He hath done what he could."

The narrative in which these words occur is a very striking and beautiful one. It describes the love and gratitude of a poor sinner saved by grace to the Savior, who had redeemed her; but the narrative also presents that which is striking in its unloveliness and selfishness, and the rebuke of the Savior administered to those who found fault with the act of the woman. How gracious and tender, on the other hand, was his commendation of this woman, and her act of love and devotion!

The narrative reads as follows: "And being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head. And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made? For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her. And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me. For ye have the poor with you always, and whenever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always. She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

I will not here stop to discuss the oft-mooted question as to whether this woman was Mary, the sister of Lazarus, of whom the same narrative in substance is given in John xii. 1, but will say that my opinion is that the same event is narrated in both places, as also in Matthew xxvi. The narrative in Luke vii. seems to me to have too many points of difference to be the same. The chief one is that in Luke it seems to be placed at a point too early in our Savior's ministry to fit in with this in Mark, Matthew and John, which all describe it as taking place just before the betrayal of the Savior. This, however, is a matter of minor importance. The lessons contained in the narrative are what we need to understand and have applied to our hearts by the Holy Spirit.

Taking it for granted that this was Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, this act was in keeping with all that we read of her in the gospels. She always seemed more intent upon devotion and worship and adoration than upon outward active service. In her heart she recognized "that good part which shall not be taken away" to be the sitting at the feet of Jesus, and learning of him who is meek and lowly of heart. Here is true rest. Service is good and noble, and loving also, but how often it is attended with care and anxiety and trouble, which disturb and distract the mind, and which leave no time for any hour of secret and silent communion with the Savior; and so the soul grows lean and barren, and we fret and worry, and miss that which is the sweetest and best of all, namely, a spirit calm and tranquil through communion with the Master. Service proceeding from love is indeed a blessed thing, but for all it can be only temporary; while sitting at the feet of Jesus teaches that which cannot be taken away.

In keeping with her gentle, loving spirit of devotion, Mary comes again, while Jesus is sitting at meat, and takes a box of alabaster containing ointment of great value, and pours it upon the head of Jesus, and also upon his feet.—See John xii. Jesus declared that she had anointed him for his burial. It is not likely that either Mary or the others understood what he meant by these words, and we can perhaps but catch a brief glance at their meaning. She had poured out upon him, while yet living, the same wealth of love and devotion that men reserved for their dead. He was about to be betrayed and crucified and buried; and here upon the very borders of the hour and power of darkness she had testified her love and her faith in a most wonderful way. Jesus looked beyond the mere act of this woman, and saw in her heart a love that would go with him to the end, and a faith that even death and the grave could not shake. She did not herself realize all that her act involved, even as we do not know the true depth of our love toward Jesus, which prompts the little service that we render. It is but a little thing to give a cup of cold water to a disciple, or to say, "Salvation is of the Lord;" but who can measure the love of God shed abroad in the heart which prompts to these things? Jesus sees that this act of this woman is prompted by a fullness of love and gratitude that reaches beyond death itself. It was her confession of her Savior. It was the same confession that in various ways the people of God have always been constrained to make. It was the same confession that is made to-day when a child of God stands up before the people and tells what great things the Lord has done for him; and this confession differs not in kind from the testimony of the glorified around the throne of God. This woman did not see all that her testimony involved, and neither do we. It is prompted by eternal love, and lasts through death, and lays hold of things beyond the grave.

Jesus was much to Mary, and he had done much for her, and so she loved much, and her heart was grateful; and love and gratitude are not willingly silent. Love will seek expression in manifold ways. It is a joy for love to obey, and for gratitude to bring offerings. In harmony with this truth Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." A mother cannot help caressing her child, because she loves it; and love finds joy in its own expression. In proportion to our love and gratitude will be our giving of ourselves first, and of what we have afterward; and so this woman gave the best she had, because she had given herself first. Jesus, in her view, was worthy of all. It was not only that he had done much for her, but she loved him for what he was in and of himself. We are grateful for a gift in our time of need, but we love because of what a person is. We love some men who never gave us any gift; but Jesus is both good and he has done us good, and so there is room for both love and gratitude. This woman was filled with these things, and what she did came from the heart. There was no mercenary calculation in it. She did not give for reward, nor for fame, nor for life. If she had, then Jesus would not have said, "This that she has done shall be told of her wherever the gospel is preached." This woman did not, could not see any one but Jesus. He filled all her heart and mind. She could not stop and calculate about the value of this costly box of ointment. Jesus had so drawn her heart to him by the power of his love that she could withhold nothing. In the most solemn sense of the word she could have said, "My Beloved is mine, and I am his." How natural it is to bring forth the best we have for those that we love. This woman brought the best she had. It might well have been all that she had; and it was as much all as though she had had a hundred boxes of ointment, and had brought them all. The widow's two mites were her all. The rich man who threw in a hundred talents had not given as much as she. He had not given all. The poor widow loved more than did he. It would seem as though such a picture of love and devotion must melt all hearts, and arouse joy and praise in them. Surely the heart of every disciple must bound within him, and long to emulate this outflow of Mary's love and gratitude.

But what do we hear? Is it a note of wonder and praise from the lips of those who are the witnesses of this scene? No; there are some who are indignant. This is the testimony of Mark. John says that Judas Iscariot asked hypocritically, "Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?" While Matthew says, "When the disciples saw it, they had indignation," &c. It was not strangers nor Pharisees, then, of whom this was said, neither was it Judas Iscariot alone, but the disciples in general, who thus thought and spoke. Surely this is one of the many evidences that the children of God are yet in the flesh, and are not perfect. In love, and in the knowledge of the Spirit of the Master, Mary was in advance of any of them. The spirit that was ruling in her heart was a spirit that gave all to him spontaneously and lovingly, and with no selfish calculation. There was no need to fear that she would ever be neglectful of the Lord's poor. At his command her all would be given to them, even as now she poured out this rich treasure upon him. Mary understood the will of Jesus, and did it, because he had revealed his mind and will in her. This knowledge of the mind and will of Jesus is not head knowledge, such as may be learned from parents or teachers in schools, or from catechisms, or even from the Bible itself, but such as we receive by personal communion with Jesus himself; and this we have solely because of his indwelling through the Spirit. In measure Mary had seen Jesus as he was, and had become like him; and she who could so adore and love him would be sure to keep his slightest word as far as lay within her to do so. She would be sure to remember the poor, even as had the Master before her, and as he commanded.

The motives of those who were indignant might have been various. The motive of Judas, we are told, was that he might profit from the money himself. He cared not for the poor, but was a thief, and had charge of the bag, and of what was in it. He made zeal for charity a cloak for covetousness. The Pharisees would be indignant upon the ground of covetousness also; and besides, they would think that Mary had put too high an estimate upon Jesus. Perhaps the disciples were sincere, and really thought the ointment would have been better used if sold and given to the poor; but this showed that in the spirit of their mind they were not so near the Master as was Mary. They had not yet learned that nothing is so precious as love to God and the offering of praise to him. He who has a heart to love and honor Jesus will not be far behind in any other good work. This they had yet to learn; and none can truly remember the poor except they remember Jesus first. She who had wrought a good work on Jesus would not be far behind in any other good work. The heart that loves God will love his people, and love to do his will also. The love that is consecrated to Jesus will also embrace all his loved ones, yea, will also reach out in sympathy to all the needy; and she who loved Jesus more than they would also do more for the poor than they. My observation is now that they who are most prompt to engage in the worship of God, and to spend time and means in that direction, are also apt to be among the first to help the needy. Judas, who was most indignant of all at this waste (as he would term it), had no care for the poor at all; but to those who were sincere, and who spoke out of their ignorance, he said, "The poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always with you."

I wish that I could make this as plain in words as it seems clear in my own mind. Those who love and reverence Jesus most will be most kind and thoughtful toward those around them. Love to God is inseparably joined with love to our neighbor. "If a man love not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" It cannot be otherwise, if we love any man, than that we also shall cherish the objects of his love. What is dear to him will also be dear to us; and so the measure of our love to the Master will also show the measure of our love to his people. So their objection proceeded out of a false view of the whole matter; and Jesus therefore testified to them of her that she had wrought a good work upon him. She had done more than she knew. She had anointed him against the day of his burial.

The expression at the head of this article was the one specially named by my correspondent, and it has seemed very full and striking to me: "She hath done what she could." It seems to me that the full force and beauty of these words can only be seen as we meditate upon the fullness of love and gratitude that was in this woman's heart. To every one who would find fault Jesus would answer, "She hath done what she could." If it were not what some one else might do, it was what she could do. Nothing more was nor could be required of her than this. She gave what she had—what God had given her. Through a carnal spirit even the disciples themselves misunderstood and misjudged her and her gift; but Jesus knew all. He knew the secret motive of her heart, and her offering was precious in his sight, and her work was good. The poor could be fed at any time, but now he would have no check imposed upon the outflowing of her love and devotion to him. It is as good a work when a mother, with her heart almost breaking with its fullness of love for her child, folds it in her arms and to her breast, and talks to it and laughs to it, and rejoices over it, as when she labors to clothe and feed it; and so it was a good work for Mary to sit at Jesus' feet, and in the eyes of the Master better than, like Martha, to be cumbered about much serving. So it was as good a work to break the alabaster box of ointment upon the head and feet of Jesus as to feed the poor. Both are good works; and he who does the one must not despise the other.

The other day a young disciple of Jesus, who loved much, came to the church at Black Rock, and in confession of faith and baptism broke the precious box of ointment, to the glory and praise of Jesus' name. If the young sister live to old age and feed many that are poor, she will never perform a better work than that. One other, the oldest member at Black Rock, comes up to my mind. For sixty-six years she has led a life of active usefulness in the church. I myself have been the almoner of her bounty to many poor; yet she has never performed a better work than when she, nearly seventy years ago, confessed her Savior before men. It seems to me that the lesson of this whole Scripture is that when our hearts are filled with love and gratitude, so that our thoughts must dwell upon and magnify the Lord, and our spirit rejoices in God our Savior, and our lips cannot forbear to speak forth his praise, then are we rendering to God service as sweet and as acceptable as we can, though we should give all our goods to feed the poor. But this does not contradict the inspired testimony, which declares the impossibility of the love of God dwelling in the heart which has no regard for the needy.

The sister at whose request this has been penned writes me that she has not yet confessed her Lord in baptism, and that she has felt too doubtful and weak and unworthy to take such a step. Glad will be the day for her when she, constrained by love, comes and pours out upon the person of Jesus her testimony to his grace and his power to save. Then it will be true of her, "She hath done what she could;" and the Savior himself will speak this consolation to her heart, as he did to Mary.

To me it seems often an awfully solemn question, as I look over my membership in the church and my ministry for the past thirty years, Have I done what I could? And the question grows more and more weighty the older I grow. I cannot answer it. Jesus only can.

I remain your brother in hope,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., June 8, 1893.

THE DESTROYER.

THE apostle commences the tenth chapter of First Corinthians by saying, "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ. But with many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness. Now these things were our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted. Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand. Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents. Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer." After writing over these most solemn words of the Bible, it almost seems useless to write further, or try to say anything concerning them, only to draw the attention of the spiritually minded unto them. They only voice some of the saddest things that befall the poor, tried children of God in their journey through this "great and terrible wilderness." Once in a while we find a little rest; now and then a green leaf in the desert; here and there a flower like the rose; and our hopes rise within sometimes, only to be scattered under our feet like leaves withered and dead. And when we think of the multitude who perished and fell in the wilderness, how sad our thoughts are, and how often we ask, Shall we be like them? They fell. We understand they died and perished from off the earth. So, after they entered Canaan, they still for disobedience were liable to perish from off the good land that was given unto them. And these things were written for our examples; these different evil things, and different things by which they were to die. Those who tempted Christ were destroyed by serpents; those who murmured, by the destroyer. Well may we regard the admonition to "be not high-minded, but fear;" to "let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." For sometimes destruction may come to us suddenly when our evil passions get the mastery of us, and we have forgotten to "watch and pray." What is the destroyer? have I often asked, when I have felt that destruction was drawing near; when I have felt no heart to pray, and heavy burdens of sorrow and distress on every side. When I can draw near to God in prayer, I do not fear; but when I cannot find my way to him, I feel the elements of destruction within and all around, and how insecure I am. Sometimes I think we possess within our own nature these elements of our own destruction. These are our destroyers; pride, envy, hatred, and the works of the flesh, as enumerated by the apostle. Often we are told that the things under the law were shadowy and figurative; but here the very same things that were forbidden then, we find to be forbidden now; only under the law they were to die as to the natural life; but under the law of the Lord given for the government of the church they are to fall or die in that church relationship. And if they "fell" who did those things, then can we keep them standing who do those things now? Shall we sit down at so sacred a thing as the communion with those of whom the Lord hath said, "Ye shall not eat?" We may find it no easy thing to put our *shall*s in the place of the Lord's *shall not*s; we may try to sift around these things by saying, "We are all in the flesh, and liable to err," which is sadly true; yet we find poor comfort in this, when we must so plainly read, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." Again "the destroyer" is before us. Sometimes utter helplessness is urged; but always this helplessness seems to afflict in the way it is wanted to. It follows the straight line of inclination, and sometimes we are just wicked enough to think we want to be helpless in some things which are forbidden. Why the admonition to take heed lest we fall? Again, we put much stress upon not being our own keepers to get along, when our ways are brought before us; and we truly feel it, and know we must be kept by the power of God unto salvation. Yet if we are powerless as to the influence of evil around, why are we told to keep ourselves from idols; to keep ourselves unspotted from the world; to keep ourselves from things strangled, from fornication and from blood; "from which if ye keep yourselves ye shall do well;" "keep thyself pure;" "abstain from all appearance of evil?" Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Somehow I always love the law of the Lord, even though I come short of it. I love the admonitions, exhortations, and encouragements to do what is commanded, rather than those encouragements to lull the mind in carnal security, no matter how we do or how bad we are. We know to grace the praise is due if we be found serving God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. But if we are really doing this, we are not revelling in ungodliness and worldly lusts, but are found denying them. Would it be to the praise of God's grace if we were living lives of worldliness, pleasure or shame? Somehow I feel that we ought to so live that we do not put grace below anything else. We know we have no righteousness of our own; but if we are clothed with the imputed righteousness of God, ought it not to be manifest in our lives, so that it will truly exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees? Often my heart trembles lest I know nothing of grace or of this righteousness; yet this is my most earnest desire. If we find our eyes so filled with some attraction that causes us to forget those who are broken and afflicted, desolate and sorrowful, and have not a moment nor a thought for them, though they rightfully claim these things; if we find great delight and are having a good time when the brethren or church are consequently sad or dissatisfied, we may perhaps question if we are right or not sometimes.

"The brightest things below the sky
Give but a flattering light;
We should suspect some danger nigh
Where we possess delight."

Sadly we ponder over those who fell in the wilderness. It was not always the feeble or the weak, or those who would seem to be of little use, but the sons of Aaron and princes of Israel, those who ought to have been patterns and examples. Again our mind goes back to those who plead helplessness as an excuse for what they do. We do read of those who have eyes full adultery, and cannot cease from sin. But we want to think of these things as of a great way off. And if any wish to make this as a plea, we hardly think we would wish to be called "cursed children," as we read of them, if we forget not. There are so many things recorded under the law that if one did he was to die the death, that it is terrible to us when the conviction comes to us that we have come in essence under the same condemnation, and perhaps ought to die to the fellowship of the church, so that we find ourselves truly afraid. Again, we fear that we only live in name, when we are virtually dead. "See that ye walk circumspectly; not as fools, but as wise; redeeming the time, because the days are evil." I have thought, What is redeeming the time? Is it not turning back to the time of the apostles and prophets, whom we are to take as examples of suffering affliction, and not taking as examples the people of the present time, nor falling in with the times, nor keeping up with the times? Again says the apostle, "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." What is it to do this? Is it only in word, or in talking love? (We do humbly hope and trust there never was nor ever will be a Baptist who would be guilty of flirting, or silly and wicked love, working under cover of brotherly and divine love.) Wantonness and lasciviousness is not love in any sense, so we will not speak of that. But all that is of the flesh will only bear its own fruit; and that will be a sickening fruit, which will bring no spiritual joy in the kingdom of our God. The mortifying or cruci-fying of the flesh is what will do this. We are to love one another with a "pure heart," even the returning prodigals and the repenting Magdalenes. But perhaps there might be a question whether we love them for the grace manifest in them, or the congeniality of the prodigal and Magdalene nature which they might possess. If we love with a pure heart, it will truly be for the grace alone; love them because they are loved of the Master. This love calls for self-sacrifice in its full sense, even that we deny ourselves for and lay down our lives for each other. It is not a false charity, that demands a covering for itself, so that it may follow its own desires; but that true charity, or love.

"That lays its own advantage by,
To seek its neighbor's good;
So God's own Son came down to die,
And bought us with his blood."

It will teach us to deny ourselves, lest we become a snare by our example to some weak one. No matter how much we desire to do something that we might come through unharmed, if a weak one following us should become ensnared or destroyed, how sorrowful we should feel. It may look to us as only a little thing; but we are to remember that a little folly can make things like the unsavory ointment that would be a very great task to make sweet again. If it only could be realized how sad it is to see precious and valued ones fall by the way and be destroyed, we think the force of the admonition would be truly felt and realized, "Take heed lest he fall."

Again, we love to think of those who did not fall by the way. We love to think of that effectual grace that did crown their lives. We love to think of Joshua and Caleb, and of those who did possess the land. We love to think of our spiritual Joshua, who is the Captain of our salvation, trusting that through him we shall conquer the mightiest foes. We love to think of those who were with him, who were called and tried and faithful; of one who said, "I have fought a good fight." We hear much said of our unworthiness, and of our sinfulness. While we are to humbly acknowledge these things, we can make no boast of them in such a way as to excuse ourselves in a way which we ought not; for we do read of walking worthy of the high vocation wherewith we are called, in lowliness and meekness, esteeming others better than ourselves; not telling how much more we do and how much better we are than they; remembering the Master hath set the members in the body as it hath pleased him; so that the foot cannot say to the hand, I have no need of you; you are of no use to me. We cannot see as the Master sees. What may be uncomely in our feeble eyesight, may have more abundant comeliness in the eyes of the Master.

Again, I love to read of those few names even in Sardis who had not defiled their garments; and, says the Master, "They shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy." Deeply feeling my own unprofitableness and hardness of heart, I ask the prayers of all the spiritual minded.

Sadly your sister,
KATE SWARTOUT.

GENESIS XLV. 5.

"Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither; for God did send me before you to preserve life."

It will be observed that this text are the words of Joseph, soon after he had made himself known to his brethren, and were designed to comfort them, at a time when they looked for severe punishment from him, who was at that time governor over all the land of Egypt. He first reminds them of the fact that they had sold him, and, second, that God had sent him before them to preserve life. When we enter into an examination of the history of Joseph we find in him a type of Christ, first in his humiliation and suffering, and second, in his exaltation, and as a deliverer. It appears that Israel loved Joseph more than all his other children, so that he made him a coat of many colors. This manifestation of Israel's love caused hatred to arise in the hearts of Joseph's brethren against their brother, and it was increased when Joseph made known to them his dream, while in the field binding sheaves; the interpretation of which, they well understood, was that they all should bow down to him. It is written that every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess, that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God. While Joseph's brethren were looking after their flocks, Israel was anxious to learn of their welfare; so he sent Joseph to see if it was well with his brethren and well with the flocks. He was sent on a mission of mercy to them. But when they saw him afar off they began to plot against him, and said, "Behold, this dreamer cometh." They intended to kill him; but the text says that God sent him, and he intended to preserve his life to accomplish the purpose for which he sent him, namely, to save their lives by a great deliverance. When our Savior was born in Bethlehem, how anxious was Herod and many of the Jews to kill him; but all the powers of earth and hell could not take his life until the time appointed of the Father. Jesus said, "No man taketh my life from me: I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." Joseph now enters upon his sufferings. His brethren strip him of his coat of many colors, and cast him into a pit; but just at that time God sent deliverance, and Joseph was sold into Egypt. How sad to be cast into a pit! The child of God knows the awful condition in which he found himself by reason of sin. The psalmist calls it a horrible pit. He says that God brought him

(Continued on page 205.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 23, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE UNFAILING REFUGE.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee; he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved."—Psalm lv. 22.

None but such as are weary and heavy laden can appreciate the sweetness of rest. Only those who are hungry can feel the need of food; and the subjects of oppression are qualified to rightly estimate the liberty which is found in the breaking of the yoke of bondage. Aside from the direct and plain testimony of the inspired word, in which the saints are designated as an afflicted and poor people, there is in every provision of the gospel evident adaptation to the needs of those who are unable to deliver themselves out of the bondage in which they are held as captives. It would be useless to announce to one who has power to provide everything he desires, that a liberal provision has been made for supplying food and clothing to the naked and starving. Not only does he feel himself in need of nothing, but it would be humiliating to his pride to become a recipient of such charitable ministration. So long as he has strength to work, or wealth to purchase such supplies as he requires, man naturally aspires to that independence which would not be indebted to the favor of others for such things as he can obtain by his own industry. None need a refuge but those who are unable to protect themselves in their own resources. By this peculiar mark it has pleased God to identify the election of his grace as the subjects of that consolation which is in the inspired record given to all such as are cut off from every hope of deliverance in their own works.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord." While this assuring word is applicable to all who are oppressed under the burden of their own just condemnation, it has pleased the Lord to reveal the truth that it has its primary object in the assurance of the suffering Redeemer. From this psalm it is explained by the inspired record that Judas was the man who did walk with Jesus, and took counsel with him, "The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart; his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords."—See John xiii. 18. In that great distress nothing less than his own omnipotence could have strength to sustain the chosen Servant of God. It is necessary to consider that while as the Son of God our Jesus is possessed of every attribute of God, yet he "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."—Phil. ii. 7, 8. Proud reason is incapable of grasping the wonderful truth that the helpless babe of Bethlehem, for whom there was no room in the inn, was yet the eternal and omnipotent Word by whom all things were created. In nothing is his infinite power more clearly revealed than in his ability to assume all the weakness of the sinful children whom he came to redeem. In thus humbling himself he was made perfect, being in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. "Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people; for in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted."—Heb. ii. 17, 18. In thus leading the way of his ransomed people through much tribulation, our Lord Jesus must himself be brought low, and in sinking in the depths of condemnation under the weight of all the sins of his members, he must be deprived of all strength to sustain himself. In that dreadful extremity, he does not ask for any compromise with the adversary, nor that the holy demands of divine justice should be relaxed, for he loves that very law under whose sentence he is called to suffer. Yet he does continually cry unto God even out of the depths, and thus he casts his burden upon the Lord. Leaning upon the omnipotence of his God, he is able to answer all the infinite requirements of that law under which his people are condemned. No such burden was ever borne by any other subject of condemnation as that which oppressed him who was made sin for the justification of those whose sins were washed away in his precious blood. The same Spirit of the Lord God by which this gracious direction was addressed to him, was without measure bestowed upon him in that holy anointing by which he was ordained as the accepted Priest, whose one offering should perfect forever them that are sanctified. Therefore he did obey this word. "Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared; though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him; called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec."—Heb. v. 7-10. Having thus led the way in bearing such a fearful weight of the burden of just condemnation, he is the great Example to whom all who are oppressed are directed to look. Only as led by that Spirit which was in him can they follow his footsteps. When that holy Comforter takes this divine word and shows it unto one who is oppressed under an intolerable burden of sin, that instant it is cast upon the Lord, and the weight is removed from the conscious sinner. He may have often read this word of deliverance in the letter of it, but such knowledge brings no relief. He may have studied it in the original Hebrew, as it was written by David, yet it could afford him no deliverance. Even the inspired writer could not bring to himself the assurance contained in the words which the Spirit of Christ moved him to record. He was often made to rejoice in the wonderful deliverances which the Lord wrought for him, yet he could not draw encouragement from past mercies to enable him to trust in the Lord for support in present trials. When the Lord had given him the victory over Saul, putting that enemy in a position where he was in David's power, it was immediately afterward that "David said in his heart, I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul." With all the multitude of deliverances which he had experienced from the constant care and mercy of God, he could not himself cast his burden upon the Lord. But when it pleased God to give him the assurance of his Spirit, then he could confidently say, "Thou art my lamp, O Lord; and the Lord will lighten my darkness. For by thee I have run through a troop; by my God have I leaped over a wall."—2 Sam. xxii. 29, 30. The grace of God is manifest in his saints when they are made to cast all their cares and trials upon him, for then they have the testimony that he careth for them.—1 Peter v. 7. It is not a condition to be fulfilled by the burdened character in order to secure the deliverance promised. It must be observed that the commandment is addressed to none but such as are led by the same Spirit which moved the pen of David to leave this word of assurance on record for their guidance. There is no duty enjoined upon those to whom the Spirit applies this word, but the precious privilege of doing the very thing which above all things they desire to do. As the hungry are glad to obey the command to eat, so the weary and oppressed are rejoiced to be delivered from the burdens under which they groan. Only those who are weary and heavy laden can desire to obey the word of the Lord in our text; and consequently this is the witness which abides in every believer. In our text there might be room to doubt the propriety of appropriating the address to every burdened sinner; but in his own divine language our dear Redeemer has specifically identified each one of them. He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." This does not allow the exclusion of even one of those described. Nor can there be any question that those very weary ones are all included in the gracious words of our text. To them exclusively there is "good tidings of great joy" in the announcement that the Lord himself is the refuge and strength of all such as are poor and needy. Only in the infinite grace of God can such find consolation; and those who claim any merit in themselves are forbidden to trust in this salvation which is provided for them that are lost. For them alone has the Spirit of Christ indited every comforting word of gospel assurance which is written in the Scriptures. To them are all the commandments of Christ addressed, and in them are they wrought by his Spirit which is given unto them. In that perfect love which is the fruit of the Spirit dwelling in them, all his law is fulfilled. So the infallible test is given by inspiration, "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments; for this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous."—1 John v. 2, 3. Now, if this is your case, you earnestly desire to render obedience to every injunction of Jesus. The burden of unbelief and sin is too heavy for you to bear; but your Lord has given the promise that his yoke is easy, and his burden is light. May his grace enable every burdened soul to obey the direction in our text, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord."

"And he shall sustain thee." It is one peculiarity of the record which God has given in the Scriptures that it finds in every heart of those led by the Spirit of God conclusive assurance of its own infallible truth. However the subject of affliction may be sunk in darkness and despondency, he can look to no other deliverance but that which is from the Lord. Even though feeling to be cast out from the presence of the Lord, and beyond the reach of such deliverance as reason would consider possible, the prayer of living faith in Jesus never fails to bring an answer of such manifestly omnipotent help that the tried one can bear witness to the truth that "Salvation is of the Lord." Indeed the saints are often brought by their very distresses to see how far they have been overcome by unbelief; and in adversity they consider their utter helplessness as they could never know it in the prosperity of untried belief in God. In the type, when the nation of Israel enjoyed peace and plenty they went into idolatry; and it was only as reduced to utter destitution that they remembered their dependence upon the God who brought them up out of their bondage in Egypt. So the saints under the gospel dispensation are in constant need of the chastening rod of adversity for their deliverance from selfish reliance upon their own resources. As the oppression of Israel in Egypt was not for the gratification of the malice of their taskmasters, but for their own instruction in the faithfulness of their God, so the sufferings of the saints are not for the satisfaction of the adversary by whose devices they are betrayed into sin, but that they may be qualified to bear witness to the infinite goodness and mercy of their God, by which they have been preserved from all their enemies, including their own evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. When they are brought low they can testify that they were delivered alone by the manifest power of their ever faithful God. This is something more than that merely theoretic assurance which professes belief in the doctrine of salvation by grace. Having learned that the alluring vanities of selfish pride are but refuges of lies, they are qualified to rest in the name of the Lord as the strong tower into which they are driven to run, and there they find safety. Their burden is never too heavy for the Lord. In his great transgression David found this refuge a sure defense. Peter was sustained in that awful conflict when he was sifted as wheat, by the prayer of his Lord, which was the hand of God for his deliverance from the snare of the fowler. So, in every time of trial this present arm of the Lord sustains his saints. Nothing more sure is written for the support of the Captain of our salvation in his humiliation than what is recorded to sustain every trembling disciple through the trying conflicts which are appointed for them in this present evil world. Never has he failed to sustain one of his burdened little ones even though they may have been called to resign their mortal life in their devotion to the truth. In every time of trouble he shall sustain them that have no trust but in his grace.

"He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved." If there were no revelation of the grace of God in making guilty rebels righteous, there would be no comfort for any conscious sinner in this precious assurance. But for the support of such as mourn their sinfulness, it has pleased God to reveal the perfect righteousness of Jesus as the robe of justification to all them for whom his blood was shed. The righteousness which is well pleasing to God is found nowhere else but in him who was made to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Since the saints are all accepted alone in the Beloved, it is the very same perfect holiness which justifies him by which all his saints are made holy and without blame before God in love. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."—1 Cor. i. 30. There can be no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, since divine justice is satisfied with the perfect obedience which was rendered by their Head and Life. In him all his redeemed people are accepted as complete, having every perfection which is found in their Redeemer. Thus they are truly "the righteous." This is not merely a transfer of their sins to Jesus and of his righteousness to them. Strict justice could never approve such a transfer even though the sinless Jesus should consent to assume the guilt of the transgressors. It is because he is the life of all his members that he has the right to bear their sins. Nothing else but the life of the sinner can atone for his transgressions. Justice allows no substitution of another life for that which was forfeited in the violation of the holy commandment. The real unity of Christ as the Head and the election of grace as his body clothes every vessel of mercy with all the righteousness of their Redeemer, so that they are correctly designated as "the righteous," though in themselves they "were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." To every one of those who are thus made righteous, the assurance in our text is given. No sinner ever fled for refuge to this sure retreat but that he was made a witness of the truth proclaimed in this precious promise. However unbelieving doubts may arise, and the trembling saint may fear to trust in his grace, "He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved."

"The work which his goodness began
The arm of his strength will complete;
His promise is Yea, and Amen!
And never was forfeited yet."

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

READ AGAIN.

WE have tried to impress on our subscribers' minds the fact that under no circumstances can we continue a name on our list longer than the end of this year, 1893, that is sent on with their own subscription, in accordance with second and third paragraphs of last supplement, dated April 12th 1893.

(Continued from page 203.)

up out of a horrible pit, and put a new song in his mouth. Dear child of grace, well do you know how you learned to sing that new song. It is a song that none but the heirs of grace can sing. It is taught by him who speaks as man never spake.

The Bible reader can rapidly trace the footprints of Joseph down into Egypt, through Potiphar's house, and into the prison. But the Lord was with him, giving him wisdom to interpret the mysterious dreams of Pharaoh. Joseph was raised from the prison, and was caused to ride in the second chariot. My dear brethren, do you not see in this an emblem of the exaltation of our blessed Lord? He is exalted a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins. He has never promised this to any but Israel.

Joseph was governor over all the land of Egypt; and during the seven plenteous years the earth produced abundance, until the store-houses were filled. It is said that he gathered corn as the sand of the sea, until he left off numbering. The apostle says, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!"

In the time of the famine Joseph held the keys of the store-houses. He could lock, and none could open. So our antitypical Joseph holds the keys of heaven and hell in his own hands. When the famine came, Joseph's brethren were not prepared for it, and consequently their means were soon exhausted. How distressing to pass through a famine! There is nothing that will force us so soon. When all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread; and he said to them, "Go to Joseph." O, poor, penitent sinner, you who have been quickened by grace to a knowledge of your guilt and condemnation, go to Jesus, who holds the rich store-houses of grace in his own hand, and says to you, "Come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price." He says for your encouragement, "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted." If you are a true mourner, you are as sure to be comforted, as God has said it.

When the famine came it was not a matter of choice with them to go to Egypt; they were compelled to go, or perish. It was not a matter of choice with queen Esther to go in to the king; she was compelled to go, as her own life and the life of her people depended on her obtaining his favor; and as she stood at the gate trembling, she had no thought of rejecting his favor. The question with her was, Will he extend the golden sceptre? How vain and foolish the thought that God is calling, and is anxious to save the poor sinner, and the sinner rejects him. This is an old doctrine, and was preached by the devil to our parents in the garden of Eden. You need not teach the natural man this doctrine, for he naturally inherited it from his father Adam, and nothing but the quickening power of God will convince him that salvation is all of grace.

When Joseph's brethren went down into Egypt to buy corn, little did they think that he who was governor of Egypt was the brother they had sold for twenty pieces of silver. O how ignorant of spiritual things is the dead sinner, until God reveals them to him. This is the grand old doctrine that has ever been taught by the Primitive Baptists in all ages, and will continue to be taught by them until time shall be no more. It is worthy of notice that the brethren of Joseph did not know him, but he knew them, and accused them as spies. See what a fine story they related to him to justify themselves. O how the sinner seeks justification under the law. But Joseph intended to humble them, and to reveal to them their sins, before he should make himself known to them. They tried to pay their way, but their money was returned in their sacks. Here is the "do and live" system fully exemplified. O how the poor sinner tries to pay his way by his good works. But as their money was returned by Joseph, so good works for salvation will return on their own heads. Poor deluded souls! how ignorant they are of the glorious doctrine of grace. I glory in the grand old doctrine taught by the apostle. "It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy."

Before Joseph revealed himself to his brethren he wisely arranged to have them bring their brother Benjamin, and this they were compelled to do. Joseph manifested a greater love for Benjamin than for any of his other brethren. In view of this we believe he was a type of the church. His love was so great for Benjamin that he fell upon his neck and wept. He further manifested his love by making his mess five times greater. How sad the brethren felt, and what condemnation rested upon them. No doubt they trembled with fear when they heard the words, "I am Joseph." But he soon began to speak words of comfort, telling them not to be grieved nor angry with themselves, that they sold him, for God had sent him to save their lives by a great deliverance. He amply provided for them all, without money and without price, and said to them, "Take your wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones and for your wives, and bring your father, and come. Also regard not your stuff, for the good of all the land of Egypt is yours." Our blessed Savior will save his church and people from their sins; and as surely as Joseph provided abundance for his brethren, so will our blessed Savior provide abundance for all his children. Not one of them shall be lost, for their life is hid with Christ in God. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." Brethren, is not this precious promise enough? Our Savior says, as did Joseph to his brethren, Come, for all the good of the land is yours. How glorious is the thought that not one shall be left behind. If one could be left, it would perhaps be me. I am glad that they shall all know him, from the least to the greatest.

SILAS WILLIAMS.

ALBANY, Oregon, Jan. 28, 1893.

OPELIKA, Ala., May 27, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I was much interested in the last issue of the SIGNS. The correspondence between Elder Jenkins and brother F. S. Brink was a matter of peculiar interest to me, as it carried me back to former days in my pilgrimage, when I had somewhat the same exercise of mind. I was struck with the remark of brother Jenkins in regard to God having a purpose in brother Brink being brought as he was through that ordeal, and the sharp trials. I remember when I had written a letter to the SIGNS, containing an account of my trials, a brother in north Georgia by the name of McDaniel wrote me, and asked me how I managed to cut myself loose from all my kindred and former friends, and even from my wife. I wrote him that I was unable to do such a thing; but I trust that the same Physician who separated Paul from his mother's womb, and called him by his grace, to preach the gospel, was present and did the cutting loose. How powerless we are to do the very thing so much needed.

One other thought came to me, in his dying to all his former relation, and giving up what is called baptism. I had the same struggle. I know about how he felt on that subject. At one time it was such a barrier in my way that I thought it insurmountable, like the mountain Jesus spoke of when he said that if we have faith as a grain of mustard seed the mountain would be removed. So it was with me. When God gave me the faith, the mountain was removed, and the sycamine tree of ordination was plucked up and cast into the sea. I was made to look at the so-called baptism as sacrilege, in that the Scriptures teach that "many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." The Lord showed me that the ones who had practiced that fraud on me were responsible for the act, and not me, as I was kidnapped by them when a babe, and taught a dialect that was Ashdod to the core, core and all. Now I can look back and see how that the mountain became a plain; and, as the Lord said by Zechariah, "Not by might nor by power; but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

The genius and spirit of the New School is to deceive, and thus many of God's children are kidnapped and led off by them, carried captive, and kept shut up in Babylon until God delivers them therefrom.

I am glad brother Brink did not write to me, but kept up the correspondence with you, brother Jenkins. You were the one, and I certainly think the Lord enabled you to carry on the correspondence in a plain, faithful way. I can indorse what you wrote, and I feel that you were kind enough, and at the same time faithful enough. Indeed did the Lord say, "I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." You reminded brother Brink of the tribulations he would enter upon in this narrow and strait way. Doubtless he has found your words true. If he has not already, he will before he travels far. Thus has it been with me, plenty of poverty and persecution. But when we feel that the Lord hides us in his pavillion from the slander of tongues, we can eat our bread and honey in quietness. Here is a slice with honey on it, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven." Of course I cannot in so short a letter refer to all your correspondence; but I think if I ever know of a similar case I will refer the one to brother Benton Jenkins. Sister Laura E. Tubbs, of Texas, having read a few copies of the SIGNS, wrote me, and after corresponding for a few months I went to Texas and baptized her, on the fourth Sunday in May, 1891. She doubtless has read the correspondence with interest, as well as many others who have passed through the same deep waters, and the fiery trials which are to try our faith in God, his way and his word. I reckon that brother Brink, sister Tubbs and myself, as well as some others, feel very dead to all those things; and had we not been convinced that those people were not the church of God, we would have held on to them. Like those of old who lived in Babylon, we tried to heal her; but when we saw all remedies fail, and saw that she only grew worse, we were made to say, We would have healed her, but she is not healed; therefore let us forsake her. Afterward these characters were seen in Zion, declaring the wonderful works of God. And it will occur again and again, as God's people there hear his voice saying, "Come out of her, my people." This sometimes gives me hope, as I once heard that voice so plainly. The prophet Micah says, "Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest; because it is polluted, it shall destroy you even with a sore destruction." The rest of the true people of God is not in Babylon; but Zion is appointed as a place of rest, as the prophet has said. We see that Babylon with all her sons and daughters cry out, Work, work, work. Up and be doing. They cry thus, and her streets are filled with do do songs. But the true church of God is that flock which Christ makes to rest at noon. Babylon, like a muddy stream, is always casting up mire and dirt. Her muddy doctrine of works and a conditional salvation is her song and her joy. She says, Come unto me, all ye that labor, and I will put you to work. Her mouth is not made to preach rest, for she knows nothing about it. She is like a seagull, busiest in the time of a storm; and like the arch enemy, full of energy and life to deceive and lead astray. Hence God has said, "Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye that bent the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows; for she hath sinned against the Lord." Bless God, it is written that she shall fall; and the apostle John wrote, "Babylon is fallen." As a millstone she is cast into the sea, and shall arise no more. We are commanded to serve her as she has served us. Sometimes I think our brethren seem to fear her, and begin to be slackhanded. Faithfulness becomes the house of God. When the Lord says, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee," it means something. Even now at this time I think it is high time to awake out of sleep. Many of our brethren are in Babylon, and I feel for them, and hope the Lord will deliver them out of the snare of the devil, who have been taken captive by him at his will. They cannot be satisfied there. I hope they will come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, and sorrowing and sighing flee away. They shall come, as Christ told his disciples to flee from Jerusalem at a certain time. The same call will come to the children of God that are in that Jerusalem which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt.

God will make brother Brink a comfort to some of his children whom he will yet have delivered from the doomed city which now stands in all the worldly pomp and show, saying, "I sit as a queen, and am no widow."

I have written much more than I expected to write when I began. May the Lord bless this message and make it a comfort to some one, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

THE PERSECUTIONS OF SAINTS.

THAT God's people have been a persecuted people is apparent from both sacred and profane history. It was very early declared by God himself that enmity should exist between the seed of the serpent and the seed of the woman; and this enmity involved the church of Christ. This is the earliest declaration of war ever made; and no peace has ever been made, nor is ever to be made, between the hostile parties. A victory over death, hell and the grave will alone end the strife. The enemy of God was destined to appear in many forms, even "with all deceivableness of unrighteousness." I wish to notice three of his principal forms, namely, the dragon, the beast with seven heads and ten horns, and the beast with two horns like a lamb; but the same spirit animated and directed each and all.

The dragon doubtless represented Pagan Rome. This is first of the three noticed in Revelation xii., bringing into view the city of Rome and ten European kingdoms, under whose laws the saints suffered; for they were persecuted under a form of law in all cases, and not by mere mob violence.

The same seven heads and ten horns appeared under a professed christian form in the early centuries, and power was given that form to rule the earth and persecute for twelve hundred and sixty years. The animating spirit that rode and directed the beast (or the political powers, the ten horns) is represented by a woman (see Rev. xvii.), who directed the beast she rode upon, even as a warrior directs his war-horse. But another beast was seen coming up out of the earth, having only two horns, or legal forms of law. Where is this form to be found, if not in our United States of America? The two horns representing the two houses of Congress, and the two houses of the several State Legislatures. This same evil and religious persecuting spirit seeks to ride this beast, to direct law movements, to regulate our drinks, to prescribe our days of worship, to free our servants, to wrest the control of our children from us in educational matters, all in the name of almighty God; thus claiming to be his vicegerents on earth. The horns were like a lamb; the voice was that of a dragon. The law power is "of the people, by the people, and for the people." How harmless, how innocent, it looks! But the "people" are so taught that when they speak (or make laws) it shows the teeth of the dragon, it is the voice of a dragon, proving that it is the same old spirit, though in a different form and under a different name. The number of this beast is six hundred and sixty-six—the number of a man; that is, the different religious organizations that are of man's origin are six hundred and sixty-six. These by their laws shall compass the camp of the saints round about, by weaving a web of law around the saints which they cannot live under conscientiously; but when the web is about completed, fire comes down from God out of heaven and devours them.

Brethren, is not this eventful day now dawning? Are not the powers of antichrist fast getting hold of the reins of political power? Thus proving to us that while our kingdom is not of this world, their kingdom is of this world. Surely "the armies are gathering around;" and if so be that we are of the day, and not of the night, let us be sober, and fight not with carnal weapons, but with the sharp sword of truth; knowing that though in the world we shall have tribulation, yet in the Lord we shall have peace, and at the appointed time the people of God shall triumph over all their enemies.

Brethren Beebe, the above are some views that I have; and if published I earnestly hope they may incite some one to write more fully on the subject, and to freely correct wherever I may have gone amiss.

Yours in hope,

THOMAS COLE.

ROYALTON, Ohio, June 12, 1893.

TISKILWA, Ill.

DEAR KINDRED IN CHRIST:—It has long been impressed on my mind to write to the household of faith and tell them how I trust the Lord found me, and led me about, and instructed me. I had serious thoughts and impressions when but a child. My father preached the funeral of a babe, and I worried that it must be put in the ground. My mother told me that we all must die. The worry of that constant thought haunted me for years. I greatly wished to be a christian, for I thought they enjoyed themselves so much in telling of the goodness of the Lord. As I older grew I tried to be good, and in some way to ingratiate myself into the Lord's favor. I was told that we had a great work to do in our salvation. I tried to pray often, and to do right; but alas for my self-righteousness! Soon my burden seemed greater than I could bear. I attended Sunday School, and this question was asked, "What is the work of the Spirit?" I looked over my father's books, but I failed to find the desired information. I then asked my father, and he said, "I cannot tell, my dear." This was a puzzle indeed, and he a minister. In the year 1855 I was married and moved to Nebraska, into a neighborhood of Old Baptists. They went about preaching from house to house, and how they did enjoy themselves. The Lord was pleased to call many from darkness into the glorious light of the gospel. For three long years I tried to work out a fig-leaf righteousness. I felt that others could be saved, but not me. My husband was baptized in the Missouri River, with many others; but as for poor me I was in deep despair. I returned to my father's home, and a revival was held near by. I attended, and many were flocking to the mourner's bench, I with the rest; but I found no relief. I was told to act faith in Christ, but could not. My burden seemed greater than I could bear, and soon I lost my health. One day I went to a New School Baptist covenant meeting. (How busy they were in trying to save souls; while the Old Baptists, I thought, were such a set of do-nothings.) But they could not do me any good. They urged all to speak. I told them I had sinned away the day of grace. The deacon said it was foolish to talk like that; that it was easy to believe. I thought I would give worlds, if I possessed them, if I could believe. That evening I went home with a young friend, and while there a sweet calm came over the troubled waters of my soul. We soon returned to the meeting; and when the invitation was given to speak, before I knew what I was doing I was on my feet, and was telling what great things the Lord had done for me. That night while riding home our sleigh was heavily loaded, and we got out to walk up a steep hill. I felt as if I were walking on air. The ground was covered with snow, which seemed transformed into thousands of sparkling gems. One passage of Scripture after another passed through my mind, and the Bible appeared like a new book. All were gracious promises now, while before all had been condemnation. One night a light shone around me, and I saw Jesus. O what a sight! I cannot forget it. For weeks,

"Jesus all the day long
Was my joy and my song."

Then the adversary whispered, "You are deceived, and have tried to make the people believe you are a christian." In my distress I tried to pray that I might know if this was all a delusion. Then to my great joy Jesus drew near, with the words to doubting Thomas, "Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed. Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet believe." With such a view I was made to exclaim, "My Lord and my God!"

"Not the labor of my hands
Could fulfill thy law's demands;
Nothing in my hands I bring;
Simply to thy cross I cling."

I felt I would like a home among the Old Baptists, if they would receive me, which I rather doubted. They all looked so pure and holy, I thought they would soon see I was not one of them. My sister and I went to the Spoon River Church and tried to tell of our wanderings, but failed entirely. They seemed to understand our sighs and tears, and we were received and baptized. I cannot express the peace that flowed into my soul in the discharge of my duty. Soon, ah, so soon, I was in trouble again, and about the Lord's supper. "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." I was not worthy to unloose Jesus' shoe latchet. This became a great cross. My father, sister and I went to Salem Church at the May meeting. After preaching was the communion. Father asked mother Bobbit to bring in his girls, as we were seated outside. We went into the house. Elders James Chenoweth and R. F. Haynes, with Deacon Bobbit, were there. If I only could have gotten away I felt I would. I was like the children of Israel when they came to the Red Sea. But once more Jesus drew near and covered me with the beautiful robe of righteousness. I could then see that I was complete in him, and also how God could be just and justify the ungodly.

Long years have come and gone since I trust the Lord washed my sins away; and instead of being a perfect christian, sin permeates my whole being. When I would be or do good, evil is present with me. I am satisfied there is no way of salvation except through the merits of our blessed Redeemer. O how I have wished that I might not sin. But perhaps the dear Father will take the will for the deed, and bless instead of blame.

Dear kindred, may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God be with you all.

R. B. THOMPSON.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., May 25, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Our brother, W. B. Williams, has sent me the inclosed, which he desires to have published in the SIGNS. I gladly comply with his request. Many of our brethren still recall and speak of the words and the presence of the dear aged brother at our associations last spring. To the exhortation to brotherly love I feel to say, Amen.

F. A. CHICK.

"LET brotherly love continue."

To the many brethren and friends whom I met last year at the Baltimore, Delaware and Delaware River Associations—Very dear brethren:—About one year ago I was among you, and enjoyed my visit with you very much; and on my way home (I think on the Chesapeake Bay) my mind went back to ponder over the good and pleasant meetings I had shared among you, and the above Scripture came into my mind. From then until now, whenever I have thought of my visit, the above Scripture has presented itself to my mind. I do not know what is more precious than brotherly love. It is like a morning without a cloud, when the sun rises with its glorious light and drives away the clouds of darkness, and enables us to see how to walk. By it we walk together in the great love of God, which is stronger than death, and which surpasses all our language and understanding. God is love; and he that loves God has this brotherly love in his heart. This love drives away all malice and hatred and backbiting. It drives away all evil speaking toward our brother. It hides a multitude of sins. No man has this love only he that is taught of God. I believe that every one who is taught of God loves his brother with godly love. Brethren, let this brotherly love guide you still in your meetings, in the fear of God. Let this love cause you to live in peace, and in humble worship before God. Walk as children of light. Brethren, may you have a pleasant meeting in your associations again. I would like to meet you again, but cannot this time; but my mind is with you. If the Lord will, I will come again some time. I saw no reason to find fault; but I can say that I was greatly cared for, and much kindness was shown me. I was not lacking in anything. My wants were all supplied. I still have you all in remembrance. May the Lord greatly bless you all. I still hope to remain in brotherly love with you until death.

Your brother,

W. B. WILLIAMS.

ELM CITY, N. C., May 16, 1893.

INQUIRIES AFTER TRUTH.

JUNE 13, 1893.

BROTHER F. A. Chick will please give his views through the SIGNS on James iv. 7, 8. Is it not addressed specially to the church? My mind has been directed to it by one believing it is to the world also. A sinner saved by grace, if saved at all,
E. O.

I WISH to bother brother F. A. Chick once more. I wish his views on Matthew xi. 12, if he will be kind enough to accommodate an old worm.

The SIGNS has been in our family since its first issue. My father's membership was at Bryans' Station, under the care of Elder Thomas P. Dudley.

Your well-wisher,

J. A. MERRYMAN.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

A Friend, N. J., 1, O. F. Ballard, N. Y., 1, S. S. Ward, Ohio, 1, John G. Smith, Texas, 1, Mary J. Kimber, Ill., 1.—Total, $5.00.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEPARTED this life quite suddenly, at the residence of her grandson, Mr. Arnold Carroll, Hobart, Delaware Co., N. Y., Mrs. Anna Carroll, aged 91 years.

Mrs. Carroll was not a professor of religion, but a possessor of a well-attested hope through grace, and delighted in hearing Jesus extolled Lord of all. A sense of unworthiness kept her from what she felt to be her duty, and many times did she bemoan her ingratitude of heart toward him who had done such great things for her; yet all the qualities of a chaste keeper at home were with her, and her desire of heart and soul was for the peace and prosperity of the church of God.

She has left one son and two daughters, with a number of grandchildren and other relatives, to mourn. We trust that for her to die was gain. May the Lord resign us all to his will.

J. D. HUBBELL.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

Mrs. Eliza Ann Emory, our dear mother, departed this life April 26th, 1893, being confined to her bed only a few days, although she had been in feeble health for a number of years.

She was born in Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., July 30th, 1814; therefore her age was 78 years, 8 months and 26 days. She was the daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth Turner, who died many years ago. She was united in marriage to Robert Emory, July 27th, 1837. Her husband has been dead more than forty years. It was her blessed privilege to go to the Old School Baptist Church at Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., and relate what the Lord had done for her in the way of salvation by grace; and she was received and baptized Oct. 9th, 1864, by Elder Jacob Winchell. She lived a life that was consistent with her profession, always attending meeting when it was possible, until her health failed. When in company with her Baptist friends, and especially the ministering brethren, her time would be devoted principally to hearing from them, which was the delight of her soul. With myself I can recall many seasons of refreshing in spiritual conversation when I would visit her. She often spoke of that trust she had in the Lord, and that all her hope was in Christ, who had redeemed her with his own precious blood, and in due time called her, to manifest it in his visible kingdom here on earth.

She leaves three sons, one brother and two grandchildren, with other relatives, to mourn their loss; but their loss is her eternal gain. A daughter, Addie V. Emory, died some years ago.

The funeral services were attended by Elder Fred. W. Keene. He used upon the occasion the words recorded in Job xix. 24-26.

G. A. EMORY, M. D.

APPOINTMENTS.

ELDER W. R. Welborn, providence permitting, will fill the following appointments in Texas:

Acton, 1st and 2d of July, 1893; at brother Preston Staggs, 3d, at night; Weatherford, 4th; Mineral Wells, 5th; Zion Hill, 6th; Poolville, 7th, 8th and 9th; Garrett's Creek, 10th and 11th; Springtown, 12th and 13th; Silver Creek, 15th and 16th; Joshua, 21st, 22d and 23d.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days' meeting will be held at Hughesville, Loudoun Co., Va., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July.

Trains leave Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., 4:35 and 5:30 p. m. The p. m. trains will be met at Hamilton Station, for which point all will buy tickets, on Thursday. The a. m. train will be met at the same station on Friday. Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to attend.

E. V. WHITE.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

D. L. Blackwell June 93

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1893.

NO. 27.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATER.

IN the hollow of God's hand are all the waters upon the surface and in the body of the earth; and who can measure them? They are all under God's absolute control, he directing their course in whatsoever way he has aforetime ordained they shall go. In the creation, at the beginning of time, he separated the waters, and caused the dry land to appear; which separation and appearance gave place to the springing up of all vegetable life, and a resting place for the feet of the animal creation which should inhabit the earth. In all the manifestations of God's grace to the children of men there is presented both death and life, as well as life and death. Under the laws of nature, natural life must precede natural death. And as we find all things in the spiritual existence directly opposite to the natural, so under the spiritual law, ~~spiritual death must precede spiritual life.~~ By the separation of the waters, in the beginning, and the appearance of dry land, this figure is presented. For as the waters are separated, they come directly under the law of nature; from the little springs that bubble up out of the earth, upon the mountain sides, sending their tiny streams down a winding course to meet with larger ones, all finally to empty themselves into the great ocean; all bound by God's immutable law, to pursue the several courses laid out for them. Now, having become subject to the law in the separation, there is followed a manifestation of natural life. So man, who by disobedience to the command (or law) of God was separated from the tree of life, must needs go into death, coming under the law of sin and death; which death was necessary, that the life of all the chosen and elect of God might appear. The worldly wise man will ask, Was not God unjust if this is true, in condemning some unto death, and ordaining others unto life eternal? And we ask, Is not God above all law? Who dares therefore to judge him? Has he not created the darkness, yea, and formed the light? Has he not made choice of good and evil, placing the knowledge thereof upon a tree in the garden? Surely he can do all his pleasure; for all things are his. "Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump, to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor?" As he has placed the fishes in the water, which is their element in sustaining life, has he not also placed unregenerate man upon the earth, which is his element, and in which he finds all his desires? The natural heart of man is securely wedded to the sense of the homely expression, "This world is good enough for me;" and it seeks no higher, although it takes pride in making higher pretensions, and deceives itself. There is also presented a beautiful figure of the division of the waters. In the beginning it is declared, "And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament, from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so. And God called the firmament heaven." As the waters were separated by the word of God, so were also the waters divided. The firmament (in figure) presents the power of the glory of God. For God has set in the firmament the sun and the moon and the stars, each fulfilling its own mission in giving light to the earth. "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory." Among the wonders in heaven which John on Patmos saw was "A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." Literally the earth is clothed with the sun, from which it derives its light and warmth, and its power to manifest animal and vegetable life, and presenting the great moving power over all earthly things; and in figure, the brightness of the glory of God in the spiritual kingdom. The moon, having its light and glory of the sun by reflection, governing the ebb and flow of the mighty waters of the sea, presents the strength and power of the law in governing the ebb and flow of the mighty waters of the strength and power of sin. The stars in their innumerable multitude dotting the firmament, are all under the same laws of nature, yet each having its own especial glory. So in the spiritual kingdom are the twelve apostles of the Lord, imbued with the Holy Ghost and power from on high, as the twelve stars composing the crown upon the head of the woman (the church), forming and regulating the laws of Christ's kingdom, binding and loosing on earth that which shall also be bound and loosed in heaven, for the well being and nurture of the stars in the spiritual firmament, which are in number innumerable, as the stars in the natural heavens, and as the sands upon the shores of the sea. Then the waters as they are divided below and above the firmament do represent the power of death (which is sin) as always below, and erstwhile (in our experience) above the firmament of the power of the glory of God. These literal waters, although divided, are constantly rising and falling in obedience to the powers in the firmament which govern them. The poor, sin-burdened pilgrim many times, while weighed down under the power of sin and Satan, feels his last condition in consequence. And only as faith, with its oxidizing, vitalizing and assuring power exalts his heart, can he understand that the power of God is above every power. And in every child of God where sin does surely abound, grace doth much more abound. As the proud waves of the sea were stilled by the power of the salvation of God, for the deliverance of Israel from Egyptian bondage, so the power of the Spirit says to the enemies of spiritual Israel, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther." By water was all the living upon the earth destroyed, save Noah and his family; and by water were they saved; manifesting salvation to the chosen family of God, out of the very waters of destruction; exemplifying the power of faith over the blindness and ignorance of the natural heart. For it was "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." By the curse of sin all flesh became dead. The waters of sin prevailed upon the earth, and all flesh died. But what a hope we have in Jesus, who is the faith of God's elect. For what says the angel of the Lord unto Joseph, of the Virgin Mary? "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Now by faith Noah was saved, and rode upon the waters which destroyed all flesh upon the face of the earth. Then, as sin was necessary to cause all flesh to die, so just as necessary was sin to come upon the elect of God, that in the Ark (Christ Jesus) should salvation come through faith, by the perfect righteousness of Christ. As Noah and his family are a figure of Christ and his church (the family of God), so the Lord made a covenant with Noah and his seed forever, saying, "And I will establish my covenant with you: neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood," &c. And for the continued remembrance of the everlasting covenant unto all generations, he placed his bow in the cloud, saying, "I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth." In every drop of water there is that which under proper conditions will produce a rainbow. Being placed between the sun's rays and the dark cloud which has passed, the rainbow will appear upon the surface of the cloud. Our sins are about us as a thick cloud; by them we are overwhelmed and brought low, even to the ends of the earth. But when the Sun of righteousness shines forth in resplendent glory, the clouds are driven back, and now the multitudinous drops of water (the lusts of our flesh) which did beat upon our defenceless heads are working together for good to us, and to the glory of God. By the bright shining of our gracious Lord, the rays of his goodness and mercy penetrate through our fleshly uprisings, exhibiting to our wondering eyes of faith the seven prismatic colors of the fullness of God's boundless love; and upon the surface of the dark cloud, which has rolled away to be remembered against us no more forever, the bow appears, attesting and calling to our remembrance the precious promises embraced in the everlasting covenant of our God. This salvation is secured unto us by our gracious Redeemer, who by his appearing "hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." As our Redeemer, he came in our own mortal flesh. "God sent forth his own Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law." Then cannot we rejoice that we are sinners, guilty and condemned under the law? for it was such that Jesus came to save. With water was our dear Savior baptized, in the river Jordan, that all righteousness might be fulfilled. We are also baptized with water, as emblematic of the death, burial and resurrection of our Redeemer. But such baptism is not essential to our eternal salvation, as some do claim; but we believe it is essential to the time or common salvation; for it is the answer of a good conscience toward God, in an obedient following of his commandment. Said John the Baptist to some, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." This is the true baptism which is unto life eternal. Running throughout all the Scriptures in perfect harmony is the line of discrimination between truth and error, between the flesh and the spirit, between darkness and light, and between death and life. All things that are natural tend unto death, while the things of the Spirit are life everlasting." That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." The things that are natural typify the things that are spiritual. The works of the flesh are presented to our finite minds as preceding the fruit of the Spirit, and it is true in our experience. Yet Christ was one with his Father before the worlds were, and his church was chosen in him ere time began. So Adam is presented as first. "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." Adam is the figure of him that was to come; and all natural things, by comparison, represent the things that are revealed to our understanding. The first or legal covenant, with its types and shadows, portray to faith's vision the second covenant, or covenant of grace. So water is presented to our view in setting forth in beautiful emblem that "pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." We thirst in a natural way, and water satisfies our thirst for the time. Jesus says, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." Evidently the spiritual satisfying (or filling) is as the natural, otherwise we would not continue to hunger and thirst from time to time. Yet there is a sense in which, when one drinketh of the water of life, he shall never thirst; for so says the Savior. "Whosoever drinketh of this [natural] water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water, springing up into everlasting life." A natural man may die of thirst, in a place where water cannot be obtained, or from inability to swallow, from disease or from other causes. But they who are spiritual, although they "Seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst," although every avenue of hope seemeth to be shut against them, they shall not die with thirst; because Jesus has said, "But the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water," &c. Therefore shall he never thirst unto death. Water, as representing in figure the water of life, is a mirror in which self is brought to view. Man looks upon the earth, it reflects nothing, but presents to his mind the things over which he has dominion. He looks into a stream or pool of clear water, and himself is reflected in the water. Either of which observations is pleasing to the natural man. But a proverb says, "As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man." Jesus is the crystal medium into which we look, beholding ourself vile, depraved, corrupt, a very sink of sin; while he in whom we look is as pure, holy and undefiled as the "pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb;" wherein is sustained and made clean all the Father's family, who are kept by the power of God, ready to be revealed in the last time. When (by the knowledge of sin, and the exceeding sinfulness thereof, with its accompanying sorrow) the waters of tribulation and affliction arise, until we are overwhelmed, with joy we behold the tree of life, against which the waters prevail not, but are driven back, and we are left upon the shore of sweet deliverance, beholding the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. And in all such who are thus delivered, there is sweet communion one with another, in telling each other of the wonderful love of Jesus, fulfilling the proverbial words of Solomon, "As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man."

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

Ghent, Ky., March 25, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—In speaking of the setting up of the gospel kingdom our Lord said, "It is like a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it."—Luke xiii 19. The ancient prophets foretold the setting up of that kingdom. Daniel said, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom." Evidently these kings were the Cesars. Luke says, "Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea," &c. But that royal family had set up their kingdom, had conquered the nations round about them, until they claimed that Rome was the mistress of the world. It had spread east and west, north and south. But what a contrast between that earthly kingdom and that one which was prefigured by the mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden. One was sustained by great armies; the other was built and sustained by the great God of the vast universe. He says, "Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." That rock was Christ, and to him was given all power in heaven and in earth. Matthew says, "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Of the coming of John the Baptist Malachi foretold, saying, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple." That temple was that glorious kingdom which he built upon that rock. But when John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," that man cast that little mustard seed into his garden. That man was Christ, and that garden, was the garden of the Lord. He cast it into his garden. It did not accidentally fall there, but was cast there, and in accordance with his own eternal purpose it grew and waxed great and became a great tree. But how very small did it appear to the human mind when our Lord was calling his disciples around him and preaching to them his own everlasting gospel. But his kingdom not being of this world, that enmity which has its abode in the human heart sought to defeat its being set up, and crucified its ever great and glorious founder. In close relationship with that enmity was the ignorance of God which permeates the hearts of all the fallen sons and daughters of an apostate Adam. Hence they cried, "Crucify him, crucify him." But he worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, and it was his will that his kingdom should be set up on the earth, and should stand forever. The setting up of that kingdom, and the growth and development of all its branches, was "not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." They are called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord.

He cast that mustard seed into his garden. The prophet says, "And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city." The tree that grew from that mustard seed is here compared by the prophet to a hedged city. How strong and impregnable is a hedged city. All who are in danger have to take refuge in such a city. Therefore the birds of the air lodged in the branches of it. A false religion has been taught in the world from the very dawn of time, and men have set up great and boasted powers, claiming to be able to control the Almighty, and cause him to change his purpose; and they have attached themselves to God's dear people, and sought to control them and lead them into their false ways. They are they who have lodged in the branches of that great tree, the true church of our God. They have lodged in the branches, and made great noise and fluttering, and often impaired the foliage of that tree, and marred its beauty, and brought corruption into its fruit externally. But all the branches of that tree bear the spiritual fruits of righteousness. They have the fruits of the Spirit which are given to them by him who cast that mustard seed into his garden. They are love, joy, &c. But those corrupt birds are strangers to those fruits, and know nothing of the love of God shed abroad in the heart. They know nothing of the joy of salvation, but are going about to establish their own righteousness. One of their great efforts is to compel the redeemed and regenerated sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty to conform to their systems and teachings. Saul of Tarsus adopted that rule, but his was a miserable failure. In after years he said, "I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." How excellent was that knowledge to that ancient servant of the Most High.

Although the dawn of the setting up of that kingdom is given to us in the figure of the mustard seed, and its great and wonderful development, by that tree which grew from that small seed, yet our Lord does not leave his saints without presenting to them by another figure the beauty and glory of that kingdom. He says, "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars."—Rev. xii. 1. That woman presents to us another figure of the church. While the mustard seed was evidently cast into the garden before it developed itself into a great tree, therefore it prefigured that period in the history of God's dealings with his people while they were yet under the law dispensation. That seed was in darkness before it budged and came forth in its beauty; and that law dispensation was dark and shadowy; but when the dawning of that glorious gospel day was manifested to the astonished saints, it had budged. Our Lord was under that law dispensation, and lived up to all its requirements. He was overshadowed by the darkness of that dispensation, and that darkness followed him down into the shades of the tomb. The law had received at his hands all its demands when he said, "It is finished." But glory to his exalted name, that darkness was driven away when he arose from the tomb. The prophet says, "For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall." When he arose from the tomb the darkness of that legal dispensation was forever rolled away. It was rolled up as a vesture, and the saints who had lived under that dispensation, and were then upon the earth, were ushered into the light of the glorious gospel day. He then shone upon them in all his resplendent glory, and all the wounds made upon them while on their pilgrimage under the law were healed. But those saints until their final delivery from the dominion of the law had beheld that great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun. To them it was a great wonder. They had been looking to the law, and that woman never appeared to them until that law dispensation was about coming to its close. That wonder was increased when they saw that the moon (which represented that shadowy dispensation) was under her feet. Now they beheld her clothed with the sun. O how bright and glorious was her apparel. They had been groping in the darkness of the law; but now the gospel heaven shone forth in all its heavenly beauty; for the great luminary of that heaven was now shining with healing in his wings. They were no longer under the law, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table. Now they were as calves of the stall, not searching from place to place for their food. The Bridegroom hath said to them, "Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved." Then they had no relish for the wild gourds (false teachings) shred into the pottage by the servant of the prophet. O no. They had the glorious gospel feast set before them. In that feast was the power, goodness, love and mercy of their risen Lord.

That woman had upon her head a crown of twelve stars, which represents the twelve apostles of the Lamb. She had the moon, or law dispensation, under her feet. But that crown was upon her head, where all who had eyes to see could behold it. Each star in that crown reflected the light of her undimmed apparel. It was the righteousness of him who had risen with healing in his wings. While that woman first appeared to those wondering saints in the legal heaven, yet that was not her home. Soon her glorious Lord would lead her out into the green fields and verdent plains of the gospel day. He calls her out of that gloomy, shadowy plain, and says, "Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land." She heard the sweet songs of those heavenly choristers as they all in notes of praise chanted the sweet music of salvation by grace; and each succeeding flock will raise in heavenly music that new song, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty, just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." His works were great and marvelous to them." They saw, and yet see him, by the eye of faith, offering himself without spot unto God, a sacrifice for sin, by which he redeemed them from all iniquity, and made them kings and priests unto God; and by that faith they now behold him coming in holy triumph from the dark caverns of the tomb, bringing his sheaves with him. He had gone forth weeping. Yes, the anguish of Gethsemane and the sorrows and sufferings of Calvary had been his. But O how marvelous was that work when he conquered death and despoiled the grave of its victory. Then that great tree which sprang from that little mustard seed came forth in its heavenly beauty and grandeur. Then that woman stood out before the admiring saints of all lands and climes in undimmed beauty and effulgence, being clothed with the sun, the righteousness of her exalted Lord and King; and in sweetest accents they proclaimed his justice and truth. Their song is, "Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints. He was and is King of saints. He likened his kingdom to a grain of mustard seed, and that kingdom is that in which he reigns as King of saints; and there he will reign till all power and dominion is put under his feet. Then, dear children of the heavenly King, as you journey along sweetly sing and tell of the wonders of redeeming love, and the glories of your exalted Lord and King, till you are called to lay your armor by and dwell with him at home. A few more days, perhaps very few, and this poor little one, if one at all, will cease to talk to you with his pen upon the beauties and glories of that everlasting kingdom. May the joy and peace of the Holy Ghost be yours while in this wilderness land.

H. COX.

LEBANON, Ohio, April, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send you a letter written by a dear cousin of mine. She was baptized last October. As we gathered at the river-side and sang the beautiful hymn,

"O how happy are they Who their Savior obey,"

I hope we realized what a blessed privilege it is to be numbered with the saints. We enjoyed a good meeting at Lebanon to-day. My cousin wishes the SIGNS sent to her.

My christian love to all the household of faith. I remain your unworthy sister,

MATTIE S. BOWEN.

OREGONIA, Ohio, Jan. 9, 1893.

DEAR COUSIN AND AUNT:—I will this afternoon endeavor to write to you, as you requested me to write if I could not come soon. There is meeting at Bethel this afternoon; and as I am not permitted to meet at this time with the Old Baptists, I feel like I wanted to write to one of them. O, how my mind is drawn toward the assembly of the saints, and what a longing desire I have to hear the truth proclaimed as it is in Jesus. When I do get to Old Baptist meeting I feel loth to leave the place, fearing I will not soon get there again. The time sometimes seems so long until I am permitted to go again. I do feel I would have loved so well to have gone to the meeting this afternoon, as I have very little hope of going again this winter. But I know it is all right.

Dear cousin, words seem too little to describe the pleasure I have derived from reading those dear SIGNS OF THE TIMES that you loaned me to read. When I read the experiences they contain, I feel like I want to tell those dear ones of the way the Lord has led me. If I know my own heart, I do love the Old Baptists for the truth's sake; and if God will so guide my pen I will tell you some of his dealings with me. I cannot remember the time when I did not believe there was a God. When very young, at times I would feel like I had such a longing desire to be good, and to do something that would be pleasing in the sight of God. When I had such thoughts as these, as near as I can remember, I was about eight years old. I thought I would pray, and at night before sleeping I would repeat these lines, which in my childish fancy I thought were so beautiful,

"Savior, tender Shepherd, hear me;
Bless thy little lamb to-night;
Through the darkness be thou near me,
Watch my sleep till morning light.
All this day thy hand has led me,
And I thank thee for thy care;
Thou hast clothed me, warmed me, fed me;
Listen to my evening prayer.

Let my sins be all forgiven;
Bless the friends I love so well;
Take me, when I die, to heaven,
Happy there with thee to dwell."

Little did I then realize what it was to have a hope that I was one of his little lambs. But somehow there came a time when my good works failed me, and I saw myself the chief of sinners. I then thought that all the words I had said, in trying to do something that would be pleasing in God's holy sight, was all lip service, a mere formula of words. O how I did go mourning over my sinful condition then. Everything looked awful to me then. It seemed as though I could neither work nor rest, nor do anything right; and when I would sometimes try to pray, I could say nothing except "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." I traveled along in this condition for several years. Sometimes I would try to banish such gloomy feelings and to cease mourning over my sinful condition. I thought I would not let that trouble me so much, but would go with my schoolmates and neighbor girls and boys to parties and places of amusement, and enjoy myself as they seemed to enjoy themselves at such places. It is now almost a year since I was at the last party I ever expect to be at. I had not been there ten minutes until I wished I had not gone. O how awfully bad I did feel, while the others seemed to be having so much fun. I could hardly wait for the time to come to go home. When I reached home I told my mother that was the last party I ever intended to go to. Then my mind was drawn toward the people I then believed were indeed and in truth the people of God, who walked not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. How beautifully Elder Gilbert at the association told my experience, and O how I did enjoy his sermon. He told my experience better than I feel I can tell it. A little over three years ago, when I thought I could not endure much longer such a feeling of wretchedness, the association was to be at Lebanon that year. I had made great calculations on attending it every day, for I so longed to find a people in whose company I could truly enjoy myself, and to hear the truth proclaimed, whether men would hear or forbear. But mother was taken very sick a few weeks before the association was to be held, and I then thought my cup of sorrow was indeed full; for I then gave up the hope of getting there, and was afraid the Lord had banished me from his presence. But mother insisted that I should go to the association on Sunday. When I arrived there Elder Charles Reed was preaching. I felt like I wanted to hear the ablest speaking preachers that were there that day. The next one that arose to preach was Elder Curry. This was the first time I ever heard him preach. He began talking rather slow, and I wished that one of the more able preachers would preach; but before he had talked long I was dreading for the time to come for him to quit, for I did feast on what he said, and I believe I never did have a sermon sink any deeper into my heart than that one did. Little did I then think that he would be the one to baptize me. I remarked to you what a good sermon that was, and you said that anyone who loved that sermon was an old Baptist.

During that time when mother was so sick I became perfectly reconciled to the Lord's will. I could then exclaim, Thy will, not mine, be done. My burden seemed all gone. I felt that if it was the Lord's will for mother to get well it was all right, and if it was his will to take her away from me it was all right. I wondered then what made me feel that way. Before that time when she would have such sick spells I could scarcely keep my tears back while I was by her side, I was so afraid she would die and be taken from me. But bless his holy name, in his great love and mercy he saw fit to raise her up, and she was permitted to see the day when I was baptized and received into the fold of Christ. But I am afraid sometimes that I have deceived the church, and that I am not worthy to be numbered with the people of God. It is my greatest desire that I may

(Continued on page 214.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 5, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

SEEKING JESUS.

"FEAR not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified."—Matt. xxviii. 5.

While the religious world is full of professed worshipers of Jesus, all of whom claim to be trusting in the grace of God for salvation from that death which is the inevitable consequence of sin, it is deplorably evident that in their religious devotions many are moved by no better motive than natural love of selfish profit. This is confessed by such as declare that they would not refrain from sin if they believed that their eternal salvation was not dependent upon their own works. They profess to rely upon the grace of God for deliverance from condemnation, but yet maintain that their own compliance with conditions must be added to that grace, in order that it may be effectual in their behalf. Claiming to believe the testimony of Jesus as written in the inspired Scriptures, they in works deny him. Trusting in their own ability to secure the favor of divine justice by such works as seem in their estimation to be meritorious, even while they say they are saved by the grace of God, their action denies that they have confidence in Jesus. Certainly there never was any need that the cheering words of our text should be addressed to any who are trusting in such works as they have ability to render.

The occasion when the heavenly messenger spoke this comforting and encouraging word to the despairing women, was when their devotion had brought them to the sepulchre in which their Lord had been laid. They could not have expected that they should ever again hear his gracious voice; nor could they now hope that he should minister comfort to them in sorrow and affliction, as he had done in the past. Whatever benefits they had received from his gracious hands, there was nothing to be gained now by devotion to him whom they had seen dying upon the cross. Why did they then as soon as the Sabbath was ended, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, come to the new tomb of Joseph, in which the body of Jesus had been laid? Certainly they were not seeking their own advantage, nor could they expect their devotion to be rewarded by his disciples, since they had all forsaken him and fled in that terrible hour of his humiliation under death. It is plain that they expected no help in their mournful work of love. They were seeking only the dead body of their crucified Jesus, that they might affectionately embalm it. What bitterness of grief must have crushed their hearts when they saw the empty tomb! The awful horrors of the week had seemed beyond endurance, when they had witnessed his sufferings and death; but now they could not even have the sad privilege of caring for the sacred body of him whom they so deeply loved. Imagination faints in the effort to comprehend the anguish with which Mary answered the question, "Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away." The weight of boundless sorrow emphasized this agonized appeal. No transient, earthly distress could compare with her intensely painful anxiety. It is known only by those who have endured the same inexpressible agony in longing for the manifestation of the salvation which is found only in the revelation of Jesus Christ as the crucified and risen Redeemer. These characters are oppressed with fear which is beyond the conception of reason; and to them the very angel of the presence of the Lord brings infinite apprehension. But to all such, as to these women, the message is heavenly peace. No subject of this wonderful grace can understand how it is, that the glorious tidings are brought to so vile a sinner as he feels himself to be. But there is in every case such a personal application of the word that there can be no mistaking its power in the deliverance of every laboring, heavy laden sinner, and in giving that rest which is indeed glorious beyond the capacity of the favored saint to comprehend; much less can any language tell the exceeding riches of that unspeakable grace.

"Fear not ye." It should be considered in what need these weeping women were when this assuring word was spoken to them. They had stood afar off, beholding the dreadful agony during the hours when their Lord hung upon the cross; they had seen the tomb closed over his dear body; who can imagine their distress as the weary minutes of that tedious Sabbath dragged along? The stony sepulchre where his sacred flesh was laid was not heavier than their despairing grief as they recalled every tender memory of his divine love to them. As soon as it was lawful for them to go where their sorrowing hearts directed their steps, they were at the sepulchre prepared to anoint the loved body with which was buried all their comfort and hope. But now they remembered the great stone which covered the entrance to the tomb. Knowing their own weakness, with what sad perplexity they said among themselves, "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?" Not only were they conscious that their strength was inadequate to the task of removing the barrier, but the Pharisees' seal and guard forbade that they should remove it. Well might they be amazed at the discovery of the open and empty sepulchre. The trembling earth attested the omnipotence of that hand which had so paralyzed the puny keepers, as the very great stone was rolled away without the aid of earthly power. "And, behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it." No imagination can conceive the appearance of this messenger of God. The weakness of reason pictures him in the form of a mighty man; but there is no revelation authorizing such a conception. As when in Horeb the Lord spoke to his national people, they heard the voice, but saw no manner of similitude, so in his victorious triumph over death and sin, his power is displayed, but there is no likeness of anything which is tangible to natural understanding. At the will of our God terror strikes his enemies dumb and helpless; and it is not needful that the angel of his presence should use any effort. This is signified in the record that he sat upon the great stone which he had rolled back from the door. The opening of the sepulchre had not overtaxed the power which was commissioned from the throne of God to bring again from the dead the body of the Redeemer. In the personal experience of every saint this victory is revealed. When they have been brought to the very lowest state of utter despair under the death which sin has wrought in them, the angel of divine grace appears for their deliverance, and the great stone of legal condemnation is rolled back for the manifestation of the resurrection life of Christ by which all his people are justified. This gracious work of God is the voice which says to every mourning sinner, "Fear not ye!" Never was this cheering message spoken in vain. While they know not how such love and mercy can embrace them in their conscious vileness, at the sight of that grace which is then revealed they rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. The light of the Sun of Righteousness cannot be obscured by all the weight of guilt and condemnation. Jesus speaks the life-giving word which has power to deliver them that are appointed unto death. Nor is there any conflict between the love and the justice of God. The immaculate holiness of his throne is not stained by the deliverance of his people from their sins. So it is written, "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before thy face. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance; in thy name shall they rejoice all the day; and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted."—Psalm lxxxix. 14-16. It is the very same justice of our God which condemns sin as exceeding sinful, which also justifies them who believe in Jesus. The attributes of divine perfection are not opposed to each other. In the salvation of his chosen people the love of God is not more glorified than his justice and his truth.

"For I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified." There is sweet assurance to the troubled and fearful saint in the remembrance that no weakness and ignorance on his part can deprive him of the encouragement which is contained in the heavenly message as here written. The ground on which the saints are forbidden to fear, is that God knows their most secret desire. Looking into their own hearts they can read only condemnation; but "God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things."—1 John iii. 21. However the cruel doubt may be suggested that he is not really governed by the love of God, this encouraging word is applied by the angel of the Lord in due time to every saint when he is tempted to despair, "Fear not!" No assurance from mortal lips can bring such life and rest as this precious word of the Lord spoken by his Spirit in the heart of the tried saint. But the important question with each one is, Am I included in this soul-cheering word of the angel of the gospel of our God? The description given in our text contains the answer to this momentous inquiry. There is no room for fear in the case of any who "seek Jesus, which was crucified." None can desire to find the crucified Jesus unless they are led by that love of God which is the fruit of his Spirit. The selfishness of the natural man may wish to "die the death of the righteous;" but only the power of the grace of God can make a sinner wish to follow in the footsteps of that Jesus which was crucified. Very many professors of religion claim that they seek Jesus in his exalted glory; but there are few who wish to follow him in the way of affliction and poverty, in which he leads those who are drawn by his love. Those who seek Jesus which was crucified, are not looking for him among the kings and great men whom the world honor. They must go where these mourning women in their grief were drawn by the power of earnest love. Taking up their cross, and following in the way of self-denial, they must come to the sepulchre. Only "Jesus, which was crucified," can satisfy the longing which draws those who are moved by divine love. Their hope of salvation rests in the perfect atonement which was rendered by the one offering of himself without spot to God. They could not find comfort in their mourning for sin, even though they should see Jesus as the glorious Lord of heaven and earth, unless they could know him as their crucified Redeemer. For "Without shedding of blood is no remission."

Let every mourning sinner be comforted in the fact that the angel of the Lord knows that he seeks that "Jesus, which was crucified." Not one who bears this mark has occasion to fear the infinite justice of God. The sins of every member of his body were borne by Jesus when "he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death." Then they have occasion for rejoicing in the presence of the angel of divine justice; for their answer to every demand of that inflexible law is that "Jesus died and rose again." The assurance that the divine law has received its full payment on the part of every one for whom Jesus died, is attested by the fact that the eternal God "raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; who was delivered for our offenses, and raised again for our justification. This is conclusive on the point that justice demands the deliverance of every one for whom Jesus died. But the anxious disciple wants some evidence of his personal interest in that great salvation. He confesses that his condemnation is just; and he can see no way in which he can be delivered without violating the holy requirement of the law of God. It is not possible that such a sinner can see the angel of the Lord without terror; for he knows and loves the justice which condemns him. But he now hears the comforting voice of that angel, saying, "Fear not!" With this word comes the ground on which he hears the living commandment of the Lord. "For I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified." None ever were left to perish in whom the grace of God had implanted this seal of the Holy Spirit. He does not seek Jesus as a means of obtaining divine favor. But the necessity of his case compels him to cry unto the crucified Savior as his only hope. Unto every sinner who has been thus cut off from all dependence upon his own works for acceptance in the sight of God, this angel of the Lord will speak the same joyful word which was spoken to these sorrowing women, "Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified." This consolation never comes without the further announcement which follows our text, "He is not here; for he is risen, as he said." This revelation produces such unspeakable joy as is never known from any other message. It is not of this perishing earth; it comes directly from the glory of God to each individual subject of eternal, electing love. It makes the very bitterness of affliction a heavenly privilege to the saint who is led by the Spirit of God to seek that Savior who was crucified and made a curse for us, that we might be cleansed from all sin in the fountain of his own blood, which was shed for the remission of the sins of all who come unto God by him. As they are partakers of the fellowship of his suffering and death, so they shall also be exalted with him in the eternal glory of his throne. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ enable all who hope in his salvation to walk as children of the light. In tribulation and affliction may we ever be found patiently "Looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of God."

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscriptions to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

PLEASE COPY.

WE frequently receive articles, especially obituaries, which we are requested to ask other publications to "please copy." This we do not like to do for several reasons. In the first place, we are not willing to omit original matter to copy from other papers; and we do not like to ask other publishers to do what we are not willing to do ourselves. Besides, there are a large number taking the SIGNS who also take other papers, and to all such the copied articles would be stale.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Chemung Old School Baptist Association, convened with her sister church at Otego, Otsego Co., N. Y., June 14th, 15th and 16th, 1893, to the churches whose messengers we are, sendeth christian salutation.

DEAR BRETHREN IN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST:—Sixty-one years ago a convention was called in the state of Maryland for the purpose of considering the innovations which had for some time been creeping into the churches known in those days as Particular Baptists. This meeting resulted, as we all know, in their withdrawing themselves from all those who advocated the new and false doctrines then becoming manifest. Being determined to "follow the Lord fully," they separated themselves, not regarding the reproach or persecution which might follow. This meeting occurred September 22d, 1832, and is known as the Black Rock Convention. Since that time the Particular or Old School Baptist Churches of the United States have separated themselves from those who walk disorderly, and teach for doctrines the commandments of men.—Matt. xv. 9. Judging from the Minutes of that meeting, and what was at that time published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and comparing them with what is now held as scriptural truth by Old School Baptists, we may safely say that the churches have not departed from the doctrine of Christ our Savior.—Titus ii. 10. They believed in "the existence, sovereignty, immutability, omnipotence and eternal perfection of the great Jehovah." The Old School Baptists of the present day believe in the same God, with all his glorious attributes and perfections; and his ministers preach that he is the only true and living God. "Holy and reverend is his name."—Psalm cxi. 9. They believed in the absolute predestination of all things, and in eternal, unconditional election. The Old School Baptists of to-day believe in the comforting doctrine that God worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, and that his children are safely secured in his eternal purpose for their salvation. They still preach that his counsel shall stand, and that he will do all his pleasure. They also believe, as it is written, "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved."—Eph. i. 4-6. They also fully believed in the oneness of Christ and his church. That which is commonly called "eternal vital unity of Christ and his bride" is now fully believed and preached, much to the comfort of the tried and peculiar people of God. They still maintain that Christ gives his sheep eternal life, and this life is without beginning or end; and that "both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren."—Heb. ii. 11. They believed that the atonement and redemption of Jesus Christ was for the elect only; and so it is still held that Christ came to save his people from their sins. The "glad tidings" is still preached that Christ has "by one offering perfected forever them that are sanctified." It is recorded in the Lord's prayer to the Father, in the seventeenth chapter of John, "As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." It is also still preached that salvation is a finished work; as Christ said, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."—John xvii. 4. "The total depravity and just condemnation of all men; the sovereign, irresistible, and in all cases effectual work of the Holy Spirit in regeneration and quickening the elect of God; the final perseverance and eternal happiness of all the sons of God by grace; the resurrection of the dead; the church composed of baptized believers; and that to her are given able ministers of the New Testament," all of which was held by our fathers in Israel of sixty-one years ago, is still firmly believed by the saints of the present day. But, dear brethren, however much we may reverence our fathers, or respect their opinions of truth, it is of far more importance that we have our belief founded on the eternal Scriptures of truth. We trust that Old School Baptists have long ago discarded the idea that old opinions and traditions must necessarily be true because of their age. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. viii. 20. In tracing the history of the church of Christ it is comforting to know that the Holy Spirit in all ages has led and taught the children of God the same eternal truth, and has given them in this our gospel day the certain assurance that salvation and redemption is by grace alone in Jesus Christ.—Rom. iii. 24. Now, dear brethren in the Lord, in bringing this letter to a close we desire to say that the doctrine held by Old School Baptists, which has the sacred Scriptures of truth for its foundation, is the only doctrine suited to the condition of the poor and afflicted people of God. Believing as we do that our God has designed these truths for the comfort and upbuilding of Zion, we shall, as God gives us ability, endeavor to maintain them, giving him all the glory of our salvation, and praying that he may continue all his elect steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship.—Acts ii. 42.

B. BUNDY, Mod.

MOSES HURLBUT, Clerk.

(Continued from page 211.)

never bring reproach upon the blessed doctrine of Jesus, but that he will keep me by his grace, and enable me in my daily life to have a godly walk and conversation; for of myself I can do nothing. By the grace of God I am what I am.

During the time I was so troubled about my sinfulness I attended a Methodist protracted meeting. I saw my schoolmates uniting with that church, and they wanted me to go with them very much. I felt as though I could not do that, and it would sometimes trouble me, as I feared they would think I did not believe in anything that was good. I thought how they would smile upon me if I would go with them, and such feelings and thoughts as these would come over me. Yes, they would smile upon you, but God would frown upon you; and I felt I would be more sinful than ever if I should go with them. One of the members undertook to push me up in front to the preacher; but I would not be pushed. On the second Sunday in last August I was there to meeting again. As I went in the Sunday School had just commenced. I took a back seat, for I felt as though I never could recite in Sunday School again; for one man cannot teach another to know the Lord. I know that by experience. I looked around at the preacher and at the people, and thought, O how can you be so deceived? How can you believe the doctrine that is taught here? Then these words came forcibly to me, as though some one close by me had spoken them, "If it were possible, they would deceive the very elect." I then felt that the Old Baptist Church was indeed the true church, and that if there were only one there that believed the truth as it is in Jesus, there was where I wanted to be, even if the world does think we are old-fashioned, and that we believe such a terrible doctrine, and that there are such a few of us. But if God be for us, who can be against us?

I am afraid this long letter will try your patience to read it; but I felt as though I wanted to tell you of what I hope the Lord has done for me, unworthy though I be; for I know that in my flesh there dwells no good thing. If I have written anything that is not christian experience you will do me a great favor by telling me of it. I hope to hear from you again soon. If we hear from each other this winter I think we will have to write, for I have little hope of getting to Lebanon this winter. I will close with love and best wishes to all.

EFFIE. M. VAN HORN.

BURDETT, N. Y., May 26, 1893.

MY DEAR SISTER FRANCES A. BROME:—I am still on God's footstool, and through his mercy I am in quite good health. Though my vigor is not quite equal to what it was five years ago, as to endurance, my step is still alert, and my limbs are as limber as ever they were. All I lack is strength to endure the taxes I once imposed on them without fatigue; yet I am able to walk pretty well even yet. I walked eleven miles in a day last October, and at another time I walked ten miles in a day, without harm to me—only just giving enough tire to create in me a sense of pleasure while resting.

I am not certain whether I owe you this letter, or whether you are already in my debt; yet I am rather of the opinion that I wrote to you last. Perhaps I might not have written to you so soon but for the fact that Mr. Stephen Banks always inquires about you, "Mary Jane and Abram," when I see him, and always asks me to remember him to you when I write. Any message to him that you may wish to send I will cheerfully convey to him. I told you, I think, that his two sons, M. T. and S. E. Banks, were seemingly the principals in a large hardware store. One they call Morris, and S. E.'s first name I do not know. He is away now, but his name stays in the firm. I am told by outsiders that he is employed as a private secretary to a banker in Ithaca, twenty-two miles away. They are all respectable people.

I have nothing of interest to say to you about spiritual matters pertaining to myself. I am still drifting, though stationary in my habitation for nearly a year and eleven months. You will understand by this that I am resting on a sand-bar, in expectancy of a wave from God's hand that will carry me farther down, and cause me to rest on another bar in the current, as shall please him. Wherever I am God has taught me to be content; and I therefore wait his moving providence in complacency, believing that God will order all things for his own glory and the best good of them who love him. I am better edified here than I was before I came here in attending the meetings, and in holding social converse with brethren. Our preacher, C. H. Bogardus, would chide me if I called him a great man; yet his discourses are satisfactory, in that he bases the election of God's people on the testimony of the Bible, responded to by the helpless condition known and felt by all whom God enables to see themselves in the light that radiates from God's majesty, showing the immense distance that man is from him by nature—only understood through touches of holiness breathed into our souls by the Spirit of truth. Jesus is the way, the truth and the life; and having Jesus in our hearts, we know and feel the truth. Hence by God's own will we are "begotten with the word of truth," as the apostle James tells us; and I feel that it is true. Reasoning myself into the belief that I am a sinner, and then again reasoning myself into a hope in Christ, till the Spirit touches me with his love in assuring emotions that blot reason out with my tears, leaves nothing for reason only to receive my sense of its worthlessness, and bidden to hide its ugly head in assuming to be my helper, as if a small string could hold a giant oak from falling after being chopped off at the root!

Of the many communications that appear in the SIGNS (nearly all very good), it is no disparagement to the rest that I mark those of brother Silas H. Durand and those of brother F. A. Chick among the best. The editorials of brother Wm. L. Beebe are also very good, and never wrong on any fundamental point. On some minor points, not worthy to be mentioned, I did not agree with his father, as I do not with him; but never a thought of controversy arises in me about them. It is among the things about which one may be "fully persuaded in his own mind," since they involve not the doctrine of human inability to raise out of nature into a gracious favor with God, and an acceptance in our Lord Jesus Christ. Where any work of the creature is credited with efficacy in saving God's people from their sins, it casts a doubt on my mind whether or not "reason" is the sole fabricator of their faith who allow any credit for it. I am sure that I was never the author of a work in my life so free from sin as to be divested of all damning deserts. My best works have no more saving power in them than my worst ones; but when the Spirit of holiness thrills me through I feel it to be the Spirit of Jesus in me, sent by the power of omnipotence, and nearly always at a time when I am not supplicating it. It comes as the voice of the wind waving the tree-tops, and is as far from my control as the wind is. Sometimes it breathes all through me in the night, both when I wake and when I sleep, and is a glorious earnest of an inheritance that is incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Yet, in spite of this, I am sometimes dull, stupid and sad; not so much because I doubt God's work of grace in me, as the desire to be made reconciled in all things to God, and to drink in the pleasures again that have so sweetly touched my soul when at times God has blown the wind of his Spirit on me "as he listed;" and I want to be made thus glad again and again.

I have just read the correspondence between brother Benton Jenkins and brother Brink, of Shushan, N. Y. I know of no more precious brother than brother Jenkins, and I rejoice in the precious benefits derived by brother Brink through his able and honest pen. I hope he may drink in a little of the spirit of meekness that enabled the prophets of old to prefer poverty and destitution to forsaking of the truth, or, as Jeremiah, to go into the stocks and a dungeon rather than turn his back upon the truth. "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted?" said Stephen, when about to be stoned; and which of the aposles (save John) died not a death of violence for the truth's sake? Still God does not ask so much of us in these days. It is only poverty and reproach and mockings by worldly-wise men of our day, who "think gain is godliness," and only needs to be coveted while we live, and bestowed as a legacy on them who come after us.

Here I must stop, for I have written twice as much as I intended when I began. My penmanship is poor, but I can write faster than I could a year ago, because my hand trembles less. I have labored at this continuously since I began, and have not arisen from my seat. Perhaps when I come to read it I shall find it hotch-potch. But never mind; you know my age and my inability. Please write soon, and inform me of any news concerning your relatives. I visited your cousins in Elmira last July. They are nice people, and doing well in business.

Yours in the Lord,

W. B. SLAWSON.

BEVERLY, Ohio, May 7, 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed please find a communication written by brother Thomas Cole, which, if it suits you, please publish. Brother Cole wrote it to me with the understanding that I was to send it to you for publication.

Yours in hope,

MINNIE B. MATTHEW.

ROYALTON, Ohio, April 30, 1893.

DEAR SISTER MINNIE:—I reached home last Monday evening, found all in usual health, and so this leaves us. Nothing unusual has taken place, though sun, moon nor stars have been hidden most of the time, and seldom and short are the times with me when the sea is hushed to a calmness, and a faint form of the fourth is discerned, as it were, through the lattice.

All the experimental people of God live in a wilderness while traveling through this world. To the natives of this wilderness we are strangers. They cannot understand Zion's language, and the pure testimony cannot be given in any other; for the Lord says, "I will turn unto them a pure language." Neither is Zion's language to be used in defense of their laws. As of old, an impregnable wall separates the two people. Many have been the attempts to do away with differences, and all unite. As of old, they still say, "Come, let us build together; for we worship as you do."—Ezra iv. We will even "eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel." Of old Israel sometimes fell in with them, but God's sword punished them for disobeying him; and from the time of the foolish Galatians until now God's people fall asleep on their watch-tower, and confer with flesh and blood, and for a time "observe lying vanities," thereby forsaking their own mercies. Knowing that we are in an enemy's land, and that a state of war exists all the time (no peace having been declared between the original kings since the war was first declared—see Genesis iii. 15), we can expect nothing else from the enemy but efforts to destroy or annoy us. This is best accomplished by their wearing sheep's clothing; but of them beware! One of the attempts of the enemy has been made through the doctrine of means and instrumentalities. When this is made to look plausible the door is at once opened that admits all the men-made machinery to be used; and as man has sought out many inventions, there is no end to the supply or demand; and as they all cost money, there is no cessation of the cry, "Give! give! The Lord loves a cheerful giver," &c. The "temperance" question is also brought into service to seduce God's children. It is like the gospel Paul speaks of, which is not another (for there is but one gospel); but there were some that would seduce the disciples. I will here notice somewhat an article on the subject published lately in an Old School Baptist paper without comment by the editor. It would be difficult indeed for me at least to fully portray the evils of drunkenness, or for that matter of many other evils in the world, nor could I fully describe the blessings that would result from temperance in all things; but I cannot ally myself with every scheme invented by man to destroy the one or advance the other. For instance, the North-western Christian Advocate, in 1885, said editorially that intemperance must be put down by the sword if it took a million men, a five years' war, five billions of money and a Lincoln. All such men are "drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink." Of such material were all the persecutors of christians of old made, and to this end would come all the modern schemes of temperance, so-called, did they fully mature from bud to flower and fruit, and the law and the sword be put in the hands of its advocates.

The article above referred to starts out in the first column of said paper by saying that "Evil is sin and wickedness." About twenty years ago I knew a minister to declare publicly that God was the author of sin; that he compelled men to sin, &c. To prove it he took for a text Isaiah xlv. 7: "I make peace, and create evil." He said that there was no difference between evil and sin; but sickness and sores and plagues and pestilence are evils, and the Lord sends them upon nations.—See Amos iii. 6. Job says, "Shall we receive good at the Lord's hand, and shall we not receive evil?" Farther down, second column, it is called (all that will intoxicate, I suppose) "accursed staff." This would include the wine that the Savior made, and the wine that Paul reproved the disciples for being drunken on.—See 1 Cor. xi. 21. Also the all kinds of wines that Nehemiah had prepared for him among other things.—See

Neh. v. 18. Solomon says, "The glutton and the drunkard shall come to poverty, and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." Are we to call food "accursed stuff" because some eat too much? Or shall sleep be forbidden because we or others indulge in it too much sometimes? The use of wine is nowhere in Scripture forbidden when used in moderation; and the ancient Israelites were told to buy wine, or strong drink, or whatever their soul lusted after. Again, "The love of money is the root of all evil." But because this is so shall money be banished from the world? Polygamy obtains in many places; adultery is common in all countries and among all classes. Shall we, to cure the evils, adopt the plan of the Egyptians with the Israelites? This would certainly be effectual. Shall we ignore the heaven-appointed marriage relation because there are some that are not true to their marriage vows? Yet all I have referred to would be consistent with the plan which some advocate to avoid the evils attendant upon immoderate drinking. Then some one asks, What must be done to put away the evils of intemperance, make mankind good, and bring on the Millennium, as some have it? I answer, No human law can be made to reach every crime against God or man. We are amenable to God for every sin, open or secret, and he will bring every work into judgment, whether good or evil. Human law can reach no farther than we are personally injured by our fellow-man. The law was made for transgressors. To eat and drink immoderately is wrong to ourselves. That alone does not injure our neighbor, and it is none of his business, though he may and should pity us, and try to persuade us out of a wrong course; but the moment we injure him, and not before, we must satisfy the law that protects him, whether we are led to injure him through our intemperance, or through the workings of an evil spirit while free from drink. Just here let me say that our greatest criminals are generally, very often, at least, men who do not drink. I would further say that any law that would prevent adulterations in either foods or drinks would suit me; and also, when men become imbeciles through drink or any other cause, and incompetent to provide for their families or themselves, let them be provided for by the law, and a just punishment meted out to all venders of opium or adulterated foods or drinks, who deal out to those who are known to use them injuriously.

Should any of my words meet your mind, copy off, should you wish, omit what you think should be, and use as you may see proper. Much more I might have written, but all in the same line of thought. Let me hear from you soon.

Your brother,

THOMAS COLE.

SANDUSKY, Ala., June 18, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We are fast realizing that "Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble." We have but two sons; the eldest will be seventeen years old in July. He dressed and left home on the fifth Sunday in January, as was common for him to do. His employer at Weeping Water, Neb., wrote his sister about two weeks ago that he was gone on a trip to the Black Hills, in Wyoming Territory. His room and bed and clothing that he left look like the remains of the dead. He knows not nor feels our long sighs and desolation. We schooled him and gave him the best moral training that we were competent to give, and his prodigal career is a mystery. This shock and suspense we thought was enough for us to bear, but our burden was increased by the sickness of our married daughter near by us. She was lingering and failing when our son left, and for three months past much of our time and sympathy have been with her, and much of the time we thought (and she felt it too) that she would have to go hence. She gave directions for her burial, and instructions for her two little boys, aged two and four years. She is some better now, but is paralyzed in both hands and feet, and unable to help herself up or down. She is still a subject of great care, anxiety and suspense with us. These heart-rending incidents still keep me shut up at home, so that I have only been to the church of my membership three times this year.

I drove out last Sunday to the union meeting of the colored brethren of our order. They have a church of fifty or more members in the vicinity of Pratt City. They have some unnecessary peculiarities, but the principles they set forth are sound, and I heard some things that did me good all the week. This church belongs to an association a hundred miles farther north. From what I could gather in their discourses they have had a little jar about this much-despised predestination. Those I heard seem to have both feet square on the Rock, and they speak much of the unity of Christ and the church.

I have heard of some good meetings at some of the churches of our association, and it tends to increase my desire to go and get some of the strengthening food that is dealt out to the flock by the servants of the Lord. None of our servants here have gone to the earthly mills of men to get any food ground for the saints, but depend upon the Lord to prepare it; and they freely deal it out as he sends it down, and I believe it is the best.

During my close environment at home the SIGNS has come to hand each week, and brought many words of comfort to me. There have been many good things written in it this year. It seems that as it grows older it grows better. I think we all should appreciate it, and exert our best efforts to maintain and sustain such an appropriate and cheap medium of correspondence for the poor and afflicted, troubled and tried children of the Most High. By this convenient medium a few moments' writing can be conveyed to different parts of the earth, and our joys and sorrows be made known to thousands of our kindred in Christ, and congratulations, promptings, approvals and sympathy come bounding to us from a long way, from many we never saw in the flesh; and we are comforted, strengthened and encouraged often when cast low down in the pit of trials and humiliation. By your courtesy and indulgence to publish some of my poor scribbling in the SIGNS I have received many letters of approval, inquiry and condolence from those I never saw. It has done me much good, and I am not able to remunerate the writers with anything that would compare with their words to me.

Except a great many copies loaned and given away to introduce the paper, I have the SIGNS on file since 1876. I am willing to leave them for all that desire to read when I am gone from these trials and afflictions. I know not how long that may be, but I believe the time and way is appointed by him who "created all things by Jesus Christ."

There was something of a preacher clubbed and robbed and left for dead about two miles east of my house two weeks ago. He revived, but before the truth could be fully known the rumor spread over Pratt City, and for miles away, that it was me, killed and robbed. It caused no little stir and anxiety among my friends and relatives, and until late the next day runners came to learn if it were true; and for a week, now and then, one from a distance would call to learn the facts. I told them, "My time is not yet fully come." There are thousands of people who do not believe there is an appointed time for man upon the earth, that "There is a time to be born and a time to die," and "a time for all things;" but the Bible says so, and I believe it.

But I must close; I only intended to write a little of my troubles. If you deem this fit to print I hope that all who read it may be prepared to sympathize with and pray for me and mine.

P. J. POWELL.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

READ AGAIN.

WE have tried to impress on our subscribers' minds the fact that under no circumstances can we continue a name on our list longer than the end of this year, 1893, that is sent on with their own subscription, in accordance with second and third paragraphs of last supplement, dated April 12th 1893.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Chemung Association, in session with the church at Otego, Otsego Co., N. Y., June 14th, 15th and 16th, 1893, to the several associations with which she corresponds, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED:—Our God, whose mercies never fail, has granted us another opportunity of meeting in love and fellowship, and we have felt to say, "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." We have been favored with the presence of a goodly number of ministering brethren from abroad, who have faithfully proclaimed the gospel of the grace of God, to the comfort of our souls. We earnestly desire a continuance of your correspondence, which has been so pleasant and encouraging to us, in the receipt of your Minutes and messengers, which we greatly appreciate, and with which we are in full fellowship; and while we greatly admire the christian spirit which you have manifested toward us, we desire and solicit a continuance of your correspondence.

Our next association is appointed to be held with the church at Cammal, Lycoming Co., Pa., on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday before the third Sunday in June, 1894, when and where we hope to meet with your messengers as in the past.

B. BUNDY, Mod.

MOSES HURLBUT, Clerk.

APPOINTMENTS.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please publish the following appointments for Elder J. G. Eubanks, of Kentucky:

Riker's Hollow, N. Y., Thursday, July 6th; May's Mill, N. Y., Friday, 7th; Burdett, N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, 8th and 9th; Grover, Pa., Monday, 10th; White Church, N. Y., Tuesday, 11th; Osborn Hollow, N. Y., Wednesday, 12th; Otego, N. Y., Thursday, 13th; Brookdale, Pa., Friday, 14th; Waverly, Pa., Saturday, 15th; Justus, Pa., Sunday, 16th; Shohola, Pa., Monday, 17th.

D. M. VAIL.

ELDER W. R. Welborn, providence permitting, will fill the following appointments in Texas:

Acton, 1st and 2d of July, 1893; at brother Preston Staggs, 3d, at night; Weatherford, 4th; Mineral Wells, 5th; Zion Hill, 6th; Poolville, 7th, 8th and 9th; Garrett's Creek, 10th and 11th; Springtown, 12th and 13th; Silver Creek, 15th and 16th; Joshua, 21st, 22d and 23d.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days' meeting will be held at Hughesville, Loudoun Co., Va., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July.

Trains leave Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., 4:35 and 5:30 p. m. The p. m. trains will be met at Hamilton Station, for which point all will buy tickets, on Thursday. The a. m. train will be met at the same station on Friday. Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to attend.

E. V. WHITE.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS" ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1893.

NO. 28.

CORRESPONDENCE.

STATE ROAD, N. C., June 2, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I herewith inclose the experience of our dear young brother, A. C. R. Morgan, of Texas, for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I have his consent to publish it, and I feel like it would be of much comfort to the readers of the SIGNS. I have read it over and over with much comfort.

I am, as ever, your little brother in a precious hope,

WM. R. WELBORN.

WEATHERFORD, Texas, April 19, 1893.

ELDER WM. R. WELBORN—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Yours of the 15th inst. was received yesterday evening, asking for Minutes of our association. I send you by this mail a copy of our Minutes. We are not in correspondence with any association. By reason of some of our peculiar views, some brethren cannot walk with us, and have declared non-fellowship for us. Even though that is the case, we go on trying to discharge our duty, believing that brethren should walk together humbly, and bear with each other as with the weak lambs of the fold.

When I received your letter yesterday evening I felt that probably I might write you a long letter; but being without a subject I do not know whether I can write anything that would be of any benefit to you or not. It would afford me pleasure to be able to write anything that would be of any comfort or consolation to any of the wayworn children of God. I am a poor, unworthy child of God, if I am one at all. I am a weak servant, and poorly qualified to minister to the saints; but God, who I hope has revealed his love to me, has also given me a desire to speak in his name. Unworthy as I am, I feel the command enjoined upon me to speak comfortably to Jerusalem, to cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, and that she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. I do not try to preach because I am afraid somebody will die and be eternally lost; but it is my desire to speak of the love of God for the members of his body—that love which makes our poor hearts rejoice, and enables us to realize that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace are ye saved), and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." My dear brother, even though we are unworthy and sinful, we can glean a little comfort from the above declaration of the apostle. We can look at the ways that we have transgressed, and wonder that we have not long ago been cut off as cumberers of the ground; but when we contemplate the forbearance and tender mercy of God, we can rejoice that it is indeed true that his love centers upon his children at all times and under all circumstances. Indeed, as the poet says,

"We'll talk of all he did and said,
And suffered for us here below;
The path he marked for us to tread,
And what he's doing for us now."

Brother Welborn, I have read your writings in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES ever since I was a child. I am young yet, only twenty-three years old. I will try to give you a relation of my travels in the christian life, if I have had any. I was surrounded by religious influences from my earliest recollection, but I do not look to that as having anything to do with my deliverance from the bondage of corruption. I often had serious thoughts concerning death and the future state when I was a little child, and would wonder what would become of me after death. I would think, It may be I will be saved, and I may be lost. My mind would be filled with fear, but the thought would always come into my mind, Surely God will not damn me. But these thoughts were of short duration.

When I was thirteen years old, as I was going to school one morning, here in Parker County, my mind was caused to dwell on my past life. My thoughts ran thus: I have been sick many times, have been in dangerous places, have always been weak and sickly; why am I spared? Is it because I am good, or ever did anything meritorious in the sight of God? No; for I can see no good in myself. Am I spared on account of some good thing I shall do in the future? No; for I see from the deceitfulness of my heart that nothing good can proceed from me. Then why am I spared? Surely it is to see how far I will go into sin. This caused a trouble which I had been a stranger to. I desired to be a christian, but knew not how. I longed for the peace of the children of God. O that I could be happy and contented, as the christian, resting calmly and peacefully on the promises of God. I believed that the promises of God were strengthening to those for whom they were intended, but that they were not for me. How miserable I felt! O how I longed to be led by the still waters of his grace, and to lie down in the green pastures of his love. My burden was great; and what made it trouble me more was that I could not understand what was the cause of my trouble. I believed that salvation was the work of the Lord, and that with my deceitful heart I could do nothing toward my eternal salvation. I suppose one reason I believed that was that my parents were Primitive Baptists, and I heard a great deal of talk about salvation by grace alone, and the depravity of human nature. The brethren would sometimes visit us, and it was a great pleasure to my father and mother to meet them, and talk about the good things of the kingdom, the trials of the christian life, and the certainty of the salvation of all the elect. I always loved to sit around and hear them talk. I did not understand their interest in these things, but I loved to listen to them. I had great respect for their opinions, and thought they were right, even though I could not understand them. My father used to read the Bible every night, and had us children to read with him; and I have heard him talk with Arminians on the plan of salvation, and I believed that whatever he said about the Scriptures could not be successfully contradicted. Therefore those circumstances might have caused me to believe that I could do nothing to deliver myself from sin. Then my cry was to God for mercy. I do not believe that the surrounding circumstances I have mentioned caused me to have any interest in the blood of the Lamb, nor that they could affect it in any way. Many tell us that such doctrine is the cause of many poor souls going to hell. My dear brother, it seems to me that it is a safe doctrine for any one to believe. Believing that, from what I heard the Primitive brethren advocate, and also from the view I had of the deceitfulness of my heart, I was compelled to look to a higher power for help. I saw my helpless condition, and felt that I was a great sinner, without hope and without God in the world. I believed that God must first bring the sinner under conviction, by causing him to mourn for his sins, and then make him rejoice by removing his burden; but I thought I was so wicked that God could not have mercy on me, and that I was so insignificant that he would not notice me. Then did I mourn, because I feared that I would not be made to mourn as a penitent sinner whom God designs to bless. I could not realize that it was divine light that showed me my impotence in delivering myself from the load that pressed me down. As I did not realize what was the matter with me, I did not get down on my knees to try to pray; but the breathing of my heart was a desire that God would remember me in his great mercy. With David, I desired that he would give me a clean heart, and create a right spirit within me. Being a child, I would try to shake off my gloom by going into childish sports; but that would afford only temporary relief. When the fun would be over the gloom would settle around me with more weight, and my trouble seemed worse than before. Finally I concluded that there was no mercy for me; but at a time when least expected my burden was gone, I know not how. I was sitting on the floor in my father's house, not thinking much about my condition at the time, when a calm came over me, rested in my very being, something seemed to leave me, and I felt at ease. The thought flashed through my mind, It may be that my sins are forgiven. A joyful and calm feeling was mine for some time. I then wanted to hear christians talk, to find out if they had ever experienced what I had. Not that I wanted to judge them by myself, but I wanted to know if my travels were like those of a christian. I realized that the things I once loved I now hated, and the things I once hated I now loved. I soon began to speak to my companions of what I had experienced, and it was soon noised about that I had received a hope. I did not know whether to claim it as a hope or not; but I did know that my burden, which had weighed me down for about a month, was gone, and I was enabled to rejoice in the assurance that all was well. I told my oldest brother (now deceased, and I am sure that he is asleep in Jesus; and how near he feels to me, having been the companion of my childhood) that I would not give the peace of mind which I had lately experienced for the world. Soon doubts and fears came, and I was again troubled, but not as before. In my experience, from first to last, I find that God is my only support. I could not remove the burden which first came upon me, neither could I drive away the doubts and fears that assailed me.

I joined the Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church on the 13th day of June, 1886, being in my seventeenth year. From the time I first received a hope I felt impressed to speak in the name of Jesus, who had done so much for me. I desired to tell to sinners round what a dear Savior I had found. Time would fail me at present to tell of all my trials and troubles concerning my impressions to preach. In October, after I joined the church, after a brother had preached I arose and spoke from the text, "For no man ever yet hated his own flesh," &c. I talked about twenty minutes. I never made another attempt for nearly a year. Then I never tried any more for nearly three years, when I felt that I could not refuse to obey any longer. I was nearly always in doubt as to whether it was really my duty to preach or not. I felt unworthy and unable to speak in the name of Jesus. If I could know beyond a doubt what my duty was, I thought I would be willing to do it. Finally I felt that it was better to obey than to sacrifice, and to hearken was better than the fat of rams. So in fear and trembling I have been trying to preach occasionally for nearly three years. I have had my troubles even in preaching, sometimes making an entire failure. In November, 1890, I was liberated by the church to preach the gospel wherever God in his providence might cast my lot. In November, 1892, I was ordained, and called to the care of Zion Hill Church, in this county. I generally try to preach about three times a month. I do not feel that I am much benefit to the church as her pastor, but I desire to be found trying to discharge my duty to my brethren.

Now, brother Welborn, probably I have written too much, but if I have trespassed on your time forgive me. I feel that this letter does not amount to much, but if you should glean the least comfort from it you know who deserves the praise. When God's children are fed by us, poor servants, we are only the humble instruments.

I remain your unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,

A. C. R. MORGAN.

WESTCLIFFE, Colo., April 9, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Were it not for the evidence I frequently have received that my letters which have been published in the SIGNS at intervals have been comforting to some of God's dear children, I feel that I would never trouble the editors or readers with any more of my poor and imperfect letters. Often when I am low down in the valley of doubts and fears, and the light of the blessed Savior's countenance seems hid from me, I take up my pen and write to some dear and esteemed brother or sister whom, perhaps, I have never seen in the flesh; writing the most bitter things of my sinful self; telling how wicked and deceitful, and what a filthy sink of sin my heart is. It would seem that no one could draw comfort from such; yet I have received many very comforting letters in reply, such as the inclosed, which I have just received from one of God's poor and afflicted ones. I desire you to publish it in the SIGNS, for I have no doubt it would be comforting to some of God's afflicted poor who are readers of the paper. When I received this letter from this poor and sorely afflicted brother, I felt ashamed of my murmurings as to my poverty in earthly things. Although I daily desire the Lord to reconcile me to his will and all the dispensations of his providence with me in this time world, yet often do I murmur and complain, even with blessings in my hand; while many of God's creatures are in body, if not in mind, sorely afflicted, as this dear brother Crask is. O how thankful I ought to be that it is as well with me as it is. It is declared that the Lord doth not afflict willingly. As brother Crask has said, "Is there not a cause?" But our finite minds cannot grasp or comprehend the cause why any of the creatures of earth should be so sorely afflicted as is this brother, sister Mary Parker, and many others. There is no doubt but what many of the Lord's afflicted ones often inquire, Why do these afflictions come? Job, that servant of the Lord, whom the Lord declared to be a perfect, upright man, none like him in all the earth, said, "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground." He fully realized that his sore trials and afflictions were from the hand of the Lord. David, a man after God's own heart, was sorely afflicted. He prayed, "Lord, remember David and all his afflictions." The Lord by the mouth of the prophet Isaiah says, "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction." The apostle Paul says that tribulation is an inheritance of the people of God. If we could in all our afflictions lay aside our natural reasoning and murmurings, and consider what great trials, afflictions and temptations our blessed Savior endured for us, we could, like David, draw comfort in afflictions, and more fully realize the blessedness. These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. "For I reckon," says Paul, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." In our natural reasoning we seem to forget that we as creatures of God are made subject to vanity, and are ready to murmur and complain at the dispensations of God's providence when tribulation and afflictions come upon us as chastisements, of which all the children are partakers. If ye be without chastisements, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." I feel to admonish brother Crask, and all the sorely tried and afflicted ones, to cast all their cares upon Jesus, who in all their afflictions was afflicted; and remember that if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. Sometimes I conclude that there is no creature of earth that is so often sorely tempted as I am. But O what a great comfort it is to know that my blessed Master was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. He, being tempted, knoweth how to succor those that are tempted. Were I able to devote every hour of my remaining time upon earth to praising God for his goodness and mercy toward me, and particularly for the blessed hope he has given me that he has for his dear Son's sake pardoned my many sins, I would fall far short of rendering the praise due his holy name. Praise the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name; for his mercy endureth forever.

Yours in a blessed hope,

J. H. YEOMAN.

SIX MILE, Ill., March 25, 1893.

MR. J. H. YEOMAN—DEAR BROTHER:—If such an insignificant, sinful and totally depraved creature, as I know myself to be, may claim such a relationship, and that with a total stranger in the flesh, and also one that, I presume, is far my superior in every way. I am, through the goodness and mercy of God, and the kindness of brethren and sisters, a reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. While perusing its delightful pages I found a letter with your name at the bottom; and you say you firmly believe that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is a God of purpose. My dear brother, according to my little sense I believe that as much as you do. What particularly arrested my attention was, you said you had often inquired of the Lord what his purpose was with you. I want to ask you what purpose he had in placing such a creature as me on earth. But, my brother, is it not right? "Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?" God said he raised up that wicked king Pharaoh for a purpose; and I believe he answered the very purpose for which God intended him; and that was for the purpose of showing forth his power in him. I have thought that perhaps this was the design of the good Lord in letting such a miserable wretch as me live in the deplorable condition in which I am. I have sometimes thought that eternity itself would be too short to punish such a wicked old sinner as I have been, and that my punishment had to begin here in time.

While you were speaking of God as being a God of purpose, several passages of holy writ passed through my mind; and knowing myself to be such a wretched sinner, I thought I would have been classed with those scribes and Pharisees spoken of in Matt. xxiii. 33, "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" I have often thought, Can it be possible there is anyone so wicked as me? It does seem that my thoughts are only evil, and that continually. My heart is desperately wicked above all things, and who can know it? There are two passages in the Bible that are consoling to me at such times. Of course there are many blessed promises to the christian throughout the entire Scriptures. But the question with me is, Am I a christian? Paul writes to the Corinthians thus, "Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, through the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ, both theirs and ours." I understand the saints that constitute that church are the subjects of address throughout the entire letter. Then we turn to the sixth chapter of this epistle and read, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."—1 Cor. vi. 9-11. Only think what poor, fallen man may be guilty of. The blessed Jesus says, "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men."—Matt. xii. 31. In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established.

I shall take the privilege of calling you brother; for I believe I know just as well what you believe in a spiritual manner as if I were with you; and, my dear brother, why is it so? While reading your precious letter and believing in the God of purpose, the words of David came into my mind, when Saul was fighting the Philistines. Jesse sent David down to see how his two brethren were faring, who inquired what he had done with those few sheep in the wilderness. They were angry with David, and he said to them, "Is there not a cause?" I am as strong a believer in cause and effect as you are in purpose. I do not believe there can be an effect without a cause to produce it; but we do not always know the cause. You say you are away out there in that (to you) desolate and forlorn place. Is there not a cause for your being there? You spoke of the situation of your church, and how the Lord blessed you for a time, and you were made to rejoice and sing as the birds in spring. But the winter must come as well. You know "the Preacher" says, "There is a season and a time to every purpose under the heaven. A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to break down, and a time to build up." There is nothing new under the sun. "Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity." "Vanity and vexation of spirit." Is there not a cause?

I thought when I began to write, I would give you a short history of our little church; but I fear it would make this scribble too long, unless I could make it more interesting. Our church is either dead or sound asleep. I think they have almost quit meeting at all. We have an ordained minister, and another brother that prays in public. Our preacher is getting quite old and feeble. I have not been to our meeting in almost three years. You are ready to say, "Is there not a cause?" You think you are in a destitute place; but I doubt if it is much worse than this. The church-house is on the same forty acres of land that my dwelling is on. You will be surprised when I tell you that I have not averaged one meeting a year for nearly seventeen years. The SIGNS and some other good reading furnish nearly all the preaching I get. You say you are very poor financially; so am I. My dear brother, is your health good? If so, do not complain, for health is better than riches. My wife and I went to two associations last September (the Skillet Fork and Bethel), and we did have as good preaching as ever I heard. If you can have patience to read a little more, and my arm does not give out so that I cannot write, I will give you a little of my history. I am now living in a little town on the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis Railroad. It seems to me one of the most God-forsaken places on earth. Once in a great while one of our preachers stops here on my account. In October, 1854, I was struck down very suddenly with what the doctors call rheumatism, and until January following I never walked without a crutch. But I got around again, although badly crippled in my left knee, and could work on the farm. Thus I went on until November, 1876, when I was again prostrated, and since then I have not been able to do an hour's work. I have been lying on my back from that time till the present writing, and can lie in no other position from one year's end to another. I lay on a little bed or lounge which they could carry until about four years ago, when I got me a large rolling and reclining chair. The front wheels are thirty inches high. When the roads are dry they roll me to meeting. About ten years of this time my wife has had to feed me. I am almost as helpless as a dead man. I cannot move myself in the chair, nor have I stood on my feet for about fifteen years. I am as stiff as a log. You could carry me by the head and feet as you would carry a log, as I will not bend. You might set my victuals on my lap, and if no one gave them to me they would set there until I would starve. My arms are drawn so that they lay across my breast, and my fingers are as stiff as the penholder I am writing with. I suppose you are wondering, as I cannot feed myself, how I can write. My chair is reclined far enough back to have a light board lay on one arm of the chair and on the other wheel, so as to lay across my breast. I can just barely put my right hand on my head, and the left one I can just raise to my mouth. I cannot even take a drink of myself. Can we not well and truly say, "Is there not a cause?" Every line I write causes me intense pain. My brother, if a man has health he ought never to complain. I have been lying here going on seventeen years, and to-day my greatest desire is to be reconciled to the will of God, and to every dispensation of his kind providence. I could write page upon page more, but it would be like this—nothing in it to interest or edify or comfort anyone, let alone the little, doubting christian. I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwells no good thing. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Dear brother, when it goes well with you remember me, a poor, old, afflicted sinner. There is nothing in this scribble to ask you to answer; but I would be glad to get a letter from you; and if you would rather write me through the SIGNS all will be right. You may dispose of this in any way you see fit.

Yours in hope of a blessed immortality,

JAMES CRASK.

RINGGOLD, La., Jan. 28, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I will send you a letter written by my grandfather, which I would like to see published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

JOHN L. THOMAS.

NEAR RINGGOLD, La., June 4, 1878.

THE object of my writing at this time is to express some thoughts upon the words in Romans viii. 20, "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." It has been a matter of much inquiry to know who "the creature" is. Some forty years ago I often heard a certain man preach, who was not very entertaining, and he was almost sure to quote that Scripture before he closed his discourse; but he never told who the creature was, and left his hearers to judge for themselves. Finally it got hold of my mind, and I found myself not a little bothered to determine to my satisfaction its meaning. I began to ask questions of those whom I thought ought to know; for at that time I really thought that a man who had been preaching for ten or twelve years knew all that was worth knowing. But right there I learned a lesson, and that was that one man did not know it all. None of whom I made inquiry gave me any satisfaction. One day while at work on my little farm the matter came up before me, to show reason why I could not or would not receive the ideas of those I had talked with on that Scripture. A great many seemed to believe that the creature was the first man Adam, who was made subject to vanity, not willingly. My reason for not receiving this view was, first, that if Adam was made thus subject to vanity, not willingly, he must have had a will in the matter, while I conclude he was made without his will or consent in any sense of the word. He was neither willing nor unwilling. But we find him here a creature of God; and being a creature, he was imperfect; for no creature is perfect. He was made just, upright, good, but not perfect. Perfection alone belongs to God. Nothing, however good or powerful, can make its equal. So we find in Adam at the first imperfection; though imperfection is not sin, but the cause of sin, or the door through which sin entered. Had he been perfect he never could have sinned. But in this imperfect state he received of God a law, as a rule of life to govern his actions, and was made acquainted with the penalty of its violation. For a while there seemed to be a spirit of obedience; or at least he kept the law for a while. But the woman that was created in him, and received the law in him, being deceived, went into transgression; and she being flesh of Adam's flesh, and bone of his bones, he loved her, and it could not be otherwise; for it never was known that a man hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it. Adam's love now being not only as strong as death, but stronger, he had no power to resist the principle of love. So we find that he was captivated by it, and became a willing transgressor. Thus we find that he was not only subject to vanity, but was willingly so. I do not think it would do to be otherwise. The first Adam is the figure of the last Adam, and must necessarily be a willing transgressor, in order to be the figure of the last Adam, who was a willing sacrifice. So I do not consider that the first Adam was the creature mentioned in the text, that was not willingly subjected to vanity.

Then where is he to be found? Not among the sons and daughters of a fallen parent as they stood relative thereto; for we find that there is none that doeth good, no, not one, but are all subject to vanity, and willing so to be, and which their actions abundantly prove; for when the infant comes to years of maturity, so as to know what is morally right and what is morally wrong, it of choice does that which is wrong, acting out its nature, and proving its willingness to be subject to vanity.

Some have concluded that the creature that was made subject to vanity, not willingly, was Christ, the Son of God, in his humanity; because he prayed the Father that the cup might pass from him, if it were possible. But it seems that in the same breath he says, "Not my will, but thine be done;" thus showing his willingness to become a sacrifice for the sins of his people; to be "made sin for us, who knew no sin;" to bear our sins in his own body on the tree of the cross; "that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Herein the love of God is manifested to us, that Christ should leave the climes of bliss and glory willingly, and come to this world to suffer, bleed and die; thus proving his willingness in all his actions to do the will of the Father, which was that he should die for the sins of his people. So I consider that it was not Christ in his humanity that was made subject to vanity unwillingly.

By this time, perhaps, some may think that if it was not the first man Adam, nor Christ in his humanity, nor any of the sons and daughters of a fallen parent as they stand related thereto, that is the creature spoken of in the text, it must be hard to find that creature. But I think he may be found in all such characters as Paul addressed when he said, "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in times past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved)," &c.—Eph. ii. 1-5. Now it appears that these Ephesians in time past had been dead in trespasses and sins, but were now quickened, made alive, dead to sin, alive to holiness. That creature that had been made dead to sin, and made alive to holiness, would be free from sin; but he finds that he is subject to vanity; yet he would not be so if he could help it. It is not

(Continued on page 221.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 12, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE THRONE OF GRACE.

"LET us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Heb. iv. 16.

Among all the various theories of religious doctrine which are entertained by the children of men, there is none but that either in express words or in its necessarily implied conditions, rests upon the principle of grace. Without the recognition of existing just condemnation already pronounced against the race of man as violators of the divine commandment, there would be no occasion for mercy being extended to any of them. Certainly there can be no salvation from sin and its consequent death, unless sin and death have dominion over those who are the subjects of that salvation. There is no revelation given of the mercy of God embracing any other character but sinners who were by nature the children of wrath. Indeed, it is impossible that those who are free from condemnation should be the subjects of saving grace. Nothing but justice could appear in their being pronounced guiltless. The very principle of mercy involves the absence of everything which could commend its recipient to the favor of justice. When the law has been honored by the obedience of its subject, there is no mercy in that sentence which acknowledges the perfect service thus rendered. Where there is no sin found in the subject of the law, there is simple justice in the judgment which pronounces him free from guilt. Therefore it is only in the salvation of those who are justly condemned that mercy can be displayed. In the sense in which the word is used in the Scriptures, grace is revealed in the deliverance of guilty and hopeless sinners not only from the penalty due to their transgressions, but also from the sin by which that penalty was incurred. The power of God alone can extend that grace by which sins are forgiven. In civil law there is provision for the remission of the legal penalty in the clemency of the authorized officer; but the guilt of crime cannot be removed by earthly powers. Hence in taking away sins it is exclusively "The grace of God that bringeth salvation."

"Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace." By the word "therefore" in this clause the fact is shown that this is the conclusion which results from what has been recorded in the preceding connection. The Spirit moved the writer to present the testimony of Jesus as typically set forth in the legal priesthood of Aaron. Then he declares the superiority of the priesthood of Jesus the Son of God who is passed into the heavens as the living High Priest, whose intercession is unceasing and can never fail. This effectual Intercessor is not one who is ignorant of the needs of those for whom he ministers, and consequently "which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." There could be little encouragement to look for deliverance to the intercession of such a priest as could have no sympathy with the distresses of those for whom he was rendering sacrifice. But when it is known that our Advocate and Intercessor not only thoroughly understands our case, but has a personal experience of all points in which we have need of that grace which flows from the throne where he "ever liveth to make intercession," there is sweet assurance by which we are enabled to commit our every care into his hand, and to rest in the confidence that he does truly care for us. As has been shown, none but the guilty can be interested in the justification which is by grace; therefore the exhortation not only speaks to sinners, but is confined exclusively to those who are conscious of their just condemnation. It would seem marvelous that the throne of grace should be accessible to such polluted rebels; but when they are favored to "come boldly" to that throne there must be infinite fullness of love and mercy bestowed upon them. Reason can account for this only upon the ground of merit found somewhere in the subjects of such amazing favor. But the word of our text excludes such an understanding. No worthiness could authorize a suppliant to come boldly unto the throne of grace. Only the abundance of mercy and grace could be the warrant for such boldness. Even though there had been a possibility of rendering acceptable obedience to every demand of the law, there would have been no ground for boldness in that servant who had done what was his duty. No faithful performance of duties could have given freedom (or, life) to the obedient character. After years of unceasing labor in compliance with the demands of the holy law of God, there is nothing less required than perfect and perpetual obedience. The very mountain on which the law was given to Moses shook with terror attending that typical display of the holiness of God. Certainly no mortal can ever come boldly to that awful expression of condemnation and hopeless despair. But the text presents another refuge for the saints to whom it is addressed. It is not an appeal to everybody to come unto the throne of grace; the very language of our text limits the exhortation to those who are included with the writer as the people for whom Jesus the Son of God intercedes as their High Priest and Advocate with the Father. None would suppose that any Gentile was entitled to participate in the benefits of the offerings made under the law for natural Israel; those sacrifices atoned for only those whose names were graven in the breastplate worn by the High Priest. Nor did the chosen mediator under that dispensation dare to come into the holy place without the garments and the breastplate which God had expressly commanded. It was not his privilege to insert the name of one Canaanite, or Edomite, upon that sacred tablet which God limited to the tribes of Israel. On the other hand, not one of the chosen tribes of Israel could be left out of the list of those for whom he must intercede. In the antitype, Jesus has by one offering perfected forever them that are sanctified. He did not wear the glittering symbol borne by Aaron as signifying the limitation of his atonement. All for whom he died are written in the heart of his eternal love. Since he is the life of all his members, they were all dead with him when he died for all of them. "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead."—2 Cor. v. 14. Being thus identified in the death of their Head, the subjects of electing love are no longer under the law, since it can claim nothing more of them after it has been magnified in taking their life. Now they have access into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the vail, that is to say, his flesh; and having a High Priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water."—Heb. x. 19-22. Here is shown whence comes the boldness by which the saints are enabled to come unto this throne of grace. Only by the wonderful abounding of that grace which is bestowed upon them in Christ Jesus can they draw near to the throne. To no others is the throne itself revealed; much less can any come unto that throne except they be drawn by the Father. The very same grace which establishes the throne, and the love which opens this new and living way of access to the Father, is revealed in drawing every one who comes unto God by this way. None are drawn by selfish motives, nor by the will of the flesh; the love of God is shed abroad in the heart of every one who is drawn by the Father; and all such come willingly and of necessity, boldly and tremblingly, fearing and rejoicing. The boldness wrought in them by this Spirit of Christ never tends to presumption. The greater their boldness the more perfectly are they made to understand their own vileness; hence they who most abundantly glory in the grace of God always most painfully confess their own utter unworthiness of the privilege bestowed upon them by divine grace.

"That we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

In this clause there is manifestly declared a radical difference as to the object in coming to the throne of grace, from the motive by which all will-worshipers are actuated in their religious devotions. While there is necessity that the poor and helpless subjects of divine favor should "obtain mercy, and find grace," by which they may be sustained in their unceasing conflict with the evils of this enemy's land, there is no such need felt by any others. Hence, the world of religious adversaries of gospel truth profess no other object in appealing to the throne of grace but that it may in some way secure a reward for them in the ultimate glory of heaven. Having nothing to desire in this world but what they can secure by their own efforts, they are not dependent upon God for help in time of need. Indeed, to them there is no time of need. They have ample resources in their fancied riches of good works. But the inspired writer of the language in our text includes himself with those addressed, confessing that he is subject to the same infirmity with them and acknowledges that they all have to depend upon the mercy of God for that grace by which alone they can be delivered in time of need. The help which is afforded by grace cannot be understood as signifying that the saints addressed could do something toward relieving their own need, and then grace would make up what they might lack of a sufficiency. There can be no combining of the works of the sinner with the grace of God. Even in the revelation of that grace by which our Lord delivers his people from sin and death, he says, "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that be sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Matt. ix. 12, 13. The help of the grace of God is always the complete salvation of those to whom it is given. Those who are lost are the subjects of salvation; those who are so reduced that they have no might are the only characters to whom the Lord increaseth strength. This is the unvarying testimony of the record which God has given; yet the tried saints are often subjected to cruel doubts because they can find no merit in themselves on which to build their confidence in the grace of God. When they are under such darkness that they can find nothing to sustain their trust in the Lord, it is only the infinite mercy which is in Christ Jesus by which they are made to come unto the throne of grace with that full assurance of faith which is signified in our text by the word "boldly." They do not then have occasion to consult a carefully prepared prayer-book in order to find words suitable for their petition. The only worship before the throne of grace is that in which the Spirit "helpeth our infirmities; for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." When led by this divine Spirit the saints never mock God by suggesting their own purposes and designs as something better than the appointment of his own infinite wisdom and love. While they are blessed with that grace which moves them to pray, "Thy will be done," they can never claim that their prayers have changed the "eternal purpose" of God, "which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." To carnal presumption it may seem that prayer is an empty form if it does not cause God to change his design; but to those who know and reverence the glorious perfection of divine wisdom there could be nothing more horrible than the proposal that God should substitute the will of man for his guide, instead of working all things after the counsel of his own will. Certainly such a desire is not expressed in the manner of prayer after which our Lord taught his disciples to pray. The will of God secures the salvation of all whom he has given to our Redeemer; and it is his eternal purpose that none of them should perish, but that they all shall have everlasting life. By that sovereign will it is determined that no weapon that is formed against his chosen Zion shall prosper; but that every tongue that shall rise against her in judgment she shall condemn. "This is the heritage [which is the birth-right possession] of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." Under the clear light of the revelation of the gospel day, Paul wrote as the sure deduction from the intercession of the Spirit according to God, "AND WE KNOW THAT ALL THINGS WORK TOGETHER FOR GOOD TO THEM THAT LOVE GOD, TO THEM WHO ARE THE CALLED ACCORDING TO HIS PURPOSE."—Rom. viii. 28. Satan and all his emissaries have never ceased to dispute this truth since the old serpent deceived Eve; but earth and hell have raged against it in vain. There has never been a time of need when the dear saints did not find grace to help; nor has that help been insufficient for their triumphant deliverance. The Captain of our salvation completely and effectually destroyed him that had the power of death, though to blind reason it seemed that death had triumphed over him. Death and hell are conquered foes, since that glorious victory. Whence, then, shall that opposition come which shall interpose anything that is not included in this sweeping assertion of inspired truth? Until the power of God shall fail there can never be a "time of need" when this grace shall fail to help every one who has fled for refuge to lay hold upon this hope set before those for whom Jesus died. Their deliverance may be through much tribulation. It may be that they are appointed to seal with their blood the testimony of Jesus; but with the glorified martyrs their triumphant songs shall attest the truth that they obtained mercy, and found grace to help in their time of need. They who are called to rejoice in this wonderful grace should never be deceived by the philosophy and vain deceit of carnal reason. When some cavil is suggested to rob the saint of the full assurance of this doctrine the Spirit will not fail to destroy the adversary by reference to the word of inspiration. All the Scriptures confirm the precious truth; and your own experience, dear suffering believer, qualifies you to adopt the words of the psalmist, "The Lord preserveth the simple; I was brought low, and he helped me. Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee."—Psalm cxvi. 6, 7. In this bountiful dealing with his chosen people, the Lord has not only given them freedom from sin and death, but he has made provision for their every need while subject to the tribulation of this present evil world. By his Spirit he has given them acceptance in the righteousness of their Redeemer, who is able to keep them from falling, and to present them faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy. For their support under the trials of their sojourn in this valley of the shadow of death, their God has given them that unspeakable privilege of calling upon him in the day of trouble; they can never call in vain. Upon the glorious high throne of his grace he is ever present to hear the prayer of all his poor and needy suppliants. They can never fail to find this throne, for it is established in the heart of every subject of electing love. Then, there is strong consolation for every helpless sinner in the assurance that divine love has established in Zion this glorious "Throne of Grace." In all their afflictions they have the assurance of the Spirit bearing witness with their own spirit, testifying with the voice of divine truth, and giving them the boldness of unlimited confidence in God. By this testimony they are made free to come boldly to the mercy seat of their gracious Savior, where they always find grace to help in time of need.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

At least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

(Continued from page 219.)

now as it used to be, for once he could roll sin under his tongue as a sweet morsel, or drink it down as the ox drinketh water. For now being dead to sin, he takes no pleasure in it, but would be free from it; but it sticks closer than a brother. When he would do good, he cannot, because he is so subject to vanity. The very things that he would not do, those he does; and the things he would do, he does them not.

Z. THOMAS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 15, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER JENKINS:—Now that the associations are almost over, and the usual excitement attending them is being recorded as things of the past, I feel like having a quiet little brotherly visit with you. Did you ever read a letter with such interest, that you felt to be in the very presence of the writer, and when you finished reading you looked up, almost expecting to see him face to face? I think I had some such feeling on reading a letter from you some time ago. I appreciate such letters as that, and I would love to write you just such a one if I could. But I can't, so you must take the will for the deed, and put up with such fare as, with my limited resources, I may deal out. I have sometimes thought I would like to ask the eunuch what were his impressions and feelings when Philip pounced down upon him so unceremoniously; and after preaching to him the way of life, and baptizing him, departing as suddenly as he came, and utterly disregarding the materialistic mode of traveling. But I feel somewhat satisfied when I remember that it is said, "And he went on his way rejoicing." The consummation of the dealings of the Lord with a poor lost sinner is always rejoicing. When I am cast down, and in deep gloom and depression from doubts and fears, from conflicts with the enemy, or from whatever cause, right in the desert, where the eunuch was, the Lord will sometimes send me a Philip, pointing out to me an open door of deliverance out of my prison-dungeon, the end everlasting life, where in his (Jesus) presence are pleasures forevermore. The angel instructed Philip to "Arise and go toward the south," &c. Don't you think, brother Jenkins, that every message of deliverance from the thralldom of our fleshly lusts comes out of the north country, where is great tribulation, from trials of affliction in sorrow for sin? As the "black horses" in the vision of the prophet "go forth into the north country," and are followed by the "white horses" which "go forth after them," so the conflict in every heaven-born soul is succeeded by the deliverance; and as the angel presents the two phases of the whole christian travel to the mind of the prophet, he says, "Behold, these that go toward the north country have quited my spirit in the north country." In this is the law set forth, having "a pair of balances in his hand;" and its voice proclaims "a measure of wheat for a penny," &c.; followed by the gospel which goeth "forth conquering and to conquer;" each one fulfilling its own mission in the Alpha and Omega of the great and wondrous plan of salvation; all of which is fulfilled in each one of the subjects of the grace of God. The eunuch was "a man of Ethiopia" (who is black), the inhabitant of a dark land. But the light had shined in his darkness, and it had made him an inquirer after truth. He "had come to Jerusalem for to worship;" and on his return toward his own country, he was yet inquiring. He could not understand that which he read; yet that hidden wisdom of the Lord was implanted in him, which told him that the prophet spake not of himself, but of another. But who is that other? Now at the appointed and proper time comes Philip, out of the north country, where through conflict and deliverance the spirit was quieted within him, and he was prepared to preach Jesus to the eunuch; for he had himself been with him; he was able by the power of the Spirit to impart understanding to the wisdom which had already been imparted to the eunuch; and as the eyes of his understanding were opened, that he might see how the righteousness of Jesus is fulfilled in a justly condemned sinner, and having a hope in the mercy of God toward him, he could in his rejoicing sing the song of the bride, "I am black, but comely." Jesus has been preached to him, and still his inquiry goes on. He discovers that "Love is the fountain whence all true obedience flows." Faith points out to him the footprints of his gracious Redeemer, and through love his heart's desire is to follow him; and when he comes to where water is, he asks (still inquiring) "What doth hinder me to be baptized?" How truly honest is the desire of the heart of the true christian. He does not want to climb up some other way, as a thief and a robber; but if he is privileged to enter the sheepfold, it must be by the door (Jesus). There is no other hope of salvation.

I did not intend, dear brother, to write as I have done when I sat down. But I have felt for several days that I wanted to tell you some of the exercises of my mind, how the Lord has led me about, and (I hope) instructed me, during the past several weeks. At times my mind has been entirely barren and utterly unfruitful. I cannot understand my case. "Happy art thou, O Israel! Who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord?" I can echo that song from my heart, regarding Israel. But who am I? Who is like unto me? What claim have I upon the name of Israel? In my feelings I am a stranger to the world; I want not to be conformed to it. I can furnish no evidence that the Angel hath blessed me and called my name Israel. I am stranded upon an unknown shore, alone and cast forth. I want to go forward, but I find myself going backward. "As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." With longing eyes and aching heart I watch for my Beloved, and when he cometh not then do I realize that I deserve to be left alone. So mean and contemptible am I that it is no wonder he hides his face from me. Not long ago he opened to me the door of my inner self, and showed me the bottomless pit of my depravity, deeper than ever I had seen it before; a very charnel-house, a place of unclean beasts. Then in wondrous contrast he showed me himself afar off, pure and spotless, clean and white, a bridegroom indeed, the one whom my soul loveth. I could not go to him. But a little while and he came to me, and his voice was as the dulcimer, sweet and clear, saying, "Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away; for lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, and the time of the singing of birds is come." And then for a little moment my rags, my poverty, my blackness, had fled away as with the wind, and I was clothed in bright apparel, the perfect righteousness of my dear Redeemer. Again I looked for him and he was gone from me. The grass becomes withered, and the flower thereof fadeth away, and my poor soul cries out in agony, "Are his mercies clean gone forever?" Again I am imprisoned in darkness and gloom, and so my days are spent in searching for my Beloved. Often have I to pass beyond the watchmen, for they cannot always tell me where my Beloved is. When you were last here, although my mouth was closed, and I could not say much to you, yet your very presence inspired me with some confidence, because you still manifested confidence in me. It is not idle talk with me, brother Jenkins, when I say I often dread to meet the brethren, fearing I may see a change in them toward me. It is a sad reality. Above all earthly things I want the love of the brethren, and I want to deserve their confidence. If I lose it I lose my all. Lately I think I have listened to preaching different than ever before. Sometimes a word or an expression dropped will fasten upon my mind, and by it I am carried away into a sweet contemplation of the glorious things of the gospel of Christ. At another time the whole subject will take possession of my soul, and I anticipate the words of the speaker before they are spoken. Again it comes as a restful, heavenly talk, in a quiet resting place, where even the song of the birds is hushed, and none but God is near. And O! so often it is as a noise of a language that I do not understand, and not for me. And now, as I sum it all up, I can only say, God is good. His word concerning me "shall not return unto him void, but it shall accomplish that which he pleases." I wish I could say something, my dear brother, that would make you want to hear from me again. But only such as I have can I give unto thee.

Please write when you have time. Affectionately,

B. F. COULTER.

JOPLIN, Mo., April 2, 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—I have been promising myself during the past week that I would write Sunday for the SIGNS. The day has arrived, and most of it is gone, yet I have not been able to select a subject on which I could hope to write instructively and comfortingly. Myself seems to be all I can think of. This is a beautiful spring day, one calculated to awaken poetic and reverent feelings in the coldest and most practical heart; yet I find myself indifferent. How far I have fallen since the following spring after I received a hope in October. I fear I shall never again behold nature in the beautiful robe she wore then. That was two years ago. When the first leaves began to peep out of their winter prisons I wondered how I could have been so cold and heartless as to never before appreciate the beauty of nature. The flowers during that spring had a fragrance sweeter than ever before to me. Nature's colors seemed far more beautiful than those of the most skillful artist. I could see the handiwork of God in everything. Why could I never see this before? I had often heard it argued that nature proves the existence of God; but it had never had such effect upon me. I wondered now that it had not. I had viewed the vast firmament with its countless shining orbs, and turning to earth had witnessed the rise and fall of vegetation; the annual shedding and budding of the forest trees; observed and read of the countless varieties of plant and animal life, and of inorganic matter; yet I could gain from it no knowledge of God; but instead, I ascribed all to evolution, depending partly upon chance, and partly upon supposed physical laws, without author or origin. O how stupid and vain is man! In a state of nature he knows nothing of the real Creator and Sovereign over the universe, but proceeds to set up for himself an idol of his own invention, which he may worship. Truly there are many gods, but only one true God, the God of Jacob; and he is invisible to his own children till the veil of nature is lifted from their eyes. Indeed, man is enmity against God, and delights to break his law. But "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." How is this blind and ignorant man to believe on him of whom he knows and cares nothing? If it were left to his own choice, man's perverseness as the son of Adam would prevent him accepting the most favorable plan of salvation. But thanks to his adorable name it is not so arranged. God knew before he created the first man what was to be the destiny of every individual of his posterity. He knew the darkest and lowest depths to which man would fall, and fixed in eternity the plan of salvation for his chosen ones. It was left to no chance system; nor did he leave it to carnal wisdom or "free moral agency." No. His love was too great for his chosen people to abandon them in the wilderness to find their way out. He does not simply tell them how to escape nature's darkness and emerge into his marvelous light; but he takes them by the hand and leads them out. He opens their eyes that they may see the darkness which surrounds them. Before this they imagined they were already dwelling in the light, and were unconscious of the mighty walls enveloping them in utter darkness. How can a blind man know light or darkness? One who has been blind from birth is as ignorant of light and darkness as he is of colors. True, he has ideas of them, but they are usually as far from the truth as one could well imagine. A still small voice speaks to the lost sinner and tells him of his awful condition. He then realizes that he is in bondage, and grows restless. He groans under a desire to be liberated. If he could only be freed from the condemnation resting upon him, and receive the gift of a new heart, he could become a righteous man, and joy would fill his soul. Jesus does not leave him to work out the debt for himself, but takes him by the hand and leads him out into the light. His eyes being now opened, he can see that the debt is already paid, and his soul is filled with praises and thanksgiving to his Maker. Truly his feet are now upon a rock, and a new song is in his mouth, even praise unto God. He looks back at the dark pit from which he has been lifted, and wonders how he could have dwelt so long there without knowing anything of his surroundings. He now realizes what an infinitely loving and merciful God he has. The workmanship exhibited in surrounding nature inspires him with awe and reverence for the never-erring Builder and Artist. He rejoices in the hope that the omnipotent One who has led him safe thus far will lead him home. Poor, innocent one! He thinks he is free from the monster, sin; and O how his heart sinks when this delusion is first broken. He feels surely he has not been born again, else he would not still be troubled with the old enemy. Renewed assurance comes, just as he thinks he is obliged to surrender his little hope in despair. Again the new-born child of the kingdom is able to rejoice in a risen Redeemer and an imputed righteousness. He is slow to learn that he is yet the same old sinner; but the lesson is repeated until he slowly grasps the true situation, and realizes that all his fond hopes of a righteousness of his own were a delusion. In the case of your humble servant, however, he has to be constantly reminded of this fact. I am constantly trying to put myself under bondage again, and it is seldom that my sins are put away that I may rejoice. If a happy thought occurs to me, the remembrance of my unworthiness soon drives it away. I can only acknowledge that it is just. If asked why he should bestow upon me the least of his favors, I could only say, "Because it seemed good in his sight."

To any of the brethren of Mt. Zion Association or Walnut Branch Church who may be interested, I will say that I have found a company of people near Joplin who seem to worship the same God that they do. It is wonderful how near alike are the views of God's people. How far we should be from falling out over minor points that do not concern the plan of salvation. The church here is called Pilot Grove, and has about thirty-five members. She meets on the third Sunday and Saturday previous. When any of the brethren visit this part of the country they will be welcome should they attend the meeting of Pilot Grove Church.

Yours in hope,

S. W. THOMAS.

DUTTON, Ark., June 20, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS:—DEAR BRETHREN:—I wish to say through the SIGNS, to the many dear brethren and sisters whom I met at the eastern associations, that I arrived home safely Sunday night following the Chemung Association, and found my family all well, except my wife, who has been an invalid for many years. She was much better than I expected to find her, the fever of which she had written me June 7th, having abated, and it is now hoped that she will soon be as well as before she was taken with it. I shall never forget my meeting with those associations. Through all the meetings the precious doctrine of the infinite sovereignty of God, and the salvation of sinners alone by his grace, and according only to his purpose, was set forth with power and ability. This doctrine all of God's people love and rejoice to hear, being taught it of the Lord in their experience. "I have declared and have shown, when there was no strange god with you; therefore ye are my witnesses that I am God."

As the tireless arm of the locomotive bore me homeward through the great states of Indiana and Illinois, looking out upon the fertile fields and quiet homes of the citizens my mind was led to contrast the situation of the church here in this goodly land which the Lord has espied for his people, this land of peace and quietude, with the former ages of turmoil and war, in which his persecuted poor have wandered about in sheep-skins and goat-skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; and I felt confident we are not as thankful as we should be for the glorious privileges we enjoy. Many prophets and righteous men have desired to see and enjoy the blessings we are so unmindful of and ungrateful for, and have not been permitted to do so. Sometimes all Scripture seems to have a prophetic signification. "Behold, I have foretold you all things." "The things that are written in the law and in the Psalms concerning me have an end" (fulfillment). Did David, looking down through the ages, catch a glimpse of the church here, when he said, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want? He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters." May the Lord keep us from falling into the condition of the Laodiceans. The Lord said to them, "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked; I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. As many as I love I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore and repent."

To the many dear brethren, sisters and friends who took so much pains to contribute to my comfort, and to make my visit an enjoyable one, I would say that I hope I fully appreciate their kindness and their fellowship. I feel indebted to them in a sum that I shall never be able to pay. But what shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits? How shall I praise him as I ought, who has blessed me with such brethren and with the precious fellowship of the excellent of the earth? I felt much like a beggar taken from his lowly condition and placed among princes. Who am I, or what is my father's house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? The power of expression fails. Language is feeble. My pen falters. The Lord be praised. Selah.

C. W. ANDERSON.

LIGONIER, Ind., May, 1893.

MY BEST FRIENDS, MY KINDRED:—I have felt so sad and doubtful lately of my acceptance in him who alone saves from all sin, and have longed for some precious promise to drop into my heart, and give me some sweet assurance that I have really been born again. Truly is indwelling sin the plague of my heart; and this fretting leprosy that I must carry while life endures makes the conflict so strong, and my fears so numerous, that while sin strives and bubbles in a thousand forms, the one greatest source of sorrow to me is that there is a principle within that loves it. This knowledge so bewilders me, and makes me such a wonder to myself, that I am ready to conclude my hope is vain and my faith is a shipwreck. This awful waiting time, waiting for the Lord to again restore the joy of his salvation, is such a trying time. If I had not before proved him faithful, I would just now conclude that I could never again rejoice in hope. But I remember other days when such sadness filled my mind; and at a time when I expected it not his light, his free mercies, sovereign acts and sweet visitations, came into my life so powerfully that I was made to exclaim, "Lord, I believe!" He has said, "For a small moment I have forsaken thee." "In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee." I remember, too, that his promises are yea and amen, and never were forfeited yet.

So many of those with whom I must associate daily talk often and much of "progressive religion," and of that "higher life." Of course this seems very foolish to me; for I am more and more confirmed in the belief that it is only "by the grace of God I am what I am," and that religion with me is not so much a progression as a resistance. Indeed, the progress in my case seems a retrograding, a progressing backward. Well might we continually pray, "Lead us not into temptation." So thick are the temptations on either hand that it is nothing short of a miracle that my feet have not altogether slipped. Keeping resisting grace seems just as necessary as that grace which first brought us from nature, and makes us to exult in pardoning love and sweet redemption. The sacrifice of God is a broken spirit, and he will not despise a contrite heart. How easy it is to talk about contrite hearts and broken spirits; but how powerless we are to do in the matter. Unless the Lord keeps our hearts broken they soon grow hard, and our spirits proud; but he breaks the one and subdues the other, and thus are we taught our own weakness and vileness and his power—our baseness and his mercy and goodness. How completely are we taught the truth of the hymn,

"There's nothing within me to merit esteem,

Or cause the Creator delight;
But even so, Father, I ever must sing,
For so it seemed good in thy sight."

In humble hope of eternal rest,
EMMA L. SMITH.

PETERSBURGH, Del., Jan. 29, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—If a word from such a poor soul as I am could be of any good or encouragement to you in your labor for the cause of our glorious Master I would cheerfully give it. I have been a reader of the SIGNS more than thirty years, and have been greatly comforted by the instruction I have received from the contents of its pages.

The Lord has taught me by my own experience that man by nature is dead to all works of righteousness, and that the fountain of all spiritual life and salvation is a free gift of God alone through Christ. My innate sinfulness has been the poison of my life; and were I to be enabled to keep the outward performances of the requirements of the law, the sinfulness of my thoughts would keep me continually under condemnation. Thus we see that Christ is our only law-fulfiller. This knowledge makes the doctrine of free, unmerited pardon precious to me, and is why I love to read our family paper, the SIGNS. If there is anything unsavory published in the SIGNS I am either too charitable or too ignorant to see it so.

J. B. MEREDITH.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEAR BRETHREN EDITORS:—We desire to have a brief notice of the life and death of our beloved brother in the flesh and in the Spirit, E. H. Adams, published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

He was born Feb. 7th, 1824, in Jasper Co., Ga., and lived near the same place until he passed away. He was a son of James and Frances Adams, long since deceased. He was strictly moral, upright and peaceable, even when quite small, and loved by his companions. He was married to our sister, then Miss Julia A. Hancock, Dec. 11th, 1841, and in 1850 he and companion received a hope in Jesus, and were received in the fellowship of the church at Falling Creek on Saturday before the second Sunday in August of the same year, and baptized by the late Elder J. H. Montgomery. I was present on the occasion, and I have never heard a more wonderful experience told than fell from his lips. He certainly had had a clear view of himself as a justly condemned sinner, and the superabounding grace of God in his deliverance. He ever quietly adorned the profession he then made (nearly forty-three years) through all the remainder of his stay here. Of his large family of thirteen children only four survive him, all having a precious hope in Jesus. The others (consisting of two sets of twins) passed away in youth and childhood. He took his bed last Christmas with relapse of "La Grippe," which affected his whole system, so much so that he could rise no more, but grew weaker and weaker, bearing his affliction without a murmur, saying often that it was all right. I never saw such sweet composure before. On Wednesday, June 14th, he passed calmly away, amidst sorrowing ones, to his blessed abode in the realms of the just made perfect. I had the pleasure of visiting him several times during his affliction, and to be present when he fell asleep in Jesus. I tried to comfort the bereaved ones at his funeral, by the request of the dear family, in the use of the two short sentences in the thirty-third and thirty-fifth verses of the eighth chapter of Romans: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?"

May God's mercy be extended to the dear sorrowing ones of the family, and to all the afflicted of his household, is our longing desire and prayer, for his dear name's sake. Amen.

WM. ADAMS.

COVINGTON, Ga., June 30, 1893.

Leah Cole, my mother, died June 21st, 1893, of schinous cancer on the right breast, covering a surface of more than one hundred square inches, aged 86 years, 7 months and 2 days.

Her maiden name was Peters, and she was born in Noodle Dusa (now called Manchester), Maryland. She came to Ohio in 1812, and was married to my father, Broad Cole, in 1827. Mother never made a public profession of a religious kind, but was a lover of Old School Baptist doctrine, and had a warm attachment for the old and tried soldiers of the cross who boldly carried the banner of free grace during the great departure from the faith in 1830—1840 in our part of the country. She seemed possessed with a spirit of discernment, and in advance of even some ministers and old members of the church. She looked with much distrust upon certain ones who afterward "went out from us, because they were not of us," of the ministerial part especially. In the lesser departures of later years in doctrine and practice she manifested her love for the old paths, and looked with regret upon any innovations that occasionally seemed ready to manifest themselves. Though her sufferings were undoubtedly great for several weeks before her release, she uttered no word of complaint, but said it was God's appointed way to remove her from time—that it was all right and just; but she hoped that time might hasten, if it were the Lord's will, and that if taken to eternal rest it would be of God's goodness, but if otherwise it would be just. At about the time the spirit took its flight the face, which all along had been an index of pain, suddenly changed, and a sweet smile spread over it which was carried to the grave. No doubt some sight celestial occasioned that pleasant appearance; and of all sweet smiles, that on the face of the dead seems to me the sweetest. Truly, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

After a short service at my house, where she died, she was laid away to await the call at the great day.

THOMAS COLE.

ROYALTON, Ohio.

ORDINATIONS.

At the June meeting held with the Sulphur Fork Church, Henry Co., Ky., June 24th, 1893, after preaching by Elder J. G. Eubanks, proceeded to business.

The report of the Building Committee received, stating a settlement in full of all accounts to date for repairing the church-house.

Motion was made by H. S. Chilton, and seconded by J. B. Turner, to call for the ordination to-morrow at ten o'clock of our brother and licentiate, JOHN H. FISHER, to the full work of the gospel ministry, as he expects to move to the state of Texas.

The church unanimously requests brethren of sister churches to be present to aid us in counsel.

No further business.

The church adjourned.

J. G. EUBANKS, Mod.

E. F. RANDELL, Clerk.

THE council called for convened according to arrangement at the Sulphur Fork Church on Sunday morning at ten o'clock, June 25th, 1893.

Elder J. G. Eubanks was chosen Moderator, and E. F. Randsell Clerk.

The following churches were represented with brethren:

Mt. Pleasant—Dr. C. F. Dudley.

Cane Run—Elder P. W. Sawin, Deacon W. T. Humston, B. F. Chilton and J. S. Turner.

Providence—B. F. Pyles, Henry Pyles and H. T. Pyles.

On motion, the church stated that she was ready, and the council proceeded at once to the ordination.

On motion, brother H. S. Chilton was appointed mouth for the church.

The candidate related his experience and call to the gospel ministry.

Prayer by Elder P. W. Sawin.
Laying on of hands by the presbytery.
Charge by Elder J. G. Eubanks.
Right hand of fellowship extended to the candidate by the members and council.

The council requests the SIGNS OF THE TIMES to publish the proceedings of this meeting, and other papers of the same faith and order to please copy.

Elder John H. Fisher's post-office address is Collinsville, Grayson Co., Texas. On motion, the council dissolved.

J. G. EUBANKS, Mod.
E. F. RANDELL, Clerk.

APPOINTMENTS.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please publish the following appointments for Elder J. G. Eubanks, of Kentucky:

Riker's Hollow, N. Y., Thursday, July 6th; May's Mill, N. Y., Friday, 7th; Burdett, N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, 8th and 9th; Grover, Pa., Monday, 10th; White Church, N. Y., Tuesday, 11th; Osborn Hollow, N. Y., Wednesday, 12th; Otego, N. Y., Thursday, 13th; Brookdale, Pa., Friday, 14th; Waverly, Pa., Saturday, 15th; Justus, Pa., Sunday, 16th; Shohola, Pa., Monday, 17th.

D. M. VAIL.

ELDER W. R. Welborn, providence permitting, will fill the following appointments in Texas:

Acton, 1st and 2d of July, 1893; at brother Preston Staggs, 3d, at night; Weatherford, 4th; Mineral Wells, 5th; Zion Hill, 6th; Poolville, 7th, 8th and 9th; Garrett's Creek, 10th and 11th; Springtown, 12th and 13th; Silver Creek, 15th and 16th; Joshua, 21st, 22d and 23d.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days' meeting will be held at Hughesville, Loudoun Co., Va., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July.

Trains leave Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., 4:35 and 5:30 p. m. The p. m. trains will be met at Hamilton Station, for which point all will buy tickets, on Thursday. The a. m. train will be met at the same station on Friday. Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to attend.

E. V. WHITE.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 1893.

NO. 29.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SONG OF MOSES AND THE LAMB.

Revelation xv. 1-3.

"GREAT and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

These are the words of this most wonderful song. It is not a mere declaration of truth which has been recognized and admired by the mind, but a song. The truth thus expressed has come into the heart with power, has broken the bonds of darkness and death, and made the captive free; has been felt as life—a life of holiness and purity, and as the source of true and lasting joy; and therefore the expression of this truth from the heart that has thus experienced it must be a song. Every ray of this truth which lights up the heart makes melody there unto the Lord. This is the song which is sung by the Lord's people "with the spirit, and with the understanding also."

Why is it called "the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb?" Because it is one song, the song of salvation by grace, which is taught both in the law and in the gospel, but which is not set forth so as to be understood in its fullness and perfection by either without the other. Moses does not sing one part of the song, and the Lamb sing the other, and so make one song of the two parts, as bass and air, but each one sings the whole of the perfect song; and yet both must be singing the song before the fullness of its power and melody can be understood and felt in the heart. Moses sang of the greatness and marvelousness of God's works, and the justice and truth of his ways, before they were fully made manifest. Jesus sang of them after they were brought forth into the view of his people. Moses presented the truth of God's work in type and shadow, while the Savior presents the glorious reality. One sets forth the way of salvation in a perfect pattern; the other shows the salvation itself. One looks upon the city from a distance; the other as having come unto it. Moses was faithful as a servant over the house of God, and did not fail in one particular to make all things according to the pattern shown him in the mount, and that pattern embraced everything which appears in the gospel reality; for says the apostle, "We speak none other things than those which Moses and the prophets did say should come." Not one jot or tittle of the law administered by Moses failed of fulfillment.

All the elements of the perfect song are in the commandments and ceremonies of that legal dispensation which Moses ministered in that house "as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after," though the riches of the glory of the song were not to be made known until the Lamb of God should come and sing it in the midst of the church. Twice Moses sang the song openly, in words which were inspired by faith to express what he then saw by faith; and the very words of the song of praise which were used then, when he saw the Lord's wonderful work from the banks of the Red Sea, and when he looked forth from the end of the wilderness journey into the promised land, are most suitable words now to sing of the delivering power of God in bringing his people out from the Egyptian bondage of sin, and from the fiery wilderness of the law, into the precious liberty of the gospel, to enjoy the rich provisions of his grace.

And who sing this song? Those who have "gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name." The beast and his image and mark and the number of his name must represent all organizations and manifestations of error, with their power over men. If the victory over these were obtained by reason of any power or work on the part of men, then they who had gotten the victory would be engaged in singing of their own works; but those who have this victory were the willing captives of error, not knowing it as such, nor having any inclination to oppose it, until they were made alive to see their condition as sinners before God, justly condemned. From that time they were in such a position with reference to sin that every movement they made to strive against it only sunk them deeper in its horrible pit and miry clay, and manifested more fully its power over them. To deliver themselves from the just condemnation of the law was not merely a work too great for them, as to lift a rock would be too great a work for a child, but it was impossible in its very nature, as for a camel to go through the eye of a needle. It is impossible for a man to make the guilty innocent, or justify the ungodly. He could sooner make a bad tree good, or a corrupt fountain pure. "With man it is impossible; but not with God. With God all things are possible."

Jesus did this work when he died. He put away the sins of all his people by the sacrifice of himself, and washed them free from every stain. His death cleansed them. "He that is dead is freed from sin," having paid its full penalty. In his resurrection he raised them to stand forever in his own eternal life, which was never under the power of death, and never can be. In this life they stand forever justified, having been redeemed from the law by his death, and now living in Christ, over whom death has no power. He lives in them; he is their life. When this wonderful work is wrought in them it fills them with joy and gladness, but also with wonder and amazement. It is great beyond the reach of their comprehension; and it is also mysterious, so that they cannot understand how it could be. It seems such a contradiction that a sinner should be just and holy; yet they are made to feel that it is true though they cannot understand it. But as it is more and more opened up to them in their experience, and shown by the testimony of the Scriptures, they have to acknowledge with joy that the ways of the Lord are just and true. Those, and those alone, who have experienced this victory over sin by faith in Jesus Christ, ever get the victory over error in any of its forms. This same faith that shows them the Lord's great and marvelous works in their salvation from sin, also shows them that all the works of men are vain; and when they can see the Lord's ways to be just and true, they see all the ways of men to be false, and the end thereof the ways of death. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

These are represented as standing upon a sea of glass mingled with fire, having the harps of God in their hand. Many different positions are presented in this wonderful book of Revelation as occupied by the Lord's people, to set forth and illustrate figuratively some special experiences and characteristics. Thus they are presented as a definite number from each of the tribes of Israel, standing with the Lamb upon the mount Zion; and many important and wonderful descriptions are there given of them as the elect of God, and as followers of Jesus. Again, they are seen as a great multitude that no man can number, standing before the throne, looking alone to the power of God, having come out of great tribulation, and washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb; thus representing the purity and holiness of that walk which is by faith. Again, they are presented as a woman clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and a crown of twelve stars upon her head; thus showing the church risen above the law, which has been fulfilled, clothed with the righteousness of Christ, and directed in her doctrine and order by the light of the apostles as judges.

These figures, or picture representations, are all wonderful, and full of meaning, instruction and comfort when shown us by the Angel who showed them to John. The one now before us is one of the most wonderful. A sea of glass mingled with fire! A company of people that must be innumerable standing upon it! What does this mean? Why are they who have gotten the victory over sin and error represented as standing on such a foundation? Why can only those who are in such a peculiar situation sing this peculiar song? What we have already considered seems to intimate the answer to these questions.

We read, as one of the blessed things declared by the prophet concerning the gospel, that "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." There is no knowledge of the Lord in the world except in the chosen vessels of mercy. The Lord gives to them the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, and they "have this treasure in earthen vessels." To know the Lord "is life eternal." The words that Jesus speaks to his people are spirit and life. Whenever the dear Savior speaks a word of promise to a poor sinner there is something of the revelation of the Father in that word. The Son reveals the Father to whom he will. Whenever that revelation is made there is a divine power and fullness in it. There is felt in it something of the wonderful love of Christ which passeth knowledge, and the wondering soul is "filled with all the fullness of God." We may not be able to think or understand very much, but that cannot hinder us from being "filled with all the fullness of God." Only a feeling of divine love is required, for "God is love; and he that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." It is in a peculiar way that this knowledge of God fills the earth.

It is "as the waters cover the sea." How deep the sea is! How many dark caves and terrible deep places are down there, filled with dangerous and loathsome creatures! But the water covers them all; and the surface of the water reflects the sunlight, and gleams with beauty. Deeper than the depths of the sea are the depths of wickedness in our deceitful hearts. "Who can know it?" The deeper the line of God's searching truth goes down, the greater the depths of depravity that are found, and the more terrible the corruptions that are brought to our sight, filling us with distress and fear; but when the precious word is spoken to our souls that shows our sins forgiven, and reveals Christ as our righteousness and salvation, that word fills us with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. It covers all that depth of wickedness from our sight; and instead of that awful darkness we now see the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, as the light of the sun is reflected from the waters that cover the sea.

But here they are standing on the sea. The word of grace which has been spoken to us, and which has filled us with the knowledge of the Lord, is the foundation of our hope, the foundation upon which we stand. Peter could say, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." The Savior pronounced him who had this knowledge blessed, and declared that the revelation of it was from God alone; and then declared, "Upon this rock I will build my church." This rock is Christ revealed. There is no rock where there is no revelation of Christ. The knowledge of Christ causes an experience of the foundation of God. So the word of this salvation, the precious word of love spoken to our souls by the dear and precious Savior, is the foundation shown to us, and we stand upon it; our hope is built upon it. "Remember thy word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope."

But the sea upon which they stand is a sea of glass. Standing upon a sea of glass, we could not see anything below the surface, however great the depths might be. All that would appear to our sight would be a reflection of what was above. We should undoubtedly be looking down if we stood upon such a place; and so the Lord's people are a down-looking people, even when their desires and longings and prayers are most urgently and pressingly upward, because, like the publican, they can see no reason in themselves for the mercy and grace they are pleading for. But looking downward they see all the glory of God; yet they see only themselves as reflected there, standing in the glorious light of the Sun, whose glory covers the heavens. "We all, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." It is only as in a glass that any one ever does behold the glory of God, either in the law, which justly condemns the sinner, or in the gospel, which shows God "just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." In other words, all the knowledge that any one can have of God is what is revealed in his own experience. It is here only that he sees the wonderful works of God. When one sees that the law justly condemns a sinner, it is because he feels himself justly condemned; and when he sees how a sinner is saved through the death and resurrection of Christ, it is because that salvation has been wrought in him. Thus as he sees the glory of the Lord in the gospel, it is as in a glass, reflecting that glorious work in his own heart; and so he is said to be changed into the same image that he looks upon, from the glory of the law to the glory of the gospel.

It is thus that these who have gotten that victory, which is obtained only by faith, the gift of God, are represented as standing on a sea of glass, which reflects the fullness of God's work in themselves, filling them with wonder, love and praise.

But this sea of glass, this word of salvation which has been given to them as the foundation and ground of their hope, shows them not only in the light of the Sun, as clothed with his righteousness, but it shows them their own infirmities, transgressions and sinfulness. It shows them their inability to think a good thought, as of themselves, or feel a pure emotion, or speak a right word, or do a holy act. It shows them that in themselves, that is, in their flesh, there dwells no good thing, and that without Christ they can do nothing.

This sea of glass is therefore said to be mingled with fire, which steadily consumes all the vain works of the flesh as fast as they are produced. The same word which shows us our inability to produce one good thing from our vile and depraved nature, becomes a fire to burn up all that proceeds from that corrupt source. "Is not my word as a fire?" saith the Lord. There is a constant effort on our part to place upon that foundation something produced from the flesh, as hay, wood, stubble; but what is thus built will not remain to afford any comfort to the Lord's people. The same word that reveals the character of every man's work to himself, is mingled with just the kind and degree of fire that will consume whatever is not of God. Thus every man's work is tried, and its character is revealed by fire; and those who stand as it were upon a sea of glass mingled with fire are the only ones in all the world who see that the salvation of God's people is his own work alone. His arm is made bare in this work in the sight of his people, who are all made to know that his arm was not clothed with any help from men or angels. This great company see the works of God as revealed in their own experience; and the more they contemplate them the more wonderful they appear. As we look down upon the immense mirror that would be presented by a sea of glass, the image of the objects reflected would appear to us to be as far down in those mysterious depths as the objects themselves were distant in the heavens above. How far away from one standing on such a mirror would the sun appear in those wonderful depths! Yet he would see himself as surrounded by and clothed with the light and glory of that sun. So in the mysterious depths of the word of truth we feel sometimes that we can see Jesus as the Sun of righteousness; but how far away he appears! We may think that it is only as a man can see far away a glorious palace, to which, however, he cannot go, and in which he has no right to be, or can behold the sun or stars, to whose height he can never attain, that we can thus see and understand about Jesus; but this is not so. If we see Jesus, he is in us the hope of glory. If "we know him that is true," "we are in him that is true." What we see of Jesus we do not see by looking up into the heavens above, but by looking into the word of truth which has been given unto us, and which is within us, and which is the knowledge of the Lord filling the earthen vessel, as the most precious of all treasures. In the infinite depths of this word of God we see Jesus. It is this word we stand upon, in a spiritual sense, as the foundation of our hope. It is all within us, and yet it is as a sea, upon which we are standing. No sea on the earth was ever so deep; and all the depths reveal Jesus, who appears far away, and yet is close at hand. His glory fills all the depths of the word. "His glory covers the heavens," which are thus reflected and revealed to us in the word, "and the earth [his people] is full of his praise." No star could be so high above us, nor its image so deep in the sea below; and yet no light could wrap us so closely and comfortingly, and no friend could be so near to us, for he, with all his greatness and glory and love, is in our heart. We often fear that no one can ever bring Christ down to us from heaven, nor bring him up from so great a depth as death for our salvation; but our fears are hushed when the righteousness of faith says, "The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart."

One who sees himself reflected in this sea of glass as a new creature in Christ, the workmanship of God, sees also with himself all the redeemed family of God. Then he, with all that innumerable company, joins in the exclamation of wonder and praise, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!"

Thus they sing the song that Moses, the servant of God, sang when he set forth the perfect types, figures and patterns of the Lord's works before his ancient people, and which is sung gloriously and sweetly by the Lamb of God in the midst of the church, as he reveals there all the fullness and perfection of those works of salvation.

"Great." The meaning of that word extends infinitely. Infinite power only could do so great a work. He who did the work is called the "Arm of God," and also "the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God."

"And marvelous." These works cannot be considered nor judged of by the finite mind of man. "No man knows the things of God, but the Spirit of God." God reveals them to his people by his own Spirit, and gives them his own Spirit by which to know them. Without the life or spirit which is of God no man can know them. The Lord and his works are not to be tried by any rules known among men, not even by the holy law he gave to Israel. What he does is right in him because he does it. What he says is right in him because he says it. He sets no example by which a man is to work or speak, nor allows any one the power or right to do what he has done. He kills and he makes alive. He creates and he destroys. He commands the light to shine out of darkness, and raises the stormy wind. He works salvation in the hearts of his chosen, and makes the wicked his sword. It would be a wicked and presumptuous intrusion upon his prerogatives for a man to attempt any such work, and a daring blasphemy to decide that anything is wrong in him which his word declares he has done. His ways are past finding out. Those who are represented as standing on this sea of glass do not reject a statement of the Scriptures concerning the Lord's work because it cannot be understood by our finite minds, nor made to appear consistent with men's ideas of moral right and wrong. They might as well undertake to trace the footsteps of one whose way is in the sea, and his pathway in the deep waters, as to trace with finite reason the footsteps of God. "His footsteps are not known." We can only say, "Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight."

"Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." Moses said, "He is the rock, his work is perfect; all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." This is known and felt by the poor sinner when he sees no hope of salvation for one that is condemned; and because it is true, he sees no way in which he can be saved, for justice and judgment are the habitation of God's throne. But when Jesus appears justice is done by him, and he appears as the truth, and yet is the way of salvation to the poor sinner, and the way of holiness, and the life. So "he keepeth truth forever," and yet saves his people with an everlasting salvation, and makes them righteous in him.

His people are ever talking of this to each other as they walk along this wonderful highway of holiness. "They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power." They tell of his wonderful goodness to them, and praise his works to one another. Thus the wonderful song goes on, as the little companies meet to worship God, to talk of what he has done for them, to sing hymns of praise, to hear the word preached, to attend to the order and ordinances of the church, and as they meet one another by the way, and as they visit the sick and dying to speak words of sympathy and love and comfort, and as they speak encouraging words to the faint and hungry, and to those cast down, and those who are in heaviness through manifold temptations, and as they rejoice with those to whom the morning has come; all the time they are singing this wonderful song. They feel poor and weak and unworthy and ignorant, and their words are not what the wisdom of this world would choose, and their accents are feeble and broken, and their steps are not strong and firm, but often hesitating, as it seems to them; and yet all the time, with word and act, with voice and footstep, they are singing grandly and triumphantly, showing forth and declaring the works of God, manifesting them in their felt weakness and poverty, as well as when they feel rich in faith and strong in the Lord; joining in the glorious song which was sung by Moses, the servant of God, among his ancient people, and which is now sung by the Lamb in the midst of all his redeemed; a song that reaches out to all the infinite extent of the works of God, and rises higher and higher as the wonderful glory of his works appears more and more to their view; a song that will still go on, telling in strains of holy melody the joy of the redeemed soul, and filling the heights of Zion with praise, as long as there is still one soul on earth to say, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., July 1, 1893.

SANDERSVILLE, Miss., March 1, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As I am through with the business part of my letter I will write of some of the Lord's dealings with me in the past, as it has been on my mind for two or three years to write; but I have concluded I could not write anything worth reading, and so have deferred it. From my childhood I have had serious reflections as to my future state. Many times I tried to pray, but could never get any relief. At times I was forgetful of all this, and was very wicked. I was married to Nancy Powell in November, 1857. Her parents were Primitive Baptists, and she soon after was received and baptized into the Primitive Baptist Church. By this time the civil war was on hand, and I went to the war on the Confederate side. I was in many battles, was wounded twice, and in December, 1864, was taken prisoner, and so remained until June 12th, 1865, when I was released and came home. The Lord brought me through dangers seen and unseen. I was at times very serious, and at other times forgetful. By this time no visible church of Christ was to be seen here. Some of the Old Baptists were scattered around, but there was no church. My wife and mother were thus without a home in church capacity. Some two years after the war the Missionaries came and held a meeting near where I then lived, and I attended it. It was during this meeting that I was fully awakened to my lost condition and my guilt before the great I Am. I then felt my need of a Savior. There my burden left me, and there I received peace, if I have ever received any. I felt something there that has never left me; yet I have been fearful many times that I was deceived, and even to this day I pray that, if I was deceived, the Lord will direct my footsteps. I hope the Lord has caused me to understand in later years that this protracted meeting had nothing to do with making my peace with God. I hope in Jesus, who finished the work the Father gave him to do; and at the appointed time of the Father the Holy Spirit was sent, which did the work that man has no will in. I had thought that man had something to do, as well as the preacher, in man being saved. O how dark it was then! Can one be safe in saying that his peace was made with God, and he still in the dark? I prayed the Lord to guide my footsteps, and I trust he has, and caused me to behold the Rock on whom I stand. Yes, that blessed Rock has conquered death, hell and the grave, and has brought light out of darkness. "And God said, Let there be light; and there was light. And God saw the light, that it was good; and God divided the light from the darkness." O how great is that darkness! It is darkness that may be felt. But Jesus is the light and life of his chosen people.

For twenty-one years I was in darkness, and for seventeen years was a so-called preacher, claiming to have impressions to preach. O, can one be found in all the world as poor as me, to claim to be something when nothing, and worse than nothing? At last, I hope, the Lord has been pleased to let me behold some of his beauty.

The Missionaries received me, and baptized me, as they called it. My wife went with me, as I then thought, with a good will. The Missionaries received her on the baptism administered by the Old School Baptists. Three years after this the Missionaries ordained me to the full work of the gospel ministry, as they called it. I never sought this at their hands. After I had thus begun preaching I thought many times I would never try again; for I always felt bad after trying. O what a difference between then and now. I feel that in my flesh there dwells no good thing, and that I am nothing. All this time the Old Baptists were at a distance from me, but I would hear of them sometimes. I was full of bitterness toward them, and would talk about them to my wife. I said I thought they were good people, but were ignorant and did not know any better. Poor me! I was the ignorant one, and did not know it. I would say to my dear wife that they were fatalists, and on the doctrine of the Bible were extremists. I contended that the Missionaries were extremists in the money matters, and in this respect I did not travel far with them; but in other respects I was a complete Arminian in principle.

I came to this county eight years ago last winter and located where I am now living, and soon had the care of churches. Four years ago last fall I was employed by a Missionary board to visit and preach in a certain destitute section, as they termed it; and I thought so too at the time. This was the first time in my life that I was employed by a board, and I trust it will be the last. I entered upon the business in the best of feeling for the cause; but see how soon a change came, when it pleased the Lord to move upon the great darkness within. I had not the least idea that the Lord's will was in the matter, nor how soon he was to turn me about to love something I had hated. I made several trips in the employ of the board, and by this time I became so afflicted in body that I had to give up the work. By the time I recovered from my affliction March had come, and the board was in session. I was completely turned about, and refused their offered money, telling them there was no command in the Scriptures for the hireling. They called upon me to preach, and I trust I preached Christ and him crucified. I was now rapidly drifting from Arminian doctrine, yet at the same time I was not aware of it. The Arminians were now beginning to call me a Hard Shell. This did not trouble me, although I had no idea at that time of connecting myself with the Old Baptists. I was still satisfied with my baptism, and thought I was with the people of God. The Lord's will must be done, no matter where we have been or where our will is. The Lord will make his people willing in the day of his power. By the first day of May my baptism did not appear right, and I found I was not in the church of Christ. By this time I was loving the Old Baptists, the people I once hated; and I loved the doctrine of the Bible they contended for. I found I had been with a people that were well thought of by the world, because they are of the world, and the world will love its own. They were not hated of all men, and had not the scriptural marks on them. But there was a hated and persecuted people, who had all the scriptural marks. The Lord made me willing to love this people, whom I had once hated. This proves to my mind beyond a doubt that the Lord makes his people willing in the day of his power, and makes them love the things they once hated. O how willing I now was to visit the people of God, and to relate the dealings of God with this poor, benighted soul. There were some of these despised people in this county. I knew but few of them, for I had kept aloof from them, and had never sought their company. But they were the people of my choice, and I felt I must hunt for them, for I felt they were my true friends. Their preachers I had never met. There were two small churches in this county, fourteen miles from where I lived. I made known to my poor wife my condition, and that I would have to visit this people and ask them to let me bear company with them if they saw fit. My wife said this gave her great satisfaction, and now for the first time I understood that she had never been satisfied, but all these years had been without a home in the church of the blessed Jesus. Well, on the third Sunday in May, and the Saturday before, myself and wife visited Zoar Church. Before we arrived at the meeting we stopped at Elder S. Busby's, who was pastor of the church. We found the dear old brother sick and in bed, and had decided not to attend the meeting. I was introduced by brother M. Henington, who was in company with us. Seeing the afflictions that brother Busby was in made me feel sad and much disappointed; but the Lord was present and in the matter, when least I expected the same. When I made known my business the dear old brother Busby seemed to get new life, and grew better so fast that he soon got ready, and we left for the meeting. When we arrived at the meeting I thought I had never seen such a gathering of brethren and sisters on a conference day. My poor heart swells with feelings that I cannot express. They were the most lovely people I had ever met. The dear old brother preached the best sermon I ever heard. Never while I live shall I forget the two days meeting and the sermons the brother preached. Myself and wife with two others, a man and his wife, whom I had known from childhood, were received. My wife was received upon her statement, and myself and the other two were baptized the next day. I shall never forget the services at the water. The dear old brother knelt down at the water's edge and prayed, and afterwards led us three into the water, and buried us in the yielding stream. I felt that this was

(Continued on page 229.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 19, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THORNS.

"AND when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!"—Matt. xxvii. 29.

When annoyed and lacerated by the thorns which beset our way through this sin-polluted earth, it is often suggested in the heart of the afflicted sufferer that it would have been better for him if there had been no thorns included in the creation of the world. In nothing does the weakness of human comprehension more clearly appear than in its utter inability to understand the purpose for which it is ordained of God that the earth shall produce these unwelcome and distressing fruits of that curse which was denounced as the consequence of the transgression of the commandment given to the innocent man whom the Creator had placed in the garden of Eden. It is not recorded how long Adam remained in his original state, in which he was pronounced by his Maker "very good," in common with all the works which were made by the Lord God. But it was not until after sin had entered into the world by the one man's disobedience, that the curse came upon the earth. The curse upon the serpent was confined to himself. So the woman was condemned to the endurance of multiplied sorrow and subjection to the rule of her husband. But unto Adam the Lord God said, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; CURSED IS THE GROUND FOR THY SAKE; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. iii. 17-19. No mention is made of the existence of thorns until after the entrance of sin into the world. They may therefore be considered as the necessary result of that curse which was inseparable from sin. In this they fitly represent every form of suffering which is the heritage of the sinful children of Adam. It is for the sake of the sinning Adam that the curse rests upon the ground. An uncursed earth could not be the abode of a sinner. Without attempting to solve the mystery of iniquity by which sin entered into the world, it is safe to accept the conclusion of the inspired Preacher, "Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions."—Eccl. vii. 29. No efforts of carnal ambition can attain to an understanding of this mystery. What it has pleased God to reveal concerning it is all that can be known by creatures. Neither the power nor the wisdom of God could have been at fault in that dreadful event. In the mystery of godliness power was given from above to the workers of iniquity, that they should with wicked hands do exactly what God had before determined to be done. Believers of the testimony of the Scriptures are not at liberty to entertain a question of this truth, since our Lord himself declared it to Pilate. "Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."—John xix. 11. Thus it is evident that the very thorns are dependent for their existence upon the power which God gives to the workers of evil. It is absurdly inconsistent to suppose that the purpose of God did not include the existence of thorns which are produced by the ground since the instant that it was cursed. In other words, it is a denial of the infinite perfection of the wisdom of God to say that anything has transpired in time which was not contemplated in the divine appointment from the beginning. Since God is unchangeable, he knows in eternity all that can develop. Whatever is thus certainly known must be brought to pass as it is known. Thorns and thistles can no more exist without the power of God than can grapes and figs. In his eternal purpose the limits of sin are as firmly established as are the most glorious results of the victory of divine righteousness.

But it is the design of this article to call the attention of afflicted and tried believers to the fact that there is not a thorn, or any distress under which they groan, but that in the abounding grace of our Lord it is appointed for the accomplishment of his own purpose of love and mercy. None of those who endure affliction can be separate from the loving Redeemer in their deepest night of suffering. Since he trod the wine-press alone, those who follow him must know that loneliness of grief and pain; yet while their eyes are not capable of discerning him, their faithful God never for an instant allows them to be hidden from his sight. For their support under the distressing trials appointed for them to endure, it is written, "Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand; the sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night; the Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul.

The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore."—Psa. cxxi. 4-8. The saints can only be qualified to bear witness to the faithfulness of this divine assurance as they are brought to know their personal and present need of such protection as can come from no power short of the omnipotence of God. They who were never in the depth of affliction cannot testify to the delivering grace by which the Lord brings up his saints out of such a state of suffering. For the learning of the saints it is ordained of God that in the world they shall have tribulation. In being brought through the opposing thorns of adversity they are taught that their protection is not in themselves, nor are they left to overcome those thorns by resorting to human devices of wisdom or strength. None but the mighty Conqueror of death can turn the thorns of agony into the glittering glory of everlasting victory. Jesus alone can make the intensity of sorrow shine with the ineffable rapture of eternal joy. In their seasons of comfort and rest the saints have no experience of this miraculous power of their Deliverer. For the realizing sense of this heavenly victory, each individual disciple of Jesus must be personally a partaker of the sufferings of that conflict through which our victorious Leader conquered death, and destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.

While passing through the pilgrimage of this wilderness of worldly opposition and suffering, the saints are painfully conscious of continual exposure to the thorns which beset their pathway. They cannot regard their bitter trials as evidences of their being true followers of Jesus, although they read and believe that he never walked in any other path but the way of suffering and grief. He did not shrink from encountering the sharpest enmity of earth and hell. He defied all adverse powers, saying, "Fury is not in me; who would set the briers and thorns against me in battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together."—Isa. xxvii. 4. He did this when the appointed time had come. He not only bore the sum of all pain in giving himself to the suffering of death; but the sharper briers and thorns of divine wrath were set against him, and he did go through them in being made sin for the salvation of his people from their sins. What an inconceivable array of briers and thorns he went through when he was made a curse for us! But it was in this thorny way alone that we could be reconciled to God. Nothing but the blood of Jesus Christ could cleanse us from all sin. The sins of his chosen and elect members were the dreadful thorns by which he was pierced. His cruel murderers unconsciously fulfilled the prophetic declaration of the appointment of God in condemning the sinless Jesus; but they did only what the hand and counsel of God had determined before to be done. The very thorns of sin and enmity were made to serve in their appointed place for the glorification of Jesus as the mighty God who had power to lay down his life, and to take it again. Without these thorns there is no revelation of any heaven for saints, or throne of glory for their Savior.

The crown of thorns with which Jesus was crowned by his persecutors, was necessary for the expression of the part which every saved sinner contributed toward that load of sin which was laid on him. Well may we mourn for our cruelty in piercing him, while his victory has made that very crown of thorns the most resplendent diadem of beauty which ever shone in earth or heaven. There is not the least palliation of our guilt in the fact that God ordained it as the occasion for the revelation of triumphant grace in the exaltation of Jesus above every name that is named. No sin was ever committed with the design of declaring the glory of Jesus. Yet not even the pride and malice of a Pharaoh could go beyond the appointment of God in his purpose to show his own power in that monster tyrant. He was moved only by enmity and pride; but God turned that vile device to the deliverance of his Israel in his own way. Thus he caused his praise to shine more clearly by contrast with the black cloud of sinful enmity. So it is the crowning glory of that revelation which God has given of himself in Jesus Christ, that the eternal counsel of his will ordained him to be "Exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." These cruel sins are the thorns with which he is crowned by his own redeemed people. But for them the enmity of earth and hell would have been powerless against the holy Son of God. His dying prayer was for those chosen vessels of mercy whose sins were laid on him. It was infinite grace which shone in his care for them even in his terrible anguish on the cross. "Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do!" This prayer secures the forgiveness of all the sins of every one for whom he made the intercession. His petition was never in vain, because he never asked amiss. Thus the crown of thorns is infinitely more glorious than any royal diadem ever worn by the kings or rulers of earthly empires. But all its glory consists in the perfect holiness of him on whose sinless brow that crown was placed. Certainly he derived no honor or power from the crown, since it was the symbol of humiliation and suffering to him; but as he made the cross glorious by enduring its agony, so he made the thorns emblematic of the victory over sin and hell which he achieved in the suffering of death.

Not only did the murderers of Jesus crown him with thorns, but they put a reed in his right hand. There is nothing more suited than this to express the contempt in which the natural mind holds the authority of our God. Denying his omnipotence, the enemy of all righteousness is ever ready to mock him with formal worship if he is represented as swaying a reed of weakness, instead of that scepter of righteousness which governs all things in heaven and earth, visible and invisible, including the wrath of man and the malice of devils. While the Spirit of truth leads those who are subjects of divine instruction to trust in the Lord in whom is everlasting strength, none can know that God but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. The light of this revelation shows the sinner the impossibility of his being saved from his sins by any power short of that omnipotence which is the exclusive attribute of God. He cannot then hope in any other name but that Jesus whose power and grace are boundless. The rod of his strength must be no such frail reed as that which is suggested by the enmity of the carnal mind. A reed is a very appropriate scepter to signify the authority of that powerless character whom the pride of nature is willing to worship; but those who trust in such a weak salvation as is thus represented, certainly cannot know their own lost and ruined condition as being already condemned and dead in trespasses and sins. The very name Jesus was sent by the angel to our Redeemer, for the reason that he shall save his people from their sins. No reed of earthly origin can express that infinite sovereignty over all events without which he could not do the wonderful work which he came to finish. If there is any power in heaven or in earth which is not given to the Jesus in whom you trust, you are but mocking him when you bow the knee before him.

If we recognize Jesus as indeed the Christ of God, then we must ascribe to him all the perfection of his own eternal Godhead. This is not a mere theory or doctrinal whim. His crown is of universal authority, and his dominion is unbounded. No affliction, no adversity, and no enmity, can defeat his purpose of love and mercy toward his chosen people. He comforted his mourning disciples by exhorting them in the hour of trial, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." There can be no consolation in believing in a dead Jesus. He must be in our own experience revealed as victorious over death, and as having power over the thorns of tribulation, otherwise there can be no comfort of hope in trusting in him. Believing in him as the risen and glorified Jesus there can be nothing more glorious to the saint than the privilege of enduring that portion which he has appointed of the afflictions of the gospel. This is the line of demarcation between the enemies of the gospel of God and those who love our Lord Jesus. To those who do not believe in God there is no occasion for believing in the triumphant Savior; they can get along better with a thorn-crowned Jesus swaying a reed for a scepter; thus flattering their vanity with the imagination that they have him in their power. But to those who know their true state of utter helplessness, there is no hope of deliverance but in the omnipotence of the God of their salvation, who wore the crown of thorns, and bore the shame of reproach for our sins, "that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Without the crown of thorns his own victorious sufferings would have been incomplete; so, dear afflicted saint, it is only in encountering the appointed thorns, which are given for your tribulation in the world, that you are favored to have the experience to which Paul aspired, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Severe as is the present suffering of their piercing, you could not afford to be without the trials which attest your fellowship in your Redeemer's crown of thorns. They are the gift of infinite love, the earnest of eternal blessedness and glory. Then, well may the saints glory in tribulations also, and rejoice that they are counted worthy to suffer for the sake of him who died for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification. Let us then thank God for the thorns, which are needful for our profit, and for the declarative glory of his grace.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

THE Particular Covenanted Baptist Church of Canada, to the associations with which she corresponds, to wit, the Baltimore, Delaware, Delaware River, Warwick and Chemung Old School Baptist Associations, of the United States of America, who are in correspondence with us. Greeting and salutation in the truth as it is in our Lord Jesus Christ, hoping that you with us are steadfast in the truth, and abounding in the work of the Lord, which consists in contending earnestly for the faith as it was once delivered unto the saints.

We received brother Silas H. Durand as your messenger of correspondence at our last quarterly meeting, held on the 23d, 24th, 25th and 26th days of June, 1893, in Ekfrid, at our meeting-house. Harmony and peace prevailed, and pleasantness was the order of the days thus spent in the preaching of the word, and in the communion of the Lord's Supper.

We still desire the continuance of your correspondence.

On behalf of the church,

WM. POLLARD, Mod.

D. T. MCCOLL, Clerk.

(Continued from page 227.)

baptism by the hands of the church of Christ and a lawful administrator. The dear brother is the humblest soul I have ever met, and believes himself to be one of the least of God's people. May it please the Lord to bless him above all I can ask or think. He is very much persecuted and hated, but in this he has grace given him to rejoice. After the services at the water the right hand of fellowship was extended to us. Since then this dear people have seen fit to call for my ordination to the full work of the ministry. This I did not ask at their hands. I gave this into the Lord's hands, to do as he in wisdom saw best. Now I am with the people of God beyond a doubt in my mind; and if I were as well satisfied with myself as I am with this people, as being the people of God, I would feel all right; but O how badly I feel at times about my poor sinful self. I feel worse, it seems to me, than anyone else can feel, and feel to be the least of all; for I once persecuted and hated the people of God. But now I love them, and love those I have never seen in the flesh; for when I read the dear SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and hear the dear brethren and sisters talking through the same, my heart goes out in love to them. Many times while reading the editorials and the correspondence I am made to shed tears; not tears of sorrow or grief, but of joy, that the Lord in his goodness has caused me to understand to some extent the language spoken by this holy people of God, as they speak to one another. I lived the longer period of my life in darkness—fifty years. I sometimes lament that such has been the case; but upon reflection I am satisfied with it as it is; for the Lord never makes mistakes nor errs. He had a purpose in this, as well as in all others.

Now, brethren, if after making corrections you think this worth the notice of the dear people of God, you may publish the same at the time you think best; and if not, I will be satisfied.

Your brother, I hope, in the Lord,
J. L. TOUCHSTONE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., June 24, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As it becomes my sad duty to send notice for publication in the SIGNS of the death of our dear aged sister, Rachel Ensor, I wish, instead of writing what is commonly called an obituary, to copy for publication a letter which she wrote about twelve years ago, when she thought her time of departure was near at hand, and gave to me, with the request that after her departure I should send it to the SIGNS for publication. I have kept the writing ever since, and now comply with her request. To her letter I will add a few particulars concerning her life and death. She says:

"Dear Brother Beebe:—I have never written anything for publication; but now that it seems that my departure is near at hand, I feel as though I would like to leave my dying testimony to the doctrine which I have long professed to believe, and which you have so long contended for. As far back as I can recollect the subject of death seemed to rest upon my mind with great weight. My condition as a sinner before God appeared so clearly set forth in the Scriptures, and also in my own experience, that I was constrained to cry out, 'O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?' After some years of labor at that dreadful mount which made me exceedingly fear and quake, Christ Jesus was revealed to me as the end of the law, and the only hope for perishing sinners. I was baptized by Elder Edward Choate, in my eighteenth year. Since then I have been frequently cast down, but not destroyed. Much of my early life I was tossed to and fro, like a storm-tossed vessel, until at last I seemed to settle down into a calm. I many times feared a treacherous heart; and many times I could only chew the cud, and remember the Lord from the land of Jordan, and from the hill Mizar. It seems as if I have been following my Lord and Master at a distance. As regards my doctrinal views, and how sinners are saved, I hereby declare that I have no other foundation upon which to rest my eternal all than that of grace abounding to the chief of sinners; grace in choosing us in Christ Jesus before the world began, having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, according as he has chosen us in him, to the honor of amazing grace. I have a hope that I am among that number. Be astonished, O heavens! and wonder, O earth! for the Lord hath done it. I feel that any effort that is made to bring members into the church without the doctrine of grace being clearly set forth, is fraught with error of the deepest dye, and is calculated to fill the church with mocking Ishmaelites, and is no more nor less than putting forth the hand to steady the ark. Those who pursue such a course are dangerous characters, be they whom they may, and ought to be guarded against, for they only seek to cast Jesus down from his excellency. I look upon the doctrine of a general atonement as the foundation of all other errors in religion. When the Lord told our first parents, 'In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die,' Satan was ready to say, 'Thou shalt not surely die;' and all who are preaching that doctrine are Satan's ministers, and surely their number is legion. They set their face against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth; and so his people return hither, and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them.

"In conclusion I would say to all the dear saints scattered abroad, Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free, and be not entangled with the yoke of bondage. Proclaim to all that salvation is of the Lord. Fear not the reproach of men, neither be afraid of their revilings. I could have told of many more things that I have passed through since I have been a professor of religion, but I think that what I have written will suffice to show to all that I fully believe that none but Jesus can do helpless sinners good; and as the poet has expressed it,

'Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on thee.'

"I wish to say, brother Beebe, that I have always felt to sustain the declaration which you made in commencing the publication of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, viz., 'Waging warfare with mother Arminianism and all her brood of institutions.'

"RACHEL ENSOR."

I have copied the above with solemn feelings. By this writing our sister, being dead, yet speaketh; and we all that knew her can witness that this was her faith to the very last. As said before, sister Ensor was baptized in the fellowship of the Patapsco Church by Elder Edward Choate in the year 1827. Soon after this, with twelve others, she took a letter from Patapsco, and was with the others organized into the Black Rock Church; consequently she has been a member of the church sixty-six years, and a member at Black Rock all that time except a few months. She was the last surviving member of those who constituted this church. She was also the last one of that noble band who finally took the stand for truth at Black Rock which led to the division sixty years ago. Her testimony and fellowship for the past twenty-five years that I have been pastor at Black Rock have been my assurance that I was standing upon the same ground and contending for the same truth which they counted so dear. In a conversation with her after she had for the last time taken her bed, I expressed to her my wonder and gladness that she should have held me in fellowship so long, when she said, "You have preached the truth that I rest upon, and I have never heard an Arminian sentiment from your lips." This was testimony that I shall prize to my dying day. Sister Ensor in former years was widely known, as she went much to our associations; and her home at her brother's, Mr. Evan Davis, was for many years a home for Baptists, and hundreds have enjoyed their unstinted hospitality. To those who did not know her intimately she seemed stern and unapproachable; but we who got beneath the surface found a warm and kindly heart. I can myself bear witness to her sympathy for the poor of all classes, and her bounty to them; and she gave liberally to support the cause she loved. How we shall all miss her in every way. We have all lost a firm and faithful friend; and as a church we feel like saying, How can we do without her? One instance in my association with her comes up to my mind. I will speak of it and close. Perhaps four years ago I went to Black Rock one Sunday with dark and gloomy feelings. I felt cold, and unfit to speak in the name of the Lord, and as though I must not even attempt to speak; and I thought, as I looked over the faces of the brethren, O if I could only know that some one had a spirit to pray for me! As I began speaking, all at once the deep fountains of feeling within me were broken up, and a solemn light was shed upon the text, and with a heart ready to weep and rejoice I spoke for perhaps an hour. When the service was ended sister Ensor with tears in her eyes said to me, "I prayed for you this morning, and the Lord has heard my prayer." Afterward I told her of my trial of mind that morning, and we rejoiced together. How wonderful are the works of the Lord!

Sister Ensor was about eighty-five when she died. She was ill during our association, and many went to see her at her request, and can witness to her firm and humble faith. She died on Wednesday, June 21st. Her funeral service was held on Thursday afternoon at Black Rock. The text used was 2 Timothy iv. 6-8. May God comfort all that mourn, and make us followers of her as she followed Christ.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ,

F. A. CHICK.

WAVERLY, Lackawanna Co., Pa.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—When you have space, if you think proper, please publish in the SIGNS the following letter from brother Martin D. Fisher.

D. M. VAIL.

SANTA FE, Mo., Dec. 8, 1892.

DEAR BROTHER VAIL AND FAMILY:—Your kind and welcome letter of Nov. 28th came duly to hand a few days ago, and we were made glad, we trust, after a godly sort, that you are still enabled by divine grace to give expression to such thoughts as are calculated to build up just such a poor, weak, ignorant creature as I know myself to be. How do I know myself to be weak, ignorant and blind? I know it just as you do, and every other manifest child of God. It is by the light of God's Spirit shining in the deep recesses of my heart. That is the only means by which any poor sinner can have anything like a correct knowledge of themselves. Then, if you know such things, why do you doubt? For you are also persuaded, like the apostle, that he which hath begun a good work in you will continue to perform it until the day of Jesus Christ; and, my brother, that is enough for any of us. If my poor heart deceives me not, I am glad sometimes, and am encouraged to claim that I am in possession of that same meek and humble spirit that God's people are possessed with, whereby we are enabled to esteem others better than ourselves. Surely then of a truth none but those who possess the Spirit of Christ can feel thus. It is this that causes you to speak of my imperfect letters as you do. It is this same spirit that keeps me from being puffed up, and nothing else; for I know that the flesh is easily puffed up; yes, abominably so. Therefore if anything I have written has done you good, as you say it has, give God all the glory; and this I believe you will do; for you know enough about man to know that in his best estate he is but vanity; that in man, that is, in his flesh, there dwells no good thing. I feel to heartily agree with you in not fellowshiping any of the societies of men. The church of Jesus Christ is enough for any Old School Baptist to be connected with. My understanding is that every child of God is forbidden to unite with any of the various societies of men, whether they be secret or otherwise. God's people dishonor him when they disregard his laws. We are commanded to be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. "Touch not, taste not, handle not; which all are to perish with the using." Anything that has not been set apart by the word of God for his people to practice is unclean. "Touch not the unclean thing." The commandments of men are all unclean, like everything that emanates from him. It is impossible to bring a clean thing out of an unclean thing. But "the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever."

I also agree with you as to who is the subject of gospel address; it is the quickened child of God, the living in Jerusalem, the inhabitant of Zion. The preaching of the cross to them that perish is foolishness; just as much so to-day as it was in the apostle's day; but to them that believe it continues to be the power of God and the wisdom of God. The truth is so plain that sometimes for a moment it seems strange that the worldly wise cannot see it. But God's truth remains the same, and the world by wisdom knows not God; and if by searching they could find him out, they would not oppose his truth by saying they are instruments and their preaching the means of bringing dead sinners to life and liberty; but they would agree with the apostle in saying that Christ gave gifts to men, such as apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers; not for the evangelizing of the world, or saving sinners from everlasting destruction and misery, but "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive."—Eph. iv. 12-14. More than twenty-two years ago, directly after I received a hope in Christ, I had some experience with three of those cunning, crafty fellows, who by their sleight would deceive God's little ones, to make them believe that they were God's ministers, and preaching for the church of Christ. I call them cunning and crafty, because they preached some truth, and a great deal of error; and that catches the world. "Greedy dogs" indeed; they are not satisfied with their own; but, if possible, they would deceive the very elect. When I meet with one of God's little ones who has been caught in such a snare, I do feel to sympathize with them; and I do desire, if it be God's will, that he will enable me in meekness to instruct all who thus oppose themselves, if God, peradventure, will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth, and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil.

But I will close, by sending the love of each one of us to all of you.

Your brother in hope,

MARTIN D. FISHER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 13, 1893.

ELDER WM. L. BEEBE—MY VERY DEAR BROTHER:—If I could be with you as often as I think of you, we would be together much more than we are. But sometimes I feel a sort of grim satisfaction that the Lord in his wise providence has not afflicted you with my company very much; and while such a reflection is painful to me, I truly feel how little satisfaction my brethren have ever received by coming in contact with me. When I am in the company of God's dear children, if I do not keep my mouth tightly closed I feel I ought to have done so. A few of my reasons are, first, I cannot conceive of the depth of the evil imaginations of my own heart. I try to talk of things I do not understand, thereby darkening counsel by words without knowledge. Secondly, I occupy valuable time, in which I might be instructed by others, who have received the wisdom and knowledge of God in greater measure than myself. I seem to fulfill the words of the proverb, "He that is void of wisdom despiseth his neighbor," and forget the conclusion thereof, which says, "But a man of understanding holdeth his peace." Thirdly, I feel to be an "Achan" in the land of Canaan, taking the earthly treasure out of Jericho, and hiding it among the tents of Israel. I try to hide the lusts of my deceitful heart in such a way that I may appear what I really am not to the brethren. I am not honest, and yet I try to appear in the robe of honesty. I am filled with guile, and all manner of lustful, fleshly desires; but before my brethren I want to pose as an Israelite without guile. But my hope in the mercy and favor of God emanates from none of these. However clean and white I may try to appear before men, I do know that before my God I stand naked. Nothing is hid from his omniscient eye. Then my hope in God's mercy and favor is that I have a mind the desire of which is to serve the Lord; and I hope I am aware (by the Spirit's teaching) that the service of the Lord is no ordinary service. I believe that to serve him acceptably, with godly fear, is to be enabled to confess all my faults before men, thereby bringing forth fruits meet for repentance. To confess my faults, my weaknesses and my infirmities, is to confess my Savior. But, dear brother Beebe, how far short of it I fall! The mind with which I serve the Lord points out to me always "the way, the truth and the life," saying to my troubled mind, "This is the way; walk ye in it." But alas! "I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." Now this is all clear, as the christian experience, when applied to my brethren; but it does not somehow fit me. I can clearly read the marks of the lawful subjects of the King, and this is why I am thrown into the pit of distress and discouragement. My reasonable inference is, that I am not a lawful subject of the King of Zion. If so, why cannot I read myself as I read my brother? Why are not the marks as apparent in me, and why cannot I observe them? In my daily professional duties I am cognizant of the laws and rules of my profession, and if I overstep them, I do it wilfully. My duties to my brethren in the profession may be fulfilled by my honest desire to be faithful in my calling. But in my christian experience (if I have one) I find myself doing the very things I would not. Then I resolve, well this is a lesson that I will not forget; but again and again the very thing I hate, that I do. I find within me a desire to be holy and upright; but on the other hand, to my constant sorrow, I find myself so very natural that indeed there does not appear to be room for even one holy desire. Do I do wilful sinning? Yes, I do; and I search my alphabet of excuses from A to Z, to find one that will fit; and I generally have a store of them on hand. I am sadly troubled and bereaved because I am what I am; yet the law of my mind says, By the grace of God you are what you are. If I am what I profess, why am I not content with this unalterable truth? I cannot understand myself, and I do not know where to place myself. I shudder to think of placing myself in the world, to mingle with the world, and I dare not take on boldness to place myself within the gates of Zion; yet my heart yearns for even the humblest place within its beloved portals. And so I stand as one alone. With the world I cannot affiliate. Although I seem to be made up of just such material, I hate the world; but do I hate myself? Yes, I hope I do; and yet it seems such a contradictory statement, in the face of the fact that I yield to its feverish lusts. If I hate myself, then must I necessarily love the object which turned my love of self to self-hatred, and showed me the total depravity and deceitfulness of my own heart. I find I cannot serve two masters. If I love the one, I must hate the other. Now, brother Beebe, what am I to do? I hope my face is turned toward Jerusalem; but the lusts of my flesh are constantly dragging me down to the blackest hell. You are of that innumerable company whom Jesus arose to justify; have you traveled such a road as I am in, with uncertainties and perplexities on all sides? Yet sometimes I am enabled to compare my condition to the restless, mighty ocean, whose turbulent waves are tossed hither and thither; but underneath the foaming surface a quiet calm remains, a stillness, so clear and restful that even the turbulence and commotion above cannot disturb. And so I feel, away down somewhere within me (I do not know where), there is a something (I don't know just what) that soothes me, once in a while, into such a restful peace, giving me to trust in the unseen power controlling all my being. My poor frail body seems to me to be as was the earth when "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth; and the earth was without form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep." A fleshly body, all of darkness, all polluted, contaminated with sin and uncleanness, "without form, and void," until in the fullness of time "the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters" of my darkened soul, "And God said, Let there be light, and there was light." And the light shined in the darkness of my vile, deceitful heart; and although the darkness comprehended it not, the life was made manifest; and now, as I do sincerely trust, I with my mind serve the law of God, though with my flesh I serve the law of sin.

I was pleased to learn through brother McConnell this morning that you contemplate a visit to us on the 26th of July. We will announce an appointment for you for Wednesday evening of that date.

With love to all the members of your household, I am, as ever, your unprofitable brother,

B. F. COULTER.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., July 3, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Sister Wells, of Canada, has written a letter to sister Mary Parker which is of so much interest that I will copy it for the SIGNS, to be inserted if you think best. I am quite sure sister Mary would not object to sharing this sweet and savory message with her kindred in Christ.

BESSIE DURAND.

MISS MARY PARKER—DEAR SISTER IN A PRECIOUS HOPE:—It has been on my mind for a long time to write a few lines to you, and now I feel like doing so, if the Lord will. Not that I think you will be profited by anything that I can say. O dear, no; for I am such a poor dependent creature; yes, and very ignorant too. But I want to tell you before I die, as I am now in the seventy-seventh year of my age, and I do not know how soon the time may come for me to leave this world with all its woes, for one that is far better, I hope. But I must be brief, as I am very much troubled with rheumatism. As I said, I want to tell you that I have been much profited and comforted by your letters, especially the first one you wrote for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, headed, "The sorrow of the world worketh death." Yes, dear sister, you told my experience much better than I could have done myself, as I have passed through that exercise of mind more than once; and now I want to tell you that at one time, when I read such beautiful letters in the SIGNS I became so very much exercised about writing something for that paper, and feeling so deeply my inability, it became quite a trouble to me, and I would think, O, if I could write like Mary Parker, or many others, how easy it would be to write a letter. It was a real burden to me until one night, when lying on my bed, thinking of that and many other things, I became lost in thought, and there appeared beside me a high white wall. As I was looking at this wall, a little way from me, I saw Jesus standing near it. The glimpse was but momentary. I cannot describe my feelings at that time. I thought, Can it be that I have an interest in so lovely a person? Then I had such a wonderful revelation of his mystical body, the church, that I will not attempt to describe, or I shall spoil its beauty. For many days after this, at some time during the day, I felt that Jesus was standing by me, and that he was acquainted with my inmost thoughts, and that my heart was laid bare before him. O how beautifully I was made to see the oneness that there is with the Lord and his dear people. I was taught to see this much in regard to his church, that if you, dear sister, are, as it were, the hand, and I the foot, the hand might administer help or comfort to the foot, but the foot could not help the hand, although it is a useful member in its place. God hath placed the members in the body as it hath pleased him, and with that ought I not to be content? Now, whenever I feel such thoughts arising in my mind, I do try to check them. But I cannot write at length, so I will pass on.

Dear sister, I can sympathize with you in your sufferings, and often wonder how you bear them as you do; but I know it is the Lord that helps you, or you would sink under them; would you not? Well, dear sister, we are many miles apart in body, but I hope we are near in spirit, and it is not likely we shall ever meet on earth. May the Lord be your strength in all your weakness; and when we have done with all below, may we meet in that upper and better country, there to be forever with the Lord, and cast our crowns at his dear feet, and crown him Lord of all.

Now I will close this poor scribble, asking you to throw the mantle of love over all my imperfections, and pardon me for the liberty I have taken in writing to you, as I do believe it is love for you that prompted me. This comes from a poor, unworthy sister, the least of all. In hope of eternal life,

REBECCA WELLS.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Mrs. Mary A. Venartsdalen departed this life December 11th, after an illness of three days, of pneumonia, in the 84th year of her age.

She was the widow of Deacon Venartsdalen, who died about twelve years ago. Sister Venartsdalen was baptized in the fellowship of the church at this place on April 14th, 1833, where for nearly sixty years she remained a consistent member, in faithful attendance upon the duties and privileges of the church, of which at the time of her death she had been a member longer than any other. She was held in high esteem by all, and is much missed in our meetings for conference and worship, and in our social gatherings; yet we cannot but rejoice for her that she has exchanged a world of sorrow and pain for one of eternal joy and blessedness. She had nine children, two of whom survive her: Mrs. Elias Hogeland, who with her husband is a member of this church, and with whom she had her home for some years, and Mrs. Suber, of Trenton, N. J.

Her funeral was attended on the 15th of December, on which occasion I addressed the people, using as a text Rev. xiv. 13.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., July 9, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I am requested to forward to you a notice of the death of sister Sallie A. Fooks, which occurred at the residence of her husband, Mr. Jehu Fooks, in Worcester Co., Md., June 22d, 1893, of consumption, aged 39 years, 4 months and 20 days.

She will be remembered by many who have visited the Salisbury Church (of which she was a member) as sister Sallie Morris. She was baptized by Elder F. A. Chick more than fifteen years ago. Hers was a very deep experience, fully demonstrating the grace and power of God. In her youth she connected herself with the Campbellites (Disciples), in the state of Missouri, where her parents then resided. She afterward removed with them back to Salisbury, the place of their nativity. All the natural enmity of her heart was stirred against the Old Baptists, their doctrine and order; but when the Lord brought her to see herself a justly condemned sinner in the eye of his holy and righteous law, she only found relief and comfort in the assurance that Christ Jesus came to save sinners, her heart was turned toward the people whom she had before hated and despised, and she was permitted to find rest by taking the yoke of Jesus and becoming identified with his poor and afflicted people. The following extract from one of her most recent letters will show the leadings of her mind and the depth of her christian experience:

"I do not wonder that Miss Nellie thought I was not a Baptist. I wonder that any one thinks I am, for I greatly fear that I have only a name to live. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Surely the very commencement of the divine life is hidden, for it is a work of the heart, and not in outward form. Every cry unto the Lord is in secret; and the warfare of a lifetime is fought within, and is not a public show. One of old said, 'Our life is hid with Christ in God.' I trust that one can be a christian and still not make a great show of religion. The laboring and heavy laden are such as come to God. I think it possible for one to go bowed in spirit, heavily laden indeed with a weight of sin, yet all unseen by the world. Each heart knoweth its own bitterness. After all, seeing so much evil and no good in me, I ask the same question, Am I a Baptist?"

Truly she was a true Baptist and a child of God, and we have no doubt that our loss is her eternal gain. Our sympathies are with her husband and sister, who with the church are left to mourn, but not as those who have no hope; for we believe that she sleeps in Jesus, and that when he appears she shall also appear with him.

A. B. FRANCIS.

Salisbury, Md., July 12, 1893.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days' meeting will be held at Hughesville, Loudoun Co., Va., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July.

Trains leave Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., 4:35 and 5:30 p. m. The p. m. trains will be met at Hamilton Station, for which point all will buy tickets, on Thursday. The a. m. train will be met at the same station on Friday. Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to attend.

E. V. WHITE.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,
G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen, (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address
GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1893.

NO. 30.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SONS OF GOD.

"BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."—1 John iii. 1, 2.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—The beloved disciple and apostle of Jesus uses the plural personal pronouns us and we eight times in this text, and twice he says that "we are the sons of." John himself was a man, a son of Adam, the first man, and those whom he addresses in the text as "Beloved" were likewise men; therefore the inspired text proves the blessed truth that we, the children of men, are the sons of God. This is truly a wonderful manner of love that the Father hath bestowed upon us, seeing we are a sinful people, born in sin and unto death. Yet so freely and blessedly has God bestowed his everlasting and infinite love upon us that we are called his sons; not his people only, but his children as well. This is so divinely wonderful that it seems difficult for us to believe and accept it, so much so that some even deny it; but the angel said to the blessed mother of the Son of God, "For with God nothing shall be impossible." He is rich in mercy, plenteous in redemption, infinite in goodness and wisdom, and almighty in power; yea, God is love. Therefore the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has mercifully made us the people of his everlasting covenant, could as well make us also the children of his everlasting love. That he has done so the text fully affirms; and we joyfully believe the happy truth, because the Father hath bestowed his love upon us, and we have known his love in the sweet power of its free forgiveness and blessed sonship in Jesus, enabling us to call God our Father, and the holy Son of God our Brother. Yea, wonderful to tell, the Lord Jesus is not ashamed to call us brethren. He himself teaches us to say, "Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name." Therefore this is a true sentiment, "I'll own my relation, my Father is God."

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God," though we but feebly or in part understand it, and some may question, How can these things be? Yet, believing in Jesus, we rejoice in hope of the glory of God. In Jesus is found the wonderful mystery that we, who are men in the flesh, should be called the sons of God. That he was the Son of God is verily true, as we know by the Spirit's teaching and faith in our hearts; yet he was also as truly a man as are we, as the Scriptures abundantly show. "The Word was made flesh." "God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law." "And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." So then it is clear that the holy Son of God, Christ Jesus, was himself a man, the Mediator for men, suffered and died in the flesh for sins and for men, ransomed or redeemed men from sin, the law and death, and shall bring us to God. This is the very theme and fullness of the gospel of the Son of God. The very reason why the children of men shall be the heirs of salvation unto God through Christ is because they are the children of God; for says Paul, "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." "And if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." This sonship and heirship of the children of men unto God is in the man Christ Jesus, who is the only begotten Son of the Father; therefore it is neither in Adam nor in the flesh, but it is divine and spiritual, for said Jesus, "The true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Yet Jesus thus spoke to a woman, and of the children of men; not of spirits, but of spiritual worshipers. Many of the Jews, as also the Samaritans, were carnal or fleshly worshipers, whose worship and service consisted in carnal ordinances, and the teachings and commandments of men; but not of the heart, nor in spirit and truth.

John the Baptist said, as he looked upon Jesus as he walked, "Behold the Lamb of God!" In him we see the lovely and holy Son of God, and the true and perfect man. As he is, so shall we be; for we are his brethren and joint heirs. The text says, "We shall be like him." "In all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren." "My Beloved is mine, and I am his." "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren." "And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence. For it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." "And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace." Then it is in him and of his fullness that we are the sons of God, while we are also the sons of Adam, and hence a sinful people.

Let us consider him as our Brother, and ourselves as his brethren, for herein is our new, blessed and holy relation to God of sons; and to help us in seeing this let us notice how it is that we are the sons of Adam, as living beings. We know that this natural relation of sonship is in the life of Adam, which was manifested in us when we were born. If we had received any other life, as of the fishes or birds or beasts, when we were begotten and born, then we should not have been the children of Adam, nor thus partakers of his nature, disobedience and death, as we now are. So it is in reference to our relation to God in Christ, the last Adam, the second man, the Lord from heaven, by whose obedience shall many be made righteous. "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." He says, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me." So men do come unto the Father by him. "And I give unto them eternal life." "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." This life God the Father gives to his people in and through his Son, the man Christ Jesus, as says John, "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life; and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." Therefore he that hath not the Son is not a son of God, but is dead in the sins of the flesh. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." So then it is because we have the Spirit and life of Christ in us that we are his brethren; even as he in his manhood was our Brother as the Son of man. As he was manifested as our Brother in the flesh by being born of woman, our mother, so are we manifested as his brethren in the Spirit by being born of God, his Father. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." This is the testimony of Jesus, who is the resurrection and the life, and who says, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." He here shows that it is the divine power of God, wrought in the Son by the Spirit and imparted to us, that changes our relations, raises us up from sin and the law and death into eternal life and everlasting sonship in the Son and to the Father; and that we are thus brought into the life of Christ when we are born again, and shall fully enter into his glory with him when he shall raise us up at the last day.

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be." The divine glory and blessedness of our sonship unto the glorious and blessed God is beyond a seraph's wing to reach, and is inexpressible; but God our Father has given us the heavenly earnest of it, and sealed us unto it by the Spirit of adoption in our hearts, until our full redemption and abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom. This shall be fulfilled in us at the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, when we shall be perfectly conformed to the image of God's glorified Son, the first-born from the dead among many brethren. Therefore all the foreknown and predestinated sons of God shall be born from the dead, as was the man Christ Jesus, whose holy and lovely image they shall bear.

"But we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him." Jesus is God's own perfect and beloved Son, the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person. After his ascension to the Father in glory he said to John, "Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." He not only died as the perfect offering unto God for our sins, and was raised from the dead for our justification, but he is our righteous Advocate with the Father, and maketh intercession for us, saying, "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." Into his presence and glory he will bring us, therefore, and we shall be like him.

"For we shall see him as he is." Until we shall be conformed to the heavenly man, the glorified Son of God, we cannot see him as he is and behold his glory. "For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness," said David, in his prayer of faith. "And as we have borne the image of the earthy [man], we shall also bear the image of the heavenly" man. As in the text it is we ourselves that shall be like him, so here it is the same we who were in the earthly image of Adam that shall also be in the heavenly image of Jesus. In this divine assurance Paul said, "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Yes, in us. So we shall be glorified together with Christ. This was Paul's gospel. He said, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." This is the estate and honor of the sons of God, unto which he hath chosen and predestinated them in Christ to himself, to the praise of the glory of his grace. "For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us; that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." O how wondrous and glorious shall our change be! For then sin and death in us shall be swallowed up in victory, mortality shall be swallowed up of life, we shall be more than conquerors through him that loved us, and we shall ascend to our Father in heaven in glory and immortality, the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, his sons forever! Jesus, our perfect Teacher, said of them, "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Paul says of Jesus our Lord, "And [was] declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." So too shall it be with all the sons of God; for they shall be born from the dead, in the likeness of Christ's resurrection, shall see him as he is in his glory, and be ever with him.

One closing thought upon the text. In this divine and spiritual and loving relation of sons of God, in the redemption and righteousness, life and divine nature of the holy Son of God, in whom we live by his Spirit and life in us, "the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." Of the mystery of Christ in us the hope of glory, the world knows nothing. In this we are separated from the world as by death, or as the living are separated from the dead. "We know that we have passed from death unto life." Those only who have thus died unto sin, and are risen with Christ in the newness of his life, know us in this new and spiritual relation of sons and brethren. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."

Earnestly desiring, with Paul, "that I may win Christ, and be found in him," "that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection," and that we may all hear him say to us, "Come, ye blessed of my Father," I am your brother in Christ Jesus,

DAVID BARTLEY.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., May 25, 1893.

OPELIKA, Ala., May 24, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.—DEAR BRETHREN:—It is on my mind to write a few lines for the SIGNS, in expressing my indorsement of the views held forth, and also some thoughts which occurred to my mind while reading Elder Curry's article on "The Personality of Man." And then I read your editorial on the words "Study to shew thyself approved unto God," &c. I agree with both in all that is written. I will also write in connection with what brother John S. Powers has written about, to wit, the ministry, the building of meeting-houses, and some practical duties enjoined on the saints. It came into my mind to write on the text cited and written upon by you in the last issue of the SIGNS, about a week ago. But you have covered the ground, and all that you have written I believe is the truth; but it is impossible in one article to bring out all the facts on a subject of such magnitude. Without quoting what you have quoted, I would say that the "study" here meant, as you have well said, is not to be approved unto men; for it requires theological schools, and close observation and study too, to be approved unto men; also to use sophistry, so as to make a lie look like the truth, and to speak a lie in such a manner that people shall not be able to know that it is not the truth. "Study," in this place, as you say, carries the idea of diligence, and thought, and deep meditation, and watchfulness.

I have heard it argued that schools are established to teach men how to study. So we understand that the school which Paul last attended (the school of Christ) did prepare him to study. Hence he tells Timothy to study. He did not tell him to get his Bible and sit down and study; for he knew he could study apart from the Bible. He could study God in his character, in his eternal faithfulness, his unceasing mercy, and "the sure mercies of David." But the whole text seems to rest on the fact that the right division of the word of truth is the approval presented in the text.

The school under the law failed to teach the sons of the prophets this lesson. It was too strait and narrow, and they wanted to enlarge it. They borrowed an axe to fell timber, and the axe fell into the water. And one cried and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed." The prophet went to see these sons of the prophets, and they went out to gather herbs; and they found a vine with wild gourds, and gathered a lap full, and shred them into the pot of pottage, for they knew no better. But when they came to eat of the pottage, they exclaimed, "O man of God, there is death in the pot." Thus they were unable to make a right division. We see yet that thing often demonstrated, that these students cannot tell the difference between gospel herbs and law gourds. Hence the child of God can say, "There is death in the pot." These students often come preaching Moses, and not Christ; hence there is death in the pot. There is a lack of rightly dividing the word of truth. Paul was a workman taught by the Architect, Jesus, who builds the temple of God. Jesus gave Paul the example and pattern, and Paul worked by it. All workmen work under the great Master workman. He has laid out the work, and we are commanded to follow his orders, and rightly divide the word of truth. Jesus in his sermon on the mount did the work in a masterly way, and thereby became the example of his workmen, the apostles, and they followed him. Peter, James and John, although uneducated in the world, were educated in the Spirit and were taught of God.

Paul gives a clear example of the proper division of the word of truth in his letter to the churches of Galatia, so that the wayfaring man, though a fool, shall not err therein. He seemed to have fully understood where the line drawn by the Master workman lay, between the law and grace; between the service of bondage and the service of the free born children; between truth and error; between the promise and the works of the creature; between circumcision and uncircumcision; between Christ crucified and the beggarly elements of the world. We also notice in his epistle to the Corinthians his discrimination between the wisdom of this world and the wisdom of God; between vain philosophy and the true wisdom. Also we see in the epistle to the Hebrews that the writer shows the same division between the Mosaic dispensation and the dispensation of Christ; between the tabernacle on earth and the tabernacle in heaven. He also says that "the word of God is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart." So we understand that is the word-spirit, not the word-letter, or letter-word.

We believe that God's ministers see these lines drawn by the great Master workman; and they hew to the line, and let the chips fall as they may.

There are a great many more thoughts in my mind, but lest this article should be too lengthy I will close for the present.

In reference to brother Curry's article I would say that we can see a fulfillment of the Scriptures which teach, "When I have bent Judah for me, filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man."—Zech. ix. 13. We see this demonstrated when men have the word of God, how it is indeed the sword of a mighty man. There seems to be written in the sword of God, Conquer and conquering; for all enemies shall fall before it.

Brother Curry asks in the beginning, "What is man?" He has argued his personality, and I believe as he does. It is in harmony with that which I would write. But all the study does not make man more nor less. He is a creature of God. My experience and observation has been, after much study and close investigation, having access to the volumes of science and philosophy, after all that Darwin, and Tyndall, and Huxley, and others, have written, that we know but little. After all the conflicting statements of these wise heads, Paul covers it all when he says, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed," &c.—Heb. xi. 3. It is only upon this principle that we can understand man as a creature of God. What the Bible says of him is true, and we know it is true by the experience and observation that is common to those who have that faith. The psalmist says that man at his best estate is altogether vanity. We understand this is true as he is compared with God, who is the great Creator and disposer of man. Job seems to have had a clear conception of man, and agrees with the psalmist, "Yet man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." "Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not." "But man dieth, and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"—Job. v. 7; xiv. 1, 2, 10. "Man is like to vanity; his days are as a shadow that passeth away."—Psalm cxliv. 4. Paul has dissected man, and shown his personality and character so clearly that we are made to say, Truth, Lord; for Paul wrote as he was inspired of God. He has shown man, who has justly incurred the wrath of God, as "being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents," &c.—Rom. i. 29, 30. Again, he says, "As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one; there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the prison of asps is under their lips; whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness; their feet are swift to shed blood; destruction and misery are in their ways; and the way of peace have they not known; there is no fear of God before their eyes."—Rom. iii. 10-18. We can very readily form an idea of man as a sinner, under condemnation; and his personality is so clearly revealed that it forever excludes the idea of a spark in him to be kindled into divine life, as Arminians vainly declare. Their very declarations show their own vanity too plainly for us to be mistaken in the matter.

I will now write a few things in line with what brother Powers has said. Doctrine is good. Exposition of false systems is good, and is needed; and I hope God's ministers will spare no arrows at Babylon; for she hath sinned against the Lord, and hath weakened the hand of God's people by leading many away into Babylon who would belong to Zion if they were at home.

Brother Powers, like others, has felt the need of some warnings and teaching in a practical way in the church. Some preachers have miserably neglected this line of duty, and the blood of guilt is on their garments because they have failed to do their duty. I am free to say that the negligence in this line lies at the door of the preacher who has failed to do his duty in preaching the word of the Lord to his flock over which he has charge. If a preacher is justified in failing to preach this part of the word, I do not see how he can be called a faithful preacher. I shall not forget brother Eubanks' remarks last year at the Licking Association, after Elder Francis had used the text from Paul to Timothy, as to how he should behave himself in the house of God. Elder Eubanks said he indorsed everything brother Francis had said. But he and I had come from the Missionary Baptists; and if we had said the same things, doubtless it would rise up in the mind of some, Yes, that is some mission doctrine. But Elder Francis did not come from there. Jesus and all his apostles have taught on that line, and there is line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, to show where the line of duty is to the children of God. I preach that to my churches, just like I do other things that are taught of God in his word. If the minister neglects his brethren in this respect, he need not be surprised if they neglect him. To provide the necessary things was the admonition of Paul; and that covers the ground, and that comes to every member of the church, and they should feel an interest in the church and its welfare. A preacher has to eat, and to wear clothes, and to have a place to live. Paul has told their brethren to provide the necessary things. Paul also admonishes his brethren to "do good and to communicate; for with such sacrifice God is well pleased." And he especially rebuked the spirit of covetousness, and advised that it should not be named among the saints. I understand by this that their liberality should be so clear that no one would surmise such a thing as covetousness. But alas! how far short some have fallen who are well off. God has greatly blessed them, but they give so little that one could surmise that there was covetousness, or love and devotion to money, which is the root of all evil. That is idolatry. And all the cry against idolatry in Babylon does no good when it lurks about in Zion, the city of the living God. I once heard of a brother who wrote for a brother to come and visit the church. The brother went, and paid his own expenses on the road. After he had preached, and was ready to start for his home, the one who had invited him took him over his premises, showed him what he had in land and stock, and plenty on his table to eat, and then asked him if the brethren had done anything for him. "Yes," said he, "they did a little." The brother then pulled out a quarter of a dollar and gave it him, and said, "If the balanced it as well, it will be enough to pay your fare." Was that covetousness? If not, what was it? When that state of things exists how can a church prosper? If such conduct does not cause the love of many to wax cold, I do not know what kind of iniquity will. Did that show the Spirit of Jesus, who though he was rich, for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich? Did that accord with what Solomon said? "The liberal soul shall be made fat." "The liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand."—Prov. xi. 25; Isa. xxxii. 8. Or did it fit that which Solomon said in Prov. xi. 24? "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." I know that twenty-five cents is a liberal contribution from some, and I have sometimes felt like I ought not to take it; for I felt that the brother or sister needed it. I know of a brother preacher who was afraid he would be a burden to his brethren; but now he feels that his refusing to be a burden has had the same effect that Paul's tent making had at Corinth. It caused the church to decline in that duty. Old School Baptists can love the world and money too; and when they do so they are that far living in error, and ought to be rebuked, and exhorted to leave off such things, and to follow Christ. I have no complaint to make against the brethren I serve. They know I am a man of a large family, and they have not turned me off to get a single man who has no wife. There are sometimes such economists in the church that their economy often turns into covetousness. The only way I know to get rid of these things is to reprove for such sins. Stand in the way, cry aloud, and spare not. There has been sparing in this matter, and the sin lies there to afflict the Zion of God. We are commanded to show the house of Israel their sins and transgressions. God grant unto his servants to be faithful, and to serve him in such a way as will be for the good of his people. At times when I have traveled I have thought the brethren were liberal beyond what I was worthy to receive. In fact I often receive help with a trembling hand, fearing it is too much for me, for I am not worthy of anything. I found the Kentucky Baptists very liberal to me; but some of the brethren up there may be on the back ground, and allow a few to do it all. If so, there is the wrong. Those who are in neglect of their duty need their pure minds stirred up by way of remembrance, and should be exhorted to do their whole duty toward the poor, and in the building of houses, and toward their pastors who serve them. Muzzle not the ox that treads out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? Yes, and he has laid down the ox law, and it is plain enough. Read 1 Cor. ix. and 2 Cor. viii. Couple with that the testimony of Jesus, "The workman is worthy of his meat." "The laborer is worthy of his hire." "The laborer is worthy of his reward." These are the words of Jesus. It is enough. A hint to the wise is sufficient. I hope I am writing to the wise in heart, who know the Master's will, and have a mind to follow Christ in this, as well as in other things.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

Ghent, Ky., May 20, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I am in receipt of a letter from one who, I have no doubt, is a true follower of Jesus; but I cannot tell from the letter whether the writer is a brother or sister. It comes from Garrard County, Ky., and is signed Eldon Bartlett. In it I am asked to give my views upon what is taught in the 6th verse of the general epistle of Jude; also the last clause of the 12th verse.

That epistle was addressed "to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called," and they were exhorted to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." The apostle in the most earnest manner warns them (from the 4th verse to the 17th of that epistle) against deceivers, and they were reminded that the apostles had told them that "there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts," and says "These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit." Evidently in that early day in the history of the church the necessity was laid upon that inspired apostle to warn his brethren against those deceivers who had "crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ." The 5th and 6th verses present these solemn warnings by calling the attention of the saints to what has occurred on the earth before their day. In both of these verses the same line of thought is pursued to impress them with the great responsibility of contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. For that purpose he says to them in the 5th verse, "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this; how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." Unbelief is the great gulf that has ever separated the saints from a wicked and persecuting world. The spirit of persecution often made manifest by the professed followers of Jesus in these perilous times is the strongest proof that those who engage in persecuting and saying hard and harsh things against those who differ with them in expositions of some portions of the Scriptures are not governed by the Spirit, are not led by the Spirit to esteem others better than themselves.

But the 6th verse to which our attention is specially called by our correspondent is in these words, "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." The word "angel" conveys the idea of a messenger; and messengers have not always been sent with messages of love, joy and peace; and so the angels that kept not their first estate were not messengers like that one who appeared to the shepherds who watched their flocks by night and proclaimed the glorious news from on high, "Unto you is born

(Continued on page 237.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 26, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

WALKING WORTHILY.

"I THEREFORE, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."—Eph. iv. 1-3.

While the world of self-righteous Pharisees see in the doctrine of the gospel of divine grace nothing to direct their feet in the way of morality and truth, to those who hunger and thirst after righteousness there can be no consideration so powerful as that real, living principle of holiness which abides in every one who is led by the Spirit of God. This is the fruit of the Spirit which remains as the unchanging witness of the life of Christ in those who are born of God. Since none of the sinful children of Adam can with the carnal mind abhor the power which holds them in the willing service of iniquity, there is unquestionable evidence that the love of righteousness reigns in all who feel the power of sin as a heavy bondage from which they earnestly long to be delivered. The very bitterness of distress resulting from conscious subjection to the dominion of sin is conclusive assurance that the love of holiness is in the heart of the mourning one. Certainly none can have that perfect fruit of the Spirit of truth unless that Spirit dwells in the sinner who bears such clear proof of divine life. The depraved heart of the sinner cannot produce the desire for conformity to the perfection which is revealed in Christ Jesus; for God has hidden that beauty of holiness from the discovery of the wise and prudent. Even if it were possible that it could be discerned by the natural man, his mind is only carnal, and therefore it is enmity against God. Manifestly enmity cannot desire to love that which is abhorrent to it. Hence it is impossible that the wish to be free from sin should be found in one who is not born of God. Since this earnest appeal in our text is addressed to none but such as are described as the saints and the faithful in Christ Jesus, it is applicable exclusively to those who have the same desire wrought in them by the Spirit which moved the apostle to write this affectionate entreaty. The whole law of the kingdom of divine grace is written in the heart of every one who is taught of the Lord; it is this peculiarity which constitutes the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus the perfect law of liberty. Under the law of sin and death there was nothing by which the subjects of that law could be approved but perpetual service to rigorous demands. No faithful obedience could ever diminish the debt which was constantly required of them. Even though it had been possible that the servant could have complied with every precept of that law in thought, in word, and in deed, through the long years of a century, in the very first failure to fulfill all that was demanded the penalty incurred was death. While that law was indeed holy, it was weak through the flesh, since no flesh was capable of attaining to perfect righteousness by compliance with legal requirements, whether of that law which was given by Moses, or the law as transgressed by the whole family of mankind in the first sin of Adam in the garden. Righteousness never was designed to be the result of slavish compliance with legal demands. By that system there could have been no room for the display of divine grace. The glory of God in saving his people from their sins could not have been revealed under that system of legal works. Hence it was needful that Jesus should make an end of transgressions by rendering full satisfaction to every demand of the law, and then by his own blood he must purge away the sins of all his members. Having thus redeemed from death every member of his elect church, he now has established his own kingdom of grace, in which there is no more death. Life in Christ Jesus is the very atmosphere of this heavenly kingdom. The terrors of condemnation are forever forbidden to enter this realm of infinite grace. The law of love requires no obedience but that which is wrought in the subjects of his grace by the Holy Spirit of God who evermore dwells in them; so that they find their highest conceivable liberty in perfect conformity to every precept of the commandment of the King in Zion. When this test can be righteously applied to the heart of every professed disciple of Jesus, it will determine with unerring certainty the true state of each one. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."—Rom. viii. 9, 14. This defines precisely the characters to whom the language of our text is applicable. All who have the Spirit of Christ are hungering and thirsting after righteousness; not merely that they wish to escape the penalty of sin in future punishment, but because they love holiness just as God himself loves it; they having received the Spirit of his own perfection; this is manifested in their constant longing to be free from sin.

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." There is certainly special design in the reference to his own condition as being a prisoner at the time of writing this letter. One thing is shown by it beyond controversy. The authority by which the apostle wrote could not have been sustained by any temporal power. Even from the darkness of an earthly prison the inspired word of divine truth goes forth with irresistible authority; and yet it is spoken in the form of an entreaty. In the gospel kingdom there is no more imperative form of precept than that in which the love of God is presented as the only motive for the obedience of the saints. So the word of apostolic admonition and entreaty loses nothing of its weight in consequence of the imprisonment of the messenger by whom it is sent. In beseeching his brethren Paul magnifies his apostolic authority. Not only has he received power to rule in the administration of the law of Christ, but he is able by that same authority to make himself the servant of all the saints. No merely formal compliance with the letter of the inspired directions could constitute the worthy walk to which the saints are exhorted in this text. The vocation wherewith they are called is not merely to render slavish obedience to a law written in tables of stone. They are called to work out in their continual walk and conversation that righteousness which God has wrought in them by his Spirit both to will and to do. No other walk is worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called. If they should turn to the precepts of Moses for guidance there could be no honoring of the law of Christ in such walk. Much less could they honor their vocation by compliance with any standard devised by the wisdom of men. Only in implicit obedience to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus can the vocation of saints be magnified. However men may approve and flatter, there is nothing in which the subjects of Jesus are at liberty to obey any other law but that which they have received from their own King and Law-giver. They walk worthy of their vocation when they keep his commandments, and they walk unworthily when they seek to conform to the devices and commandments of men. They are not left to be guided by any such uncertain light as is afforded by reason. In the commandment of the Lord they have the infallible precept; and in his example they are furnished with the perfect pattern. The Spirit of Christ abiding in them makes them willing to walk in the way of holiness, in which alone they can follow him. In such walking they are not puffed up with the proud consciousness of their superior conduct. Not only would this be a departure from the pattern given by our divine leader, but it would be conformity to the carnal selfishness of the sinful mind. This is not worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called to be saints, since the Spirit of Christ always causes those in whom it dwells to esteem others better than themselves.

This holy principle excludes the selfishness of pride.

It should not be forgotten that the saints are called with this vocation of which they are exhorted to walk worthy. This excludes the application of the appeal to any who have chosen their religious profession according to the dictation of their own judgment. There has been no change in the order which our Lord established when he was in the likeness of sinful flesh in the removal of the legal dispensation and the setting up of the gospel church. Then he called whom he would unto himself; and in no case was his calling ineffectual. The vocation wherewith every saint is called is still a holy calling. It never can fail to produce in those who are called the desire to follow in the footsteps of the beloved Redeemer. To this joyful walk the exhortation of our text calls the disciples.

"With all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love." No other walk is worthy of the heavenly vocation wherewith the saints are called. Such is the deceitfulness of sin that the saints are sometimes led to try by their own will to produce in themselves the lowliness and meekness here stated as defining the manner of walk which is worthy of their vocation. This seems consistent in the sight of reason. But the experience of those who learn of Jesus teaches the impossibility of gathering such heavenly fruit from the thorns and thistles of corrupt and sinful nature. Only as led by the Spirit of God can they follow Jesus in the way of lowliness and meekness. While they do deeply desire to bear this mark of divine life, its very existence in them produces a painful consciousness that it cannot be found in their natural mind. Every ray of divine light shining in the heart of the quickened sinner shows more clearly the exceeding sinfulness of that heart. Instead of lowliness and meekness, pride and self-confidence invade even the most secret thoughts of communion with God. If there is any long-suffering and forbearance in the heart it must be the fruit of the Spirit of Christ. But this is just what constitutes the witness of the Spirit identifying the subjects of electing love. It is not by assuming these gracious marks that a sinner is enabled to make himself a subject of salvation from sin; but it is the effect of the Spirit of Christ dwelling in the chosen vessel of mercy by which he is made to bear these fruits of divine grace. The exhortations and admonitions which are written in the gospel of Christ are but the transcript of that holy law of Christ which is written in the heart of every one who is born of the Spirit. Nothing is enjoined upon the saints but that which is their highest privilege to fulfill. Yet they are never able to see that they have obeyed the direction of that perfect law even when they have received to commendation of their Lord. They are painfully conscious of their own failure to manifest the fruit of the Spirit in their daily conduct and conversation; while they see the power of divine grace in the walk of others in whom they recognize the likeness of their Lord. Herein God works in them the fulfillment of this admonition. Feeling their own unworthiness they are made to esteem others better than themselves; which produces that lowliness and meekness under whose guidance they are prepared to show that long-suffering by which they forbear one another in love. This can never be done as a duty to be fulfilled, it is the work of the Spirit of Christ in the heart of the sinner, causing him to feel himself vile and unworthy, while he sees the perfection of Christ in those whom he recognizes as true subjects of salvation. There is no real forbearing one another in love when the saint is aware that he is showing such forbearance. It may be that he then forbears in pride; but when the love of God rules in the heart the glory of Jesus so far exceeds all other things that there is no room for any thought but the power of that divine love which makes it a privilege to endure all things as partakers of the sufferings of Christ. Then the grace of our Lord Jesus is manifest in the mutual forbearance of one another in love.

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." It is manifest that none can endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit unless they have received that unity. This confirms the limitation of the whole text to such as have the life of Christ in them. As there is but the one body and one Spirit of Christ, those who are led by that Spirit have received the unity which they are exhorted to endeavor to keep. This evidently refers to the fellowship of the saints one with another. However much the natural minds and feelings of the saints may be at variance one from another, they have but the one spiritual mind. Walking in the Spirit they do keep the unity of that Spirit in the bond of peace. This is not to be wrested as authority for such devices of carnal wisdom as would compromise truth with falsehood in the vain hope of patching up a peace between them. If such a course could secure peace at all it would be the very reverse of the unity of the Spirit, since it would be the sacrifice of truth for the sake of making a league with sin. But the unity of the Spirit is only kept by abiding and walking in truth. No temporal advantage or comfort can be sufficient to compensate the saint for the forsaking of one point of the doctrine of God our Savior. In the maintenance of that eternal truth they do keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. In departing from any principle of the doctrine they fail to keep that divine unity.

May the power of divine grace be manifest in leading the saints into all truth, and evermore enable them to walk as children of the light, remembering that they are not their own; that they are bought with the precious blood of Jesus. Surely no higher incentive to obedience could appeal to the heart of a sinner saved by grace than the remembrance of the blood and suffering of Jesus. To him be all the powers of every saint devoted in everlasting praises for his unspeakable gift of righteousness and eternal life.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

READ AGAIN.

WE have tried to impress on our subscribers' minds the fact that under no circumstances can we continue a name on our list longer than the end of this year, 1893, that is sent on with their own subscription, in accordance with second and third paragraphs of last supplement, dated April 12th 1893.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 235.)

this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." But the apostle in the 5th verse calls the attention of his brethren to the delivery of the children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage, and says, "afterward destroyed them that believed not." National Israel was evidently a type of the true church, and there were those among the Israelites that believed not, and the Lord destroyed them. So from the setting up of the gospel kingdom there have been and still are those who claim to be followers of Jesus who believe not. See the history of Judas Iscariot and Ananias and Sapphira. They were all messengers, yet they believed not; and when their unbelief was made manifest, swift destruction seized them. Pharaoh was a messenger, and he went to command Israel to return to bondage, and swift destruction awaited him. Nadab and Abihu were the sons of Aaron, and were consecrated as priests with their father. They were messengers, for they presented to their father Aaron the blood of the bullocks and the rams which were slain and offered as a peace offering; and he sprinkled that blood on the altar. But although Nadab and Abihu were the sons of Aaron, and were consecrated to the priestly office, yet they believed not God, for they offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not to do. "And there went out fire from the Lord, and devoured them, and they died before the Lord."—Num. x. 2. Surely they did not keep their first estate, but left their own habitation. Their first estate was the priestly office, and their habitation was prepared for them; but unbelief led them to disregard the command of the Lord, and they offered strange fire. The priests were held to strict obedience under the temple service. That service was a figure of the service in the true tabernacle which the Lord instituted, and not man. In that service no strange fire can or should be used. Jesus was both the high priest and the offering, and that offering forever perfected them that are sanctified. He having made a perfect and complete offering, no more offerings for sin could be made; and those in these days who are attempting to teach that which they are not required to teach, are no more justified in their strange efforts than Nadab and Abihu were in the use of strange fire. When our Lord gave the great commission, he placed a limit on those who preach the gospel, as binding as that commission given to Nadab and Abihu not to use strange fire. He said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." If they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, they are as culpable as Nadab and Abihu. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul;" and to that law which was given by Christ and his apostles should all the saints look, and by it should they be governed. It is the law of love. "God is love," and the law emanates from his holy perfections. John says, "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." But Jude says, "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." I have never adopted the Miltonia theory and arrived at the conclusion that there once was a great war in the heaven of eternal glory, and that Satan once was an angel of light, and having been vanquished, was cast out of heaven, together with all his subordinates, who now make this earth their place of abode. But the angels of whom Jude speaks are beings of earth, and have throughout the gospel dispensation secured to themselves places among God's dear people, which give the power and authority to which they have no right. It is written, "And unto the angel of the church in Sardis write: These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." "And unto the church of the Laodiceans write: These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God; I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." The word "angel" in these quotations refers clearly to the ministers or pastors of those churches, and the language of the true witness to them should be received as a fearful warning to all those who preach the gospel—to all who attempt to proclaim to a dying world the unsearchable riches of Christ.

"And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." The word "chains" conveys the idea of confinement; and the angel of the church of Sardis was dead. That is, dead to the glorious truth of the gospel. Therefore he was bound, so far as that heavenly truth was concerned. "And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans" he said, "I will spue thee out of my mouth." No more were the soul-inspiring teachings of the Holy Spirit to be his. No more were his eyes to behold the glorious beauties of the spiritual Canaan. His Lord would spue him out of his mouth; for he, and all like him, were "reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." The glories of the kingdom of God's dear Son were hid to him and all of his class; for they were under darkness, and they could no more go forth among God's dear people and tell of the conquests of their glorious Lord over all the powers of sin and Satan, for they were "reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." Their separation from the work of the gospel ministry was final. No more could they enjoy the precious feast spread on the gospel table. But one thing they could do, and all their class are doing now. They could preach a conditional system of salvation. They could say to a dying world, God has done his part, and unless you do yours you will be lost forever. Yes, and they could sing

"While the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

Or,

"I have a God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save,
And fit it for the skies."

In the 12th verse of that epistle they are clearly described. "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots." To the last clause of that verse special attention is called. "Trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots." This language is figurative, but forcibly presents the character and condition of those angels whose vocation and chief delight should have been to preach Christ in all his fullness. But the figure presents them as trees which were truly barren. Their fruit withered when they preached another gospel. The apostle says, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." What was the gospel that Paul preached? is a pertinent question. It evidently was Jesus in his own glorious fullness. He said to the saints at Corinth, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." When they preached another gospel they were without fruit; consequently the true followers of Jesus were not fed when they heard the wisdom of men, learned in the schools of men, and not the wisdom of God. He is wisdom, and our Lord is made of God wisdom unto his saints, and especially to those servants whom he calls and sends forth to preach the everlasting gospel. Hence they, like Paul, know nothing among the saints "save Jesus Christ and him crucified." But the apostle describes them as "twice dead." Surely they are dead to the ever precious truth of the gospel, and to all the graces of the Spirit, which are love, joy, &c. They are dead to the love of the saints, and dead to the joys of salvation through the atoning blood and righteousness of Jesus Christ. Being separated from the fellowship of the saints, and lost to all the beauties and glories of the spiritual Jerusalem, they are "plucked up by the roots." O how beautiful and glorious is that Jerusalem, the city of our God, the habitation of his saints. They need not the light of the sun, nor anything that belongs to earth, to add to their joys. "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever." He shines in all his saints to give them "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." When they are lifted up above the pains and sorrows of a sin-cursed world, O how delightful and healing is that light. This poor, old and sorrowing one is sometimes enabled to fondly hope that he has seen the King in his beauty, and beheld the land that is very far off. May the light of the glorious Sun of righteousness shine with all its healing rays upon our inquiring correspondent, and all the dear saints, is the sincere prayer of this feeble and afflicted one.

H. COX.

CONVERSION.

"At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. xviii. 1-4.

Before taking up the subject I wish to quote from the preceding chapter, to show how silly it was for the disciples to ask such a question of Jesus, by giving the account of the man coming to Jesus, and kneeling down to him, and saying, "Lord, have mercy on my son; for he is lunatic," &c. "And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him. Then Jesus answered and said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me. And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him; and the child was cured from that very hour. Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out? And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove: and nothing shall be impossible unto you."

This pharisaical spirit that moved the disciples to ask Jesus who should be greatest in the kingdom of heaven is common amongst men to-day, for the question asked was a pharisaical one; and if we will examine we will find the same spirit ruling and governing the religious denominations of our day, not excepting the Old Baptists, for this same spirit to be greatest has caused more strife and confusion than any other spirit in man. The desire to be great religiously, and to be looked up to as a pattern, and to be worshiped as the oracles of God, has rent fellowship, divided brethren, and caused hatred, strife and confusion, bringing sadness and sorrow unto those who once walked together in peace and love. I am often reminded of a conversation which took place between a minister and my dear departed wife. The minister had not long been ordained. He was very zealous for the Lord especially, so that he had a great deal of fault to find with the views of some of his older brethren in the ministry on certain portions of Scripture, not thinking them very sound on some points of doctrine. That conversation brought to my mind an expression from our late Elder R. C. Leachman, who said that young preachers were very much like young wasps; that they were much bigger when they were first hatched than they were afterward. My wife told this young preacher that he had a great deal to learn yet; signifying that he would have to be converted, and become as a little child, before he would be fully qualified to judge his older brethren. I have often thought that Elder Leachman spoke by experience; for he was a man that did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, whether it cut the pride of his brethren or not.

One more incident I will notice before coming directly to the subject of my text. A few years ago, when the question of the new birth arose amongst the Baptists in Kentucky, and was pressed to a test of fellowship, the same subject was brought by one of our preachers to Virginia, and preached and pressed so far as making it a test of fellowship in some of our churches. I for one opposed the bringing of that question from Kentucky to Virginia, and labored with my brethren and the preacher that brought it to let it remain in Kentucky, where it started; but my labor was in vain, although I was much exercised upon the introduction of that subject into our churches. During the time, in conversation with one of its advocates, a preacher, whose ability I did not question as a servant of God, I asked him the simple question privately, at my own house, what were his views upon this much-mooted question, the new birth, so-called. He willingly gave me his views, as follows. He said he believed the new birth took place at the resurrection of the body. I told him that I did not particularly object to his views, but I did not so understand it. I then asked him if he preached the new birth, and he said he tried to preach it. I then said to him, "If it be so, that the new birth takes place at the resurrection of the body, what do you know about it? Have you passed through that resurrection? For the apostles testified to the things they saw and heard. His remark then was, "I expect there is a great deal of speculation about that subject." I told him that I agreed with him; and so far as that part of the subject was about the resurrection, it was all speculation at best, for the apostle John declares, "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

I have also read Articles of Faith published by Baptists in which, to my understanding, they deny the words of Jesus by saying, "Not the natural man born again." I will say to those Baptists, I understand that Abraham was a natural man when God called him out of the land of Haran, and made promise unto him, saying, "And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Certainly the families of the earth are the generations of Adam, of whose generations was Nicodemus, to whom Jesus said, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus said unto him, "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?" Certainly Nicodemus was a natural man, for he reasoned upon natural principles; and I am free to admit that if a man has not been born again all reasoning upon the subject would be only speculation to him, as much so as the parable used by Jesus was to his disciples at that time, when he called the little child and set him in the midst of them, and said, "Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." In another parable Jesus uses a figure, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." On this figure I will give my understanding of the parable. I understand the parable of the three measures of meal to mean the Adamic man or sinner whom Christ came to save. The Adamic man is composed of three measures, soul, body and spirit. It takes all three to constitute the man. The leaven I understand to be the new covenant, spoken of in Jeremiah xxxi., beginning at the thirty-first verse: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord: but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more. Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; The Lord of hosts is his name: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me forever." This new covenant I understand to be the leaven that (in a figure) is put in the three measures of meal, according to the parable; and where you find one of these sinners in which this law is put by the finger of God, you will see the work of conversion going on. Now, what is the spirit of this law in the new covenant? Let Jesus explain it. "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."—Matt. xxii. 37-40. Then the spirit of that law is love, which leaveneth the whole lump. Here is the entering into the kingdom of heaven.

I will digress a little. There are three heavens spoken of in the Scriptures. The apostle Paul says he knew a man above fourteen years ago that was taken up to the third heaven, and saw things unlawful for man to utter. I conclude that the first or legal heaven was the Abrahamic or Mosaic heaven, which was rolled up as a scroll; the second the gospel heaven, under the new covenant, in which this law is put in their inward parts and written in their hearts. A man has to be born into this heaven by the power of God. Jesus says, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." Therefore the necessity of this law being written in his heart; and the spirit of this law is love. Let us test this law by the works of men, for by their works, it is written, ye shall know them; and in doing so let us take up the religious world as we see it to-day, and from time immemorial; and what do we see? I use this in contrast, for it is the only way we can show up the subject. What do we see manifest amongst the religious denominations of the day? A striving for the mastery, or who will be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, as they say. Do we see any little children in the great masses of religionists? Can you show me a converted man in all their works and doings? Take a look, like David did, in their prosperity, and you will see that the striving is as to who shall be greatest. Yes, you can see plenty of Pharisees who are doing so much for the Lord; but there are very few publicans who smite upon their breasts, crying, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." You need not go outside of the Old Baptists to find some such characters. You can find men under that name who can say hard things and vile things, full of hatred and envy, about them whom they once called brethren. Is the law of love written in their hearts? Is that new covenant found there? No; they are worshiping under the old covenant, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," and, like Saul of Tarsus, really think they are doing God service in persecuting the saints, and saying all manner of evil against them. Such ones need to be converted, and become as little children. What a beautiful figure of the church this is, a company of little children in the arms of Jesus! The apostle Peter had to be converted. He was valiant for his Lord, and said he would go with him to prison and to death. But poor, weak man, Jesus told him he should deny him thrice before the cock crew; that Satan had desired him, to sift him as wheat; but when he was converted he was to strengthen his brethren. It seems to me there are yet Peters upon the earth, who boast of their own strength and wisdom. I feel sometimes that I am vain, like Peter, and I know by experience, that if left to myself I would deny my Lord; but I hope the leaven has been hid in the three measures of meal, and the work of conversion is going on within me, and when the whole lump is leavened mortality will be swallowed up of life.

We must be converted to enter into the kingdom of heaven; and we must be born again to see the kingdom of God. We must be born of water and of the Spirit to enter into the kingdom of God. To my mind, the water here used in a figure is the same new covenant which I have spoken of; for if a man has this law in his heart it is in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. It is the law of love to his God and his neighbor. It was the same love of our God that brought Jesus down from heaven to save us from our sins; for that was his name. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." He therefore came in this new covenant, which was ordered in all things and sure; and to my mind, wherever you see that love manifested from brother to brother you see the spirit of that law manifested in the subjects of his grace; and they are born again, not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God; for God has put this law in their minds, and written it in their hearts; and they shall be his people, and he will be their God.

Yours affectionately,

JOSEPH BROTHERS.

DRAIN, Ore., June 4, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—We forward you a letter written by Elder J. P. Allison, which we think is too good to cast away. It has been so comforting to us, we feel that others might enjoy it if you should see fit to publish it in the SIGNS. We will leave that to your better judgment. We send it without his consent; but if he scolds us we will take it; for we are willing to be reproved by any of our old fathers in Israel, as we feel him to be. The only delicacy I feel in sending it is that he makes mention of my name in his letter. I always have a dread of seeing my name in print; but if all the patrons of the SIGNS felt as I do, who would communicate to the paper? We prize it above all other papers we have ever read. We are deprived of meeting with our brethren, and seldom ever hear a true gospel sermon preached. We can never tell of the comfort we take in reading the dear old SIGNS.

Yours with much christian love,
A. & S. MORNINGSTAR.

OAK CREEK, Ore., May 28, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER MORNINGSTAR:—We received a very interesting and comforting letter from you some weeks since. I promised at some future time to write you a letter. Several times since I have felt a desire to write; but it seems like I am shut up and cannot come forth. When I let down my bucket, behold, it returns to me empty, without a drop of pure water to cheer a thirsty soul. If indeed I have a cruse, it does not spring. Ah, all is empty, vain and wild. Can I deem myself a child of God? I cast about me for some token of love in my poor sinful heart, and am constrained to say,

"O Lord, and shall I ever live

At this poor dying rate?

My love to thee so cold, so faint,

And thine to me so great."

Yet at the same time I feel in some degree to realize that

"Love is the sweetest bud that grows;

Its beauty never dies;

It blossoms in our hearts below,

And ripens in the skies."

I feel to-day that I want to see you and have a good talk; but the distance we are from each other deprives us of that privilege, and the only way left for us is to communicate by letter; and although I am a poor hand at writing my thoughts on paper, I esteem it a great privilege that we may thus converse with each other. The eminent apostle enjoins upon us that we exhort one another, and that we forget not to communicate. O that I had something cheering to communicate. To exhort to love and good works seems to belong to others, and I am the one that daily and hourly needs exhortation. I am growing old and feeble minded; and instead of being the sober, meek and orderly walking christian that I expected to be when I arrived at the age I now am, I see and feel more and more of my weakness, my inbred sinfulness, and my utter inability to do anything good or meritorious. I often find myself repeating the hymn,

"O for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free,
A heart that always feels thy blood,
So freely shed for me."

My dear sister Morningstar, your letter was a feast to my poor heart. You touched upon that glorious harp of a thousand strings. How well that harp represents the experience of God's humble poor. Yea, the strings to that harp are indeed many, and none can give the proper sound but those who have taken lessons under the sweet singer of Israel as represented in the Song of Solomon. But you, dear sister, know the rudiments, and can find every string, and give the proper sound. The strings of this instrument are secret, hidden from the world, and cannot be taught by men. No one can play upon this harp unless they have it. You cannot borrow your brother's harp when yours gets out of tune. It differs from all other instruments of music. Though the owner can play well and rejoice in the sweet notes of his harp, when it is in tune, yet he cannot keep it in tune himself, nor tune it himself when it is out of tune. As you remarked in your letter, when you tried to tell your neighbors of your hope, and of your doubts and trials in your pilgrimage, they could not understand a word you said, because they had no harp. You may have your harp in full tune, and play before a thousand people; yet none will understand except those who are scholars and have obtained a harp of a thousand strings.

I cannot write all that I would like to upon this beautiful subject; but I will say that it is easy for the birds to sing when the time comes for them to sing. In vain would we try to get the birds to sing in winter. So it is in vain we try to take our harps down from the willows; but when the Lord's time comes, then how easy it is for us to play upon this harp; to tell of the goodness and mercy of God; to tell of our joys and our sorrows; to tell of our trials and conflicts with the old enemy; to tell how the dear Lord has delivered us from all our troubles; and it seems the longer our harps hang upon the willows, the more sweet the notes are when we are blessed to have it in tune again. We dance for joy while we play, and all the daughters dance with us; because we never play alone, although there may be no person in our sight. They that are familiar with the harp come into our mind and heart, and we all play together; even the prophets and apostles, and the spirits of just men made perfect. O glorious thought! Here is the blessed fellowship of the saints. "And truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."

Fare ye well in the Lord.

J. P. ALLISON.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Des Moines River Association of Primitive Baptists will convene with the Round Prairie Church, seven miles southeast of Fairfield, Jefferson Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August (19th), 1893, and continue Sunday and Monday.

Those coming via the C. B. & Q. or the C. R. I. & P. R. Rs. will stop at Fairfield, where trains will be met Friday evening and Saturday morning. Trains will also be met Friday evening and Saturday morning on the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa R. R. Those coming from the east will stop at Stockport, and those from the west at Birmingham. Appointments for meeting Friday evening are at brother B. T. Williams' and N. Spidler's.

A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers in particular.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p. m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:43 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station on Thursday at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days' meeting will be held at Hughesville, Loudoun Co., Va., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July.

Trains leave Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., 4:35 and 5:30 p. m. The p. m. trains will be met at Hamilton Station, for which point all will buy tickets, on Thursday. The a. m. train will be met at the same station on Friday. Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to attend.

E. V. WHITE.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00

Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1893.

NO. 31.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHENT, Ky., June 10, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—In gloom and sadness I have meditated upon that great city to which Abraham looked, and offer to you my meditations.

"For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."—Heb. xi. 10. What beautiful and illustrative figures are given to the saints in the sacred word for their learning, comfort and edification. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and is given in love and mercy to his redeemed, that they might be perfect, thoroughly furnished to every good work. All the good works of God's dear people are wrought in them by the Spirit. "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." "Without faith it is impossible to please him." An inspired apostle says, "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." But God is the author and finisher of the faith of his saints; and their faith works by love, because God is love. Of Abraham, to whom the language of the text relates, the apostle says, "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise." That promise was, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." That seed was Christ, in whom the faith of Abraham, as well as all the saints who have lived or will ever live on the earth, centred; and he is the builder and maker of that great city. Then how apt an illustration is the figure of a city as used by the apostle. Anciently cities were built by men, and they were surrounded with great and high walls, and their foundations were laid deeply in the earth, and all was done by wise architects and builders that could be done to make them durable, and reflect honor upon the kings of earth who caused them to be built; but how futile the works of men, and how vain the glory of the beings of earth! The walls of those cities have crumbled and fallen, and now lay as valueless as the bodies of their constructors. Babylon, that boasted of being the mistress of the world, is now the habitation of moles and bats and poisonous reptiles. But Abraham's faith enabled him to look beyond the confines of earth, and the power, wisdom and skill of mortals; "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." While he dwelt in the land of promise it was to him a strange country. So, dear follower of Jesus, you are dwelling in a strange land. While here below you have no abiding city. You are strangers and pilgrims on the earth, but by faith you sometimes in sweet meditation behold some of the beauties and glories of that great city which is your future and eternal home. It is there your kindred, your best friends, dwell. But what a halo of glory surrounds you in those sweet meditations when you by faith behold Jesus, who is King of saints, reigning in that great city, supreme over all principalities and powers, and swaying the sceptre of righteousness. There on the wings of hope you rise far above the vanities of a sin-polluted world, and with joy are enabled to say, with David, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." It was by faith that Abraham looked for that great city which hath foundations; and it was in faith that David was given the power to say, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness," and to proclaim to all the saints, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Although he was king of Israel, and chosen above all the sons of Jesse to fill that great and responsible office by the great Ruler of all things, and was consecrated to the great work before him under the direct command of God, yet he was not satisfied. By faith he beheld set apart for him a higher and more holy consecration; but that could not be reached till he slept, till he was disrobed of all outward honors and of all outward consecration. Time in its onward march must find him resting as lowly as the most feeble subject in his great kingdom, before he could awake in the likeness of his glorious Lord—before he could behold that great city whose maker and builder is God. Abraham was not satisfied, although he sojourned in the land of promise; yet to him it was a strange country. "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." That God was the resurrection and the life; and he said, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad." He saw by faith that day in which the Messenger of the covenant would suddenly come into his temple. Seeing that day, he beheld him in all his great and wondrous fullness as the maker and builder of that great city. He saw him as the God of wisdom and power, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." Seeing the end from the beginning, all the inhabitants of that great city were fixed in his eternal purpose before time began; for they were chosen in Christ Jesus before the world began. They were "elect according to the foreknowledge of God." He beheld them afar off, involved in sin, and condemned under the law; but he also beheld them as heirs of God, and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ, to an inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. That inheritance was that great city, with all its beauties and superlative glories, whose builder and maker was God. But the inhabitants of that city being under the sentence of death, he laid aside the glory he had with the Father before the world began, and took upon himself a body which was prepared him; and in that body he offered himself to God for their redemption from under the curse of that law. That people being partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that he through death might deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. In that offering he destroyed him who had the power of death, that is, the devil. He had the power of death, and exercised that power when he deceived our first parents, and brought them into that transgression the penalty of which was death. But by that offering he delivered them from that bondage, although the fear of death was part of their earthly inheritance. That fear permeates the hearts of all the dear saints while in their earthly pilgrimage. It is not alone the fear of the dissolution of their mortal bodies, but it reaches greatly beyond these corruptible bodies. They realize that gloom, darkness and sorrow are their daily companions, because they know that when they would do good, evil is present with them. In the midst of this sorrow and gloom their cry is, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But, dear follower of Jesus, you should recollect that while he tabernacled in the body he was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief; that he became poor, that you might be made rich; that he suffered, that you might have a home in that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Ah, dear mourning one, you should remember that the servant is not greater than his master; that he passed through the darkness, sorrow and gloom of Gethsemane; and may you not often find yourself in that garden, and in sorrow made to conclude that you were deserted by all, and that every hope and stay was removed? It is that death to all spiritual things that you so greatly fear, and it is that fear that makes you all your lifetime subject to bondage; but you should remember also that while the children of Israel were put into possession of the promised land, that land which flowed with milk and honey, yet all the tribes that they found in that land, and claiming to have rights there, were not driven out. So while here below enemies of truth surround you, and claim that they have rights in the sanctuary of our God. They are babbling and boasting that they are doing a great work for the Lord. Their boastings sometimes lead you into gloom and sorrow, knowing that you have nothing of which to boast. With the prophet you are made to say, "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; thou also hast wrought all our works in us." He wrought their works in them, and his work being perfect, they are good works; but to his name be all the glory for every good thought and every good deed which they by grace divine are enabled to think or do.

But no place can be called a city unless it has inhabitants; and upon the character of the inhabitants depend the prosperity of the city and the happiness of those who inhabit it. Then let our thoughts and meditations rest for awhile on the character of the inhabitants of that city. Great efforts are made in the world to educate the people, and fit them for the great affairs of life; but the life for which they are educated is transient, and soon passes away. Not so with the inhabitants of that great city. To them is given eternal life, and they shall never perish; and as his work is perfect, they are made to speak a pure language; and the wisdom given them is like its divine giver—it is eternal. "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children," is the language of the prophet. Our Lord taught them as one having authority; and the lessons he taught are lessons of love. The apostle says to them, "Ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another." That love is bestowed upon them to prepare them for a place in that great city. Again, the apostle says, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." The world knows nothing of that love which binds in one eternal and indissoluble union all the redeemed and regenerated sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. The world knoweth them not, because they were created for a place in that great city, and do not depend upon their good works to secure to them the eternal joys of that blessed home of those sons of God on whom that love is bestowed. They are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." He says by the prophet, "Fear not; for I am with thee: I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west: I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth; even every one that is called by my name; for I have created him for my glory, I have formed him; yea, I have made him." That great city being spiritual, all its inhabitants are born of the Spirit, and are the subjects of two births, the natural and the spiritual. The natural birth fits them for the affairs of earthly cities and kingdoms, and the spiritual birth fits them for a place in that spiritual city to which they will be brought from every land and clime; for he created them for his own glory, and he created and made them for a place in that great city. But will any of them fail to reach their place in their happy and eternal home? O no; he is omnipotent, and love is one of his ever-glorious attributes, and they are all called by his name; for he bestowed upon them love by which they are called "the sons of God," when he says, "Bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth." Will that high and lofty One who inhabiteth eternity fail to accomplish his purpose which he purposed in himself ere time began? To answer this question in the affirmative would be to declare that he is not God, and that he has not all power in heaven and earth. But, glory to his all-exalted name, he rides upon the heavens in the help of all his redeemed, and in his excellency on the sky, and none can say to him, What doest thou?

He says by the prophet, "Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains: for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted. But Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me." All the inhabitants of that great city are kept by his power, and watched over by his omnipotence, and loved by his unchanging love, and will be brought off conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him that hath loved them and given himself for them. Then should any of the dear saints wonder that Abraham "looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God?" It is to that great city that you, dear little ones, are looking with longing eyes, and often in mournful accents are made to sing,

"O land of rest, for thee I sigh!
When will the moment come
That I shall lay my armor by,
And dwell with Christ at home?"

You, dear brethren, will please dispose of these solemn meditations (which may be of little interest to others, but have afforded comfort and consolation to me in these hours of sorrow and sadness), and believe me affectionately yours,

H. COX.

HERNDON, Va., May 12, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I send you a letter written by our dear brother Kidwell, which was a great comfort to me. But now I am in darkness and have no light. I feel that I am a castaway, without hope and without God in the world. I have brother Kidwell's consent to have his letter published in the SIGNS, if you see fit to do so. Of course I have no judgment of spiritual things, so I submit it to your judgment.

Yours in sorrow,

J. F. OLIVER.

MERRIFIELD, Va., Feb. 25, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER OLIVER:—It may be that you have forgotten me in the multitude of your afflictions, together with my long silence, which in such a case is perfectly natural. Yet I have felt all the while that I could not utter a word of advice or comfort, notwithstanding I was not blind to your distress and sorrow. Indeed I cannot understand it. It is as if all life were crushed out of me, yet consciousness still remaining; or as stricken dumb, with my dear brother's sufferings before me, but with no words to comfort him. Even now I am at a loss to tell you my mind; yet something has been saying all the morning, "Write to brother Oliver." I took it that peradventure the Lord would give me a word, from the fact that with the impression to write came the words, "That ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." I do not know why these words are on my mind more than any other portion of Scripture. Certainly I do not feel that I know more about their true import than any others; nay, less than some others. Yet they come to me this morning somehow in addition to all that I have seen written upon them; for it is often the case that they are quoted by dear ones in writing of the afflictions of the bereaved. Never in my recollection has a communication or sermon been written or preached from these words. I have often wished I might be present at such a time when they are used as a text. Now, dear brother, I know you will, out of your charitable heart, cast a mantle that will cover all I may write amiss. I know there is no perfection in me, and without the Spirit of Christ no comfort can come.

I understand the apostle to be here teaching and endeavoring to comfort the brethren at Thessalonica, encouraging them in the doctrine of the resurrection, of which he says he would not have them to be ignorant, concerning them which are asleep; and to make the difference clear between the brethren and "others that have no hope," he calls their attention to the death and resurrection of Jesus as the reason of their hope; while the "others" referred to have no such reason or evidence whatever. Now this is the point that comes to my mind, and so I must pen it. "For," says the apostle, "if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so [just so] them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." This our only precious hope is made manifest in the death and resurrection of Jesus, by the almighty power of God. Who then can stay his hand that he cannot bring every one of those subjects of grace with Christ again from the dead, even as in their first experience it is already done, which is the manifestation of Christ in them the hope of glory, causing them to believe on him whom the Father hath sent? In our great joy we meet round one common mercy-seat with all the saints of old, crying, Abba, Father, my Father. O how near this is, to a poor, trembling soul, to be where that cry can reach their Father in their sorrow and affliction. Can any others come to this place? Can any others claim this relationship? The sorrow of mind of unregenerate men can never take comfort that they will outride the storm of adversity, care and vexation; for theirs is the glory of this world, and their earthen vessel is laden with vanity, while even their vessel is water-logged and ready to sink at any moment. They have no anchor, and their cable is rusty and weak, and will not stand a strain. But how is it with those whose anchor is "Hope," both sure and steadfast, and enters beyond mortal sight, whither for them the Forerunner is entered through his death and resurrection? Then why sorrow, my dear brother, like those who have not this hope? "O no; not that way," says one; "but I feel satisfied that my dear one is gone to rest." I hope they are at rest. Dear soul, let me ask you one question. On what is that hope based? Is it on the good deeds of the one departed, in your judgment, or on the merits of Jesus? If on the latter, then you yourself must be the recipient of that hope, and it will surely hold you safe while the storm of life shall last. Do you not know that the cable of events of God's providence and grace, which form the chain, link in link, is being shortened as the end is reached, that the anchor may be brought near; and when the last link is taken up we glide into port, to go no more out forever? Dear brother, have we this hope? Have we this anchor? I know by past experience in my own heart that you may tremble to answer in the affirmative; but even then your weary soul would look once more toward that holy temple, at the bleeding hands of Jesus, to him who said as he came forth from the dead, "Go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me." Then the language of your heart is, To whom shall I go? for thou, Lord, hast the words of eternal life. Yes, dear soul, there is your anchor, your hope; therefore you need not fear. In the sense that Jesus lives to the joy and comfort of the saints, as their life and their all, they cannot sorrow as those who have no hope; for in the day that the Lord appears to his people it is a day of joy, a day of gladness. Sorrow and sighing flee away, and a song of praise and adoration is atuned in notes divine. Thus it was with each of us in an experimental sense. But as in the world we shall have tribulation, we must needs be brought low, that we may realize the coming up out of great tribulation. Our robes must be where Jesus was, to be washed in his blood. Since the transgression in Eden by our mother we come forth children in sorrow and pain. Even so we come forth from under that curse, in Christ, in sorrow and pain. Liberty comes to us in our blessed anchor, Jesus. Sorrow comes to us from feeling the loss of it. But, my dear brother, the waters of tribulation are muddy, and we cannot yet see how many links are to be taken in ere we are at the end. But the anchor is no less sure and steadfast, and that hope prevails, of which the apostle would not have us to be ignorant, while he calls our attention to those who are asleep. No, no. We sorrow not in the sense that we think there is any lack of power on God's part to bring all his loved ones who have fallen asleep. None will be left out. "The dead in Christ shall rise first." Showing his watchcare under all circumstances.

All the sorrows we have is by reason of our earthly relationship; but hope reaches beyond this, and sustains us in all our trials and afflictions, and begets anew that form of prayer which Jesus teaches, "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." It is a holy desire for submission in one place as in another, whether in earth or heaven. Thus from day to day we are enabled to bear the cross, to endure the pain, being supported by his word that the curse is removed. "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again," we can count our sorrows and trials but light afflictions, compared with that exceeding and eternal weight of glory that shall be revealed in that bringing again from sleep those who have gone to rest, to awake in the image of Jesus, in that state where no sorrow and sickness can ever come. In this blessed assurance we cannot desire them back again. Nay, my brother. To be absent from the body and present with the Lord is far better. Feeling thus is the manifestation of that spirit which always says, "Thy will be done."

When Jesus died, I do not understand that he was a substitute offered, but a body prepared; made sin for us; that could be justly brought under the law and under its curse; made a partaker of all our weakness, with the curse resting upon him; became the very embodiment of sin, so that the demands of the law could justly take hold of him in its righteous judgment, and demand his blood. Yet he himself was without sin, so that a perfect sacrifice could in him be obtained, and in this manner could be acceptable to God. As this is the only way that our sins could be taken away, we must see them laid on his sinless head. Now in that he died, he bore the curse for us. We could not bear the curse and live without him; so we bore it in him. As the man was not in the transgression, but the woman was, even so the man Christ Jesus was not in it, but his bride, the church, as part and parcel of him. All the fruit that Adam tasted was that which Eve gave him; even so all the sins that Jesus bore were given him of his bride, the church. And even as sin did not part asunder our first parents, so death could not separate Christ and the church; for in death they walked through the dark valley, going out, as it were, from the garden of the Lord's pleasure, to meet the sword of justice, forsaken of all strength, crying, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Dear brother, you know this cry; not because you are alone but because you are in the way with Jesus; and while you feel subject to vanity, yet says a poor, weeping heart, "Not I, but sin that dwelleth in me." But, dear soul, such as you are subjected in hope.

We have followed Jesus and his bride, the church, down under the curse and to death; but how about those dry bones living again? For dry indeed they are if they stay in this place. Dear soul, the power and glory of God are engaged to bring them forth from under the curse of the law, which is death; and our Surety is not a mere substitute, but the God of love, of infinite wisdom and power. He can lay down his life and take it again; and as he and his church are one, they go down together, and they come forth together; for nothing can separate them from the love of God the Father which we have in our Lord Jesus Christ. Death itself cannot do it; for it is Christ our Surety that died; yea, more than that, he arose again for our justification. Right here let me drop a thought. We could never be justified by a mere substitute; for "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" not another that may offer itself instead thereof. For all have sinned and fell under the curse. Here comes in the sweet and comforting consolation of the imputation of a righteousness that is not our own, but the righteousness of him who was without sin. "That we might be made the righteousness of God in him." That we should be raised up in Christ Jesus from under the law and its curse, being freely justified from all condemnation. Here is the great and glorious resurrection spoken of as the first resurrection. "On such the second death [which is the death to sin] hath no power;" for Jesus himself is the resurrection and the life. All power in heaven and in earth is given unto him, that he should give eternal life to all those that were given him in the covenant of love and mercy before the world began; and of them he says that it is the Father's will that he should lose nothing, but raise it up at the last day. To raise a thing up is to make it manifest; so he sends the Comforter, to make manifest that we are his children, and causing us to call upon the name of the Lord as our Father. To die to sin is only to fall asleep in Jesus, to awake to a glorious hope in our Lord and Savior; for no more death awaits the saints. Jesus has made an end of sin by the sacrifice of himself, and life and immortality are brought to light through the gospel, which is good news from a far country, glad tidings of joy to the sorrowing and sad. No sorrow or sadness is like unto that of the saints; for no earthly comfort or earthly joy will supply the yearning of their hearts. They desire nothing so much as to be meek and submissive to the will of their Lord; to have a thankful frame in all things; in adversity as well as in prosperity. "But O!" says one, "I fall so far short of being really so. I fear I am not what I have professed to be all these long years. My bones are bleached and dry. How can I look for comfort? Where is my hope gone? Where may I find him who, as I hoped, was revealed to me as my Surety? Dear child, did you lose sight of him after the transfiguration, after he came down from the mount and traveled in the low country? Did you stop to look back, and try to tabernacle there, and forget to go whithersoever he leads? Is there no need to be with him in sorrow, in evil, as well as in good report, and to become acquainted with grief? Has it slipped from your memory how that through suffering you are made perfect, and in weakness the same? Then your sorrow is not as others, who have no hope; for your hope speaks in the language of the poet,

"Yet save a trembling sinner, Lord,
Whose hope, still hovering round thy word,

Would light on some sweet promise there,
Some sure support against despair."

Dear soul, is this your song? I know no sweeter one; for it speaks of faith and dependence and the sovereignty of God in the very first line; and of a holy trust in that great anchor of the soul in the second line; and your heavenly desires are poured out in the third line; and the surety and safety you feel, if he supports and sustains you, although a poor, helpless sinner. No wonder then that we are admonished to sorrow not, even as others who have no hope, feeling assured that the Lord doeth all things well. Then, as for those who have fallen asleep in Jesus in this time sense, we would that you should be assured that as Christ died and rose again, even by that same power will he bring all those sleeping ones again to a realization of the end of their anchor, safe into port, that haven of eternal rest, no more to be tossed on life's billows, but where sorrows never come, and sin cannot annoy; where all tears are wiped away and the glad notes of salvation will continue to be sung; where there can be no one to interrupt, and no discordant sound is heard. Therefore let us not weep, dear brother, but rather rejoice that the Lord hath brought us off more than conquerors through his death and resurrection. Not because of our works, but according to his great love wherewith he loved us, before ever our sorrows or time began.

I begin to realize now that I know but little of the sweet and lasting consolation contained in the words referred to; yet as I still hold the pen the scene grows before me, so that my very soul seems to lay hold of things that cause a feeling of submission to settle down around me, and I feel that it is not right to mourn and give way to grief that gives no comfort, aside from the fact that our nature is such that this is a part of our inheritance here. But as brethren of one common household of faith, believers in the finished work of our dear elder Brother, we yet have that blessed anchor to hold us and keep us through every stormy wind that blows; and for this reason we differ from others. So let us rejoice and be exceeding glad, for the time will soon come when we also will fall asleep and rest from all we suffer here in this day of labor; for these are our days of sorrow and weeping; but a rest still remains for all the children who have sown in tears here; and there, beyond this valley, they shall reap in endless joy.

I wish you would come down some day, and then we could talk about our hopes and fears. You will please excuse my short coming in this epistle to tell of the comfort in the Scripture, for I have not the power of expression to tell what I feel or see. I have written a portion of what came before me while writing; for, as I said, I had nothing when I began. May the Lord guide you and keep you in due submission to his will, is the desire of one who subscribes himself your brother,

ELI T. KIDWELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 18, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As my physician has agreed for me to use my pen again, unfruitful and destitute of the knowledge of the glory of God as I now am, I feel impressed to speak a few words to the readers of the SIGNS.

My sickness has been somewhat severe, being confined to my bed three weeks; but when I could feel it is one of the all things that work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose, I could rejoice in my infirmities. If I am one of that number it is for my good, and if not it will not hinder it from working together for good to them who are; and I believe I have that love for God's children that I can willingly suffer that they may be benefited, even if I cannot reap with them. The Lord has wonderfully blessed me in bestowing these afflictions upon me, and placing me among the dear brethren of this city, who have done all in their power to make it as pleasant for me as possible. May the Lord bless them for it.

I have had many pleasant reflections while on the bed of affliction, especially on the fourth of July. I could hear drums beating, fifes blowing, fire-works exploding, on every side; and amid this commotion my mind took a retrospective view of our nation's history. I could see it clearly demonstrated "that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will."—Daniel iv. 25. Truly "Promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge: he putteth down one, and setteth up another."—Psalm lxxv. 6, 7. Not only does the destiny of the church hang on his firm decree, but that of states and kingdoms, thrones and dominions, as well. No man has ever ascended the throne or government chair unless the Lord has placed him there; and he often "setteth up over it the basest of men." Neither is any one brought low but by him. "The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich; he bringeth low, and lifteth up. He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar out of the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory."—1 Sam. ii. 7, 8. Everything great and small must come to pass according to the unalterable decree of God.

"Life, death and hell, and worlds unknown,
Hang on his firm decree;
He sits on no precarious throne,
Nor borrows leave to be."

(Continued on page 245.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 2, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE WORD OF LIFE.

"AND when I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live, yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live."—Ezekiel xvi. 6.

While it would afford us pleasure to comply with the request of our inquiring brother, P. S. Kinney, as expressed in his note on page 245, by giving a comment on the whole paragraph of which this verse is the commencement, there is more contained in the verse quoted than we can hope to be able to express in the limits of time and space at our disposal. The prophecy necessarily involves the consideration not only of the whole paragraph, but of all the testimony of the inspired record.

In the literal application of this message to the nation of Israel, it is plain that they had received such favor from the hand of the Lord as had never been manifested toward any other people. They were chosen of God as his own peculiar people before they were developed in their earthly existence. God called Abraham alone, and gave promise to him that in his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed. Bible readers are familiar with the wonderful manner in which that promise was fulfilled in the literal preservation of the nation of Israel through all the adverse circumstances attending their development. Not a word is said of any peculiar merit on their part as being the cause of their being thus highly favored of God. When this divine purpose was made known to Abraham he was yet dwelling among the idolatrous Chaldeans, and with his kindred destitute of the knowledge of the true God. There is no record that he ever sought for any better confidence than that which satisfied the heathen among whom he dwelt. It was only the sovereign grace of God which separated him from them, and made him the father of all them that believe. This grace was revealed in calling him while yet in unbelief and sin. Therefore there could have been no merit in him by which this blessing was secured.

In the consideration of any prophetic testimony addressed to the nation of Israel, it must always be observed that they could receive no favor on the ground of merit on their part. In this fact is typically foretold the truth that the blessings of the new covenant in the gospel are not dependent upon any works of righteousness performed by the subjects of electing love. This truth is so contrary to all the thoughts of natural reason that it can be received only by revelation of God. Instead of regarding the special manifestation of divine favor in their behalf as a display of infinite grace, the natural Israelites saw in it occasion for the encouragement of their pride. They trusted in themselves that they were better than the heathen nations, and despised those who could not claim their natural descent from the seed of Abraham. Such selfish confidence invariably results from reliance upon any false system of salvation. The whole revelation of divine truth as given by inspiration of God is very emphatic in testifying that the salvation of sinners is entirely by the grace of God, and that without reference to any merit on the part of those who are saved from their sins. This is clearly taught in the portion of prophecy contained in the text submitted for our consideration. In the connection of the text the prophet was moved of God to denounce the rebellion and idolatry of his fellow Israelites. They were called to remember the miserable condition from which they had been delivered by the power of God, and under the type of an abandoned infant their utter helplessness was portrayed. Then the Lord reminds them in our text of his great mercy and pity, by which they had been preserved from destruction. In this they are indeed a very expressive type of the spiritual nation of Israel, who are the subjects of electing love and mercy. Since they were justly condemned sinners in their relation to the natural Adam, being children of wrath even as others in their earthly state, they are well represented by the perishing infant left to die in its utter helplessness. So far is this miserable one from being able to perform any work as a condition of receiving the needed attention upon which its very life depends, it is not even able to ask for such essential relief. So the sinner in his state of just condemnation is incapable of asking for deliverance from the dominion of sin. He cannot even be conscious of his lost condition.

The time specified in the text is further defined in the following verses of the paragraph as being to Jerusalem "the time of love." That love was displayed in the wonderful mercy by which the power of God fulfilled the command which he spoke, saying unto this wretched one, Live! It was not merely an expression of sympathy and permission that the perishing one might still live if she could find sustenance and be able to secure suitable clothing; the same word of the Lord which was so graciously spoken to her, was itself the life which it commanded. In no case is this word ever spoken in vain. Every one who hears the voice of the Lord is thereby made alive with that eternal life which Jesus gives to all his sheep. None of them shall perish.

They are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. This time of love is not brought about by any works of the polluted and sinful one who is represented by Jerusalem as addressed in the text. Evidently one in the helpless state described could never hope to be able to pay for the service of love and mercy, without which death must be the end of her misery. The infinite grace of God was revealed in the word which brought life and justification to guilty sinners who were chosen in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before God in love. These are they who compose the church of the redeemed, whose names are written in heaven.

The fact of their salvation being secured by sovereign grace, without conditions to be fulfilled by themselves, appears to the perverted judgment of the carnal mind as giving encouragement for the saints yielding service to sin. It will be observed however that in this connection the Lord cites this manifestation of his divine favor as the highest consideration by which the subjects of his grace could be bound to consider themselves as being devoted wholly to the service of that God who had thus signally blessed them. Under the slavish system of working for wages, there is nothing to be attained but death, which is the wages of sin. Eternal life is the gift of God, and this is received only through Jesus Christ our Lord. There is no intimation in the volume of revealed truth that this infinite treasure is ever attained by creature merit. When the law was given to our father Adam in his primitive innocence, there was no promise of anything more than earthly blessings in obedience. So long as he was obedient there was no death in the garden where he was placed by his Maker. After he had brought death upon himself and all his posterity by transgression, it was not necessary that his children should individually transgress that law in order that they should be sinners; they were already condemned when they were manifested as having inherited that condition of death which was all Adam had to leave to his ruined children. From Adam to Moses the reign of death attested the universal contamination of all the children of that sinful parent. Therefore it is clear that there was no eternal life in that law which was given to Adam in the garden. The law which was given by Moses had no promise of life in its observance; it was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. No other law could claim divine authority until the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus was revealed. This law is the living Word which is Christ in the saints. By it they are sealed as heirs of glory in their Redeemer. All this is secured in the word of the Lord which said unto them when polluted in their blood, "Live!" The presence of that life which they have received in the living word of the Lord is manifested by the constant warfare between the love of righteousness and the enmity of the carnal mind, by which they are forbidden to do the good which they desire to do, and brought into captivity to the law of sin which is still in their members. None can know this conflict but such as are led by the Spirit of God; for there can be no desire for righteousness in those who have not the love of holiness in their heart. Every one, therefore, who has this conflict in his own heart, must be led by the Spirit of God, and all such are born of God. These constitute the election of grace, and are the spiritual house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. In the manifestation of the grace of God in calling them out of darkness into the light of life, they are shown their condemnation under the sentence of divine justice. In this revelation they see themselves in the deplorable condition of the polluted and outcast infant described in the text. Only the infinite grace of God could avail for the deliverance of such hopeless sinners from the death in which they were involved.

In our text this great display of divine love is presented as showing the enormity of the ingratitude of the people whom the Lord had so highly favored. As it was literally true of the nation of Israel, so it is in the case of the antitypical people of whom that nation was but the shadow. When they are enabled to see in the light of the true revelation of God their infinite debt of gratitude for the mercy bestowed in the forgiveness of their sins, they feel that nothing could be more terrible than that they should continue to live in the service of that sin which is so hateful to them. Yet they find themselves still subject to the vanity of that sin which so easily besets them. They have constantly to mourn their weakness and the frequent occasions when they find themselves captivated by the deceitful working of their carnal mind, which leads them to depart from the way of obedience to the law of Christ, whose divine perfection they most earnestly love. Thus in their constant experience they are taught the same truth which is written in our text by the inspiration of God. Not only in being translated out of the darkness of death into the light and liberty of the sons of God, but in all their subsequent experience, the saints have to learn their entire dependence upon the unmerited favor of that God in whom is all their salvation. They cannot forget the grace which delivered them from the burden of just condemnation, and washed away the intolerable load of sin under which they groan. To this deliverance the Lord calls their attention in the presentation of their great ingratitude in departing from the commandment which he had given them. The very life which they have received from the infinite mercy of God is certainly the least tribute by which they can render thanksgiving to their gracious Savior. Every one who is led by the Spirit of God will readily confess this obligation; yet it is the complaint of every one of them that the power of sin working in their members forbids their doing the good which they desire to do, and brings them into captivity to the law of sin which is in their members.

The repetition of the declaration of what the Lord had done for his chosen people, represented in our text as Jerusalem, is the most forcible form of expressing important truth. It is the manner in which throughout the Scriptures particular attention is called to special expressions of essential principles. So when the Lord appeared for the deliverance of his chosen nation from Egyptian bondage, as cited by Stephen, he said, "I HAVE SEEN, I HAVE SEEN the affliction of my people." The repetition of the statement in our text most unmistakably establishes the fact that the sovereign mercy of God was the source from which came the life that was given to the sinner when he was dead in sin. That infinite mercy and grace must bestow every blessing for the support and protection of his saints in time, and it secures their eternal glorification in the throne of their Redeemer. Surely there can never be a time when the subjects of divine grace can be in a more deplorable condition than that which is represented in their being left to perish as stated in the emphatic language of our text. Since even in that wretched state the love of God embraced the sinful objects of his choice, certainly there can never be any depth of pollution and sin by which that love can be forfeited. The conscious sinner may well love this glorious doctrine of sovereign grace, because in it is revealed the only salvation from sin by which the guilty can be made holy and without blame before God in love. Others may be satisfied with the expectation of freedom from the punishment due to their sins; but those who are truly born of God must long for freedom from sin itself, as well as from the death which is its penalty. There is no other way revealed in which salvation from sin can be extended to the guilty, but that divinely appointed way through the blood of Jesus Christ, which cleanses his people from all sin.

The charge of ingratitude and rebellion, which is brought against Jerusalem in this prophecy, will be readily acknowledged by the saints who have continually to mourn their subjection to the vanity of their carnal mind. They do not need to go to the Scriptures to find this declaration of their indebtedness to the goodness and mercy of God. It is all the hope of life to them. So, also, they have the abiding sense of their own unworthiness, under which they feel the weight of the severe reproof of which our text is a portion. The Spirit of Christ in them individually bears witness to their need of preserving grace in all their pilgrimage through this land of snares and enemies. Only by the power of that same Word of life can they be kept in the way of truth, as by it they were called from death to life. There is no step in the whole pilgrimage of the saints from their first reception of the light of life until they are enthroned in eternal glory, but that they are dependent upon the protection and support of that grace which can be received only from "The Word of Life."

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

INQUIRIES AFTER TRUTH.

SCHOHARIE, N. Y., June 18, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Will you be so kind as to give your views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, on a portion of the sixteenth chapter of Ezekiel, especially that portion included in the paragraph beginning with the sixth and ending with the fourteenth verse? This is a long text; your compliance will greatly oblige me.

Elder F. A. Chick would confer a great favor by giving his thoughts on the balance of the chapter as it relates to the church in her travels, and the outside world.

Yours fraternally,

P. S. KINNEY.

(Editorial reply on page 244.)

(Continued from page 243.)

Not one of the decrees of God can fail to be fulfilled; for "no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed." Ever since the serpent laid his philosophy before our mother Eve have men and devils been trying to defeat the purposes of God, arguing that "Thou shalt not surely die;" but instead of defeating they have fulfilled them. Joseph's brethren sought to destroy him, that they might put an end to his dreams; and they sold him into Egypt. They in their wicked design did just what God had predestinated they should do. Joseph says, "God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance. So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God."—Gen. xlv. 7, 8. Satan and his cohorts sought to put Christ to death, that they might exterminate that "certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of the kingdom." This people's "laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws."—Esther iii. 8. This poor and afflicted people have been the object of hatred by antichrist ever since the Lord put enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent, and when their Prophet, Priest and King was with them in the flesh all the powers of darkness were gathered against him; but they could do nothing more nor less than the great I Am had determined they should do. "For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done."—Acts iv. 27, 28. The rage of the heathen, and the vain imaginations of the people, were each fulfilling God's decree. When "the kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and against his Christ," they were performing the work which the Lord had assigned them before the foundation of the world. Every event that takes place only shows the arrangement of God in eternity.

"Chained to his throne a volume lies,
With all the fates of men,
With every angel's form and size,
Drawn by the eternal pen.

"His providence unfolds the book,
And makes his counsels shine;
Each opening leaf and every stroke
Fulfills some deep design."

What consolation it ought to give us to know that all things are under the control of God; that he works all things after the counsel of his own will, and makes all things work together for good to them that love him; that the evil as well as the good is included in his predestination. "The Lord has his way in the whirlwind and the storm," as well as in the gentle breeze. "He that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, The Lord, The God of hosts, is his name."—Amos iv. 13. "Hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering. He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them." "By his Spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent. Lo, these are parts of his ways; but how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?"—Job xxvi.

"The beamings of his piercing sight
Bring dark hypocrisy to light;
Death and destruction naked lie,
And hell uncover'd to his eye."

This is the God that I hope I worship, and to his name be glory.

My health has much improved, yet I am able to stir but little. I do not expect to return to Kentucky before the last of August, as my physician thinks it would be much against me. May the Lord enable us in all things to be reconciled to his will, knowing that "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." But "he will keep the feet of his saints."

J. W. FAIRCHILD.

GOODNIGHT, Ky., April 15, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—KIND EDITORS:—I will inclose a letter written by a dear mother in Israel, who has doubtless gone to her eternal home. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Will you be so kind as to publish the letter in your valuable paper?

LAURA M. BAIRD.

MARCH 8, 1857.

MRS. L. M. BAIRD—DEAR MADAM:—Excuse my boldness in taking such liberty, as I never heard of you until two weeks ago. We are entire strangers here in the flesh, but it appears to me there is a relationship existing between us so near that I feel like we are sisters. I was presented with your letter which you wrote to Mrs. Nuckels, giving an account of your distress of mind. It was so much like one I wrote last September to Mr. Wm. A. Norvell, I feel it my duty to say something about it to you; for I had thought there never was any poor creature in this world in such a miserable condition as I was; for Satan had blinded me and deceived me many years ago, and caused me to join a church, where I remained for many years. All this took place five hundred miles from here. When I moved to this state I brought a letter from that church; but I was so much of the belief that I was deceived that it kept me from handing the letter to any church. When I thought of my condition I felt like I wanted to tell my distress to some of the Old Baptists; but guilt and shame kept me from it. I thought if I could write a few lines and drop them where old father Nuckels would see them I would do so; but guilt and shame would not let me do it. I wished the church to know of my distress, but I could not tell it. You can guess what my distress of mind was, for I often thought, Surely there is no possible chance for me ever to be saved, and I never can be forgiven. On the last day of August I went to hear Wm. Norvell preach. As I went on my way I begged the Lord that it might prove to be a day long to be remembered by me; and so it was; for I never shall forget my feelings while I keep what little sense I have. He preached from the words, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts." I felt like I was searched completely. The last line of every verse of the hymn he sang was this, "Give me Jesus, or I die." I cannot tell what were my feelings. The words were so suitable to my case, and I thought I had never before heard such preaching in all my life as I heard that day by him and Wm. Bradley. I thought how glad I would be if the church only knew of my distress of mind, and would entreat the Lord for me. I do not think that ever any poor creature felt so miserable, so cast down, so vile, so broken hearted. I tried to pray and to beg for mercy; yet I did not feel that I deserved it. Often would I say, "O Lord, I deserve nothing but thy wrath; but O forgive!" Often I would say, "Surely I have committed the unpardonable sin." I thought there was a chance for everybody but me. I lost my relish for food and sleep. I had no pleasure in the company of my own family. I wanted to go where no mortal eye could see me. I concluded to speak my mind, so I wrote a letter to brother Norvell, desiring an answer. He sent me the most comforting answer. I read it with joy and grief mingled together. It gave me more pleasure than all the gold of Ophir would have done if it had been in my possession. He named in his letter that Jesus Christ was exalted with the right hand of God to give repentance and remission of sins to Israel. And you must let me say to you that you are one of that chosen family; and you must not confer so much with flesh and blood and your own imperfections. I want you to think of this, and do not think your case worse than that of any other person; for I feel very certain that you do not feel any worse than I have felt. I think it impossible for any being to feel worse than I have felt; for I thought I certainly could not be allowed to live much longer. When I would lie down on my bed at night with my husband I would try to keep my troubles hid as much as possible. My pillow would be wet with my tears, and I would think, "O Lord, if I were to die this night where would I go? To die as I am, where thou art I could not be." Often would I lie for hours and wonder if any of God's people were engaged in prayer for me, and would beg the Lord to hear their prayers. I would sometimes imagine I could almost see one praying for me. I thought of the creation of God, and the different living creatures on earth, and every creature appeared to enjoy themselves in some way. I viewed the Old Baptists as the happiest people in the world. The proud seemed happy, and the brute creation all appeared to enjoy themselves. In all this, I saw that God was just, and that my condemnation was also just. I think that if ever I felt humble in my life it was about that time. When I had given up all hope, I was made to cry out, "O Lord, I certainly do love thee, and that thou dost know." I felt like he did love me also. The tears streamed from my eyes, and I praised the Lord. I cannot describe my feelings at that moment. I said, "O Lord, is it possible that I am one of thine elect?" I felt like I had an interest in his death. I kept from telling it to the church as long as I could, for fear I was not worthy; and I still feel unworthy. But I have a little hope mixed with fear. This one thing I know, if I know anything, that I do love the Lord and his people; and I read where he says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." So I have ventured to talk to the church, and I expect to be baptized on the fourth Sunday in March if it is God's will. I wish you could be there to enter the watery grave with me. Cheer up, poor mourner. God will save his people. Not one of them will be lost. I feel very certain that you are one of them. I sympathize greatly with you; but I am not at all uneasy about your condition; for I think that the darkest time of night sometimes is just before the break of day. I feel like I will see you at the association at Glover's Creek next August. At least I hope so. Remember me in your prayers, for I know you do pray. If your mouth is shut your heart is engaged.

I must come to a close for the want of paper.

Yours in bonds of love,

AMY T. PEDIGO.

DELTA, Ohio, May 26, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send with my communication the written experience of a dear sister I met while visiting in Indiana last winter. She is one of the faithful ones. Do with all I send you as your judgment dictates, and all will be right. I love the SIGNS for the truth's sake.

Yours in hope,

A. F. DOVE.

WABASH, Ind., April 28, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER DOVE:—As you requested me to send you my experience, which I had already written for a dear sister in Alabama, I will try to comply.

I was very young when I first began thinking on the subject of religion. In my loneliness I would look around for some one to care for me. While at meeting I noticed the minister read from the Bible that God would be a father to the fatherless. I wondered if he would be my friend. I only thought of God as a man exalted above the earth, who would love persons that were good, which I tried so hard to be. I would go to Sunday School and try to excel all others in committing to memory verses, while there was nothing in them to me only to excel in number. I would often hear preaching which would frighten me; I was afraid I would be lost. Each birthday I would resolve to do better, but always failed in keeping my vows. The minister told me that I ought to join the church, which I did at the age of twelve. I could not enjoy their services; and although they set three different times to take me in as a full member, I was never taken in.

I will here relate what was to me a very impressive circumstance that happened in the class-room. One member seemed very different from the rest. They would arise to their feet and tell what great things they had done and were now doing for the Lord, and how determined they were to reach heaven; but there was one who could not so much as raise her head, but would sob aloud, saying she could not speak with the assurance which they did, but that she sometimes hoped she was a christian. She said she had many doubts and fears, and that if saved at all it was through the blood of Jesus. Though young in years, there was something in her experience which touched a chord in my heart, and caused me to love her more than the others. I had tried faithfully to become a christian. I was raised to think that I had the strength if I would only persevere. I began to wonder why I failed in every attempt. I tried to pray, but my prayers seemed cold and unheard. I never had heard any one preach as I felt, and had been taught that of all the abominable doctrines taught the Baptists had the worst. I remained for years thinking there was none like myself, and that surely I was the greatest sinner. When about fifteen years old I visited a cousin, and attended meeting in a school-house. I did not know then who the preacher was, nor what denomination he belonged to, but I never heard my feelings told so plainly before. When he preached experience I rejoiced, but the doctrine he preached seemed hard. I moved more than thirty miles, and young friends asked me to attend meeting, which I did, and to my surprise and comfort the same preacher was there. I began to compare his preaching with the verses I had committed to memory, and found that I was not only blind, but of myself helpless; not in danger of being lost, but that was my condition already. For months I was in deep sorrow. Many times would I plead for mercy, finding no relief.

About this time our dear little daughter Emma was taken ill with lung fever, and we had no hope of her recovery. Bowed down on account of sin, once more I entered my closet, there to beg for forgiveness. "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." I realized that my prayer had been answered. Darkness turned to light, and I could rejoice even in the hour of affliction. Kneeling by the cradle I kissed my dear sick babe, while from my heart I could say, "Thy will, O Lord, be done." She was restored.

The very doctrine that I hated was now what I loved. The doctrine that had appeared so hard was now filled with comfort, and I rejoiced in it, and wanted to live with the people who preached it; for in reading the Scriptures it seemed so plainly taught. I longed to see some of God's dear children, that I might tell them how I had been brought from darkness to light; and my heart was so drawn out in love to his dear people that I could not stay away from them, but desired to be baptized in their fellowship. I went to the next meeting at Clear Creek, and was baptized by Elder Samuel Williams, who was the preacher I heard to my comfort in the school-house. Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life.

From the least of all,

S. A. KELSEY.

WARWICK, N. Y., July 16, 1893.

DEAR ELDER JENKINS:—I have recently returned from a three weeks' stay with our greatly afflicted sister, Mary Parker. As she is so much worse than formerly, she desires that you kindly make mention of it in the SIGNS, that her many friends and correspondents may know of her welfare, and why many letters have not been answered. There seems to be a complication of new ailments causing an increase of suffering and weakness, rendering her unfit to use her pen or to converse much. During the last few days of my stay, however, she seemed somewhat better, had less stupor, &c.; but I doubt if she can do much writing during the warm season. Indeed, I wonder how she writes at all, being in constant pain, and having to sit day and night upon great, deep, putrefying sores, such as few can endure to look upon. To dress these sores, which is needed to be done frequently, seems to take all the little strength she has. I am sure none can understand, even though they have seen the dear sister, how terribly severe her sufferings are. When the pain can no longer be borne in silence, the tears stream down her cheeks, and a feeble groan escapes her lips; no murmuring, no complaining, is ever heard. Surely it is the power of God's grace in the heart that thus enables her to bear such suffering uncomplainingly. I think I was taught a very precious lesson while there, which I hope I may never forget—a lesson of patience, of love and faith. Her faith and confidence in the Beloved cannot be shaken. "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him," can truly be said of her. The poem entitled "Shut In" seems so in accord with her feelings that I quote it.

"Shut in, but not alone;
Who closed the door himself is here,
Speaking in words of heavenly cheer,
And calling me his own.

"I see the clouds sail by,
Like silent ships on silent seas;
But winds and clouds their Sovereign
please,
Their path is marked on high.

"God's will is in the rain,
The seasons of the rounding year;
It glistens in the falling tear;
God's will is in my pain.

"So in that will I rest;
His loving hand makes all my bed,
And on that hand I lay my head,
Remembered, loved and blest.

"The sabbath comes and goes,
Bringing its hush of peace, its silent calm;
But not for me the temple psalm;
Yet this my Father knows.

"He giveth songs at night,
And through the day sweet anthems roll
Within the chancel of the soul
To him who makes all bright.

"I dare not then repine,
But wait to do the Father's will,
Bidding my doubts and fears be still;
My times are his, not mine."

She seemed so glad to have me with her, as indeed did all the family; and aside from the sorrow felt for the precious sufferer my visit was enjoyable in the extreme. Sister Mary received many letters, and a few other tokens of love from precious ones. How I wished the donors could have seen the happy smile which brightened her sweet, pure face when their gifts were received. She tremblingly said, "O it does make me so happy, though I'm so undeserving." I am sure the happiness was not hers alone. It is more blessed to give than to receive; and it seems to me that nothing quite equals the blessedness of giving to the Lord's afflicted ones. In a case like this, of such severe and prolonged suffering, much is needed. O, my brother, should we not really deny ourselves many of the luxuries of life to aid any so distressed, especially those of our own kindred? I humbly pray the Lord to move upon every christian heart to contribute to the needs of his suffering ones everywhere.

Unworthily your sister,
M. M. ROUNSAVELL.

DELTA, Ohio, May 24, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Through the columns of the SIGNS allow me to tender my thanks to an unknown friend for the kindness shown me by having the SIGNS OF THE TIMES sent to me. It is a kindness highly appreciated by me, though the friend has followed the admonition not to let the right hand know what the left hand doeth. I feel sure it is one who loves the truth; and if I too love it we are not strangers, but brethren, having one Father, the God of heaven, and one mother, Jerusalem which is above. What a kindred! There is none other so near; there is none other so strong. It can never be severed. All earthly ties will sooner or later be broken; but the tie that unites the children of God is the everlasting, unchangeable love of God. O how strong, and how sweet to rest in that love which knows no change. Happy indeed is that one who has felt that love in the heart; who no longer looks upon God as an angry God, but by faith beholds him a boundless ocean of infinite love, which has been manifested to him in that he has given his only begotten Son to die for our sins. O wonder of wonders! We can only wonder that he who knew no sin was made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

Dear reader, if you have felt the love of God in your heart, and been enabled by faith to receive Jesus as your Savior, you are blessed beyond human comprehension. All the wisdom of this world can never fathom the depth of that love which fills the heart of a poor, helpless sinner who has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son. He is now a new creature, created in Christ Jesus, adopted into the family of God, and washed in the blood of Jesus; and though you may be weak in yourself, and have many doubts and fears, fear not, dear trembling one. Christ has conquered all your enemies, even death. O blessed Savior! We may have a long and weary march, may have many battles by the way, may have trials and temptations, but fear not. He who has gone before us has left us the blessed assurance that he will never leave nor forsake us. Ah, he dwells in us, and we in him. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow us all the days of our lives. So fear not, little one, but trust in the Lord; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength. Farewell.

A. F. DOVE.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION, BUREAU OF ADMISSIONS, ROOM 16, NEWS SERVICE BUILDING, JACKSON PARK,
CHICAGO, Ill., July 19, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS:—It is a source of great comfort to me to read the SIGNS, which is forwarded to me while I am employed here in the "Admissions Department." The copies I receive are sent on by my father, Mr. B. F. Hamilton, of Batavia, N. Y. What proves of so great consolation and comfort to me in this place of so much wickedness, I know is of equal value to many others; and to those who are unable from lack of means to have and read the messages of peace and comfort contained in the good old SIGNS my heart goes out in sympathy. Will you not please send the paper to some one so situated for the amount inclosed for such subscription, and greatly oblige me?

Hoping that you will be prospered in keeping faithfully the great trust of publishing the gospel of the kingdom of God as revealed to his people here on earth, I remain with kindest wishes yours very truly,

C. W. HAMILTON.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—On April 13th, 1893, Mrs. Estella Tombs, aged 32 years, 2 months and 22 days.

She was the wife of Lafayette Tombs, of Slate Run, Pa., and the daughter of Norris Callahan, of the same place. Her disease was consumption. She had been in failing health for several months. She was not a member of the church, but was a lover of the truth, and was therefore drawn very much to the Old School Baptist Church, having no christian fellowship for any other. We believe that she is with Jesus. May the Lord reconcile and comfort the sorrowful husband and relatives left behind. The writer tried to talk to the friends.

D. M. VAIL.

WAVERLY, Pa.

BROTHER Thomas Manby died of paralysis of the brain at Benton Centre, N. Y., May 23d, 1893.

He had been in failing health for three years, but was confined to his bed only a few days previous to his death. He was born in Haveringham, Suffolk, England, Dec. 16th, 1820. He was married and came to this country in 1851. He united with the New School Baptists in 1854, and remained with them until 1880, when he was baptized by Elder S. H. Durand, in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at Burdett, N. Y. Afterward he united by letter with the church at May's Mill, N. Y. He was always in his place at the meetings of the church as long as his health would permit. He had a great interest for the church, and showed his faith by his works, both by meeting with the brethren and aiding to their temporal wants. But he is gone, never to return to us again. He leaves a wife, two daughters, many friends, and the little church at May's Mill, to mourn their loss. The funeral services were held at his home. The writer spoke to a large congregation with the ability which God was pleased to give.

CHARLES BOGARDUS.

WHITE CHURCH, N. Y., July 21, 1893.

DIED—Near the city of Middletown, N. Y., on June 28th, 1893, of inflammation of the stomach, Mrs. Susan Carey, wife of Deacon John B. Carey, of the Brookfield Church.

The subject of this notice was born in the town of Wawayanda, Orange Co., N. Y., in the year 1813, and was therefore in her eightieth year. She is survived by her husband, one son and two daughters, one son having died about three years ago. She never made a public profession of religion, but it was evident to those about her that she was a subject of grace. Elder Benton Jenkins spoke comforting words to the bereaved family and friends, after which we laid her to rest in the Slate Hill cemetery. He also read the hymn, "Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!" &c., which was a favorite with the deceased.

Farewell, dear mother, sweet thy rest;
Weary with years and worn with pain.
Farewell till in that happy place
We shall again behold thy face.
'Tis ours to miss thee all our years,
And tender memories of thee keep;
Thine, in the Lord, forever rest,
For so he giveth his beloved sleep.

HER GRANDDAUGHTER.

DIED—At his residence in Unionville, Orange Co., N. Y., on Wednesday morning, July 5th, 1893, Mr. John R. Halstead, aged 62 years, 3 months and 2 days.

On May 13th, 1863, Mr. Halstead was united in marriage with Emma, daughter of Wm. A. and Sally Sayer, and with the exception of a short residence in Meadville, Pa., the thirty years of their happy married life were spent in the place where he died. He had never made a profession of religion, but was a warm friend of the Old School Baptists, his now bereaved and sorrowing companion being a member of the Middletown & Wallkill Old School Baptist Church. He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters, one brother and two sisters, who feel that their loss is great. He had held several offices of trust, and was generally regarded by his fellow-men as a wise and safe counsellor, and a man of truth and honor.

May the God of all comfort and consolation sustain and comfort the mourners and teach us all to be still and know that he is God.

"In heaven, and earth, and air, and seas,
He executes his firm decrees;
And by his saints it stands confess'd
That what he does is ever best."

The funeral services were held at the family residence on Friday, the 7th, and were conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins.—Ed.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE sixty-second annual session of the Spoon River Association of Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1893, and continue three days.

The meeting will be at the Mt. Zion Church, Fulton Co., Ill., seven miles east of Astoria, on the St. Louis Division of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Our brethren are invited to come and see us.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Des Moines River Association of Primitive Baptists will convene with the Round Prairie Church, seven miles southeast of Fairfield, Jefferson Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August (19th), 1893, and continue Sunday and Monday.

Those coming via the C., B. & Q. or the C., R. I. & P. R. Rs. will stop at Fairfield, where trains will be met Friday evening and Saturday morning. Trains will also be met Friday evening and Saturday morning on the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa R. R. Those coming from the east will stop at Stockport, and those from the west at Birmingham. Appointments for meeting Friday evening are at brother B. T. Williams' and N. Spidler's. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers in particular.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p. m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station on Thursday at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

The annual meeting with the church at Bryn Zion is appointed on the third Sunday in August, Saturday included.

Friends who can attend with us, and expect to come by rail, will please get tickets for Kenton, if coming from the northward, and come down the Delaware R. R. on the first train on Saturday. Saturday meeting at two o'clock p. m. Those coming from the southward get tickets for Clayton.

The Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:30 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.

Salt River—28th.

As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.

Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.

Elk Lick—5th.

Mt. Sterling—6th.

Mt. Carmel—7th.

Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Charlotte Hill, Mich., 1, W. H. Wicks, Pa., 3, W. W. Mooney, Ind., 1, Lydia Jackson, Iowa, 3, Charles W. Hamilton, Ill., 2, Ebenezer Clark, Ohio, 1.—Total, $11.00.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00

Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1893.

NO. 32.

POETRY.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH BIRTHDAY.

June 14, 1893.

My soul, begin a song
About my life and state;
God has preserved my life so long
That I am seventy-eight.
My life I now review,
And all the way I see
His hand has all the journey through
Been safely leading me.

Through dangers I have come,
And conflicts have I passed;
And now as I am nearing home
My soul on him I cast.

His promises to me
Have all the way been true;
"I'll be a Father unto thee,
And take thee safely through."

But O! it is with shame
That I must now confess,
I've done so little for his name,
To show his righteousness.

Distrustful of his word,
Ungrateful for his love,
Often forgetful of my Lord,
And of the things above.

Since eighteen thirty-three
I've been along the way;
And daily I am led to see
I'm prone to go astray.

For almost threescore years
I've tried to spread his name;
And yet my work to me appears
But feeble, weak and lame.

Two things I've come to know,
Let them be great or small:
One is that I can nothing do,
And Jesus does it all.

Soon shall my journey end,
Soon shall I know my doom;
If Jesus then shall be my Friend
I shall not dread the tomb.

I. N. VANMETER.

JESUS.

JESUS, I love thee, and adore
Thy perfect life, thy wondrous power,
Serene simplicity!

Walking thy lone, majestic way,
In humble faith from day to day,
God's self was veiled in thee.

And must Jerusalem be bought
By blood more rich than e'er was caught?
Thine own Jerusalem,
Once here by law in fetters bound,
Now high above all glories crowned,
Thy ransomed diadem.

Only a glimpse just here and there
Of scars that rent thy bosom fair,
In time's pressed cup of grief;
The perfect child, the perfect man,
The perfect Lord, God's perfect plan,
Writ out in lines so brief.

And all was finished—not a jot
Against thy bride could e'er be brought;
The universe sits dumb!
Her scarlet sins thy body wore,
Heaven's unseal'd wrath thy bosom bore;
She stands, thine upright one.

Sweet, solemn truth! Be still, O man;
Hope blossoms from Faith's lovely plan,
God's sovereign, changeless will,
To quicken, call, and fashion here
His hidden ones, so each appears
His purpose to fulfill.

Thus grace rules love, for love is grace,
Down flowing through his chosen race,
Predestined in his heart
To all the suffering of sin,
To all the triumphs that begin
In that blest unity with him,
Of whom they form a part.

MRS. J. STREET.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MEANS.

"IS PREACHING the gospel a means of quickening dead sinners? Or does God make use of any human means in performing this work?"

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I feel like presenting a few thoughts for the consideration of the readers of the SIGNS upon the above named theme. This is not because I suppose any of the supporters and readers of the SIGNS are tainted with this "means" heresy, but because it is well to often examine the reasons for the faith that is in us, to the end that we be established in the truth, and prepared to defend it when it is questioned by honest inquirers or assailed by avowed enemies.

There is a principle in the flesh of every one of us which seeks some nail upon which to hang some human glory in the work of salvation; and one of the most plausible of falsehoods is this, that while the work of salvation is indeed entirely of the Lord, yet he is pleased to make use of human means somewhere in this great work. Because it cannot be asserted with any degree of plausibility that the work of man can be of use in the atonement finished upon Calvary, it is claimed that it is in quickening sinners dead in sins that human power has room for exercise; and the one means that seems to human reason most suitable to this work is preaching. But here the inconsistency at once appears; for while gospel preaching is the preaching of Christ, and Christ only, the very moment that power is claimed for the preaching itself, that moment is preaching substituted for Christ, and to a degree at least is salvation ascribed to it instead of to Christ; so that so far as human means enter into the salvation of a sinner, that far is Christ and the Holy Spirit excluded. Now, because these ruinous and Christ-dishonoring results seem to me to grow out of the means theory, I feel like calling attention to it, if the Lord will, for our instruction and comfort, as well as for warning.

This theory that the Holy Spirit makes use of preaching to quicken dead sinners has seemed so plausible that in former ages men of God like Toplady, Newton, Bunyan, Berridge, the two Erskines, and even Gill, with all their knowledge of the Scriptures and clear views of salvation by grace, were yet entangled by it, and used to close the soundest of gospel sermons with exhortations to dead sinners to repent and believe. Sixty years ago, when our fathers took their stand against all Arminianism, they were also led to see clearly that only living men could be the subjects of gospel addresses, and of gospel promises and exhortations; and so the Arminian theory of means was rejected by them, as well as other Arminian theories and institutions. I am glad to-day to believe that from that day to this this theory has found no place in the SIGNS, nor among those churches or associations who support the SIGNS. I wish also to add that I am glad that so far as I know the same can be said of most of the other papers with which our northern and eastern brethren have any acquaintance. In all my circle of travel and acquaintance I have met but two ministers who claimed to be Old School Baptists who were in any way tainted with this means theory. One besides in Georgia I knew of, who wrote defending this theory years ago, to whom I felt called upon to reply; but he is not now with us, and I understand has become our enemy. The other two could not proclaim this theory among any churches or associations with which I am acquainted; and one of them thinks the SIGNS, and all we who love the doctrine it advocates, enemies of truth and righteousness. I have not said this by way of assault upon any one, but in the way of expressing my gladness that in sixty years this heresy has shown itself so seldom among us. In some sections of the country where this theory has been introduced among people not with us, but who yet had never before received it as truth, the outcome has been that more is said in their papers about human work and means than about Christ, and the power of human energy to build up the church is insisted upon more than the power of God; and where churches are not increased in numbers it is said that dry doctrine has killed the church, or they have not done their duty as a people; reasons which we should expect to see in a New School Baptist paper, but which sound strange in a paper claiming to be the mouthpiece for Old School Baptists. All this seems to show, to say the least of it, that the wall between the means theory and the most ultra Arminianism is neither very high nor very thick; and that he who entertains this one theory soon finds his way into all the machinery of revival or protracted meetings or anxious-benches, which are considered to be so efficacious as a means of saving sinners.

But what do the Scriptures teach concerning the preaching of the gospel? for here at last must we all come for the decision of any of these matters. What do they say that the preaching of the gospel is for? First, they never say that its design is to quicken the dead, or that it is to or for the dead in sin in any sense of the word. The Scriptures never exhort the dead to live and arise; they never enjoin any of the exercises of life, such as faith, repentance, love, &c., upon the dead. Therefore as preaching should conform to the Scriptures, it cannot be to or for the dead. The distinction between the dead in sin and the living in Christ is not a mere difference of words. The two states spiritually are as wide apart as the distance between Lazarus in his grave, four days dead, and the sisters who were weeping over him; and as none but the voice of "God manifest in the flesh" could impart life again to him who had been dead four days, so none but the voice of the same almighty power can speak life to the dead in sin, and cause them to live spiritually. To this agrees the testimony of the Master when he said, "The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." Mark, it is the voice of the Son of God, not of preaching, that the dead shall hear. To this also Paul agrees when he said to the brethren at Ephesus, "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." Notice, nothing is said about preaching here. Again, Jesus said, "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." No reference is made in any of these Scriptures to any human means whatever. In all these Scriptures the reference is to making men alive unto God out of the death of sin.

I believe it is generally admitted that the raising up of Lazarus from the dead is an emblem of the work of grace by which the dead in sin are quickened into life; and some of those who hold to the means theory undertake to show that ministers have a share in this work, from the fact that Jesus commanded the disciples to roll the stone away from the grave first, and then afterward commanded them to take away the grave-clothes from Lazarus. To this I only need reply here that whatever the rolling away of the stone may mean, it cannot mean that preaching the gospel quickens the dead, because after they had rolled the stone away Lazarus was just as dead as he was before until Jesus spoke to him; and whatever taking away the grave-clothes might signify, it could not mean anything like making the dead alive, because Lazarus was no more alive after they had done so than he was before. Indeed, this whole scene, so far as it is emblematical at all, does most clearly show just how far our God uses human means, and just where he does not; and here in this narrative this one thing at least is manifest, that to give life is his own prerogative, and none shall share this glory with him. But how blessed is the privilege of rolling away the stone and of taking away the garments of the dead, which are not proper for the living. This is done through preaching at the command of Jesus; but where has he commanded us to quicken the dead?

I cannot take time nor space to refer to all the Scriptures by which it is sought to be proved that the means theory is true. One, however, I will notice. "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."—1 Cor. i. 21. But cannot any man see at a glance the difference between quickening the dead, and bringing rest and peace and comfort and salvation to that quickened soul? Preaching the gospel does save them that are believers in a multitude of ways, but this is certainly no proof that it quickens the dead in sin unto life. Many more Scriptures are urged in support of this theory, but all of them are in harmony with those already referred to, and I cannot here consider them one by one.

The language of Zacharias concerning John the Baptist, in Luke i. 76-79, also is used in support of this theory; but is there not a vast difference between giving the knowledge of salvation and salvation itself? between giving light to them that sit in darkness and giving life to the dead? between guiding our feet into the way of peace and giving life to those same feet? Those who have salvation need instruction or knowledge, and must be already alive to be capable of receiving knowledge. Those who sit in darkness, and need light, cannot be dead; and those who can be guided must first be capable of walking, or be alive. Surely John the Baptist then had nothing to do with quickening dead sinners.

The same perversion is also sought to be made of Paul's confession before Agrippa, in Acts xxvi. 18; but surely to turn men from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, is something very different from making the dead alive. The dead cannot be turned from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God; but the living who mourn in darkness, and in the bondage of fear and of Satan, need deliverance, and through preaching of the truth God sends them deliverance; but only the living can be delivered.

Similar things may be said of the language in Acts ii. 37. Those who are there spoken of as being pricked in the heart could not then have been dead in sin, or dead unto God. A man who is dead may be pricked in the heart, and will feel nothing and make no outcry. So these men were not dead, but alive; and so the preaching of Peter could come to them in the Holy Ghost and in power.

I want also to call attention to the fact that the figures of speech or illustrations used by the Holy Ghost in the Scriptures to set forth the miraculous work of which we are speaking forbid the notion that the preaching of the gospel can have anything to do with it, or any other human means whatever. First, it is compared to a creation. Believers are said to be new creatures. "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus," &c. What can a creature have to do with its own creation? What can a creature, even the highest, have to do with the creation of even the least thing? The combined efforts of angels and men could not add one mote to the creation of God. There is no fact in science nor in human history better settled than this. What then can men have to do with this new creation? It is, it must be, the work of the one only Creator; and in creation he speaks, and it is done; he commands, and it stands fast. Again, this work is called a quickening of the dead, or a giving of life to that which was destitute of it before. In the conclusions of science and in the facts of experience alike no human power has yet added life to any dead matter. Shall human means or power do in the higher and upper life or world what it confesses itself unable to do in the lower world and lower life? If to give natural life be solely the work of God, surely to give spiritual life must be much more his work. Again, this work of which we speak is called a birth; but here the Scriptures allow of the introduction of no human agency. The new birth is said to be from above, of God, of the Spirit, and by the word of God; and no apostle was ever found trying to bring about the new birth of any man. What a man could not do for himself he surely cannot do for another. It is still true that our God brings his people to the birth, and then brings them forth.

But what then is preaching for? is often asked. I answer at once, As soon as a man is created, as soon as the dead is made alive, as soon as the child of God is born, then preaching has much to do with him. As it is used by the Holy Spirit, it comes to this living man in power and in much assurance. By it he is convicted, convinced, believes, is comforted, helped and admonished. By it is conveyed to him, as God will, reproof, rebuke, encouragement, instruction, and whatever a living soul requires. He finds in it meat and drink, fire and clothing, shelter, and a stay and staff for his pilgrim journey. Through it he is cheered when sorrowful, strengthened when weak, lifted up when cast down, made hopeful when he is despondent, called back when he goes astray, and made to rejoice in the hour of darkness. Preaching of the gospel is blessed in a thousand ways to his soul. It can come to the living man anywhere along his pathway until he goes to his glorious home; but until the Holy Ghost has made him alive he can have no part in it, nor can it reach any answering chord in him. If therefore any humble, fearful child finds a response in his heart, a glad receiving of the word when it is preached, that soul is already alive unto God.

I want to say, in concluding these thoughts, that the advocates of the "means theory" are always in the end irresistibly driven to deny that men are dead to God, or dead in trespasses and sins. They are driven to contend that at the worst men are only asleep, or in a stupor, or dormant; that they only need a call sufficiently loud and startling to arouse them, and cause them to lay hold of the means of salvation; and that those Scriptures which describe the dreadful condition of men by nature are only high-wrought hyperboles, and must not be taken literally; and that therefore the doctrine of sovereign grace is exceedingly dangerous to teach and believe, since, they say, its tendency is to lull men into a still deeper slumber, and so increase their danger. I also find that the advocates of this theory in the end begin to complain that election ought not to be preached too plainly, as there is but little profit in it even to old believers, and it will discourage seeking souls. The means theory, to say the least of it, is generally found in the company of bad doctrine.

Lastly, this means theory always confounds the exercises of life with life itself. It sees no difference between giving life, and the faith, repentance, love and hope which follow life and flow out from it.

I leave these reflections. I trust there may be some instruction in them, and that they may minister comfort to some one.

I remain your brother in the hope of eternal life through him who quickens the dead,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., July 6, 1893.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

MY DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER IN CHRIST JESUS:—Your letters were very welcome, and did me good. I read them with real pleasure and comfort of mind. The relation of your spiritual exercises shows that your path is very much like my own, and this must be so if we are the children of God; for of them it is recorded, "I will give them one heart and one way."—Jer. xxxii. 39. While all the saints are not led as deeply into the bitter knowledge of their depravity, all have not so many, such sharp and cruel conflicts with the world, the flesh and the devil, neither are they all alike in their taste of the heights of heavenly blessedness; but all are led by the Spirit of God, and all have just that measure of misery and gladness, disquietude and peace, darkness and light, prosperity and adversity, as it is the good pleasure of the Lord to appoint them. Let us then believe that our times are in the hand of our God. I know that to believe this with all our heart can only be done through the grace of God. We may perhaps at all times give our assent to the letter of the doctrine, and contend that it is scriptural that God worketh all things after the counsel of his own will; yes, when every prospect is pleasing, when God leadeth us in paths that drop fatness, when quietness and rest is our portion from our God, when our spiritual, temporal and bodily circumstances are just about as we want them, we may be very ready to profess our belief in the doctrine of predestination. But O! when Jehovah brings us into darkness, and not into light, when our way is hedged up, when we are chastened sore, when we are cast into prison and our chain is heavy, when sharp and bitter trials are our portion, when the Lord covers us with a cloud in his anger, when the corruptions of our flesh so abound that very rottenness enters into our bones, and we become a stench in our own nostrils (O the miseries of the bondage of corruption!), when crosses, disappointments, losses, bereavements, befall us as our heritage at the hand of God, then only that faith which worketh by love can enable us to say, "What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?"—Job ii. 10. Only the Spirit of Christ in us will enable us with our dear Savior to say, "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?"—John xviii. 11. The faith of God's elect is in utter contrast with all the faith and believing of those who are not the subjects of God's grace. That faith which is the gift of God worketh by love. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Natural men, destitute of the grace of God, may give their assent to the letter of the doctrine of Christ, and be ready to fight those whom they consider its opponents; but only the child of God loves the truth; and he that loveth is born of God and knoweth God, for God is love. There have been some searchings of late going on within me, and I have asked myself, Do I love the doctrine of predestination? If so, why am I murmuring? Why such unrest? Why so unreconciled to the dispensations of his providence? Why am I so distrustful? Why do I fret under his chastening hand? Why do I not cheerfully acknowledge his hand, bow beneath his strokes, and acquiesce in all his dealing with me, and say, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good?" Hard questions, dear brother and sister; but I must seek to answer them. I think I have learned some things; but I feel ashamed, for I ought to know what I know better than I do. I am very forgetful; and were it not for the divine and gracious ministry of the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, bringing to my remembrance what I have experienced and have been taught, what the Lord our Redeemer has spoken to me as I have journeyed along, I should often sink down in despair.

"My conflicts are oft so severe,
I cannot tell how they will end."

I come into deep mire, where there is no standing, and into the floods, where I fear the billows will overwhelm me; but when my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then, O Lord, thou knewest my path.—Psalm cxlii. 3. The Lord has considered my trouble; he has known my soul in adversities.—Psalm xxxi. 7. It is written of our God that "He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he."—Deut. xxxii. 4. When we become perverted from our sweet confidence in the doctrine of God by our foolishness, and our heart fretteth against the Lord, is it not as though we were saying, "What doest thou?" Jehovah says, "O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?"—Ezekiel xviii. 29. O for the grace of God! how desirable! to worship him, and fall down before the Lord our Maker, and say, "The sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre." Why do we strive against him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters.—Job xxxiii. 13. Look at the trials to which the gracious God subjected Job. He, like others under the painful strokes of his God, was full of tossings to and fro. The chastenings of the Lord were not joyous, but grievous. Job cried out, "If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head. I am full of confusion; therefore see thou mine affliction; for it increaseth. Thou huntest me as a fierce lion: and again thou showest thyself marvelous upon me. Thou renewest thy witnesses against me, and increasest thine indignation upon me; changes and war are against me. Wherefore then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? O that I had given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me! I should have been as though I had not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave."—Job x. 15-19. It was not for Job then to "see the end of the Lord," and to find out that "the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy."—James v. 11. All the corrections of the Lord, of whatsoever nature they may be, are in faithfulness, and for our profit. The fruit of it all is to take away our sin.—Isaiah xxvii. 9. "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word."—Psalm cxix. 67. Though the waters be deep, though the furnace be hot, through the waters of affliction, and through fiery trials, lies the predestinated pathway of the redeemed of the Lord. If we are to reign with Christ Jesus our Lord we must know the fellowship of his sufferings. If the life of Jesus is manifest in our mortal flesh, we must also know what it is to bear about in our body the dying of the Lord Jesus.—2 Cor. iv. 10, 11. When trials are upon us, and the hand of the Almighty presseth us sore, we begin to inquire, What will all this end in? No good end can we see to come out of such troubles. Every day we are plagued, and chastened every morning. Desolation as a heavy pall seems spread over all. We fear the dark and heavy clouds. Afflicted and tossed with tempest, where shall our comfort come from? Sometimes the enemy invades our land, lays low our villages, robs us of our harvests, while we in our terrors, because of the enemy, are creeping through the land in byways. Then in the anguish of our hearts we cry out, "My bowels, my bowels! I am pained at my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war. Destruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled: suddenly are my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment."—Jer. iv. 19, 20. How can we believe that God is with us? If he delighted in us, would such evils have come upon us? Would such trials be our portion? Would we be so subject to such hellish temptations? Would our life be so harassed by such inward vileness if we were God's dear children? The former loving-kindnesses of the Lord appear like a dream. Our souls are much discouraged because of the way. Gideon said unto the Lord, "O my Lord, if the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the Lord bring us up from Egypt? But now the Lord hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hand of the Midianites." O whence cometh all these questionings, fears, doubts, distrust in God, murmuring and fretting against the Lord? Why are such things suffered to manifest themselves in us? Why are such ugly, cruel, ravenous beasts found prowling and howling, and making our life a prey to their teeth? (The same class of questions we were asking before.) Muse upon the record in 2 Chronicles xxxii. 31: "God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart." When Peter denied his Lord thrice he knew something of the vileness of his heart, and was abased and brought low in his own sight. The pitiful and merciful Redeemer turned and looked upon him, and Peter's heart was broken and contrite, and he went out and wept bitterly. Thus his own wickedness corrected him, and his backslidings reproveth him.—Jere. ii. 19. "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." It is the purpose of God that we shall learn (that we may be humbled thereby) the sinfulness of our carnal nature. It is an abyss that we cannot fathom. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?" All Israel shall know every one "his own sore and his own grief."—2 Chron. vi. 29. The bitter consciousness of our own inward depravity causes us continually to be looking away from ourselves unto Jesus for righteousness. Trials and afflictions are good and profitable. This I know, though I find myself shrinking from them, and would evade them if I could. The psalmist says, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word." Afflictions drive us to seek consolation and a refuge in the bosom of our God. When he slays us then we seek him. "In their affliction," says our God, "they will seek me early."—Hosea v. 15. The Lord purges his people in the fires. He has his furnace in Jerusalem.—Isa. xxxi. 9. "The Lord trieth the righteous." All enmity to the truth, all rebellion and unrest under his providences, come from our flesh. But our murmurings and fretting against the Lord, our sinfulness, shall not frustrate the purposes of the Almighty, but his very purposes concerning us are fulfilled in it all; and our very darkness, grief and weaknesses, our vileness, naughtiness, haughtiness and perverseness of our flesh, under the sovereign, righteous, yet pitiful hand of our heavenly Father, shall be worked by him (for he worketh all things after the counsel of his own will) for our good. A thorn in the flesh may be given us, messengers of Satan may buffet us, men may rise up against us, and ride over our heads. The Lord for our chastening may command our adversaries to be round about us, but they cannot exceed our Father's will. Jehovah in it all is but fulfilling what he hath devised.—Lam. ii. 17. Our gracious God withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous, but with kings are they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them forever, and they are exalted. If they be bound in fetters, and be holden in the cords of affliction, then he showeth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded. He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.—Job xxxvi. 7-10. Happy is the man that endureth temptations; yea, he is to count it all joy when he falleth into divers temptations. The manifold temptations that God exerciseth us with shall work for us the peaceable fruits of righteousness. Blessed are we when our God openeth our ear to discipline, and we hear the rod, and who hath appointed it. Then we recognize that God dealeth with us as with sons. See David under the rod. His ear is circumcised to hear the rod, and he is humbled under the mighty hand of the Lord. He knows that in faithfulness God has afflicted him, and all his hope centers in Jehovah alone. Muse upon his language when fleeing from the face of his son Absalom, and Shimei curses him. He says, "Let him alone, and let him curse, for the Lord hath bidden him. It may be that the Lord will look on mine affliction, and that the Lord will requite me good for his cursing this day."—2 Samuel xvi. 11, 12. When we are in obscurity and gloom, when we are enduring afflictions, when we are sorely distressed by our enemies, both internal, external and infernal, how good it is to feelingly believe with all our heart the doctrine that Jehovah reigns; that

"Each opening leaf, and every stroke,
Fulfills some deep design."

There is rest and comfort when in the midst of our trials we can feelingly exclaim, "My times are in thy hand."

"'Tis the right way when pain and loss
Our flattering expectations cross;
And if our souls the end could view,
We should approve the pathway too."

Our glorious, gracious and faithful God will bring us through to the end. Through the floods and the flames, through tribulation, through the wilderness, we shall ultimately come up, leaning upon our Beloved. "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory." For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate; and whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

"Weary, and weak, and pressed with cares,
Emmanuel's blood-bought bride appears;
Her head, her heart, her thoughts, her mind,
No rest can get, no comfort find.

"Still Christ's at hand, her wounds to heal,
And gently chides when doubts prevail:
Cheer up! let not thy sorrows swell;
I'm Jesus still; fear not, all's well!

"Or when on Jordan's waves she sails,
Her spirits sink, her courage fails,
Yet still her head is kept above;
She's near his heart, unchanging love.

"And while the icy hand of death
Chills her warm current, stops her breath,
What's this? she cries; dear Jesus, tell!
'Tis thy last foe—rejoice, all's well!"

(Continued on page 253.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 9, 1892.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FOOTSTEPS OF THE FLOCK.

WITH deep anxiety the spouse asks of her Beloved, as recorded in the Song of Songs, "Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon; for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?" In reply to this earnest inquiry the direction is given her, "If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherds' tents."—Song of Solomon, i. 7, 8. In this question and answer every bewildered disciple of Jesus is deeply interested, for there is no such fullness of joy known to them as that which is felt when they are favored to repose in the conscious assurance of his gracious approval. This is the resting and feeding place appointed for the benefit of all those who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before the ransomed people of God in Christ Jesus. To the weary and heavy laden one the thought of rest is the most delightful of all that can be presented. To the hungry and thirsty nothing can supply the place of food and pure cooling water. By both these familiar illustrations the Spirit of truth has described the earnest longing of the subject of saving grace for that revelation of the light of the presence of the Redeemer without which all else is desolation. Only as the Spirit of truth takes of the testimony of Jesus in this song, or in any portion of the inspired Scriptures, and in the personal experience of the saints shows it unto each one of them, can it be received by them in their building up in the faith and knowledge of the gospel of God our Savior.

To those who are taught of God there is conclusive evidence of the inspiration of the sacred Scriptures in the accuracy with which they find their most secret thoughts and feelings therein portrayed. The different books are written each in its own peculiar style, and some at one period of time and some at another; yet it is no unusual thing for the tried and trembling saints to find in some simple expression of this wonderful book a description of their own untold doubts and fears far more accurate and clear than any words which they could themselves devise. Not only does this demonstrate beyond question the infallible inspiration of the Scriptures, it no less conclusively establishes the genuineness of the work of the Spirit in the case of every one who is thus shown the sure witness of Jesus in any portion of those divinely wonderful Scriptures. Only through the medium of that faith which is the fruit of the Spirit can any one receive the testimony of Jesus in that revelation which God has given. None can have that faith but as they are born of God. Hence, it is of vital importance to all who hope in the salvation which is in Christ Jesus that they examine themselves by this test whether they be in the faith. None ever find their own experience in the words of inspired truth unless they have the same life in them by which holy men were moved to record their feelings and trials in the ages that are past. These are the footsteps of the flock by which all who travel that unknown way are identified in the fellowship of the afflicted and poor people whose trust is exclusively in the Lord. None can desire to follow in this pathway of tribulation but those who are led by the Spirit to love righteousness and abhor that which is evil. The selfishness of the carnal mind may indeed wish to have the eternal joy to which the saints are called; but it is not possible that carnal covetousness should desire to suffer with the people of God in all their affliction and destitution while sojourning in this enemy's land of conflicts and tribulation.

Reason would suggest that the place to seek the footsteps of the flock of our divine Shepherd would be in the way of holiness and upon the mountain of perfect obedience to every commandment of the Lord; but the daily life of the saints does not accord with this apparently just expectation. In our present experience there is but a repetition of that which is left on record for our learning of the trials of the old servants of God. When following closely in the track of the apostles and prophets the trembling disciples are constantly questioning their own walk and conversation. It seems impossible that they should be pursuing that narrow path which is cast up for the holy nation to walk in, while they have continually to confess that the good they would do they cannot perform, and the evil which they would not that they do. It is not strange that such a people are described as a poor and an afflicted people. But it should be observed that these are the only people of whom the word of God bears witness that "They shall trust in the name of the Lord." Others may trust in their own merits, relying upon their faithfulness in complying with terms of salvation, and in accepting the overtures of offered mercy. This afflicted and poor little flock could never find comfort in such salvation as is dependent upon their own will or works. While they feel their need of every good and perfect gift of God, they are conscious that they have no plea to bring in extenuation of their rebellion and sin against the holy commandment of their Creator.

The first traces of the unknown way wherein are found the footsteps of this peculiar flock, are in the waste howling wilderness of iniquity wherein the Lord found Jacob. Like him they are going in the wrong direction and must be led about, and instructed. The way which seems right to a man must always end in the ways of death; and it is the first step in this wonderful way of truth and righteousness when the quickened sinner is made to know the utter vileness of all his own righteousness. When this light shines in his heart his true condition is revealed, and he for the first time discovers the hopelessness of attaining to the favor of infinite justice by any works of his own. The distress and despair resulting from this discovery can be known only to those who have been crushed beneath its inconceivable weight. In this gloomy path there is nothing to attract the covetousness of carnal men. Those who have not been taught the depravity of their whole nature have no need of the guidance of that Spirit who leads the destitute into the enjoyment of life and peace in Jesus. If they ever feel that they are not altogether as righteous as they should be, they are confident that they can readily supply their deficiency by a trifling effort whenever the vanities of earth shall cease to satisfy them. Certainly none could be moved by carnal enmity against God in the endurance of the loss of all their earthly joys and treasures, and in choosing to suffer affliction with the people of God. They who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth are necessarily compelled to choose this way of tribulation. They must be made partakers of the fellowship of the sufferings of their divine Redeemer; because that in no other way can they be followers of him as dear children. Out of the depth he cried unto God, and all the waves of trouble and condemnation rolled over him. In the appointed measure every one of his flock must be partaker of the fellowship of his sufferings; hence, their footsteps must be found in the way of tribulation. The flock of this heavenly Shepherd need not the attraction of carnal allurements to induce them to walk in his footsteps; neither are they hired by the promise of the joys of an imagined paradise, nor driven by fear of future punishment. They are drawn by the sweet cords of divine love to pray continually with the same longing desire expressed by the spouse, as quoted from the Song, and as taught by our Lord to his disciples. If any professed believer in Jesus has not this mark of the love of holiness in his own heart, there is no manifestation that he is led by the Spirit of God. But it is also true that none who have that longing desire to dwell with the disciples of Jesus in their weariness and affliction, can possibly be destitute of the love of God which conclusively marks them as partakers of that eternal life which Jesus gives to his sheep. This is the seal of the Holy Spirit which identifies those who are ordained to the inheritance of glory in Christ Jesus.

The footsteps of the flock in their whole sojourn in this present evil world can be traced nowhere but in the same wilderness in which the Lord found them in his first manifestation to them. Every step they take is contrary to the way which seems right to natural wisdom. When they mourn their subjection to darkness they are not able to consider that it is the command of the Lord that divine light shall shine out of darkness. Never could reason think of receiving light from such a source. To the trembling disciple it seems that the thick darkness can bring nothing but gloom and desolation; but the record of inspiration is full of illustrations of the fact that from the thickest and most impenetrable darkness God causes his glorious light to shine. Not only in the beginning was this omnipotent commandment fulfilled in the illumination of the natural creation, but the infinite light of eternal life was never seen until it was revealed out of the darkness which enshrouded in death the Captain of our salvation. Through the darkness of that agony in which he was forsaken of his God, our suffering Savior passed into the refulgent glory of that light of life and immortality in which he is exalted with the right hand of God, having all power in heaven and in earth, that he should give eternal life to as many as are given unto him in the counsel of the will of God. In following him his disciples must know the fellowship of that experience of darkness in entering into the light of the kingdom of God. Here are the prints of the footsteps of all the flock in all the ages of time from the murdered Abel down to the daily afflictions of the saints in our own days. None can be following in those footsteps who escape the tribulation which our Lord promised to his faithful followers. So Paul exhorted the disciples, teaching them "that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."—Acts xiv. 22. Then it is needful for those who are already recognized as disciples to endure afflictions in order that they may be partakers of the fellowship of the saints in that kingdom of God which is "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. xiv. 17. There is nothing in the footsteps of the flock which can be attractive to the carnal mind. All those vanities which have been invented by false professors to make their religion desirable in the sight of reason, bear on their very face the evidence that they are not of God. They meet the approval of the world, because they are of the world. So, the hatred of the world attests that the footsteps of the flock are contrary to the devices of men. The same enemies who opposed the Lord Jesus in the setting up of his kingdom, are still arrayed against those who follow in his example and doctrine. Those who boast of their success in converting the world to the profession of belief in the gospel of Christ, have mistaken their own conformity to the world for a change in the enmity of the carnal mind. The gospel of sovereign grace is no less hated in the religious world now than when the world with one voice besought Pilate, saying, "Crucify him!" So the Spirit rebukes the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, when they would seek the favor of the world. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."—James iv. 4. Certainly the favor of the world is not a mark of the footsteps of the flock. On the other hand, those marks are clearly defined by our Lord in his first recorded sermon. Those whom he declares blessed are the poor in spirit, the mourners, the meek, they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peacemakers, they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, and YOU, when you are reviled and persecuted and falsely reproached for the sake of Jesus. These unmistakable characteristics are such as cannot be desired by the covetousness of man. None bear these marks but such as are called of God with a holy calling, by which they are separated from the world, and made to deny themselves of ungodliness and worldly lusts. These walk as children of the light, not in a false assumption of superior holiness, but in abhorring themselves as vile sinners, and in trusting exclusively in the righteousness of Jesus for justification in the sight of God. None but they who are born of God ever hate their own sinful life, and mourn because of the bondage of corruption from which they cannot deliver themselves. In this painful experience there can be none who participate but those of the little flock, whose footsteps are always traced in the gloomy path of self-condemnation, and who are ever writing bitter things against themselves. These footsteps of the flock are so peculiar that they are not only secure against counterfeit imitations, but there is no possibility that any natural man should wish to bear such marks.

As the Shepherd was despised and rejected of men, so the flock walk only in the way of humble destitution and poverty. Like him, they are not known to the religious world, nor reckoned as worthy of mention in connection with the honorable and self-righteous Pharisees who claim to be doing mighty works for Jesus. Their utter helplessness compels them to flee for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before them in the name of Jesus Christ; and they are the only people who are ever troubled with doubts and fears challenging the genuineness of their hope in the salvation of God. These footsteps are clearly marked in the valley of trouble where they pass the days of their mourning. In this lowly way they follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Do you recognize any of these footprints as being found in your pathway? Then you are going your way forth by the footprints of the flock, and feeding your kids beside the shepherds' tents. Your kids are clean animals according to the law of Moses, and represent the longing desires expressed in the question of the spouse. These are amply provided with food beside the tents of those inspired servants of our Lord, whose testimony bears the seal of infallible truth. There is no food anywhere else by which to satisfy these hungry kids. It is always safe for the inquiring one to seek this sweet pasture for the refreshment of those earnest feelings of anxiety which are well symbolized by the kids of the bride of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In the footsteps of the flock practically, the saint will always find the appointed rest and food of the sheep and lambs of the divine Shepherd. There is nothing so good for those who are poor and needy as to be found following in the footsteps of those who walk in the truth. Here is safety and abundance of food. Let them who love Jesus ever endeavor to walk in obedience to his word. The answer of a good conscience toward God is found only in keeping his commandments who gave himself for their sins.

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

(Continued from page 251.)

May the Lord bless you, and may you be stayed upon him at all times, is my heart's desire.

I am your brother in Jesus,

FRED. W. KEENE.

HORACE, Texas, June 18, 1893.

DEAR BROTHERS AND FRIENDS, EDITORS AND READERS OF THE SIGNS:—Being confined at home to-day, and not being allowed the anticipated pleasure of associating with the church, as is usually my privilege, I feel to pen a few thoughts for your consideration; not that I feel able to write anything to the edification of God's people, for I know that of myself I can do nothing; but God is able to season the words of even the least of his servants, so as to make them palatable to his children and honoring to his name. Unless God by his Spirit makes the application, nothing can edify or comfort his little ones; no, not even the sure promises in the inspired record. God has reserved the right of revelation to himself. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." "No man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." This principle of revelation is not regarded by a vast majority of the professing religious world; and it seems that those who are taught of the Lord are sometimes forgetful of it. Without revelation a poor sinner, dead in trespasses and sins, could never know his true condition; would never realize the inbred corruptions of his own heart, the total depravity of his nature; would never mourn on account of sin; would never hunger and thirst after righteousness, nor ever bear any of those characteristic marks of the "blessed" mentioned by the Savior in the fifth chapter of Matthew. The Spirit must lead us into all truth, else we can never know it. It is God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, that hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. He has hid these things from the wise and the prudent, and has given them no "chance" to find them out; but he has revealed them unto babes, because it seemed good in his sight so to do. "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom: but we preach Christ crucified [not the learning which the schools of this world teach, but directly to the contrary], unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence."—1 Cor. i. 19-29. We would do well to keep this array of divine testimony before our eyes continually, that we forget not the antagonism ever existing between the wisdom of God and the wisdom of this world. The one is "set over against the other," that no flesh should glory in his presence. "The wisdom of this world puffs up. 'This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish.'"—James iii. 15. "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."—James iii. 17. This wisdom of the world seeks to set itself above God. It presumes to do what God has never authorized nor given men the power to do. It proposes to teach men to know the Lord, a thing which God has said they shall no more do.—Heb. viii. 11. "All thy children," says the prophet, "shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children." Jesus says, "As it is written, They shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Again, he saith, "All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matt. xi. 27. Paul (or rather Saul) possessed as much of the literary acquirements of his day, perhaps, as any other man; but when he came to preach Christ he gave no credit to his learning that he had of this world. He did not claim that he had come into possession of the knowledge of Christ because of superior advantages, nor that he was the better able to preach him because of those advantages, nor even that he was the better able to interpret the Scriptures; but to the contrary, he testifies, "For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."—Gal. i. 12.

Again, we hear him saying, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."—1 Cor. ii. 1-5. The apostle's idea, if I understand him correctly, was to so address the brethren that they could not credit the power of his preaching to his worldly learning. He did not want their faith to stand in the wisdom which man teaches—the wisdom of this world. Hence his preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but he used "great plainness of speech," plainly declaring that his knowledge of those things was not of man, but of God. Though he might have addressed them in "an unknown tongue," he would not do so, because he desired their profit, and not to appear before them as a learned man. In other words, he was not seeking to exalt himself, but seeking to exalt his Master. He says, "I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all: yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."—1 Cor. xiv. 18, 19. Again, in the same chapter, he says, "So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air." It seems to me that if all who speak or write with a view to edify would follow this idea, they would come nearer the accomplishment of their object.

The learned in the things of this world have no advantage over the unlearned in the things of God's kingdom. Those who claim to understand the dead languages differ about the meaning of many passages of Scripture. They have never agreed among themselves, and each one interprets to suit his own peculiar views. Those who are taught of God have corroborating testimony in their own bosoms as to the truth of the Scriptures. How many of this class need a Hebrew or Greek scholar to teach them that salvation is of the Lord, or that "by grace are ye saved, through faith: and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God?" They read this in the Scriptures, and their experience teaches them that it is true. Comparatively few learned men there are but believe that faith is something belonging to all men, and needs only to be put in exercise by them. Faith, they say, is the act of the creature. I do not love to see our preachers or writers quoting from learned men, "Revs." and "D. Ds.," as though their opinions were of more weight, or at least entitled to more consideration, than the opinions of others. I had much rather risk the opinion of the most ignorant African, with regard to spiritual things, that has been taught of God, than the opinion of the most learned "Dr." that has not been so taught. If God has called a man to perform any duty in his house, he is not to consult Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, nor Mr. Talmadge, nor any other "Rev." or "D. D.," as to the manner of performing that duty. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all (men) liberally, and upbraideth not." Let him freely consult the inspired record; for "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." It is dangerous to the peace and happiness of the child of grace to bow the knee to the wisdom of this world. Paul admonishes the Colossian brethren to "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." The wisdom of this world would philosophize the truth out of every passage in the Scriptures, and would harmonize every doctrinal principle with human reason, or reject it.

Dear brethren editors, the above is submitted for your consideration. If you think it worth the trouble to prepare for the press you may publish it; if not, cast it aside, and all will be right with me. I desired to let you and your readers know that I still appreciate the SIGNS and its correspondents. I feel to deeply sympathize with those brethren and sisters who are so afflicted with disease; but God is able to and will sanctify their afflictions to their good and to his own glory. They no doubt are far more blessed with spiritual mindedness than many who have better physical health. I have been made especially to feel for brother Hanks, in reading his letter in your last issue. Having been with him, and seen the meekness and humility manifest in his walk, and heard his able and comforting preaching, I feel sure that the Lord will sustain him in every trial; for the promise is to such, the poor in spirit, they that mourn, and they that hunger and thirst after righteousness.

I remain your little brother in hope of a better world,

H. B. JONES.

AUGHRIM, Ont., April 16, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send you a letter written by brother Case, to publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if it is your judgment to do so. I can say the Lord has been good to me, and has not left me altogether. I still believe he has established the little church here, and I believe he is still with us.

I remain your brother in tribulation,

MALCOLM MCALPIN.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 13, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER:—I humbly hope we are brethren in the Lord Jesus Christ. I desire that this may find you and yours, with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ, in good health, as far as it is his holy will. I have been waiting to hear from you; but failing to hear, and feeling a desire to write to you, I thought I would pen you a few lines. And now, dear brother, the feeling of my mind is, What and how shall I write? I can think of but one subject that will suit us both, and that subject is so sacred and solemn that I feel to draw back from the attempt to write upon it; but feeling, as I hope, a sweet sense of the love of God in Christ Jesus in my soul, I feel to say, "Because of the savor of thy good ointments thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee." We love him because he first loved us. Yes, he loved us, hell-deserving sinners when we cared not for ourselves. Yea, he loved us before the foundation of the world. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." And if we are sons, it is not by works of righteousness which we have done, nor for our good resolutions, but according to his mercy he saved us, and manifested us as his sons, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, by sending forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts.

"Thy mercy, my God, is the theme of my song,
The joy of my heart, and the boast of my tongue;
Thy free grace alone, from the first to the last,
Hath won my affections and bound my soul fast."

O what bitter things we write against ourselves in our earlier experience, and do still, from time to time. But how have we proved the truth of God's word, when he said, "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." We wanted to have some goodness in ourselves, so as to merit God's love. We did not like to go to him

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me."

We felt ourselves to be vile sinners, helpless, unable to better our condition. I saw God, the great Creator and supporter of all things, to be so just and holy that I felt he could not be just and have mercy on me. The sentiment of my soul was,

"Should sudden vengeance seize my breath,
I must pronounce thee just in death."

While my thoughts were that it was impossible for God to take notice of me, or to look upon me in mercy, to his declarative glory be it said that his thoughts were thoughts of love and mercy, giving me to experience that it was not merely possible for him to look upon me as a poor creature of his hand, but that he was determined to save me with an everlasting salvation. O how great and glorious is the knowledge of salvation by the remission of our sins. It is then we realize that

"True religion's more than notion; Something must be known and felt."

It breaks the heart and melts our very soul to tears when we feel that he has loved us with an everlasting love; yes, before we were born into the world; and after we were born into the world, and manifested as children of wrath, and when we cared not for ourselves, he cared for us and watched over us; as that dear apostle of the Gentiles declares, "But when it pleased God [not when it pleased my father and mother, nor myself], who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace." Yes, when we were quickened by the Spirit, and given to behold sin in its exceeding sinfulness, and saw that we were sinners against that holy and righteous one that we call and feel to be God, and when we set to work to weave a righteousness that would fit us to stand before his all-searching eye, he did not leave us there to be satisfied, but gave us to know that "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of God." When deep down in that horrible pit of sin and despair, he spoke those words to our soul, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled," we then felt that our doom was complete; that if ever we found mercy and salvation it would be alone through and by that one who magnified the law and made it honorable. For three years I remained without a satisfactory evidence of an interest in that wonderful salvation which God has appointed for walls and bulwarks. Sometimes when assailed by those who were satisfied with themselves, or if they needed anything it was only a little renovating, a few repairs, which they felt sure they could perform themselves, the Lord, as I hope, often shone upon his word and filled my heart with wonder and love, giving me views of the stability of his kingdom, and his saints as subjects thereof. Then those poor fellow-creatures, those blind leaders of the blind, would sometimes be silent; but at other times they would show their anger and despise me. But I felt deeply impressed with the thought, Who hath made us to differ? And what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Boasting is excluded by every particle of our experience. About three years after I was led to behold God as the God of salvation, to behold him as the only one in whom his people are saved with an everlasting salvation, he gave me to feel, as I humbly trust, that he had loved me with an everlasting love, and therefore with loving-kindness was drawing me. I felt so overcome with a sense of heaven in my soul that I thought I could endure no more. I said, "Lord, it is enough." Yes, it is enough.

"Tis a heaven below
My Redeemer to know."

"If such the sweetness of the stream,
What must the fountain be,
Where saints and angels draw their bliss
Immediately from thee?"

Dear brother, you will say with me, O how easy it is at such times to obey the dear Savior's command, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." "For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." O how blessedly easy is that yoke, and how light is his burden. But we cannot always remain here. We must go down into the deep waters and there do business. We must feel that we are of the earth, earthy; "that in me, that is, in my flesh, there dwells no good thing." O how painful to leave off communing with God, and return to our own house, like Abraham of old. But we are saved by hope; and hope that is seen is not hope.

I find, dear brother, that I must stop, and not follow my mind, having no desire to exhaust your patience. I have felt for the most part that it was easy to write, which is not often the case with me. I have often felt a desire to remember all the way in which the Lord has led me, and to tell it to the comfort of his saints, and to the praise of his great name, which is all I desire. If after reading this carefully, dear brother, you find it speaks to the honor of his name, then you may send it to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and the editors may do as they see fit with it.

I would like to say a few words with reference to the dear servants of God who come among us from time to time from the United States. I have felt to bless God many times that there are such men still upon the earth, called and qualified of God, and made able ministers of the New Testament, partakers of that same grace which was in Paul, who determined to know nothing among men but Jesus Christ and him crucified. They come to us in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel. I need mention none of their names. May the dear Lord be with you, to bless and own you in your work and labor of love, is the prayerful desire of yours in the hope of the gospel,

RICHARD CASE.

Opelika, Ala., May 19, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of brother J. F. Ellison Jr., of Martindale, Texas, I will endeavor to write a few lines on the Scripture found in the prophecy of Isaiah, vi. 1. "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach."

I am aware that this is the word of testimony, and only as we have understanding given us from God are we able to appreciate his word. But there is a fullness and perfection in the word of God that covers every case that we can think of, and nothing can happen but what is written and portrayed in the Scriptures. Whatever the literal teaching or fulfillment of prophecy may have been, we understand that the Scriptures have a spiritual meaning and a gospel application. Doubtless brother Ellison desires to know what we are to understand that this Scripture now signifies. Whatever may have been the history of the Jews as a race (for they are embraced in this prophecy), and where and when this was liberally fulfilled, we are not prepared to say. But we do believe that the day of which this prophet wrote was the gospel day. The name of Christ is the name set forth in this prophecy, and the seven women represent the religious denominations of the earth that profess to be christian, and use the name of Christ in their organizations. Such has been the conduct of these women. They use the name of Christ as a pretext, in order to accomplish what they do. Jesus knew they would use his name, hence he said, "If any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not: for false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall show signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect." "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing; but inwardly they are ravening wolves." They desire the name of Christ, to take away their reproach. They propose to eat their own bread, and wear their own apparel; they are willing to furnish themselves in order to use the name; and it is a shame to think of the things done to-day in the name of Christ, under the cover of christianity. This same people is described by Christ when he said, "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." They are called "christian workers," and "christian endeavorers;" and one denomination call themselves "The Christian Church;" but we would not have known it if they had not told us so; and even now we are not at all sure of it. For, although they use the name of Christ, they do not follow him, but deny the power of God and the covenant of grace. Hence they are not fed from God's cupboard, but furnish their own bread. They teach the virtue of water; hence, "baptismal regeneration," and thereby furnish their own apparel, a garment wrought out by themselves. But if we should enlarge on this we would, perhaps, occupy too much space for one article. This denomination, or one of these women, is not alone, but she has six others to keep her company, who do as she does, furnish their own bread and apparel. Catholics, Missionary Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and all the Arminian brood come in the same line and do the same thing. The relation of all these false systems to Christ is they "take hold." Christ has never taken hold of them, but the act is on their part; it is works and endeavor upon their part; and that is all the relation that they sustain to Christ and his name. Not like "the only one of her mother," and "the choice one of her that bare her;" for she said, "For why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?" So we see that the church is not a mere friend of Christ; for she is bone of his bones, and flesh of his flesh. Christ knows her, and there is a relation established that cannot be dissolved. Hence Christ is her head and husband, and he has engaged to furnish her with bread and apparel. "The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needlework." We can see clearly, by what these women propose to do, that they are claiming to do greater things for Christ than they are willing to acknowledge he has done for them. But the church recognizes her true condition, and does not feel able to repay him, nor does she volunteer to do these mighty works; for she knows in whom she has believed, and is persuaded that he is able to keep that which she has committed unto him against that day. We can, by close discernment, see the line which God has drawn between truth and error, between Christ and antichrist, between Christ and Belial, between Babylon and Zion. The spirit of the word of understanding enables those chosen of God to see where all these things are set forth in the word of inspiration. So they are able to understand that "the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."

With these few scattering thoughts I will close, realizing that it is the best I can do now.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

READ AGAIN.

WE have tried to impress on our subscribers' minds the fact that under no circumstances can we continue a name on our list longer than the end of this year, 1893, that is sent on with their own subscription, in accordance with second and third paragraphs of last supplement, dated April 12th 1893.

MARRIAGES.

On August 1st, 1893, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at his residence, Mr. Wm. H. Perlee and Mrs. Edith Younglove, both of Middletown, N. Y.

JULY 19th, 1893, by Elder G. N. Tusing, at the residence of the bride's parents in Logan, Ohio, Elder A. C. R. Morgan, of Weatherford, Texas, and Miss Justine B. Steirs, of Logan, Hocking Co., Ohio.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Mt. Salem Old School Baptist Association of northern Indiana will convene, the Lord willing, with the Elkhart Church, one mile south of Cromwell, on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R., on Friday before the third Sunday in August, 1893.

Those coming from the east or west will be met at Cromwell, Ind. A cordial invitation to lovers of the truth.

A. H. SMITH.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Predestinarian Baptists will hold its next annual meeting with the Salem Church, in Marshall Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the south will stop at Rutland, and those from the north will stop at Wenona. Those coming by the Chicago & Alton R. R. will stop at Evans, and those by the Santa Fe R. R. will stop at Toluca.

A cordial invitation is extended to the household of faith to attend with us.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE sixty-second annual session of the Spoon River Association of Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1893, and continue three days.

The meeting will be at the Mt. Zion Church, Fulton Co., Ill., seven miles east of Astoria, on the St. Louis Division of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Our brethren are invited to come and see us.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Des Moines River Association of Primitive Baptists will convene with the Round Prairie Church, seven miles southeast of Fairfield, Jefferson Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August (19th), 1893, and continue Sunday and Monday.

Those coming via the C., B. & Q. or the C., R. I. & P. R. Rs. will stop at Fairfield, where trains will be met Friday evening and Saturday morning. Trains will also be met Friday evening and Saturday morning on the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa R. R. Those coming from the east will stop at Stockport, and those from the west at Birmingham. Appointments for meeting Friday evening are at brother B. T. Williams' and L. Spittler's.

A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers in particular.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p. m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station on Thursday at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE annual meeting with the church at Bryn Zion is appointed on the third Sunday in August, Saturday included.

Friends who can attend with us, and expect to come by rail, will please get tickets for Kenton, if coming from the northward, and come down the Delaware R. R. on the first train on Saturday. Saturday meeting at two o'clock p. m. Those coming from the southward get tickets for Clayton.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.

Salt River—28th.

As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.

Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.

Elk Lick—5th.

Mt. Sterling—6th.

Mt. Carmel—7th.

Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05

Twelve copies..... 50

Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1893.

NO. 33.

D. L. Blackwell June 93

CORRESPONDENCE.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., June 24, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—If one so unworthy and full of sin may thus address you. I will write, by the help of my heavenly Father, what I hope are the Lord's dealings with me; how he brought me from darkness into his marvelous light; how he raised me from the horrible pit, and placed my feet upon the Rock, Christ Jesus. I have had a desire to write to you; but because of my inability to express my thoughts, my weakness in spiritual understanding, and my vileness in all my actions, I have deferred that desire. I do not feel as though I could write anything worthy a place in our dear family paper, the SIGNS; but as some dear brethren and sisters have expressed their desire to know of my travels I will try, leaving all to your better judgment. I do at this time feel that the Lord has blessed me with more mercy and loving-kindness than I deserve. If he should deal with me according to my wickedness I would be lost; but he is a God of love and mercy, and one who changes not. If I am one of his I shall not be lost. I seem to come so far short of what seems to be the walk of a child of God that I am often made to doubt my spiritual relationship.

I am young in natural life (being sixteen years old), as well as in spiritual understanding; but I hope as I grow older that I may grow stronger in faith and wiser in the truth of God. I have been a member of the church here one year in August, and a poor and worthless member I have been. I have often felt that the dear ones have been deceived in me, but I am sure that Christ cannot be deceived. If I am not one of his he will reveal it to his children, and all will be right. If this people should disown and neglect me, and I have no comfort from Christ, I fear that I should despair and die. The company of this dear people is sweet to me; and when I can be with them to hear them tell of their trials, sorrows and afflictions, then does my heart overflow with love and fellowship for them. I hope that this sweet fellowship and love for this dear, afflicted people may be kept strong in my poor heart. I hope that golden chain of love may be kept bright, and each link remain steadfast in its place.

"If fellowship with saints below
Is to our souls so sweet,
What heavenly rapture shall we know
When round the throne we meet?"

It is to me a sweet and solemn sight to see brethren dwelling in unity, each one in a humble, contrite spirit, feeling in their own hearts that they are less than the least of all saints, and the chief of sinners. Then the sweet stream of love flows from one heart to another, and they dwell in love, Christ being in their midst. There are times when the people of God get down in deep darkness, feeling that they are near despair; but Jesus Christ is with them there. He never leaves them to be entirely discouraged. He never takes their hope entirely from them. He always comes in his own good time with some sweet promise to comfort them. He says, "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you."—John xiv. 18.

When I took my pen in hand I intended writing what I hope is my experience, and if you can bear with me a little longer I will try to carry out my intention. I well remember that when I was a small child I had a great fear of death. Every night for a long while, when my parents kissed me good-night, I would ask them if they thought I would die before morning. I did not at that time seem to think very much about my condition. It was only the fear of death that troubled me. After I started to school this fear nearly wore away, and only when hearing of a death would it arise. I would often think that I was different from my companions. I would think that all were better than I. I would think of my badness, but did not feel condemned. I went on in this way, sometimes fearing death, at other times feeling my wickedness, and often forgetting both, my mind being taken up with the things of this world, until the spring of 1891, at the association held with this church, which I attended. I was sitting in the meeting, and brother Fred. W. Keene was preaching. I do not remember his text, but I noticed that as he spoke the tears would drop from his eyes, and he seemed broken down. This brought to mind my wickedness. I felt that I had more to weep for than any others. I was in sadness, and desired to be alone. Many weeks passed, and I still had this sad feeling. One Saturday afternoon my parents were getting ready to go to church meeting, and I all at once had a great desire to go with them. I went, and listened to them talk and sing. One of our dear sisters went before the church and told them what great things the Lord had done for her. I was lost in wonder, it being the first church meeting that I remember having attended, and the first experience that I had ever heard related. At the last of the meeting the hymn was given out to dismiss with,

"Tis a point I long to know,
Oft it causes anxious thought,
Do I love the Lord or no?
Am I his or am I not?"

As they were singing I read the first verse, and at the last line of this verse I felt condemned. My past life arose before me, and my sins appeared like mountains. Not only the outward sins and actions, but my very thoughts seemed sinful. I felt that in all my past life I had been sinning against a just and holy God, and that I was banished from his sight and lost. After many weeks of darkness and sorrow these words came to me, "And I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight: these things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." I felt that I was blind, and knew not my way, and this promise comforted me; but I was soon as dark as before, and traveled in darkness for a long time. It seemed that instead of getting better I got worse. My sins seemed to grow blacker, and I was once more near despair. One afternoon I went to visit dear sister Hart, one of our older members, intending to stay over night. She talked nicely and with encouragement; but I was dark, and could not be comforted. I did not stay all night, because I was afraid I would sink into hell before morning, and I was away from home and parents. I came home in the evening, much to the surprise of my parents. I soon went to my room, and spent the night in prayers and tears, but received no comfort yet, because it was the Lord's will to afflict me. I spent much of my time in reading my Bible and hymn book, seeking for comfort and consolation. One night I went to my room feeling that I could not live any longer in this condition, and if my prayers were not answered I would sink into everlasting punishment. All I could utter was, "Lord, save, or I perish." I felt that I could not lie down, or I would sink down to hell. I was afraid to sleep, lest I should awake in everlasting punishment; but for a purpose of Christ's I fell asleep, and the Lord was pleased to relieve me of my burden by a sweet and precious dream.

I thought that I was alone by the banks of a beautiful stream. I never did with my natural eyes see such water or such flowers. While I was standing there a voice seemed to say, "In this river Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist." When I awoke I wondered why I should be the one that should behold such a sight. It then appeared to me that all things were in the hands of Christ, our great Benefactor, and he could reveal his glory and beauty to whom he pleased. The birds were singing so sweetly, they seemed to be praising God. I felt that I could say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name." My mind was soon led to the church, and I had a desire to tell them what great things the Lord had done for me. Brother Durand came in one Friday afternoon. He spoke words of comfort to me, and repeated many portions of Scripture that had been laid with weight upon my poor mind. His conversation was good to me, and the afternoon was indeed pleasant. After telling him some of my feelings I felt that I must go and tell my friends. I went on the second Saturday in May, 1892, with the intention of speaking with them. I felt that I could tell them all. When the opportunity was given I hesitated. Elder Durand asked me if I had anything to say, but before I could answer the words came, "You will deceive them." I could not say one word. I shall never forget my feelings; and when a dear brother went forward and told of the Lord's dealings with his soul I felt that he had done his duty, but I could not. Perhaps, dear ones, you know how I felt. On Sunday morning, when the time for meeting and baptism drew near, I was in great darkness. I could not go to the water to see this dear brother buried beneath the yielding wave. The Lord has a purpose in all things, and works according to his own glorious will. I traveled in sorrow mostly until the second Saturday in August, 1892. In the morning these words came forcibly to my mind, "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." In the afternoon I went to meeting and told my friends what I hoped the Lord had done for me, and to my surprise they received me. On Sunday I was buried in the baptismal water, and raised in newness of life. I can never forget that day. It was one of the happiest days I ever spent. I have had since then many doubts and fears. I have often been made to feel that I have deceived the people of God; and if so, I pray to God to undeceive them, and teach me the truth. I feel at this time that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing. To will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not.

Well, dear brethren, I wrote this to occupy a place in the SIGNS, but it comes so far short of what I would like it to be that I feel it is not worthy a place; but it is at your disposal. Do as you think best, and all will be well with me. Some have expressed a desire to know of my welfare, and I have now written a brief portion of my trials and joys. It seems like a little mite, compared with the deep experiences published in the SIGNS. I feel that I cannot understand the things of Christ as my brethren do; but if Christ has been my teacher it is all I ask. If this worthless letter should appear before the readers of the SIGNS, I want to say that Jesus Christ is my rock and high tower. He is a sure hiding-place in time of trouble, and a sweet friend in time of need. Upon his blood and righteousness is my hope built, which is an anchor to my soul, both sure and steadfast. I have never seen many of the dear brethren and sisters who write for the SIGNS, and never may see them while in these low grounds of sorrow; but my prayer is that we all may be taken into that blessed abode, the everlasting kingdom.

"All o'er those wide-extended plains
Shines one eternal day;
There God the Sun forever reigns,
And scatters night away.

"No chilling wind nor poisonous breath
Can reach that healthful shore;
Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more.

"When shall I reach that happy place,
And be forever blest?
When shall I see the Father's face,
And in his bosom rest?"

O brethren, so many doubts arise, so many fears come forth, that I am often afraid I shall never reach my Father's house, in which are many mansions. I pray to God that I may be saved, and I know if I am saved it will be all of grace, and not by any works that I have done, for I can perform no good works; and if I could I know that it would be impossible for me to save myself, for Jesus Christ through his apostle Paul says, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." If we could by any good works save ourselves, then for what purpose did Jesus Christ die? For what purpose did he humble himself to come on this vile earth? It is said, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." His work appears to me as a finished work, and I feel that it is in vain for man to try to save souls; for Jesus Christ's people were all numbered and chosen before the world was. May the good Lord bless all his chosen ones, manifesting himself to them as their Savior and Guide. May he comfort and edify each one in a way that he sees they most need. If any have gone astray, may he bring them safely back, bearing them in his arms, and carrying them on his heart. May he build up and revive his churches, making them to feel his presence, and willing to walk in his footsteps. To those who are longing for the Sun of righteousness, feeling deeply in their hearts their desperate wickedness, feeling that of all persons they are the vilest, be of good cheer, for Jesus Christ is laden with exceeding great and precious promises, which he will in his own good time send to you, to cheer and comfort your drooping minds. Remember, Christ had every pain, darkness, temptation and distress to endure for his people. We never have one sorrow or affliction but what he has felt it in a greater degree than we have ever suffered. He knows our every pain and weakness, and pities every groan. He will be a kind and faithful husband to the widow, and a merciful and loving father to the fatherless.

Now, brethren, I must stop. May God bless and keep us all in the straight and narrow way. Farewell, and may God be with you.

Hoping that we may meet above,
I am, I hope, your sister in Christ,
LIZZIE P. LEEDOM.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., June 15, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send you the inclosed letter, which will speak for itself. I doubt not that you will deem it worthy of publication in the SIGNS, along with the one which the dear young sister has written you. I feel like adding that we all at Black Rock feel that the Lord has been among us in a very wonderful way, in bringing this young sister to us as he has. I have never witnessed greater joy than filled her heart, and all our hearts, on Saturday and Sunday when she declared among us the wonderful works of the Lord, and followed her Savior in the sublime ordinance of baptism. I rejoice to say there are many others around Black Rock whose place is within the gates, and who have been greatly stirred up in feeling by this display of the power and goodness of God.

I felt especially desirous of attending the Chemung Association at Otego this year; but the distance is great, and the way did not seem to be open.

With love to all, I remain your brother in hope,

F. A. CHICK.

BUTLER, Md., June 4, 1893.

DEAR ELDER BEEBE:—I feel like writing you, and trying to tell you how merciful God has been to me, a poor sinner. I have been able to rejoice that salvation is of the Lord, if at all, and how unworthy I feel myself to be. The first thing I must tell you is that I have felt to-day and yesterday to be the happiest days of my life. God gave me strength to tell the members of the church of my feelings. I was received; and was baptized this morning. How good it is that I can no longer trust in myself. Feeling how weak and destitute I am, what a precious thought it is that God is our strength. I can from my heart say, "God moves in a mysterious way." Things come to me so different from what I had expected. I have often wished I could have the privilege of talking with you; but when you were here I did not feel as though I could say anything. I feel that God has been very good to me, and that I am so undeserving and worthless. You remember the afternoon you were talking to me. I went to bed at night, but it was some time before I fell asleep. The next morning I went to school, but could not content myself there. I came home in time to hear the first sermon that morning. There was in my soul a hungering after righteousness. How comforting to me are the words, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." I know a higher power was dealing with me that day. I was sitting in the meeting, thinking about my own self, when awful feelings came over me, and I felt like screaming. I started to go out, and two men helped me to the door. I was conscious, but did not have any use of myself. Everything was black in front of me; but all at once everything was pretty and bright, like a beautiful sunrise. When I saw this brightness I got upon my feet and commenced to cry. I told you about this at the meeting. After that I never felt so calm, quiet and peaceful as I had. I went to Baltimore on Friday morning, and it seemed hard for me to go. I felt that I wanted to stay at Black Rock. One morning I was awakened with these words on my mind, "Present your body a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God." I did not attend school the week following the association. I felt as though I wanted to be by myself, for thoughts came into my mind that I wanted to meditate upon. One day I saw the same pretty sunrise that I had seen in the meeting-house, and these words came to me, "The Sun of righteousness." I did not know what to think about it; but I was directed to Malachi, fourth chapter. I felt that I wanted to praise God, but doubted if I had any right, when these words came to me, "Rejoice in the Lord, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven." What a difference there is between hearing people talk and feeling these things for ourselves. Then the thought came to me, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." I tell you the joy and comfort of those words are such as the world cannot give. I could say,

"His presence disperses my gloom,
And makes all within me rejoice."

Only those can know it who have tasted it themselves. I feel myself little, but there is one who knows our needs better than we know them ourselves. There is a feeling of thankfulness in my heart, and I have a tender feeling for all those around me. I do want to be humble and lowly, and to feel that it is God's hand that rules. I know it was his hand that strengthened me when I tried to tell the church my feelings. It seemed as though I could not find words to express my condition. No one could have convinced me that I could have talked to the church members feeling as calm and peaceful as I did. But it was of the Lord. I was up at half past four o'clock this morning, anxiously waiting for the time to come. The sweetest thing I ever experienced was when I was buried in the watery grave. I shall never forget it. When I came out of the water I felt as though I was walking different from what I ever did before. I felt this morning that I did not want to become nervous, and these words came to me with much comfort,

"I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand, Upheld by my righteousness, omnipotent hand."

The words seem very precious to me. This hymn was also of much comfort to me,

"Jesus, and shall it ever be,
A mortal man ashamed of thee?"

This hymn was sung at the water. How near and dear Elder Chick is to me. I feel as though I could go and put my arms around the dear ones who gave me such a kindly welcome. It seems more than I deserve. The people I met at the association all seemed so kind and sympathizing. It was a worry to me to think I read the Bible, and the words had no meaning to me. But this is the comforting part to me,

"God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

No one sees only as it is revealed unto him. I feel if I could talk with you personally that I could tell you better how I feel. I feel that I ought to rejoice in the Lord, for he is so good, even unto a sinner like me. I desire to draw nearer and nearer to the Lord.

"Although his methods are unknown, Judgment and truth support his throne."

I did not think of writing half so much. I would be more than glad to receive a word of comfort from you, if you could feel like writing to a poor one like me. It seems I do not feel half thankful enough for what has been done for me.

Elder Chick preached on yesterday from the words, "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul." It seemed as though every word he uttered suited me.

From your little sister, if I dare so call myself,

DORA KESSLER.

BUTLER, Md., June 13, 1893.

ELDER F. A. CHICK—MY DEAR PASTOR:—It is a great joy to me that I can sit down and feel like penning a few lines to you. I must first tell you how happy I was to-day to receive a letter from dear Elder Beebe. It is a comfort to think that you and he think of me. I feel myself so little and childish, and do want to be kind, loving and submissive. I feel as though I never want to be afraid, for I know there is One in whose arms we are safe. My thoughts have been very pleasant, and I love to meditate upon the Lord's name. You remember my saying that things happened so differently from what I expected. It seems so plain that it is not the way we think, but in the manner our heavenly Master has ordered. I have such a tender feeling toward you, you are so sympathizing. The sweet faces of the dear brethren and sisters often come up before me. When I look at myself I seem as a tiny speck. I walked down to the water last Sunday where I was baptized. I hope that spot will always be one to be remembered. I did feel very happy when I was baptized. I think that when I was put under the water it was the sweetest thing I ever experienced. How I do love to think about it. After I finished reading your last letter these words came to me with much sweetness, "As thy days may demand shall thy strength ever be." I can compare myself with the flower that grows in the field. How good the Lord is to poor sinners. I cannot find words to express myself. It seems I do not know how to appreciate things. If I only could feel more thankful than I do. But the Lord knows how weak I am, and also knows the desires of my heart. I realize daily that God moves in a mysterious way, and his presence can disperse my gloom. If you were here I could talk to you. I will be so glad when my school closes; only two more weeks. When I received Elder Beebe's letter I felt as though I wanted everybody to see it, and I read it over and over every chance I got. To think that dear brother came here, and had so much sympathy for even me, a child, makes me feel so happy. I read the letter to my scholars. I feel like putting my arms around God's people and telling them how I love them. How often these words come to me,

"Jesus, and shall it ever be,
A mortal man ashamed of thee?"

I want you to see Elder Beebe's letter. I felt after I had finished writing to him, If I only could have made things plainer. I do not want to speak highly of myself, for I know I am a poor helpless creature. What a glorious thought it is that there is one I can look to. It seems to me that the good Lord does prepare his children for himself. The fourth chapter of Second Corinthians is a beautiful chapter to me. Elder Beebe said, "Unless you forbid it, I wish to share the enjoyment of your letter with the readers of the SIGNS. It is too good news to be confined to myself." I have two feelings about it. It seems that I feel myself so unfit for writing anything worthy to be placed in the SIGNS, among so many able writers. Then again I think if Elder Beebe thinks others would enjoy reading it, I am willing. I never had a thought about it being published when I wrote it. That was not my idea. I wanted to tell him how merciful God had been to me, and I felt happy that God gave me strength to write to him. These words often come to me, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." It does seem as though I am changed right about. I do want to know and do the Lord's will. I never will forget the association held at Black Rock in 1893. Whenever you have time to spare, write to me. I cannot tell you how much I enjoy a letter from you. As soon as my school closes I want to go and see you. I would love to have a talk with you. Remember me with love to the members of your family.

Your loving sister,

DORA KESSLER.

WAVERLY, Iowa, May, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I forward you a letter written by my highly esteemed brother, Elder B. Bundy, which I would love to see in the SIGNS, that others who love the truth may have it as well as myself to enjoy. I have not his permission to send it, but feel it is right to do so. I do hope I love to read the SIGNS, and wish it success in the way of patronage. I would be so glad to attend the association at Otego, N. Y., next month; but I am too far away and cannot. I have one Old School Baptist neighbor, to whom I read this sermon, and she could not keep from weeping. This made me feel that she knew the certain sound.

With love to all the brethren and sisters throughout the land, I at times hope I am a chosen vessel of mercy, though weakest of them all.

A. SHEPHERD.

OTEGO, N. Y., May 2, 1893.

DEAR SISTER ADELIA:—I remember that I was silly enough to promise you to give you my views on the text you named to me some time ago, recorded in 1 Peter iv. 18. "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" To say that I have no view of the subject is more than I dare say; and could I see you, and talk face to face about the matter, it would seem comparatively easy; but to write my views is quite otherwise. I am aware there are different views held, even by our people, on the real meaning of the text named; but I am responsible for my own only. The world is ever fond of giving the children's bread to dogs; and in my day I have heard the text used to frighten sinners into the kingdom, by telling them that it took the united power of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, together with the church and the world, with all their invented means combined, to save a sinner, and that "scarcely." But the address of this epistle is to quite a different kind of sinners, even the "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father," &c. The apostle is not writing to or of the graceless or unquickened character, but to those only who are born of God, quickened by divine grace, and partakers of the divine nature. You will see that both the epistles of Peter are intermingled with admonitions to these characters, telling them what to do, as well as what not to do; such as, "Let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as a busybody in others men's matters. Yet if any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." Then he tells the brethren that judgment must begin at the house of God. And where else in all the Scriptures are we told of another tribunal before which the saints must appear, but before the judgment seat of Christ? I doubt not but you have many times been glad you were not holden to the judgment of carnal men concerning the things of faith and salvation; for if this were true, you know as well as I what that court would say. You would be doomed to say as they do, It is by works of righteousness that I have done, &c. But, dear sister, you came to the throne in Zion, the house of God, and there from the fullness of your heart have boldly declared, Salvation is of the Lord alone. And this only is acceptable testimony before the great King who reigns in glory.

In reading the Scriptures we often find the words saved and salvation; but they do not always refer to that eternal salvation of the sinner in Christ; because there is no "scarcely" in it; for that abundance of grace received always effects a reigning in life by one Jesus Christ. Then we must conclude that this "saved" which the apostle refers to is a salvation to those already in Christ; for he calls them "the righteous." What! and sinners too? Yes, and ungodly. Yes, surely; for who that knows the Lord does not daily feel the need of a glorious High Priest to plead their case before the throne, and thus proclaim their sins and iniquities all forgiven, through the virtue of that blood that speaketh better things than the blood of Abel? If the apostles of the Lamb of God are scarcely exempt from blame, not walking in and according to the commands of the law of Zion, what will be the decision or the judgment rendered in the house of God concerning the ungodly and the sinner? Ungodly in their walk as saints, both before the world and the church; also in doctrine as well; for every principle held by the saints that does not heartily give glory to God alone for the salvation of sinners, both the common and the eternal salvation, is downright ungodliness. We read of a class of sinners of this very sort, and they are born of God; for Paul calls them brethren. But you know they were "bewitched;" and they foolishly, in an ungodly spirit, said, just as thousands are still saying, "We cannot be saved if we do not keep the law." This is the ungodliness we are all liable to fall into, except the grace of God keeps us and saves us from those delusions. Certainly it is ungodly for us, who know the grace of God has saved us, to subscribe to the doctrines of men or devils, and thus deny our dear Lord who bought us so dearly. May the Lord ever keep us from this ungodliness. These "righteous" were so-called because they lived soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; yet they were scarcely exempt from blame. Many also in our day seem very much alarmed lest we by contending, as Paul did, that God works all things after the counsel of his own will, may thereby make God the author of sin. And they tell us that it is the good things only that God works. Yet, in the Lord's name, who is sufficient in wisdom to tell what the good things are? Do you suppose dear old Jacob thought the taking from him of his beloved Joseph bore any resemblance of a good thing? No, no, a thousand times no; but rather, "This is all entirely against me; and more, it will bring my gray hairs in sorrow to the grave." Poor, dear old man, how he was tried. O could he, like God does, have declared the end from the beginning, how vastly different would he have felt. Do you not think, had this been possible, the patriarch's pride would have flamed high, to have seen his son exalted to the second chariot of Egypt? He, as we would say, could have endured it all. But where had been the trial of his faith? It was all meant for evil; but at the same time it was worked for good.

A few remarks now about the "sinner." This also is an appellation that none will accept as theirs but saved sinners. The Pharisee is insulted if it is applied to him. But did ever you feel a fellowship with one as born of God who was offended with that title? No. But such sinners seek it as the most appropriate of all titles to them, a sinner saved by grace. A definite kind of sinner. It is the sinner; the sinner that obeys not the gospel; a believing sinner, but a disobedient one; one who has departed from the Lord, the Fountain of living waters. But as we cannot sin against a law we are not under, nor disobey a law that does not speak to us, and as

(Continued on page 260.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 16, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

PURITAN LAWS.

THE intolerant spirit which prevailed in the early settlement of this continent, under which it was attempted to make people pious by legal enactment, has slept for several generations; but that it is not dead is manifest in the frequent efforts of modern Pharisees to revive those statutes whose enactment must forever remain as a blot upon the history of the first settlers of the English colonies. While the execution of those relics of fanaticism was checked by the advent of the principles of personal liberty, and they were almost forgotten in the light of constitutional freedom, the laws themselves have survived upon the statute books of some of the states, and occasionally malice resorts to their enforcement in defiance of the universal abhorrence of their record when their authority was recognized. Such an ebullition of religious hatred has recently been developed in Pittsburgh, Pa. The dormant sabbatic law has been revived and enforced against some forms of Sunday labor. In this spiteful display of religious zeal the full spirit of persecution for conscience's sake is as glaringly developed as it ever was under the Spanish Inquisition, or when New England hung Quakers and Baptists, and burned witches. The hypocrisy of these religious laws is clearly shown in their very enactment. By what right can it be pretended that men have substituted the first day of the week instead of the last day, which was enjoined upon the Israelites by the direct command of God? The penalty of the transgression of the law which God gave was that the sinner must be stoned to death without mercy. Never has that penalty been abated or modified. It is heaven-daring blasphemy that would substitute a fine instead of the penalty which God affixed for the violation of his sabbath. But since both the law and the penalty have been changed by the fanatics who profess to be zealous for God, it is not wonderful that men who are honest regard their zeal as mere hypocrisy. The following article from the New York World of April 19, breathes the true sentiment of liberty of conscience as it was incorporated in the constitution of the American republic. It is not strange that the secular writer should have made the mistake of suggesting the allowance of works of devotion and mercy. It is not to be expected of one in his position that he should have carefully examined the Mosaic law. But religious teachers ought to know that there was no such exception made either in the giving of that law, nor yet by inspired authority since the day of Moses. "The Lord said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for that the Lord hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; ABIDE YE EVERY MAN IN HIS PLACE, LET NO MAN GO OUT OF HIS PLACE ON THE SEVENTH DAY."—Ex. xvi. 28, 29. Nowhere in the Bible can there be found any relaxation of this law by divine authority. In the present day, as when Jesus was incarnate, popular religionists have made the word of God of none effect by their traditions.—Mark vii. 13. There can be no question that the religious tyrants now have the same bloody inclination to persecute those who do not submit to their dictation, which has filled the earth with murder since the days of Cain. It is an encouraging indication of the love of liberty that an extensively influential secular paper can be found willing to publish such an earnest protest against the legal enforcement of bigotry. Let all religious statutes be abolished from the secular code, and let the creed of every man be a matter between himself and his God. While the people are desirous to be free, let them be obedient to the command of Jesus, "Render therefore unto Cesar the things which are Cesar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

THE PITTSBURG SUNDAY.

PENNSYLVANIA retains on her statute books a Sunday law framed in simpler and more despotic times than these, when work was largely individual, when there were no newspapers, railroads, telegraphs, telephones, or large cities requiring the means of getting about, and when the shadow of Puritanism brooded over an unenlightened land.

This Sunday law gives legal effect to the Mosaic requirements as to Sabbath observance, with only the change of days from Saturday to Sunday. It renders labor on Sunday a penal offense. The law being out of harmony with modern conditions, it has naturally fallen into disuse. But some months ago a society was formed in Pittsburgh to enforce it, so far at least as its enforcement might gratify the desires of the society's members to make other people uncomfortable without interfering with their own convenience.

The society has been especially active in attempts to suppress Sunday newspapers, and now another society has undertaken to put a stop to the running of horse-cars on Sunday, and to that end is about to arrest the directors and stockholders of the principal lines.

This extension of activity is right as far as it goes. But why dally thus with the outskirts of reform? Why not enforce the blue law "for all it is worth?" It forbids all works upon Sunday except those of necessity and charity. Why should not all such work be stopped if part of it is stopped? Try the Mosaic Sabbath in its completeness and hold all men equally to its observance.

Under this law, fully enforced, no man should be permitted to drive a carriage even to church or to supply milk on Sunday. No fires should be lighted on Sunday and no cooking should be done. Breakfast, dinner and supper must be made upon cold victuals, without hot tea or coffee, for the making of these is work. If any man keeps a cow he may milk it, upon the plea of mercy to the beast, but he must on no account strain or care for the milk, for that is work neither necessary nor charitable. Moses did not permit even the gathering of manna on the Sabbath.

All paid organists and choir singers in the churches must be forbidden to perform their duties on Sunday, for these are clearly offenses against the law.

If this matter of religious observance is to be enforced by law, if the Puritan copy of the Mosaic Sabbath is to be re-established at the end of the nineteenth century, its entire spirit should be embodied in the statutes. Men should be forbidden to kiss their wives and women to caress their babes on Sunday. These are "carnal pleasures." None should be permitted to walk or run on Sunday except reverently to and from church. If we are to have the Puritan Sunday as a legal institution anywhere in the Republic, let us have the whole of it.

The men of Pittsburgh who are beset by the activities of this Sunday law enforcement society should at least see to it that the law is enforced with an equal and relentless hand against all offenses prohibited by it. They would probably find that Grant was right in saying that the best way to get rid of a bad statute was rigidly to enforce it.

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

(Continued from page 259.)

"whatsoever the law saith it saith to them that are under the law," and as the Lord's people are not under the law, in this sense, but are under grace, we must then conclude that "the sinner" spoken of is one because he has transgressed the law of the Spirit of life which is in Christ Jesus, and is viewed as a withered branch, bearing no fruit unto holiness, and will appear to the church as in a very unfavorable light, and will cause much sorrow and sadness in the house of God. And, dear sister, it is my desire that all who know these things may do them; not to make our eternal, immortal home more secure, but because we have already received the earnest of our inheritance in glory. Like Zachariah and Elizabeth, may we walk in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord's house blameless.

I have made myself think of what Elder Wm. L. Beebe once said of some one who had talked two hours and said nothing. That often is my case; and if you can trace my wandering writing, and find anything worth keeping, you are welcome to it.

Yours affectionately,

B. BUNDY.

WOLF CREEK, W. Va., June 15, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—In passing along on life's journey here and there we meet with one who says to us, "I am so poor, so little and weak, and so unworthy, it appears to me that I am almost ready to give up my hope; for if I even have a hope it is so little that I hardly dare call it a hope at all." Then an examination is begun, as has so often been the case. If I am a child of God, why do I have such evil thoughts? Why am I tempted in so many ways? Why does my love grow cold, and my zeal abate, and darkness close in around me? Then I cry out in agony of soul.

"Where is the blessedness I knew
When first I saw the Lord?
Where is the soul refreshing view
Of Jesus and his word?"

O could we make those doubts remove,
Those gloomy doubts that rise,
And see the Canaan that we love
With unclouded eyes."

But, like the poor, lonely dove, we mourn and sigh. Then our thoughts run back in search of evidence, and the interest grows as we proceed to examine ourselves. When we begin to weigh the question, we look to the time when we felt no interest in heavenly things; when all our affections were earthly; and when we sought out our associates they were earthly in all they did; and we looked upon ourselves as something. But we come up to the time when this all took on a different feature, or there was a turn in our life. With some it has been very sudden; with others it has been gradual. There came over us a restlessness which we could not understand. When we retired at night an uneasy feeling would come upon us; and we many times feared to sleep, lest we should never see another morn. O how we would mourn. Then we would many times think and many times repeat some words of prayer. But this only seemed to mock us. After a while, when the service under the law became more and more a failure, and our poor, tempest-tossed soul began to see its inability to do good and keep the law, and saw more and more of the law's just demands, and heard its thunderings, we learned that if we offended in one point we were guilty of the whole law. When we turned to God's book there we read, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." By the light of God's grace the poor soul is enabled to see the exceeding sinfulness of sin in their own corrupt heart, which is as a cage of unclean birds, and is the very sink of sin. Then, and not until then, can the poor sinner realize indeed and in truth that his every inclination is toward sin, and sin is mixed with all he does. Then is he made in despair to cry out for mercy. He is made to look back to the hole of the pit from whence he was digged. In this examination he sees himself without hope, and is led to the final and last resort, which is to cry unto God for salvation, or mercy. Then Jesus is revealed as the end of the law for righteousness, and thus shows this poor one that all the demands of the law were hurled at Christ, and not at the redeemed sinner. It is then that this heaven-favored soul is made to adore, love and praise his blessed Jesus. Yes, he views Christ as his in all things.

We can take courage when in this examination we feel that though we once loved sin, now we do not; that once we did not love the people of God, but now we do, or hope we do. Once we had no conflict within, but now we are made to mourn over wicked thoughts, and to hate our own thoughts, which arise from indwelling sin. For we believe that each child of God has a corrupt nature to contend with. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary or opposite the one to the other. These compose the two armies we see in the Shulamite. This is the warfare going on from day to day in those who are born of the Spirit; for "that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." So then "the carnal mind is enmity against God [not only at enmity, but enmity itself], not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." We believe that those who are born again sometimes become carnally minded, and die; not eternally, nor corporially, but die to the enjoyment of spiritual blessings, and many times to church privileges; for whenever we suffer ourselves to be led off from the path of rectitude and righteousness, then we die; that is, we are separated from the things that make for our peace. As we said at the beginning of this writing, here and there we meet one who is a mourner in the true sense of the word, who is ready to acknowledge his leanness and short comings, hardly daring at times to claim a relationship so great as that of being one of the "little ones." On the other hand there are those who say to us, "I commenced the work; I repented; I exercised faith; I know I am a christian; but you Old Baptists do not so much as know these things; and you are, without exception, all the time telling of your doubts and fears; while I do not have any doubt about this matter." "I sit as a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." These, or similiar expressions, we hear from the legalist on all sides. We hear the whole Arminian world teaching that the sinner must exercise faith in order to be saved; that he must repent and do good works in order to salvation; that he must pray, that he must seek and knock; and a host of other things are urged upon the poor dead sinner. He is begged to come to Christ, and to not resist the wooings and beseechings of Christ; that if the sinner does, he will go down to hell. If any really and truly convicted soul can realize any comfort from such admonitions as we have here enumerated, we are bound to acknowledge that we have not so learned Christ; and if this is the way into his heavenly kingdom we are out of the matter entirely, for the reason that the dead know not anything. And if it is for the sinner, either quickened or unquickened, to do anything in order to be saved eternally, then our Bible is mistaken when it ascribes salvation alone to the glorious work of redemption as wrought by our Lord Jesus Christ; for it was declared by an angel from heaven, "And thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Not in their sins, but from their sins. Not that Jesus can save them if his people will let him, or if they will help him; but he shall save them, and that with an everlasting salvation. Not by works of righteousness which this people have done or will do, but according to God's mercy he saves them, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost. Not that the Holy Ghost is renewed, but his people are renewed by the Holy Ghost. Again, Not according to their works, but according to God's own purpose and grace, which was given them [his people] in Christ Jesus before the world began. And this purpose having been in God, and this grace flowing out from him, and applied by him, and freely bestowed of his own sovereign will upon every child of God, it entirely excludes the idea of the poor sinner doing any part of the work. We believe that every one who is blessed with this grace is willing to ascribe salvation alone to the Lord; and then they desire to know his will, and to live accordingly. They desire to live a sinless life. Hence their sighing and mourning, their doubts and fears, their bitter crying, because of the fact revealed to them that they are poor sinners. This people repent and pray, and crave a living faith. They believe and know that it is the goodness of God that leads them to repentance. Such is the way we trust we have been led; for we know that in and of ourselves we are less than nothing, and that without the grace of God we would be as others, and would believe as others. If you ask the gambler, the drunkard, the thief, the liar, or all except those to whom the Lord has revealed himself, you will get the answer, "I do believe that every man is left to act entirely independent in this salvation." So, dear, little, trembling ones, wherever you are, your testimony is different, which shows that a change has taken place with you which has not taken place with the characters just enumerated. All of us naturally believed once that we could do something good to bring about our acceptance with God. If we are enabled by grace divine to see differently, it is evidence that a change has taken place with us. The denial of this on the part of others proves them to be in nature's night.

Yours in hope,

H. A. HARVEY.

STATION A. ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 5, 1893.

I WAS just going to make my address to "My dear brethren in Christ;" but something seems to say, Shame! shame! that so vile a sinner as you will foist himself upon the saints of the most high God. Hypocrisy and vile imposition added to all your other black catalogue of sins, to assume to be a brother to those whom Paul calls "holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling." But what else can I do? Where can I go? In all this broad land of multiplied millions there are none but the poor children of tribulation to whom I can go for the comfort and sympathy that my poor heart needs.

Dear child of God, are you here in this valley of sorrow, this way which is chosen by your Father, never trodden by the lion's whelp, nor seen by the vulture's eye; this way where you find the footprints of your beloved Lord; this way which never can be described or known by human wisdom? O yes, methinks I hear the voice of your groaning, and O! it is melody to my ear. "The voice of the turtle is heard in the land," the bride weeping for her Husband. "By night upon my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth; I sought him, but I found him not." The world knoweth nothing of this sorrow, neither can it know anything of the secret spring of the joy of a poor sorrowing soul while he mournfully walks in this "valley of Achor," or valley of the slain.—Josh. vii. 26. They do not know the deep, deep joy of the Lord's poor Jobs as they cry out in their most terrible extremity, "The hand of God hath touched me."—Job. xix. 21. Singular paradox indeed; the most exultant joy in the deepest sorrow. O yes, dear children, even this valley of the slain is made of our God a place of joy and gladness.—See Hosea ii. 15. O thou chosen generation of Jesus Christ, family of our God, not of this world, even as (just like) your Beloved is not, left here among the earth's nations, a poor and afflicted people, O thou blessed heirs of the tribulation, kingdom and patience of our Lord Jesus Christ, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee." I have found you in this valley of Achor, sorrowing because you cannot sorrow; mourning because you cannot mourn; heavy because you are so light; abased because you are exalted; melted to tears because your heart is so hard; sad and depressed, yet always rejoicing; dying daily, yet living; bearing about in your body the dying of the Lord Jesus, yet rejoicing in the hope of an endless life; no righteousness of your own, yet clothed with the matchless robe of Christ's righteousness; hating yourselves, yet standing before God without blame in love; weak and helpless, yet walking in the power of an infinite God; mourning the lack of faith, yet moved by that faith by which we understand the worlds were made; strangers and pilgrims in the earth, yet having a home in heaven; surrounded by ten thousand dangers, yet perfectly safe; tired and weary, yet enjoying the sweetest rest; destitute of good works, yet working out that which your Father works within; unable to pray, yet always praying; the poorest of earth, yet heirs of matchless wealth; persecuted, yet rejoicing in tribulation; ignorant, yet wise; empty, yet filled with the fullness of God (John i. 16); dwelling in a wilderness, yet in the garden of the Lord; unsatisfied, yet content; timid, yet bold as a lion; humble, yet exalted to the dignity of sons of God; lying slain on the battle-field, yet standing in the strength of Israel's God; blind, yet seeing the King in his beauty; deaf, yet hearing the sweetest melody of the gospel; not under the law, but under grace; no name among men, yet written in the Lamb's book of life before the world was; not the lineal descendents of any great family of earth, yet the line of your genealogy is traced back and up to the eternal Father; the Spirit of Christ given to you, not because you are good, but because you are sons. No wonder the Savior says, "Ye are not of this world." These strange paradoxes mark you as belonging to another. You are indeed a strangely peculiar people.

And now, dear children, I do not know whether I am one of you or not. If I am not, I am alone, just alone in this cold, sinful world. O terrible thought! How can I endure it? Tell me not, O children of Zion, tell me not to return from following after you. Strange as it may seem to the world, this valley of the slain is a sweet, sweet peace to me. I love the company of the poor, the lame and halt there. Let me walk with you, mourn, weep and rejoice with you. And O! can I, a poor worm like me, have a share in the sweet fellowship of the saints?

Beloved, I have written so incoherently, and every expression is so weak, just like myself, that I hesitate to send it to you. But perhaps it will induce some of you to write me, if it is thus with you. Tell me, ought a poor, helpless worm like I am, so full, too, of such grave inconsistencies, be allowed to stand upon the walls of our beloved Zion and talk about the unsearchable riches of Christ?

H. S. CLOUD.

SCALESVILLE, Ind., March 20, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—I again take my pen, to let the dear children of God who take the SIGNS OF THE TIMES know that I yet live, for a purpose unknown to me, but known to God; for of all the beings that live and move on earth, I at times seem to be of the least use. Almost twenty-nine years ago I publicly professed a hope in Christ, and was baptized in the fellowship of the Regular Baptist Church, which I then believed, and yet believe, to be the church of Christ. She should stand firmly "upon this rock," teaching none other things than those which Jesus Christ and his apostles commanded and taught. We should have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, or with those who teach for doctrine the commandments of men. How it grieves us to think of some who, we have reason to believe, have been born of God, and been made by his Spirit to rejoice in the doctrine of God our Savior, and who, concerning the faith and discipline of the church, had renounced all things for which there was not a "Thus saith the Lord." Where are some now, who once stood shoulder to shoulder with us? We are sorry to say they are drifting back into the world, and trimming their way to seek love, by becoming slack in discipline, the law which the Lord has given to govern his church, and being over anxious to get people to join the church. "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" A house divided cannot stand.

Dear brethren, why not be quiet, and let the Lord build the house out of the material he has prepared? for it is written, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." Whenever men undertake to improve upon the works of God, they are sure to make matters worse, and sure to bring about confusion. Is it not better, if the will of God be so, that we suffer the reproaches of wicked men and devils, and have the smiles of our Master, and a "Thus saith the Lord" for all we do and say, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season? "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world," says Jesus. The world loves its own, and hates the Bible truth, because it debases man and exalts Christ as head over all to the church, which is his body. What can Baptists expect to gain by taking down the bars, or making breaches in the wall which the Master of the house has surrounded them with so perfectly that no enemy can enter therein, provided the inmates do not open the gates or door to any but those whom the Master has taught to say plainly "Shibboleth," so that you may know he is an Israelite indeed? It is not large numbers that constitute the church of Christ, but those who are born again, or from above. Paul says to the Corinthian brethren, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."—2 Cor. vi. 14-16. Can you, brethren, by persuading men to join the church, whom God has not fitted for it, make them the children of God, the children of the promise, of whom God has said, "I will be their God, and they shall be my people?" I tell you no. You cannot change the purpose of the living God. "Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth."—Rom. ix. 18. Then is it not best for the church to stand still and see the salvation of God, as Israel had to do when they came to the Red Sea? The sea was before them, the Egyptians were behind them, and an impassable mountain on either side of them. What could they do but stand still? To go forward they would be drowned in the sea; to go backward they would die at the hands of the Egyptians. But the Lord delivered them in a way they had not thought nor heard of, by making a passage through the sea, so that the great army of over six hundred thousand men, the chosen people of God, Israel, walked through the sea on dry land, and not one was lost.

Now, brethren, consider Gideon's little army of men, and how the Lord delivered the Midianites into his hand. Read the whole account in Judges, seventh and eighth chapters.

The Lord delivered Israel out of Egyptian bondage. It was he also who fought their battles. Therefore, dear brethren, let us be still, and know that he is God, and besides him there is no Savior. Let us be patient in long suffering, and not deny him; for if we deny him, he also will deny us. Let us own him as our Savior and as our Lawgiver. As much as in us lies, let us try to faithfully execute his laws, which he has given unto his church, doing nothing by partiality, knowing this, that the church does not belong to us, but to the Master. We are only members of the body, to be governed by the head. He has given the church laws to be governed by, and we cannot change them. It is our duty to observe them. Obedience to his commands is the only safeguard, which he has thrown around his people, the church. Where has the Savior made any promise of salvation to any one except the faithful? Can we expect to have peace in the church of Christ if we neglect to execute his laws, which are unalterable? Although we may think, and may teach our brethren, that such and such things are small matters, and do not amount to much, and therefore we better just let them go, bear with them, for if we bring them before the church they will cause trouble, and it may be some good brother will be offended; this, dear brethren, is just the way to get trouble into the church, by neglecting to enforce the laws of Zion. We may throw wet blankets on the flames, and keep the flames down for a time, but they will burst out after a while. O what a shame that any Baptists should be so tied and bound unto the world as to be afraid to enforce the laws which Christ, the great head of the church, has given for her protection. Fear not, brethren, to enforce the law of Christ, for it is that which binds the brethren together in the church. You will only get rid of the chaff, and be the gainer by it.

Brethren Beebe, if you think this will be of benefit to the many readers of the SIGNS, publish it. I would ask the brethren to try it by the word, as we are all fallible beings.

Your little brother,

C. C. HEATH.

SOUTH LOWELL, N. C., March 21, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Through the goodness and mercy of God I am yet spared, a living monument of his untiring mercies. I hope I have the desire to say with the psalmist David, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." He has spared my life to attain within a few months of seventy years. Though feeble, he yet gives me strength to be able to nurse and attend to my two helpless children. Were it not for them, how often I feel, O for wings to fly away and be at rest from these scenes of sin and earthly trials. Were it not for the blessed hope that when I shall fill my allotted task here on earth I shall have a home in that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, I would sink in despair. Full twenty years of our shut-in lives have we been graciously supplied, cheered and comforted with our beloved medium, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, bearing sweet truths from the sons and daughters of Zion, scattered over this land of ours. Words fail to express the sense of gratitude I feel to the Giver of all blessings, poor and dependent worm that I am, for so manifesting his love to me, inspiring the hearts of his children to remember me. Confined always at home, I seldom hear a sermon, only through the SIGNS. Longingly I look for it each week. Often when weary with care and watching, my soul filled with doubt and darkness, has it brought such words of comfort that I was made to cry,

"Dissolve my heart in thankfulness,
And melt mine eyes to tears."

Through the SIGNS I have been given a friend, a precious sister in Christ, Mrs. W. T. Clark, of Woodhull, Ill. For months has she been cheering our afflicted lives with sweet words of consolation, and also donated sixteen dollars. The Lord is good, and not slack concerning his promises. While misfortune has robbed us of all earthly possessions, and we of necessity have to look to others for support, we have never suffered. O blessed promises! I can say with dear Mary Parker,

"When a few more days are ended,
A few more scenes are o'er,
A few more griefs are tasted,
We shall fall to rise no more."

Dear brethren Beebe, accept my sincere thanks for the great kindness extended me; and may I hope to have an interest in your prayers, that I may have strength given me to bear whatsoever the future may have in store for me? May the God of all grace ever uphold you, and enable you to still wield "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," in contending for that faith so ably defended by your father, the predestinating and electing love of God, the ground and pillar of the gospel.

Your unworthy sister, I hope, in Christ,

SARAH H. GARRARD.

OTEGO, N. Y., May 16, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I will send for your disposal a short but sweet letter from our good sister Cheney, which, I think, is the pure language of one born of God.

B. BUNDY.

DIX, N. Y., Jan. 8, 1893.

MRS. PARKER—MY DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—I seat myself with a heavy heart, to try to respond to yours received a long time ago. I thought when I received yours that I would answer it immediately; but my many cares, combined with the infirmities of age, afford me an excuse. My health is as good as I have any reason to expect at my time of life, being seventy years old. Many times I am made to wonder at the goodness and mercy of God in bestowing so many blessings on such an unworthy creature as I am; for at times I see so much in my life to condemn, and even my thoughts are evil continually. O when shall I be rid of this sinful self? When I shall lay aside this mortality, shall I indeed put on immortality and awake with the likeness of the Redeemer? It seems too much for such a poor sinner as I am to hope for. Should this indeed be my happy lot, it must be through rich, free and sovereign grace. If indeed he has given me a surety wholly divine, and viewed all the merits of Jesus mine, he possibly may with it give me the kingdom. I hear no preaching at all. I have my Bible, but sometimes even that is to me a sealed book, while at other times I seem to find a blessing on every page I read. I read the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and enjoy it very much; but my mind is so much occupied with worldly cares that I cannot retain what I read. While reading I sometimes think my experience is told by the dear children of the household of faith; and I feel my hope revive and my heart grow warm with love to God and the dear saints. But much of the time I walk in darkness and have no light. If I only could trust in the Lord and stay upon God all would be well; yet I have no confidence anywhere else. Now the inquiry in my mind is, Do I trust in the Lord, and is it true that I shall never be confounded? By the abounding mercy of the adorable High Priest and King, the God-man, the meek and lowly Jesus, I do hope in his mercy, that I shall come off conqueror through his blood and righteousness.

Remember me to the dear friends, and especially to brother Bundy. My love to yourself and Henry.

L. D. CHENEY.

IVEY, Ga., Aug. 7, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you inclosed two dollars in a registered letter for your paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which I have been reading off and on from my youth up; and if there has ever been any variation in the doctrine it has advocated and set forth I have never been able to detect it. It has set forth the doctrine that Jesus Christ is the Savior of sinners, the Head of the church, the corner-stone, the one that can shut and none can open, and open and none can shut. Brethren, in one month more, I left living, I shall enter my seventy-eighth year, but still need the prayers of the righteous; so, brethren, pray for one who still remains a poor sinner.

CHARLES IVEY.

MARRIAGES.

ON Wednesday, Aug. 9th, at the residence of the bride's father, in Kent Co., Del., by Elder E. Rittenhouse, Mr. Christian S. Martin and Miss Emma Sylvester, all of Delaware.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—In the city of Middletown, N. Y., on Feb. 24th, 1893, of general debility, Mrs. Martha Kirby, widow of Wm. Kirby. She was born March 16th, 1815, and was therefore in the 78th year of her age. Her husband died about seven years ago. She leaves an adopted daughter to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Kirby was baptized a number of years ago in the fellowship of the Middletown & Wallkill Old School Baptist Church, of which she remained a worthy member until called to her eternal home.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, at her late residence, on Feb. 26th; after which her mortal remains were laid to rest in Pine Hill Cemetery.

"O happy soul, who safely past
Thy weary warfare here!
Arrived at Jesus' feet at last,
And ended all thy care."

DIED—At Kelly's Corners, Delaware Co., N. Y., August 2d, 1892, after a long illness of heart disease, Mr. Norman Kelly, in the 65th year of his age.

Mr. Kelly was not a professor of religion, but was a Baptist in principle, taking no interest in any of the works of men for salvation. He was very patient in his suffering, which had been very great, and often expressed a desire to be at rest.

His funeral was very largely attended at the house, and a sermon was preached by Elder Fred W. Keene from Amos v. 8; after which a large procession followed his mortal remains to his last resting place.

He left my sister (his widow), two brothers and two sisters, with other relatives, to mourn. My sisters, three in number, are widowed. May God comfort the mourning ones.

J. D. HUBBELL.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

MY dear mother, Susannah Streight, departed this life July 5th, 1893, aged 80 years, 6 months and 21 days.

She had been afflicted for years with neuralgia of the stomach and side. She had been sick for some time with neuralgia in her side, and it went to her heart. My wife had just washed her face, and I asked her how she felt. She said she had been sleeping. She just moved her head, and said, "I am getting blind; I can't see," and died without a struggle. She was very willing to go. We believe and know that she has left a weary land to exchange for a land of rest. She took great delight in reading the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. None were more delighted in hearing the gospel preached, and to converse on the subject of salvation by grace. She was born in North Carolina, her maiden name being Corum. She moved with her parents while a child to Kentucky, lived there a number of years, then moved to Illinois, and there was married to Mr. Lucas. To them were born three children, of whom only one survives, Elizabeth Jones, now living in Des Moines, Iowa. She next married James Simmons, in Warren Co., Ill. To them were born four children, of whom only one survives, Bailey R. Simmons. My father died when I was small. We then moved to Iowa, where she married Ephraim Streight. She had been a widow for a number of years when she died. She joined the Old School Baptist Church when about fifteen years old, in Kentucky, and held her membership in Illinois and Iowa. Her last membership was at the Mt. Pleasant Church, near York, York Co., Neb.

The funeral services were held at our house on July 6th, conducted by Elders Cooper and Wagoner.

B. R. SIMMONS.

YORK, Neb.

DIED—July 7th, 1893, at her home, where she had lived thirty-seven years, sister Mary Brasel, daughter of the late Elder Ezra Stout, of Oregon, who formerly lived in Illinois.

Sister Brasel was born in Hamilton Co., Ohio, Nov. 25th, 1825. Her parents moved to Morgan Co., Ill., when she was young. She was married to brother Louis Brasel on March 4th, 1841. Unto them were born eleven children, seven sons and four daughters. She united with the Primitive or Old School Baptist Church called Barren Grove, in Henry Co., Ill., in 1870, where she lived an active member until called home. She was one that enjoyed church privileges greatly, and mourned the loss of them, as the church has not been able to hold regular meetings for the last few years, having grown weak from deaths and removals. She was deeply taught in spiritual things, often sighed over the plague of her heart, and often spoke of the depravity and deceitfulness of the same.

Her disease was tumor on the liver, from which she suffered greatly, being mostly unconscious for the last week; but a few minutes before death came she revived and knew all. Her eyes sparkled with unnatural light. The struggle with natural ties is over, the victory is given, as she died in the glorious triumph of faith. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and especially to brother Brasel, who is left in his old days to mourn his loss, being badly afflicted with paralysis, unable to walk without crutches, his speech and sight being also affected. May the God of all consolation comfort them in this sad dispensation.

The writer was sent for to attend the funeral, and tried in a feeble way to answer Job's question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" followed by some beautiful and touching remarks by Elder Smith Ketchum. Then the body was conveyed to its last resting place, there to remain until called forth, and the answer to that great question is demonstrated by the power of God, when all his saints shall be raised in the likeness of Jesus, their glorious Redeemer.

JOHN DOWNEY.

WENONA, Ill., July 29, 1893.

ELDER Benjamin Bradbury was born in Brown Co., Ohio, May 30th, 1813, and departed this life in the city of Abingdon, Ill., August 1st, 1893, aged 80 years, 2 months and 2 days.

The deceased was a son of Moses and Agnes Bradbury. He joined the Clover Lick Church of Primitive Baptists, in the same state, in January, 1833, and was baptized by Elder Aaron Sargent. In 1835 he came to Illinois, and settled in Knox County. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Finley on March 12th, 1840, who died April 27th, 1841. On Nov. 1st, 1846, he was married to Miss Hannah Stevens, who became the mother of two sons, James J. and Levi A., who with their mother survive the Elder.

The subject of this notice was licensed to preach by the Cedar Creek Church in 1842, and at the request of the same church was ordained to the ministry in November, 1843, by Elders Charles Vandever and Wm. Martin. He preached for some years for two or three churches, and was for awhile a member of the Henderson Church. In August, 1859, he and his wife joined the New Hope Church, in Warren Co., Ill., by letter, where the deceased remained a beloved and highly esteemed member and an able defender of the faith until his death. Our beloved brother had sustained an unblemished character as a Christian for more than sixty years, and as a minister nearly fifty years, and never compromised the gospel of grace with the inventions of men. The writer of this notice was a member with him about thirty-four years, and our fellowship has been unbroken. The Elder had for several years been very feeble with a complication of ills, and was not able to meet often with the church during his last days, but remained unshaken in the faith of the gospel. He finally sank down slowly, and fell asleep in Jesus in the triumphs of that faith on which he had so long lived.

On August 2d a large audience gathered at his late residence, and Elder Smith Ketchum, of Elmwood, Ill., opened the services by reading and prayer, and the writer spoke from 2 Timothy iv. 6-8; after which his remains were laid to rest in the city cemetery until God shall call for him.

The deceased read the SIGNS for many years. The Lord bless the bereaved family.

I. N. VANMETER.

MACOMB, Ill., Aug. 3, 1893.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Andes Church, Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the first Wednesday and Thursday in September (6th), 1893.

THE fifty-third annual session of the Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists will be held (the Lord willing) with the Sulphur Fork Church, near Campbellsburgh, Henry Co., Ky., commencing on Friday before the first Saturday and Sunday in September (1st), 1893.

Those coming by way of Lexington will change cars at Lagrange and get off at Campbellsburgh station, on the Cincinnati & Louisville Short Line R. R. Those coming by way of Cincinnati and Louisville will get off at Campbellsburgh, where all will be cared for.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

E. F. RANDELL, Church Clerk.

THE Nodaway Association of Primitive Baptists will meet with the First Nodaway Church, four miles west of Savannah, Andrew Co., Mo., on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming from the south will come to Savannah, on the Maple Leaf R. R. Those from the north on the same road will come to Savannah. Those coming from the north on the Bluff R. R. will stop off at Amizona. Conveyance will be at each place. All are invited.

LUKE THORNTON, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Predestinarian Baptists will hold its next annual meeting with the Salem Church, in Marshall Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the south will stop at Rutland, and those from the north will stop at Wenona. Those coming by the Chicago & Alton R. R. will stop at Evans, and those by the Santa Fe R. R. will stop at Toluca.

A cordial invitation is extended to the household of faith to attend with us.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE sixty-second annual session of the Spoon River Association of Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1893, and continue three days.

The meeting will be at the Mt. Zion Church, Fulton Co., Ill., seven miles east of Astoria, on the St. Louis Division of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Our brethren are invited to come and see us.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p. m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station on Thursday at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE annual meeting with the church at Bryn Zion is appointed on the third Sunday in August, Saturday included.

Friends who can attend with us, and expect to come by rail, will please get tickets for Kenton, if coming from the northward, and come down the Delaware R. R. on the first train on Saturday. Saturday meeting at two o'clock p. m. Those coming from the southward get tickets for Clayton.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.

Salt River—28th.

As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.

Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.

Elk Lick—5th.

Mt. Sterling—6th.

Mt. Carmel—7th.

Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05

Twelve copies..... 50

Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.15; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth binding.....$1 00

Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz.:

a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00

Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00

Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50

Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00

Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50

Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50

Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1893.

NO. 34.

POETRY.

ISAIAH XLII. 16.

ALL the way seems dark before me,
But my Father holds my hand;
Though no pathway I can see,
On I go at his command.

Though my feet with thorns are torn,
Though I through a strange road go,
He who leads hath much more borne,
And doth all my pathway know.

He who saved me by his grace
Will, I know, keep me alive;
Where he hath for me a place
I shall in his time arrive.

Naught have I to call my own,
All I have must come from him;
Ere the world was he has known,
Though my path to me is dim.

If he, who is all in all,
In the pathway shall me lead,
Though I stumble I can't fall,
But shall in his pastures feed.

Then what could I ask beside—
I a weak worm of the dust?
May I in his love abide,
Only in his name to trust.

Are there idols in my heart?
Let them be cast far away;
Sooner would I from all part,
Than from God to stay one day.

AMY S. BRINK.

CORNWALL, N. Y., Jan., 1893.

HE KNOWETH THE WAY THAT I TAKE.

I KNOW not, the way is so misty,
The joys or the griefs it shall bring,
What clouds are o'erhanging the future,
What flowers by the roadside shall spring;

But there's one who will journey beside me,
Nor in weal nor in woe will forsake;
And this is my solace and comfort,
"He knoweth the way that I take."

I stand where the crossroads are meeting,
And know not the right from the wrong;
No beckoning fingers direct me,
No welcome floats to me in song.
But my Guide will soon give me a token
By wilderness, mountain or lake;
Whatever the darkness about me,
"He knoweth the way that I take."

It is true that I cannot perceive him
If backward or forward I go;
He hideth himself, but he tries me,
That more of his love I may know.
And O that the gold may be purer
For the trouble that comes for love's sake!
I am not afraid of life's sorrow,
"He knoweth the way that I take."

Who knoweth? The Father who loves me,
The Savior who suffered for me,
The Spirit all present to guide me,
Whatever the future shall be.
So let me have hope and take courage,
This truth shall my joy-anthem make,
The Lord is my strong tower of refuge,
"He knoweth the way that I take."

And I know that the way leadeth home-ward,
To the land of the pure and the blest,
To the country of ever fair summer,
To the city of peace and of rest.
And there shall be healing for sickness,
And fountains life's fever to slake;
What matters beside? I go heav'nward;
"He knoweth the way that I take."

CORRESPONDENCE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 4, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—In a recent number of the SIGNS I see two requests for my views upon portions of the Scriptures. One was by brother J. A. Merryman, and the other was signed "E. O." I will say first that if I knew the address of the writers I would respond by private letter; but as I do not I will try to give such views as I have through the SIGNS, if you deem it best to publish what I may write.

The text named by brother Merryman is in Matthew xi. 12, and reads as follows, "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." Concerning this text I wish to make a few prefatory remarks first. In former years I associated these words with the language found in Luke xvi. 16, which reads as follows: "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." Formerly it was my thought that the evangelists were recording the same thing, only using different language in doing so; but after more carefully reading the connection I have come to the conclusion that I was wrong. The connection shows that Matthew and Luke could not have been declaring the same thing, because they were, in the connection of each text, writing of different scenes and times in the public ministry of the Savior. I desire also to say that I am well aware that much has been said and written upon these words, and much in them has seemed to many difficult to be understood; and in the few thoughts which I may here present I cannot hope to satisfy the minds of every one, and perhaps of no one. But nevertheless I will briefly present my present views, with the reasons that lead me to them, hoping that at least the text may not suffer violence at my hands; and that if my brethren shall differ from me they will at least throw the mantle of charity over my imperfections.

I understand the text to mean just what would at first glance occur to the reader as its meaning, viz., that the kingdom of heaven in the persons of its subjects suffers persecution and all manner of opposition from the rage and malice of its adversaries, and from the enmity of the prince of darkness ruling in the hearts of the children of men; and that the followers of Jesus were taken by force and imprisoned, and delivered up to death. I will briefly give my reason for this view, and then try to answer an objection which may occur to the minds of others, as it formerly did to my own mind.

The connection of the text seems to me to clearly show that this must be its meaning. John the Baptist had been arrested and cast into prison by Herod, and was soon to lose his life, from the hatred of a woman whose iniquity he had rebuked. From his prison he had, as in this eleventh chapter of Matthew is narrated, sent two of his disciples to Jesus, asking the one great question, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Jesus in reply sent him the testimony of his mighty works, with the cheering message, "And blessed is he whosever is not offended in me." Then, as they departed with the Master's message to John, Jesus began to discourse concerning John to his disciples. Read from the seventh to the eleventh verses for the wonderful testimony which Jesus bore concerning this man, who came in the spirit and power of Elijah. I will not pause to quote it all. Now bear all this in mind, viz., that John the Baptist had come as the forerunner of Christ, preaching the good news of the kingdom, and also that he was now hated and persecuted of men, and was suffering imprisonment as the direct result of the hatred of men to his ministry, and that all this had just been called to the attention of the Master and his disciples afresh by the coming of the two disciples of John, and it seems to me that the conclusion is irresistible that the words of the text, "the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence," &c., can mean nothing different from what I have named just before, viz., the persecution to which its subjects were exposed.

The question that may arise, and that was once in my mind, is this, Why say, "From the days of John the Baptist until now," unless something peculiar to that time is meant? Such a thing as persecution is common in all ages of the kingdom of heaven. The people of God had been persecuted from the beginning of time, and would be until the end of time. Why then say, "From the days of John the Baptist until now?" The answer, to my mind, is that the kingdom of heaven began to be heralded forth by John the Baptist, and John the Baptist was now in prison suffering violence for his ministry, and John the Baptist had been the subject of the Savior's discourse; and therefore he continues right along in the same line of truth when he uses the words of the text. This language does not imply any denial of the fact that from the days of Abel he that is of the flesh has hated and persecuted him that is of the Spirit. On the contrary, the Savior's words assert that what has always been true is now also shown still more clearly to be true; for the kingdom of heaven itself is suffering violence, and the violent take it with carnal power.

The spirit of righteousness had always been in the world, but it had always been persecuted by the followers of the spirit of the world. So Cain persecuted Abel, and Saul persecuted David, and Jezebel persecuted Elijah; and now that, in a manner never seen before, the kingdom of heaven was set up on earth, the spirit of rage, enmity and hatred burst forth with renewed fury. One Herod had destroyed all the children in Ramah, another Herod had cast John into prison, and later beheaded him, and still later Jesus himself should be put to death upon false accusation; and in ages to come the blood of slaughtered millions should testify to the spirit of enmity in man against God and godliness. Always is it true that the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

I want to call attention to the word "suffereth." It signifies to receive, or to endure. The violent inflict violence upon it. The thought in my mind is that the kingdom of heaven does not inflict violence, but endures it. The world is carnal, and uses carnal weapons, or weapons of violence. The kingdom of heaven is spiritual, and uses only spiritual weapons. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, says the apostle. Abel did not persecute or slay his brother, but Cain slew him. David did not persecute Saul, but was persecuted of Saul. John did not persecute Herod, but was persecuted by him. The Master did harm to no one, but was reproached and persecuted. In all ages the kingdom of Christ has suffered violence, but has inflicted none. A spirit of violence is always a mark of the world, and not of the kingdom of God. With the kingdom of God come love, peace, good will to men, and an endeavor to live peaceably with all men; but a spirit of persecution marks any church as a church of antichrist. A persecuting spirit at once shows that a man is of antichrist, and not of Christ. The kingdom of Christ is a kingdom of love, which suffers long, and is kind.

I leave these remarks. I find that I have already written so much that I will leave the text mentioned by "E. O." to another time. I trust that what is written may not be wholly unsatisfactory to brother Merryman.

I remain your brother in the hope of the gospel,

F. A. CHICK.

THE LORD'S GOODNESS.

Exodus xxxiii. 12-23; xiii. 4-9.

How different the Lord's goodness is from the goodness of men. What is known as goodness among men is based upon natural affection, which is earthly and sensual, and is full of selfish pride and vanity, and is directed by human wisdom, which is foolishness with God; therefore this goodness is like the deceitful heart from whence it comes, unreliable. The Savior did not recognize it as entitled to be called goodness, and said, "There is none good but one, that is God." The goodness of the Lord comes forth from that everlasting love with which he loved his people, which is infinitely pure and holy, as is every attribute of his glorious and incomprehensible character; and it is prepared and manifested in infinite wisdom, and in perfect accordance with the claims of justice and truth. It is therefore spoken of in the Scriptures as great. "They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness." "O how great is thy goodness which thou hast wrought for them that fear thee, which thou hast laid up for them that trust in thee before the sons of men."

The Lord's goodness and his glory are one and the same. Moses asked to be shown the Lord's glory, and in reply the Lord said, "I will cause all my goodness to pass before thee." But Moses would not be allowed to look upon that goodness as it came toward him and passed along by. One look would have killed him. He must be hidden and securely covered while God's glory passed by, or he would have been swept away by it into everlasting destruction. That is the Lord's face, that approach of his goodness and glory to the favored subjects of it; and "no man," he said, "can see my face and live." There was but one place in all the world where Moses would be safely protected while the Lord's glory passed by, and that was and is a place by the Lord, sacredly near to him, a rock which even the wind that passed by Elijah and rent the rocks on Mount Horeb could not disturb. In that rock there was a cleft prepared for Moses; and the Lord put him in there, and covered him with his hand, so that he was absolutely safe while the goodness of the Lord passed by. Then the hand of the Lord was removed, so that Moses could see the back parts of the Lord, could see the work after it was finished, the goodness after it was prepared and completed; but he could not see anything of it beforehand, nor understand the manner or time of the Lord's coming to him in his purposes of love and mercy. "My face shall not be seen."

But that was what Moses had asked to see; and we are all like Moses in that respect. He wanted to know all about the Lord's purposes concerning his people, what he was going to do, and how he was going to accomplish the work. "And Moses said unto the Lord, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight. Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, show me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is thy people. And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest." That was a blessed promise, and Moses' words show that he regarded that as an absolutely essential thing. "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." That ought, it seems, to have been enough; but still Moses wanted to see the Lord's way, to see his glory.

The manner in which the Lord answered and fulfilled this prayer of Moses shows how it is fulfilled in the gospel, and in the experience of all his children. Moses was alone with the Lord upon Mount Sinai when the Lord passed by before him, and proclaimed his name. In that name is all his goodness, all his glory; and it is expressed and made to appear when that name is proclaimed. A name is for others, not for the one to whom it belongs. It expresses to others his character and attributes and work. A name means to any one just what he knows of the one whose name it is. The revelation of the name of the Lord to any one is the revelation of his divine perfections. To proclaim that name is to proclaim those perfections, to make his goodness and glory appear. This is the name of the Lord that was proclaimed by the Lord as he passed by before Moses while he was hidden in the cleft of the rock and covered with the Lord's hand, "The Lord, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation." What a most wonderful name this is, full of gospel blessings, full of goodness and mercy and truth, and also of justice and judgment; and therefore it must pass by a sinful mortal as a strong and mighty wind that would carry him away like chaff. Who is there on the earth that could stand before that wind, "He will in no wise clear the guilty?" It would be to him like the wind that "rent the mountains, and break in pieces the rocks before the Lord," on Mount Horeb; and no hiding-place that he might find on the earth could save him from its terrible power.

But there is a place by the Lord, and a Rock is there, with a cleft which furnishes a hiding-place absolutely and eternally secure. "That Rock is Christ." The guilt of all his people was upon him, and on account of that the wrath of God fell upon him. The day of vengeance was in his heart. All his people were in him, died with him in a legal and mystical sense, and rose with him. They were hidden thus in him, and covered with the hand of God's infinite power, while his goodness was thus being prepared and his glorious name proclaimed. The guilty were not cleared, as the last syllable of that wonderful name declares they shall not be, but were cleansed from guilt by that glorious, atoning sacrifice, and were thus made holy as God is holy. They were covered by the powerful hand that raised Christ from the dead, and so were saved in that cleft, and are now enabled to see the goodness of the Lord after it has passed by. So the eight souls were saved in the ark from the storm which fell upon that, and were afterward brought out upon Ararat, and favored to look upon the wonderful work of salvation which had been wrought for them, and to see the rainbow against the cloud that had passed by, the token of God's covenant of peace with them.

In all the experience of the Lord's people it is always so: the back parts of the Lord only can be seen, the work that has been done, the way that has been trodden. We cannot see his face as he comes, nor know his way beforehand; but that makes no difference with his coming. He knew his way, though he would not show it beforehand to Moses. He had everything appointed and fixed, even to the wrath of his enemies, and the manner in which that wrath shall be expressed, and how much of it shall be restrained. "Forever, O God, thy word is settled in heaven." The work to be done upon the vessels of wrath, and the work upon the vessels of mercy, made from the same lump of clay, and fashioned according to God's purpose, all his works of every kind, were known unto him from the foundation of the world; but they are not known unto us until they are finished. Shall we then say that God does not know them beforehand because we do not? that he has not predestinated them because we cannot understand why he should have done so? Shall we say that if all that transpires is according to his purpose, and if no one, not even Pharaoh, has resisted his will, that he has no ground to find fault? No. When his Spirit rules us we shall be glad to see his way when he is pleased to reveal it, to rejoice in his goodness after it has been finished, and to wait for him to unfold to us what is yet in store for us to see, knowing that he "worketh all things after the counsel of his own will," that he "does his will in heaven, in earth, and in all deep places," and that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 9, 1893.

BATH, Maine, Aug. 8, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have enjoyed the inclosed letter from Elder Keene, and I send it to you to give to all the readers of the SIGNS if you think best. I felt that I ought to send it as soon as I had permission from him; but it has been a letter to me that once reading has not been sufficient, so I have very selfishly kept it. We have had the pleasure of another visit from brother Keene this summer. It was the Lord's will for him to come to Bowdoinham, and in the two sermons he preached the Lord gave him many good and comforting things to say concerning the salvation of our God. We are very few in number, but we can receive only Jesus as the Savior of sinners. This was clearly and forcibly done in both sermons; and the Lord gave us the hearing ear, so that we were strengthened, comforted and refreshed. I often wish the Lord would direct you and others to visit us, especially at the time of our association. God will bless and comfort his people, and will direct them in all their ways.

Your unworthy sister,

ATTIE A. CURTIS.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

TO ATTIE A. CURTIS—DEAR SISTER IN THE LORD:—Your letter was very welcome, for I am ever pleased to hear tidings of the prosperity of the dear children of God. Sometimes tidings reach us concerning some portion of Zion, of distresses and desolations, and even of wars and fightings, and then our hearts are grieved: we mourn for Jerusalem. While such things prevail, like Nehemiah, our countenance may well be sad; but when under the reign of the Prince of Peace, from Dan even to Beersheba, the tribes of Israel dwell safely every man under his vine and under his fig tree, eating and drinking and making merry.—1 Kings iv. 20-25. O what a glorious and delightful state for the nation to be in! "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore." It is therefore a matter of sacred pleasure to my soul to hear you rehearse the loving-kindnesses of the beloved Redeemer to your soul. As for myself, I have much reason to extol the grace of Jehovah. His mercifulness to such a poor sinner exceeds my powers to tell. His faithfulness as our covenant-keeping God is far beyond my highest thoughts. It reacheth unto the clouds, and is established in the very heavens. Each day and every season has its joys and sorrows, its adversities and prosperity, according to the purpose of our God. We may say, with David, "My times are in thy hand." Like Isaac of old, I have been out to meditate in the field at eventide. The field of Jehovah's faithfulness has been a precious field to meditate in. As one at the closing of the day would contemplate all that has transpired, so I feel it has been our beloved Emmanuel that has drawn forth my soul into this field, saying, "Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field."—Song vii. 11. As I look over the field I find it is very large; indeed, no creature can measure it, for Jehovah's faithfulness is unto all generations. It reacheth unto the clouds. As I have roamed abroad in this field the covenant faithfulness of God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, has been very sweet in my meditations. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant."

"Twas made with Jesus for his bride
Before the sinner fell;
'Twas signed and sealed and ratified,
In all things ordered well."

Consider, dear sister, the immutability of this covenant. Its stability rests upon the very character of Jehovah. "He cannot deny himself." The Father swears, and would not repent, saying in this covenant, "Thou [the Son of God] art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedek."—Heb. vi. 17-20. "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath." The Lord says, "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips." He will be ever mindful of his covenant. Then again, our dear Redeemer, the incarnate Word, says, "This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." Our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, was brought again from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant. Then the faithfulness of God the Father is established in the very heavens; for in the fullness of time he sent forth his Son. The faithfulness of the Son of God is established, for he says, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." "A body hast thou prepared me." He "being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." He was the Surety of the covenant, and was faithful unto death. He died for our sins, and rose again for our justification.

"Amazing deeps! O love beyond degree!
The offended dies to set the offender free!"

"By his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." O! the mercies of this covenant are sure, called "the sure mercies of David." The covenant is of force. "This is the new covenant in my blood." This is known in the established faithfulness of the Holy Ghost, called "the communion of the Holy Ghost." He is ever communing with the heirs of this covenant. Jesus says that the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, "will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you."—John xvi. 13-15. We have tasted the forgiveness of sins, we have rejoiced in Christ's salvation, and by precious faith we have realized that we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; all of which declares the faithfulness of the Holy Ghost in the covenant ordered in all things and sure. The communion of the Holy Ghost is the earnest in our hearts.—1 Cor. i. 22; v. 5. We are "sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."—Eph. i. 14. All the heirs in due time have the earnest, and the inheritance is sure to all the seed. Thy faithfulness, O God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, shalt thou establish in the very heavens. "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one."

I have been led to review of late some of the dealings of the Lord with me. I remember how in times of need my soul found a stay in the exceeding great and precious promises. I hoped in the word of the Lord, and based my expectations thereon. But sometimes, instead of the fulfillment of the promises, disaster and utter shipwreck of all my hope seemed ushered in; yet in my mournful, tried heart I still clung to his promises to my soul, as I sighed, "Doth his promise fail forevermore?" But in so many ways, and in such a multitude of providences, I have proved, and as I muse in this field I am constrained to say (while I hope my heart is truly grateful unto God), "He is faithful that promised."

"His promise is yea and amen,
And never was forfeited yet."

All the tribes of Israel, gathered into this field of meditation, will say amen to king Solomon when he exclaimed, "Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant." Then I have meditated upon the faithfulness of our Father in heaven; hallowed be his name. Yes, I hope I am a child of God, and that he has dealt with me as he deals with his children. It is written, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."—Psalm ciii. 13. How gracious he has been to a vile sinner like me. But though he has given me to enjoy many good gifts, and has sent forth the Holy Spirit, who has communed with my soul, telling me that I am a child, and if a child then an heir of God, and a joint heir with Christ, yet I have often been ungrateful; I have been wayward, and have transgressed his commandments. Has the Lord cast me off? Has he disowned me as his child? O no. Great is our heavenly Father's love; great is his faithfulness! What has he done then? Why, he hath chastened me betimes. He has said, "I will correct thee in measure." "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous." So I have found it when it pleased the Lord to lay affliction upon my loins. I have grieved, I have smarted under the strokes of his hand, and I have sometimes rebelled against the rod. My complaints have been bitter; but God our Father did not spare the rod for my crying. He abideth faithful, all his chastenings are for our profit, and are at the time and in measure to work for our good. Yes, I have been made to hear the rod, and our God who appointed it.—Micah vi. 9. "The Lord hath chastened me sore, but he hath not given me over unto death." I have mourned over my ways, and have sighed over my own heart's abominations; and I have been able to feel, and in my heart I have acknowledged, "I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right, and that thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me." Look at the scene presented in Jeremiah xxxi. 18-20: "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus: Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God. Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth. Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: therefore my bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord." All the while he remembered him, that he was his dear son, his pleasant child. Great is our heavenly Father's faithfulness!

In the field of the Lord's faithfulness I have meditated upon the faithfulness of our King. He reigns in righteousness; and of his people it is written, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth." Faithfulness is the girdle of his reins. He is King in Zion. Was there ever any one, the poor and needy, that perished in his sight? O no. "He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy."—Psalm lxxii. "He must reign till all enemies be put under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." His name is "called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God. And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean."—Rev. xix. 11-14. We shall be more than conquerors through our King that loves us.

In this field of the faithfulness of the Lord of hosts I have oft meditated upon the bond of wedlock subsisting between Christ and the church. It is written, "Thy maker is thine husband." We are dead to the law by the body of Christ, and raised up with him; we are married unto him, even to him that is raised from the dead. "He hateth putting away" (Mal. ii. 16); and you remember that the very language of our Beloved in his betrothal of us was, "I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness: and thou shalt know the Lord."—Hosea ii. 19, 20. When first the dear Savior declared these things in my soul how happy was I. Why did he love a poor sinner like me? I could not discover (neither have I yet been able) what there was in me that Jesus, the chiefest among ten thousand, could love. I am nothing but a poor, vile sinner. He drew me, and I followed after him in the wilderness, for there he sought and found and declared his love to my soul; and I loved the Savior of sinners, the altogether lovely one. It was the love of my espousals. But since then how fickle has seemed my love; how shamefully inconstant I have been; unfaithful. But our heavenly Bridegroom, the dear Lamb

(Continued on page 269.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 23, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS.

"He made darkness his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies."—Psalm xviii. 11.

Not only in the inspired record of the Scriptures is the wonderful mystery of divine appointment declared, but in all the dispensations of the providential government of God the same great truth is manifested. In the very beginning of the revelation of the work of creation, darkness was brought into existence before light was developed. While this is doubtless true of the natural creation, it is more important that the subjects of salvation should be clearly taught that this is but the shadowy expression in a figure of the more glorious revelation of that new creation in Christ Jesus, for the manifestation of which all the natural creation was brought into existence. It is indeed an amazing exhibition of omnipotence that even natural darkness was created by the commandment of the self-existing God. Reason cannot understand how the darkness was dependent upon the sovereign word of God for its creation, just the same as was the light for its formation. Yet such is the testimony of God himself, and there can be no room for questioning the correctness of the record. Certainly it was in accordance with his own purpose that the darkness was included in his creation. It is an impeachment of his wisdom to assume that he created anything without a design, and if it does not fulfill the purpose for which he created it, the conclusion is unavoidable that his power is insufficient to secure the execution of his will. Such blasphemous reasonings cannot be accepted by those who have the fear of the Lord wrought in them by the Spirit of truth. The faith of the saints accepts the declaration of our God as unquestionably correct, even though the reason of their natural minds may be utterly unable to comprehend how such things can be. It is exclusively by faith that the things of the Spirit are received by the saints; and they can no more show that revelation to their own reason than to the carnal mind of their fellow-mortals. This is the ground where the unceasing conflict prevails in the experience of every one who is led by the Spirit of God. "It is written, The just shall live by faith." But reason belongs to the natural mind, and consequently it never can receive the conclusive testimony of that faith which is the fruit of the Spirit. By faith the believer knows all things; but by reason he knows nothing, since reason cannot see that which is only spiritually discerned.

"He made darkness his secret place."

As natural darkness is adapted to the concealment of that which men would hide, so the inspired word uses that darkness as typical of the unsearchable mystery in which God has hidden the glorious purpose of his love and grace as bestowed upon the chosen vessels of mercy which he hath afore prepared unto glory. The darkness of that secret place is so intense that it forbids the possibility of its being so much as searched for. The great mystery of salvation is designated as "the unsearchable riches of Christ." No such safe retreat can be imagined by the power of reason. God has reserved this as his own secret place. But it is given to his chosen people to draw near to the presence of their God in their individual experience. In this great privilege they must encounter that darkness which is the secret place of the Most High. Indeed, they are favored to dwell in that secret place, and to abide under the shadow of the Almighty. But it is only when resting in the assurance of faith that they can find any evidence of the favor of God to them. The darkness of this secret place is such that no other power but the faith of the Son of God is able to behold the presence of God in it. But when the Comforter, whom the world cannot receive, neither knoweth him, is pleased to take of the things of Jesus and show it unto them that mourn in darkness, then they are made to rejoice with joy which is unspeakable and full of glory. There is no other way in which this marvelous and heavenly light can ever be revealed except by the personal and individual experience of that inexpressible darkness out of which God commanded the light to shine.

Only in darkness can the presence of God be revealed to his chosen people. In this appointment of divine wisdom the saints have occasion to rejoice, since it is when they are conscious of the power of darkness that they feel the need of light. There is no record of the manifestation of the light of life to one who was already in possession of some degree of ability to see the way of truth. "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined."—Isa. ix. 2. It is not possible that those who are in such thick darkness should be able to see that they are led by the hand of the Lord; for in his presence all is light. So long as they see his face they are in the enjoyment of that light which ever glows in his countenance. But it is his pleasure that his dear disciples shall know the fellowship of his sufferings; therefore he has bestowed upon them the privilege of enduring affliction and walking in darkness. Reason can see no evidence of infinite love in the heritage of darkness which is given to the saints in this world. Even the old patriarch said, as he looked upon the dispensations of providence surrounding him, "Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away; ALL THESE THINGS ARE AGAINST ME." Consider what impenetrable darkness covered poor old Jacob when he uttered this sad and bitter cry of soul-felt grief. Famine drove him to surrender his cherished Benjamin to be taken into a strange land whose ruler seemed destitute of sympathy for his distresses. To retain his darling was to see him die of starvation; to send him with his brethren seemed to be parting with him forever. This painful alternative was aggravated by the remembrance that his brother Joseph had never returned from the errand on which he had sent him forth. Can we conceive of deeper darkness than that which hung over this beloved servant of God in this dreadful hour of trouble? Many times the trials which environ our pathway seem unendurable; they are beyond the power of nature to sustain; but there is nothing in all the experience of the afflicted saints more deeply veiled in darkness than was the way in which the Lord led Jacob in saving him and his family from the famine, and showing him the exaltation of his beloved Joseph. In all this experience the Lord was but working in his own way to bring to pass his mercy to his servant. "He made darkness his secret place." So, dear tried and afflicted child, he brings you by a way that you have not known, and blesses you to be partaker of the fellowship of the suffering of those who walk in darkness and have no light. In the very darkness under which you are now shut up, your faithful God will show you his loving kindness and tender mercy. He spreads his cloud upon the face of his throne, and in all the way by which you are led there is nothing but a trackless wilderness; yet every step is ordered by the Lord. Such is the darkness by which the way of truth is hidden from the sight of creatures, that all the road is directly contrary to that way which seems right to a man. Not only is it beyond the power of the natural mind to trace this way of the just; so utterly dark is the understanding of man that he can find nothing attractive in the description of this heavenly way even when it is portrayed in all its divine perfection. This awful secret of the Lord is confined to them that fear him; and they are exclusively those unto whom he will show his covenant.—Psalm xxv. 14. This secret place of the Most High is the dwelling place of all who have that fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom. It is never known to any but those who hate evil. Such as are led by the Spirit of God alone do bear this seal of the Spirit by which it is sure that they are the sons of God. In their very experience of darkness they have the evidence that they dwell in the secret place of God. When they have learned where their strength is, then the Lord will make their darkness bear witness as infinite light manifesting their unity with their Lord in all their suffering. Then they shall be personally prepared to testify that they know that salvation is of the Lord alone without the aid of men or created angels. This light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not.—John i. 5. Only by the power of divine grace can any sinner ever see that light which shines in the darkness where reason sees nothing but condemnation and death. Here our Lord makes the very darkness the secret place where he reveals himself as the Savior of each ignorant and helpless subject of electing love. No mortal can ever discover the incomprehensible mystery of this secret place of our God.

"His pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies." In this expressive illustration the saints will recognize their personal and experimental knowledge of the impossibility of finding the comforting presence of the Lord by any efforts of their own will. The idea of a pavilion presents the figure of a closely covered tent, whose curtains forbid the sight of him who is concealed within it. Of course, the thickness of the curtains defines the degree of concealment designed to be expressed by this pavilion. "Dark waters and thick clouds of the skies" are literally impenetrable to the rays of natural light. So the expression signifies that intense darkness of which Jeremiah complains when he says, "I am the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath; he hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light."—Lam. iii. 1, 2. None can ever know such darkness as is represented by these dark waters but those who are partakers of the same affliction which the prophet was made to suffer. This is the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ. This secret place of the Most High was never seen by any but those whom God has hidden in that secure pavilion. Language and earthly illustrations are inadequate to the expression of those divine blessings to which the saints are called. The most forcible types fall short of declaring the inconceivable fullness of such divine blessedness. This pavilion is the same abiding place of our God which is represented as his throne, and the mountain of his holiness. There is no locality to which this pavilion is confined. Wherever one of his chosen people is found, whether in the barren wilderness, or the gloomy prison-house, there is the glorious pavilion in which is the abiding place of the God of salvation. He dwells "in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones."—Isa. lvii. 15. So Paul and Silas were made to pray and sing praises at midnight in the inner prison, unmindful of their bleeding stripes and fettered limbs. They were kept in the perfect peace of this sacred pavilion of their God. Yet to natural reason it was not manifest that they were thus secure. Even to the believing saint the way of the Lord is not revealed until it is the good pleasure of God to show him the purpose of his grace in its fulfillment. Often they are terrified by the dark waters and thick clouds of the skies which keep back from their sight the glorious face of his throne. It is only as they are led by the blessed Comforter into all truth, that the "dark waters and thick clouds of the skies" are made bright with the light of that infinite love of God, which gives them assurance to say, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

One very comforting consideration should be specially observed in noticing the dark waters and thick clouds which are so familiar to the strangers and pilgrims who sojourn in this strange land. There is nothing in all the experience of the saints which so clearly and conclusively establishes the genuineness of their hope in the grace of God, nothing which so irresistibly opens the heart of the saints in sweet fellowship, nothing which proves so certainly that the Spirit of Christ dwells in the subject of it, as the fact that there is grief and sorrow resulting from the oppression of that darkness by which the light of the presence of God is shut out from the sight of the mourning one. None know anything of the dark waters and thick clouds but such as are blessed with life and sight by which they can enjoy the light. The dead know not anything. They are not even conscious that they are dead. Dark waters and thick clouds of the skies can give them no trouble. Therefore, it is conclusive evidence that one is a living subject of saving grace when clouds and darkness are felt as a source of trouble to him. The very dark waters and thick clouds attest the presence of that God who dwells in them; and when his presence is revealed the darkness is made light, and the clouds are the chariot of God, bringing deliverance to his afflicted and poor people. Thus in their most discouraging darkness the finger of their God records the clearest assurance that his presence is with them, and that they are still kept by the unsleeping vigilance of his all-seeing eye. There is not a cloud in all your skies, dear child of sorrow, but that your God has set his bright bow of everlasting love in the deepest darkness of that cloud. The darkness of the waters is but the hiding place where inconceivable blessings are concealed from finite research. It is of our God the psalmist sings, "Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known." Then let the sorrows of the mourning ones be turned into joy, for our God is the God of salvation.

"Immortal light and joys unknown Are for the saints in darkness sown."

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

AT least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent of God, says, "I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness: and thou shalt know the Lord." O thou precious Redeemer of poor sinners like me, truly I know that thou abidest faithful in this covenant of eternal wedlock. But, my sister, could you see what my condition has been sometimes you would say that his grace is abounding; while the children of Hagar would say that God had given me a bill of divorce-ment, and had cast me off. Instead of dwelling in the palace with the King, clothed by precious faith in wrought gold, I have been allured from the palace of the King, an evil heart of unbelief has plagued me, and I have, in wandering from the dear Savior, lost sight of the King in his beauty. Then O, how my own vileness has abounded! I have looked at myself, and all was deformity, loathsomeness and ugliness. How could the King love me? How could my name be called Hephzibah? All I could see and feel was that I was a loathsome, vile sinner, filled with misgivings, and tormented with questionings concerning the love of God to such a sinful wretch. I felt, instead of a sweet smell, there was a stink; instead of a girdle, a rent; instead of well-set hair, baldness; instead of a stomacher, a girding of sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty.—Isa. iii. 24. I have said, If I were a subject of the grace of God would I be thus, and so often in this dreadful plight? Unbelief has whispered this, Where are the evidences of the love of the King? How can it be possible that Jehovah can delight in such a miserable wretch? "The city shall be low in a low place."—Isa. xxxii. 19. I have been brought low; I have mourned over my vileness; I have lamented the meanness of my love to the Savior; I have truly been in the valley of Achor, and have longed to enter the palace once more, but could not. I had no strength; my faith was weak. Of the King's daughter it is written that she is "all glorious within: her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needlework."—Psalm xlv. 13, 14. But O! when in such places as I have been describing it would appear that God had stripped me of my glorious apparel, and all I could see was my own shame and nakedness, my utter vileness. The beautiful garments I had no power to put on; but O how my soul yearned to be thus by precious faith arrayed, that my poor, sin stricken soul might be comforted in the renewed evidences from my God of my lot and portion in the justifying blood and righteousness of the dear Lamb of God. Well, my dear sister, I have had proof upon proof that the betrothal is in faithfulness; for the King has sought me in this wilderness, and has spoken comfortably unto my soul. He has given me again beauty for ashes. My soul has sweetly realized that my beauty in his sight is his own comeliness, which he put upon me. He has granted me fine linen, white and clean. He has girded me about with fine linen, covered a poor sinner with silk, and has most comfortingly said in my heart, "Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee." My hope, my joy, my beauty and gloriousness in his eyes is this, that he hath cleansed me with his blood, has erased every spot, healed all my blemishes; yea, he gives me immortal youth by his resurrection life. Christ "loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." He abideth faithful.

(Continued from page 267.)

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne."

Even in death our souls shall prove his loving-kindness and faithfulness. He will be our guide even unto death. When our souls are in departing, "When death is at hand, and this cottage of clay
Is left with a tremulous sigh,
The gracious Redeemer shall light all the way, Saying, Be not afraid; it is I."

Absent from the body, we shall be present with the Lord; as our Redeemer said, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." This cottage of clay, our mortal body, shall wait the appointed time, till our change come. "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."—Job xiv. 15. "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." "And so shall we ever be with the Lord."

Thus, dear sister, I have gleaned in this field, and would still have my eye upon this field, and glean, and meditate upon the faithfulness of the Lord. My own faithlessness at times is appalling, and brings me into many miseries; and only that our gracious God abideth faithful I should perish by the way. O that I could love and praise my God for his wonderful love to a sinner like me! May the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, lead you forth into this field to meditate.

* * * "It will sweeten the hours
When sorrows all 'round you appear;
Will strew all the way to Mount Zion with flowers,
And smooth the rough pathway of care."

Let me hear of your welfare again, and where you have been gleaning in the field. With love to you, and to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ,
I am, I hope, your brother,

FRED. W. KEENE.

NEWARK, N. J., April, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I take pleasure in sending you the inclosed letter of sister Brewster's to me, received a short time ago, which I would like to see published in the SIGNS at your convenience. I have not asked sister Brewster's permission, as the letter is now mine.
From my long and intimate acquaintance with the dear sister, she has always proven herself to be a sincere and devoted Old School Baptist, much loved and respected by other members of the dear Otego Church, all of whom, and many others of sister Brewster's friends of long ago, will be glad to hear from her once more.
She is the daughter of the late Ezra and Lucy Stevens, members of the Old School Baptist Church of Gil-boa, Schoharie Co., N. Y., I believe.

Since I moved from Otego, last November, to this place, I have met with the little church at West 36th St., New York, a few times, and have much enjoyed the sermons I have heard there; also the companionship of the members of the church, who seem to be of one mind and heart, and to realize the great blessings they are given to enjoy in having the gospel preached to them twice each Sunday by able ministers whom the Lord has called and qualified to do that work. I feel very unfit and unworthy of such company, but desire no other.

With much love to the faithful hearted everywhere, I remain, very unworthily yours,

SUSIE C. F. GUERNSEY.

OXFORD, N. Y., March 15, 1893.

DEAR SISTER:—Please excuse me for not answering your good letter before, as I intended to. I sym-patize with you. I know what it is to lose a dear christian mother, and realize that there is no one in this world that can take her place. It is only a few days since I had such a yearning feeling to see her; but I have ever felt forbidden to mourn for her, realizing that my loss is her eternal gain; and I feel so about sister French, your mother. Your mother lived and died in the fellowship of the church, and, I have no doubt, has joined the church triumphant. We shall all miss her so much. How fast the elderly saints are passing to their home. Cousin Mercy Van Valkenburg died in December. She too has gone home, without doubt. She had a good experience. She told me when she experienced the forgiveness of her sins that she was lying in her bed beside her husband. She felt so happy that she wanted to tell him; but the passage "Cast not your pearls before swine," forbade her. If we did not believe in the predestination of all things we should have cause to fear. I was reading to-day Elder Beebe's editorial on Jude 4. It was a comfort to me. I have so often feared I was one who had crept in unawares; but if so it was not with the desire to deceive the dear saints; for if I know my own heart I love them above every earthly friend, for the truth's sake, I hope. It is the one heart, the one bride, the Lamb's wife. In reading the trials and experiences of the church all over this continent, what a sameness there is in all. Who can doubt the reality of their hope? But for myself I often fear.

"I am so vile, so prone to sin,
I fear that I'm not born again."

But I cannot deny that I hate sin, and hope I sometimes hunger and thirst after a righteousness which is not our righteousness, which is as filthy rags. I so often fear it was home influences. I remember, when very young, asking my mother about her heart, and if mine was a heart of stone, and feeling for the first time the great distance between us. I seemed to feel all those years that I was so wicked. I feared the end of the world was coming, which made me quake and tremble. That was the time of Miller's prophecy. He was a cousin of my father, and I probably heard more about it, as my parents did not believe it. But I thought it might be true, and what would become of me? If I ever received a hope it was years after, when a young girl. For years I did not tell it to any one. I knew I felt different, but saw I was so sinful, and so inclined to sin, I could not help mourning about it. I would not allow myself to think I knew about divine things, but earnestly hoped I might. I felt satisfied where the true church was, and felt if I was only a christian how happy I would be in their dear company.
Sometimes when I heard gospel preaching, before I knew it I would be enjoying it; but I would start and feel shocked that I was taking the christian's bread. When I witnessed the communion it seemed like such a solemn, beautiful ordinance, and it seemed as though their faces looked heavenly. We moved west, and back again, before I felt exercised about going to the church. Then I felt such a strong desire to be with them. I remarked to a dear friend in the flesh one day, as I looked out and saw brother David Parsons and wife going to meeting at Broome, that they would have a feast. She said, "If I felt that way, I would go." I thought that what they would hear would be better than the best meal of victuals I could eat. I went soon after that to the church, told a little of my feelings, and was baptized by Elder Fuller. It was over twenty years after I received a hope. I felt many fears that it was not genuine, and that I had grasped the shadow.

I never had such powerful exercises as I have heard others tell of. It seemed a settled conviction of sin, and such a feeling of gloom seemed to settle over me. When the Lord saw fit to remove the cloud, and give me eyes to see my dear Savior on the cross, saying, "Daughter, be of good cheer: thy sins are forgiven thee," what a flood of happiness filled my soul. My heart was filled with thankfulness and love beyond expression. I went out in the open air, and O how beautiful all nature looked. Everything seemed to be praising God. For some days I felt in such a frame of mind, and then I began to think it was imagination.
But I can look back from time to time in all those years to little seasons of enjoyment, when I was enabled to look with an eye of faith beyond, and feel for a short time such a blessed assurance, that I could sing in those delightful moments,

Could I possess the spacious earth,
And the more boundless sea,
For one bless'd hour at thy right hand
I'd give them all away."

But those are only bright spots in my wilderness life. I live the most of my life in the dark, filled with distressing doubts and fears, sometimes so cold, and indifferent, and dead, groaning and loathing myself; yet I have never entirely lost sight of my little hope. When I look around me and see the popular religious world, which is all around me, of every persuasion, I think I feel thankful, and hope that the Lord has taught me, and not man.
I have no fellowship with them whatever. It is the same Pharisaical religion that was here in our Savior's day. How cheering it is to read in the SIGNS of one here and another there who have seen the King in his beauty, and cannot be satisfied with husks. The word says, "one of a city, and two of a family."

How glad I was to read in the SIGNS the account of the Baptist Convention held at Black Rock, Md., in 1832, over sixty years ago, and which I fully agree with in every particular. Elder Durand's exposition of the parable of the prodigal son (Luke xv.), I believe to be the true interpretation of the parable.
Excuse me, dear sister, for this lengthy scroll. My mind seemed to run on here in my room all alone, and I almost seemed to be talking with you. To-day I felt liberty in writing you. You know I have no one to talk with about divine things.

Yours,

LUCINDA BREWSTER.

GITTINGS, Md., July 9, 1893.

ELDER WM. GRAFTON—MY DEAR
BROTHER:—Being at home to-day, with no one to talk to of the things pertaining to the glorious kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, I feel impressed to pen a few thoughts on some words found in the book called Malachi, iii. 16-18.

"Then they that feared the Lord
spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." There is one leading thought in my mind, the difference between the righteous and the wicked. In this book is set forth the wickedness of the children of Israel, and the dealings of the Lord with them. Their offerings were evil before the Lord, inasmuch as they offered the lame, the blind, the sick, and polluted bread, upon the altar of the Lord. While these were the chosen of the Lord, and had received many blessings at his hand, they became weary of serving the Lord, and went after strange gods, and "married the daughter of the strange god," and did not keep the ways of the Lord, but became partial in the law; they were not even aware that they were doing wrong, and wondered that the Lord should deal harshly with them. And when the Lord charged them with robbing him, they wanted to know wherein they had robbed him. God tells them that they had robbed him in tithes and offerings. After cursing them with a curse, he commands them to bring all the tithes into the storehouse (and there is only one), and he will pour them out a great blessing. In all their weariness in serving God, in accordance with his law, there were those that feared the Lord.
"Then they that feared the Lord
spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name." This book of remembrance was in the heart of his people. All this was written, no doubt, for us who are the children of the living God. Although the members of the visible church of Jesus Christ are more united in love and fellowship than any of the religious denominations of the world (in fact none but the children of God love and fellowship each other with the love of God), yet there are those who are willing to offer as a sacrifice upon the altar of God that which they do not prize very highly. They become weary in serving, and want to court the daughter of a strange god, if they do not marry her, and for the time being take great pleasure in it; and they think that once in a while will do to go to meeting with the saints, as they must keep up an association with the daughters of Babylon, or they will be cast out of their society.
This is the truth; for I have been there, and did not see any harm in

it. But O how widely my eyes have been opened to see the wiles and subtlety of Satan. During this spring and summer I have been led back over some years that have passed, and made to see how little I have offered upon the altar of the Lord; only the lame and blind and sick, which was not of much value. The glorious Lord has appeared in his glory, and enabled me, even in nature's sorrow, to see the nature of my offerings, that they were evil and wicked; and I have been made to fear the Lord, and to think on his great and glorious name. Not that I have been caught entirely away from this world; but it seemed that the Lord came down to where I was, and took me up, and showed me all these things, and then opened the windows of heaven and poured out a blessing that I have not room to receive. Wonderful, mysterious, out of the reach of all mortal eyes, ears or thought; and still at this writing it is so to me. Not that I would boast, for that is excluded. I am made the least of all. This is felt, not said; neither have I a doubt just now but what this is the work of the Lord in a poor sinner saved by grace; and now it seems to me I can see the impropriety of courting the favor of the daughter of a strange god, and the great importance of holding fast to our first love. "A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master." So will God spare those that are his, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. "Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." This fearing the Lord, this speaking one to another, and thinking on his name, has been uppermost in my mind ever since the commencement of the spring associations. I shall never forget my visits to the Delaware and Warwick Associations, and also my visit in Philadelphia. It was to me a time of love, such as I had not felt for years. Everything seemed to be praising God for his wonderful goodness to the children of men. The preaching seemed to come directly from the throne of God. The speaker was lost sight of. But I must stop.

Yours in the fear of the Lord,
MILTON DANCE.

OZARK, Ala., July, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I have just returned from a tour through Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana. I left home May 25th, and returned July 15th. I was so feeble that I could hardly be up when I left home; but I improved all the way, the water was so much better, and the air cooler than here. I am now much better than when I wrote you in the spring. I spoke nearly every day, but I grew stronger all the time, my heart was easy, and I got so I could sleep at night. But, thank the Lord, I am at home again, and my dear family is tolerably well, for which my heart is made to feel glad.

I found many loving ones on my tour, who rejoice that salvation is of the Lord, and my poor heart was gladdened to know that the work of grace is still going on in bringing many dear ones to love the Lord; and while many hoary heads are passing away, God is raising up young ones in his precious vineyard. I was glad to see the love and sweet fellowship abounding among the saints in the north. Where there had existed a spirit of alienation heretofore, there now seems good feeling, and God's people have gotten rid of an element that clings to Arminianism, and the brethren seemed to be one. I have many reasons to feel thankful to that Being who is the Sovereign over all worlds for his preserving care. I shall never forget the faithful in Christ Jesus whom I met. Many times I could not refrain from tears when I was so kindly received among God's humble poor. I was glad indeed to reach my sweet little home, and find that the Lord had preserved my loved ones.

I was glad to visit once more the churches where I served, and to see evidences of a gracious work going on with them. I had the privilege of baptizing seven at one precious church I serve on last Sunday, and two more joined, one by experience and one by letter. Eight were baptized at one church in our association on the second Sunday. I have just attended a precious meeting where five joined. We hope we feel thankful to the Lord for manifesting his power in bringing his loved ones home. The poor christian, while in obedience, realizes that "a day in thy courts is better than a thousand." To-day, when I look back a few months, and think of the many chequered scenes of sore affliction through which I have passed, and the many precious saints I have met, and their acts of kindness toward me, my heart glows with love for them, and I can say, "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and knoweth them that trust in him." Even my sore afflictions have caused me to appreciate the loving-kindness of the Lord and the sweet fellowship of his saints more and more.

I sometimes feel like I will not trouble the people of God with another poor scribble; but there is an impression to communicate my feelings to the dear brethren and sisters, and I find a rest in my poor attempts to tell my feelings. May God bless you, my dear brethren. If the Lord spares me, and it be his will to impress me, I shall visit you again as you request.

Yours in gospel bonds,
LEE HANKS.

CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.

ON Saturday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1893, the following Elders met at a meeting-house in Green Pond settlement, Polk Co., Fla., in compliance with a request of certain brethren and sisters who live in that vicinity, for the purpose of constituting them into a regular Primitive Baptist Church, if found sound in faith and in gospel order.

Elders Z. H. Bennett and J. W. Futch preached to a large and attentive congregation; after which the council was organized by choosing Elder Z. H. Bennett Moderator, and Elder M. L. Gilbert Clerk.

The names of Elders who met as council were enrolled as follows:

Z. H. Bennett, M. R. Rountree, T. J. McMullen, J. W. Futch, C. T. Simmons and M. L. Gilbert.

The members who desired to be constituted came forward with letters, which were read, and their names enrolled as follows:

S. S. Carlton, Mary Carlton, M. H. Dukes, C. A. Dukes, Sarah Hancock, E. L. Osteen, Bettie F. Fillman, John Raulerson, Rebecca Raulerson, Williford Smith, John Fillman, Adaline Fillman, Peter Byrd and Azaline Byrd.

John Raulerson was selected by the constituent members as their spokesman.

The Moderator led in questioning, and the answers were satisfactory to the council.

Their Articles of Faith were read.

The Moderator pronounced them sound in faith and in gospel order.

The council then extended to the church the hand of fellowship, and in turn the church extended to each other their hands as a token of their love one for the other.

The Minutes were read and approved, and the council dissolved.

Z. H. BENNETT, Mod.
M. L. GILBERT, Clerk.

IMMEDIATELY after the church was constituted it organized by appointing Elder Z. H. Bennett Moderator, and M. L. Gilbert Clerk.

Read and adopted the Covenant, and Decorum.

Adopted "LITTLE FLOCK" as the name for the church.

Fixed the days of church meeting on the second Sunday and Saturday before in each month, and the October meeting as the time for the yearly meeting.

Went into choice for pastor; whereupon M. L. Gilbert was unanimously chosen.

John Raulerson was chosen Clerk.

M. Homer Dukes was chosen Deacon, and the Elders present were petitioned for a presbytery in his ordination.

The Minutes were approved, and adjourned the conference until 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

ON Sunday morning the church and presbytery came together pursuant to adjournment.

Elder Bennett asked that the choice for Deacon be presented to the presbytery.

John Raulerson was appointed by the church as spokesman, and the Moderator asked him if certain characteristics and qualifications were found in M. H. Dukes, and also of his wife; all of which were answered affirmatively.

Then the presbytery proceeded to lay hands upon M. H. Dukes, with prayer, led by J. W. Futch.

Charge by M. R. Rountree; after which the presbytery and church gave the Deacon the right hand of fellowship.

The conference closed, and the ministers who occupied the stand preached much to the comfort of the saints and to the glory of our God.

Z. H. BENNETT, Mod.
M. L. GILBERT, Clerk.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Old School Baptist Conference will be in session with the North Berwick Church, North Berwick, Maine, September 1st, 2d and 3d, 1893.

Visiting brethren may expect conveyance from the station at North Berwick to the meeting. Providence permitting, Elders F. A. Chick, F. W. Keene, and possibly Wm. J. Purington, will be with us.

THE Greenville Old School Predestinarian Baptist Association will meet on the 1st, 2d and 3d days of September, 1893, with the Refuge Church, at Spencerville, Ohio.

C. G. MILLER, Church Clerk.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Andes Church, Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the first Wednesday and Thursday in September (6th), 1893.

THE fifty-third annual session of the Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists will be held (the Lord willing) with the Sulphur Fork Church, near Campbellsburgh, Henry Co., Ky., commencing on Friday before the first Saturday and Sunday in September (1st), 1893.

Those coming by way of Lexington will change cars at Lagrange and get off at Campbellsburgh station, on the Cincinnati & Louisville Short Line R. R. Those coming by way of Cincinnati and Louisville will get off at Campbellsburgh, where all will be cared for.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

E. F. RANDELL, Church Clerk.

THE Nodaway Association of Primitive Baptists will meet with the First Nodaway Church, four miles west of Savannah, Andrew Co., Mo., on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming from the south will come to Savannah, on the Maple Leaf R. R. Those from the north on the same road will come to Savannah. Those coming from the north on the Bluff R. R. will stop off at Amizona. Conveyance will be at each place. All are invited.

LUKE THORNTON, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Predestinarian Baptists will hold its next annual meeting with the Salem Church, in Marshall Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the south will stop at Rutland, and those from the north will stop at Wenona. Those coming by the Chicago & Alton R. R. will stop at Evans, and those by the Santa Fe R. R. will stop at Toluca.

A cordial invitation is extended to the household of faith to attend with us.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE sixty-second annual session of the Spoon River Association of Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1893, and continue three days.

The meeting will be at the Mt. Zion Church, Fulton Co., Ill., seven miles east of Astoria, on the St. Louis Division of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Our brethren are invited to come and see us.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p.

m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station on Thursday at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Harford Church, in Harford Co., Md., commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth, especially ministering brethren.

Those coming by way of Baltimore will take train at North Avenue station on Friday before, at three o'clock p. m., for Long Green or Forest Hill. Those coming from the north will take train at Delta at 3:50 p. m. the same day for same stations.

NATHAN GRAFTON, Clerk.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.

Salt River—28th.

As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.

Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.

Elk Lick—5th.

Mt. Sterling—6th.

Mt. Carmel—7th.

Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00

Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1893.

NO. 35.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DEAD TO SIN.

"How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?"—Romans vi. 2.

The apostle has been showing how the abounding of sin, and its reign unto death, has caused the display of the greater abounding of grace, and of its triumphant "reign through righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord." Then if sin is so useful as that, some would say, it must be a good thing to continue in it, that grace may abound. The apostle anticipates and rebukes this false and sinful deduction of the carnal mind by asking the pointed question, "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?" The exclamation which the impious and blasphemous suggestion calls forth shows the horror and revulsion of the spiritual mind at the very thought of seeking or allowing an excuse for sin: "God forbid." Then follows the question which answers the former, presenting in a most comprehensive and forcible way the great, broad, rich and glorious truth concerning the way of salvation, with the abiding power and blessedness of its experience in the soul by faith: "How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?"

By nature all the race of Adam are dead in sin.—Rom. v. 12; Eph. ii. 1. Saul was in this state when he was alive without the law.—Rom. vii. 9. Those who are made to know and feel their sin by the entrance of the holy law of God are now dead under the law, which has reigned unto death in their experience. Saul was in this state after the commandment came. Every one in such a case, conscious of his just condemnation, is a subject of grace; for wherever sin abounds, there grace must much more abound. These are said to be dead with Christ.—2 Cor. v. 14; Rom. vi. 6-8. Such a legal relationship exists between them and him that when he died for them they were dead in that legal sense, the sentence of the law having been executed upon them in him. The law therefore can never regard them as involved in that sin any more which he bore for them, because they are dead with him; and "he that is dead is freed from sin." Now when they live again it is not the old life of sin under the law, but the new life (new to them) of Jesus above the law. The baptism into death made an end of sin and of the enmity of the law, which was the strength of sin; and the resurrection showed all sin and guilt forever washed away from all the people of God. In that resurrection a new life is manifested, life and immortality are brought to light; therefore it is spoken of as a birth from the dead, as a regeneration of the church, redeemed from the law, released from its bondage by dying under it, and brought forth from that death by the resurrection of Christ, "to walk in newness of life." These are now manifest as "children of God, being the children of the resurrection," and "over them the second death hath no power."

The apostle in this and in other places dwells upon this fundamental doctrine with a great variety of illustration, as of the utmost importance. He also shows equal care in showing its experience by the Lord's people, and its effect upon their walk and conversation; and his earnest and faithful exhortations are in accordance with the doctrine thus clearly set forth. These explanations and admonitions are the more carefully presented because some who have never died under the law, and therefore are not dead to sin, but are still dead in sin, and alive to it, though having a profession of godliness, whose power they deny, are constantly using this glorious doctrine of gospel liberty as an occasion to the flesh, and as an excuse for a sinful course; and because this seems to be an important form in which the devil tempts the saints, as he tempted their dear Redeemer, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down."

While the carnal professor presumes boldly and recklessly that these Scriptures show him to be free to carry out his sinful desires, and while the carnal mind of those among the Lord's people who are "unlearned and unstable" causes them to "wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction," those who are under the exercise of the Spirit of Christ are walking carefully before the Lord, in the bitterness of their souls, like Hezekiah of old, on account of the depths and blackness of sin they have discovered in their hearts, and treading tenderly in these sacred courts, searching themselves for evidences that they have ever died unto sin, and often questioning whether any evidence exists that they have had that work of grace wrought in them which makes it impossible for them to live any longer therein. To these my mind is more particularly directed at this time, for such bitterness and searchings and questionings have filled much of my time since I received a hope; and I love to be able to show, as has often been shown to me, the clear distinction between those who are thus exercised, and those who are led by the bold and self-confident and presumptuous spirit of the flesh. I would also desire that a word of warning and exhortation might reach and stir up the pure mind of those children of God who are living after the flesh, and going in the ways of death; for I know the bitterness of such experiences, and am not ignorant of Satan's devices, nor of the strength of his temptations. But to every little child of God it can be said with confident assurance, "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

In connection with the explanation of this death to sin in doctrine and experience the apostle says, "Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him: knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." To the Corinthians the same truth is presented in showing that the motive which animated the apostles in their work was the love of Christ: "For the love of Christ constraineth us [in all their ministerial work]; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again."—2 Cor. v. 14. He then explains that the old things of the legal covenant have passed away, and all things are become new in the gospel; and that they who are risen with Christ are new creatures, moved by a new life, and not dependent upon the flesh, not debtors to the flesh, but having it under control by the power of this new life in which we are favored to walk, which is simply the power of Christ, who is our life, and who is in us the hope of glory.

But here would seem to be a stopping place for all whose consciences have been made tender in the fear of the Lord, unless there were further explanation by the inspired apostle; for the poor soul sees within his heart such depravity, such sinfulness, that he cannot see how any word or act or even thought emanating from such a source can possibly be acceptable to a holy God. It looks to him as though he could no more produce or bring forth a spiritual act than a dead man could act naturally; but when the Lord's time comes to interpret this experience (for he is the only Interpreter of his work) we shall find that the Scriptures have declared the very thing that we feel to be true of the Lord's people, and of no one else, that is, that none but quickened souls know and feel it. "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin."—Rom. viii. 10. It is clear that the terms body and flesh, in such cases, include all that is born of the flesh, mind, heart, soul, as well as the literal frame. It is because Christ is in one as his life that he experiences this destitution of anything good; and that though his desires have led toward the things of the kingdom and to the house of God, he has not dared to go forward because he could not see that he had the right, or that such a movement on his part would be anything but vile. But now the way is made clear by the apostle, "But the Spirit is life because of righteousness." The Spirit is the life that raised up these desires in us; and because of the righteousness of Christ in paying the redemption price our bodies are his, and he has the right and power over them, to manifest the life of Jesus through them, though they are themselves "dead because of sin." We are not to be praised for any holy word we may speak, nor any righteous act we may do. The praise must go to the source, and that is Christ, who is our life. But how can the word or act be pure and holy if the body which thinks and speaks and feels and acts in the case is dead because of sin? The apostle makes this very plain in the next sentence by declaring that their mortal bodies are quickened or moved in these things by the Spirit of God which dwells in them; and the peculiar form of the sentence, referring to the resurrection of Jesus and the resurrection of Christ from the dead, suggests all the foundation of this blessed experience of truth and grace. But I will not dwell upon it now, having often spoken on this most interesting theme. I will only remind those who have regarded this as referring to the resurrection of the dead that the body here referred to is not literally dead, and that the quickening spoken of is by the Spirit that dwells in them at the time the quickening takes place.—See Rom. viii. 10, 11.

Now the fact that sin is a trouble, is feared, is a source of misery instead of comfort when indulged in, is proof that one is dead to sin. This death is spoken of as a being crucified; and if one were on a cross every movement would cause pain. So in one who is crucified with Christ, who nevertheless lives, Christ living in him, every motion of sin will cause a feeling of pain and unrest. This to a living soul is not life, but death. The sense of a sinful nature, which every child of God feels more or less at all times, and which is a source of grief, but which will not prevent the sweet peace of God from dwelling within the heart, nor disturb the conscience which has been cleansed by the precious blood of Christ, nor keep the one who takes the yoke of Christ upon him from finding rest to his soul, is very different from a feeling of guilt and condemnation that follows a neglect of duty or an act of disobedience. The terror of the Lord is known and felt by living souls who disobey; the stripes are visited upon them. It is not for any one to say how they will come; but those who have experienced them will know when they do come, and can afterward speak of the terrible pain and desolation of soul.

The deeds of the body are to be mortified; for we are not debtors to the flesh to live after the flesh, and not dependent upon it for true riches or comfort. A Pharisee can mortify the deeds of the body from a fleshly motive, but a child of God is enabled to do it through the Spirit. In that case he lives, though he may have much suffering in the flesh. If one can go on in a way that is sinful and foolish, and find enjoyment in it, and not realize painful checks of conscience that spoil the expected joys of the flesh, and feel powerful desires to be kept back from the vanity, what evidence is there of life? One may say, "It is the old man, and he cannot do anything but sin;" or, "It is predestinated that I should do this, and I cannot help it." But this is not the language of the exercised soul. I would have to reply, "I will not dispute what you say, but will add that it was predestinated that you should thus manifest the falseness of your profession, and undeceive those who had received you as a child of God."

When exhorted by the apostle to a sobriety and gravity in walk and conversation, such as becomes the gospel of Christ, and to an avoidance of levity and trifling, shall we answer that it would be hypocrisy to keep back our thoughts, that it is no worse to speak the jest than to think of it, that the Lord is no better pleased with a long face than a cheerful one, and that any keeping back of pride or levity from our words or acts, and trying to hide it, would only be acting deceitfully and with feigned humility? That would be true of a natural man who is only making a show of a profession, but is not true of a living soul, but is grossly false, and a terribly injurious device of the devil to lead away unstable souls from the path of wisdom, "whose ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

It is not hypocrisy, but the work of the Spirit, when the deeds of the body are mortified, the spirit of pride and vanity repressed, vain and foolish talking and jesting avoided, as not convenient, anger and wrath put off, with all the deceitful lusts of the old man, and the new man with all his righteous and truly holy desires and ways put on. "I keep under my body," said the apostle, "and bring it into subjection, lest having preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." Many have become castaways from the fellowship of the church because they did not take heed to this; and many, while yet enjoyed as ministers, have become castaways so far as any usefulness was concerned because their life did not become their profession, nor adorn the doctrine they preached.

What power would the solemn exhortation of Paul and Peter have upon us if we could think of them as meeting together with some others, and perhaps some of the world, and engaging in vain and foolish conversation and jesting, to say nothing farther; and if they should say, "Of course this is all worldly and sinful, but then our flesh is all evil, and no good thing dwells in it, and we cannot make it love holiness, and it is predestinated that it should be so;" and then go on in evident enjoyment of the vanity and foolishness? Perhaps it is wrong even to suggest such a supposition, though I do it for our plainer sight of the terrible delusion. Does one who is dying feel in a trifling spirit? Does an experience of the bitterness of sin leave such a relish for it? Does it not make us cry, "Turn away my eyes from beholding vanity?" I cannot myself turn my eyes away from beholding vanity, nor keep under my body in any sense; but that makes me the more grave and anxious and persistent in my cries to him who can do this for me and in me. And is he that is in me greater than he that is in the world? Then he can and will do these things, and will work in me that which is well-pleasing in his sight, and enable me to work out that salvation thus wrought in me with fear and trembling.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 13, 1893.

PSALM CIV. 20.

"O LORD, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches."

It seems that in view of God's glorious character, as exhibited in his works of creation and providence, the mind of the psalmist was deeply moved with reverence and admiration; for in the beginning of this psalm he exclaims, "Bless the Lord, O my soul. O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honor and majesty. Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment; who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain; who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters; who maketh the clouds his chariot; who walketh upon the wings of the wind; who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire; who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed forever. Thou coveredst it with the deep as with a garment; the waters stood above the mountains. At thy rebuke they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away. They go up by the mountains; they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou hast founded for them. Thou hast set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth. He sendeth the springs into the valleys, which run among the hills. They give drink to every beast of the field; the wild asses quench their thirst. By them shall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which sing among the branches. He watereth the hills from his chambers; the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy works. He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth; and wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart. The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted; where the birds make their nests; as for the stork, the fir trees are her house. The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats; and the rocks for the conies. He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down. Thou makest darkness, and it is night; wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth. The young lions roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God. The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens. Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until the evening. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all; the earth is full of thy riches. So is this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts. There go the ships; there is that leviathan, whom thou hast made to play therein. These wait all upon thee, that thou mayest give them their meat in due season. That thou givest them they gather; thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good. Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust."

The above language presents a lustrous, grand and sublime view of the creative power, wisdom and providential benignity of the great builder, director and kind preserver of universal nature; all of which, being but different modifications of being and action, form one vast system in the great scale of being and action, each part occupying the place and performing the offices of their different spheres of action, and thereby mutually conduce to the preservation of the whole, subserve the purpose and speak forth the praises of their Creator. If the qualities or instincts of the great diversity of objects in the material universe, of both animate and inanimate matter, are so modified and adapted to their respective spheres of being and action so as by mutual co-operation to praise and glorify God, by running in the channels and performing the offices assigned to each, then, I ask, is it reasonable to suppose that rational man, who sustains a correlative and mutual relation to the whole fabric of universal nature, both as to existence and action, will by his acts introduce confusion and discord? If man's acts will not introduce discord, then man as amenable to his Creator is subject to the same rule and directed by the same power and unerring wisdom in the great scale of being as any part of the system. Again, all the elements and modifications of matter that compose one grand system of universal nature must move in harmony, in order to the preservation of the whole. For instance, we find the wind and clouds water the beasts, the birds, and the almost infinite variety of tribal existence occupying their respective places, and performing their respective offices in the scale of being and action. In the planetary world we find the different bodies that compose it acting in perfect harmony. The sun with his great heat and light, the moon to give light by night, and for signs and seasons. These all, in relation to this earthly ball we inhabit, perform their several offices and thereby minister to the divine will in the preservation of order in their movements. In this sense the material "heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge."—Psa. xix. 1, 2. Then, I ask, in man's relation to this stupendous system, is he or is he not subject to the same laws or principles of order as other component parts of one vast system? If he is, then he is not endued with independence of will or act, and of consequence is directed or controlled as other parts of the system. But if he is not subject to the same rules of order, but is en-dued with independence of will or act, then the system would not be perfect, and so God's purpose in it might fail of accomplishment. Again, if man does not possess such liberty of will, then his acts, whether morally good or evil, are as much under the divine control and direction as the sun, moon, stars, earth, or any other material substance whatever. Many other arguments of a metaphysical character, both affirmative and negative, might be offered here as to God's absolute and universal sovereignty over his creatures; but I will pass on and notice some other portions of the inspired word.

In Nehemiah we read in the prayer of the Levites, "Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all; and the host of heaven worshipeth thee." These are all preserved, and worship or praise God by running in the channels and performing the offices assigned to each in their different spheres of being and action. So when in the purpose of God the time was approaching for the rebuilding of Jerusalem, he stirred up Nehemiah to pray for what he had determined to accomplish. But as links in the chain, and in order to the final event, it was necessary that some of Nehemiah's brethren should go from Jerusalem to Babylon, and that Nehemiah should inquire after the welfare of his brethren, and that they should acquaint him with their miserable state, being in great affliction and reproach. At this news it was necessary that Nehemiah should sit down and weep and mourn, fast and pray, before the God of heaven, recounting in pathetic strains the sins and rebellions of himself and his fathers, and God's mercies to them, and wind up by beseeching the Lord to give him success with the king. It was further necessary that he should be the king's cup-bearer, and that wine should be before him, and that he should give the wine to the king, and that his heart should be sad, and that it should never have been so sad before in the king's presence. It was also necessary that this sadness should attract the attention of the king, and that his wife should be sitting by him. We see this was all the work of the Lord; for Nehemiah said, "The king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me." Then it seems self-evident that Nehemiah was fully assured that the Lord wrought upon and inclined the heart and will of this wicked king to favor and second his design in his enterprise. So this king's heart being in his hand, God turned or inclined it as the rivers of water, to accomplish his purpose in rebuilding the temple; in doing which he did not force the king, nor do violence to his will, but secretly influenced and inclined his will in a pleasant, gentle way, to further his ends, of which the king neither knew anything nor cared for; and so it is of all intelligent creatures. The Lord inclines or moves them to this or that, as he will, in the accomplishment of his purposes. But as we do not feel the hand that holds the chain that binds, nor the force that moves us, we suppose we act or move independently, as being free to act at will, independent of all extraneous circumstances. So we see that none of the captives at Babylon went up to build at Jerusalem, except those the Lord raised to go up; and all those he did not raise to go up remained where they were; yet as he did not call them out by an audible voice, or use such force as they could witness, they doubtless thought they went up of their own accord, entirely free from divine control. But this all occurred according to, and was but unfolding the eternal counsels of heaven. For we are informed that, as is supposed, over a century before Cyrus was born, the Lord said to Jerusalem, "Thou shalt be inhabited; and to the cities of Judah, Ye shall be built; and I will raise up the decayed places thereof." "Saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure." "Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron; and I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I, the Lord, which call thee by name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me."—Isa. xlviii. 26-28; xlv. 1-4. We see the Lord made known his counsel as to rebuilding the temple a considerable length of time before its accomplishment, by announcing that Jerusalem should be inhabited, and calling Cyrus, his shepherd, to execute his counsel, in order to which he holds his right hand to subdue nations; looses the loins of kings to open the two-leaved gates; goes before and makes the crooked places straight; breaks in pieces the gates of brass, and cuts in sunder the bars of iron. So it seems clear that the Lord was the sole author of the whole, and connected every link in the chain of events from beginning to end; and though Cyrus was executing the behests of his Sovereign, yet he was governed by an ambitious and sordid desire after worldly honors and the spoils of conquest; and his vanity, like other so-called great men, led him to believe that it was his own skill or prowess in military affairs that crowned him with almost unprecedented success; for he neither knew nor cared for God's purposes in the matter; but, like other great men of the world, he was seeking the gratification of his ambition after worldly honors and emoluments; yet he undesignedly accomplished the will of God. And it was as fully embraced in the purpose of God that Israel should go into captivity, as that they should be delivered from captivity; and so the Lord was the author of every link in the whole chain of events, through agencies of his own choice, from the time he called out Abraham to be the head of the Israelitish nation, until their re-establishment at Jerusalem. Even so was the final overthrow of their nationality, and dispersion among the nations of the earth, a determined event. And although Cyrus, in executing the behests of his Sovereign, entailed misery in its various forms, and carnage, destruction, desolation and death followed in the train of his wonderful and marvelous exploits among the nations of the earth, as he was styled monarch of the world, yet the Lord girded and strengthened him, removed all obstacles, opened the two-leaved gates before him, loosed the loins, or weakened or unnerved the kings or rulers of the nations, so as to render his conquests certain. And as in God's government over his creatures there are mutual relations and dependencies of event upon event, in effecting his purposes, so if God did interpose in this instance in executing his will, so he does in every other instance, or there would be a chasm and consequent discord in human affairs. But we should know that without this harmony the world would not stand an instant. In unison with this view, Pope says, "All nature is but art unknown to thee; All chance, direction thou canst not see; All discord, harmony not understood; All partial evil, universal good; And spite of pride, in erring reason's spite, One truth is clear, whatever is, is right." That is, nature's laws, or divine providence, are as harmonious in their operations as those of art; and what we call chance is perfect order, as being directed by God; and what we suppose is discord, is perfect harmony with God; and what we regard as evil, as embracing the wicked acts of men, as they conduce to the good and preservation of the whole, is called universal good. Therefore, in that sense, whatever is, embracing even the wicked acts of men, as conducing to the final event, is right. But some suppose that this view involves the horrid idea of God being the author of sin, and impeaches the holiness of his character. But "who art thou that repliest against God?" or who can dive into the secret and sovereign counsels of eternity, and formulate a plan of government for his Sovereign, to which he must conform in order to be just? So Watts, the poet, has these beautiful lines,

"Lord, we adore thy vast designs,
The obscure abyss of providence;
Too deep to sound with mortal lines,
Too dark to view with feeble sense."

Then how vain, futile, and even blasphemous, for us, poor, weak and sinful creatures of a day, to challenge God's sovereign right to do as he pleases with his own, or according to his will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, all of whom are reputed as nothing.

I intended quoting several of the numerous passages of Scripture which teach the absolute, universal and everlasting sovereignty and supreme dominion of God over all his creatures; but this is more lengthy now than I designed, and yet is a very imperfect sketch of the subject of which it treats, or even of what was on my mind. The glorious character of our Sovereign is seen in all his works of creation, providence and salvation, and is in perfect accord with the whole tenor of Scripture teaching.

This has been written a little at a time, on account of my eyes. I send this as it is for you to dispose of as you please.

Yours,

JAMES WAGNER.

BLANCO, Texas, July 4, 1893.

LA MONTE, MO.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—This gloomy winter morning, all nature seeming dormant, the sun, obscured from mortal vision by the thick, misty clouds that intervene between it and the cold, ice-covered earth, very fitly represents the cold, gloomy, barren state of this dull mortality as we journey through this wilderness of sin and sorrow. I feel this morning like a ship on a strange sea, without rudder or sail, carried about by every breeze, without a pilot, running I know not where. So in the language of Nathaniel I ask, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? By the mercies of God there may; for I realize this morning my weakness, and that my sufficiency and my strength is all of God. Surely, then, if I am permitted to say anything that might be comforting to God's humble poor in this world of sin and sorrow, may the God of all grace be praised. "For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh), dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not." But by and through the mercies of God I am what I am, to whom be glory for ever and ever. By the mercies of our God I am made to hope that through the precious blood of his Son Jesus I am made an heir of God, and a joint heir with Jesus Christ. We hope therefore, by faith, which is the gift of God, that we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. So then, though we have tribulation, let us go on rejoicing, "knowing that trib-

(Continued on page 277.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 30, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

A GREAT WHITE THRONE.

"AND I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them."—Rev. xx. 11.

Without any desire to controvert the views of those who have in the past commented upon this expression of inspired truth, it is our purpose to present some thoughts which have been comforting to us in our personal experience, in which the application of this and some similar portions of the word of truth are considered in their relation to the present need of those strangers and pilgrims for whose benefit it is commonly understood that all scriptural revelation is given. Doubtlessly there is ample assurance contained in this record for the support of the hope of eternal blessedness with their Lord in glory, by which the saints are sustained under the heavy burdens of their earthly pilgrimage; but there is much of that which is generally regarded in the world as referring to the glorified state of the church, in which God has been pleased to instruct his people concerning their experience in this wilderness of tribulation. It is in this present evil world that the consolation of the gospel is needed by the afflicted and poor people, who are only wandering sojourners here, as all their fathers were. When they shall have been delivered from the bondage of mortality, they will have no occasion to be assured of their fellowship with the glory of their exalted Savior. Being perfectly conformed to the image of the victorious Captain of their salvation, they will then see as they are seen, and know as they are known; therefore, there can be no darkness or doubt to be dispelled by the testimony of revelation in that world. The first announcement in this book of the Revelation of Jesus Christ declares it to be the exhibition unto his servants of "things which must shortly come to pass." This seems to confine its fulfillment to this temporal state of the church, since in eternity there can be no time, either long or short, whether past or future. All is an inconceivable and immutable present of infinite glory and bliss beyond what eye hath seen, or ear hath heard, or any thought which hath entered the heart of man.—1 Cor. ii. 9. Such perfection cannot be subject to changing times.

Although the wonders of this revelation of Jesus Christ are veiled in such sublime imagery as blinds the sight of reason, it is as easy for the natural mind to receive the things here written as to grasp by the blind power of finite intelligence any other portion of the inspired Scriptures. Not even that portion of the record which states the history of literal events can be understood as the testimony of Jesus except it be applied by the Spirit of truth in the personal experience of each saint who is taught of God. Thus are the things of God effectually hidden from the investigation of the wise and prudent, while they are revealed to helpless and ignorant babes. Such instruction is well adapted to the necessity of those who have no power to study for the attainment of that knowledge of which they feel their need. While in acquiring the wisdom of this world there is very manifest advantage in favor of the intelligent and studious, it is not so in the kingdom of divine grace. Strange as it appears in the estimation of the natural mind, the most completely educated Saul of Tarsus could no more easily receive this living and life-giving truth of God than could the ignorant fishermen of Galilee, or the unborn John the Baptist. Nor is this a deplorable fact by which the grace of God is restrained. "In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."—Luke x. 21. It is important to notice that this is not presented as a mere permission on the part of the Father; it is according to his own determinate counsel and purpose of grace. This was the ground of the thanksgiving of Jesus.

"And I saw a great white throne." The specific description of this throne is important as signifying the immaculate purity of every decree which is declared by the authority thus revealed in vision to this enraptured servant of our Lord. Not only is it shown to be an emblem of unlimited power and authority, as a great throne, but its being white is indicative of that absolute perfection of righteousness which characterizes every divine appointment. This is one point by which every doctrinal sentiment must be tested. Nothing can be truth unless it recognizes both these perfections in the sovereignty of the God of salvation. Certainly that is not a great throne whose dominion is in need of the assistance of mortals in order that its authority may be recognized by finite creatures. Nor is it consistent with the confession of its infinite purity to regard the decrees which emanate from the throne as subject to the approval of a higher standard erected by the imagination of mortals. Created beings are indeed under obligation to observe such laws as are established by the authority of their Creator; but their accountability is the limit of their sovereignty. No such limit can be applied to that sovereignty of God which is itself the supreme standard of holiness. His throne is unlimited in righteousness as it is in omnipotence. It is well to observe that this sight of the throne is not a common vision to which natural intelligence may attain. Nothing less than the same revelation by which it was shown to John can ever make manifest this wonderful view of the holiness of God. Whenever this glorious truth is seen by any sinner it is certain that it must be by the direct will of God, by whose Spirit alone it can be revealed. Under the darkness of nature it is impossible that any sinner should see the throne of God as being so great as to be above the measurement of that law which God himself has given for the manifestation of sin to his creatures. Hence it is not uncommon for opposers of this truth to say that if God has not done what they commend, he is not just. There is no possibility that argument or even the positive demonstration of unequivocal scriptural testimony should convince those who are dead, so that they may know the truth; but for those subjects of divine grace who are entangled by the deceitfulness of their carnal heart, there may be profit in considering the record which God has given concerning the greatness and spotless perfection of this eternal throne. There is a vast difference between the confession that God is just, as measured by the standard of human judgment, and the recognition of the truth of inspired testimony, that "Our God is in the heavens; he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased."—Psalm cxv. 3. So great is the throne of his majesty that his will is the infinite standard of his own spotless righteousness. The perfect glory of his throne is not the result of his will being conformed to any rule by which the works of creatures are measured. So Elihu says to Job, "I will answer thee, that God is greater than man; why dost thou strive against him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters."—Job xxxiii. 12, 13. Because reason cannot grasp this glorious perfection of divine holiness, even the saints are often bewildered by their own failure to understand the mystery of the providential government of God. It certainly cannot be denied that all the attributes of deity are gloriously magnified in causing the wrath of man to praise him, and in restraining the remainder of wrath.—Psalm lxxvi. 10. While man is not at liberty to kill his fellow-man, God is just in remanding all the sinful race to the death which he appointed as the penalty of transgressing the law which was given to Adam in the garden of Eden. There is no unrighteousness with God in sweeping to destruction the whole of that guilty world on whom he poured the flood; nor is he chargeable with unjust discrimination in saving Noah and his few companions in the ark. Yet there can be no reason assigned for the favor bestowed upon Noah but that which Jesus assigned as sufficient. "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." While the inconceivable majesty of God in his sovereignty is well expressed by the simple figure of a great throne, the spotless justice and unswerving judgment which are the habitation of that throne, are well symbolized by the designation of pure white as the dazzlingly glorious appearance of that awful judgment-seat, from whence the voice of God declares the destiny of all worlds. However it may be impossible for them to see how salvation can come to them from such an inflexibly holy throne, those who are led by the Spirit of God are made to adore that very justice by which they feel themselves condemned.

"And him that sat on it." It is plainly asserted by our Lord that "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him." It cannot be, therefore, that this one who sat on the throne is any other but the Son in whom dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily.—Col. ii. 9. This is the high and holy place where he has chosen to dwell forever, giving no reason for that choice but that he has desired it for a habitation. Only by faith can this dwelling of the Son in his chosen temple be seen by those to whom he is revealed by his holy Spirit. When thus enabled to see the King in his beauty they always see him in his identity with his body, the church, of which he is the Head. Neither the throne nor its divinely exalted occupant was ever revealed to any except those to whom it is granted to know the things which are freely given us of God. In seeing the throne and him that sat on it, the favored recipient of that vision has the assurance that he is included in the effectual prayer of Jesus, by which he is given to sit with him in that throne of his glory. Then there is deep and vital importance in the subject under consideration for every one who is interested in it. Let it not be forgotten that by this throne in our text is represented in him that sat on it, absolute power to fulfill all that he has purposed to do. Nothing short of this could constitute his seat a throne. Evidently this does not signify that popular idol, whose admirers say that he has done all that he can for the salvation of sinners, and is not able to secure his design unless men will bring their power and resources to his assistance. It would be mere mockery to represent such a helpless one as sitting on a throne. Our victorious Redeemer has finished the work which he came to do. He has saved that which was lost. He has cleansed his people from all iniquity, washing them in the fountain of his own precious blood. His victory is complete in their salvation not merely from the punishment due to their transgressions, but also making them holy and without blame before God in love. Truly this is well portrayed in the symbol of one who sat on a "great white throne." He said to his apostles, after his resurrection, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." On this authority he sent them forth to teach all nations. He still sits on the throne with no less power than that which he then claimed. The fact that he is described as sitting on his throne implies that he has done all his purposed work. So Jesus is presented as the author and finisher of our faith; "who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."—Heb. xii. 2. There is strong consolation for the saints in the truth that our Jesus has finished his work, and is set down on his throne.

"From whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them." This cannot be understood as indicating the removing of the heaven of eternal glory. It must signify the taking away of the legal heaven and earth, of which it is written, "He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second."—Heb. x. 9. Before our Lord could be revealed sitting in the throne of his glory, he must be manifested as a servant under the condemnation of the law, bearing the sins of all his members in his own body on the tree. That legal earth and heaven could not flee away until all was fulfilled in the perfect satisfaction of every demand of divine justice. When Jesus had effectually put away sin by the sacrifice of himself the old covenant with all its requirements did flee away, and there never can come any demand of justice against one of those for whom Jesus died; because his resurrection is the receipt in full from the throne of God, certifying that there is no further demand against any member of the body of which Christ Jesus is the head and life.

There is found in the gospel heaven no place for any part of that dreadful earth and heaven whose clouds and darkness inspired terror in all who heard them, causing even Moses to acknowledge that he did exceedingly fear and quake. Whenever any of the saints attempt to render service under that legal system they are fallen from grace.—See Gal. v. 4. Instead of rejoicing in that liberty of the sons of God into which they are called by grace, they are seeking the slavish justification of an obedient servant. Notice that it is the one who is justified by the law who is fallen from grace. The popular doctrine of our day distorts the text as if it were those who failed to be justified by the law who were fallen from grace. As this is the only place in the Bible where this much abused expression is found, it is plain that it can make no room for legal bondage in the presence of the throne of our Redeemer. "Therefore if any man be in Christ a new creature, old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—2 Cor. v. 17. The supplied words are omitted as changing the meaning of what the apostle wrote by inspiration. The throne of our Lord Jesus is not a mere branch of Judaism; it is not dependent upon Moses. Jesus Christ is himself the One who sat on that great white throne; from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away. In his new and everlasting kingdom there is no place found for those elements of terror and death. Where he is on the throne, there is no more death. He is emphatically and exclusively the Prince of Peace, the Lord of Life, and the God of salvation. Unto the Son God says, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom."—Heb. i. 8.

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 275.)

ulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly." "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." We find that Paul charged Timothy before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, "Preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all longsuffering and doctrine." He also admonished him, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Our Savior said, "I have overcome the world." Then how is it possible for his dear bride to ever again be brought under the dominion of sin, or any portion of her be lost? For he has conquered her last enemy, which is death and the grave. Then surely all other enemies are already under him. What a glorious, faithful Husband! Surely such love was never known, such faithfulness, such long-forbearance, such tender compassion, such unreserved sacrifice, such magnificent wisdom, such gigantic power, and last, but not least, the grandest of all victories. So grand and glorious was the victory that there was darkness over all the earth. "And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; and the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." What a wonderful event! "And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory." Then, Timothy, preach the Word, which is Christ; for he is the Word as well as the Truth (John xiv. 6); for "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Then ye cannot serve God and mammon; neither can ye serve two masters. If God be God, serve him to the exclusion of all things else. O how it makes our poor heart bleed to see some, whom we have reason to believe "have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come," seem to be led off by things of this world, seeking popularity all the time with the world, and the fashions and follies of this world, desiring more to please man than God, thereby denying the doctrine of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It is worth more to me to be right, and by the mercies of God to serve the true and living God, than to be held in high esteem by the world, and serve mammon and the institutions of men. Then, if it be God's will, let me not be ashamed of him or of his humble servants in this poor world of ours, even though all the world forsake me or persecute me; for if I have Christ in me the hope of glory, I have all the wealth I crave. What of a few persecutions in this world, which legacy we are promised? It will soon be over, then what of the world's vanities, and what becomes of our persecutions, if so be we are the children of the true and living God?

Dear brother or sister, let us not be ashamed of the glorious doctrine of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, but be proud of it; and if the world rejects and forsakes and persecutes us, we have the greater assurance; for the same was done to our glorious Head. Then let me "exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints," and thereby "strengthen the feeble knees."

How solemn the admonition, "Preach the word;" not only to Timothy, but to all the true servants of God. No wonder the true servant of his Master should shrink from such a glorious and responsible calling. "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel;" and woe is unto me if I do preach, and then bring reproach upon the glorious cause of my Master. What a difference between the called and true shepherd, and the wolf in sheep's clothing. One is made willing of his Master, and goes to his work with fear and trembling; and the other, without the fear of God before his eyes, volunteers, eagerly seeking whom he may devour.

Then, "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season." O what a glorious and responsible calling! Tell the poor tempest-tossed child of God what the dear Savior has done for poor, undone sinners. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." I am so glad it is not for my good works, for I see sin mixed with all I do. I am so poor, so vile, not even able to control my thoughts; ten thousand talents in debt, and not a farthing to pay. But "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished," instead of telling the poor, downcast sinner, who feels a deep sense of his vileness, yea, that even thinks he has sinned away his day of grace, that he must grow more burdened, that he must grow more sorrowful, and that he must not resist the Spirit that is wooing and beseeching him, but grow more earnest, and get more anxious, lest he drive away the Holy Spirit. Miserable, miserable comfort is that.

The poor writer has experienced this poor kind of comfort. But, on the contrary, go to them with the blessed message that they have already received at the hands of their adorable Lord double for all their sins; that their deep consciousness of sin is certain evidence of their acceptance with their dear Lord. Then if you feel a great weight bearing your poor heart down, and almost crushing it, and your sins rising before you like mountains, remember that you have received at your blessed Lord's hand double for all your sins. What comfort! Who can realize it? The poor, cast down soul that feels his awful condition in the sight of his God can see a hope for all but poor self; but surely he feels that his is a hopeless case. How can the dear, just and adorable God justify such a rebel as I, and still be just? Dear one, think what a blessed message; for all those fearful sins of yours, you have received double at your dear Lord's hand. If you mourn, you shall be comforted. If you are poor, you shall be made rich. If you are cast down, you shall be lifted up. If you hunger and thirst after righteousness, you shall be filled. If you are poor in spirit, yours is the kingdom of heaven. If you are persecuted for righteousness' sake, blessed are you. Then what a blessed message for the true servant to carry to the poor, downcast, disconsolate soul.

"Preach the Word." Tell to the hearing ear that Adam transgressed the just and holy law of him who said, "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die;" and he fell under the just penalty of the violated law, whose demand must be met; that the Word was with God, that the Word came down from heaven, and was made flesh, and dwelt among men; that the Word, to whose coming all the holy prophets pointed, bore the sins of his people, and the penalty of the law was visited upon himself. The Word said, Let mercy be extended; for this is my beloved bride, and the punishment is greater than she can bear. Poor, forlorn, deplorable is her condition, ten thousand talents in debt, without a farthing to pay; but I, the Word, am rich and abundantly able, and the entire debt shall be met. O blessed message! "she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." Instead of having to work to bring the dear Lord under obligations, the debt is already paid. "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." Then see him coming, "as a cart is pressed that is full of sheaves," bearing our sins in his own dear body; and all the days of old he carried them. He left the courts of heavenly bliss, and took this awful burden of sin in his own body, to save his dear bride. He comes down into this poor world of ours, to suffer, "that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." He suffered, the just for the unjust. He was rejected of men, suffered in every avenue that we poor mortals have to suffer, endured all the shame, all the poverty, all the suffering, and forever put away our sins. Hear him cry, "I thirst!" and see them dip the sponge in vinegar and gall, and put it to those dear lips. Hear him cry out, "It is finished!" Salvation is complete. He fully finished the work the Father sent him to do. He fully overcame sin, satisfied the demands of the law, paid the last farthing against his beloved bride, yea, drank the awful consequences of sin to the last dreg, even down to the vinegar and gall. Hear him pray, "Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son may also glorify thee: as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." What a glorious message for Timothy to take, to feed the humble poor of the true and living God. Our dear Savior had conquered death and the grave. Light had forever overcome darkness. The king's seal had been rent asunder. The Lord himself had come, bearing our sins in his own body on the tree, and gone into the lonesome tomb, and become the first fruits of them that slept. His was the first resurrection that broke death's seal, and turned loose the sleeping saints that had gone on before. Glory be to God on high, he has forever broken death's seal, so that our resurrection is also sure. Then what more could we ask? what better message could Timothy ask? Could the dear humble poor, then or now, ask anything better? It is bread and meat to the dear saint; it is all his poor soul requireth; it is enough. But O that my poor soul could ever feel worthy of such a grand message, of such a true Friend, of such a glorious Head. But O! this poor soul so often brings reproach on its glorious Head. This member, if one at all, of his dear bride, seems so often to be a disgrace to the body as well as to the Head. How often I feel like asking my dear brethren to erase my name from the church-book. But how lonely I would then feel; for where could I go, or what could I do? I know of no genuine or lasting comfort aside from what I get with these precious people of God. I know they are poor and afflicted, but it is sweet to be with them, and go where they go, and suffer all the vile accusations, all the persecution, all the contempt, all the scoffs and sneers of the world. "I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord." Bless his holy name, they trust in him alone.

In much tribulation, your unworthy brother in faith,

J. A. TEAGUE.

BLACK LICK, Ohio, May 17, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Once more my trembling hand grasps my pen to try to write a few lines, although I feel my ignorance and my inability to write anything of much importance; but I write to ease my mind. This is the last I ever expect to write, for my days are fast drawing to a close. I lack a few weeks of being eighty-four years old. I am failing fast. My eyesight is failing, but may it please God to give me sight to read my Bible and my paper, for how can I think of giving them up? If it be God's will I would rather die; but then I must say, Thy will be done, not mine. I sometimes think I am ready and willing to go from this world of sin and sorrow, where sin besets on every hand. I travel through darkness as well as light. I sometimes feel that I am one of the least of God's people, if one at all. I sometimes think, Is there anyone like me? Can it be that I am deceived? At times all seems dark and drear and wild, and I mourn an absent God, and wonder when light will come again. With sighing I say,

"Return, O heavenly Dove, return,
Sweet messenger of rest."

Then again I break out singing,

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word."

I then can say,

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ears;
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fears."

Yes, of all names the name of Jesus is the sweetest. It cheers our drooping mind. He entered these low grounds of sorrow, to suffer and bleed, to save his people from their sins. They were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. How often the question arises in my mind, Am I one of that number? Well, God knows all things. He knows his people, and not one of them can be lost; for if Jesus died to save them their salvation is sure as the throne on which he sits. Not one drop of that precious blood was shed in vain. Jesus said that he came to save that which was lost. His sheep hear his voice and follow him; but a stranger will they flee from, for they know not the voice of strangers. May we ever be enabled by the help of God to follow the good Shepherd of the flock, the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. He bore our sins in his own body on the tree. He said, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost. He finished the work he came to do. It is a complete salvation; no half-way work. He doeth all things well. He created all things, and for his pleasure they are and were created. All glory to his holy name.

May the Lord spare the dear editors of our paper many years, who contend so earnestly for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

I send this to you to do with as you see fit. It looks weak to me.

As ever, yours in hope,

LUCINDA ROCHELLE.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscriptions to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please record the death of sister Dilla Ann Virts, who was born March 1st, 1853, and died July 4, 1893.

ALSO,

The death of Sister Lucinda J. Burch, who was born July 8th, 1823, and died August 12th, 1893.

Sister Burch was the mother of sister Virts. They lived together in the town of Leesburg. Not another member of the family is left. Both were baptized by the writer in the fellowship of the New Valley Church. They were beautiful examples of christian love and christian fortitude, calm, gentle and patient, with feelings of pity. They respected the views of everyone, but with loving devotion adhered without changeableness to the doctrine of salvation through the cross of Christ. We miss them, and we who knew them as sisters of the Valley Church will ever mourn their loss to the church; but we do not mourn as those who have no hope of the church triumphant. We shall meet again. To our beloved sister Laura Titus, and to each member of the family, we extend our heart sympathy.

Your brother, I hope,

E. V. WHITE.

LEESBURG, Va., Aug. 17, 1893.

DIED—At the home of her son, Gabriel Wells, in the city of Middletown, N. Y., on Sunday night, Aug. 20th, 1893, Mrs. Mary Wells, age 94 years lacking five days.

Sister Wells was born Aug. 25th, 1799, near Slate Hill, Orange Co., N. Y., and was the oldest daughter of Robert Hunter. At the age of seventeen years she was married to Abner S. Wells, who died August 5th, 1865. After his death sister Wells lived with her children in this city and vicinity. She was baptized at the age of fifteen years, by Elder Ball, in the fellowship of the Brookfield Church, where she has ever since had her membership, a period of nearly eighty years. She was the mother of thirteen children, seven of whom survive her.

The funeral services were held at the house where she died, on Tuesday, 22d, when Elder Benton Jenkins delivered a discourse from Psalm cxxv. 1, the deceased having requested that said Scripture be used as a text on the occasion. Her mortal remains were laid by the side of those of her husband in the "Holbert Cemetery" near Slate Hill, but a short distance from the place where nearly eighty years ago she was buried in baptism.

"Why do we mourn departing friends,
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms."

DIED—Near Fair Oaks, Orange Co., N. Y., on Sunday, April 30th, 1893, Mrs. Jane E. Nichols, wife of Mr. Hiram Nichols, aged 63 years and 10 days.

She had suffered for a long time with stomach trouble. On the day of her death she prepared as usual the noon meal, and partook of the same with her family, and at about five o'clock p. m. suddenly expired.

Sister Nichols was born in the town of North East, Dutchess Co., N. Y., April 20th, 1830. She was a daughter of Dr. John and Henrietta Egeleston. On Nov. 16th, 1853, she was united in marriage with brother Nichols; and on Sunday, Nov. 24th, 1867, they both were baptized by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, in the fellowship of the Middletown & Wallkill Old School Baptist Church, where she remained a highly esteemed and beloved member until the time of her departure from the militant state.

She is survived by her bereaved husband, our dear brother, with three daughters, who mourn their loss of a dear wife and mother. She is also survived by one brother and five sisters.

The funeral services were held at her late home, and were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, using as a text the words, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."—Psalm cxxvi. 5. The interment was in the cemetery of the New Vernon Church.

"There is a home of sweet repose,
Where storms assail no more;
The stream of endless pleasure flows
On that celestial shore.

"There purity with love appears,
And bliss without alloy;
There they that oft had sown in tears
Shall reap again in joy."

DIED—At his late residence on Indian Creek, in Union Co., Oregon, August 8th, 1893, Deacon John Huffman, aged 80 years, 5 months and 25 days.

Brother Huffman was born in Graceir Co., Va., Feb. 13th, 1813. On Oct. 20th, 1839, he was united in marriage with Priscilla Harris. They emigrated to Sullivan Co., Mo., in the year 1842, and settled on Yellow Creek, and a few years later settled on Locust Creek, where he united with the Primitive Baptist Church in February, 1852, and was baptized by Elder Caleb Colyer. Himself and family emigrated to Oregon in 1865. They made the long trip across the plains with ox-teams. Soon after he arrived here he selected him a piece of land, and made him a house, where he lived until called away by death.

Brother Huffman and wife, and a few others of the Primitive Baptist faith, were here several years without church privileges, and took much comfort in reading the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which paper they have been readers of for a great many years. In May, 1878, a church was constituted in Grand Ronde Valley, and soon afterward brother Huffman was chosen to be the Deacon. I have known him fifteen years, and I never heard an idle or foolish word fall from his lips. His communication was truly yea, yea. If I ever knew a man that could be called an Israelite in whom there was no guile, it was brother Huffman; and brethren who have known him forty years say that he was always the same. He was a living epistle of godliness, known and read of all. I feel sure that all who knew this dear old brother will say that what I have said of him is not flattery. Notwithstanding all this, brother Huffman well knew the weakness of the flesh, and had no confidence in it. How sadly will the little church miss him; for while able he was always present at the meetings, and took great delight in singing the songs of Zion.

Many friends assembled at his burial to pay their last respects to one whom all loved, and the unworthy writer spoke on the occasion from the words of Paul, "But thanks be unto God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ;" after which the mortal remains were laid in the grave to await the resurrection morn, when Jesus shall come with the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God, and shall awaken his sleeping saints.

Brother Huffman left his aged companion, who has shared the cares and trials of this life with him for more than half a century; also three sons and four daughters. May the Lord in mercy sustain them, be a husband and father to them, and reconcile them to his will.

G. E. MAYFIELD.

OUR dear father died at his home in Normal, McLean Co., Ill., May 2d, 1893. He was born June 29th, 1812, near Gratiot, Licking Co., Ohio. He was the oldest son of Edward and Elizabeth Hursey. He was joined in marriage Oct. 29th, 1835, to Miss Mary Melick, daughter of Wm. and Martha Melick. He leaves an aged wife, four daughters and two sons to mourn his departure.

Last winter a year ago father had a spell of "La Grippe," from which I do not think he ever entirely recovered. He never made a public profession of religion, but was a strong and firm believer in predestination and election by grace, and always enjoyed going to Baptist meeting whenever it was so that he could; but living so far from any Baptist Church it was seldom that he heard preaching, except what he read in the SIGNS, which he enjoyed very much. He felt resigned and ready to go, for he said to me one day, "O how I long to leave this world." I feel the sweet assurance and faith that he is joined in spirit with the regenerated family in the paradise of God. He has finished his work, ended his suffering, and gone to rest. May God in his great mercy enable our dear aged mother to bear up in her affliction, and sustain her by his grace. God will soon call her home, to praise Jesus forever and ever. O that God would comfort the afflicted in their bereavement, and finally bring all of them to the knowledge of the truth, is the prayer of your unworthy sister, if one at all.

ALSO,

Mary Ellen Hursey, daughter of Adam S. and Mary Hursey, died at her home in Normal, McLean Co., Ill., April 1st, 1888. She was born May 7th, 1841. She had been a great sufferer from childhood from curvature of the spine, caused by a fall when about seven years old. Her death was caused from tumor and dropsy of the bowels. She was confined to her room about six months. For several months before her death the only way she could get any rest was by lying face foremost on her knees and elbows, or standing on her feet. When standing, some one or two would have to stand by her to support her. She was standing on her feet when her spirit took its flight from the tenement of clay to bask in the sunshine of her Redeemer's love, and to drink forever at the fount of heavenly bliss.

In all her sufferings she was never heard to murmur or complain. Her friends and neighbors she always received with a smile of welcome. Her lovely disposition and kindness of heart won her many friends. Words fail us to speak of her as a dear sister. She was not a member of any church, but her daily walk and conversation proved to her friends and acquaintances that she had passed from death unto life. She expressed herself as having no fears of death. Why then should we mourn as those who have no hope? for she has left those lasting impressions upon our minds that she is at rest with Jesus.

Her remains were taken back to Ohio and laid to rest by the side of an infant sister (Martha), who died in 1836. The funeral services were conducted by Elder Ephraim Barker and G. Burley, at the Baptist church-house called Poplar Fork, near Gratiot, Licking Co., Ohio.

ELIZABETH H. SCROGGINS.

Mt. PULASKI, Ill.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Big Spring Primitive Baptist Association will hold her next annual session with the Blue Ridge Church, in Champaign Co., Ill., commencing on Friday before the third Sunday in September, 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continuing three days.

Brethren and sisters are heartily invited to visit us and behold our order. We would like to see several of our ministering brethren present. Those coming by way of the Peoria & Indianapolis Division of the Big Four R. R. will be met at Mahomet, Ill., and conveyed to the meeting and entertainment. Those coming by way of the Rantoul Branch of the Illinois Central R. R. will stop at Fisher, where they will be met and entertained. The association will be held about six miles north of Mahomet, and four miles south of Fisher.

P. S. BEALS, Clerk.

THE Lexington Old School or Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with the Lexington Church, at Lexington, Greene Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday (20th and 21st) in September, 1893, when we hope to meet not only our brethren and sisters of this association, but as many as can come from other associations that are in fellowship with us, especially ministering brethren.

As we are eleven miles from the railroad, we will say that we will meet any and all at Shandaken, on the Ulster & Delaware R. R., who will write requesting us to do so; and that any communications directed to me at Lexington, N. Y., will receive prompt attention. Also, that there is a daily stage, except Sunday, that connects with the morning trains from either way.

FLETCHER MACKEY, Clerk.

THE Maine Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Whitefield Church, Whitefield, Maine, September 8th, 9th and 10th, 1893.

Friends coming from the west by rail will leave Portland, Maine, at 1:20 p. m., reaching Gardiner about 3:30, where they will be met by friends and cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE Old School Baptist Conference will be in session with the North Berwick Church, North Berwick, Maine, September 1st, 2d and 3d, 1893.

Visiting brethren may expect conveyance from the station at North Berwick to the meeting. Providence permitting, Elders F. A. Chick, F. W. Keene, and possibly Wm. J. Purington, will be with us.

THE Greenville Old School Predestinarian Baptist Association will meet on the 1st, 2d and 3d days of September, 1893, with the Refuge Church, at Spencerville, Ohio.

C. G. MILLER, Church Clerk.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Andes Church, Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the first Wednesday and Thursday in September (6th), 1893.

Those of the same faith are invited to meet with us. Union Grove is thirteen miles from Arkville, on the U. & D. R. R. The a. m. and early p. m. trains will be met at Arkville the day before our meeting.

J. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

THE fifty-third annual session of the Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists will be held (the Lord willing) with the Sulphur Fork Church, near Campbellsburgh, Henry Co., Ky., commencing on Friday before the first Saturday and Sunday in September (1st), 1893.

Those coming by way of Lexington will change cars at Lagrange and get off at Campbellsburgh station, on the Cincinnati & Louisville Short Line R. R. Those coming by way of Cincinnati and Louisville will get off at Campbellsburgh, where all will be cared for.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

E. F. RANDELL, Church Clerk.

THE Nodaway Association of Primitive Baptists will meet with the First Nodaway Church, four miles west of Savannah, Andrew Co., Mo., on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming from the south will come to Savannah, on the Maple Leaf R. R. Those from the north on the same road will come to Savannah. Those coming from the north on the Bluff R. R. will stop off at Amizona. Conveyance will be at each place. All are invited.

LUKE THORNTON, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Predestinarian Baptists will hold its next annual meeting with the Salem Church, in Marshall Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the south will stop at Rutland, and those from the north will stop at Wenona. Those coming by the Chicago & Alton R. R. will stop at Evans, and those by the Santa Fe R. R. will stop at Toluca.

A cordial invitation is extended to the household of faith to attend with us.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE sixty-second annual session of the Spoon River Association of Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1893, and continue three days.

The meeting will be at the Mt. Zion Church, Fulton Co., Ill., seven miles east of Astoria, on the St. Louis Division of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Our brethren are invited to come and see us.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p.

m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All will come on Thursday. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Harford Church, in Harford Co., Md., commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth, especially ministering brethren.

Those coming by way of Baltimore will take train at North Avenue station on Friday before, at three o'clock p. m., for Long Green or Forest Hill. Those coming from the north will take train at Delta at 3:50 p. m. the same day for same stations.

NATHAN GRAFTON, Clerk.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.
Salt River—28th.
As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.
Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.
Elk Lick—5th.
Mt. Sterling—6th.
Mt. Carmel—7th.
Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1893.

NO. 36.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Ghent, Ky., Aug. 11, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Our Lord said, "For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."—Luke vi. 43. This language presents to the saints a contrast to which in their daily experience they often in sorrow look. They are often made to inquire, "Am I his or am I not?" But when they look to their earthly nature they find no evidence which enables them to answer that question in the affirmative, and to say with David, "The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer;" and with Job, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." The afflictions of that ancient saint caused him to trust in the Lord Jehovah, and not in earth, or that which pertained to earthly things; and he could have appropriately said, "In the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." David had suffered from the persecutions of Saul; but the Lord had delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul. One of the words used to define the name "Saul" is death; hence David was delivered from that death to which Saul desired to consign him. But his delivery was not secured to him by his own strength. He had not defeated Saul upon the sanguinary battlefield, nor had he slain him with the smooth stone from the brook, as he did Goliath of Gath; but the Lord had delivered him from the fury of Goliath and the persecutions of Saul. He did not trust in the armor that Saul had caused to be put on him; but he trusted in the God of Israel, and afterward could appropriately say, "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever." They that trust in the Lord have that faith which is defined to be a firm belief of God's testimony and of the truth of the gospel, which influences the will, and leads to an entire reliance on Christ for salvation. That was the faith of Job and of David, and is the faith of all the regenerated sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. To them the apostle says, "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but faith which worketh by love." Abraham received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had, yet being uncircumcised. To him circumcision was a sign of the righteousness of faith. It was not the righteousness of faith, but was a sign of that righteousness. The apostle says, "For he is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh: but he is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God." Then circumcision did not make Abraham the father of the faithful, but it was a sign and seal of the righteousness of faith. It was an outward sign. So the tree that brings forth good fruit presents the sign which clearly indicates the nature of the tree, that it is good; but the good fruit that it bears does not change the nature of the tree, but is evidence of its character. So faith is the evidence of the indwelling of God's Spirit in all his saints. It is a sign that God is dwelling in them the hope of glory. That hope is an anchor of the soul. It "entereth into that within the veil, whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." It will be observed that he was not a priest after the order of Aaron, who had continually to be making offerings in the temple service; but he was a priest after the order of Melchisedec, whose priestly office was without beginning of days or end of life. That hope which entered that veil, the veil of death, where he (Jesus) had entered to make one great and final sacrifice for sin, reached within that veil. Then the temple service ceased. The offerings under that service pointed to that one great offering; and when he who was that offering entered into death those types and shadows ceased, and the old heaven was rolled up as a vesture. No more could the fiery law proclaimed from Sinai's smoking summit awaken fear and dread in the hearts of those whose hopes reached to that within that veil, and whose faith took hold of that great offering which was Jesus—that offering which forever perfected them that are sanctified; because they were sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Jesus Christ, and called. They were preserved in Jesus Christ, whose offering forever perfected them; and they are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last times. They are kept by his power, and not by man, nor anything that pertains to earth.

But perhaps some will inquire,

Why these thoughts, when we are considering the nature and character of the tree which bringeth forth good fruit? The answer to that inquiry is, "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; for thou also hast wrought all our works in us."—Isaiah xxvi. 12. Faith is a good work, and God is the author and finisher of the faith of his saints. He was the author and finisher of the faith of Abraham, and by faith he rejoiced to see the day of the Lord; and he saw it, and was glad. By faith he looked through the long vista of years between his sojourn in the land of promise as in a strange country, and that glorious period when the Messenger of the covenant suddenly came to his temple. That Messenger was Christ, and he was the good tree; the only good tree that had appeared on the earth from the day that the Lord placed the flaming sword and cherubim in the east of Eden. Perhaps some will say, Abraham was a good man, a good tree. If so, why were his descendants corrupt, whose corruption culminated in the crucifixion of the Lord of life and glory? Faith is one of the graces of the Spirit, and is the gift of God, and was given to Abraham as fully and clearly as it is given to any of us little ones in this remote day from his sojourn on earth; and his good works were as fully wrought in him as are the good works in any of the dear saints who now live upon the earth. We have said that Christ was the good tree. He hath said, "I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing." He also says, "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me." Then their good works are evidently wrought in them. He hath said, "Without me ye can do nothing." The figure of the vine and the branches presents the unity of Christ and his people. The apostle says, "And he [Christ] is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead." Again, he says, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ; according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." His people were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, and were blessed in him with all spiritual blessings, even "before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth or the world." He is from everlasting to everlasting, and says by the psalmist, "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations."—See Psalm xc. They were ever with him, for he bare them and carried them all the days of old. They being partakers of flesh and blood, he took part of the same; and in that unity he suffered and paid the penalty which rested on them by reason of their transgression of the divine law; and when in mournful accents he said, "It is finished," that penalty was forever removed. When he arose from the tomb they were one with him. He says by the prophet, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Then surely in that unity he was the resurrection and the life, as he said to the weeping sisters of Lazarus. When he arose from the tomb all that was needful was accomplished by him to remove the penalty of the law, which was death. As it was needful that he take part of their flesh and blood to fit him for the sufferings of Calvary, so it is needful that they have his Spirit, that they be born of the Spirit. In their natural birth they are born of a corruptible seed; but in their spiritual birth they are born of an incorruptible seed. That which is corruptible must perish; but that which is incorruptible liveth and abideth forever. Thus he said, "I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish." That eternal life is given to them by the Spirit in the great work of regeneration. Our Lord said to Nicodemus, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." By that spiritual birth the saints are fitted for a place in his kingdom here below, and for the joys of that eternal kingdom where sin, sorrow, pain, disease and death are feared and felt no more.

"A good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit." Christ is in all his saints the hope of glory, by reason of the new and spiritual birth. He is spiritual, and seeketh such to worship him as do worship in spirit and in truth. Surely he will not be mistaken; for all his saints are created in him unto good works, which God hath before ordained that they should walk in them. Then evidently the good tree represents the saints in their unity with Christ; and all their good works are by reason of the indwelling of God's Spirit in them. Nothing can result from the work of the Spirit but that which is good. It was that to which John referred when he said, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." That seed is Christ in him the hope of glory. He is the true foundation on which the hope of all the saints rests, and their good works are wrought in them; for their faith and hope reach to that within the veil, whither he hath for them once entered. When he entered that veil he despoiled death of its sting and the grave of its victory, for he arose a triumphant conqueror over all the powers of darkness; and he brought all his sheaves with him—all his chosen, all his redeemed people. He had gone forth weeping. He had passed through the sorrows of Gethsemane, and now in triumph could say "to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back; bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth, even every one that is called by my name; for I have created them for my glory." Having created them for his own glory, he worketh in them both to will and to do of his good pleasure; and he says to them, "Because I live, ye shall live also." Then surely they bring forth good fruit; but it is all to the honor and glory of his great and exalted name.

But the text says, "Neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." Having meditated for awhile on the beauties and glories that shine forth in the great and ever-glorious character of the great I Am, where infinite perfection and holiness reside, let us turn our thoughts to the residence, home and character of those who bring forth corrupt fruit. It was said to Adam, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." He did eat of the forbidden fruit. Then the Lord said to him, "Because thou hast hearkened to the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Death was the penalty of that law, and that penalty has reached and will continue to reach his then unborn posterity to the end of time; for the wages of sin is death. That death reaches farther than the dissolution of these mortal bodies. It was a death to all uprightness, to all holiness; therefore the apostle says, "There is none that doeth good, no, not one. They are all gone out of the way; they are together become unprofitable." This is a condition, and not a theory, as our statesmen would say; and this condition has reached all of Adam's race. The psalmist says, "God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God. Every one of them is gone back: they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good." Although the apostle Paul was called, qualified and sent forth to preach the everlasting gospel, he in his experience as a minister of the gospel fully attested the truth of those mournful truths presented by the psalmist when he said, "In me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." Was he different from all the other saints in that particular? Evidently not. That apostle died, as well as have all the saints from the dawn of time, except those who are now living on the earth; and they too must soon lay aside these habiliments of clay. Death is the wages of sin, and all have died because of the indwelling of sin in their mortal bodies; but God's dear people are made spiritual because of the indwelling of the Spirit in them. They are natural because of their relation to the first Adam, who was a natural man; and the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.—1 Cor. ii. 14. When our Lord was upon the earth he was in a condition to die, and did die. The apostle says, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death," &c. In him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily; and his saints possess two natures: the natural, which is theirs by reason of their descent from that natural man; the spiritual, by reason of their being born of the Spirit. Here arises the warfare in which they will be engaged while clothed with mortality; the flesh lusting against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh. The apostle, while engaged in this warfare, breaks forth in this language, "For we know that the law is spiritual; but I am carnal, sold under sin." Evidently in using the pronoun "I" in that text he refers to his flesh, in which he says there dwelleth no good thing. This is evidenced when he says, "For that which I do I allow not; for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I." He closes these solemn declarations by crying out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Then in holy triumph he is enabled to say, "I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin." It was with that spiritual mind which was given him when he was born of the Spirit that he served the law of God; and it was in that flesh which he had by reason of his earthly relationship that he served the law of sin. Our Lord said, "Neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." This language clearly applies to all in their relation to the first Adam. They are all of the earth, earthy; and in that relationship they are carnal, sold under sin. They have carnal minds, which are enmity against God. That enmity has been clearly made manifest through all the past ages since the dawn of time; but it was made (perhaps) more manifest in the crucifixion of our Lord and in the martyrdom of his apostles than at any other time.

Then, dear reader, if you are clad in the robe of righteousness, it is not because of any earthly relationship that you may claim. If you have done any good works it is because God hath worked in you to will and to do of his good pleasure. If you love God and his dear saints it is because he first loved you, and sent his Son into the world to suffer and die, that you might be crowned with glory. If you are saved from sin and all its direful consequences it is not by works of righteousness that you have done, but because God in the plenitude of his power and the riches of his grace hath provided a ransom for you adequate to all the demands of law against you. That ransom was the glorious Son of God, who gave himself for you, to redeem you from all iniquity. If you mourn over your poverty in spiritual things, you should remember that your glorious Lord became poor, that you might be made rich in the fond and glorious assurance that he by grace has secured to you an unfading inheritance amidst the glories of his eternal kingdom, and that you are kept by his power, ready to be revealed in the last time; that great and glorious period when he will come without sin unto salvation, call you from the cold confines of the tomb, clothe you in an ever-glorious immortality, and take you to dwell with him in the sweet companionship of all the redeemed of every land and clime, and join them in heavenly anthems of praise to him throughout a never-ending eternity.

In sadness these poor thoughts have been written, and the brethren editors will dispose of them as they may deem best, and believe me affectionately theirs,

H. COX.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., May 16, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you the inclosed letter; if you deem best, publish it. I found it very suggestive. If published, I have no doubt that others also will enjoy it.

I remain your brother in hope,

F. A. CHICK.

SPRINGVILLE, Ventura Co., Cal.

ELDER F. A. CHICK—MY DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you, and to the dear saints everywhere dispersed. The dear old SIGNS of April 19th, current volume, is at hand, containing your, to me, very interesting article on John xi. 37. On the second page, first column, you say, "From this there are to be learned some lessons suited to our daily need, that I desire to briefly allude to." First, the low estate of Zion, with gloomy forebodings to us, followed by that same questioning, and is dark. But I see that a little light has been let in, to give you a solace in believing that our God has something better in store for us than a present answer to our most fervent prayer. Now, I am not going to criticise, nor do I profess to teach you the way of the Lord more perfectly; but as I trust I fear the Lord, I will speak to you of these things.—Mal. iii. 16, 17. My present position among mankind in general, and the religious world in particular, may have had something to do with my reflections on this same line of thought. But be that as it may, I have had the same thoughts and questionings, and have been sick at heart when reviewing the low estate of Zion, and have searched diligently for some clew or evidence in the written word to direct my understanding to an answer to these questionings; for, as you say, it has seemed to me that God has in store for Zion something more glorious at the latter end of this militant state than was at the beginning of the gospel day; for the law dispensation closed with the bringing in of the gospel by its fulfiller and magnifier, which gave to it a glory far superior to that of Moses' countenance; and the law dispensation is generally accepted as a type of the gospel dispensation, by those who fear the Lord. In my search I have felt to some extent rewarded by what seems to me to be a solution of the mystery, as light has been given. I will here present a synopsis of the matter to you, hoping it will comfort you as it has me.

There are two parallel subjects to be presented, to give the full force and meaning of either; one is Christ, and the other is antichrist. By referring to the Revelation we find both in bold relief brought to view; first, Christ Jesus, the faithful and true witness, is brought to view with all his attributes, which are those of the true God and eternal life, addressed to the seven churches in Asia. Here is much food for thought and comment; for here we can read our own experience, and that of the church through all the vicissitudes of time, the present not excepted. We will pass to the fourth chapter. Here we have a description of him that sat on the throne, and of its surroundings. The fifth chapter gives us an account of the book sealed with seven seals, and of the one found able to open the same, and the praise which is his due. The sixth chapter begins with the opening of the seals. Here again is a portrayal of all time. The seventh chapter gives another description of the gospel dispensation. The eighth chapter begins with the opening of the seventh seal, and the beginning of sorrows described as brought on mankind for sin. The ninth and tenth chapters are a continuation of the same, portrayed for all time. With the beginning of the eleventh chapter is one of the grandest visions of the book, as touching the church, and also the unbelievers, here called Gentiles. You will observe that the same period of time is given to the Gentiles, in the outer court, that the two witnesses shall prophesy; and these two witnesses have power to shut heaven that it rain not, and to bring all manner of plagues on the earth, during the days of their prophecy; and they stand before the God of the earth—not heaven. "And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them." It is notable that they have finished their testimony before they are killed. To my mind these two witnesses are the Spirit of Christ and the Comforter promised by Christ to his disciples. Then, you ask, how can they be slain? I answer, as we by experience know, that we have this treasure in earthen vessels; so these vessels are the bodies that are not put in graves, for their natural lives are intact. But the beast has killed the influence of these witnesses by his superior power to save souls, by the application of the various modes and machines of the times. But the greater miracle is to be that the Spirit from God enters into the witnesses, and they stand upon their feet, and hear a voice from heaven saying, "Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them." All nature is convulsed, and by it men are slain, and men are affrighted, and give glory to God. Here I see the present low estate of Zion in our day, drawing near the close of their prophecy, and the short space of time till a greater blessing is bestowed.

I have only touched the subject at intervals thus far, but will take up antichrist briefly, as portrayed in the following chapters. The twelfth chapter introduces the subject with a wonder in heaven—the legal heaven. The third verse presents another wonder in heaven (the same legal heaven), a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, with crowns on his heads. This is the great pagan beast of the world at the time of the birth of Jesus Christ; and Herod, as a personification of this monster, caused the great lamentation in Ramah. But we will pass to the war in that same legal heaven, when the powers of antichrist were arrayed against the Anointed of God; and when he was slain, the people wagging their heads said, "He saved others, himself he cannot save." When they had sealed the tomb and placed a guard, they felt assured of victory. But they, as usual, have to cover up their weakness with money. The dragon prevailed not, and finally his place was found no more in heaven, he and his angels being cast out into the earth. Having great wrath, the dragon persecutes the woman, and she flees to the wilderness from the face of the serpent. He casts out a flood (false doctrines) to carry her away; but the earth helps the woman (church) by swallowing up the flood. O what a blessing to the church! But the dragon still makes war with her seed. I would say that this dragon is figurative of the barbarous idolatry of that age.

The thirteenth chapter begins with a description of another beast, with seven heads and ten horns, with crowns on his horns, and the names of blasphemy on his heads. He was like a leopard, with feet like a bear, and a head like a lion. Here we still have all the marks of a heathen idolatrous beast, and more; for this beast forms a union of Paganism and Christianity, and thereby is the embodiment of antichrist in every sense, having the power, the seat, and great authority of the dragon. And all the world wondered after the beast, and worshiped the dragon, saying, Who is able to make war with the beast? He has the same lease of power, as to time, that the witnesses are to prophesy; and he blasphemes the name of God, and his tabernacle, and them that worship therein. His power is over kindreds, tongues and nations; "and all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. If any man have an ear, let him hear." This same beastly spirit exists to-day, and is accomplishing the purpose of our God in the world. But owing to the advanced civilization of our day we have him with two horns like a lamb. Say they, "We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name [Christian], to take away our reproach." He speaks as a dragon, and exercises all the power of the beast before him; and he causeth the earth, and them that dwell therein, to worship the beast whose deadly wound was healed; and he has power to work miracles in the sight of the beast, and thereby deceive men, saying to them that dwell on the earth that they should make an image to the beast that had the wound by a sword, and did live. And he had power to give life to the image of the beast, and that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark; and that none might either buy or sell, save he that had the mark, either in the right hand or in the forehead.

I understand these are all the same beast; but the varied names, characteristics and variations given of his work are only intended to lead us into a more full and comprehensive view of the one antichrist, the devil and Satan, the prince of the power of the air, the "king over all the children of pride."—Job xl. This is the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, that shall make war, overcome and kill the witnesses; not as is understood in the common mode of expression; but, as I understand, not having the mark of the beast, they will not be allowed any civil or religious liberty, and hence not have any influence, and so be virtually dead, as witnesses to the truth of God and Christ. This beastly image is now being formed by a union of the Papal beast and the Protestant beast, with its educational horns. Knowledge is power; and so do horns represent power. There is no lack of schools. One is known as "free school;" the other, or religious, beginning with the Sunday School. All are being educated to worship Sunday. Many of these United States are in a state of concubinage with antichrist, and it is only a question of time, and short at that, when all the so-called civilized nations will have laws regulating the "Sabbath" question for all; and so all republics will marry the antichristian church. This done, the image will be complete, the witnesses slain, and gifts will be sent one to another, and rejoicing will be heard throughout the earth because these two prophets no more torment them. It is the boast of the silly dupes of this beast that the Old School Baptists are about all dead, that only a few old ones are left, and no young ones are coming on to take the places of the old ones. They say it boastingly, and I have no doubt that at heart they do rejoice in hope of the verification of their boasting; and it is no marvel to me that they do, else how could the Scriptures be fulfilled?

Now the greater blessing must follow this idolatrous state of things, else the Scriptures cannot be fulfilled. The creature is the god that is adored, be it man or his works; for all draw nigh to God with their lips, while their hearts are far from him. While all this is true of antichrist, I do believe there are many of God's children in Babylon. Yet it is a mystery how it can be so, when we observe that all whose names are not written in the Lamb's book of life from the foundation of the world shall worship the beast, and the image of the beast; but those whose names are written in the book of life shall, after the spirit of life from God enters into them, ascend up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies shall behold them. The earthquake, the falling of the city of antichrist, and the slaying of the appointed number (seven thousand), causes the remnant to give glory to the God of heaven.

Thus we see the greater blessings in store for Zion; and it is well for all to watch, for we know not in what hour our Lord cometh. It is well that we pray for support under all these trials; for Satan has no greater glory than to deceive the very elect, if it were possible.

This is now submitted to you for approval or disapproval, as may seem good to you.

Yours in hope of a better resurrection,

A. H. HAGANS.

MACOMB, ILL., July 12, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Please apply the money inclosed on my subscription, as my time has expired, and I do not feel like I could do without the dear old SIGNS as long as I can pay for it. I do not think the price too high, and I do hope and trust that the brethren and all who love the truth will do all they can to help keep our dear family paper a weekly. Many, perhaps, like myself, are not blessed with an abundance of this world's goods; yet I would rather be deprived of something else, even have less to eat, than do without the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I believe the child of God hungers and thirsts for spiritual food, as the natural man does for natural food; and when deprived of the spiritual food the soul becomes lifeless, cold and indifferent to the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. I believe the source of all our true enjoyment spiritually comes from above; yet while we live in this world of sorrow how much comfort we take from the precious letters and communications of our dear brethren and sisters, expressing the joys as well as the sorrows of the poor, tried ones, many of whom, like myself, seldom get to meeting; so the SIGNS is doubly precious and dear to me. May all true Old Baptists pay up their dues; and thus, while benefiting ourselves, we will also be helping brethren Beebe in their arduous labors.

While sending in my remittance I feel a desire to write a few lines to the household of faith. It has been a long time since I have penned anything for our paper. Many times I have thought of doing so, and it is not for lack of interest; but our paper is so ably filled each week that I feel I could say nothing more. My best efforts are so poor and imperfect, and seem so cold and comfortless, that I can but seldom make up my mind to write, or send what I have written. I have no encouraging news to write of myself. I seem to have grown no better during the last ten years, or since my unworthy name was added to the church-book. I see each day more and more the sinfulness of my heart, and know that of myself I can do nothing, not even the things that I would; but I am continually doing what I should not, and mourn daily over my hard and deceitful heart, and my wretch-

(Continued on page 285.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 6, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

BLESSED MOURNERS.

"BLESSED are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted."—Matt. v. 4.

To those who are led by the Spirit of God there is no need of worldly arguments to sustain the truth and inspiration of the revelation which God has given in the Scriptures. Religious scientists have to resort to various devices in the effort to make their theories acceptable to the reason of carnal men; and after they have brought to bear every cunning invention they utterly fail to show to the natural mind the great mystery of godliness. Indeed, it cannot be discovered even by those unto whom it has been revealed, except as the blessed Comforter is pleased to take of the precious things of Jesus and show unto them. Nor can the most carefully cultivated intelligence which may be bestowed on the natural mind, with all the moral training suggested by solicitous affection, succeed in teaching a tender child to know God. Much less can the wisdom of this world attain to the hidden things of the kingdom of God by devoted study and strict observance of the requirements of morality. Certainly none can exceed the legal attainments of Saul of Tarsus, who was as "touching the righteousness which is in the law [of Moses] blameless."—Phil. iii. 6. It will not be claimed by any adversary of the truth in assailing the faith of the saints, that any other standard of righteousness could be more conclusive than that by which Saul was judged. He had every advantage which could be afforded to any man. None could be his superior in natural birth, in moral training, nor in the diligence with which those advantages were cultivated. Yet he was taught that by the works of the law there was no justification. When the commandment came, at once sin revived, and Saul died. Instead of having room to claim merit in himself he had to confess, "I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me; but to perform that which is good I find not." This was the constant grief of Paul, as it was of all the saints whose experience is left on record in the Scriptures for our learning. When oppressed under the consciousness of their own sinfulness they could not refrain from crying out in deep sorrow. This is the mourning by which our gracious Lord is pleased to mark those upon whom he pronounces the benediction in our text. It is as exclusive as it is positive; and it can never be extended to include one more than those specified, nor can it be so restricted as to leave out one of those whom our Lord has blessed.

It should be carefully observed that the blessing is not offered as an inducement to persuade any one to mourn so that he may be blessed; the character is definitely marked by the fact that this mourning already controls him. The same peculiarity is seen in all the other descriptions specified in connection with this one in our text. When one is "poor in spirit" the blessing already rests upon him; for the kingdom of heaven is his. This cannot be distorted to authorize the flattering and false theory that the kingdom of heaven is presented as a reward to any sinner who will be poor in spirit. It is manifestly absurd to suppose that this peculiarity can be subject to the will of the one whom it identifies. But it should be equally evident that it is no less impossible for one to mourn at the instance of his own will than that he should voluntarily be poor in spirit. None can bear these sure marks of the divine blessings unless they are sealed unto the day of redemption by the holy Spirit of God.—Eph. iv. 30. It is not because they mourn that they are blessed, but their mourning manifests the fact that the blessing of God rests upon them. There is strong assurance for these mourners in the knowledge that none bear this mark unless they are included in the blessing pronounced by our Lord. When the Comforter takes this truth of Jesus and shows it unto the mourning one, his mourning is immediately changed into heavenly joy. But this joy cannot be attained by any efforts of the mourner. Often the saint who walks in darkness is found trying to produce some light by the remembrance of former comforting experience. Under the gross darkness he can see no gleam of light in the brightest display of divine grace experienced in the past. Unbelief will charge that all such assurance was but a delusion. Then reason adds the weight of its testimony in assailing the faith which abides in the believer. The evidence on which his hope is based never was satisfactory to his natural mind. Of course, when darkness hides the assurance of faith, reason is ready to assert its conclusion, which is always to the distress of the tried believer. Where is the disciple who has been long walking in the hidden way, who has not encountered the cruel question as to whether his brightest experience was not all a mere nervous delusion? Then he was obliged to confess that he never had been able to satisfy his unbelieving natural mind on that point. But for the present deliverance of the sure testimony of the faith of Jesus Christ, every such assault of infidel reason would drive the trembling saint to utter despair.

When thus tried, the adversary has power to bring surrounding circumstances to confirm the charge of unbelief. Even in the events of temporal providence he will show that the love of God cannot embrace one whom the Lord so severely afflicts. This is consistent in the estimation of the natural mind. The tried disciple is so honest that he is easily deceived by the apparent consistency of this suggestion, since it is incredible to reason that the infinite justice of God could be honored in the salvation of one so polluted and guilty as he feels himself. Especially when oppressed with unbelief, and when suffering under temporal adversity, the afflicted soul is unable to resist such assaults of the cruel tempter. But the result of the trial is to produce the mourning by which the subject of this divine blessing is identified. There can be no room for doubting the reality of this mark which it has pleased the Lord to set upon his chosen people. While it is difficult to believe that his glorious assurances of the favor of God are genuine and true, he cannot doubt the reality of his distress, and the mourning which is the effect of that suffering. This is the most unquestionable and conclusive testimony in confirmation of the hope of the saints. Those who thus mourn are already blessed of the Lord; and thereby it is proven to be certainly an established fact that they shall be comforted. In no other way is this consolation of the gospel of Christ revealed in any believer but through the fellowship of the sufferings which were his portion while he was manifest in the flesh as the Redeemer of his people. His dying blessing assures his loved followers, who are favored as joint heirs with the Lord Jesus, that in the world they shall have tribulation. Nothing can fulfill this word of truth but that experience under which they are compelled to groan and cry unto God for deliverance. Such mourning is not merely a temporal grief; for time will heal all such sorrows. Either the cause of tears will be removed, and the mourning cease for that reason, or the strength of nature will sink under the trouble, so that death will bring rest from it. But these mourners have sorrows to endure for which time can bring no solace, nor can death promise them repose. No relief can come to them while they feel the burden of their own evil heart and guilty conscience of rebellion against the holy requirements of the commandment of the Lord. Those who have only the fear of future punishment to restrain them from sin, and whose only motive in the pursuit of righteousness is that they may attain to a state of happiness in eternity, are evidently not subject to the mourning designated in our text. Only the love of self is manifest in such desires. Those who are mourning indeed, who are in need of the comfort here spoken by our Lord, are not merely troubled in apprehension of future consequences of their sins; the present sense of bondage under the power of corruption is the occasion of their mourning. In this is summed up all the grief by reason of which they mourn. All their temporal sufferings and sorrows would be esteemed but light affliction if they did not regard them as bearing witness against the genuineness of that hope in the salvation of God by which they are enabled to endure all things in the present transitory world. Not even all the distresses of Paul in the loss of all earthly treasures and honors, with the endurance of severe persecution, could be worthy of comparison with the glorious privilege of attaining to the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ. The apostle could glory in the deepest tribulation by which the grace of God was revealed as working in him conformity to the image of his suffering and crucified Redeemer. While mourning under these depths of anguish, he was by grace made to realize that his sorrows were evidences of his unity with Christ, and the present assurances of his ultimate victory over sin and sorrow through the blood of Jesus. Therefore he could count it all joy when he fell into divers temptations, that is, trying seasons; knowing that these conflicts brought him more closely into the experience of unity with his suffering Redeemer. The faith by which this was revealed in the tried apostle did not prevent his endurance of the trial as a severe conflict. He could know the fellowship of his Lord only in the feeling of every sorrow in his own experience in which he was favored to be partaker of the suffering of Christ. This could be known in no other way but by passing through the darkness of the trial without seeing the face of his triumphant Redeemer. Under such darkness the tried saints are prepared to understand the unspeakable riches of Christ as the fullness of grace from which their every want must be supplied in time as well as in eternity.

In the gracious words of Jesus as recorded in our text it is not merely the suffering ones who are blessed; only such sufferers as mourn can claim any part in this benediction. So Paul declares the distinction between these two kinds of suffering. "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death."—2 Cor. vii. 10. The sorrow of the world is exemplified in Cain, and in Esau, and Judas Iscariot. There is no mourning in that sorrow, since it was only regret that their wickedness has been defeated. In the cases of David, Jeremiah and Peter there was that godly sorrow which worketh repentance to salvation from their transgressions, which can come from no other source but the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is exalted with the right hand of God "a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and for-givenness of sins." The justice of God can recognize no other repentance but that which is the gift of this exalted Savior; and there is no shadow of an intimation in the Scriptures of truth to authorize the expectation that this repentance will ever be given to any but the Israel of our God. Neither is it possible that he shall fail to give it to every one of those who are included in the covenant of grace, for all such are the Israel for whom this precious gift of God is prepared. If they could see this sure provision of grace for them, they could not mourn. But their mourning is the mark by which it has pleased the Lord that they shall be made manifest as the subjects of this blessing. Every one who is led by the Spirit immediately recognizes this seal of the Spirit in those who bear it; and fellowship embraces such mourners with as much assurance as it feels for those who are rejoicing to read their title clear to everlasting bliss through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus. Indeed, for those who mourn there is a peculiar tenderness felt, by which they seem drawn more closely into the fellowship and love of the saints for the very depth of their trials. There is a divine sympathy in the sorrows of the pilgrims and strangers, which is not less an evidence of the reign of grace in those who feel its power than in the mourning ones embraced in its tender emotion of love.

Unbelief would rob the mourner of the sweetness of this assurance by suggesting that the comfort promised by the Lord is only to be received at the end of the mortal pilgrimage of the saints. This perversion of the truth could afford no strength to those who mourn under a sense of their present need of support. It can be of little benefit to one perishing in a trackless desert to be assured that he is the rightful heir to a large estate in a land of broad rivers and streams, while yet he must starve amid the barren sands. The blessing which Jesus bestows not only secures the eternal salvation of those whom he has chosen, but in that blessing is included also every good thing for time, as well as their presence with him in that glory which he had with the Father before the world was. It is the present conflict of the saints under which they need to be strengthened and comforted. For this cause all the consolations of the gospel are recorded in divine wisdom and love; and the tempter deceives the tried believer when he persuades him that all his comfort is reserved beyond this temporal state of afflictions. So wonderful is the grace revealed in the present deliverance of the saints that they are made to draw joy out of every sorrow, light out of their most gloomy darkness, and victory out of their most overwhelming defeats. Since they are blessed in mourning, and made to rejoice in suffering, it is clear that they must ascribe all the glory to the present help of the victorious Captain of their salvation. Thus are they qualified to unite in the new song in which the ransomed myriads ascribe praises to the Lamb, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. v. 9, 10. Since they who mourn are the only characters upon whom the great grace of our God is bestowed, well may they be specified as the people whom the Lord has blessed.

LENGTHY OBITUARY NOTICES.

WHILE we feel to sympathize with those who are called to part with near and dear relatives and friends in death, yet we must request that in writing obituary notices they will be as brief as possible. A little reflection on this matter will, we think, be sufficient to show how unnecessary are long accounts of the minor incidents in the life of the deceased. Aside from the immediate friends of the subject of the notice they are not of general interest; and those to whom they are of any importance are about all acquainted with the facts without publishing them. A short notice is more likely to receive early insertion in the paper, as our obituary department as a rule is very much crowded; and it frequently occurs that owing to the extreme length of the notices, the publication of some are delayed for two or three numbers.

ERRATA.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 30, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Please notice a typographical error in my communication in the SIGNS of this date, page 274, second column, second paragraph. For enjoyed read engaged. I did not mean to say that a minister's work in the ministry is enjoyed by the church of God when his walk and conversation are not such as becometh the gospel of Christ, for I do not believe it.

Your brother in the hope of the gospel,

SILAS H. DURAND.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above. These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 283.)

ed, depraved nature. Many times my pathway is shrouded in gloom, darkness hovers around me, and not a ray of light appears for many days; and I lose hope, and sometimes almost sink in despair. My way has led me through many trials, afflictions and temptations, and the Lord has seen fit to hide his smiling face, and left me to wander alone in darkness.

"So far from God I seem to be!

O! is there any one like me?"

So you see, dear friends, I have only a doleful story to tell. I am only a poor, stumbling sinner yet, and I am sure it will never be any better with me if I am left to myself to perform something good to bring me into favor with God; for I know that all my best efforts are nothing, and less than nothing, in his sight. I feel that all his chastisements are for the best, and I richly deserve his sore displeasure; yet I fear I do not bear the cross uncomplainingly, but sometimes murmur and complain, and groan under the chastening rod. I do not go singing and rejoicing on my way, as many others seem to; yet I am glad that all the dear children of God are not down in the valley, but some are on the mountain-top rejoicing. Sometimes when reading our dear paper I come across one who is low down, and then it is that I feel I have company; and do you not know that I have a stronger feeling of fellowship for those than for one whose life seems all sunshine? I do so pity the poor and afflicted, and especially the Old School Baptist ministers, whose lives, many of them, seem filled with privation and sorrow. Trials without and within beset them on every side; yet they feel they must go, for "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." May God bless them, and may they lack for nothing.

I visited my dear father, Elder I. N. Vanmeter, this week. He has just passed his seventy-eighth birthday; and though lamed considerably with rheumatism, yet he is able to attend four churches and other meetings, and does a great deal of reading and writing. After more than fifty years of preaching he feels to be nothing but a poor sinner saved by grace, and all his dependence is in God. Yes, indeed, where can a poor sinner look for help but unto him who hath the words of eternal life? Nothing less than this will do a poor, tempest-tossed child any good, or drive away his doubts and fears. The religionists around me say that you must not have doubts and fears, dark seasons, trials and afflictions, and that you could help yourself if you would; but, dear friends, as little as I believe in Arminianism, I find myself trying to do better, but find I make a failure. All my good resolutions are broken; and were it not for the restraining grace of God I know not what I should do. So it is by grace we are saved, not for any merit in ourselves.

May we not be entangled and carried away with the world, or with the religion of the present day; but may we come out and be separate, not be afraid of the truth, nor ashamed to be numbered with the poor and afflicted children of God. One much greater than we chose rather to suffer with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; and one much greater than all hath said, "I will leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people; and they shall trust in the name of the Lord." Would we not rather be numbered with them, whose trust is in the Lord, than with those whose dependence is in man, and whose works must fall? Although "He maketh the clouds his chariot," and sometimes the clouds are very heavy and dark, and not a ray of light appears, yet it is written that it shall come to pass that at evening time it shall be light. I have thought that though our journey through this life may be fraught with much suffering and sorrow, and the days be long and dark and dreary, and some, like dear sister Mary Parker, suffering almost beyond all human endurance year after year, so that we in our blindness and unbelief cannot see or understand why all these things must be, yet we by faith can believe that at evening time there shall be light. Then when the last pain has been endured, the last trial passed, in the evening of our lives the light of the glory of God shall shine about his saints, causing them to rejoice even in death, saying, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Could I but claim these promises as mine, then indeed I could go on my way rejoicing; but alas! it is only a little ray of light now and then that I see, here a little and there a little, a crumb now and then, just enough to keep me. I have thought much of this passage, "By their fruits ye shall know them." I would be pleased if Elder Beebe or others would write a few thoughts on this Scripture. I often fear that I have only proved a hindrance and stumbling-block to the church. As I live at such a distance, and having poor health, I can only meet with my brethren and sisters once or twice a year; and when I think that "By their fruits ye shall know them," I feel often that I show forth none of the fruits of the Spirit, which should characterize a child of God.

"Tis a point I long to know,
Oft it causes anxious thought,
Do I love the Lord or no?
Am I his or am I not?"

Yes, do I love him as I should? Do I walk in his commandments? Do I love his statutes? Do I do my duty by my brethren and sisters, helping to bear the burdens of the church? Do I show by my daily walk and conversation that I have been with Christ and learned of him? These are questions which trouble me every day, and cause me to look around and search in the valley for my little hope. Then it is sometimes I feel that I love the brethren; and it is my chief joy to meet with them, and join them in singing the sweet songs of Zion, and listen to the glad tidings of salvation. Thus our hope, which is renewed day by day, keeps our feet from slipping, and our hearts from fainting by the way.

Dear brethren and sisters, write on, and cheer and comfort the scattered saints; and may you take this as a token of love and remembrance from me, that I have not forgotten those who have requested me to write, but have not done so on account of my ignorance and incompetency.

Dear brethren Beebe, I have looked over this scrambling, disconnected letter, and feel almost ashamed to send it; but I have written it just as the thoughts came to me, and will leave it to you to do with as you think best. I do not suppose that I would do better should I try, though it is not as I would like to have it. I pray that the Lord may be with you, and with us all, causing us all to do our whole duty, and walk as children of the light.

With best wishes for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I remain yours very unworthily, SARAH E. RUNKLE.

CANADA, Ky., April 8, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of my kind and loving sister, Sarah E. Bolt, I will try to write my experience, or what I hope the Lord has done for me. I do not feel that it will be of much comfort to any of God's dear children. I feel so little in the sight of God that it seems too much for me to attempt to write anything about it. Perhaps I can tell you a little of what troubled me.

I always tried to live as best I could in the way of a moral life. At about the age of eighteen years the Lord took hold of me, and made me see and feel how sinful I was; and what I now relate I can never forget. I love to talk about it, and it never grows old. I always have to shed tears when I think about Jesus and his love, and how merciful he has been to poor sinful me. He brought me low. One Sunday evening after I had returned from meeting, my sins like mountains appeared before me. O what trouble I had! I thought I could not live if I did not find some relief, for I could not sleep at night nor rest in any way. I would get up and try to pray, but could not find any relief. I would go back to my bed, thinking I would not live to see another morning. I was teaching school at the time, and was taken sick. I thought I would go home and stay until I got better; but I grew worse, and thought I was going to die. I told my mother that I was about gone, and could see no chance of being saved. I told her I wanted her to send for my dear uncle, a minister of the gospel. He was sent for and came, and I told him that I had no hope of myself. O what trouble I had! I thought I could not bear it much longer. I then thought if God would only forgive me I never would want or ask for anything else. I thought I would give the world, if it were mine, if I could be a good christian, for that was all I asked or wanted. When I thought no one would see me I would get my Bible, to see if I could find any promise for me; but none could I find. O my burden! how heavily it pressed upon my poor heart. I would try to ask God to have mercy on me, but my burden of sin grew heavier all the time, until it appeared that I could not carry on my duties in the school-room. I went on for some time in this condition, until at last I gave up all hope, and thought I was going down to the dreadful lake. I felt I was one of the vilest sinners that ever lived. If it had been left to myself I surely would have been gone. At last I gave up myself into the hands of my dear Savior, and was willing for his will to be done. If I were lost I felt it was just; and if I were saved it was alone by the mercy of God. I then left my room and went out to a shady grove, and if ever I prayed it was then. My heart was filled with love. I raised up; and O how beautiful everything appeared. My heavy burden of guilt was gone, and I was made to praise the Lord. O how I wanted to tell some one about it. The Scripture came to my mind, "Go home to thy friends, and tell them what great things the Lord hath done for thee,"—Mark v. 19. I then thought I never would have any more trouble; but after a short time I began to have doubts. I thought it might be that the Lord had not had anything to do with it. I would go out by myself and pray, and the tempter would flee for awhile, and this would give me some relief. I had a desire to tell the church what I thought the Lord had done for me, but could not have the courage to do so. I went for a time, but did not say anything about it. I was afraid I was deceived. But I went to meeting on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in September, 1881, and when the invitation was given to those who felt like talking to the church I tried to relate what I thought the Lord had done for me, a poor, sinful worm. I received the right hand of fellowship from my dear brethren and sisters, and was baptized on the fourth Sunday in October, 1881, by Elder J. W. Smith. I then thought all the work was finished, and that my troubles were all over; but I have had many doubts and fears, dark and dreary seasons since then; yet I trust the Lord is able to deliver me, and will give me grace to conquer. We hear Paul saying, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast."—Eph. ii. 8, 9. I feel poor and unworthy, the least of all saints, if a saint at all; yet I have a little hope which I would not give for all the world. If I am saved, I feel to say that I am a poor sinner saved by grace. I understand that Christ died for his church only, which is the only people that are saved.

Dear brethren, you may look over what I have written, and if you think it worthy you may give it a place in the SIGNS; but if not cast it aside, and all will be right with me.

Salvation! O the name I love,
Which came by Christ the Lord above;
Surprising wisdom, matchless grace,
That reached my low and helpless case.

When I was sinking in despair,
And filled with awful, gloomy fear,
My Savior came to my relief;
He eased my pain, he bore my grief.

Immediately was I made whole;
I felt the witness in my soul;
My burden went, I knew not where,
And gone was all my guilt and fear.

And now I want my Lord to stay,
And be in me from day to day,
And guide me in this world below,
Direct in all I speak or do.

And when the messenger shall come,
May I be ready to go home;
And lean my head on Jesus' breast,
And with my dear Redeemer rest.

Your unworthy sister, if one at all,

MARY A. BEVINS.

OLD MEN'S HOME, PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

MY DEAR BROTHER COULTER:—It is in much fear and trembling that I attempt to write to you at this time. There is at times with me a desire to write of some of the blessings of God, as I hope, which have been manifested to me. Then again the thought comes, You had better be still; you will only expose your ignorance and weakness in spiritual things. Well, I do know that I am, of myself, perfect weakness, and that in my flesh there dwells no good thing. This may be my last attempt at trying to write anything concerning my experience and understanding of the Scriptures, if indeed I have a spiritual understanding of them. Of late my mind has been much exercised with the subject of faith, which is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. I have been much perplexed, as brother Walton said on Sunday last that he had been, with that saying, "Catching at the shadow, and missing the substance." In reading your letter this week in the SIGNS, and also the Scriptures, I trust that in measure I was comforted of God in the things pertaining to the way of life and salvation through him. It now seems to me that there is much benefit derived from a shadow. We read in the Scriptures of truth, "Our days on earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding." "My days are like a shadow that declineth." "Man is like to vanity; his days are as a shadow that passeth away." "How excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! Therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings." "Yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast." "Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice." "And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." "As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste." "And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and from rain."

Now, dear brother, as I hope, I have received some consolation and comfort, being permitted to dwell under the shadow of the Almighty, in whom we trust. We read in the record, "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." We read in the same book that "there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one."

Now I find I am drifting into deep waters, and can only say with one of old, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" But still I desire to lay hold by faith on the hope set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; which faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. We do not hope for the things we see. So when we see a shadow we do not hope to see it, but are led to the substance; but without a substance and light there can be no shadow naturally. So I believe it is in a spiritual point of view, that if Christ be in us the hope of glory, then, and not until then, shall we reflect his image in our daily walk and conversation. This I fail to see in myself. But when I can see and hear the saints tell of the wonderful loving-kindness and mercy manifested to them by the blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, then do I see in them the image of Jesus, manifested by the fruit they bear, even the fruit of the Spirit. How beautifully are all the works of the Lord arranged, and for the comfort and edification of his people, the church, in the many gifts given to his church, for the building up of the little ones who hope in his salvation, in that they do grow in grace, and in the understanding of the Scriptures. I have been learning for many years, but I feel how little I know. How often do I look back to the time when I was made to see myself a lost and condemned sinner in the presence of the holy and just God. O how ignorant I was; yet I could see the justice of God in my condemnation. That was my first lesson, I trust, in the school of salvation. It seems to me now, in the way I have been taught, that it has been line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little. It comes in that way yet; and yet how ignorant I feel myself to be. I feel ashamed of myself. But my faith and hope is in what the Lord has done, and not what I have done.

I will close this long, imperfect letter in the belief that you will throw the mantle of charity over all its imperfections. With love to all, your unworthy, weak brother,
S. G. SUPPLEE.

NAVAJOE, Oklahoma.

G. BEEBE'S SONS:—I will send you a letter from my daughter, and if you see fit you may publish it. It might be a comfort to some one.

J. F. DALE.

WAVERLY, Neb., May 8, 1893.

DEAR FATHER:—I reckon you think it about time I was answering your letter. The delay has not been because I have not thought of you much the past winter, for I have thought of you more and wanted to see you more, it seems to me, than I ever did. But I think I have been made to see that not until we have tried every earthly help, and all has failed us, that we do look to the Lord alone, and are made to see that he is a present help in every time of need. Our little church is, it seems, on the brink of destruction, and God alone knows what the end will be. But this I know, that when Israel of old prospered they began to bring idols into their camp, and to intermarry with the "ites" around them, and to want a king to rule over them. Then the Lord afflicted them, and let their enemies in upon them, and they were scattered, and were made to mourn over their sins; and when the friends they had made for themselves in the days of their prosperity had all failed them, then they turned again to the Lord, and he fought their battles, and destroyed their enemies. So I believe it is in the antitype. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." I know that the Lord alone can bring us out of this trouble, and that it will be for our good and his glory. I hope and trust that the time will speedily come for each one of us that we can say, "It was good for me to be afflicted; for before I was afflicted I went astray." I know by my past experience that this darkness cannot always last; yet I cannot remove it, nor can I see through it, neither can I get away from the presence of the Lord. Like one of old, "If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." "If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there." As I came home from the last meeting the words of the prophet Jeremiah came to my mind, "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." I feel that the Lord will and does visit our transgressions with the rod, and our iniquities with stripes; yet his loving-kindness will he not utterly take from us, nor suffer his faithfulness to fail.

I hope you will write to us, and pray for us, that God will make us submissive to his will in all things; that his name may be glorified, and our pride be humbled.

From a poor, unworthy sinner, who has no hope but in the mercy of God.

FANNIE.

NAVAJOE, Greer Co., Oklahoma.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I will drop a line to let you know that the SIGNS comes to me regularly, and I appreciate it very highly. As I am out in the west, where I have not seen a Baptist for four months, my Bible and the SIGNS furnish the most of my comfort. I hope I shall be able to find some Baptists in this country, and would like very much to get you some subscribers. Some brethren seem to think the SIGNS is high at two dollars, who at the same time will take two or three newspapers. As far as I am concerned I would rather pay five dollars than do without it. The last number was a feast to my poor soul. The writings of the brethren and sisters are edifying to me, as they are all guided by the same spirit of love. God is love, and he that is born of God loveth his brother. John says, "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." No man can love God, whom he hath not seen, and hate his brother, whom he hath seen. Why? Because the children of God are all born of the same Spirit, and that is the Spirit of love. The apostle says, "Let brotherly love continue." How? By doing what God has commanded us to do, keeping our body under subjection. But some one will say, I am so weak. Well, Paul has said, "When I am weak, then am I strong." How? In the Lord. Let us watch and pray; and let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. Brethren, think it not strange when fiery trials come upon you. They will work for you a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Pray for me; for if I am a saint I am the least of all.

If there is a Baptist in Greer County who takes the SIGNS I would like to hear from them.

J. F. DALE.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

At least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

MARRIAGES.

AUGUST 27th, 1893, at the residence of the bride's father, near Henderson, Md., by Elder E. Rittenhouse, Mr. Willard S. Cabbage and Miss Lena W., daughter of Wm. W. Meredith, both of Henderson.

By Elder A. B. Francis, May 31st, 1893, Philip D. Sowers and Annie C. Adrain, both of Loudoun Co., Va.

By the same, Aug. 24th, 1893, James M. Parker and Della F. Adkins, both of Wicomico Co., Md.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—By request I send you a notice of the departure from this mortal state of Mrs. Mary A. Quackenbush.

She had been living with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Waterbury, of 107 West 127th St., New York, and since last September had been unable to go out. I called to see her on June 6th, and had a very pleasant interview. She could then walk slowly across the room, and could talk clearly, though slowly; and her conversation was about the things of the church and kingdom of God, as it had always been since I first knew her, which was in 1865. She was a spiritually minded woman, and clear and firm in the truth. She was baptized by Elder James C. Goble in October, 1848, in the fellowship of the Mt. Zion Church, in the city of New York, and in May, 1858, united with the Ebenezer Church, of which she remained a faithful and consistent member during her mortal life. Her age was sixty-nine years. She passed away peacefully, but after very great suffering, on Tuesday, July 18th. The funeral was at the house on Thursday night, and was attended by many relatives and brethren and friends. The words used as a text were from John xi. 46: "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

Our dear sister will be greatly missed by the little band of brethren and sisters with whom she stood in church fellowship, although she had not been able to meet with them of late. She was held in high esteem and warm affection by them. She left four daughters, three of whom are members of the visible church, as is also one of the sons-in-law, brother Waterbury, who all feel their loss greatly.

She had fulfilled her appointed days, and is fallen asleep in Jesus. It is a good ending of a sorrowful life here, and we must rejoice for those who thus go from darkness to light and joy eternal; but we must feel sad and lonely as we see the dear kindred we have loved so, and with whom we have worshiped, so rapidly leaving our little companies here below. Yet the Lord is bringing in his redeemed, and will so bring them in, and try them and feed and nourish them here, and then take them in their turn to himself, until the last one shall be gathered to his heavenly fold.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 22, 1893.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Big Spring Primitive Baptist Association will hold her next annual session with the Blue Ridge Church, in Champaign Co., Ill., commencing on Friday before the third Sunday in September, 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continuing three days.

Brethren and sisters are heartily invited to visit us and behold our order. We would like to see several of our ministering brethren present. Those coming by way of the Peoria & Indianapolis Division of the Big Four R. R. will be met at Mahomet, Ill., and conveyed to the meeting and entertainment. Those coming by way of the Rantoul Branch of the Illinois Central R. R. will stop at Fisher, where they will be met and entertained. The association will be held about six miles north of Mahomet, and four miles south of Fisher.

P. S. BEALS, Clerk.

THE Lexington Old School or Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with the Lexington Church, at Lexington, Greene Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday (20th and 21st) in September, 1893, when we hope to meet not only our brethren and sisters of this association, but as many as can come from other associations that are in fellowship with us, especially ministering brethren.

As we are eleven miles from the railroad, we will say that we will meet any and all at Shandaken, on the Ulster & Delaware R. R., who will write requesting us to do so; and that any communications directed to me at Lexington, N. Y., will receive prompt attention. Also, that there is a daily stage, except Sunday, that connects with the morning trains from either way.

FLETCHER MACKEY, Clerk.

THE Maine Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Whitefield Church, Whitefield, Maine, September 8th, 9th and 10th, 1893.

Friends coming from the west by rail will leave Portland, Maine, at 1:20 p. m., reaching Gardiner about 3:30, where they will be met by friends and cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE Nodaway Association of Primitive Baptists will meet with the First Nodaway Church, four miles west of Savannah, Andrew Co., Mo., on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming from the south will come to Savannah, on the Maple Leaf R. R. Those from the north on the same road will come to Savannah. Those coming from the north on the Bluff R. R. will stop off at Amizona. Conveyance will be at each place. All are invited.

LUKE THORNTON, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Predestinarian Baptists will hold its next annual meeting with the Salem Church, in Marshall Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1893.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the south will stop at Rutland, and those from the north will stop at Wenona. Those coming by the Chicago & Alton R. R. will stop at Evans, and those by the Santa Fe R. R. will stop at Toluca.

A cordial invitation is extended to the household of faith to attend with us.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE Licking Old School Baptist Association, of Kentucky, will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., on Friday before the second Saturday in September (8th), 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those coming from the east will arrange to reach Maysville, Ky., at 4:25 p. m., on the C. & O. train (F. F. V.). Those coming from the west or Cincinnati will arrange to come over the same road, on the Huntington Accommodation, which reaches Maysville at 4:42 p. m., where they will be met and conveyed to May's Lick. Those coming from all points south will be met at Helena Station at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. All will come on Thursday. All friends invited.

F. LAYTHAM.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE Otter Creek Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will hold a yearly meeting at Oelwein, Iowa, commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October.

Oelwein is accessible from all points, being a railroad town.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited to attend.

SARAH A. GARRETT, Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Harford Church, in Harford Co., Md., commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth, especially ministering brethren.

Those coming by way of Baltimore will take train at North Avenue station on Friday before, at three o'clock p. m., for Long Green or Forest Hill. Those coming from the north will take train at Delta at 3:50 p. m. the same day for same stations.

NATHAN GRAFTON, Clerk.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I hand you a list of appointments for Elder P. D. Gold in Kentucky, to wit:

Little Flock—August 26th and 27th.
Salt River—28th.

As brother Money may appoint—29th and 30th.

Pleasureville—31st.

Mt. Pleasant Association, with the Sulphur Fork Church—September 1st, 2d and 3d.

Sardis—4th.

Elk Lick—5th.

Mt. Sterling—6th.

Mt. Carmel—7th.

Licking Association, at May's Lick—8th, 9th and 10th.

B. FARMER.

FARMDALE, Ky.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00

Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"
FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1893.

NO. 37.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

1 Samuel xvii.

THERE must be a gospel meaning in the battle between David and Goliath, and in every important feature of it, even to the peculiar weapon that David used. David we know is a type of Christ. Goliath then must represent the great enemy whom Christ came to overcome and destroy in order to deliver his people from his power. That enemy was death, which is the outcome and result of sin, and of the law, which is the strength of sin. As Goliath stood for all the hosts of the Philistines when he defied the armies of the living God, so death embodies in itself all the enemies of the Lord's people. Saul represents the law, with all the ordinances of divine service which belonged to the first covenant and that worldly sanctuary. He, as the king of Israel, given them in God's anger, and taken away in his wrath, was ever fighting against the Philistines, who seem to have been the most persistent and powerful and inveterate of all the enemies of Israel; but he never delivered Israel from them. The only two battles ever mentioned as going in favor of Israel under his reign were gained by Jonathan. So the law, with all its works and ceremonies, never could take away sin nor deliver from death. It was given to Israel to express the wrath of God against sin; and its rigid rule was well represented by the reign of Saul, who was, as foretold by Samuel, a stern and unmerciful ruler of Israel.

When David came into the camp the giant had presented himself before Israel forty days, and challenged them to fight him. The forty days confirms the view of him as representing the law of sin and death. Forty days the rain was falling, which represents the wrath of God against sin; forty days Moses was in the mount each time when he received the law "written and engraven in stones" for Israel, which "was a ministration of death;" forty days Elijah went in the wilderness without eating, as he fled from the wrath of Jezebel, till he came to the mount of God; and Jesus was forty days and nights in the wilderness without eating, tempted of the devil, thus showing that he was the one to whom these types pointed. Saul and all Israel fled before the champion of the Philistines every day; and yet every day they came back to the same position, and trusted in the same armor. So under the dominion of the law there is continual bondage, and constant fear and fleeing, on the part of the Lord's people under the law; and yet they constantly return to the fight upon the same ground, setting themselves in array for battle, only to flee again when the dreaded champion again appears and defies them. Yet when David came into the camp, and began to inquire about this uncircumcised Philistine, and express wonder that he should defy the armies of the living God, and showed a disposition to go and fight him, his brethren were angry, and derided him. Eliab was a man of soldierly appearance, and had been thought by Samuel to be suitable for a king. Although he had been running away from the giant every day for forty days, yet he seems to have been very proud of his position and character as a warrior, as are all legal characters; and he looked upon his youngest brother with anger that he should presume to talk of fighting the one that had made all the hosts of Israel flee. So when Jesus appeared among his own people he was looked upon with anger by them, and his declarations that he would deliver his people derided; and he was taunted with his lowly origin, as David was taunted by his brother as to his proper place with the "few sheep in the wilderness," instead of being there to see the battle. But this did not quench his zeal, nor hinder him from speaking. Jesus continued to assert that he would die and rise again.

David was already a servant of Saul, and had been engaged in his service, as Jesus was a servant of the law, to do its bidding. Saul was the appointed ruler of Israel, and David could not fight the enemy except by his command. When Saul looked upon him he seemed astonished at his boldness and confidence in saying, "Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine;" and Saul said, "Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." Then David told him about the lion and the bear, and how he slew them, and delivered the lamb out of their mouth. "David said moreover, The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the Lord be with thee." So it was with the full approval of the law that Jesus went into the battle to do "what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh."

But the law could not provide a suitable armor for Jesus in which to fight against sin and death. The armor of Saul was put by him upon David, but he put it off again before he met the giant. Jesus took the armor of the law upon him, but he put it off before he overcame the enemy. The sacrifices and offerings of the first covenant wrought no perfect work. They went on year by year, but they never could put away sin, and therefore they had no power against death. Jesus said, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not." "Then said I, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." He put off the legal armor when he died, and in that valley of death he gathered the weapon with which to destroy death.

The enemies of Israel were gathered at Shochoh, which belongeth to Judah, and encamped between Shochoh and Azekah, in Ephes-dammim. The literal signification of these names would strengthen the view of this as figuratively representing the stronghold of sin and death, in the earthy tabernacles of the Lord's people. David and Goliath met in a valley between the mountains, where the two opposing armies were arrayed for battle. It was likely the valley of Elah, one of whose meanings is said to be "curse." Jesus met death in the valley of death; and his own death for his people's sins was the weapon with which he overcame that great adversary.

David was of small stature, a stripling, while the giant was of terrible size and strength, and thoroughly armed. David could not have fought him with a sword or a spear, as though they had been of equal size and strength. He must use a shepherd's weapon, a sling and stone. But that stone with four others he gathered carefully on his way to the giant, out of the valley, as the margin reads; and these stones are in his scrip when he reaches Goliath. From the time that David started and ran on to meet Goliath he must have been regarded by all the hosts of Israel as certainly going to his death. Who could have seen any prospect of his returning alive from such an unequal encounter? How well then he thus presents the death of Christ in a figure. How could that death be more suitably represented by one who must not really die, because he must be alive to complete the type by actually killing the giant? David met the giant, and was delivered out of his hands by the Lord. Jesus met death, and was delivered from death by the Lord. "He was saved from death, in that he feared." Death took hold of him, but had to deliver up his prey again, and was himself destroyed. Well might the women of Israel sing, "David hath slain his tens of thousands;" for in slaying the champion he devoted the whole army of the Philistines to destruction. By his death Jesus overcame every enemy of his people forever.

And how could the death of death at the hands of Jesus by his own death have been more wonderfully represented by the work of a man who must still live than by the manner in which David fought the giant? An Israelite upon whom sin was found must be stoned with stones till he was dead. Achan is a notable example of this. He was stoned to death in the valley of Achor, or the valley of trouble. The sins of all his people were laid upon Jesus, and the law found them there. Then he must be stoned to death by all Israel. He was not actually stoned to death, yet he is the antitype of those who were legally put to death in that manner.

But why did David gather five stones? Was it so that if one missed he would have a second to throw? Not by any means. The same faith which made him say to Eliab, "What have I now done? Is there not a cause?" assured him now that he would not miss the giant's forehead with the first stone. But one stone would not represent a legal death of a transgressor under the law. One man alone could not legally kill another with a stone; but five would give a legal character to the representation of a death inflicted in this manner. I do not know why the number five was taken to represent the execution of a legal sentence here; nor do I know why the rich man when in hell spoke to Abraham of only five brothers, when all the legal characters throughout the world and through all time were meant.

My suggestion, then, is that the five stones gathered by David in the valley and put into his scrip represent the death of Jesus, after having put off the armor of a law righteousness, and having become a curse for his people, making himself of no reputation by taking the sins of his people upon him; and that one stone sent with the sling represents the effect of that death upon death, who fell before Jesus, as the giant fell before David when that stone from his unerring sling struck him in the forehead. In Jesus' death the law was satisfied, and so the strength of sin was taken away, and sin came to an end; and as there can be no death where there is no sin, death was abolished by that wonderful death of Jesus. Goliath's sword was a good one: David said afterward that there was none like it. So death had a sword that was of the best kind, made according to the holy law of God; but as soon as the stone that represents Jesus' death strikes him down, his sword is his no longer. David has the right to it now, as the lawful victor, and uses it to cut off the giant's head. Jesus now holds that "sore and great and strong sword" of death; and in his hand it is effectual to take the head or dominion from death, so that death hath no more dominion over him or his people. The devil has the power of death, as its head; and Jesus pierced Leviathan with that terrible sword wrested from the hand of death, and with it destroyed "him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and delivered them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage."—Isa. xxvii. 1.

Since then Israel, as the spiritual people of God, have been favored to pursue their enemies, and to shout in victory. Often one finds himself in the valley alone, with the terrible giant of death apparently ready to destroy him. O what an unequal contest this seems! How the poor soul trembles and shrinks, and cries out for fear! But the dear Savior, who met and overcame that enemy for us, is ever near in such a great and terrible day; and suddenly the poor, trembling soul, who cannot fly, who cannot and would not turn back, finds in his hand the wonderful sling of David, the faith of the Son of God, with a stone ready prepared; and at once the courage of that holy faith fills all his soul, as the powerful word of truth strikes full in the forehead of the great enemy, and he falls before us. Five loaves fed five thousand; and the five smooth stones in the shepherd's bag will be enough for the use of all the people of God. One will never be wanted by any one who enters that valley to meet that dread enemy at any time during their warfare here in time, nor at the close of their mortal pilgrimage. At the time of extremity the poor soul, who is so sorely beset by fear and doubt as he enters upon so unequal a contest, will find the staff of God that was David's support in his hand, and the sling and the stone with which he overcame his enemy, and will feel the mysterious power of a conqueror, as death itself yields up into his hand the mighty sword with which it was itself long ago bereft of all power, and will join the innumerable company who in this wonderful way are taught to sing, "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 11, 1893.

PROVENCAL, La.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I was born in Holmes County, Mississippi, January 25th, 1853. When I was small my parents moved to Jackson Parish, Louisiana, where I was raised to womanhood. My maiden name was McBride. My parents were Primitive Baptists, but they would arrange for us children to go to hear all denominations preach. I believe my father and mother were christians. I was a great lover of dancing, but when the protracted meetings came round I would get very good and would be a mourner all the time; but when I would think about joining the church, I knew when the party season came on I would want to dance. My mother told me when a person experienced a work of grace they would not have any love for such things, and they were not fit to be members until they had such an experience. I thought a person could bring that change about by doing good. I thought that I only lacked one thing, and that was to stop dancing, and when I married I would stop that and would be good enough to join the church. I thought people got very good before the Lord would do anything for them, and then he would pardon their sins, and they would get better and better as they grew older. I knew my father and mother did not talk like they thought they were very good. In 1870, the 15th of September, I was married to Mr. L. T. Hawthorne. My husband was a member of the Missionary Baptists when we were married, and thought I would join them, but I did not. In 1876 my husband joined the Primitive Baptists. I was very glad he did, because my people belonged to that church. I thought they must be right, but could not understand that experience of grace they all told, for it seemed to me they told how bad they felt, and what great sinners they felt to be. I liked to go to their meetings, for it seemed they loved each other so much. In the fall of 1879 we moved to Natchitoches Parish, La. There were no Old Baptists there, and my husband would go to his church; but it was seventy miles from where we lived, and he could not go very often. He tried several times to get some of the preaching brethren to come, but it seemed as if there was something in the way. When the Farmers' Union was organized my husband joined them, and was excluded from the church. It troubled me to think he had left the church he had loved so well.

In September, 1888, my husband and myself went to meeting together. He did not tell me he was going to join, and I did not know that I would either; but when the door of the church was opened, to my great surprise my husband went with several others, and I too joined at the same time. I do not know why I did, for I did not want to, and no one told me to. My husband talked to the church a little, and they received him. I was to be baptized, but I put it off until the next meeting, while the truth of it was that I did not want to be baptized at all, and had often said in my mind I never would be a Missionary. The time of the next meeting I had the measles, and had a good excuse; and the longer I waited, the farther I seemed from being baptized. I did not know what to do. I thought I would do just as my husband said, as he knew I was in trouble. So the next meeting, it being November, and cold, he told me he was afraid to have me go into the water; and that just suited me, for I knew I had no right to be baptized. I cannot tell how much trouble I was in. My husband saw I was in trouble, and told me if I did not want to be baptized not to go. So I was never baptized by the Missionaries. Although my husband stayed with them about twenty-two months, he would contend for the Old Baptist doctrine, so there was war and fighting between him and his brethren all the time he was with them. He did not find a home with them, so he left them in 1891. My troubles increased. I did not know what ailed me, but thought perhaps it was because I was not very well. But one thing I did know, and that was that I was not as usual, and it seemed that all I could think or say was, "Lord, have mercy on me." On September 23d, my husband fell and broke both of his arms; and then I thought that all my previous troubles were but indications of my husband becoming a cripple. But no, my trouble grew worse and worse, until it seemed that even the day was dark to me. November 28th, 1889, was the darkest day I ever saw; everything looked black to me. I never shall forget it. I was just able to go to the cook-room and cook a little. I had no appetite to eat myself. In the evening, while in there cooking supper, I had a wonderful vision which caused me to think that I was going to die, and my very breathings were, "Lord, have mercy on me." As soon as I could I went into another room and fell on my knees on the floor, and if ever I tried to pray I did then. I felt that I was going to die; but my prayer was that I might live to raise my children. I felt willing to bear anything if only I might live. My husband was not at home, but I wished for him to come, that I might tell him what I had seen; but when he came I was not able to tell him a word of my vision. We ate supper and went to our room to retire for the night. I was afraid to go to bed and have the light put out, as I thought I would die before morning. After we had retired, and the light had been extinguished, and my husband had gone to sleep, I had another vision of my Savior on the cross. I sometimes hope that I did die that night, but not in the way that I thought I would. I did not sleep any that night. The next morning dawned as beautiful as I ever saw, and it appeared to me that everything was happy and praising the Lord. It seemed as if I loved everybody and everything. I told my husband that I was going to get well, and that I was hungry. He sent for grandmother Richey, and when she came it seemed that she was the happiest person I ever saw. I thought my troubles were all over; but how soon doubts began to rise. At 12 o'clock my baby was taken very sick, and I then thought that all I had passed through were but tokens that he was to be taken from me. While we were working with the baby something seemed to say to me, "You said you were willing to bear anything if only you might live." I felt to say from my heart, "Not my will, but thine be done." I was made to rejoice, and if it had been the Lord's will to have taken my baby from me then I do not think I could have shed a tear. Soon my mind was exercised on the subject of baptism. Something seemed to tell me that I must be baptized. I picked up the Testament, that book that had seemed so dark to me before, and it looked beautiful and plain to me now. It seemed that every promise was for me. Then I began to think where I could go to be baptized. I would not go to the Missionaries, and I did not know of a Primitive Baptist in the Parish. My husband believed the Primitive Baptists were the church of God, but he would not talk to me. It was no comfort for me to talk to him, and I had no one else to talk to; for when I would talk with the Missionary sister it seemed that I was speaking in an unknown tongue to her, for she did not understand my speech. I felt that if I could only see some Old Baptists and talk with them they could tell what ailed me. I could not talk to my husband on the subject, for he would not talk to me. I could not understand his conduct, for I would hear how he would talk to others. But I told him I would remain just as I was; that I never would join any church if I could not join the Primitive Baptists. In March, 1891, he withdrew from the Missionaries. There was no thought then of there being an Old Baptist church in this country. Sometime during that year a confusion arose among the Missionaries regarding a preacher and church order, which led some of their members to inquire of my husband regarding the order of the Old Baptists. At about the same time my husband was conducting a singing-school at a place about eight miles from where we lived, and he found there were some Old Baptists there. When he came home and told of this people I rejoiced; for I had been praying for a church; and when there was no one at home but myself I would spend most of the time reading and crying. I wanted to do something to get a church, but I found it was a weak arm to trust in. I remember one day I was troubled; I had been studying how to get help. I picked up my Bible, and when I opened it I read, "Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." I closed the book. I could see and realize that the Lord worked all things after the counsel of his own will, and that the Lord would work, and none could hinder, and he did not need my help. The church did not trouble me then, for I was satisfied if it was the Lord's will we would have one. Now my husband would talk to me, and he told me that the reason that he would not talk to me before was because he wanted to try my faith. Soon after we went to visit those Old Baptists where my husband had taught singing-school; and although we were not acquainted with any of them before, we enjoyed ourselves very much. During the visit we talked over the best way of getting some preacher to come and visit us, and when we returned home my husband wrote to my father and to the church, and let our wants be known. It was not long until we received an answer. They said they were willing to do all they could. My husband sent to the church of which he had formerly been a member, and was restored to their fellowship. At the June conference it was arranged to hold the next meeting with us, on the Saturday and third Sunday in July. We sent word to our friends, and they rejoiced with us at the good news. On Thursday before the third Sunday in July, 1891, Elder E. R. Roberson, with three other members of the same church with my husband, came to our place. So they had five members here; and we could not tell how many would join, but thought some would. On Friday morning Elder Roberson, my husband and the other brethren went to the place where we were going to hold our meeting, and though they were not expecting us until the next day they assembled together and had preaching. I could not go until Saturday. When we met, and after preaching by Elder Roberson, the door of the church was opened, and seven came forward, myself among the rest, and told what we hoped the Lord had done for us, and were received for baptism. It was no trouble for me to go into the water this time; I did not want to put it off. On Saturday evening we met at one of the neighbor's house and had preaching. On Sunday we met at the water, and Elder Roberson baptized us. Then we met at the house, and he preached to a large congregation, after which the meeting closed. My father and his companions stopped over night with us on their return home. Brother John Forshee, my husband and myself attended the district meeting of our church in August. There we met many precious brethren and sisters, and heard much good preaching which we enjoyed very much. We called for our letters, and on the Saturday before the first Sunday in October, 1891, met a presbytery composed of Elder Craft and brother Hall, from Vernon Parish, Elder White, from Bienville Parish, and deacon Finby, from Oak Grove Church, this parish, and were constituted a church. My husband went with a petitionary letter from our church to the Louisiana Primitive Baptist Association, and was received into that body in October, 1891. We called Elder J. J. White to preach for us; and although he lives about seventy miles from us, he comes as often as he can. Six have been added to our church since we were constituted. We now have fourteen members.

If this is ever put in print, and any one gets one word of comfort from it, give God the praise. I feel to be one of the most ignorant of God's children, if one at all. I feel to say that if I am saved it is by grace, and grace alone, and not because of any good that I have done.

I will close, as it seems that my letter is about as imperfect as the writer. I never would have written but that I have felt impressed for some time to do so.

FANNY HAWTHORNE.

CANADA, Ky., April 18, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Being requested by some of the brethren in Christ, I will try to write my experience, or what I hope the Lord has done for me. It was ten years ago, yet I hope I never shall forget the time when, as I believe, my blessed Jesus spoke peace to my soul. I feel so little in the sight of God, and so sinful, that it seems quite a task for me to attempt to write anything about the work of the blessed Savior. Paul prayed that the thorn might be removed out of his flesh. The answer of the Lord was, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

I was nursed by a Methodist mother. My father did not belong to any church. When I was a child I tried to obey my parents. The passage of Scripture would often come to my mind, "Children, obey your parents." I thought if I obeyed what the Bible taught the Lord would save me. I always had a desire to be a christian, and I began to try to pray when I was very young; but I grew worse all the time. I went on in this way for several years, until at last I gave up all hope, and thought I should be plunged in that awful lake prepared for the devil and his angels. There were monthly meetings held about a mile from where I lived, and I went to the meeting on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in August, 1881. I became so deeply interested that I thought I could not leave the place. At last I went to my parents and told them I wanted a meeting at our own home. They consented, and they made an appointment for the fourth Saturday and Sunday in September. I wandered about in the lonesome grove, seeking help from the blessed Lord. When the time came for preaching at my father's house it was a beautiful Saturday morning. The friends and relatives gathered from miles around, and all the brethren and sisters seemed to rejoice in the God of their salvation. On Sunday morning there was a large assembly, and I, a poor, wretched sinner, was weighed down with sin. These words of Scripture came to my mind, "The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot, even unto the head, there is no soundness in it; but wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores."—Isa. i. 5, 6. While they were preaching about the goodness of the Lord, and of his wonderful mercies toward the children of men, a light shone around me that was above the radiance of the natural sun. I was so rejoiced that it seemed as though I could almost fly to the arms of my blessed Jesus. I remember speaking to the brethren and saying, "Behold, what a glorious light." When the invitation was given to those who felt like talking to the church, I tried to relate what I believed the Lord had done for me. I was received by the loving brethren and sisters into the church. But before I was baptized doubts and fears came upon me, and I was made to think that the probability was that I was a poor, deceived being, and that the Lord had not had anything to do with me. But when it pleased the Lord to bless me with the presence of the Holy Spirit I could witness with David of old, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."—Psa. cxxvi. 3. I was baptized on the fourth Sunday in October, 1881, by Elder J. W. Smith. I then thought all my troubles were ended; for I could see by the eye of faith my blessed Savior upon the cross bleeding for poor me.

Some time after I was baptized I had a dream which gave me great comfort. I dreamed there was a great destroyer in the land, and there was a great rock, which was my only refuge. The rock was square, and of great height, and all who got upon that rock were saved. I went to the rock, and it looked impossible for any natural man to climb it. O how amazing was the sight! When I reached the rock I was at no loss, but went straight up to its smooth surface. When I reached the top of the rock I met some of my precious brethren whom I knew. Then I awoke from my sleep, and was constrained to glorify God, who is worthy of all praise and adoration.

Dear brethren, I do not feel that it was because of anything good that I had done which caused the Lord to send his comforting Spirit into my heart. The Lord says, "Therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me."—Isa. lxiii. 5. I believe it was the alone work of the all-wise God that wrought this work in me. "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; for thou also hast wrought all our works in us."—Isa. xxvi. 12. I understand that all God's children are drawn by the power of God. We hear him saying, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee."—Jer. xxxi. 3. If I were going to build a house I certainly would make my own selection of the timber, and build accordingly. I believe that unless God does choose the material, and prepare the same for his kingdom, the work is all in vain; for we are informed in the Scriptures, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."—Psa. cxxvii. 1. It is not to make you sons, "but because ye are sons, God has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father."—Gal. iv. 6. I understand that the natural child has to be born before it can cry naturally. Just so it is with God's children; they have to be born of the Spirit before they can cry spiritually; and that life which they receive is hid with Christ in God. "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."—Col. iii. 3, 4. I understand this address was alone to the church; and the life referred to is that spiritual life which he alone gives to his redeemed family, whom he has purchased with his own blood. I believe the Lord alone prepares the hearts of his children, and imparts life to whom he will. There are some who claim that all the Adamic family can obtain this life if they will work for it. I do not understand that this life is purchased by the sinner. When the Lord made Adam he was a lifeless being until the Lord breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; then man became a living soul. So the poor sinner to-day receives spiritual life in the same manner; it is alone the work of God. The wise man Solomon says, "The preparations of the heart in man and the answer of the tongue is from the Lord."—Prov. xvi. 1. If God prepares the heart, and gives the answer, how can man claim any part of the work? The works of the flesh is sin. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second Adam is the Lord from heaven, a quickening Spirit. The Lord says by the prophet Ezekiel,

(Continued on page 293.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 13, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

INFIDEL BAPTIST DOCTRINE.

OUR attention has been called to an article in the New York Examiner, which claims to be "By many thousands the most widely circulated Baptist newspaper in the world," which fully equals in heaven-daring blasphemy the most extravagant assumptions which have ever emanated from avowed infidels. Although it is not our custom to comment upon the extravagant ravings of those who have rejected the inspired rule of the Scriptures, it may be well to call upon those who love the truth of the gospel to consider the boldly avowed pretension of this eminent New School Baptist authority, and see whether it is surpassed by the most glaring assumption of Roman Catholic or Pagan opposers of the doctrine of the gospel of Christ. It must be observed that this is not the irresponsible utterance of an excited fanatic; it is paraded in the columns of the most popular organ of the Missionary Baptists as the wonderful production of one of their most highly esteemed teachers. The caption is as follows: "HOW CHRISTIANS MAY HELP CHRIST. By Rev. O. P. Eaches, D. D."

Taking the figure of the Vine and the branches, as spoken by Jesus to his apostles, and applying the branches as representing the members of the churches in general, and reasoning from the truth that where the Spirit of Christ dwells it will be manifest in the fruit borne by the branch, the writer deduces the conclusion that it is only as the disciples will allow him to use them as branches, that the Lord Jesus has power to save those sinners for whom he shed his blood. While we do not feel justified in imposing upon our readers the whole of this effusion, it may be well to quote some portions in which the denial of divine power is most emphatically concentrated. The writer says, "The aim of the saved life is not peace, or joy, or rest, or happiness, or satisfactory emotion, but fruit. Usefulness is commensurate with the Christian life. Jesus says of the Father (Luke vi. 35), He is kind. The word rendered kind is defined by Liddell and Scott to mean useful. Nothing brings so much of satisfaction to the heart of God as the outgoings of his own helpfulness to others."

If there are any of the Lord's afflicted and poor people among the readers of this very pretentious embodiment of Fullerite Baptist doctrine, how must their hearts be crushed by this Egyptian message of heavy bondage! Surely the gracious Redeemer intimated nothing of this perpetual servitude when he proclaimed that gospel which says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Where in the record of his own teaching can be found anything to authorize the thought that he has need of the assistance of mortals for the accomplishment of his sovereign will? There is no revelation from our God to show that he derives more satisfaction from the execution of his will in one particular than in another. That must be a very advanced college from which the "Reverend Doctor" learned to discriminate between the emotions of "the heart of God." If there is one thing more satisfactory than another, then there must be less satisfaction in other things than in that thing. But there can be no less than infinite satisfaction in any action of that God who says, "Remember this, and show yourselves men; bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors. Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure; calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country; yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it."—Isa. xli. 8-11. Perhaps the institution from which the "Rev. D. D." received his title does not recognize the authority of the book from which we quote; but those who look for salvation from their sins through the blood of Jesus Christ, must confess that they have no hope but in the omnipotence of that God who speaks in truth and righteousness in the inspired language quoted. The only sure foundation for the confidence of the subjects of electing love is in the ability of God to fulfill his gracious will in the accomplishment of his own purpose. If all the opposition of earth and hell can prevent the salvation of any sinner, then there is no hope for those who must say with Paul, "I am chief of sinners." According to this "Rev. D. D.," the Lord Jesus was mistaken in promising rest to the weary, since he was calling for able bodied laborers to help him do the work which he claimed to have come to finish, and which he declared with his dying breath that he had finished. Surely that work which overtasked omnipotence, as claimed by this writer, could not be the rest which is given to those whom Jesus calls unto himself. It must be another Jesus to whom the writer refers as calling for the aid of mortals in bringing to pass the good pleasure of his will. In the salvation of his people from their sins there is no help of creatures either needed or called for by their mighty Redeemer.

The writer describes the branches as representing the disciples of Christ, while Jesus is himself the Vine. Then he says, "The branch can do nothing without the vine. The vine can do nothing without the branch. Jesus Christ is the head of the church, is the only source of salvation, is the intercessor with God, is a guiding providence among men, is the strong Son of God. But whatever Jesus does, he does in and through his disciples. When Cornelius was saved, it was not Jesus alone, but Jesus plus Peter. When the inquiring treasurer was brought into the light, it was not Jesus alone, but Jesus plus Philip. When Saul was brought into an assured hope it was not Jesus alone, but Jesus plus Ananias. Back of all conversion is Jesus; but the clusters of fruit always hang on the human branches. Jesus Christ does not get to men except through men."

If the authority of the Scriptures were admitted as reliable testimony on the subject, it might be asked, Through what men did God speak to Abel, to Abraham, and to Moses? Or, if it is claimed that he has not the power to speak now as in those early days, it may be pertinent to inquire by what men he spoke to John and Peter and James. The Holy Ghost did not tell Ananias that it rested with him to complete the conversion of Saul. He was converted from a persecuting Pharisee to a praying Paul when the Lord sent Ananias to put his hand on him, not that he might be "brought into an assured hope," but that he might receive his sight. So thoroughly was Saul converted before Ananias was sent to him that he was praying, instead of breathing slaughter. In the case of the Ethiopian treasurer it is not recorded that Philip preached unto him that he was himself an essential power in bringing that already earnestly seeking sinner to the life by which he was made to ask of an humble traveler for instruction in regard to the truth which he read. He preached unto him only Jesus. Cornelius was a sinner whom God had cleansed before Peter had even seen him. It was as wonderful to Peter that God had also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life, as it would be to this "Rev. D. D." if that grace should be shown him by which he should see that "Salvation is of the Lord." In that case he would never again be found teaching that either Peter, Philip, Ananias, or any other created being, is rendering assistance to that Savior of whom it is written, "I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me." "And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold; therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me, and my fury it upheld me."—Isa. lxiii. 3, 5. The Holy Ghost moved Peter to declare of this Jesus, "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts iv. 11, 12. In perfect accord with this apostolic teaching, the song of the redeemed as heard by John ascribes salvation to the Lamb of God alone, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. v. 9, 10. What harsh discord would disturb this heavenly song if it were mingled with ascriptions of praise to the works of men as the channel through which the blood of the Lamb was made effectual in the salvation of the sinners for whom it was shed! It does really seem that it would be an advantage to introduce the sacred Scriptures as a book of occasional reference in the course of instruction in those institutions which confer honorary degrees upon their graduates. Then possibly they might avoid direct contradiction at least of the letter of inspired truth in their utterances.

But this article consistently goes on with clearer assertion of the dependence of the Lord upon the aid of men. In another sentence we are told, "Jesus Christ wants China and Japan; he gets them when his people permit him to work through them. He desires that his kingdom of righteousness may dwell on the earth; he is helped or hindered by his disciples. In any given community a church by discord and unholy living, by inaction and frozenness, may tie the hands of Christ so that he can do nothing. In any community a hundred holy men and women, consecrated in life, full of wisdom and earnestness, may do almost anything for him."

There can be no difficulty in determining whether this declaration ascribes controlling power to Christ or to "holy men and women." With his hands tied it is evident that the Christ of this "Rev. D. D." is as helpless as any heathen idol; but the omnipotent sinners having united in a band of one hundred, "may do almost anything for him." Of course this mighty combination of men and women might be just as effective in opposition to this helpless Christ. Should he not be very grateful to them for their kind assistance in gratifying his desires? Surely none who know God as the Spirit of truth reveals him, can be deceived by so open a contradiction of the whole record which is given by inspiration. Where is the truth of that God who has said to our Redeemer, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom?" With all power in his possession, in heaven and in earth, where can the church get their power to "tie the hands of Christ," so that the will of God is defeated? Can one who ever did know the power of God be so blinded as to receive such glaring blasphemy? Incredible as it seems, there are doubtless some of the subjects of saving grace who know Jesus as their Savior, yet who remain identified with that people who hold the false doctrine embodied in this God-dishonoring tirade. It would be well for such to give heed to the commandment of the Lord, saying to them, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."—Rev. xviii. 4. Not even the boldest infidels have ever uttered more blasphemous falsehoods in denial of the perfection of our God, than this professed teacher of Missionism has embodied in this article.

After a passing tribute to the modern leaders of carnal religion, in which he says, "Carey begot the foreign mission idea," and "Raikes begot the Sunday school idea," he tells how "Not alone these discoverers help the ascended Savior, but every one who lives in a patient, gentle, winning, Christlike way, who makes life easier for others, who stands a helper of the helpless classes. How large this makes the humblest Christian life! He may say, in all trueness and honesty, "I am helping the Lord to get hold of the world. I am trying to widen his kingdom. I am planning to make righteousness rule in the world among men." "Is there any method by which Jesus can reconstruct society, purify all the influences in the world, get hold of the organized agencies among men, except through the help rendered by christian men and women? The supreme test of the christian life, therefore, is usefulness and service. It has been finely said, Jesus Christ alone can save men, but he cannot save them alone. Jesus Christ needs help; he cannot get along without it."

If this mookery of God had been uttered by an avowed atheist its horrible blasphemy would have startled every reader who had even natural regard for the truth of the Bible. But here it is published as the most approved declaration of New School Baptist Christianity. "The humblest christian life" can do for Jesus Christ what "he cannot get along without." Not a word of the dependence of sinners upon the power of Christ for salvation; only the utter helplessness of Christ even to secure possession of the world which was made by him, unless "his people permit him to work through them." It is hardly necessary to lament the darkness of China and Japan, and waste sympathy upon the benighted heathen of Africa, while professed christians in our own land accept such teachings concerning the God whom they claim to worship. There is no more idolatry in worshiping an idol of gold or of wood, than in ascribing divine honors to a Jesus who can do nothing without the help of dying worms. Surely no conscious sinner can trust for salvation in such a Jesus as can do nothing without the consent of mortals. Rather would we trust in that Jesus who saves to the uttermost all who come unto God by him.—Heb. vii. 25. He says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." And, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day."—John vi. 37, 44. This includes all the election of grace. Our Jesus has saved them from their sins, and they are kept by the power of God unto salvation; and that power is sufficient without the aid of men or angels.

Very appropriately the "Rev. D. D." ascribes glory to the names of "Judson, of Mackay, of Paton, of the men and women in the college settlements, of Moody." The glory which he would wrest from the Lord Jesus, he confers upon these gods of modern will-worshippers. Then in conclusion he cites from the revised version of 2 Peter iii. 12, in support of the claim that the coming of the day of God may be hastened by the "holy living of the people of God." While there is nothing in this effusion but what has been implied in all the system of Arminianism, and in the foundation of modern Missionism, it has not commonly been so unblushingly stated by those who are held as authority by the worldly order of professed Baptists. Let those who hope in the grace of an omnipotent Savior, who may be numbered among the New School Baptists, solemnly consider whether the Savior in whom they trust is the helpless idol described by this teacher of popular Baptists. If they can hope in such a dependent Jesus as he describes, they should remain where they are; but if they can hope only in that Jesus in whom dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, then they should hasten to leave the company where his name is reproached by such blasphemy as is embodied in this article, which bears the approval of their "Most Widely Circulated Baptist Newspaper."

Craving the forbearance of our patrons for the space devoted to the antichristian effusion from which we have quoted, we leave the subject to the reflection of those who may be unaware of the dreadful degree of error in which modern Fullerism has engulfed the popular order of Baptists. May the grace of God deliver all his chosen people from the deceitful allurements of this system of falsehood, and enable them to see its hideous blasphemy against the sovereignty of our Savior!

(Continued from page 291.)

"And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them."—Ezek. xxxvi. 27. The language of the prophet shows that our works are all wrought in us. John says, "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."—John i. 13. Paul says, "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins."—Eph. ii. 1. "But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared. Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior."—Titus iii. 4-6.

My dear brethren, this is the first time I ever tried to write of the goodness of God. If after you have examined it you find anything worthy of printing, you may give it a place in the SIGNS; and if not cast it aside. Pray for me, that I may be reconciled to the will of my Savior.

Your brother in hope of heaven,
T. J. BEVINS.

WOODSTOCK, Mich., April 8, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—ESTEEMED BRETHREN:—Another year has run its round, with its many cares, trials, sorrows, afflictions and tribulations, and I am still a cumberer of the ground that the great Creator of all things cursed for man's sake. We all know that the great cause was sin. Man sinned. "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." The happy pair were soon hiding, in the cool of the day. But their offended God knew all. O how soon came an excuse. "The Lord called unto Adam, and said, Where art thou?" "And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat." "And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." They were in a very lamentable condition. No wonder they wanted to be screened from the all-seeing eye. They who had fallen so low soon commenced to fix up a garment which was very flimsy indeed. It would not do. No, a fig leaf apron cannot screen one from the eye that neither slumbers nor sleeps. How many are trying to sew fig leaves for aprons at this advanced age. Ah, the poor writer of this knows full well that no such garment can stand the discerning eye of him that spake, and there was light. How well it is remembered when in great anguish a cry went up, in hopeless despair, to be clothed with his righteousness, after all hope had been given up of ever fixing the varied forms and garments. After trying all the brittle fig leaf aprons, I hope the dear and merciful Redeemer clothed me, even me, with his blessed robe, and cast it all around. What a glorious clothing? We read, "The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needlework. The virgins, her companions that follow her, shall be brought unto thee. With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought; they shall enter into the King's palace." Truly the poor, tried ones who have been brought to know and feel their utter nothingness and their destitute condition, are the only ones who are made to rejoice in the blessed garment that Jesus, the kind and compassionate Master, clothes them with. Only when he gives them to see the glorious dress can they rejoice in the finished work on the terrible hill Calvary, and the wondrous morning when he arose a mighty, victorious King. No wonder Pilate should say, when the chief priests of the Jews said to him, "Write not, The king of the Jews; but that he said, I am king of the Jews," "What I have written I have written." Truly he was King of kings and Lord of lords; and O how this poor stammerer would like to extol his most glorious name and his powerful arm; but how can a poor, sinful one like me do so? Sometimes I feel to cry with bitterness of soul to him who is so lofty, and I so low down in in the rubbish of sin and pollution. My cry is, If thou wilt thou canst remove all the dross, and wash and make me clean. But ah, fear often takes hold of me, and my cry, I fear, rises not to the great white throne. Yet a glorious hope possesses my poor being, and fills my soul with gladness, that Jesus, the great Captain, knows my very heart, and the great conflict with the flesh, and the great forces of the king of darkness against the truth, and all my sore trials in regard to his glorious gospel. His promise is sure, and no power can ever overrule his sovereign will and power to rule. How glad we should be, if our name is cast out as evil, that he knows all the same; for he was cruelly condemned, and suffered, and his name was a reproach, so that even his own dear disciples dared not own they ever knew him; for one even cursed and swore; but his speech betrayed him. The loving, compassionate Jesus looked on him, and he went out and wept bitterly. O how many have been the compassionate looks upon me, I trust; and my weeping, I do hope, has been like that of poor Peter. He did not realize the weakness of the flesh when his divine Lord and Master was talking with him.

In conclusion I will say, I know full well my inability to write to the edification of the dear and tried readers of our dear family paper; but one dear, old, tried one has often asked me to write. Also I want to let the dear correspondents and editors know that I ever hope to remain a reader and subscriber, so long as I live and remain the same, and the SIGNS remains the same good paper it ever has been, which I am quite sure will ever be.

Yours in hope,

M. P. LEWIS.

MEADOWVILLE, W. Va., May 7, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I seat myself this beautiful Sunday morning to write some of my travels from my childhood to the present time, hoping the Lord may direct my pen.

I was born in Tucker County, West Virginia, on May 5th, 1861. When quite young my father died and left my mother with six small children. She was not able to keep us together, so we were scattered to do for ourselves. I went from place to place, and it seemed that I had no certain place to lay my head. When I was about eleven years old I went to live with my grandfather, who was an Old School Baptist. I remained with him until he died, when again I was left without a home. I would often look at children who had living parents to care for them, and would think, O! if I only had some one to care for me.

From my earliest recollection I had serious thoughts about death and judgment, and often dreamed of the end of the world, and often awakened very much frightened. When I was about fifteen years old I had a severe spell of sickness, which brought me, as I thought, very near the grave. But for some purpose the Lord spared me. I would often think, What if I had died? What would have become of me? for I felt I was not fit to die. A burden seemed hanging over me that I could not get rid of. I could not enjoy myself as I once had. I would go into young company and try to be cheerful; but while others would be enjoying themselves I could hardly keep from crying out in despair. Some time after this I married; yet it seemed that I had no friend on earth nor in heaven. My health was bad, and it seemed to me that I could not live much longer. The distress I was in no tongue nor pen can tell. I walked out one day across a little run by our house wondering what was the matter with me, when these words came to my mind,

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

My trouble partially left me, as I then hoped, never to return; but after some time it returned worse than ever. It seemed that I was one of the most distressed beings that ever had lived. I thought I was going crazy. My health was yet bad, and it seemed that my time must be short. I would look at my husband and little children, and it seemed that my heart would break. I would look at the sun when it was setting, never expecting to see another day. I would beg the Lord to have mercy on me, yet it seemed that my prayers did me no good. I would have exchanged places with the creeping things of the earth; for I thought they had no soul to be punished, while I had. I gave up all hope, thinking I was in the hands of a just God, and he could do as he pleased with me. One of the Old Baptist ministers came to see me, and his talk seemed to give me some little hope, as I found there had been others troubled as I was. It seemed that my trouble mostly left me, and that I had a greater love for the Old Baptists than ever before. I was wondering why it was so, when these words came to my mind, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." My burden mostly left me, and I wanted to be baptized; but I felt too unworthy to join the church, so I put it off for more than a year. But these words would be in my mind, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." While at meeting one day I thought I would leave the house and go home, when these words came to my mind, "Whosoever shall be ashamed to confess me before men, of him will I be ashamed before my Father." I was received and baptized. I then thought my troubles were over, and all my sorrow, and that joy, peace and pleasure would be my lot alone. But I find many troubles and trials to contend with. My health has been bad, and I have not got to meeting very often, which has been a great trouble to me. The word says, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." I see many lonesome days, and can say with the poet,

"Like one alone I seem to be,
O is there anyone like me?"

ELIZABETH PHILLIPS.

PALESTINE, Texas, August, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I am impressed to-day, from some cause unknown to myself, to write you what I hope are the Lord's dealings with me. I want to say to God's dear children that Jesus is all my hope, for within myself I can do nothing.

For several years I lived in the so-called Methodist Church; and, like Paul, I verily believed I was doing God service, until about one year ago, when I hope the good Lord began to show me the true church. He said to Peter, "Upon this rock I will build my church," &c. My husband being an Old Baptist, the brethren would often be with him, and they would talk of the goodness and mercy of God. Something would say to me, "You are in the wrong place." I would get up and go off by myself, and in my weakness would try to pray to the good Lord that if I were wrong he would show me the true church; and, bless his holy name, I believe he did. I cannot tell you what were my feelings at times, as my dear mother was in the Methodist church, and I thought I could not forsake her; still I loved the Old Baptists, and felt, as did Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." Yet I did not want them to know that I loved them, and the thought of leaving my dear mother was more than I could bear. O how hard it was, until the blessed Jesus showed me that I did not have to give her up naturally; for this Scripture would come to me, "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." I told some of the brethren and sisters of my feelings. I thought, O if I were only good enough to be numbered with them; for they all seemed so much better than I was. Still I had a desire to be numbered with them. I can say of a truth that the things I once hated I now love; for I did once hate the Old Baptist doctrine, and now I love it for the truth's sake. When I had the desire to join them I told my husband they would not receive me, for I could not tell them anything. On Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April, 1893, I went forward. I do not remember word for word what I told them, but they received me, and I was baptized the next day. I could then sing, "I'm not ashamed to own my Lord." I was happy for about one week, and since then I have had doubts and fears; for

"I am so vile, so prone to sin,
I fear that I'm not born again."

Sometimes I fear I have deceived the church.

"Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on thee;
Leave, O leave me not alone;
Still support and comfort me."

It seems like I have written nothing besides what I read in the dear old SIGNS. It does my soul good to read it there. There are many good pieces written in our dear family paper. Your editorial in reply to my request for your views on Isaiah v. 14 was a feast indeed to me. I hope sister Attie A. Curtis will write again, for her letters are a feast to my soul. Brother J. H. Yeoman's letter made me rejoice and shed tears of joy; but when I read how our dear brother Crask suffers, then I say, How thankful I ought to be to our God for his goodness and mercy to such a poor, unworthy worm as I am; for I am blessed with good health, and yet I murmur so much, and cannot say at all times, "Thy will be done." Within mine own self I cannot do anything. When I would do good, evil is present with me.

In conclusion I would say to all my dear kindred in Christ, Write on to our dear old paper; for I feel the time is drawing near when we will not have the sweet privilege of meeting one another in peace and sweet communion. But if our blessed Jesus be for us, who can be against us? Dear brethren and sisters, my poor heart swells within me when I think of these things. This is all I have. Pray for me, a poor sinner, in hope of eternal life.

JENNIE STORKES.

OPELIKA, Ala., Aug. 9, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—The readers of the SIGNS in Texas desire to hear from me through this medium; but I do not desire in this article to make any personal allusions, but to try as near as I can to write in a general way for the instruction and comfort of others besides the brethren in Texas.

I rejoice to say that the gracious Lord blessed me in my visit among the brethren, preserved my family, and brought me home safely, for which I was made to say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name, and forget not all his benefits." I wish also to acknowledge thanks to the brethren for their kind remembrance of me, and their liberality to me. The only trouble was a deep sense of my unfitness to receive it, not feeling worthy of their kind remembrance of me.

I was in Texas through the month of July, having reached Hillsboro on the 28th of June. I found the brethren in good spirits, and they seemed to enjoy the meetings. It is perhaps known that there are differences of opinion on some points of doctrine. Predestination seems to be the leading bone of contention. As some have said, there is no need of quarreling over it, because there is no meat on it; but it must be remembered that it is full of marrow and fatness to those who know how to crack it. The marrow is in the bone, and it must be broken; but alas! some say, I go down into the garden of nuts. They indeed go into the garden, and get the nut of predestination, and try to crack it; but the nut slips, the hammer hits fingers, and down go the nut and hammer; and they say it is not of God, because their fingers are hurt by it. Hold firm, and learn how to strike, and then a different verdict will come. The nut must be broken before the rich kernel is eaten and enjoyed. I visited brethren whom I had never seen before, and they enjoyed my visit and the preaching, and I failed not to sound the word of God upon the subject. I hope the brethren will not stand apart, but will come together and speak the same things.

One trouble in Texas is, some seem to have elected themselves regulators, and their peculiar views are the standard by which all others shall be measured. This is not right, and I do hope that God will deliver his people from such, and enable his ministers to emulate the noble example of Paul when he said, "Who is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed?" Not leaders of factions, but uniters of the scattered brethren. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." It is like the ointment poured upon Aaron's head, that ran down to the skirts of his garments. "Be of one mind," said Paul. The remedy for the existing evil of division is found only in Jesus, the life and unity of his people. Preaching Christ cures the wounds and heals the bruises, and that only will bring the needed health and peace in Zion. God grant to clothe his ministers with that power and unction that will bring peace and union. "Preaching peace by Jesus Christ; he is Lord of all."

Since I reached home I have attended our three days' meeting at Andersonville. Brother J. R. Green was baptized on Sunday morning, and brother Kemp and wife were received by letter. Having filled forty-two appointments in Texas in July, and after traveling twenty four hundred miles, I am now trying to rest. I did not feel the effects of my labors until I reached home, when I felt prostrated; but God, who gives us strength, is able to strengthen us, and prepare us for every work that he will have us do.

I will now close, hoping the blessing of the Lord may rest upon the dear brethren in Texas and elsewhere.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

BATAVIA, N. Y., July 30, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Some time ago I listened to a discourse on a funeral occasion from these words, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." The speaker labored to convince his hearers that the aged man who had recently died was this perfect man alluded to by the psalmist, and that his faultless life and christian walk were well worthy of imitation; and notwithstanding the apparent fact that he had sometimes overreached in his dealings with his fellow-men, he was the perfect example for others to follow.

Recently a lady in this vicinity died who had reached the remarkable age of ninety-three years. On the occasion of her funeral the speaker in his sermon alluded to her as one who had lived a perfect christian life, and a fit example for others to follow, both as to her natural and christian virtues.

I have on several occasions listened to discourses on the life and character of the apostle Paul. In each of the sermons the speakers have mentioned the fact that Paul was liberally educated, and spent much time to show what great advantage his brilliant intellect was to him in his work as an apostle. He was also clothed with all the virtues and perfections of this life, and his perfect walk as a christian was well worthy of imitation by all men; but I have sometimes wondered what men would say if Paul were alive and could speak for himself. What he did say by the inspiration of the Spirit was this, "I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." He also says, "As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one." Paul knew from experience, as he wrote, "The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." He would be the last man to set himself up as an example to follow in the flesh, so long as he felt and realized that he was the chief of sinners. In regard to the use which Paul made of his education he says, "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing [in the margin, persuasible] words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." Paul also writes by the inspiration of the Spirit, "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith."

However much we may think of our departed relatives and friends, and love them for their kindness of heart and righteous lives, as the people of this life understand them, yet the children of God know that we must look to Jesus Christ alone for a perfect example in righteousness and true holiness. But it is good news to know that the elect children of God, by virtue of their eternal vital union with Christ, are clothed with his perfections; as Paul has written again, "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." If we are included with that blessed number who are bought with the precious blood of Christ we must certainly be perfect and complete in him; "for by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." If by faith we can get an assurance of this perfection in Christ our Savior, we can rejoice with joy and thanksgiving, ascribing all the glory of our salvation to Christ our Redeemer.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

B. F. HAMILTON.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

AT least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

LENGTHY OBITUARY NOTICES.

WHILE we feel to sympathize with those who are called to part with near and dear relatives and friends in death, yet we must request that in writing obituary notices they will be as brief as possible. A little reflection on this matter will, we think, be sufficient to show how unnecessary are long accounts of the minor incidents in the life of the deceased. Aside from the immediate friends of the subject of the notice they are not of general interest; and those to whom they are of any importance are about all acquainted with the facts without publishing them. A short notice is more likely to receive early insertion in the paper, as our obituary department as a rule is very much crowded; and it frequently occurs that owing to the extreme length of the notices, the publication of some are delayed for two or three numbers.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above. These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—Of consumption, August 10th, 1893, in Union Grove, at the home of her parents, our dear granddaughter, Nellie May Elmendorf, aged 14 years, 4 months and 28 days.

She was born March 13th, 1879, and was the only daughter of H. B. and Laura Elmendorf. She leaves father, mother, brother and many relatives to mourn her early departure. She was laid in the silent tomb in Grove Hill Cemetery.

Farewell, dear Nellie; we give thee up;
'Tis God's most holy will;
Though hard it was to part with thee,
Yet may we all be still.

Why should we mourn or grieve or pine
For what the Lord has done?
He took our Nellie to himself,
Where all the saints shall join.

MRS. L. S. ELMENDORF.

MORRISON, Ill.

Mary Mollott was born Oct. 12th, 1812, and died Aug. 25th, 1893.

She was baptized by Elder Moses Starr, in the fellowship of the Sidling Hill Church, Pa., about fifty years ago, at which place I preached her funeral last Sunday, Aug. 27th. She left three daughters and two sons, one of whom is our beloved brother, Elder Ahimaz Mollott. All her children were present at her funeral. She had been terribly afflicted for the last fifteen years. Looking upon her calm and sweet face, I could but think what a blessing death is. It kills all pain, all sorrow, all affliction. Those who have suffered the least have no advantage over those who have suffered the most. Besides, it is God's way and time to give to this body eternal life. May the truth of the gospel comfort and sustain the church that has lost a precious sister, and the children who have lost a dear mother.

E. V. WHITE.

LEESBURGH, Va.

DIED—At the family residence in Upshur Co., Texas, July 4th, 1893, Mrs. S. C. Arnold. She was born in the state of Alabama, April 22d, 1849, and was therefore 44 years, 2 months and 11 days old.

She was married to J. B. Arnold in March, 1866. They moved from Alabama to Texas, I think, about the year 1882. Sister Arnold was baptized by the writer in the fellowship of the Bluff Springs Church on the third Sunday in September, 1887, and lived a consistent member of that church until her death, always filling her place in her church meetings when not providentially hindered as long as she was able. She was confined to her bed about two years before her death with a complication of diseases, but the immediate cause of her death was said to have been typho-malaria. She leaves a mourning husband, nine children (three sons and six daughters), together with a host of relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. May all be comforted with the thought that our loss is her great gain. "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."—1 Thess. iv. 13, 14. This is enough. She is not dead, but sleepeth, and shall ere long awake in the likeness of her glorious Lord.

"O happy soul, who safely past
Thy weary warfare here,
Arrived at Jesus' feet at last,
And ended all thy care.

"No more shall sickness break thy rest,
Nor pain create thee smart;
No more shall doubts disturb thy breast,
Nor sin afflict thine heart."

H. B. JONES.

HORACE, Texas, Aug. 30, 1893.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Juniata Association of Primitive or Old School Baptists will convene, the Lord willing, with the Providence Church, in Bedford Co., Pa., on Wednesday, October 4th, and continue three days. A cordial invitation is given to all of our faith and order.

Those coming by railroad will come to Bedford on Tuesday, where they will be met. Those coming had better write to George W. McClellan, Rainsburgh, Bedford Co., Pa.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

THE Big Spring Primitive Baptist Association will hold her next annual session with the Blue Ridge Church, in Champaign Co., Ill., commencing on Friday before the third Sunday in September, 1893, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continuing three days.

Brethren and sisters are heartily invited to visit us and behold our order. We would like to see several of our ministering brethren present. Those coming by way of the Peoria & Indianapolis Division of the Big Four R. R. will be met at Mahomet, Ill., and conveyed to the meeting and entertainment. Those coming by way of the Rantoul Branch of the Illinois Central R. R. will stop at Fisher, where they will be met and entertained. The association will be held about six miles north of Mahomet, and four miles south of Fisher.

P. S. BEALS, Clerk.

THE Lexington Old School or Primitive Baptist Association is appointed to be held with the Lexington Church, at Lexington, Greene Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday (20th and 21st) in September, 1893, when we hope to meet not only our brethren and sisters of this association, but as many as can come from other associations that are in fellowship with us, especially ministering brethren.

As we are eleven miles from the railroad, we will say that we will meet any and all at Shandaken, on the Ulster & Delaware R. R., who will write requesting us to do so; and that any communications directed to me at Lexington, N. Y., will receive prompt attention. Also, that there is a daily stage, except Sunday, that connects with the morning trains from either way.

FLETCHER MACKEY, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE Otter Creek Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will hold a yearly meeting at Oelwein, Iowa, commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October.

Oelwein is accessible from all points, being a railroad town.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited to attend.

SARAH A. GARRETT, Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Harford Church, in Harford Co., Md., commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth, especially ministering brethren.

Those coming by way of Baltimore will take train at North Avenue station on Friday before, at three o'clock p. m., for Long Green or Forest Hill. Those coming from the north will take train at Delta at 3:30 p. m. the same day for same stations.

NATHAN GRAFTON, Clerk.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1893.

NO. 38.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GALATIANS III. 11.

"The just shall live by faith."

This is a positive declaration, as are all the declarations of God as presented in the testimony of the Scriptures. The shalls and wills of Jehovah are irrevocable, and even more lasting than the hills and mountains of his creation. When we read the words as recorded thus, "But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people," we realize that the words of the testimony of Jesus were spoken with emphasis, and that there is not one idle or unnecessary word in all the Scriptures. Each one is full of meaning, yea, and full of bread and water to the hungry and thirsty soul; and as we are enabled to receive the testimony of the word of truth, so also we do know that the shalls and wills of our God are forever fixed in our inward parts, and indelibly written in our hearts. The combined powers of darkness can never erase them. False doctrine may come, and indeed will come, and gnaw at our inward parts, causing great ugly bruises and sore boils, from which we suffer night and day. It pecks at the heart also, and wounds it, until the poor soul knows not how nor where to turn; he is sorely tried. But the law of the Lord is protected by the life, and is the life which we have in Christ Jesus. The bounds of the power and strength of false doctrine are eternally fixed and set. The decree of the Lord has gone forth, as in the life and trial of Job, "Behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand." There is no power (save the power of God) that may touch the life of the saints in Christ Jesus; for he is their life, and that life is secured in him before the world's foundation. Finite man may use the words "shall" and "will" in order to enforce his determination upon his fellow-man, and mostly without avail; but the law of God's determination, as written in the heart, is accompanied by a power from on high, which is sufficient to fulfill every word that goeth out of his mouth. Therefore to the saved sinner it is not any wonder that the word "salvation" presents itself to him, having vital protective power, and means walls and bulwarks to his thankful, happy soul.

There are many questions that arise in my own mind when I read such passages of Scripture as the one I have had given me (as I hope) to write upon, "The just shall live by faith." Among them are such as these: Who are the just? How are they justified? What are the marks that distinguish them from the rest of mankind? How, in my blindness and ignorance, am I to ascertain? At once I find myself utterly lost, and insufficient for such knowledge. But if I am a subject of that salvation which has surrounded the children of the living God as walls and bulwarks, the power of that salvation will also reveal to me the sweet and sacred mysteries of justification by faith, as we are enabled with the eye of faith to behold the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. We may sum up the whole of the doctrine of the justification of fallen man in the one word, "Jesus." Then who are the just?

The angel of the Lord said to Joseph, the husband of Mary, "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." His people are they whom his Father had given him in eternity. Jesus said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." Again he said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." His people, whom his Father had given him, were given him as a bride given unto her husband; which bride in the gift became his own, bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh, whom, and whom alone, he had the right to redeem. They were his bride just as much while they were in the chamber of death as they were after he had redeemed them; but they were not yet justified. Jesus fulfilled the law in them, and made it honorable, by complying with all its requirements, even to the shedding of his blood, and the going down into the bowels of the earth, from which he arose for their justification. These are the just. None others are in that condition, because none are just before God save those who are presented before him faultless and spotless through the perfect righteousness of Christ. Then how are they justified? By the perfect obedience of Christ their head, in fulfilling every jot and tittle of the broken law under which they were sentenced. What are the marks that distinguish them from the rest of mankind? None visible to the world; none visible to the natural mind. A tree is known by its fruit. The fruit yielded by this peculiar people is not visible to the natural eye; therefore it is manifest only to those of like precious faith. Those having Christ abiding in them have the knowledge and understanding which cometh by faith, and not by sight; and faith reveals the just as justified, and distinguishes them as a people separate from the world, having desires and aspirations, the source of which is beyond the alpha and omega of this mortal life. Each one manifests to all the rest the life they now live in the flesh, which is by the faith of the Son of God; and each can say from his own experience, with the apostle, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body." The marks, then, are the marks of Jesus, always bearing about and manifesting in their body his dying. All that he suffered in the body we also suffer, but in measure only; while the grace given unto Christ was without measure: "For God giveth not the spirit by measure unto him." Although we are blind and ignorant, we may ascertain (by looking out through the windows of faith into the deep and mysterious beyond) who are the just, how they are justified, and by what marks we may distinguish them; and all these most wonderful manifestations are vouchsafed unto the poor sinner saved by grace. "The just shall live by faith." By the resurrection of our gracious Redeemer this peculiar people have entered into a new and living way. They no more desire to follow the well beaten path which once they did delight to tread. Having become dead to sin, they cannot, neither do they, live any longer therein. By the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ is the world crucified unto them, and they unto the world. Crucifixion means death. The world therefore is dead unto the people of God, and they are dead to the world, which is death to sin. But they still live; and the apostle explains how they live, and our own experience bears witness to it. He says, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." How different, then, is the life which we now live from the life which we lived before the floods came and overwhelmed us; by which floods we were made to see the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and through which we now glory in the cross of Christ. "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and in sins: wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ," &c. We live by faith, because faith is the exercising power by which we are governed. We are no longer our own—we are bought with a price; and faith keeps before our view the redemption price, which is Jesus. Heaven is the portion of the just, for in them is the kingdom of heaven. With all our blood-guiltiness, our load of sin, and our multitudinous transgressions, we cannot even start to go to heaven; but as we sink beneath our load of sin and guilt, and become conscious of our lost condition, then the kingdom of heaven cometh unto us by the faith of the Son of God, and we rejoice in a living Savior.

The experience of the Lord's people teaches them that they can in no wise direct their own steps; and this is the teaching they receive in the life of faith. In the old life, under the legal heavens, we verily thought our destiny was, to a great extent at least, in our own hands. The inherent and established principle in the Adamic creature is the basis of a system of creature efforts, by which we may at will work out our own salvation, and so obtain God's favor at little cost. This is the substance of that life which is directly opposite to the life by faith; and now the life we live by faith is no fantasma of a disordered mind nor an impaired digestion, but is a deep and lasting reality. After perhaps several weeks that my mind has been barren and unfruitful, apparently no life, no zeal, no thought, empty and careless, void of spiritual interest, and altogether unprofitable, I have asked myself, Is this the life by faith which you publicly profess to live? Where is the manifestation of a work of faith in all these barren, wasted weeks? I am cast down, but not destroyed; for faith speaks, and calls to my remembrance the deeper things of my heart, and proposes another question, to wit, In all these weeks, amidst the mists and darker clouds which obscured your brighter, clearer sky, have you not had a constant desire by night and by day to walk worthy your high vocation, and to meekly and with lowliness of heart follow in the footsteps of your Lord and Master? O ye of little faith, is not this a living faith within you, which sustains you, and keeps your face toward the gates of Zion? The success of our natural life is based upon the fruition of our natural hopes and desires. The things upon which our hearts are set we with our might endeavor to obtain. So also in the spiritual life, or life by faith, our joy and happiness, our soul comfort and consolation in the Lord, depend upon the fruit yielded by or through a work of grace in the heart. Because the Lord's garden of fruits is planted in this sin-cursed earthly tenement of ours, it needs be that the working out of our salvation is with fear and trembling, through deep waters, great tribulation, sore trials and heavy afflictions; and so the apostle has warned us, saying, "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." This is the work of faith, by which we go on hoping even against hope. It is our very living; and faith is a living principle. Therefore the just shall live by faith. If faith is not in lively exercise within our mortal bodies we die, and cannot come forth in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. We die to the joys of the Lord's salvation; and in such dire straits the very first cry of faith in our soul is, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit." To our everlasting joy, faith's cry is never in vain. In the cold and dreadful night-time, when our meat and drink is wormwood and gall, we set our faces toward the east, whence come the east winds of our night-time experience, laden with the vapors from a deceitful and desperately wicked heart. We groan, being burdened with groans beyond our utterance. Still through it all faith supported by hope keeps our faces still set toward the east; and anon in the set time, which the Lord has fixed to favor Zion, the welcome Sun of our glorious righteousness arises in the east (where we least expect it, right out of our tribulations) with healing in his wings, and, behold, we are healed. In every phase of our experience faith restrains and sustains us. If we are injured, offended or persecuted, in consequence of which our anger arises, and with carnal weapons we proceed to resent the insult, all at once we do realize that our life is by faith. The resentful arm drops harmless, the lips are closed, and we tremble; not with fear of man, but the fear of the Lord in our heart. We are subdued. We thank God that a power beyond our own restrains us. Faith has assumed her great prerogative, and pointed out to us that whoso liveth after the flesh shall die. The life and suffering and lowliness of Jesus is our example and our rule. He was reviled, and reviled not again. He was meek and lowly of heart, and he is the author and finisher of our life of faith. Truly then the life we now live in the flesh we live by the faith of the Son of God; and although we cannot at all times behold the author of our faith, yet by the light of the life which we live we are ready to testify in the same light also of an experience of grace in our heart, that "The just shall live by faith."

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 4, 1893.

CANADA, Ky., March 15, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Elder W. J. May requested me, some time ago, to write of my travels for publication in the SIGNS; but I have put it off from time to time, feeling I could not write anything that would benefit the readers. If it is the dear Lord's will I will now make the attempt; for without him we can do nothing.

My father and mother were members of the Old School Baptist Church. I often heard people talk about the bad world, and I was made to wonder. I thought I could not bear to go to that place. Thus I went on until I was about fifteen years old, often going to meetings. I visited a protracted meeting held by the Methodists, and they tried to get me to go to the mourner's bench; but I was ashamed to go. At the close of the meeting they would ask me if I wanted them to pray for me, and I answered yes. I did thus a few times, but found no relief. I grew worse and worse, so I did not go often. I asked my father if it was right to go and hear them, and he said there was not any good in them. I was made to study and was troubled, and thought I would work out my salvation. I thought if I would do my part, the Lord would do his. I was as zealous as I could be, but would fail after a short time, and would grow worse. Often did I try and fail. I was troubled, and did not know what to do. I would often promise God that I would do better, but would soon break over, and would be worse than ever. I would roll on my bed at night, and bathe my pillow with tears. I continued in this way until I was about twenty years old, when I left my home, and thought my troubles would now leave me. At times I would be at ease, but O how sudden trouble would come. I have often, while traveling, sought lonely places, to try to pray to God to save me before it was too late. One night as I was traveling along a lonesome road Satan tempted me, trying to make me curse. I have never followed such a vain habit, so I tried to pray and ask God to remove him, and I found relief. I was troubled more or less all the time for several years. A Methodist lady visited a place where I was staying, who inquired after my belief, and said she would not be an Old Baptist, for they were the old foggy, short sighted people. She had infringed on my principles, and I replied to her, saying, I would rather be an Old Baptist than a Methodist, always falling from grace. I have always contended for the Old Baptists, whether at home or abroad. I often tried to pray, but only grew worse, and got so bad that I could not ask God to bless me. I have seen the time when I would have been glad for the blackest African to have prayed for me. I grew worse all the time until February, 1891, when my troubles were so great that I thought I could not stay with my earthly friends. Suddenly a light shined around me, and the loveliest object I ever saw appeared before me. I was made to rejoice in the dark hours. I thought it was my blessed Savior, whom I loved so well. I thought I would not tell my wife, and so tried to keep it a secret. Some time after this Jesus came to me, and I went with him through the darkest place I ever saw. We went up until we got to the throne, and I saw Jesus take my wife by the hand, and into heaven. I felt bound to tell my wife the good news, and some time after this she told me her experience. We both went to the Big Creek Church on the third Saturday in May, 1891. I did not expect to join the church that day, as I was afraid I would deceive the church; yet I wanted to join. I felt too unworthy to be with such good people. When I entered the church-house I could not keep from rejoicing. I thought the happiest people I ever saw were there. When the invitation was given I could not withhold my hand. My wife went rejoicing, and told what the Lord had done for her. The good old Elder asked me if I wanted to talk to the church. I told him I felt too unworthy. He said they all felt that way, and such were the ones to come. I was heartily received. I then thought I was done with trouble. One month later we were baptized by Elder Pinson and Elder May. I then thought I could live without so much trouble. Soon after this I was made to study about God's word, for I could not see or understand the true doctrine. I wanted to know the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. I thought of the Scripture that says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." I saw myself in a helpless condition, and tried to ask God to give me understanding of the Scriptures. At last I saw a heap of trouble. I could not understand what the Scriptures did mean. I tried to read, and was taken with sore eyes. I could only go to God in prayer, and ask him to show me the right. Jesus was revealed to me, and he told me to lay everything at his feet, and from that time I began to understand the true doctrine, which is election and predestination, salvation by grace. I had thought a carnal man could please God, and that such were the ones to repent; and if they did not repent, God would not pardon their sins. But I do not believe so now. I understand as Paul says, "The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God." We must first be brought into the spiritual kingdom before we can either pray or repent or worship God with divine acceptance. It takes the new birth to bring us into this kingdom. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." "Not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Then we become subjects of the spiritual law, and can please God; but not until then. Now we see, as did the apostle, a law in our members, warring against the law of our mind, and bringing us into captivity to the law of sin which is in our members. We are free from the law of sin and death. The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made us free from that law, so that we cannot be brought under it. But we cannot escape this law in our members, which is always in our way; for when we would do good, evil is present with us. It will remain so until death. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." I understand that the carnal mind remains in us, and is never subject to the law of God. That is why we do so many things that are wrong. "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die;" that is to the love and fellowship of the church; not eternal death. For Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." "If ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live;" that is, in this gospel kingdom. We cannot die until we have life; nor can we live until we are made alive. "Your life is hid with Christ in God," and he gives it to his chosen as it pleases him. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." We cannot do anything to inherit eternal life. It is alone by Christ's obedience we are saved. It is not according to our works. If it were, we would all miss heaven. "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." All the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. We do not have to repent in order to receive eternal life, but because we have life. When we see something wrong we have done, and become sorry for it, then we repent. I do wrong daily and try to repent. God gives repentance unto Israel. If he does not give it we cannot repent. Godly sorrow worketh repentance, that needeth not to be repented of. "The preparations of the heart in man and the answer of the tongue is from the Lord." We cannot prepare our heart. God says, "I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and will give you a heart of flesh." He gives his children life, and a new heart, and gives them wisdom, and gives them the kingdom. "Whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" Jesus fought the battle for us, and all we are to do is to obey our Captain. A man cannot violate a law until he is given a law; so we only violate the natural law until he writes his laws in our heart, and stamps them in our mind. And we shall all know him, from the least to the greatest. They will not need any neighbor to teach them, for they shall all be taught of the Lord. Jesus says, "No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him." We must be drawn by the cords of that everlasting love.

I will bring my scribble to a close, asking you to remember me, a poor, helpless sinner, at the throne of grace. I remain your brother in hope of eternal life,

W. L. BOLT.

BROOME CENTRE, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—A short time ago I met a brother whose views were so different from mine in regard to the sovereignty of God, and the predestination of all things, and the will power that Adam possessed before the transgression, and also the figure or relation that he bore to the Redeemer, that I took occasion to write to a very dear brother for his views, which I most heartily indorse. Inclosed I send them to you, and, if you think best to publish, please withhold the name and address.

It is so hard for our nature to give up its idol, Arminianism. O that I might live, with all God's people, so near our God that we might forget earth and earthly things. May God keep us from temptations.

D. M. LEONARD.

AUGUST, 13, 1893.

DR. LEONARD—DEAR BROTHER:—Yours was received, and as I seated myself and read it some thoughts passed through my mind, which have continued, and I am seated today to write some of them.

The question you ask in regard to Adam's will power has been debated for many years, and still seems to trouble the saints. The question to me seems quite plain, and yet, I may add, difficult in attempting to explain. None but our Lord can open the understanding.

Sometimes in explaining things to his disciples our Lord answered them with the wisdom of this world, and with spiritual wisdom at the same time, and often took the most common figures to illustrate the greatest truth. I often overlook these things, and go hunting afar for some testimonies which are worthless when I get them. Now let us take what comes to hand, and ask a very easy question to start with. Can a man do a thing and not do it? Impossible. Well, man did take and eat. Is it unreasonable for me to conclude that he could not have done otherwise? When Eve presented the forbidden fruit to Adam the situation was thus: Eve had eaten, and come under the power of death. Let us state facts, and use reason first; then we will bring Scripture for proof. Adam was confronted with the fact that Eve was separated from him. His reasoning that there was but one way to be united to his wife again has never been impeached by any wisdom, neither human or divine, since that time. The reasons why Adam could not resist, but took and did eat, are not so insignificant as some may suppose. Death or separation; and for how long? Let the one who thinks the decision so easy to render think a little. Solomon says, "Love is strong as death." Then do we not state a fact when we say, The stronger will prevent? There can be no otherwise about the matter. When two opposing forces meet, whether they be in a man's mind or before his eyes, I state but the fact when I say that the stronger will prevail, and it is impossible to be otherwise. So much for reason. Let us now take Scripture.

It is said in Rom. v. 14, that Adam is the figure of him that was to come. I think we all agree that the one who was to come was Christ. The next thing to be considered is, How was he made a figure? Who made him a figure? And was there any power given him to resist being a figure? When we can determine these questions aright we will be at the point that we sought, viz., Could Adam have refused to eat of the forbidden fruit? Now let us take the record of Adam in Genesis, his manner of being formed, with his bride in him; the same life animating both; one flesh and bone; the separation and the fall; Adam taking the forbidden fruit, coming under the power of death, and so uniting himself with Eve again; taking all the consequences of a broken law, for the great love wherewith he loved her, even while she was dead in sin. Are we right in the figure? Well, then, who made the figure?

And was there power in Adam, or anywhere else, to spoil the figure? If we answer, There might have been, then we impeach the wisdom of the Almighty. If we say, as do the world, that his body was in shape as God, his figure as a man was like Christ, as the son of Mary, and there the likeness ended, then we might as well unite at once with the Arminians, and become as popular as we can. When the reckless imagination of man (I will not call it reason) breaks over the determination of God, and puts in, "There might have been," where will you stop such madness? It is worse than man's original sin; for there is consolation in the thought that there was a purpose in the figure of the transgression and fall. But take away the predestinating hand of Almighty God and pandemonium itself is let loose, and will not stop till it has swept reason and hope out of the human breast. Surely there is a God that worketh "all things" after the counsel of his own will. The lines are drawn, the bounds are fixed. How else could we say, "He hath done all things well?"

Very likely, if you succeed in reading these lines, you will say, He has used some strange language. Well, I have; and when one feels so utterly helpless as I have for some time, they cannot help mocking, as Elijah did, when they see anyone calling upon a god that cannot answer, namely, the power of man to resist the purpose of God.

I unite with you in the prayer that the God of all grace may keep us from such folly.

O that I might be free, in measure, from my worldly cares. "Bodily exercise profiteth little; but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

J. A. M.

THE DAYSMAN.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST JESUS:—I have concluded to pen a few thoughts about the daysman spoken of by Job, the servant of God. It is a rare text, for it occurs in the Bible but this one time (Job ix. 33), and reads as follows: "Neither is there any daysman betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both." The secret in this text lies, in a great measure, in who is meant by the pronoun "us," which I will notice by and by. The narrative of Job is too extensive to enter into, in a detail of the particulars; but I will make a few remarks in a general way about Job; and first, I believe Job was an eminent type of Christ; and his afflictions of body, from the sole of his foot unto the head, represent the intense suffering and dreadful afflictions that Christ bore for his people; for "In all their afflictions he was afflicted." "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "With his stripes we are healed." "The chastisement of our peace was upon him." I have no desire to controvert the views of those who have written, or may write, on this text. The general idea, so far as I have heard it expressed, is that the daysman is Christ in his mediation between God and his people; that as the Mediator between them he might lay his hand upon both the offended and the offender, and reconcile them; that Job could not see or realize Christ as a mediator or daysman between himself, a vile transgressor, and an offended God, until he (Job) was born again; that then he could and did see Christ as the daysman between them. Now, I do most assuredly believe that Christ in his mediatorial character or person did have power with God and power with man, and did everything on the part of God, and everything on the part of man, that the law required and justice demanded for reconciliation; that he was perfectly God and perfectly man, and "mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all [all under consideration], to be testified in due time." In his divine nature he was equal with God, and in his human nature he was equal with man, yet without sin. Both these natures were united in the person of Christ, that he might reconcile us to God and be the author of eternal salvation. Hence he is called the root and the offspring of David, the bright and morning star. In dignity and glory he is the root of David, the everlasting Father, in whom all fullness dwells. In obedience and suffering he is the offspring of David, the Son of man, the High Priest of our profession, the man Christ Jesus. I say, all these things I believe; but the question in my mind is, Is this the proper view of the text under consideration? Is this what Job meant when he was moved by the Holy Ghost to pen the words of this text, in which there can be no mistake? Nor do I believe it to be an ironical expression, but a positive declaration of the fact of inspiration. I am inclined to believe the Scriptures mean just what they say, and say just what they mean, to the character addressed and the subject under consideration. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

Then, as I have said, the secret of this text is measurably wrapped up in who is embraced in the pronoun "us" in the text. If it means an offended God and his offending and transgressing people, at variance, and Christ a daysman betwixt them, to lay his hand upon both the offended and the offender, to reconcile them, then Job said one thing and meant another. But if by the pronoun us we are to understand stern justice and Christ, the sin-bearing victim, then Job said just

(Continued on page 301.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 20, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

CONDEMNATION AND JUSTIFICATION.

"THEREFORE as by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."—Rom. v. 18.

However men may cavil over the scriptural account of the introduction of sin into the world, there is no room to question the fact that all men suffer under its dreadful consequences. In the immediately preceding context the apostle has given a clear and unanswerable demonstration presenting the universal prevalence of death as evidence that all men have sinned in the first transgression of the commandment of the Creator. The unavoidable conclusion from this fact is that death has already passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Not only is this consistent and legitimate in a logical point of view, but what is far more important, it is expressly so declared by the inspired testimony of the writer of this epistle. In this fact is contained the refutation of every theory of salvation for sinners which rests upon conditions to be fulfilled by mortals. It cannot be just that one who is already condemned should yet have power to propitiate the favor of that law which he has transgressed. If the first offense left room for compromise, where would be the justice of closing that way of conciliation against the second, or any succeeding transgression? But there is no necessity for argument concerning the effect of that offense by which condemnation came upon all men, since death reigns universally by reason of that one condemnation. This effect of sin is too manifest to admit of denial. Not even the most incredulous skeptic can doubt the dominion of death. No speculation of science has suggested a more consistent explanation of its origin than that which is revealed in the Scriptures. While many of those who are regarded as eminent in worldly wisdom have disputed the truth of the inspired record, none have been able to produce a theory by which to consistently explain the existence of the things which are seen in the material universe without building upon that foundation. Much less can all the efforts of reason produce any explanation of the existence of sin and death, except by the light of that revelation which God has been pleased to give. Reason is itself unreasonable in every device which it has invented in the endeavor to account for this undeniable truth of the power of death over all the race of man. Hence it is needless to bring arguments in refutation of the "profane and vain babblings and oppositions of science falsely so called."—1 Tim. vi. 20. The only result which can be attained by controverting the testimony of inspiration, even if it could be successfully conducted, would be that the universal dominion of sin and death would be shown to be unlimited; and the hope of life and deliverance from guilt would be cut off. So that every argument against the validity of the revelation which is written in the Scriptures is but an effort to overthrow all the hope of immortality which has ever cheered the gloom of this sinful world. The testimony of Scripture is not necessary to the fact that sin has reigned unto death, since that fearful truth is manifest even to the unwilling eyes of all rational men. The glad tidings of the gospel show the assurance of life as triumphant over death, and of righteousness and peace as being victorious over sin and hell. Even the opposition of carnal reason but gives additional testimony to the authority of revealed truth, since that opposition is declared in the very record of inspiration itself. Thus the wrath of man is made subservient to the declaration of the glory of our God; and the wickedness of the enemies of righteousness contributes to the display of divine glory in that perfect righteousness by which the subjects of electing love are justified freely by the blood of Jesus as their Redeemer. This salvation is not merely deliverance from the penalty due to their transgressions; it makes them free from condemnation as being cleansed from the guilt of sin.

It is important to observe carefully the letter of our text as well as the whole context. The true condition of the saints is recognized throughout this connection as being under the dominion of sin, and incapable of rendering any satisfaction to that law whose condemnation is recorded against them. This agrees with the declaration of our Lord in which he says, "The Son of man is come to save that which was lost."—Matt. xviii. 11. This is contrary to the doctrine of the popular order of religious teachers in the world. They teach that there is danger of men being lost if they do not embrace the opportunity to compromise with justice by accepting overtures of mercy. They know of no salvation to preach to them who are already lost. Herein is the peculiar glory of the gospel of God our Savior. It embraces none but those who are dead in trespasses and sins, and it saves to the uttermost everyone who is enabled by the Spirit of God to know the death which reigns over him. There is none who can be taught the grace of God in salvation from sin without knowing the exceeding sinfulness of sin in himself. Thus the justice of their condemnation is revealed in the experience of the saints no less clearly than the justification which is by grace.

In the text under consideration, the manner of the condemnation which rests upon all men is presented as the exact illustration of the way in which the free gift unto justification of life came upon all men. The text does not declare that the subjects of this condemnation are all included in the free gift. The illustration is confined to the manner in which all men are involved in the condemnation which passed upon them in the offense of one. When Adam transgressed the commandment of God, and thereby brought sin into the world with its consequent condemnation, he was the embodiment of all his undeveloped posterity; so that each of them committed in him all the sin which he committed. The effect of that sin has been manifest in all who ever have been born of the flesh, since they have been without exception subjects of sin and death. It is not necessary that each child of Adam should individually transgress the law of God in order that they may be condemned as sinners. Having fallen under the curse of the law in their earthly head, their sinful actions only show that they are still under the control of sin, and thus demonstrate the justice of that curse which passed upon them in their original act of rebellion against the commandment of their Creator. The wicked conduct of men now only proves that they are the servants of sin; they do not become sinners by committing sin, but the commission of sin is the evidence that they are sinners. Stealing does not make a man a thief; it only shows that he is a thief. One who is really honest has no inclination to take that which is not his own. So it is because sin has dominion over the children of men that they are ever ready to manifest their subjection to its power by yielding obedience to its direction. Thus it is evident that by the one offense of Adam, in the first sin, all his race were made subjects of condemnation; and that sentence of divine judgment was just, because the sin was the act of all whose life was in him. Herein is the similitude presented in our text.

It is "Even so," just exactly in the same manner, that "the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." There can be no question but that Christ Jesus is the one by whose righteousness this justification of life came. Now, applying the illustration given, it is only those who were embodied in the sinning Adam who were brought under condemnation by his offense; and even so, the righteousness of one, Jesus, secures justification of life to every one who is embodied in him. The illustration is definitely limited to this one point. In this particular it is exactly perfect.

The apparent difficulty involved in the use of the words "all men" in the text will be explained by observing the general object of the argument in the whole of this epistle. It must be remembered that the Jewish disciples were controlled by the traditional sentiment that God had cast off all the Gentiles, and that no blessing of the the gospel could embrace them in its benefits. To refute this legal theory, in which the carnal pride of the Jewish disciples was encouraged, it was frequently needful that the apostles should be very explicit in declaring the gospel as embracing in its blessings the whole family of man, including Gentiles as well as Jews. So John says of Jesus Christ, that "He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." Yet in the same epistle he writes, "We know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness."—1 John ii. 2; v. 19. Certainly the saints who are cleansed from all sin by the blood of Jesus Christ, are included with John as being of God, whether they be Jews or Gentiles according to the flesh. Those who are thus cleansed are not included with the "whole world" which lieth in wickedness; they are made free from sin by that full propitiation which is found in Jesus. In their relation to the earthly Adam they are by nature the children of wrath even as others; but as being freed from guilt in the propitiation for sin which is in Christ Jesus they are made holy and without blame before God in love. In this infinite display of sovereign grace our Redeemer has no regard for the distinction between Jew and Gentile, nor for the difference between the most depraved criminal and the proudest Pharisee. The grace which was abundantly poured upon the expiring thief on Calvary, was not bestowed upon the boasting Israelite who had no consciousness of guilt before the throne of divine justice. The righteousness which is of God in Christ Jesus is not a mere supplement to the merits of men. It is still true that "As many as are of the works of the law are under the curse." The righteousness which may be obtained by obedience to the commandments of the law can never be anything more than that of an obedient servant; and he who stands approved on that ground is not entitled to any reward for his service. He has only paid the obligation which rested upon him; and which must still be continually obeyed. If salvation had been by the works of the law there could have been no sinner saved, for the law could afford no place for repentance. Its first transgression incurred the penalty of death. Not even finite law can compromise with the guilty transgressor; it can be satisfied with nothing less than the full penalty which it demands. Much less can the infinite justice of God accept any sacrifice at the hands of a condemned sinner. Death is the penalty which the holy law has decreed; and the proposal to compromise that just sentence is itself an additional act of rebellion against divine holiness. This principle is very manifest when applied to the laws of men which can be grasped by finite thought. That criminal who should offer to purchase the favor of the law by any service he could render, would be considered as offending against the honor of the court. Is divine justice less pure than the laws of men? From the very perfection of the holiness of God it is impossible that he should clear the guilty, or justify the wicked. Hence without the complete satisfaction of justice no sinner can be saved from that condemnation which spreads a dreadful gloom over all the family of man. It is not a matter yet to be determined whether this condemnation shall rest upon any mortal. The awful sentence is recorded against the whole family of man. "By the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation." The reign of death defines the limit of the pollution of sin, for "The sting of death is sin." Where there is no sin death has no power. This is the condemnation.

As has been abundantly shown, the universal condemnation of sinful men results from the just judgment of their own evil deeds. In some sense this justice may be seen by the natural mind, although it is by revelation alone that the purity of the divine law can be made manifest. But no natural mind can see the glorious display of divine grace in the justification of the ungodly. The highest conception of the natural mind can grasp no more than the release of the guilty from the penalty due to transgression. This is the basis on which all rational theories of salvation are founded. But God has confounded the wisdom of the wise in the revelation of that grace by which he justifies the ungodly. Not that the omnipotence of God has wrested the sword from his own justice in saving his people from their sins. This would be no justification, since the guilt of sin would not be removed by the remission of the penalty. But that sinner who has been taught of God, loves holiness; therefore he could not rejoice even in deliverance from death in which the truth and justice of God should be violated. Those who receive the justification of life in Christ Jesus are not saved by the sacrifice of justice; on the contrary, divine justice is magnified in the deliverance of every subject of electing grace. The redemption which is in Christ Jesus makes every vessel of mercy holy and without blame before God in love. Certainly against such freely justified sinners there can be no charge maintained. Therefore it is true that they are delivered from condemnation through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Thus the purpose of God in election is accomplished in presenting them to himself "a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blame before him in love."—Eph. v. 27. This is well called "justification of life" since there is neither any life without this perfect justification, nor yet any freedom from guilt without the infinite gift of life in Christ Jesus, by which guilty criminals are freely justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses. While the glory of immaculate justice shines in the law under which all men are condemned, that glory is itself tributary to the glory revealed in the justification of sinners through the redemption that is in Christ as the Savior of his people from their sins. This is that justification which is by the grace of God revealed in the face of Jesus, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world whom he came to save.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

(Continued from page 299.)
what he meant. He meant in reality that there was no medium or daysman between them to evade or diminish one farthing of the wrath of divine justice from being wreaked upon Christ when he made his soul an offering for sin, and cried out in agony of soul, "Eli, Eli, lama sabach thani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

The word daysman means umpire, arbiter, or third person, to whose sole decision a controversy or question between parties is referred. Inasmuch then as I have said that Job was an eminent type of Christ, and I am running on that line, I will further say that in the text under consideration Job was personating Christ and stern justice. In the preceding verse he has intimated that the justice of God cannot be compromised, saying, "For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment. Neither is there any daysman betwixt us," &c.

In violations and transgressions in this life we can compromise with man—with one another; but we cannot compromise commonwealth's affairs. The law shows no mercy; but its demands must be met and canceled to a jot and tittle. So also is the inflexible law of justice. It cannot be compromised; but every farthing of the penalty of the transgression of God's people must be met and canceled by Christ, the sin-bearing victim. No daysman between. The cup cannot pass, but Jesus must drink the bitter cup. He must tread the wine-press alone. Of the people there was none with him. No daysman between; but all the billows and waves of the wrath of divine justice were poured out upon the Lamb of God when "deep called unto deep, at the voice of thy water-spouts," and he cried out, "It is finished." Then he saw of the travail of his soul, and was satisfied. The prophet Zechariah seems to allude to the same awful moment. "Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd [Christ], and against the man [the man Christ Jesus] that is my fellow, saith the Lord of hosts: smite the Shepherd," &c.—Zech. xiii. 7. This seems to represent the cry of justice that awoke to assert its awful and eternal rights upon Christ, the loving Lamb of God who suffered for us, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God; not merely make a way for us to come. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" Strange as it appears to many, Christ ought to have suffered everything that he did suffer. The truth of the matter is so positively asserted in Luke xxiv. 46, that it cannot be defaced; for it says, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." The word "thus" means in this manner, or in the same manner; and in this text it means that Christ suffered precisely in the manner it was written or pre-determined for him to suffer, and precisely as it was necessary or right for him to suffer; for "Truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined; but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed."—Luke xxii. 22. Forasmuch then as Christ ought to have suffered just as he did suffer, all things that were done unto him ought to have been done unto him just as they were done. The fact is it could not have been otherwise; for thus it was written of him, and thus it behooved him to suffer, and to be made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

Then, if there had been a daysman betwixt the justice of God, as plaintiff, and Christ, the Head and Surety of his people, the cup might have passed. But these things must needs be; for it is written, "He shall drink of the brook [cup] in the way."—Psa. cx. 7.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

W. J. MAY.

PINSONFORK, Ky., June 6, 1893.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Roxbury Old School or Primitive Baptist Association, in session with the Andes Church, at Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., Sept. 6th and 7th, 1893, to the several churches in our fellowship, sends christian salutation.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—In sending to you our annual epistle of love we would invite your attention to the consideration of a portion of the word of inspiration contained in Heb. xii. 23. Therein it is declared ye are come "to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven." There are many precious, and glorious things wrapped up in this declaration of the Scriptures, "the church of the first-born," that we shall be able but very briefly to touch upon them within the limits of a Circular Letter.

Our Lord Jesus Christ is the first-born. "Whom he [God] did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren."—Rom. viii. 29. The church of the first-born shall all be conformed to the image of the only begotten Son of God. "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." Our God "hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." "Unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom: thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."—Heb. i. 2, 3, 8, 9. He is the chiefest among ten thousand. Of him the Holy Ghost, speaking in the psalmist, saith, "I will make him my first-born, higher than the kings of the earth. In all things he hath the pre-eminence. In his eternal Godhead and in his humanity the only begotten Son of God is the altogether lovely one. Our beloved Emmanuel in this appellation, "The first-born," is revealed to his church as the heir of God; yea, whom God the Father "hath appointed heir of all things."—Heb. ii. 2. Our Savior, the first-born of many brethren, is the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all. Under the old dispensation were given some precious revelations concerning the pre-eminence and portion of the first-born. Thus it is written in Deut. xxi. 15-17, "If a man have two wives, one beloved, and another hated, and they have borne him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the first-born son be hers that was hated, then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first-born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first-born; but he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, by giving him a double portion of all that he hath; for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the first-born is his." Israel, when he blessed Ephraim and Manasseh, said unto Joseph, "Behold, I die; but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers. Moreover, I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow." When therefore the tribes of Israel were come into the land of Canaan, "the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a great people, forasmuch as the Lord hath blessed me hitherto? And Joshua answered them, If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood country, and cut down for thyself there in the land of the Perizzites and of the giants, if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee. And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us; and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley have chariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are of the valley of Jezreel. And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, Thou art a great people, and hast great power; thou shalt not have one lot only; but the mountain shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down; and the outgoings of it shall be thine; for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong."—Joshua xvii. 14-18. The double portion, the portion of the first-born, was theirs.—1 Chron. v. 1, 2. Thus Jehovah declares, "I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first-born."—Jer. xxxi. 9; Exod. iv. 22. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins."—Isa. xl. 1, 2. This is the lot of the first-born. Again, the Lord speaks concerning Christ and the church, "As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope: even to-day do I declare that I will render double unto thee."—Zech. ix. 11, 12. This is the inheritance of the church of the first-born. What is this double portion? It is that we have forgiveness of sins through the blood of the Lamb.—Eph. i. 7. Yea, more; justification also. "Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus."—Rom. iii. 25. It is grace and glory. "The Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."—Psalm lxxxiv. 11. It is that we suffer and reign with Christ, the first-born.—2 Tim. ii. 12. In him we are made unto God our Father kings and priests.—Rev. i. 6. We have the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—1 Tim. iv. 8. If children of God, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.—Rom. viii. 17. Life and immortality is ours in the first-born among many brethren. All things are yours, O church of the first-born which are written in heaven; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's.—1 Cor. iii. 21-23. Have we a precious hope that we are come to the general assembly and church of the first-born which are written in heaven? Then the portion of the first-born is ours—the double portion. We are joint heirs with the Son of God. No power in earth or hell can erase our names that are written in heaven.

"My name from the palms of his hands,
Eternity will not erase;
Impress'd on his heart it remains,
In marks of indelible grace."

"Yes, I to the end shall endure,
As sure as the earnest is given;
More happy, but not more secure,
The glorified spirits in heaven."

May the Holy Ghost bless us, and cause us to ponder these things in our heart, and favor us with health and peace in Christ Jesus, by whose grace we have hope that we are come to and are numbered among the general assembly and church of the first-born which are written in heaven.

J. D. HUBBELL, Mod.

JAS. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

The Maine Old School Baptist Conference, met with the church at North Berwick, York Co., Maine, Sept. 1st, 2d and 3d, 1893, to the sister associations and meetings with whom she corresponds, sends greeting in the Lord.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Another year has gone swiftly by since we last addressed you, and we have once more met in annual conference. The many (to us) sad changes which the years bring cause us to more constantly remember and turn in heart and feeling to him who knows no change, and whose word to his erring children is, "I am God, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Of him it is also declared that we owe all our blessings to his unchangeability; for the apostle James declares that every good gift and every perfect gift cometh down from him, with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning. Of Jesus, who was God manifest in the flesh, and who is declared to be the express image of his person, it is said that "having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end;" in other words, that his love did not change. We say that the changes of this life but lead us to remember the unchangeable God; for while here we can find no rest nor abiding place, since changes are so swift, and we are driven for rest to him who changes not.

If in this letter, brethren, we speak to you about any divine thing, it must be concerning this one essential attribute of our God, his unchangeability. To our short sight there seem to be many changes in the ways and works of God, both in the world and in the kingdom of his Son; but we are assured from the testimony of many infallible Scriptures that with Jehovah it is not so; that with him all is moving on in pursuance of one divine plan, in which there has been no change, and in which there can be no change. In serene and awful majesty he rules over all the universe which he has created and formed. All things do his bidding, and all fulfill his purpose; and of this purpose we are told that it is his eternal purpose, formed before the world was. Such unchangeability is not comprehensible to our finite minds, but yet it is one of the things revealed for our strength and comfort. Though beyond all our comprehension, yet it becomes at times our joy to meditate upon it, even as we meditate upon all the other incomprehensible attributes of the God whom we adore, but whom, if we could comprehend him, we could not adore.

Out of this truth of the unchangeability of God grow up necessarily other truths which we must believe and rejoice in. This God who is unchangeable must of necessity therefore be omniscient, omnipresent and omnipotent. If not, then there would be room for growth or declension; and growth or declension is change itself. To see more or less at one time than another is change, to be more or less present at different times or places is change, and to increase or decrease in power is also change. Therefore we can but rejoice to ascribe to our God these three attributes, even as he has also said in his word by repeated testimonies. It must ever be a peculiar joy to the believer that his Protector always sees him, is always with him, and is always possessed of all power in earth and heaven. How can he perish with such a Guardian and Guide!

As our God claims to be unchangeable, therefore we know that he must be unchangeable in knowledge. If there has ever been a period when our God knew less or more than at another period, then unchangeability is not his attribute. We feel at a loss for proper terms to use concerning the God we worship, since times or periods do not pertain to him, for eternity is his dwelling-place; and our words as we speak of him are but halting and crippled at best. But still we may use the language in which he has been pleased to speak to us in the Scriptures, and say that he foreknew all things, since he has declared the end from the beginning, "saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." While we may not attribute succession of time or events to him who inhabits eternity, yet we are not wrong when with the Scriptures we declare that he foreknew all things.

Out of this unchangeability of knowledge grow up other grand truths. One of them is that what he foreknew must of necessity come to pass. Nothing can go beyond nor come short of his foreknowledge. Admit his foreknowledge of any given thing or event, and that thing or event must be. We have often wondered why any of the Lord's people should question the predestination of all things, since every argument that would disprove his predestination would also disprove his foreknowledge; and going back a step farther in the argument, would also disprove his unchangeability.

O how wonderful and glorious and far-reaching in its conclusions is this truth that our God changes not! Why, brethren, should we not rejoice and rest in it? since because of it our sins have not long ere this swept us away.

We desire to say that we have met in peace and love. The word preached has comforted our hearts. We desire a continuance of your correspondence, and hope to see your faces among us when you can come.

We have appointed the next meeting to be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday before the first Monday in September, 1894.

F. A. CHICK, Mod.

J. C. HATCH, Clerk.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Roxbury Old School or Primitive Baptist Association, in session with the Andes Old School Baptist Church, at Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., Sept. 6th and 7th, 1893, to the associations and corresponding meetings with which we correspond, sends christian greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Through the tender mercy of our heavenly Father we are again privileged to address you, and feel to humbly hope that our labor of love will not be in vain in the Lord; for we know that only in the Lord will our favors meet, as we are dwelling together in one spirit, as one body, though in different parts of the earth located. The body of our Lord Jesus Christ is one, though it has many members, and all are called with the same blessed voice of love, and admonished to continue in the same, which works no ill to its neighbor. We cannot too highly appreciate it, for by it alone all our interest is developed, and all minor differences are overcome, and the fervency of our heart is shown. Truly we may continue the ancient maxim, See how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in oneness of heart and judgment. We wish ever to remember what we are saying by our expression to you. By our works shall we be justified, and by our works shall we be condemned. If they are not by a "Thus saith the Lord," they are bad, and will not stand, and our condemnation will be written in the foolishness of our act. But if we have a "Thus saith the Lord" for our foundation and action, then we need not fear what earth or hell can do. It is therefore with pleasure that we hail the returning session among the brotherhood, and we do deem it a high privilege to be able to address the holy kindred in the earth, believing ours is not a false name, and we may come to you of like precious faith. The King of Zion is on his throne, and all his subjects fear to depart from his law; yet not as anti-christ fears and acts, but with love and reverence for his holy name, which to us is above all other names; for his is the only name that is salvation itself.

Dear brethren, while another year has passed, and the truth of the Scripture has been realized, in that we have heard of wars, and rumors of wars, and earthquakes in divers places, and men's hearts have failed them for fear of things that are coming upon the earth, and calamities almost without precedent, of various natures, have been realized, yet Zion remains unmoved.

"Her Founder's love has ever proved Like Salem's mount, which ne'er was moved;

'Tis fix'd on this eternal base,
The grace of God, and gift by grace.

"Oft has this city's strength be tried
By mighty foes on every side;
But all in vain it yet has been;
She baffles Satan, hell and sin."

And we are glad to say to you, dear kindred, that so far as we know or hear there are more signs of brethren in general being settled in all the cardinal points of the doctrine of God our Savior; proving to us that the winds of doctrine, with all the adverse scenes, are of profit to those who are rooted and grounded in the truth, and only those that cannot be shaken from a steadfastness in the faith will remain.

Our hearts are also gladdened to know that the servants of our God are lifting up their voice against all ungodliness and craftiness of men, and saying to Zion, "Thy God reigneth."

Our session has been one of harmony and peace, and we have been comforted by the coming of your messengers, and the preaching of the word by the servants of our God, who have come to us in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, for which we feel thankful to God, and desire a continuance at our next session, which, if the Lord will, will be held with the Second Church of Roxbury, at Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., the first Wednesday and Thursday in September, 1894, commencing at ten o'clock a. m.

J. D. HUBBELL, Mod.

JAMES A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

At least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

MARRIAGES.

By Elder W. Lively, on August 30th, 1893, in Opelika, Ala., Mr. B. F. Murphy and Miss Anna B. Story.

By the same, on August 31st, 1893, in Phoenix City, Ala., Mr. E. J. Bartlett and Miss Lydia Rogers.

By Elder W. M. Mitchell, on Sept. 7th, 1893, at the residence of the bride's father, Elder W. Lively, in Opelika, Ala., Mr. J. P. Webb, of Kellyton, Ala., and Miss Elba B. Lively.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At the residence of Mr. Jeff Bulger, near Murchison, Henderson Co., Texas, sister Mary Martin, relict of Elder John R. Martin.

Sister Martin was born in Warren Co., Tenn., Sept. 16th, 1837. Her maiden name was Lively. She was married to John R. Martin Feb. 7th, 1852, moved with him to Texas in 1853, professed a hope in Christ in 1872, united with the Cool Springs Church of the Primitive faith and order in Henderson Co., Texas, on the fourth Sunday in August, 1873, and was baptized by Elder John Owens.

Sister Martin's home was in Van Zandt Co., Texas; but she was taken seriously ill with erysipelas in her face while attending a three days' meeting in Henderson Co., and died away from home, but among devoted relatives and friends. Her remains were removed to the Bethel grave-yard, near her home, for interment, and were met by a goodly number of weeping relatives and friends. After the writer had tried to comfort the living from the text, "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly," her remains were laid beside those of her husband, who had preceded her about eleven years.

She leaves three sons and six daughters, together with the church and many relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. May the God of all grace reconcile us to his dealings with us in all things, and make us able at all times and under all circumstances to say from the very depth of our hearts, "Thy will be done," is the sincere desire of the writer.

FRANK LODEN.

CANTON, Texas, Sept. 3, 1893.

Peter R. Parsons departed this life June 3d, 1893, at his home near Pittsville, Wicomico Co., Md.

Brother Parsons was born June 3d, 1814, and was baptized in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at Indiantown on Dec. 21st, 1844. I have been intimately acquainted with this dear brother about twenty-two years, being pastor of said church about that length of time. Notwithstanding he had been connected with the church by a profession for nearly half a century, I never have heard of the least thing that reflected upon his christian character. Great indeed was the grace by which he first believed.

Thus the Lord is removing the shining lights from his church militant to the church triumphant. We miss our dear brother very much; for if he failed to attend our meeting we might readily suppose something was the matter. We would still bow at the hand of the Lord, knowing that he does all things well. May God help us all his pattern to pursue.

Elder A. B. Francis was present and attended the funeral services. The remains were laid away in the old family burying-ground to await the voice of God.

We sympathize greatly with his aged companion, who has shared with him through the hard struggle of an industrious life. She does not sorrow without hope. She shared with him in his church privileges also. May the Lord be her stay and strength.

He leaves three daughters, all members of the same church, and one son, not a member. May the Lord so teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

T. M. POULSON.

NEW CHURCH, Va., Sept. 10, 1893.

DIED—At his residence in Tyler Co., Texas, about six miles from Woodville, on July 27th, 1893, Lewis J. Rigsby, at the advanced age of 90 years.

"Uncle Lewis," as he was called by almost every one, was known to be one of the best citizens in this country. Although he had not made a public profession by putting on Christ in baptism, yet we have every reason to believe that he was born again. He often spoke of the comfort he received while listening to gospel preaching. I have often thought, while trying to preach Christ to the church, that I could see that dear old saint's bosom glow with love. The last two or three years of his life here he was confined at home, but his desire was great to hear preaching. He died as he had lived, in the faith. I was sent for and attended his funeral, using for a text Job xiv. 7.

ALSO,

DIED—Mrs. Mary Rigsby, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Milner, in the town of Jasper, Jasper Co., Texas, aged 77 years, 3 months and 2 days.

She was born in Wilkes Co., Ga., Feb. 1st, 1816, and moved to Monroe Co., Ga., where she was married to Lewis J. Rigsby on Jan. 9th, 1831, and with him moved to Angelina Co., Texas, in 1840. After one year they moved to Tyler Co., where she spent the remainder of her life, except a short time before her death, which occurred May 3d, 1893.

These two old people had raised a large family of children, fifteen in number, twelve of whom lived to be grown. Her remains were brought to the old home in Tyler County, and interred in the old family burying-ground. This dear old sister in Christ joined the Mt. Pleasant Primitive Baptist Church in Monroe Co., Ga., about the year 1835. She was a Predestinarian Baptist in full, and died in that faith. She was firm to the last, giving glory to God. A more instructive and interesting talker I never met. In her death society has lost one of its brightest pearls, and the church one of its best members. She had sixty-four grandchildren and eighteen great-grandchildren. To her only sister in the flesh, Mrs. E. A. Ferguson, I would say, Weep not, for she has gone to the mansion on high, to ever be with the Lord. To the children I would say, Try to follow the precepts and examples left you by your mother, for her words were fitly spoken.

I tried to speak on the occasion, using for a foundation Isaiah lxiii. 7. May we all be prepared to meet death, and to say, as she did, "I am happy."

Yours in hope of eternal life beyond the grave,

B. F. STEWART.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please insert in your next issue the death of your dear brother, Joseph Ar buckle, who died in Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 2d, at the advanced age of 87 years.

He was confined to his room more than three years with paralysis. He was a patient sufferer, and his hope and faith were his light until his life was ended.

MRS. SUE ARBUCKLE.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Indiantown, near Powellville, Wicomico Co., Md., to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those who contemplate attending this meeting will get tickets for Pittsville, Md., via Salisbury. Those coming from New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington will take the early train on Tuesday, so as to connect with the train on the B. & E. R. R. which leaves Salisbury about 1:00 p. m. for Pittsville, where they will be met and conveyed to places near the meeting. Those coming from and by way of Baltimore can either take the Enoch Pratt or the B. & E. boat Tanquer. Both leave Baltimore about 4:30 or 5:00 p. m. The Pratt will not arrive in Salisbury until about 9:00 a. m. Wednesday, while the B. & E. train arrives at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m. Tuesday. I think it would be better to come on the B. & E. Those who are not acquainted with the route will go down on the steamboat wharf on Light Street, pier 9, and board the B. & E. street boat Tanquer, which leaves (if no change by then) at 4:30 p. m., and will land at Clabourn about 8:00 or 9:00 p. m. Then take the train, which will arrive at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m., where they will be met by friends in and near Pittsville.

We hope to see a goodly number of the friends and kindred in Christ, those who are not hunting for gold, but for the hidden treasure which is found nowhere but in the Lord's sanctuary. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, especially ministers.

Done by order of the church.

L. A. HALL, Clerk.

THE Juniata Association of Primitive or Old School Baptists will convene, the Lord willing, with the Providence Church, in Bedford Co., Pa., on Wednesday, October 4th, and continue three days. A cordial invitation is given to all of our faith and order.

Those coming by railroad will come to Bedford on Tuesday, where they will be met. Those coming had better write to George W. McClellan, Rainsburgh, Bedford Co., Pa.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Columbia Church, Jackson Co., Mich., commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October, 1893. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north and east will be met at Napoleon; those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Clerk.

THE Otter Creek Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will hold a yearly meeting at Oelwein, Iowa, commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October.

Oelwein is accessible from all points, being a railroad town.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited to attend.

SARAH A. GARRETT, Clerk.

THE Cow Marsh yearly meeting will be held on the fourth Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September.

Those coming by rail will take the first down train on Saturday for Henderson, changing cars at Clayton. Those from the southward will take the first through train from Delmar for Felton, arriving at 9:20 a. m., where they will be met and cared for.

We hope for a good attendance, and that those who come will find it good to be there.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE.

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.15; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1893.

NO. 39.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHENT, Ky., Aug. 19, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The psalmist says, "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."—Psa. cxxvi. 6. This language evidently presents our Lord in his humiliation and exaltation, and in his unity with his people. From the cradle to the tomb he was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. He went forth weeping. Gethsemane attested his sorrows, and Calvary his suffering. The prophet says, "His visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men." He declared his poverty, so far as earth and earthly things were concerned, when he said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." For the comfort of the saints the apostle says, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich." His poverty, his sorrows and his sufferings were all fixed in the eternal mind before time began; and his prophets were inspired from on high to declare those great and wonderful things, that his beloved, chosen people in this gospel day might have two witnesses, one foretelling his humiliation and suffering, and the other declaring in the four evangelists the complete fulfillment of those promises. He said to the two mourning disciples as they journeyed from Jerusalem to Emmaus, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself." Then evidently the saints while in their earthly pilgrimage have these two witnesses to strengthen their faith and buoy them up amidst these scenes of darkness, gloom and sorrow, which are often their companions. But, dear follower of Jesus, he passed through all those scenes of humiliation, sorrow and suffering, that you might reign with him in glory; that you might be brought into the glorious inheritance of the saints. That inheritance is not secured to you by works of righteousness which you have done, but because he trod the winepress alone. He declares, "Of the people there was none with me." "I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold; therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me." His salvation from the powers of death and the grave secured the salvation of all his redeemed from the sting of death and the victory of the grave, because of his unity with them. The apostle says, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." Then, surely he was bearing precious seed; bearing them who were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, who were loved by him with an everlasting love. Love cannot exist without an object on which it rests, an object beloved. The bride says, "My Beloved is mine, and I am his. He feedeth among the lilies." What a sweet and heavenly emotion is that love which permeates the hearts of saints and enables them to sing, "My Beloved is mine, and I am his." Then in the sweet exercise of precious faith they are enabled to say, "He feedeth among the lilies." Our Lord said to his disciples, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow: they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. He compared his saints to the lilies. He feeds among them. He feeds them on the sweet manna of the gospel. He is among them, and says to them, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." They are to him a precious seed. He bare them and carried them all the days of old. He said to his disciples, "Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me. Because I live, ye shall live also." The apostle says, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." Then they surely were a precious seed. "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation," is the language of inspiration. For that seed he went forth weeping. For that seed he suffered the tortures of Calvary. For that seed he arose from the tomb. For that seed he ascended up on high, and ever liveth to make intercession for them. It is written, "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the righteous." But he shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. He leaves this strong assurance on record to remove any doubts in the mind of his saints as to his second coming. He has said to his redeemed, "Because I live, ye shall live also." He said to John, "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death." Then surely to that seed is secured that eternal life of which he spoke when he said, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." But he has the keys of hell and of death. The word hell in this text means the grave, and the death of the mortal bodies of his saints. He has the keys, and he will unlock them both. He was dead, but now is alive for evermore; and they shall be like him, and see him as he is; see him in his ascended body, that body which is made all glorious by being clad in immortality. It was that immortality in which he ascended on high. "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts i. 10, 11. Evidently he was received by a cloud of witnesses from the fairer worlds on high. But he shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. Then he will come, not as a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, not to suffer on Calvary, not to rest in the darkness of the tomb; but he will come in holy triumph, bringing his sheaves with him; bringing all for whom he suffered, all who were chosen in him before the foundation of the world. They were given to him in the everlasting covenant. He says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back; bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth." No land or clime so remote as to escape his omnipresence, or to be overlooked by his all-seeing eye. Of the bodies of the saints the apostle says, "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." And he says, "As is the earthy, such are they also which are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also which are heavenly." Adam was a natural man, and was earthy, and he and all his numerous descendants were and are subject to death. It is written, "As in Adam all die." They die because they are sinners, and the wages of sin is death. Sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. But if sin and death had never entered into the world, there could have been no glorious resurrection, and our Lord could not have said, "I am the resurrection and the life." That was his language at the grave of Lazarus, and it was declarative of his great and wonderful character. He is immutable; therefore he was the resurrection and the life before time began, and that life which was treasured up in him from the very ancients of eternity was secured in him for all his redeemed, all who were called by his name. He created them for his glory. He had suffered the penalty of the law which they in their natural head had violated. That penalty was death. He had arisen from the tomb, he had ascended up on high, and he doubtless will come again, bringing his sheaves with him; bringing all his chosen and redeemed family. Then, as they have borne the image of the earthy Adam, which is ruined by sin and death, they shall also bear the image of the heavenly, which is Christ. That image bears the index of life eternal. "Because I live, ye shall live also," is his language. He says by his inspired servant, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." The victory is that to which Paul refers in his letter to Titus, saying, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." The apostle says, "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin unto salvation." They that look for him are that seed that shall be accounted to him for a generation. They are those sheaves that he will bring with him when he comes rejoicing. He rejoiced when he went forth from the tomb proclaiming to an astonished world, "Mine own arm brought salvation unto me." O how wonderful and glorious will be that rejoicing when he comes with all his holy angels, and calls from the dark confines of the tomb all his redeemed. "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust," is the language of the prophet. O how sweet and melodious will be that song of everlasting triumph, that song of the redeemed as they come forth from their long sleep. They have in all ages, climes and lands fallen asleep in Jesus; but when that great and glorious day shall have fully come, they will awake in the likeness of their glorious and risen Lord, and come forth rejoicing. As he rejoiced when he came forth from Joseph's new tomb, so will they; for they are one with him. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing." If there is no doubt as to his coming, surely there can be no doubt of his bringing his sheaves with him. The apostle in holy triumph said, "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." As he, when he arose from the dead, was clothed in glorious immortality, so will his redeemed come forth from the darkness of the tomb clothed in immortality; for they shall be like him, and shall see him as he is. He is alive for evermore; so will they be. You and I, dear saints, will in a few more days rest in the tomb; but our hopes all center in Jesus, and our faith looks to him as the resurrection and the life. But if in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. Our faith is vain and our hope is perished if Jesus came not from the tomb. But by faith his saints behold him as their glorious risen Lord, their triumphant Redeemer, no more to go forth weeping, no more to bear the sorrows of Gethsemane and the tortures of Calvary. The angel said to John, "Come hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." That bride constituted the whole redeemed family, all those sheaves that he will bring with him. What a great and glorious vision was that which John had when he beheld all the glorified saints, from Abel to the last one that will ever tread the plains of this sin-cursed world. The Bridegroom says, "My dove, my undefiled, is but one; she is the only one of her mother; she is the choice one of her that bare her." "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" This is the bride, the Lamb's wife, which John in that great and wonderful vision saw. She is the sheaves which her glorious Lord will bring with him when he comes the second time, without sin unto salvation; when he comes to gather his jewels and take them home to dwell with him throughout eternity. To his name be all the glory.

The brethren editors will please dispose of these thoughts as they may deem best, and believe me affectionately theirs in deep humility,
H. COX.

NEW HOLLAND, Ohio, Sept., 1893.

ELDER BENTON JENKINS — MY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I beg you to pardon my delay in acknowledging the receipt of your dear welcome letter. It was impossible for me to do so during the hot weather, which seemed to prostrate me so that I could scarcely hold life in me, and at times caused me to seem almost as much dead as alive. But thanks be to the dear Lord, who is indeed the author and giver of all good, since the cool autumn days have come, with their lovely shadows, soft, mellow sunlight, and invigorating breezes, I seem to have more animation and life, and feel at times like again taking up the half broken thread of life, and once more taking some interest in the life struggle, and the things that make up this temporal life of ours. Yet I feel that I have little to do with the ambitions and aspirations of this earthly life; for truly I seek a country, a city which hath sure foundations, whose builder and maker is God; and I desire that though still in this painful body of flesh my life may be truly hid with Christ in God, and that the sweet secret of the Lord may have indwelling within my soul. So entirely cut off from all mingling with the world as I am, it would almost seem that no evil minds, no trail or hiss of the serpent, could come near or annoy me. But O! there seems no place under this natural sun where his satanic power cannot be felt, where his fiery darts cannot sting. How he lies to me, and tortures me with painful questionings, causing me to doubt, not the existence of the mighty God, but his wise purpose in all things, especially in this trial of my life, and the afflictions that no earthly power can control. But as in Job's afflictions and trials Satan could go just so far as the Lord Jehovah gave him leave, so I trust in my own life, through the grace of God I am sometimes lifted above all doubts, above the thrusts of the enemy, above my very self, and made to rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

I cannot tell you, dear Elder Jenkins, how very glad and grateful I felt, how thankful to my blessed Lord, for the helpful sum your letter contained. Will you do me the favor to tender my heartfelt thanks and my christian love to the dear brother and sister who thus kindly remembered me in my sore affliction? Whilst I do not wish to burden the dear ones with my burdens, I am most thankful when they thus remember me, and help to lift the weights that grow very heavy at times. At no time during my sickness have my expenses been heavier than during the past trying season. How I could have met them had it not been for Elder Durand's efforts in selling my books, and the assistance and patronage rendered by other dear ones, it would be impossible to tell. O how thankful I feel to them all, and I trust I am also thankful to him who feeds the sparrows, who causeth the lily to grow, and who is all our strength in weakness, our friend and helper in times of sore trial and need.

This is "the Lord's day." I choose this day to answer your precious letter, because it is of all my days the most quiet and free from callers and interruptions. I presume you are at this hour assembled with the dear saints and proclaiming to them the dear, unsearchable riches of Christ. How deep, how rich, how unsearchable indeed it all is. As man by searching cannot find out God, neither can mortals by searching find out the depth, the riches, the power, of salvation, nor be able to understand the workings of the Holy Spirit. We often experience seasons of great darkness and doubt, with a painful sense of spiritual sorrow and desertion. How vain it is for us to try in our own human strength to rise above it, or to bring about a feeling sense of the dear Savior's love shed abroad in our hearts. But as Jesus often appeared noiselessly and miraculously to his disciples when they sat in silence and sorrow, with the door of their chamber shut, so he appears to us when the door of our spiritual utterance is shut, and all sense of the warmth of his love is gone.

Elder Durand paid me a brief visit on the 7th of this month. All the night previous to his coming I felt bowed to the dust with a sense of sin, and the loss of the presence of that dear Friend who loveth at all times. I felt unfit to meet or converse with a dear servant of the most high God. But after the dawn of day such a flood of spiritual light and warmth filled my soul, such a sense of the Lord's goodness and love to me always, filled my whole being as I am unable to express. So happy did I feel that my cheeks became flushed, my eyes brightened, and when the Elder came he remarked again and again that I looked so well. He was to preach at two o'clock that afternoon; but on the way down he took such a violent attack of hay fever, from which he got no relief, that he had the appointment recalled. But so full did my soul feel to be with the sweet song of redeeming love that I felt none of the keenness of disappointment at the recall of his appointment. I thought nothing about the peculiarity of my feelings at the time; but just at the hour of noon I suddenly became very sick and cold, and before an hour elapsed, I think, I was in one of my bad chills, and unconscious to all about me, save when I was spoken to and aroused. I scarcely knew the Elder was here until a short time before he left. Still I felt peaceful and content, with no hungering for the preached word until some days after, when my sister sang these lines,

"Mid scenes of confusion and creature complaints,
How sweet to my soul is communion with saints."

Then it was that a flood of sweet, tender memories swept over me. I felt keenly what I had lost by not hearing the Elder tell the dear old story, so old, yet ever new, of Jesus and his love; and I longed, O so tenderly and earnestly, to be once more permitted to assemble with the dear saints. But O! dear Elder Jenkins, can you not see the goodness and tenderness of our dear Jesus in giving me a foretaste of the heavenly joys, in handing me great clusters of purple fruit from his ever bountiful hand on that morning, before I became so ill? And does it not show us what power he has to feed and care for his little ones, independent of the ministry of his under-shepherds? O! wonderful indeed is his power; deep, unfathomable and unsearchable are his riches, and truly are his ways past finding out. How sweet, how restful, to be sometimes taken into his banqueting house, where his banner over us is love; and when this banner of love unfurls itself about us how boldly can we say, "Get thee behind me, Satan;" and how instead of being filled with hatred and a desire to speak evil of our kindred, are we filled with good will toward all, and fervent love toward those of the dear household of faith. O! I would that we could all sit oftener under this delightful banner; that the sweet, divine cords might draw us all closer and closer together, uniting us also more closely to Christ Jesus, our glorious Redeemer and King. "One of the evidences that we are brought from nature's darkness into the glorious light and liberty of the gospel is that we love the brethren." O! we cannot love one another in this spiritual sense too much; we cannot be too tender, too discreetly loving in our intercourse in this blessed spiritual relationship. Pray for me, dear Elder Jenkins; and O! if it is the Lord's will to keep me here during the change to another season, may he give me grace to bear the burden, the pain of so painful a life. I dread the cold of winter quite as much as the heat of summer. I will have to keep a very warm fire day and night, or my sore bare feet and limbs, out of which so much water drips, constantly keeping everything about me wet, will surely freeze in cold weather. O that it would please the Lord to send the blessed summons calling the weary one home. "Home, sweet, sweet home." Sweet indeed to the weary tried soul will be rest and home. In his own good time he will call us all. May our lamps be filled and trimmed, and may the glorious Bridegroom find us indeed ready, adorned as a bride for the husband.

In deep affliction your sister,
MARY PARKER.

SCHOHARIE, N. Y., Aug. 14, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The inclosed letter from Elder F. A. Chick to me, in partial answer to my request for his views on a portion of the sixteenth chapter of the prophecy of Ezekiel, will explain itself. Although a private letter, and not intended for publication, nor having Elder Chick's consent to publish it, I submit it for a place in the SIGNS, if you have space for it. Please accept thanks for your editorial on the first part of the same chapter. I think I have been more than paid for my inquiries, and I trust you will have patience with me in my inquiries after the truth; and should they become tiresome, no offense will be taken should they find a place in the waste-basket. Knowing my own ignorance and inability to teach, I feel out of my place in making the attempt, and am content to share with the readers of the SIGNS in the many messages of love and comfort that appear in its columns from time to time from those who have been qualified to instruct in spiritual things; and though once a despiser of the paper and the doctrine for which it contends, I now find it a welcome weekly visitor at my fireside.

Hoping that its columns will continue to overflow with counsel and instruction, I remain yours in fellowship of the gospel,

P. S. KINNEY.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 3, 1893.

MR. P. S. KINNEY—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—In this week's number of the SIGNS I see a request from you, which Elder Beebe has complied with, and also one that is addressed to myself; and I feel to-day like writing you a private letter, in which I desire to give expression to a few thoughts by way of a partial answer to your request. I take this way of responding, because it might be some time before I could write for the SIGNS, and because I do not feel that I could write anything upon this subject of sufficient value to go into its columns. Of course, in the few things which I may write I cannot go into any extended remarks, because the chapter itself would fill up the amount of an ordinary letter.

It seems to me that in the whole chapter our God is expostulating with Israel; and I will say right here (that I may not be misunderstood) that Israel in all things is a type of the church now, and all that I shall say of Israel belongs to the church as well. If I do not stop in this letter to make the application, I hope you will understand me to mean it so.

In the first part of the chapter, to verse fourteen, the Lord their God recounts the favor he had shown them, and adds to the force of this by showing them how vile and helpless they were before he found them, and raised them up, and married them to himself. Then, commencing at the fifteenth verse, and on to the thirty-fourth, he shows to this, his bride (for whom he had done so much), how they had requited him. They had been unmindful of his favors, totally ungrateful to him, and had gone after other lovers. Instead of worshiping him as the giver of all their mercies, they worshiped idols, and ran after all manner of wickedness, totally disregarding his commands. This would have been inexcusable had she been married to him as an equal; but how greatly was the offense magnified, since she had been raised up from such a low place. Then, from verse thirty-five to forty-one, the outraged husband declares what he will do to them in chastisement, until they repent and turn again to him. God deals with his people, when they sin, as with children; and his chastisements are not intended to destroy, but to heal them.

Then, from verse forty-four to fifty-nine, he shows that this wrong which they have done is not from the new man and new nature which he had given them, but from the earthly nature, which was allied to her sisters after the flesh, Sodom and Gomorrah; for the bride of Christ is by nature the same as those who perish, children of wrath; and in her wrongdoing men shall say that they are just like their mother and sisters. Men cannot see the hidden tie which binds them to God in spite of their lewdness; and so men will laugh at their claim to be the people of God, and will regard the judgments of God as sent in anger to destroy rather than to heal.

In the last five verses our God declares that after all he will remember his covenant with them. How closely this agrees with the words in Psalm lxxxix. 30-37. Now, this was all for Israel. The nations around had no part in it. It all was from love, which showed itself in chastisement as well as in comforts. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," &c.

Each verse of this chapter contains enough for a sermon, but of course I have only suggested the general outlines of the chapter. In individual experience our God deals the same way with his people now. Each of us was an alien, cast out in our blood, and naked. Each of us was found by him. Each of us was raised up, bound up, clothed, and married to him. We have all gone too often astray. We have all been chastised and brought back, and each of us has found that his covenant has not failed. Our only hope is that he will remember his covenant. Thanks be to God, he does remember it.

I leave these few hasty thoughts with you, hoping they may afford you some satisfaction.

I remain your brother in a precious hope,

F. A. CHICK.

ST. EDWARD, Neb., June 18, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As I have derived so much comfort from reading our dear family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I thought I would pen a few lines to its readers. I want to talk a little while to the poor of the flock; to those who, like myself, are deprived of hearing the gospel preached, and are cast in a desert land, and hungering and thirsting for spiritual food. It has been two years since we heard a gospel sermon. There are no Old School Baptists nearer us than twenty-five miles, to our knowledge. There is plenty of preaching here, but it is no food for me. All the preaching we get is through the SIGNS. We feel lonely at times, and long for the company of the people of God. But I feel unworthy to take even the lowest seat, my heart feels so much of the time like a sink of sin. I find that in my flesh no good dwells. The good that I would, I do not; but the evil that I would not, that do I. It is with me a continual warfare. But if I am one of the chosen, one of God's children, I can do all things through our Savior, who will strengthen us. He says in his word that it is not the noble and great of the earth he came to call, but the humble, the poor in spirit, sinners, those who are pressed down with their sins. The question often comes into my mind, How do you know you are a child of God? Then I look around for some evidence, and the thought will come, Why do you hunger and thirst after righteousness, and long to be free from your sins, and to be holy? The Scripture says, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him." I have a faint hope that I am one of the poor of earth; and our Savior has said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." We read that our Savior was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. If we are God's children we will have to suffer with him. We read in his word that he has all power in heaven and earth, and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou? I feel to rejoice at times while contemplating the goodness and mercy of God. How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! He says that heaven is his throne, and earth is his footstool, and all the nations are as a drop in the bucket. Where is boasting? What can poor, finite man do, whose breath is in his nostrils? They say here that they are working for Jesus. But our Jesus has completed his work which his Father gave him to do. He cried, "It is finished." So I believe God's people will all be saved with an everlasting salvation. Not one will be lost.

I was greatly edified in reading sister Abbie Coddington's letter in the SIGNS. Write again, dear sister. If I were as gifted as are some of my brethren and sisters, I would not fear to write for our family paper. But we all feel our weakness, and are dependent upon God for all things, both temporal and spiritual. It is written in God's word that David was a man after God's own heart; yet he felt his weakness. He prayed, saying, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." "Preserve me, O God, for in thee do I put my trust." My dear kindred, is not this the prayer of every heaven-born child? David said, "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God. Many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the Lord."

Brethren Beebe, I will commit this scribble to your better judgment. I have penned these few thoughts as they came into my mind.

Your unworthy sister,

ANNA M. CLARK.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

MINUTES OF ASSOCIATIONS.

WE wish to call the attention of our brethren to the fact that we are prepared to print the Minutes of their associations, and solicit their patronage. We guarantee satisfaction as to workmanship and price. Among the Minutes we receive in correspondence we find a large proportion of them are printed by publishers of secular papers, who have not the slightest idea of what is meant by many of the peculiar expressions used by our order of Baptists, and consequently there often occur many ridiculous and grievous blunders in the business, as well as in the letters, Constitutions, Articles of Faith, Rules of Decorum, &c. It will cost but a few cents to mail the manuscript to us, and we will then send an estimate of the cost to print and mail the Minutes to any part of the country; and if not satisfactory we will remail the copy at our own expense, all of which can be done in a few days.

Brethren, please bear us in mind; and when your association is held present our proposition for consideration, and we will duly appreciate your kindness.

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 27, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FRUITS.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."
—Matt. vii. 20.

In her letter in the SIGNS for September 6th, our esteemed sister Runkle, of Macomb, Illinois, expresses the wish that this text should be made the subject of remarks by us and some of our correspondents. While uniting in her request for the views of others, we are willing to submit such thoughts as are given to us, in the hope that something may be presented which shall be of comfort to her and to other readers who may have been tempted with such suggestions of the adversary as she has encountered. In this way the tried and bewildered little children of the kingdom of heaven may be of mutual assistance in bearing one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. There is no device of the adversary more effectual in destroying the comfort of the saints than the suggestion of some portion of Scripture which seems to forbid their trust in the salvation which God has revealed in Christ Jesus. For the accomplishment of this crafty and deceitful end he frequently challenges the victim of his attacks to compare his own works and conversation with the perfect rule found in the law of Christ. Since every conscious sinner must confess that in himself dwells no good thing, it is not strange that they are easily deceived by this cunning falsehood, so that they cannot resist its cruel power. Their own natural mind is ready at all times to join with the tempter in bearing witness against the hope in which is all their strength. Our sister is not alone in her anxiety upon this vital point. It is not probable that any true child of God has ever been long at a time without this very discouraging doubt of the reality of his own evidence of the work of grace in his heart. The temptation to question the ground of his hope is always supported by the very manifest difference between the daily deportment in which he must confess that he can claim no merit, and the law of Christ to which he earnestly desires to be conformed. So important is the matter in the estimation of the troubled believer that he dreads above all things the thought of being deceived. Taking advantage of this weak point in the mind of the saints, the destroyer of their peace easily persuades them of the absurdity of such vile sinners hoping in the grace of God for justification of life. Were they left to defend themselves by their own ability, they would be overcome in the first onset of this strong attack upon their hope. They could never get the victory over this enemy in their own valor and strength. Even the inspired apostle Paul could only cry out for deliverance from the body of this death. He had not power to overcome in the struggle, even though he could remember the wonderful revelation which he received when on his way to Damascus. The great grace which enabled him to glory in the cross of Christ, must bring deliverance to him in every conflict while he remained in the body. So every follower of Jesus must have the present assurance of his Spirit to secure the victory over those persistent enemies which beset their pathway through this dark valley where the gloomy shadow of death shuts out from their sight the clear manifestation of the victorious banner of the triumphant Captain of their salvation. They know that God is able to save to the uttermost all whom he has ordained unto eternal life; but their earnest and anxious desire is to find assurance that they are included in that election of grace by which the heirs of immortality are chosen in Jesus Christ. Every indication by which reason would be guided bears testimony against their hope in the mercy of God; therefore their natural mind can never receive the truth of that election. But by faith they know that they have passed from death unto life, because they have the abiding witness in themselves. This testimony does not consist in self-confidence, by which they can boast of their own merits and despise others. It is the only hope of those who are taught of the Lord, that the blood of Jesus Christ has cleansed them from all sin; yet they are the only characters who are constantly mourning because of the consciousness of their bondage under the vanity of the law of sin which is in their members. When they would do good, evil is present with them. Such evidence as this could never show to the natural mind that they have a right to recognition as genuine disciples of Jesus. For this cause it is the common experience of such as see themselves sinners that they would abandon all hope if it were subject to their own judgment. But since they are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, all the testimony of reason cannot shake their confidence in the faithfulness of the witness which abides within them.

But they who are led by the Spirit of God must love righteousness; and when they find the bondage of corruption still holding them in its power they sink in unbelieving doubts. They carefully examine their own evidences, and finding in themselves nothing but evil, they remember the words of our text, and reason concludes that they must be mistaken in their hope. Now, there is one point which is worthy of special attention in the consideration of this subject, and every troubled one should carefully consider it. None but those who love righteousness can ever mourn on account of their own sin. Hence our Lord, in the same discourse from which our text is taken, says, "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted." He defines the mourning ones as those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. They shall be filled. This constitutes the blessedness of these mourners. Certainly there can be no such thing as mourning, hungering, and thirsting, and suffering persecution, by the choice of those who suffer. They who bear these marks are not blessed because they endure the afflictions specified; the blessing is manifested in the fellowship of the suffering of their Redeemer. In thus following Jesus they bear fruit as his disciples, and glorify him in their body and in their spirit which are his. The adversary often accuses them because they are not able to rise above their sufferings, and charges their groaning as rebellion against God. So Job was accused under his severe distress. The suffering which he endured was regarded by his accusers as evidence that God was punishing him for great wickedness, although they could not find any charge against him. For the comfort of the afflicted it is recorded that before the great trial of Job the Lord declared that there was "none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil." It is often tauntingly charged by the adversary, that the sufferings of the saints are because of their sinfulness. This adds to the bitterness of their anguish, since they are conscious that evil still dwells in their natural heart; and they often fear that they have no other principle in them but that which originates in the carnal mind. Here they have need of the guidance of the Comforter to take of the things of Jesus, and show unto them. The very sorrow which is wrought in them by the law of sin which is in their members, is itself the heavenly mark set on them by the Spirit, which proves conclusively that they are led by the Spirit of God; and all such are the sons of God. This is that godly sorrow which worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, and is in contrast with the sorrow of the world, which worketh death.—2 Cor. vii. 10. Being produced by the Spirit of Christ in the saints, it is the fruit which identifies those in whom it is developed as being the children of God. Such fruit cannot be found in the carnal heart, which seeks only the advantage of self. The natural mind never mourns on account of sin, nor can it produce the desire to be holy. There is no more satisfactory evidence that God works in a sinner than the sorrow which is felt on account of the bondage of sin. Every one who thus mourns is born of God.

While it is true that the evil thoughts and desires which trouble the saints are not fruits of the Spirit, it is also true that they do not trouble any others as they do those who are led by the Spirit. It is because of their hunger and thirst after righteousness that they mourn their subjection to the corruption of sin. Therefore their fruits are unto righteousness and meet for repentance; such fruits can never be produced by the corrupt tree of sinful nature. To mark the distinction between the fruit of the Spirit and the works of the flesh there is so clear a line revealed that they are as opposite as light and darkness, as good and evil, as love and hatred, as heaven and hell. Nor is this contrast stronger than what is required by the bewildered children of grace; for they are often so severely tried by the devices of their cunning adversary that they are at their wits' end; and with all the assurance of divine truth to sustain their hope they are scarcely saved from despair. Unbelieving reason never seeks such fruit as the Spirit produces; but demands something which could gain the approval of the natural mind. The pompous benevolence of the rich Pharisee commands the admiration of the world, while the simple ministration of love to the suffering man who was half dead, is not commended, because the Samaritan has no rank among religious will-worshippers. So the popular estimation of the abundant contributions of pride always places them above the humble mites of penury; because men judge only the outward appearance, but God judges the heart. Nothing can be acceptable in his sight but that which is wrought in his children by his own Spirit. The fruit which is produced by the Spirit is named by the apostle, and no other fruit can declare the glory of God. He says, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."—Gal. v. 22, 23. This is presented in contrast with the works of the flesh, which are enumerated in the immediate connection. There is nothing in all the statement of the divine fruit which can afford an occasion for the saints in whom that fruit is found to claim any of the glory of its production. It is evident that they are but the favored plants which bear the fruit as the Spirit of Christ develops it in them. They are made continually to feel that in themselves they are barren and unfruitful; so the Lord by his servant says to his chosen people, "Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him and observed him; I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found."—Hos. xiv. 8. Well may his people respond to this word of their Redeemer, "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us; for thou hast wrought all our works in us."—Isa. xxvi. 12. These works which are wrought in the saints by the Spirit of God are the only fruits by which God is glorified. Only his own works praise him; and only his saints bless him.—Psalm cxlv. 10. The fruit of the Spirit is all the fruit which manifests the “trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified.” In the bearing of this fruit the saints are not left to depend upon their own will or power. It is God that works in them both to will and to do of his good pleasure.—Phil. ii. 13.

The expression to which our sister calls attention is applied by our Lord to those whom he calls “false prophets” and “ravening wolves,” and for their detection this text is given. As corrupt trees they cannot bring forth good fruit. This is not to be understood as referring to the outward conduct of those to whom it is applied. So far as that is known to men the evil trees make a fair show, and appear to bear better fruit in the estimation of the world than the true followers of Jesus. Even our Lord was accused of being a wine bibber and a friend of publicans and sinners. No wonder that similar charges are brought against his disciples. These accusations are not brought by outward enemies alone. If that were all, they might be avoided by escaping from the company of such accusers. But there is a more cruel enemy dwelling in the flesh of every saint, who can find fault with the very thoughts of the heart, even though they have not been uttered. The evil heart of unbelief constantly accuses the trembling soul, and calls for works by which the evidence of the genuineness of his hope may be seen by the natural mind. It is impossible for the fearful saint to deliver himself from the power of this accuser. He is compelled to cry out of utter weakness to the Captain of his salvation, and then he realizes the truth that it is by grace he is saved in daily experience, as well as in deliverance from the condemnation and death where that grace was first revealed to him. The effect of this perpetual dependence on the arm of the Lord for present salvation is to teach him that he has no other refuge but in the power of God for every good gift and every perfect gift. Then he must render the full tribute of praise to the God of his salvation from whom we must receive constant supplies of righteousness and strength. There is a very manifest difference between the boasting which can claim to have borne fruit to the glory of God by doing what God has not commanded, and the suppliant cry, “Lord, help me!” with which the poor woman of Canaan worshiped Jesus.—Matt. xv. 25. No richer fruit was ever produced by any plant in the garden of our God than this ascription of omnipotent grace to him who gave himself for the sins of his people. The more deeply conscious of sin and vileness a suppliant may be, the greater the tribute of praise to that grace whereby salvation from sin is extended to such an unworthy object. The saints can never have fellowship for those who come to them boasting of their own works as fruits by which they have earned the favor of God. Such fruits at once expose their origin in the pride of the corrupt heart of those who know not God. Every teacher who bears such fruit is a false prophet, of whom the saints are to beware. They come to deceive, and destroy the comfort and peace of those whom they profess to love. The good tree of faith in the Lord Jesus always bears the good fruit of ascribing all the glory of salvation to our Lord exclusively, and leaving no confidence to be placed in the flesh. They who mourn their total pollution and weakness, always bear the good fruit of trust in the Lord, and such shall never be moved. No room is left in the heart of such destitute ones for trusting in themselves as being righteous. Hence they all bear the fruit of self-abhorrence, and in themselves can find no good thing. Such fruit shows that it is produced by the only really good tree, which is the Spirit of Christ in you, the hope of glory.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Licking Old School or Particular Baptist Association, in session with the church at Mays Lick, Mason Co., Kentucky, to the churches of which she is composed, sendeth love in the Lord.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We trust we feel that the Lord has given another proof of his boundless love in bringing us together again. We cannot say permitted us to come together, for permission is not enough, for that would still leave us as helpless as ever, without his power; but we know that the same hand that spread the feast has sweetly drawn us in. How peaceful and contented we feel when we see his hand, and know that everything was included in the plan, and must be as God our Father wills it. When it is given us to see him as the all-powerful God, and at the same time a God of love, we feel secure, and willing to rest in his promises. With what fearlessness, and a feeling of security, we can then sit in heavenly places and smile with pity on poor, little, sinful men trying to change the belief of a little child of God, or trying to prove that his salvation depends on the puny arm of man. How firm and sure this seat, this place in Christ Jesus, seems to us; how gladly and trustingly the poor, tired, heavy burdened, worn out lamb lies down in the green pastures of his love; more especially if he has been climbing the mountains of unbelief, worn out by stumbling-stones, almost ready to die of thirst, after wandering in the desert of worldly religion. With untold joy he sees the still waters, and is ready to cry, Great

Father of love, is it all for poor sinners? Yes, for those having the life in Christ Jesus. Then, have we life in him? It must be so; for if we had not spiritual life we could not see spiritual things in a spiritual world. We could know nothing of a world we had not seen, and could not believe if we had not seen by faith or in reality. Then, if we have spiritual life it must have been given by him that hath life; for how can he that is dead in sin give or get it? If you have this great gift, how humble and thankful you were made to feel when God revealed it to you. When this light shines in our hearts, how thankful this spiritual world appears. We cannot tell it, but can only stand still, wonder and rejoice, pitying those who are kept out of the fold and away from the feast. Many do not understand it, and laugh, because they cannot bear the sweet songs of praise that spring from the deep fountains of the heart, making a melody that is heard only in the courts of the King. The world cannot hear them; but to those in the kingdom they are so grand and full of harmony and love that they are contented to sit and listen, while from each breast the melody flows in streams too sweet for the voice of man, and in thoughts that cannot be uttered. Then what peace fills the heart; and the cares and strifes of the world appear to us as things working together for good to those who love him. When it was first given, did you not feel that nothing could disturb that sweet trust in the Lord? Let us pray that this peace may continue to rest upon his church, and may we realize that his providence is guarding and building it, as he has in the ages past. What a beautiful thing is this temple, the church of the living God. We are lost in wonder and admiration when we think of it and see it by the light of the Spirit, in all its beauty. For years it has been building, and yet is complete in the Lord, and is the temple of the living God. It is a mystery too deep for the mind of man. It is a temple not made with hands, although we hear much about people helping to build it. Would you not think strange of a man saying, “Come and help me build a temple for a king. I have the plan as he wants it built, but you all come and help, and each can build in his own way, or do as he thinks right?” But even that would be more reasonable than for him to say to dead men, Come and build. Would he not have to give life first? And they are dead in sin, yet call upon them to come and help the Lord in his great work. But, brethren, we know that the plan was made in eternity, and every stone must be in its place prepared for it, and all must come together without the sound of the hammer or the saw. He speaks, and it is done. He commands, and it stands fast. Each part is moved by his Spirit; and those parts are as unable to move until he speaks, as a block of wood or stone. But how quickly they should answer to those sweet words, “If ye love me, keep my commandments.” When called together, they ascribe all power and all glory to him who said, “Little children, love one another,” and at the same time put love in each heart. Well, each one knows that if he had been left to his choice, without spiritual life, he would even now be in nature’s darkness. The nature is not changed, but the light of the Spirit is here to show what we are by nature, and that we must be fashioned like unto his glorious body. We do not claim to know all this great mystery of the Father of love; only a very little of it; but we are content to wait upon the Lord, knowing that he will strengthen our souls. Let us not find fault with a brother because he cannot see just as we do, but speak to him in fear and trembling, lest we find ourselves wrong. Let us pray to be kept in peace.

Now, a little more of the temple. How beautiful is the building of it. We can only see as through a glass darkly, and fragments at times; but now and then as we journey on through the world a ray of spiritual light reveals something of it to us. It may be a stone, a precious stone, that the Master workman has lifted from the earthly darkness and marked it for its place in the temple. Day by day and year by year we see them separated from the world, and they seem to grow more and more fit for the temple, until they are lifted from earth and go to fill their places prepared for them eternal in the heavens. Some have left us in the years that are past, but let us thank God that it was his pleasure to reveal them to the people, and trust him to raise up others to tell of his goodness and mercy, and to stir up our pure minds, and also to exhort us to strive for the things that make for peace. May we not only be blessed with able ministers, but also with those who sit by the fire-side and tell of God’s love; those in whom we can see the Spirit of God revealed. May that Spirit guide us in the footsteps of our Shepherd, and keep us under the banner of love, that we may continue to dwell together in unity; not recounting another’s faults, or lack of understanding, but may we be led to throw over all the mantle of forgiveness and brotherly love. We may expect trouble and storms, for the winds must come, and the rains descend; but never fear, for our house is built upon a rock. His flock may seem few and cold, but fear not; he is faithful that promises; and each one, no matter how small he may feel, is included in the plan; and the plan is perfect, as he is perfect. It is a comfort to know that salvation is of the Lord; for we know how weak the works of men are. You have doubtless trusted in those works, only to fall down in the dust at his feet, to hear those sweet words, "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." A mother may forget her child, but he cannot forget you. He who led the murmuring host through the wilderness, will lead us home over the predestined way, to the place at his right hand, where we shall see him as he is. May he keep us strong in the most holy faith, that we may be reconciled to his will, and love each other, is our prayer, for Jesus' sake.

H. COX, Mod.

J. W. WALLIS, Clerk.

J. T. McCOUN, Ass't Clerk.

The Powell's Valley Primitive Baptist Association, convened with the church at Big Spring, Clariborne County, Tennessee, Friday, September first, second and third, 1893.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN:—In compliance with your order of last year, we now endeavor to write to you in form of a Circular Letter. We call your attention to the words of our Savior recorded in John xix. 30, "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost." It is said again, "They gave him vinegar to drink, mingled with gall." This cup of death was a bitter cup to drink. This Jesus who was crucified on the Roman cross was the Son of God, and sent by his Father into this sinful world to do the will of his Father. This Jesus was the Christ of God, the promised seed. "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Yes, indeed, he was the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head. It was through death that he did it; for it is written in the second chapter to the Hebrews, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." So we see our Jesus from his birth to his crucifixion, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. It is said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." But if any one should ask what the eternal Father sent his well beloved Son into this world to suffer all these things for, we would answer, Because "without the shedding of blood there is no remission." This is the one "that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength. I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat? I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with me; for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold: therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me, and my fury it upheld me."—Isa. lxiii. 1-5. "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished." What is finished? Why, salvation is now complete. He had fulfilled the law (in point of suffering); he had done all that his Father had spoken concerning him by his holy prophets. So he bowed his head and gave up the ghost. The prophet Isaiah, by an eye of faith, could see the suffering of this Jesus, and what this suffering should accomplish, and cried out in this language, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted; yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken." We should remember that "The Lord's portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his inheritance." "And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief. When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand." Here it is said, "He shall see his seed." It is the elect seed, or the members of his body. "He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin many, and made intercession for the transgressors." This Jesus came here to do what the angel said he should do. What was that? "He shall save his people from their sins." How did he do that? By bearing their sins in his own body on the tree; and he put them away by the sacrifice of himself. Then surely it is finished. Salvation is complete. The year of his redeemed had come, so he redeemed his people from the curse of the law, being made a curse for them. We understand that the law demanded the life of the transgressor; and this Jesus was the life of his people, who had transgressed the law, and so all their transgressions were laid upon Jesus, their elder Brother; and he being their life, he yielded it up. He bowed his head and gave up the ghost. In this he spoiled principalities, and brought in everlasting righteousness, and redeemed his people to God by his blood. "Who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."

Now we want to notice who his people are in a scriptural or spiritual sense. We understand them to be of the family of Adam. "And were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." But notwithstanding by nature they are the children of wrath, they are the children of God, by virtue of that choice that was made in Christ Jesus before the world began; reckoned as "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father." Jesus said, "I am the good Shepherd: the good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Then again, "As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him." The church is who his people are; and Jesus, the great head of the church and Savior of the body, gave himself for the church, "that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." Then, no wonder Solomon could sing of this Jesus and his church, saying, "I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys. As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters. As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight; and his fruit was sweet to my taste. He brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me was love." So then, Jesus can never change; and having loved his own, he loveth them to the end. And it was his great love where-with he loved us (the elect), even when we were dead in sin, that caused Jesus to receive the vinegar mingled with gall; yes, to drink the bitter cup of death. That love never has nor ever will abate, which Jesus has for his body, the church. He loved her well enough to die for her, and redeem her from all her sins and iniquities; and that is all he died for. The sins of his church is all that he put away by the sacrifice of himself. This is what he meant when he said, "It is finished." Now, we think we have shown who his people are, and that the death of the Son of God accomplished their redemption, so that we can in truth say, "Though thou hast lain among the pots, yet shalt thou be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers of yellow gold."

We want now to notice for a moment the unity or oneness of Christ and his church. We are glad to know that this doctrine is believed and preached much to the comfort of the peculiar and tried people of God. It still remains the truth that "both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren."—Heb. ii. 11. It still remains the truth that "no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church. For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones."—Eph. v. 30. And it is said, "A bone of him shall not be broken." The Scripture teaches that Adam was the figure of him that was to come; and we hear Adam say of Eve, "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh," &c. So the elect, the bride, the Lamb's wife, must be one in him; yes, chosen in him before the foundation of the world, that she should be holy, &c. Then they have been one from of old; yes, he (Jesus) bare us and carried us all the days of old. Then, brethren, fear not, for our Jesus has said, "I am with thee. I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west. I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth."—Isa. xliii. 6. So in due time his sons and daughters will be brought from a far country; yes, from the wilderness of sin; and they shall sit down under his shadow, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. She will certainly come up from the wilderness leaning upon her Beloved; for Jesus not only died for her, but rose for her justification; and he, like Joseph, reveals himself to his brethren, makes known to them their oneness and heirship with Jesus, their elder brother, so that they joy in God, by whom they receive the atonement. Brethren and sisters, we hope that you in an experimental knowledge have received the benefit of that finished work; and if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal body by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.

Brethren, the limits of this Circular Letter will not allow us to dwell at length on the oneness of Christ and his church; but we will quote this verse of poetry, as it dropped upon our mind,

"One in the tomb, one when he rose,
One when he triumphed o'er his foes;
One when in heaven he took his seat,
While seraphs sung at hell's defeat."

Now, brethren, we exhort you to steadfastness to Jesus, the only being to whom you owe allegiance. Let the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things. We hope to be able, while life shall last, to contend for the truth here set forth, with all its kindred truth. Now we commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost."

Farewell,

JAMES C. WALTON.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Powell's Valley Primitive Baptist Association, while in session with the church at Big Spring, Clariborne County, Tennessee, on Friday, the first of September, 1893, and following days, sendeth christian salutation to the sister associations with whom we correspond.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—It is again that we have been blessed with the privilege of meeting in an associated capacity, to hear from the Zion of our God, and to meet with your messengers, and to hear from you again. We have nothing of importance to write to you, more than that we are at peace among ourselves, for which we feel thankful to our God. Brethren, we desire to keep up a correspondence with you, and we have chosen these our beloved brethren, whose names you will see in our Minutes, to bear this our epistle of love to you, when convened at your places of meeting, whom we hope you will receive to sit together with you in all your godly consultations. Our next association will be held with the church at Holston, Grainger County, Tennessee, which begins on Friday before the first Saturday in September, 1894, where we hope to meet with you by letter and messengers. Brethren, pray for us. This done by order of the Association while in session.

JAMES McDONALD, Mod.

JAMES C. WALTON, Clerk.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

POETRY.

GENESIS V. 24.

"AND Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him."

I sometimes turn me from the page of glory,
The tales of heroes, and the paths they trod,
And think upon him of whose life-long story
Is simply told us that he walked with God.

No record of his deeds, if great or lowly,
No roll of battles fought nor triumphs won:

He walked with God, and in that presence holy Whatever deed he wrought was nobly done.

No record of the task of his fulfilling,
Whether he watched with shepherds on the plain,
Or labored patiently, the rich soil tilling:
He walked with God, and could not toil in vain.

No record of his wealth, if little earning,
Or if the flocks on all the hills were his;
He walked with God, and to him daily turning

For daily need, was heir to all that is.

No record of his fame, if to him bending
Men crowned with homage all his length of days;

Or humble and unknown to his life's ending,
He walked with God, and could forego 'man's praise.

No record if his path were bright or dreary,
If through the barren waste or pleasant vale;

He walked with God, and howsoever weary,
He leaned upon an arm that could not fail.

We know not if men followed his meek leading,
If human feet kept pace beside his own,

Or if he walked where all passed by unheeding;
He walked with God, and could not be alone.

We do not know what were the dreams he cherished,
What fond affections round his heart did cling,

How oft his hopes along the wayside perished;
He walked with God, and lacked for no good thing.

We do not know what bitterness oppressed him;
We do not know what secret tears he shed;

We cannot know what griefs and ills distressed him:
He walked with God, and so was comforted.

We do not know how oft his footsteps stumbled,
How oft he faltered on his journey's length,

How oft he fell, and lay abased and humbled;
He walked with God, and he renewed his strength.

We do not know what danger loomed before him,
How oft he quailed at some unlooked-for foe;

He walked with God, and while that arm upbore him,
Where'er it led he might not fear to go.

We know not if he always felt that guiding,
Or if no shadow ever dimmed his sight;

He walked with God, and in his care abiding,
Was safe with him in darkness or in light.

We think he found cool streams and shades to cheer him,
And resting-places for his tired feet;
And often when no earthly friend was near him
His soul communed with God in converse sweet.

We think the daily manna still was given;
We think each raven brought its needed dole;

No fountain failed him, and the peace of heaven
Lay like the dews of Hermon on his soul.

He walked with God, and no man knows the closing
Of that calm walk, nor how the ending came.

Did his soul pass upon God's breast reposing,
And knowing naught of death except the name?

Or, one day, with the vail of flesh unbroken,
Did God but draw him closer to his side,

The shining of his face the only token,
And so pass with him over Jordan's tide?

We know not; or if, with or without warning,
Upon his earthly walks the silence fell;

Or if it were at evening, or at morning:
We know he walked with God, and it was well.

And what if joy or sorrow shall betide thee,
If smooth or rugged ways thy feet have trod?

What matter by what way his hand shall guide thee,
So it be said of thee, "He walked with God?"

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—August 29th, 1893, of paralysis, Mrs. Hannah B. Bishop, daughter of Henry Winchell, and widow of C. B. Bishop, in the 70th year of her age.

The deceased was born in the town of Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., where she resided many years. She was a constant reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES beyond the memory of her children, and was a firm believer in the doctrine of the Old School Baptist Church. She lived a life that endeared her to all who knew her, and was ready and waiting for the great change that came so suddenly. She was a most devoted mother, and is sincerely mourned by the children she has left, whose consolation is that their loss is her great gain.

She was borne to her last resting-place at Shokan, N. Y., and laid by the side of her husband, who had preceded her nearly fifteen years.

"Dearest mother, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel."

MRS. E. B. GWINN.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—By request I send you a notice of the death of Sarah A. Van Velsan, which occurred July 1st, 1893, aged 43 years and 6 months.

The subject of this notice was an invalid about thirty years, being afflicted with rheumatism when quite young. She experienced a hope in Christ and desired to be baptized when about eighteen years old. She was baptized Oct. 18th, 1868, by the late Elder J. A. Badger, in fellowship with the Olive & Hurley Church, from which time she enjoyed meeting with them whenever she could get there. The scene at her baptism will long be remembered by those who witnessed it. She was carried from her father's house to the water in a chair, about ten rods from the house, and carried into the water by the Elder, assisted by the Deacon of the church. Several years ago the family went to Garnet, Kansas, from which time she had no church privilege, but often wrote to the church of which she was a member. She suffered very much in her last sickness with neuralgia of the stomach. As there was none of her faith there, she requested that there be no services at her burial.

J. V. WINCHELL.

OLIVE, N. Y., Sept. 15, 1893.

DIED—At his home in Manassas, Va., May 24th, 1893, Mr. Francis J. Cannon, aged 69 years, 4 months and 24 days.

Mr. Cannon was a man of fine business attainments, and during an active life had amassed a comfortable fortune. Of sterling integrity, he had the respect and confidence of the entire community in which his life was spent. Though he never made a public profession of religion, I feel assured that he had for a number of years a good hope through grace, which supported him through a long illness, and to the end. He was a regular attendant at the meetings of the Bethlehem Church, and manifested much interest in the preaching of the word and in the welfare of the church. I asked him one time why he never united with the church. His reply was that he was not fit. I gained fellowship for his experience, and felt to encourage him to confess his Lord in baptism; but, like many others, his doubts and fears concerning himself kept him away from the privileges of the church. He leaves an aged widow and several children, with many neighbors and friends, to mourn their loss. May the Lord of all comfort and consolation console the afflicted.

J. N. BADGER.

ALDIE, Va., Sept. 14, 1893.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Corresponding Meeting of Virginia will convene, the Lord willing, with the Ebenezer Church, Loudoun Co., Va., on Wednesday, October 11th, and continue the two following days. A cordial invitation is extended to our brethren and friends.

Those coming by railroad will be met at Round Hill on Tuesday (10th) and conveyed to places of entertainment. The train leaves the Sixth Street depot, in Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., and reaches Round Hill at 11:40 a. m.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Indiantown, near Powellville, Wicomico Co., Md., to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those who contemplate attending this meeting will get tickets for Pittsville, Md., via Salisbury. Those coming from New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington will take the early train on Tuesday, so as to connect with the train on the B. & E. R. R. which leaves Salisbury about 1:00 p. m. for Pittsville, where they will be met and conveyed to places near the meeting. Those coming from and by way of Baltimore can either take the Enoch Pratt or the B. & E. boat Tanquier. Both leave Baltimore about 4:30 or 5:00 p. m. The Pratt will not arrive in Salisbury until about 9:00 a. m. Wednesday, while the B. & E. train arrives at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m. Tuesday. I think it would be better to come on the B. & E. Those who are not acquainted with the route will go down on the steamboat wharf on Light Street, pier 9, and board the B. & E. street boat Tanquier, which leaves (if no change by then) at 4:30 p. m., and will land at Clabourn about 8:00 or 9:00 p. m. Then take the train, which will arrive at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m., where they will be met by friends in and near Pittsville.

We hope to see a goodly number of the friends and kindred in Christ, those who are not hunting for gold, but for the hidden treasure which is found nowhere but in the Lord's sanctuary. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, especially ministers.

Done by order of the church.
L. A. HALL, Clerk.

THE Juniata Association of Primitive or Old School Baptists will convene, the Lord willing, with the Providence Church, in Bedford Co., Pa., on Wednesday, October 4th, and continue three days. A cordial invitation is given to all of our faith and order.

Those coming by railroad will come to Bedford on Tuesday, where they will be met. Those coming had better write to George W. McClellan, Rainsburgh, Bedford Co., Pa.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY or two days' meeting will be held (the Lord willing) with the Clovesville Old School Baptist Church (of the Roxbury Association) on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, beginning at 11 o'clock on Saturday.

We anticipate a good meeting. All lovers of the truth are cordially welcome. The morning trains east and west will be met at Fleischmann's, on the Ulster & Delaware R. R.

A YEARLY or two days' meeting will be held (if the Lord will) with the Second Church of Roxbury (of the Roxbury Association) on the second Saturday and Sunday in October, beginning at 11 o'clock on Saturday.

The trains arrive at Roxbury from the east too late to get to the meeting in time, so those coming will do well to come the evening before. We welcome all.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Columbia Church, Jackson Co., Mich., commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October, 1893. A cordial invitation is extended to lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north and east will be met at Napoleon; those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Clerk.

THE Otter Creek Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will hold a yearly meeting at Oelwein, Iowa, commencing on Saturday before the first Sunday in October.

Oelwein is accessible from all points, being a railroad town.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited to attend.

SARAH A. GARRETT, Clerk.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.
Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, ^{October} AUGUST 4, 1893.

NO. 40.

D. L. Blackwell June 93

CORRESPONDENCE.

LAMONTE, Mo., Jan. 28, 1874.

ELDER GILBERT BEEBE—DEAR FATHER IN ISRAEL:—It is with fear and trembling that I take my pen in hand to address you and the many readers of the SIGN OF THE TIMES, should you think my poor, disconnected writing worth publishing. I have often had a desire to address you in particular, and the readers of the SIGNS in general; but my unworthiness has prevented me from attempting it until now, and it remains to be seen whether I send this or not. I will give you a short sketch of my christian experience, if indeed I have an experience of grace. I will leave your ripper judgment to decide whether I have or not. If I have, it is all through free and sovereign grace from beginning to end, and not from any good that I have ever done or can do; for if it is only the work of my carnal nature, then I am nothing but a mocking Ishmaelite. The Lord forgive me, if I am deceived, for ever blotting the church book with my name; for I do not want to deceive his people, nor bring reproach on his holy name.

My parents, Elder James and Prudence Teague, were professors of the Old Baptist faith, but did not unite with the church until after we left our native state, North Carolina. I was a mischievous child, always in some mischief, to the no little discomfort of my parents, who tried to the best of their ability to bring their children up to moral and useful lives. In the fall of 1846 my father moved to Missouri with his family, and settled in Pettis County, where he engaged in farming and teaching school. Subsequently he united with the Virginia Grove Church. This is the first time that I can remember seeing the rite of baptism administered. A while afterwards my mother also united with this church, and I had the pleasure of seeing her baptized.

Time passed on without any serious incident with me until the fall of 1850. Father was teaching school, and I was in attendance, when on the 21st of November it pleased the Lord to lay on me the cross of affliction, which rendered me a cripple for life, and I have never walked a step since. My disease proved to be scrofula. For six weeks they did not think that I would live. What I suffered with the bones bursting off and abscesses forming, none will ever know except those who have had this painful disease. Many pieces of bone were discharged from the abscesses. I have never been free from these tumors since the first one was lanced, and never expect to be in this world. But I wish to be submissive to the will of God in all my afflictions. No doubt they are for my good and his glory. My life passed on and I, poor sinner, never thinking of the goodness of God in sparing my unprofitable life, until May, 1852, when a Missionary preacher came home with my parents. He got to talking with me, and asked me if I ever prayed, and said if I would I might get better. He and some of my cousins stayed all night with us, and they all got to singing, and mother got to shouting and praising the Lord. She looked so happy that as I lay on my bed and looked at her I felt bad, and wished I was a christian and as good as she was. But this impression did not last long. When I would be worse I would try to pray (if it could be called prayer) the Lord to relieve my sufferings. One night I dreamed the world was coming to an end, and O how bad I felt to think that I could not go to heaven with my parents; for I thought I was not prepared to die, and must be separated forever from my dear parents. This dream rested on my mind and caused me such distress, for I feared my life would terminate as it did in my dreams. One day my aunt was reading the experience of Elder Peter Long, and I thought it so good that I could scarcely keep from weeping while she was reading. One night, during meeting at our house, father was exhorting, and it seemed as if he was speaking every word to me; for he seemed to describe my feelings so fully that I could not keep from shedding tears, though I did not want any one to see me. In the spring of 1853 the Methodists held a meeting close by us, and after the meeting closed some of my cousins received a hope. They stopped at our house on their way home, and one of them was talking to my sister, when my grief overcame me, and I wept aloud. My cousin asked me if I wanted her to pray for me. I told her I did. She engaged in singing and prayer, but it did me no good. When father returned from meeting the next night he said that two more of my cousins had received a hope. This only added to my grief, for I thought there was mercy for all but me. I felt like one alone, without hope. On the 5th of March, 1853, I was still laboring under a load of guilt and sorrow. My aunt and some of my cousins were visiting us. When dinner was ready I could not eat, for my heart was too full of sorrow. After dinner they were standing around my bed, singing, when my load of guilt left me, and I felt perfectly happy. I felt as if I could sing, and I believe I did try to. Father being from home, I told them I felt as if I could run and meet him on his return. The hymn,

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound!
That saved a wretch like me," was sweetly applied to my mind the next day. Father advised me to read the Testament and see which church I thought was right, according to its teachings, which I did, and came to the conclusion that the Old Baptist was the true church of Christ; and though only an ignorant child at that time, I have never seen any cause for changing my mind. On the contrary, the more I read the Bible the stronger am I founded in the doctrine of free and sovereign grace; not of works, lest any man should boast. Not by works of righteousness which we done, for our righteousness is but filthy rags, or as the fig-leaf clothing of our first parents. "Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are works of iniquity, and the act of violence is in their hands." Woe unto them that take the glory unto themselves that belongs unto God; for he declares, "I am the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another." Our dear Redeemer on the cross cried, "It is finished;" and when he expired on the cross the salvation of his people was completed. Nothing could be added to or taken from his work. "For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth forever." "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." But O! am I one of the least grains in his sheaves? It does not seem possible that the glorious Son of God should suffer the agonizing death on the cross for a poor, sinful worm of the dust as I feel myself to be; for I come very far short of living as I think a christian should; and I never had the deep conviction of sin, nor the great dread of hell, that so many have, but rather a dull sorrow for sin, and a desire for the pardoning mercy of God. Neither did I ever experience the bright and soul-reviving hope that so many have, but rather a faint glimmering ray of hope, as if reflected from some bright fountain just in spiritual sight, but beyond my reach. Yet, small as my hope is, I have never been able to throw it away; and if it is a genuine hope it is above price to me. Pardon me for letting my mind run away with my pen, and I will return.

On the second Saturday in May, the arm of the Virginia Grove church held meeting at our house, and when the door was opened for the reception of members something seemed to urge me to go forward in the discharge of my duty; so I related my little experience, and after some questions by Elder Corder, was received. I then felt that I had done my duty; but the next morning I feared I was deceived, and had deceived the church, and I wept bitterly. I continued in a dark state of mind until a few days before I was baptized, and told mother if I did not get better satisfied I would not be baptized. On the second Sunday in July they took me to meeting, and after preaching we repaired to the water. After singing the hymn,

"Constrained by love we come,
To imitate God's only Son,
The christian's only guide,"

I was baptized in my chair by brother Martin Corder. Brother Justin Mills assisted in taking me in and out of the water. Some said it would not be safe to put me under water, but it did not hurt me in the least.

On December 14th, 1856, it pleased the Lord to again lay the heavy hand of affliction on me, and I lost my hearing. So you see I have to depend on the medium of the pen for all the preaching that I get, and I am indebted to the correspondents of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for many a pleasant hour of reading. The letters of sister Bessie Durand and her brother Silas are always very comforting to me, and your editorials are always encouraging to my poor, doubting heart.

Dear brother Beebe, if you think this will be of any interest to the readers of the SIGNS, you are at liberty to publish it after correcting mistakes.

Wishing to be remembered at the throne of grace, I am, if a sister at all, less than the least of all,

ELIZABETH C. TEAGUE.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—A feeling of my inability to write for publication, and also my doubts of the foregoing being a christian experience, kept me from sending it to your dear father; and even now I fear it is not fit to publish; but as we are commanded to "be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear," and as my brother wishes to send it with the experience of our brother-in-law, I have concluded to send it.

I will say to dear sister Mary Parker that her book was a great comfort to me. I have drank much of the bitter cup that she has, but it has never pleased the dear Lord to bless me with the sweet joy of his love as he has her. No doubt the fault is in my hard, sinful heart. I always look for her name in the SIGNS.

May the Lord sustain you in the defense of the truth, is the wish of your little sister,

E. C. TEAGUE.

SIDNEY, N. Y., June 12, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I should be pleased to see the inclosed letter published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. It was written in reply to my request for her views or understanding of the text recorded Luke xiv. 26, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." In consenting to its publication sister Jones says (with characteristic self-denial), "If in anything I ever write there may chance to be one little crumb of heavenly manna, that is not mine to withhold, but to share among the faithful." The tone and substance of this letter is so very different from the worldly religion with which I am surrounded that I do not wish to enjoy it alone.

In christian love and fellowship, your brother,

JAMES BUNDY.

ARGENTINE, Kansas, April 30, 1893.

MR. JAMES BUNDY—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I was very much pleased at receiving your kind reply to my last letter, for it causes me to feel a sort of encouragement when those whom I consider the Lord's children see fit to favor me, by spending their time and patience to pen a few thoughts for my perusal. I would choose always to be a "Mary" and occupy her lowly position, hearing and learning, and really never expected to be called upon to impart my understanding to others, and therefore I smiled with tears in my eyes when I read your request that I should try to explain a portion of Scripture. I feel very much my need of knowledge in spiritual things. O how little you know me, dear brother, and my need of help, my need of strength, my lack of knowledge, and my natural depravity. I fairly trembled when I thought of the task laid upon me. Not that such a thing is distasteful to me, for O how gladly would I accept the honor of bearing the King's message to any of his little ones; but can I give it or deliver it, just according to his wishes, and leave out my own construction? Is it to me he gives the message to deliver, or will I think I am doing as he bids, and then find I am repeating not his, but my own ideas? But he knows that of myself I can do nothing; but I would work out what he works in. I know by experience that a little worm of the dust may bear a message from him if it is his will; for I myself have often felt the power of his love, and the sweet assurance of his presence, majesty and power, in the gentle summer shower, in the terrific thunder and lightning, in the opening rose or singing bird. To me, all nature speaks of him, and I often enjoy sweet and silent communion with my Maker when I am all alone, with naught but nature and nature's God. There is a something so sweet, a still small voice, which none can hear, a something which stirs my soul, as none can feel, and gives me a joy and peace such as none can give, but the holy Spirit direct from above. What blest people are the people of our God, and how our heart should swell with praise and love to him, the giver of this heavenly Spirit. He deals so gently with me that I sometimes fear I am not numbered among those to whom it is said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." My greatest trial seems to be sin. I know I hate it, and I know I love all that is pure and good. O how I long to be free from this body of sin, pain and death. You might inquire then, Are you not happy? Do you long to die because your life is wretched here? I can truly answer no. No person ever had a more affectionate, devoted family than I, and I think none ever had fewer earthly trials than I; and to my natural mind the earth is beautiful, and I am happy as a bird; but I find in me a something which is at continual warfare with the earth and earthly things. I long for a land which has never known the blight of sin, a place of purity and holy love, where all is unity and peace. But here if I would spend a moment before the throne of grace, the tempter is often striving to draw my thoughts away. If I would walk uprightly as a true follower of the blessed Savior should, I find my evil passions and wicked thoughts and actions put me to shame and drive me to grief. And so I hate my very self, or life, because I constantly am doing the very things which I abhor. This earth is beautiful, and my natural eyes see and enjoy it all; but my spiritual sight has given me a glimpse of a land of glory and light which so far surpasses this little sin-stained sphere that it seems I sometimes almost despise this earth with its thorns and stony ways for weary feet, its trials, temptations and snares, and hate it for its deceit and guiled pride. Within me is a natural love and hate; and within me, too, is a spiritual love and hate. I have a natural love for friends, money, health, beauty, &c. I naturally hate anything which mars my pleasure, hurts or injures my pride, or interferes with my wicked desires. I hate to be compelled to give up my own will and abide by another's, &c. Now, spiritually, I love my Savior, love his people, love his laws, and want to obey them. I love purity and holiness, and want to be like my dear Savior; consequently I hate anything which would tend to lessen my love for him or his people, or anything which will break his laws and commands, or hinder me from obeying them. I hate anything which comes between me and my Savior or his love, and all which is of the earth, earthy, or in any wise polluted by sin. I therefore hate all earthly things, and love only spiritual things. If I have two children, loved equally alike, one just as dear to my heart as the other, this of course would be a natural love. Now, suppose in one I see evidence of the Spirit of Christ; then another love springs up for that one, a spiritual, holy love, so different from the other. I love my other little one just the same amount I ever did, but there is not this holy, spiritual, Christ-like affection. You must see and know, dear brother, these two loves and their difference, or we would never have written to each other. I have a natural and spiritual love for my husband, a spiritual love only for a child of God, who was never known by me in the flesh. Just so we hate even our children, or other relatives, as we hate all but purity and perfection. I think in our text the hate referred to is in a spiritual sense; for, if I am not mistaken, the Bible only speaks of love and hate. No medium, I think, is mentioned. Consequently if we love God we must hate those who do not (although we may have natural love for them.) If we love heaven and heavenly things, we must hate earth and earthly things. Now, if we love him, we will do well to show our love by taking up our cross, namely, the ridicule of the worldly minded, going entirely contrary to their desires, the parting with father, mother, brother, sister, &c., if need be, rather than forsake the footsteps of the Savior to please them, and following our meek and lowly Guide.

I do hope, dear brother, this poor attempt of mine may prove to be at least a little key to unlock to you the message you desire, and that the Lord's comfort may descend to you freely, and relieve your mind, as he alone can do.

I have little ability to express what I desire, and to make known to others the thoughts I so much enjoy.

It is getting late, and I must close, hoping I may hear from you some time again.

With christian love, your little sister,

ADELA JONES.

"BELOVED, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."—1 John iv. 7.

DEAR BRETHREN:—My mind has for some time been dwelling upon that wonderfully mysterious, glorious, sweet and indissoluble tie of love which links together the saints of God here in this time state, and which will continue to bind them in harmony and sweet concord throughout eternity. I say, my mind has been dwelling upon this glorious subject; but alas! not as much upon it, nor any other of the vital, living truths of our Father's kingdom, as I could wish; and having, but a few hours since, left a little circle of believers in salvation by grace, where this beautiful attribute was clearly manifested, I feel moved to put a few of my rambling thoughts on paper, and submit them to you, leaving it entirely to your judgment as to the disposition to be made of them.

Love! A little word of but four letters, and yet how full of meaning. In nature we see it manifested almost with the first dawn of life. Man, in every step of his pilgrimage from the cradle to the grave, reaches out for something upon which to lavish his affections, and eagerly, yearningly looks for a return. It is an essential element of human life, enters into and is a constituent part of all the closer relationships, and without its exercise earthly existence would be inconceivable. But this is love only as known by the natural man, and is but of the earth, earthy. The inspired writer whose words I have quoted, speaks not of this, which in its best and purest form partakes of the earthy, sinning character of those upon whom it operates, but of that holy tie which binds the heart, the "new heart," the "heart of flesh," of God's elect children to him and to each other with those cords which nothing in time nor eternity can sever. How deeply mysterious is this tie, and how sweet! Who can analyze it? Who can measure it? The trembling child of grace, who has been awakened by the Spirit of the Most High to a consciousness of his condition as a sinner, who has groaned and labored beneath a crushing burden of sin, and who has heard some sweet whispers of peace which he fain would yet hardly dare believe, feels the drawings of these cords of Almighty love. He seeks the company of the saints; no other place on earth is half so dear to him. Their faces shine to him with a beauty glorious beyond description, reflected from the face of the glorified Redeemer. They may be poor, old and ill-favored in the worldling's eyes, the offscouring of creation, with nought to attract nor please the eye; but to him, whose eyes the Lord has opened, Jesus is manifested in their countenances, and O how he longs to be one with them, to share their joys and their afflictions, to be allowed but to creep into a corner, only that he may be of their number.

My mind goes back, as I write, but a few years, to the time when I was first favored to be in the company of any of God's little ones. The subject of religion was not, at that time, actively engrossing my mind; but I have never been able, nor do I expect that I ever shall be, to describe the sensation I felt as I heard the dear saints, in a few broken words, tell of the dealings of the Lord with them. The words were few, but to me they spoke volumes. My heart went out toward them with a yearning never before experienced, and I felt that I indeed loved them, though I knew I was not worthy to be with them. I feel so yet. At times the love seems to grow cold, and my heart gets chilled; but I still feel to say, with Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." I find no peace nor rest in the world; but I do frequently find comfort, transitory though it may be, in the company of the saints. Though my daily life would seem to give the lie to my profession, and I often feel that did my brethren deal faithfully with me they would cut me off, yet I have nowhere else to go; for, unworthy as I am, I love them and the doctrine they hold.

The apostle John was the "beloved disciple," and his meek, gentle and loving spirit shines in every line of his writings. The verse I have quoted at the beginning is of the same tenor with all the others, "Beloved, let us love one another;" not a command to do a difficult thing; not an injunction to perform some repugnant act; O no; but manifest the love which God has given you. This love is not of human origin. The brethren whom the apostle is addressing did not labor for it and secure it by exertion, or as a reward; "for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." The worldly religionist, blinded by the god of this world, holds forth the "duty" of loving God as a burden, a cross; but in the true disciple, whose heart has been touched by the finger of the Almighty, love wells up with an irresistible force, which permeates every fibre of his being, bringing even his "body under," as a servant to that new principle which is now controlling and guiding him. "Love is of God." This love has nothing earthly about it. It is the same love which brought the dear Redeemer from the realms of eternal glory, from the glory which he had with the Father, to take upon himself a body of flesh and blood, to pass through the painful journey from the cradle at Bethlehem to the cross upon Calvary, to die the shameful, agonizing death, that his people might be redeemed. Nay, it is Christ himself, for he is love.

"And everyone that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Dear child, what stronger testimony can you want, you who are trembling, doubting, fearing, loving? But ah, you say, if I could only be sure that my love was genuine. "By their fruits shall ye know them." Do you seek the company of the brethren and listen eagerly and joyfully to their conversation? Do you love the ordinances and worship of God's house? Is the doctrine of the cross, of salvation by grace, the theme you most delight to hear? Is the story of Jesus and his love the sweetest to you? Is not this love, "the love of God shed abroad in the heart?" "And every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." And Jesus said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

Dear brethren, I have written hurriedly, and what I have penned is, like the writer, most imperfect and full of faults. I have hardly touched the subject, and feel that I have not said anything as I ought. Do with it as you think best.

Your unworthy brother in hope,
FRED L. COX.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 6, 1893.

SANDUSKY, Ala., Aug. 16, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I have been permitted to be at meeting the last three Sundays, and enjoyed it very well. I felt so barren that I was reluctant about going; but the Lord, I hope, filled my mouth, and gave me liberty to fill about my usual time. Another encouragement was, the brethren and sisters seemed to appreciate what I set forth. I returned last Sunday evening and found the SIGNS to hand, and soon began to peruse it. Elder Chick's article brought to my mind some expressions of my own that day and the day before. I said the preaching of John the Baptist, and of all the prophets and apostles, and of all ministers combined, never did give eternal life to a single soul. Paul was in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began. Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish." "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." On Saturday I referred to Lazarus, and endeavored to show the use and purpose of the gospel, in many cases to help clear the living of the old grave-clothes. These burying-gowns, or long law-wraps, do not become the living. Jesus commanded some one to loose Lazarus and let him go; and my opinion is that many poor souls who were quickened into life have been loosed from different impediments by the gospel, and made to go and tell the church what great things the Lord had done for them, and to take up their abode with the living in Jerusalem, to eat bread at the King's table all the days of their life. With this sentiment I cannot go back on what brother Chick has written, but give it my hearty approval. I will take Elder Jones's article, too, every bit of it. His remark about the African is in perfect harmony with some of my own expressions. I believe that a wild African, guided only by the Spirit of God, would be more profitable to the church than some of our learned commentators. Upon some subjects I find it hard to tell just what they believe. In one sentence some of them will tell us that God has decreed all things whatsoever come to pass, and in another they will tell us that God permits some things. A wild African, guided only by the Spirit of God, when traveling among the churches would not be apt to take his book and pencil to note down every strange idea set forth by some others, and go home and comment upon such, and different customs he found out. His love for the cause and his brethren would admonish him to hide a multitude of faults if he found them. I do not refer to these two articles to condemn anything else I find in the SIGNS. It is all good, but these express so plainly some things that I have tried to set forth. Neither do I wish to be understood as ignoring worldly education, for it is good; but it will not answer for revelation.

I was hoping that the war about predestination was nearly done, and there would be no need of so much defense upon that particular subject; but from what I have seen in print of late the clouds are still gathering, and here and there a skyrocket is being thrown up, and some of the history of sixty years ago may be repeated at no very distant day. When men begin to tell us in public print that we dare not pry between the folded leaves to find out more about a thing than they profess to know, and taunt us with such flabby things as Gittean, and warn us not to promulgate a doctrine to give aid and comfort to the criminal and the outlaw, I think I know what such things mean. It means war and exclusion. It is the spirit of old Catholicism being made manifest. It parted asunder me and the man that baptized me. We took sweet counsel together, and went unto the house of God in company, for about five years' time. I held the same views the day I was baptized that I do today, and he knew it. He recommended me among strange brethren, to me. He then misrepresented me, and held secret counsels with some he ruled over. He laid the plan for the sacrifice, set up his bar of non-fellowship, and left me on the solid rock of predestination where I started with him, and I hope to remain upon it.

Brethren of the Old School, this spirit will exclude us, and ostracize our family paper, if they can, and hold us up to the contempt of the world, by misrepresentations. They have the beast, the false prophets and the Arminian world to back them, and they know it. Some of them here have told the Arminians that Mormonism was better than our doctrine. These writers tell us that God is of one mind, and who can turn him? and that God the Father bounds and restrains and overrules iniquity; but they do not tell us how he bounds iniquity without appointing just how much of it there shall be. They do not tell us whether it is bounded by his decrees in eternity, or whether he has to hurry from his throne to the earth to bound it when he sees it raging. They insinuate that we should hope that in mercy he (God) laid our wretched sins upon Jesus, who died to put them away, and to purify us from every spot and wrinkle that sin has made; but they do not tell how they were laid upon Jesus without it being determined or appointed just what and how much our sins were. In one sentence they warn us to not attribute any of our sins to the Lord, and in another they want us to hope that all our sins are laid on him. They tell us that "In all the volume of God's word there is no Scripture that teaches that he decreed the existence of sin." But Paul says, "God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin;" and I believe that God thought of the transgression of man before time. "The Lord hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass." Adam was the figure of Christ. Adam's disobedience was as well known and determined as was the obedience of Christ. Christ "verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world," and so was Adam. Jesus was appointed "the author of eternal salvation;" and the Lord had the right to appoint man the author of sin. Some of these writers do their best to slander us by saying that we make God the author of sin; but as sin is the transgression of the law, there is no way to make God the author of sin, unless it can be shown that he transgressed the law, and that can never be shown. They also want to make it appear that we believe that evil springs from the Lord, as a fountain, the same as spiritual good does; but this is a slander. We believe no such folly. God's appointments do not tarnish his holiness in the least. He is a just God and a Savior, no matter what he appoints. His ways are just and true, and he is without iniquity; therefore it could not spring from him. His appointment of a corrupt fountain does not make him corrupt. His appointment of sin does not make him the sinner. When he put a lying spirit in the mouth of Ahab's prophets it did not make him a liar. When he makes peace and creates evil it does not make him evil.

But time and space tell me to stop
(Continued on page 319.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 4, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FELLOWSHIP OF COMFORT.

BRETHREN EDITORS:—Please give through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, your views on Romans i. 12, and oblige

A STRANGE BROTHER.

"For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end that ye may be established; that is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me."—Rom. i. 11, 12.

In complying with the request of our "Strange Brother," we cannot do better than to quote the whole sentence to which he refers, as recorded in these two verses. Often a proper regard to the literal reading of a portion of Scripture in the connection in which the Holy Spirit moved the inspired servants of God to write it, will throw more light upon what seemed mysterious in it than could be shown by a labored exposition in the language of uninspired commentators. The text submitted by our "Strange Brother" is clearly connected with not only the preceding verse as here quoted, but with the whole context. After declaring the authority of Jesus Christ as moving him to write this letter, and specially addressing "All that be in Rome, beloved of God, called saints," the apostle expresses thanks to God that their faith is spoken of throughout the whole world. Then he solemnly asserts that God is his witness that without ceasing he made mention of them in his prayers, with the request that by the will of God he might have a prosperous journey to come unto them. Doubtless his request was made in that faith which is always accepted before the throne of God; and so Paul was prospered to come unto them at the time appointed of God. But his coming unto them was not in a way which seemed prosperous in the sight of reason. By reference to the record in Acts xxiii.-xxviii., it will be seen that his voyage as a prisoner to Rome was attended with much affliction and adversity, which reason would never recognize as the answer of his fervent prayers for a prosperous journey. The persecution of wicked men led to his imprisonment. That was one step in this prosperity. Then the covetousness of Felix was the occasion of his being held in prison for more than two years. After this, the malice of false accusers was the cause of his appealing to Cesar, which was the privilege of Roman citizenship in which he was born. Then as a prisoner under arrest, he was sent by sea to Rome. On the way a storm threatened to drown him with all his companions, and the soldiers under whose charge he was, proposed to kill him with all the prisoners; but the officer in command, for Paul's sake kept them from their purpose, and they were all enabled to escape to land. Still they were exposed to perils, as they had fallen among a barbarous people; but instead of cruelty they received at their hands "no little kindness." Thence to Rome he went still as a prisoner under guard. Would any man naturally consider such a journey as being prosperous by the will of God? Often the saints are full of murmuring and complaints under far less trying circumstances. Only by the power of divine grace can any child of God count it all joy when called to pass through such great distresses and tribulations. To the natural mind it would appear that Paul had a most disastrous journey in going to Rome; but it was the way which God had ordained for the greatest good of his servant and for the declarative glory of his own grace and mercy. While Paul thus longed to see the saints who were at Rome, and made request that by the will of God he might have a prosperous journey in coming unto them, it is not to be understood that he could have known the sufferings through which that prosperous journey must lead him. Herein the afflicted and poor people of God in our day have an example of the depths of suffering through which our Lord leads his disciples when he brings them into that great highway of holiness wherein they are so blessed as to walk in the fellowship of Jesus, being clothed in that perfect righteousness which adorns the ransomed of the Lord. It is in partaking of the sufferings of Christ that his saints are blessed with the privilege of following him now, as the earnest of their heritage with him in everlasting glory.

"For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end that ye may be established." The deep solicitude here expressed by Paul for the establishment of the saints, unto whom he was made an apostle, is a perfect example of that loving interest which must be felt by every minister of Christ in those churches and brethren for whose comfort it is his privilege to labor. It will be observed that the desire of Paul did not embrace any personal advantage to himself. It was not that he might reap some profit from them either in a financial point of view, or in exaltation as an important character among the followers of Jesus. He assigns no other motive in his anxiety to see the saints at Rome but that he might impart unto them some spiritual gift; and lest it should be misunderstood, he explains that the ultimate object is, "to the end that ye may be established." Nothing can be more desirable than that the saints be fixed and settled in their understanding and belief of the truth of the gospel.

To this end every gift bestowed upon the church is ordained of God. Apostles and prophets are included among those gifts, and they are most highly favored when they are made the bearers of messages of spiritual comfort to the church of the living God. So the ministers who labor in word and doctrine are blessed beyond earthly measure when they are given a word in season to the relief of one of the little ones for whom Jesus laid down his life. That glorious privilege is also given to every humble child of God when he is enabled to minister comfort unto one of these little ones, even as a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple. In consideration of this heavenly joy in the service of the church of Christ, it is not strange that the apostle could tell of his sincere longing to see these saints, and that he might impart some spiritual gift unto them. It must be noticed that the end in the desire of Paul was that the saints might be established. It is in explanation of this earnest wish that the apostle adds the verse to which our "Strange Brother" calls attention.

"That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me." There is no more conclusive evidence that the Spirit of Christ leads the saints than that which is manifested in their love to each other; and this love always seeks the advantage of those embraced in its fellowship, no less fervently than it desires the enjoyment of personal comfort. Although he was clothed with apostolic authority, Paul did not claim power to confer the grace that comes from God alone; so that it is not in that sense that he desired to impart some spiritual gift unto the saints which were in Rome. This he clearly explains in this verse. The gift which he would impart was that he might himself be comforted together with them, not by the wonderful evidence of his own skill in converting them from false doctrines to the belief of the gospel, but by the faith which was wrought in them by the very same Spirit of Christ whose revelation had effectually wrought in him a lively hope in the grace of God. It was this divine teaching of the same living truth of the gospel, which produced that "mutual faith" in both the saints addressed and the inspired apostle who was moved by the Holy Spirit to write this epistle. To those who have experimental knowledge of the sweet fellowship of the Spirit exclusively is known the inestimable value of this gift that Paul desired to impart to his beloved brethren. No words or illustration can show it to any others. Only where this divine love rules in the heart can there be the comfort of mutual faith. So perfect is the unity in those who are led by the Spirit of truth that there can be no comfort for one of them in anything which does not afford the same consolation unto every one of those to whom it is revealed. This is the fellowship in which the faith of the saints is so mutual that they do bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."—1 Cor. xii. 26. In this unity every member is identified with the whole body of Christ, in spiritual comfort and in the fellowship of suffering. Therefore it is an infallible testimony in assuring the hope of the saints when they are partakers of the afflictions of the disciples of Jesus, and when they can rejoice in the consolation of the gospel of Christ. This is the "mutual faith" both of the tried and afflicted believer now and of the apostles and primitive saints who walked with Jesus as he was manifest in the flesh. There is but the one faith of the Son of God, as there is one God. That is the true faith which reveals Christ Jesus as the complete Savior of his people from their sins. Every suggestion of failure in the accomplishment of that salvation bears the stamp of falsehood. This unity of the faith is not confined to the belief of the truth of the everlasting salvation of the saints; it includes every step in the development of the purpose of God from his choice of them in Christ Jesus before the world was made through all the changes awaiting them in time, and their final exaltation with their Lord in the glory which he had with the Father before the all creating Word of God brought time into being. When the power of this one faith is manifest in the confidence of the saints in all the truth which God has revealed, then they are indeed comforted together with the inspired apostles and all the saints who have passed into their everlasting rest. Not even the most highly gifted apostle could have any true comfort except that which is the product of the mutual faith of the Son of God, which is as freely given to the weakest believer as it is to the most valiant inspired defender of the gospel of the grace of God.

Our "Strange Brother" will observe that this "mutual faith" by which Paul sought to be comforted together with the saints to whom he wrote, is not another faith in distinction from the faith of the Son of God, who loved and gave himself for Paul and every subject of his grace.—Gal. ii. 20. No other faith could afford comfort to any conscious sinner. So perfectly are the followers of Jesus identified as one with him, that the same faith which is the exclusive property of the Lord, is also the individual possession of every member of his body. It is the faith of Paul, and he rightfully claims it all; yet the same possession belongs to every one in whom it is revealed by the Spirit. The evidence which conclusively establishes the right of any sinner to claim this precious faith as his own, is found in the witness which is in himself. It is certain that this assuring and undying faith dwells in every one who is comforted in the knowledge that the saints are established in the truth. Only those who are led by the Spirit can take comfort in this knowledge. The fact that any one is comforted in this establishment of the saints necessarily proves that the same faith is the refuge and strength of his own heart. Thus he is comforted together with those in whose faith he finds his own comfort. This shows that they are of one heart and of one mind. Such unity of the Spirit can be felt by none but such as are born of that incorruptible seed which liveth and abideth forever. It is entirely different from that compromising system by which carnal minds seek to harmonize their variances. While the blind are brought by a way that they have not known, and it seems to them that they are wandering in a wilderness where there is no way, at the appointed time they are shown that all the way which the Lord has led them was the right way. Walking solitary, and each one feeling to be different from all others, yet the Lord brings them to a city of habitation, and thus sets the solitary in families. They are made to rejoice and find comfort in the mutual faith both of those whom they recognize as saints and of themselves. The sweetness of this comfort abounds in the consideration that they have not been brought into that fellowship by any efforts of their own, nor yet by any creature guidance, but alone by the omnipotent love and abounding grace of God. Such comfort cannot be found in any of the selfish attainments of personal desires. It results alone from the mutual faith of the saints in Christ Jesus.

May it please our Lord to afford us with our "Strange Brother" and all who love our Lord Jesus, the glorious fellowship of comfort in believing, whereby we may be made to rejoice together in the one hope of our calling by his grace. And unto him who hath loved us, and saved us by his blood, be honor and glory evermore. Amen.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Lexington Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Lexington Church, in Lexington, Greene Co., N. Y., Sept. 20th and 21st, 1893, to the several churches of which it is composed, sends greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:

—Another year has passed away since we last met, and some with whom we once delighted to meet in days gone by, and to mingle our voices in praise and thanksgiving, have been called away from this world of sorrow, so that we cannot see their faces any more in the flesh; yet we hail with delight the blessed privilege which our covenant-keeping God has favored us with, to meet in our annual association; and as it has been the custom for many years in this association to write a few lines in the way of a Circular Letter, we will now address you concerning the children of grace, and the Giver of every heavenly blessing they are permitted to enjoy. We find it recorded by the prophet Isaiah, xxxii. 1, "Behold, a King shall reign in righteousness," &c. The word behold is spoken a great many times in the word of truth. The prophet Zechariah says, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation." "Behold the Lamb of God." "Behold the place where they laid him." "Behold my hands and my feet." This has direct reference to the King. The prophet Isaiah has mentioned many things concerning this King, and his reign or government over his kingdom. This prophet says, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined."—Isa. ix. 2. Now, the King that reigns in righteousness, the Lord, has spoken by the same prophet, saying, "Yea, before the day was, I am he, and there is none that can deliver out of my hand. I will work, and who shall let it?" "I am the Lord, your holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King."—Isa. xlviii. 13, 15. So you can see that Paul was correct when he wrote to the church at Ephesus, saying, "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God [the King] hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Now the prophet Jeremiah comes in as another witness, saying, "But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting King." "He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion." "The portion of Jacob is not like them [that perish]: for he is the former of all things, and Israel is the rod of his inheritance; The Lord of hosts is his name."—Jer. x. 10, 12, 16. The prophet Daniel, speaking of a kingdom that the God of heaven shall set up, says it shall never be destroyed, but shall stand forever.—Daniel ii. 44. David says, in Psalm xxii., "For the kingdom is the Lord's, and he [the King] is the Governor among the nations." Also, "A seed shall serve him [the Governor and King]; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation;" a generation that the King of Zion reigns in righteousness over, knowing them that are his. The Lord has told us by the prophet, saying, "I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry; and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory."—Isa. xlv. 13. Now, brethren, the salvation that is placed in Zion is to the children of grace in the new covenant, ordered in all things and sure.—2 Sam. xxiii. 5. "The government [of Zion] shall be upon his [the King] shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even forever."—Isa. ix. 6, 7. David tells in the 89th Psalm that justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne; mercy and truth shall go before his face. "In thy name [the King] shall they rejoice all the day, and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted." "For the Lord is our defense, and the holy One of Israel is our King."

Dear brethren, we find that Paul wrote to the church at Ephesus that this King is set at God's own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head [the King] over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all.—Eph. i. 21-23. The apostle Peter knew where his kingdom was when he was writing to the strangers scattered abroad. "Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God, angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him."—1 Peter iii. 22. Peter still affirms this to be true, while he with others were eye witnesses of his majesty. "For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard."—2 Peter i. 17, 18. Peter being one of the princes, he could say, "A servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ."—2 Peter i. 1. Now, dear brethren, if we are partakers of that grace which reigns through righteousness unto eternal life, if Jesus is our King, and we are his subjects, how important it is that we adhere to the King's rule of government, not to substitute any new rule or order for the sake of worldly gain or honor. Jesus said while in this world, "If any man serve me, let him follow me." "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."—John xii. 26. Jesus also said to his under-shepherds, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Although in the world you shall have tribulation, yet be of good cheer; for Jesus, the King, has overcome the world. Brethren, lift up your heads, and rejoice that whom the King loves he loves unto the end. O that we might ever be led by his Spirit to believe and trust in what God has said of his everlasting love to the subjects of his kingdom, that he will be to them a God, and they shall be to him a people.

Now, brethren, in conclusion, may we keep Peter's admonition in view, "Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the King."—1 Peter ii. 17.

"Our glorious Leader claims our praise
For his own pattern given;
While the long cloud of witnesses
Shows the same path to heaven."

"To this we are pressing
With ardent desire,
Through floods of affliction,
Temptation and fire;
Though often dejected
And filled with dismay,
Because of the trials
Attending the way.

"Then lift him, ye heralds,
That speak in his name;
Proclaim him to-day and
Forever the same;
The life of his people,
Which none can destroy;
Their hope and their portion,
And fullness of joy."

JAMES MILLER, Mod.

JOHN A. MORSE, Clerk.

JAMES AVERY, Ass't Clerk.

The Maine Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Whitefield Church, at Whitefield, Maine, Sept. 8th, 9th and 10th, 1893, to the churches composing the same sends greetings of love and fellowship in the Lord Jesus Christ.

WE have as an association been privileged to meet again. We esteem it a great privilege to meet and hear God exalted and man abased.

We wish to present for your consideration the inheritance of God's people. We ask, How came that inheritance theirs? The wisdom of this world says, "By their being good and pleasing God; that by so doing they gain the favor of God." What foolish wisdom! Who ever became an heir to anything by doing good and pleasing someone? Sometimes by pleasing others, people have property left them by a will; but an inheritance comes by being an heir. That inheritance of the children of God was in Jesus Christ, before the world began. If that inheritance was in Jesus Christ, then it was not because of their being good or pleasing anyone; for all the children of God were in Jesus Christ before the world began. That is where they get their inheritance, by being in Jesus Christ. Would not good sense condemn any other way of getting an inheritance? If, then, we had an inheritance in Christ Jesus before the world began, is it not a blessed thought that Jesus holds that inheritance, and that we can neither sell it nor squander it? Some tell us that they can get it and lose it at their will. That kind of an inheritance lasts only as long as they live naturally. Like all earthly inheritances it ends with natural life. The truth is, such know nothing of the inheritance that is in Christ Jesus our Lord. "In whom we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." Others may claim that they can get and lose their inheritance, but the saints of God will not accept of such worldly wisdom. "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what is the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints." Some tell us to have faith, go to meeting, do good, pray, help others, and that God will not help you until you help yourself; but they do not know what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward, who believe according to the working of his mighty power which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come. Now we see that all these names of being good, having faith, praying, and a thousand other things, have nothing to do with inheritance; for it is above every name in this world, and in that which is to come, as it is in Christ Jesus, and nowhere else can it be found; for he "hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." So we see this inheritance is in Christ Jesus, and is complete in him; nor has it at any time been out of him, or been scattered around loosely, as the wise of this world would have us believe. And now, brethren, we ought to "give thanks to the Father, who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." We see that it is in his Son all the time, in whom is hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Such wisdom and knowledge we esteem very much. No wonder the apostle wrote, "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: as it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness." "Therefore let no man glory in men;" but let us glory that our inheritance is in Christ Jesus, where no one can cheat us out of it. All the wisdom of this world cannot reach it. The wise of this world do not know where it is. They do not know that it is hid with Christ in God. They do not know this inheritance is eternal. They do not know of this inheritance, "which is incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away; reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." This inheritance that we have presented for your consideration, in the words of the apostle, which he has set forth with much wisdom and power, is yours and ours in his mighty power, and should sustain us at all times when we feel low in spirits, when in afflictions, when sorrow after sorrow comes upon us; when we feel, as it were, that all the demons of the lower regions have entered our heart; when the weeds are wrapped around our head; when our heart is as hard as a stone; when seemingly there is no praise to God in us, no love, but all is spite, and the natural man is in full sway. What a commotion! Then we think God has forgotten to be gracious, and his mercies are clean gone forever. "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? Let him trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God." Let us remember our inheritance which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Some tell us to work for this inheritance. Some have even gone so far as to kill the Lord of glory; but they made a sad mistake, as all others will find out who trust in works of their own. Our inheritance does not come by works of the creature, but by the will of God, away back before the world began. "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." That is why we know the truth, and talk the truth, because we were begotten by the truth. But they who know not the truth cannot tell the truth; so they speak what they know; but it is not the truth that is in Christ, but is a lie, and of the flesh, like all their works; and it is very evident that they have no inheritance in Christ Jesus. "But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord; because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth."

H. CAMPBELL, Mod.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

AT least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper. It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Licking Association of Old School or Particular Baptists, the members of the respective churches composing the same, would hereby greet and receive the associations in correspondence with us in christian fellowship and love.

WE would humbly thank our heavenly Father that he has mercifully extended our lives and yours, and has thus enabled us to receive, and you to send, the sweet and precious assurance and messages of brotherly love and christian charity extended to us by the respective associations in correspondence with us. Our souls have been refreshed and cheered, and our faith strengthened, by your expressions of humble trust and confidence in the all-wise, just and merciful God, our God, in his electing love, and in his predestinated providence, as well as in your belief of and faith in the complete and finished work of our crucified and risen Lord in the salvation of his people from their sins. If consistent with God's holy will, may his grace, love and mercy rest upon and abound among you; and the peace which passeth understanding, which the world cannot give nor take away, like a holy benediction, shed its holy influence upon you, and give you a foretaste of that peace which remaineth for the people of God. When our meetings on earth together are ended, may all be gathered to the house of many mansions, and all be united in one association, where with one voice we may join in praise and thanksgiving unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, where congregations never break up, and sabbaths never end.

We have appointed our next annual session with the church at Elk Lick, Scott Co., Ky., to begin on Friday before the fourth Saturday in August, 1894, when and where we hope to meet and greet your messengers in the fellowship of the Spirit.

H. COX, Mod.

J. W. WALLIS, Clerk.

J. T. McCOUN, Ass't Clerk.

The Lexington Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Lexington Church, Greene Co., N. Y., on the 20th and 21st days of September, 1893, to the several associations and corresponding meetings with whom we correspond, sends greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Again we have been permitted to come together, and one more year is added to our history of nearly a century, and with our sister church whose name our association took and has borne through many trials and seasons of comfort and peace, which God gives his elect, fulfilling his will and purpose, who is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind.

Our churches have all been represented by letters and messengers, expressing full fellowship for each other, and content with the Articles of Faith and the order held and maintained by this association; not desiring to reach beyond the gospel rule laid down in the New Testament. As many as walk by this rule, peace be on them. We feel to thank God and take courage. Some of the churches report addition by baptism. Truly the voice of the turtle is heard in our borders, and the singing of birds has come.

To our correspondents we have this to say, Your minutes and messengers are with us, richly laden with the good things of the kingdom. We have been comforted and edified, and desire a continuance of your fellowship.

Our next session will be held with the church of Olive and Hurley, at Shokan, Ulster Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday following in September, 1894.

JAMES MILLER, Mod.

JOHN A. MORSE, Clerk.

JAMES AVERY, Ass't Clerk.

The Maine Old School Baptist Association, assembled with the Whitefield Church, Whitefield, Maine, Sept. 8th, 9th and 10th, 1893, to the several associations with which we correspond, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED:—Our unchangeable God, whose mercy endureth forever, has granted us again the privilege of meeting together in love and harmony. The visiting Elder and our beloved pastor, together with Deacon Beal, whom the church has given liberty to speak, have proclaimed to us the gospel, which is glad tidings of great joy. Our hearts have been made glad, as we have realized that God has been mindful of us. We earnestly desire a continuance of your correspondence.

Our next association is appointed to be held with the Bowdoinham Church, Bowdoinham, Maine, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday before the second Sunday in September, 1894, where we hope to meet your messengers, and especially ministering brethren.

H. CAMPBELL, Mod.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

SUPPLY EXHAUSTED.

AN unusually large and sudden demand for our small type cloth-bound hymn books has entirely exhausted our supply, but we have the book now in press, and expect to have them ready for delivery by the first or middle of November next. We have a number of orders now on hand which we will fill at the earliest possible day. Parties who have orders now in, and prefer to do so, can remit the balance and have any of the other styles of binding mailed them immediately. Any one wishing to have their money returned, if they will inform us, we will refund it to them.

(Continued from page 315.)

for the present. Brethren editors and writers for the SIGNS, raise your pens, and lift up your voices like a trumpet, and sound aloud God's predestination and sovereign grace in the salvation of poor sinners; and, ye trembling saints, "in what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God shall fight for us." May the Lord guide us by his Spirit, and enable us to use his word successfully.

Yours in fear and trembling,
P. J. POWELL.

LEXINGTON, Neb., July 20, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—If such a sinner as I feel myself to be may claim such relationship. I will inclose a letter from Elder R. Speirs, which I esteem very highly, and have been requested by some of the brethren to send it to you for publication. I have brother Speirs' consent to do so. Do as you think best with it.

Your brother in hope of eternal life through Christ Jesus our Lord, F. O. LONG.

HEDRICK, Iowa, June 23, 1893.

F. O. LONG—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I mailed you a letter yesterday, and at the same time received yours of the 19th. Our daughter is better. She can both hear and talk this morning.

Brother Wright requested me to take a text and write you a sermon. I begged off, as I am no sermon writer; but as you have requested my views on John iii. 3, 5, such as I have give I unto thee. "Jesus answered and said unto him, verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." "Jesus answered, verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." The kingdom spoken of here can surely have no reference to the Jewish kingdom; for that was a natural kingdom, and could be seen by natural men; and all its blessings and curses were natural. Nicodemus was a ruler in that kingdom, and had been born a natural birth, and could see natural things. Now Jesus tells him that it requires a spiritual birth to enable him, the man, to see spiritual things, or a spiritual kingdom. The kingdom spoken of in both verses surely has reference to the church of Christ, the second kingdom, which surely is a spiritual kingdom, and requires spiritual subjects; else we might just as well take in good natural men and women, as well as any others. But John the Baptist would not, nor the apostles, nor will we. Why? Because the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned—1 Cor. ii. 14. Not that we would say they cannot see the house, the seats, the pulpit, the books and the members; but we do say that they cannot realize or see the spiritual joy, fellowship, love, union and heavenly feasting; for they neither have faith nor hope, nor love for Zion or her subjects. This needs no argument to establish it. We can go to our own experience, and it is settled. But some will say, What man is born again? Is it the old man or the new man? What is the old man? What is the new man? The one is the works of the flesh, which we delight in while in a state of nature. The other is the fruit of the Spirit. It is the sinner man, R. Speirs, or F. O. Long, who was born a natural birth, who must be born a spiritual birth. It is you and I that must put off the old man, or the works of the flesh, and must put on the new man, or fruit of the Spirit.—Gal. v. 19; Eph. iv. 22-32. It is not the fruit that makes the tree good or bad; but the fruit shows whether the tree is good or bad. It is by the fruit, love, joy, faith, &c., that we know the children of the kingdom.

But what does the word born, or birth, mean? It has two significations, and only two. The one is deliverance, and the other is developed, or brought to view. The word birth, or born, always carries the one or the other of these significations, and sometimes both. In John iii. 3, it means delivered. "Except a man be born again," or delivered again. Were not you and I born or delivered in our natural birth from natural bondage? Did that natural birth make us natural children, and give us natural eyes, and natural hearts? No. There was a child, or there never could have been a birth, or deliverance. It had eyes, ears and a heart, but could neither see, hear nor understand natural things. Why? Because it was in bondage, and must be born, or delivered. Now it is the same identical child, but there is a change of condition, and it can now see, hear and understand natural things, but not spiritual things, and is susceptible of being taught natural things, but not spiritual things. Why? Because it is in bondage under the law, and is looking to the law for life and salvation; is an enemy to God by wicked works; is in love with sin, in league with hell, with no fear of God before its eyes. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts."—Gal. iv. 6. Not to make them sons, but because they are sons. It is light that makes manifest. The child has become pregnant by the Spirit of God, and the struggle begins; and it is a struggle for freedom. And to the law he flies, for he sees no other way. He knows he is a sinner, and hears the voice of Jehovah in thunder tones from Sinai's top, saying, Sinner, pay me what thou owest. He is ten thousand talents in debt, and he has nothing to pay with. "What shall I do, or whither flee?" "The soul that sinneth it shall die." He knows that he is a sinner, and stern justice cries, "Cut him down." He finally gives up all for lost. He sinks, expires, dies to all hope of life and salvation through a broken law. Right there and then, while all nature seems convulsed, and hell is gapping, Christ is revealed as the way, the truth and the life, the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. Now there is a believer. But what does he believe? He believes the law is just, good and holy; but he is carnal, sold under sin. He believes that salvation is the gift of God, through the crucified and risen Redeemer. He believes that salvation is exclusively of grace, from first to last, to the exclusion of all the wills and doings of man. He believes that he is born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.—1 Peter i. 23. In short, he believes he is born or delivered from under the curse of the law, and is no more under the law, but under grace. He now can see the church, the kingdom of God, as a city set upon a hill, whose light cannot be hid.

In the fifth verse it is the same kingdom or church purified and cleansed; as Paul says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing."

The sixth verse, I think, has reference, not to the deliverance, but to the development. "That which is born [developed] of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born [developed] of the Spirit is spirit."

Brother Long, you will find this, like the writer, very imperfect. The subject is too deep for my feeble mind; but as brother Wright and yourself requested it, I have complied as best I could with said request. Excuse all errors, and accept this as a token of love.

Yours to serve,

R. SPEIRS.

HAYESVILLE, Iowa, Aug. 5, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have had a desire for a long time to write something for our family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES; but the fear that I should not be able to edify or comfort any of our Father's family has caused me to withhold my hand until now; and I feel that perhaps now I shall make a failure. Be that as it may, I will try, with the ability that may be given me. In the first place I will say that the paper I ordered for those old sisters has been highly appreciated, and afforded them much comfort. One of them, old sister Chastain, has since passed on before us to that better and brighter world, as we hope, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come. She lacked a few months of being seventy-nine years old. She was a firm believer in the doctrine advocated in the SIGNS. I visited her several times during her last sickness. She always seemed glad to see me, and talked of her hope in her blessed Lord and Savior. She made all preparations for her funeral, and selected the hymns to be sung. By her request I tried to speak words of comfort to the bereaved children and grandchildren, and the large assembly of relatives and friends.

I shall, if I am not called home, try to keep up the subscriptions for our family paper, and add some if I can; for we think it a little better than the newer papers. For no man, having drank old wine, straightway desireth new; for he saith, The old is better. We get something in every number that is strengthening and encouraging to the weak and feeble, the tried and sorrowing ones. The writers for the SIGNS all seem to be guided by the one Spirit with their different gifts, all for the perfecting of the saints, for the edifying of that one body, which is a spiritual body. The letter written by brother Eli T. Kidwell to brother Oliver suited me as well as if he had written it to me. It was full of comfort, and was the doctrine of Christ, if I am any judge. I do not speak of this one letter because I am sure it is better than others, for they are all good; but this one suited my case. The columns of the SIGNS are richly laden with the good things of the kingdom, and I would there were more who loved to read it; but we must wait patiently for the Lord, for we cannot change the heart, or renew the will, or turn the feet to Zion.

Now, dear brethren, I do not know that this scribble is worthy a place in our paper, but I will submit it to you. I am your very weak brother, if indeed I am one at all,

A. RICHARDSON.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT
SUBSCRIBERS.

Mottie A. Ware $2.00

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Corresponding Meeting of Virginia will convene, the Lord willing, with the Ebenezer Church, Loudoun Co., Va., on Wednesday, October 11th, and continue the two following days. A cordial invitation is extended to our brethren and friends.

Those coming by railroad will be met at Round Hill on Tuesday (10th) and conveyed to places of entertainment. The train leaves the Sixth Street depot, in Washington, D. C., at 9:10 a. m., and reaches Round Hill at 11:40 a. m.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Indiantown, near Powellville, Wicomico Co., Md., to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those who contemplate attending this meeting will get tickets for Pittsville, Md., via Salisbury. Those coming from New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington will take the early train on Tuesday, so as to connect with the train on the B. & E. R. R. which leaves Salisbury about 1:00 p. m. for Pittsville, where they will be met and conveyed to places near the meeting. Those coming from and by way of Baltimore can either take the Enoch Pratt or the B. & E. boat Tanguier. Both leave Baltimore about 4:30 or 5:00 p. m. The Pratt will not arrive in Salisbury until about 9:00 a. m. Wednesday, while the B. & E. train arrives at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m. Tuesday. I think it would be better to come on the B. & E. Those who are not acquainted with the route will go down on the steamboat wharf on Light Street, pier 9, and board the B. & E. steamboat Tanguier, which leaves (if no change by then) at 4:30 p. m., and will land at Clabourn about 8:00 or 9:00 p. m. Then take the train, which will arrive at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m., where they will be met by friends in and near Pittsville.

We hope to see a goodly number of the friends and kindred in Christ, those who are not hunting for gold, but for the hidden treasure which is found nowhere but in the Lord's sanctuary. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, especially ministers.

Done by order of the church.

L. A. HALL, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE Old School Baptist Church of Gilboa will hold her yearly meeting on the second Sunday and Saturday previous in October (7th and 8th), 1893.

D. S. ELLIOTT, Clerk.

A YEARLY or two days' meeting will be held (the Lord willing) with the Clovesville Old School Baptist Church (of the Roxbury Association) on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, beginning at 11 o'clock on Saturday.

We anticipate a good meeting. All lovers of the truth are cordially welcome. The morning trains east and west will be met at Fleischmann's, on the Ulster & Delaware R. R.

A YEARLY or two days' meeting will be held (if the Lord will) with the Second Church of Roxbury (of the Roxbury Association) on the second Saturday and Sunday in October, beginning at 11 o'clock on Saturday.

The trains arrive at Roxbury from the east too late to get to the meeting in time, so those coming will do well to come the evening before. We welcome all.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1893.

NO. 41.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CITY WITHOUT A TEMPLE.

A DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CHAPEL IN LEBANON, OHIO, MAY 14TH, 1893, BY THEIR PASTOR, BROTHER H. M. CURRY.

"AND I saw no temple therein."—Rev. xxi. 22.

We have read this morning from the inspired record a striking description of the city of God; the city of which we have heard and read and sung from our earliest childhood; but we have heard that it is far away above the skies; we have sung that it is located among the stars; we have read in popular religious fiction that it is the place where the good people go when they die, and where bright angels live that never die. All these notions are no better than the various heathen fabrications of heaven, and are as foreign to the true location and nature of this city as the sensual paradise of Mahomet or the happy hunting grounds of the American Indian. Our eyes have been so long blinded by tradition that we can scarcely see the plainest facts of Bible truth; our ears have been so completely stuffed with fables from our early youth that we are deaf to many plain declarations of the inspired record; and our understanding is so darkened by material affections that it is indeed difficult for us to conceive the most prominent principles of the doctrine of Christ. May the God of all grace enlighten our eyes, unstop our ears, and open our understanding this morning, that we may hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

First, let us have a proper understanding of the location of this city. It is not in heaven, for John saw it coming down from God out of heaven. It is declared to be the tabernacle of God with men; God dwelling with men, and not men gone above the sky to dwell with God. This city then is in the world, though not of the world; it is the present abode and inheritance of the saints, and not something they come into possession of at the close of their mortal pilgrimage. It is the new Jerusalem, arrayed in the splendor of the covenant of grace, revealed in living contrast with the old Jerusalem, clothed in the blackness of legal servitude. It is the gospel church revealed in the perfection of her living worship, contrasted with all humanly devised and conditional systems of religion.

The jeweled walls, sparkling, gleaming and glittering with all manner of precious stones, the new earth upon which it stands, stretching away in all the beauty of its virgin landscape, the new heavens spread above like a tent of righteousness, the pure, peaceful, gladdening river, the tree of life in the midst of its street of gold, each furnishes a theme for a thousand volumes; but more significant to me than all these this morning is the absence of the temple. "I saw no temple therein." What a novel sight to a Jew was a city without a temple; and what would a modern Arminian think of a city without a church? The religious prosperity, the state of morals, the degree of intelligence, and even the social and business advantages of a village, town or city, are all estimated by the number and height of its steeples; and if a community could be found without a church, the unfortunate inhabitants would be stigmatized as heathens, notwithstanding they may have attained to a high standard of morals, intelligence, piety and virtue. But the gospel church, walking in the Spirit, is the perfection of society; and the perfect society is revealed from heaven under the similitude of a city without a temple, or in modern parlance, a city without a church.

The absence of the temple suggests, first, the complete removal of the law of Moses. The temple was a symbol of the law, and an almost necessary attendant of all law worship. Jerusalem was the pride of the Jews, and the glory of Jerusalem was the temple. The carnal Jews were no less boastful of their temple privileges, as a mark of special distinction, than of their fleshly relation to Abraham. They saw nothing in the goodly stones of the temple but the gratification of their own pride; they saw nothing in the streaming blood and quivering flesh of the evening sacrifice but the things which Moses commanded; they beheld nothing more in the gorgeous trappings and imposing ceremonies of the high priest than the pomp and splendor of an earthly priesthood. But to the remnant according to the election of grace, who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God, the temple with all its service spoke a different language. They looked beyond that matchless pile of stones, to that temple that was to be thrown down and in three days raised up again; they saw beyond the blood that daily drenched the Jewish altars, the blood of the everlasting covenant which was to be shed for the remission of the sins of many; they recognized in their high priest the type of him who should offer himself without spot to God, and by that one offering perfect them forever; they heard in the tinkling of the golden bells upon the high priest's garment the joyful sound of the gospel of their salvation. They groaned under the bondage of temple service, and waited and longed for the consolation of Israel. There was no hope for the flesh in the deeds of the law, and no rest for the spirit in the earthly Jerusalem. But God had provided some better thing for them, and in the fullness of time the new Jerusalem was revealed from heaven, arrayed in bridal splendor, enshrouded in gospel glory, clothed in vestments of peace, with gates wide open to receive all those predestined to enter its walls of salvation, its towers of refuge and palaces of peace. Through the death and resurrection of Jesus spiritual Israel was redeemed from the law of Moses, having become dead to it by the body of Christ, and by him were led out of bondage, and brought with singing unto Zion, which is the new Jerusalem. They saw from afar the heavenly city. Joyous welcomes greeted them, written above the gates in letters of gold, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden." They gladly enter, and to their increased delight they find no temple therein. No more sacrifice, no more burnt offerings, no sabbath keeping, no more observance of new moons, feasts and holy days. Even the sun and moon which mark times and seasons, days and months, are obliterated from the sky. No Easter celebrations, no Christmas frolics. Every vestige of the law removed, and no temple to bring these buried things to remembrance. The justified inhabitants find themselves possessing what angels have desired to look into, and what the prophets of their fathers had searched diligently concerning.

The absence of the temple signifies the perfect deliverance of the elect Gentiles from every species of vain philosophy and esteemed and cherished idolatry. The Gentile Christians were under equally as galling bondage as the Jews, although they owed no allegiance to the law of Moses. They were under the law of sin and death, and were by nature alienated from the life of God through their ignorance, and were brought into bondage by the lusts of the flesh and the wiles of their priestcraft. The temple is not only a symbol of the law of Moses, but is a universal attendant of every form of Gentile idolatry. Stupendous temples adorned the cities of Egypt five thousand years ago. These temples were the home of Egypt's gods, sources of revenue to Egyptian priests, and the oppressors, enslavers and robbers of Egypt's people. Marble shrines of exquisite beauty brightened the cities of ancient Greece, massive temples of costliest designs contributed to the imposing grandeur of the once mighty Rome, and gorgeous temples of gold, of fabulous wealth, dazzled the eyes of Spanish robbers in the far away mountain recesses of Mexico and Peru. The gigantic remains found in every quarter of the earth proclaim in tongues of crumbling stone the universal reign of temple service over the benighted sons of men. The reign of grace has broken the reign of sin, and the Gentiles have seen the salvation of God. Grace searched the dark places of heathen idolatry, and brought forth to the light of the glorious gospel the hidden objects of electing love. Many of the saints at Ephesus had served in bondage in the temple of Diana; many of the "washed, justified and sanctified" ones of the Corinthian church had been gathered from the temples of Olympian Zeus, which adorned and burdened that opulent city; and many of the called saints of Rome had been led out of the temples of Jupiter. When Paul declared to the Athenians on Mar's Hill that God dwelleth not in temples made with hands, some who worshiped at the altar of the unknown God clave unto him and believed. All the inhabitants of this city, whether Jew or Greek, bond or free, have learned that God dwelleth not in temples made with hands, but that he is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit; they have found to the joy of their hearts that where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty. The truly spiritually minded seek no temple but God himself. In him they live and move and have their being, and in this gracious environment they enjoy all the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

The absence of the temple signifies the breaking down of the middle wall of partition between the Jews and the Gentiles. The Jewish temple was the great objective distinction between the Jews and all other nations, and stood as an outward evidence of God's favor to the Jews, and the rejection of the Gentiles. But as an outward evidence that God is no respecter of persons, but that the Gentiles are brought nigh by the blood of Christ, and reconciled in the same body with the Jews, the temple of Jerusalem was utterly destroyed, completely thrown down, so that not even one stone remained upon another, as Christ had before said should be done. In addition to this outward evidence, the new Jerusalem was revealed to the eye of faith with no temple in it, so that the believing Jew can no more be offended by bringing Gentiles into the temple. The grounds of disputes concerning Jewish prerogatives have been completely removed from the church under the gospel dispensation, and now representatives of every nation dwell together in unity in this spiritual commonwealth, each esteeming others better than himself, all hearts having been purified by faith which works by love. All have God for their Father, having been born again; all washed in the same blood, and all possessing one life, live together in the unity of the Spirit and in the bond of peace.

The absence of the temple signifies the absence of priestcraft. There is but one city in which priestcraft is not to be found, and that is the city of God. Priests have sought to rule the world, and are still seeking. A priesthood is a necessary element of all formulated religions, whether Jewish, Mohammedan, Catholic or Protestant. The priesthood of all will-worshipping idolaters has always pretended to stand between the people and their gods, and that in some way or other they are instrumental in bringing about a reconciliation between offending men and offended gods. This important element is common to all carnal religious systems; it is found alike in heathen, Catholic and Protestant, and is a plain evidence of the common origin and common interest of all these religious enterprises. The Catholic priest assumes to forgive sins for a stipulated sum, and pray souls out of purgatory for wages. The different Protestant hirelings will not exactly promise to do this, but they are equally cunning, and as little to be trusted. They hold out that men cannot be saved unless they hear them preach, and believe them; and some even go so far in their blasphemous presumption as to say that the heathen cannot be saved, neither can God justly damn them, until they preach to them. They array themselves in the hypocritical robes of false christs, and profess to be commissioned to evangelize the world and bring it to Christ. They even ascribe the salvation of their own children to their incantations, to penny tracts and religious fiction. They have invented hundreds of schemes and tricks to delude and embezzle the people, and are meeting in conventions from year to year to devise new fables, to send out their agents with new demands for money. The absence of the temple implies the absence of all these workers of darkness and propagators of iniquity. The inhabitants of this city have been delivered from the base deceptions of both Catholic and Protestant priesthoods. They have learned that there is but one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus. They are themselves a royal priesthood in Christ, prepared by grace to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. In this new creation they worship God in the spirit, and have no confidence in the flesh. They have no need of a candle, or the light of the sun or moon, all of which are emblems of worldly wisdom, as claimed by the carnal priesthoods; but the Lord God giveth them light, and the Lamb is the light thereof. Carnal worshipers seek a temple, but the spiritually minded seek no temple but God himself; the carnal worshiper delights in rites and ceremonies, but the spiritual seeks the secrecy of his closet; the carnal worshiper seeks the intercession of priests, but the spiritual is satisfied with no intercession outside of the unutterable groanings of the Spirit itself.

The absence of the temple signifies the absence of all fraud, deceit and violence. All the great temples of the world, from Thebes to Athens, from Athens to heathen Rome, from heathen Rome to Catholic Rome, from Catholic Rome to Protestant London, have been intimately connected with the blackest crimes of history; they have been the cradles of superstition, folly and vice, the nurseries of antichrist in every phase and form, the depots of rotten hypocrisy, the resorts of religious deceivers and oppressors, the home of tyranny, dens of thieves, the sepulchres of liberty, prison-houses of saints, and the high seats of spiritual wickedness. The absence of the temple from the city of God is evidence that all the works of the flesh are unknown either to Jew or to Greek in pure spiritual worship. This city is redeemed from all iniquity, and in this spiritual city, the true gospel church, no guile is found. The deeds of the body are mortified, and the fruit of the Spirit abounds. The inhabitants are blessed with good and upright hearts, and are in possession of charity, which thinketh no ill to his neighbor. The contrast was no greater between this city and old Jerusalem, than between this city and the communities of carnal religionists now. This is an age of extravagant temple worship. The chief ambition of the different sects is to surpass each other in temple building. Religious societies in every place, from the country cross roads to the metropolis of the nation, render themselves a pest to their neighborhood and a disgrace to the name of Christianity in going beyond their means to gratify their foolish, wicked, antichristian pride in erecting fine places of worship. The huge piles of stone and stained glass, thrown together in all the fantastic forms of heathen architecture that adorn our towns and cities, are regarded with quite as much reverence and admiration by their benighted votaries, as the temples of any of the ancient heathen nations.

This city is the whole election of grace, as they in one body worship the Father in spirit, as they stand holy and without blame before him in love. God himself dwells in them and with them, and he is their temple, and they are his.

The glory of this city is seen only by faith; the carnal senses of the saints themselves have never seen it. But the time shall come when still more grace shall be brought to them. The city shall be unveiled until all shall see it plainly, and all earthly cities with all their temples and idolatry shall be finally and forever overthrown, and the city of God shall stand a living, enduring, eternal monument to the love, mercy and power of God, and the victory of Christ over all enemies.

BLANCHESTER, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN TRIBULATION AND PATIENCE:—This day I am eighty-two years of age, and still striving to do good, but find that evil is present with me, so that I cannot do what I desire. I am still in the flesh, and find verified the truth of the words of Jesus, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." Dear friends, I am admonished from day to day that I must soon lay aside mortality. May I be permitted once more to look to the great foundation of the christian's hope.

"Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distill as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass: because I will publish the name of the Lord: ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment; a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he."—Deut. xxxii. 1-4. The beauty and sublimity of this inspired song is hardly rivaled or at all surpassed even in divine revelation. The complete sovereignty of God, with the glory and perfection of his attributes, especially his love and guardian care of his people, as related in the remaining part of the chapter, almost persuaded me to think that I am a christian. It is written, "The Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land, in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye." Surely the people of God are safe.

"Saved in the Lord, forever saved,
And in life's bundle bound."

"In the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." The apostles in their time seemed to think that the end was nigh, and many concluded that the end was just upon them; that Jesus their Master would make his personal appearance in their day; and they lived as pilgrims in a stranger's country, suffering trials, persecutions and cruel mockings, all for the sake of their Beloved, in whom they believed and fully trusted, and waited for his appearing and coming, trusting in the promises of that God who cannot lie. I will call your attention to some noted testimony of ancient records. Isaiah by the Spirit spake wonderful things concerning Christ, and of his sufferings, and of the glory that should follow; for example, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." Let me here remark that all the gospel promises come to us with a "Thus saith the Lord." There are no contingencies either expressed or implied, whether spoken by prophets, angels, Christ himself, or his apostles. All come with authority. As it is written, "For all the promises of God in him [Christ] are yea, and in him amen."

This evangelical prophet in one lesson to us says, "In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them and carried them all the days of old." O the mystery of his love and unity with his people! "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." Another passage by the same prophet is wonderful: "And I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." Here are six unconditional promises, all in one breath, as it were, by him who declares the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." Is not this sufficient? But once more. "Behold, the Lord God shall come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him." The Lord by Jeremiah says, "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts: and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." If this foundation be removed, what can the righteous do?

Let us now notice the testimony recorded in the New Testament. The angelic messenger commissioned from heaven says, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Jesus the Savior. Has he accomplished his great work? Did he tell the truth when on the cross he cried, "It is finished?" Is the record true? Or shall we cavil and say, "It was finished so far as Jesus was concerned in the salvation of his people; but it depends on certain conditions and contingencies; that men and women have to repent, believe and obey, as well as accept the offered grace? O my soul! come not thou into the secret chambers of their rebellion, but bow meekly at the feet of Jesus, and humbly receive the testimony of the Son when he declares, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: and this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but raise it up at the last day." Again, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." Brethren and friends, can we not receive the testimony of the Son? Not until the Spirit shall take of the things of his and show them unto us. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" The richest gift which heaven had to bestow, he bestowed upon his beloved, the bride, the Lamb's wife, Jesus, who died for our sins, according to the Scriptures. "Who was delivered for our offenses, and rose again for our justification." Thus the whole redeemed family stand in their glorified head, free from condemnation; as the poet sings,

"In union with the Lamb,
From condemnation free,
The saints from everlasting were,
And shall forever be."

Glorious state, and made known to the heirs of promise when God reveals his Son in them; when they are enabled to believe, according to the working of God's mighty power which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly place, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all.

Remember, brethren, your high calling; loved by the Father with an everlasting love; chosen in Christ before the world began; blessed in him with all spiritual blessings. "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ unto himself, according to the good pleasure of his will; to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved." How great the grace! How rich the inheritance! How ineffable the glory of his inheritance in the saints! How close the union! What an eternal mystery is revealed! Christ in us the hope of glory. Redeemed from all iniquity by his precious blood, which cleanses us from all sin. "Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places."

Now, dear brethren, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us be patient, and hope to the end, for the time is at hand. As an old servant I beseech you to walk worthy of your high calling, with all lowliness and meekness, forbearing one another in love. "There is one body and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." O that the good Lord may visit his people with the spirit of grace and supplication; that all bitterness may be removed from among the children of the kingdom; that love and good works may adorn the house of God; that all may speak the same things, and be comforted together.

Will brother Hagans, of California, be pleased to write to me, and let me know something of his family? Address me at Blanchester, Ohio.

J. C. BEEMAN.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Sept. 2, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send parts of three letters from sister Lizzie Himes, whom it was my privilege to baptize at Riddlesburg, Bedford Co., Pa., Aug. 15th, with her brother, Corder Mellott, who is seventeen years of age. Their father, Wm. Mellott, is the only member in that place, though there are a number who manifest an interest in the truth. They were baptized in the fellowship of the church at Rainsburg, three of whose members were present.

Your brother in hope,
SILAS H. DURAND.

HOPEWELL, Pa., Jan. 27, 1893.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND AND FAMILY:—Your very dear letter was received, and I was certainly made to rejoice. I was feeling very distressed the evening it came, and as I read it new strength passed over me, strength from the Lord, that I might trust to him and not be so doubtful. I often wonder why such vain thoughts possess me, and how I go on in my vain imagination, with thought after thought arising in me to no profit, till at last I am made to cry out, O wretched mortal that I am! I often wonder if those around me are filled with such doubts and fears as I have, or feel as wretched and forsaken as I do at times. Surely no one could sink as low down as I do at times. I had gotten better for a few days, and thought to be better for a few weeks at least; but alas! it was but a few days until the disease that had me in its grasp returned, only to make me more frail, and here I am, quite weak and faint. I sometimes feel that, unless checked, my days are few. I know the Lord can do with me as he will. He afflicts, and he can heal; he gives, and he can take away; and blessed be his holy name. Sometimes I shrink from death's cold arms; but O! again I would rejoice to lay this weary body down to rest, to dwell and be with the Lord.

"Tis there the weary are at rest,
And all is peace within:
The mind, with guilt no more oppressed,
Is tranquil and serene."

JANUARY 28th.

I PASSED a very distressing night, in tears. O! I felt so forsaken, even by those whom I thought ought to love me; and my sins arose like mountains. How could a just God forgive a wretch like me? I thought, Could I better it were I to live my life over? No. Could I grow better were my life spared a thousand years? No. I would find still this weak, sinful flesh, so prone to sin. There I lay and cried till a sweet voice spoke, "Thou art not alone, neither art thou forsaken. Only trust." Instantly the tears ceased. The words still seemed to come, "I am ever with thee, the same yesterday, to-day and forever. My love never changes; and though thy earthly friends forsake thee, I will never. Better by far to trust to the Lord than to all thy friends and companions on earth." Then did an evil thought come, "There is no God." O! such a thought shook my frame; but it lasted only a moment, till I felt the sweet peace and love of God pass over me. My eyes closed, and I was soon in peaceful slumber, to awake this morning feeling to sing praises to the Lamb that was slain for poor perishing sinners, forsaken by man, but chosen of God. O! how it cheers my poor drooping heart to trust to the dear Lord that some day, when it pleases him, who doeth all things right, he will call me to come home, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

I again take my pen to write such thoughts as present themselves. I have been quite sick all day, but feel some stronger this evening. The doctor told me to-day that perhaps after all they could do me more good than we think for. I know they can if the Lord wills it so; but his will must be done.

Dear Elder Durand, I had the sweet privilege granted me to hear the blessed truth spoken. How plain it was made to me. How it cheered my poor drooping heart. How eagerly I listened for each word as it fell from the lips of Elder Alderton. I was glad indeed. The next day I came home feeling worse. My dear husband, of course, thought I had better staid at home. He preached at my father's house to a small number; but the dear Lord has said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst." He preached as though he were preaching to a thousand. I know most of our preachers (or so-called) would not have delivered one of their sermons to so few. It makes me to rejoice as his words yet sound in my ears, "If the Lord be for us, who can be against us?" Is this not comforting to his weak children? I had such a dear, sweet, comforting letter from dear Bessie. How I wish I could receive such letters daily. But I must be contented and feel thankful that I have the sweet privilege granted me to receive them occasionally.

JANUARY 30th.

I WILL try now to finish this letter. I heard the letter read to-day from the doctor. He gave instructions what was to be done if I did not get better in a few weeks, and O! I dread it; but it seems necessary to be done, and I am almost at such a state that I am willing for anything, so I may be relieved in one way or the other. If in death, then my sufferings will be ended and I shall know no pain,

"And not a wave of trouble roll Across my peaceful breast."

If I am not relieved and not benefited, God's will be done, not mine. I crave an interest in your prayers. Love to you and yours, and when you again feel like writing to poor, unworthy me I will be so glad to hear from you.

Yours in hope of a better world,
LIZZIE HIMES.

HOPEWELL, Pa., July 8, 1893.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND—DEAR ELDER AND FAMILY:—Your very dear letter is at hand, and I was glad to hear from you once more.

(Continued on page 325.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 11, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FAITH OF THE CENTURION.

If it will not be asking too much of you, please give your views on the Scripture recorded Matthew viii. 11, 12. By doing so you will oblige a poor sinner saved by grace, if saved at all.

A. H. WILLIAMSON.

LUVERNE, Ala., April 24, 1893.

R E P L Y .

"AND I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."—Matt. viii. 11, 12.

For the correct understanding of this declaration of our Lord it is essential that it be taken in the connection in which it is recorded. It must be observed that the Jews, to whom this was spoken, were settled in the sentiment that all the benefits of the coming of the Messiah were to be restricted to that people whose natural descent could be traced to those patriarchs here named. Although it had been clearly foretold by inspired prophets, whom they professed to believe, yet they could not understand that their earnestly expected revelation of the kingdom of heaven could embrace in its divine blessings those whom they had ever regarded as beyond the limits of the favor of God. Relying upon their fleshly parentage, even the disciples of Jesus could have no clearer knowledge than that received by tradition, until they were taught of the Lord to discern between the legal shadows and the gospel substance. The Mosaic dispensation had not been fulfilled when this miracle was wrought, although the time was at hand when it should be rolled together as a scroll, and all its glory should be lost in the superior radiance of the day of gospel light. The disciples whom Jesus had called to follow him were, with their Lord himself, yet under law to Moses, and the middle wall of partition still stood as an impassable barrier to forbid the hope of any Gentile who might seek acceptance by the obedience of the law as given on Sinai. Although they had been taught that their own salvation was entirely of grace, it was not yet shown to them that they were called to a new life and liberty, which could never be known under the heavy yoke of that fiery law whose infinite requirements must fill with despair every one who could hear its awful thunder. Even after receiving the gracious instruction of Jesus as spoken in the sermon on the mount, they were still unable to comprehend the infinite riches of that grace which could abound to the bestowing of mercy and salvation upon those who had no part in the institutions of Judaism. Up to the time of the incident recorded in the verses immediately connected with and including our text, there had been no intimation by our Lord that he would display his grace in behalf of any others but the natural Israelites. The Gentiles were not only regarded as oppressors and enemies of Israel, but they were thought to be unworthy of recognition even as social companions. So bitter was the animosity of the Jews against their Gentile conquerors that it was one of the epithets with which they reproached Jesus, that he was a friend of publicans (Roman tax gatherers) and sinners. The centurion was a Roman officer, whose servant had been healed by the word of Jesus; and it may readily be understood that this was an astonishment to his followers, as well as to all those who witnessed the miraculous display of mercy toward one who was not an Israelite. It is said in the record of the woman of Samaria that "the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans."—John iv. 9. And to the woman of Canaan Jesus said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."—Matt. xv. 24. Then it is not strange that this great favor bestowed upon the servant of the centurion was especially wonderful to the people, both Jews and Gentiles. It is said that Jesus marveled when he heard the words of the centurion; but the expression is defined in the same verse, when he says, "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." It is not that Jesus was astonished at this display of faith; for there is no faith but that which is the gift of God, and no man has this true faith but as it is the fruit of the Spirit of Christ which has been given unto him. Jesus declared the wonder in this case that such great faith should be manifested in one who was a stranger to the privileges and advantages of the legal dispensation. This was truly worthy of special consideration as showing that the possession of this gift of the grace of God was not dependent upon the merits or superior birth of those on whom it was bestowed.

"And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Perhaps difficulty may arise in the mind of some in comprehending this declaration, because of the failure to observe that the Lord is speaking of that kingdom of heaven which John had announced as being at hand. To the natural mind the expression suggests the final state of glory to which the saints are appointed. Then it is consistent with such an application of these words to consider the coming of those from the east and from the west as indicating that they were not children of the kingdom in the sense of being of that number who were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. If this were the correct interpretation of this text it would involve the necessary consequence that some of those who were chosen of God to eternal life may be lost, notwithstanding that choice; and that others who were not so chosen of God should be found at last sitting with the saints in heaven, by virtue of their own wisdom and choice. Certainly there can be no question whether this theory represents the choice of man or the choice of God as more effectual. If the will of the sinner defeats the choice of God when he would have the subject of his choice saved, is it consistent to claim that the power of God is superior to that of the sinner? And, if the will of God is defeated in his design to save the subjects of his favor, is it probable that there will be more willingness on their part to submit to his will in their condemnation? But this absurd doctrine of the freedom of the will of the sinner in the matter of salvation is effectually refuted in the very declaration of our text. The truth of our Lord is positively pledged that these from the east and west shall come and sit down in the kingdom. The purpose of God cannot be fulfilled without this. And if that counsel of his will should fail there could be no hope for the salvation of any of the justly condemned children of Adam. Hence, the only result which can be attained in the overthrow of the doctrine of particular and effectual election must be the universal destruction of all the race of mankind. But in this text, as in all the revelation which God has given, it should be remembered that the whole testimony is the one and inseparable record of the truth of God, and therefore no interpretation of any portion of this word can be correct if it conflicts with the testimony of the same inspiration in any other portion. The word of truth must be consistent with itself; whatever inconsistency may appear to finite minds certainly results from the blindness of our understanding. But there is no trouble in the application of these words of Jesus as preaching that same "kingdom of heaven" which John had announced in the preaching of repentance in the wilderness of Judea, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." It was of this kingdom, which was to be revealed in the establishment of the gospel church, that our Lord spoke in our text. They who come from the east and west are the Gentiles who should be brought into the liberty of the sons of God, and the bringing in of them as fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of faith, is inseparably associated with the fulfillment of the work which Jesus came to finish in the breaking down of the middle wall of partition which had from the days of Moses shut out the Gentiles from participation in the advantage bestowed upon the Jews. In the setting up of the organized church, even the chosen apostles of Jesus were unable to receive the great truth that the Gentiles were made partakers of the liberty of the saints. It was not until he was specially taught in that wonderful vision, that Peter was prepared to comprehend "That God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." And when he had reported the whole case to the church at Jerusalem, "They held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life."—Acts x. 34, 35; xi. 18. In the kingdom of Christ every sinner who is brought in by divine grace does sit down with the patriarchs and prophets, resting in the same redemption which is in Christ Jesus, who is the only Savior of his people, and in whom is all the hope of conscious sinners. The Gentiles do come from the east and west, "Being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." In the gospel kingdom of heaven they "sit down" with all the subjects of electing love in that infinite rest which Jesus gives to all who labor and are heavy laden. However it may gratify the pride of such as are strong in their own ability, to claim that they are capable of "working for Jesus," it is clear that they are not included in this text, for all these "shall sit down," as the Lord expressly declares in the words here recorded. It is not a false promise which was spoken by our Redeemer when he called the weary to himself for rest. He was not seeking to secure toilers under that delusive announcement when he said, "I will give you rest." All who enter that kingdom of heaven sit down in the perfect and everlasting rest which remains to the people of God, and into which they that believe do enter. This is the gracious word which by the gospel is preached unto the Gentiles. They shall come, and they shall sit down in this kingdom with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob. There can be no failure in this word of the Lord. It shall come to pass.

"But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." As has been intimated, this was fulfilled in the overthrow of the nation of Israel, and in the removal of that legal heaven and earth of Judaism. It is not that God has cast away his people which he foreknew. The children of the kingdom who are cast into outer darkness are those natural Israelites who are looking to the law of Moses for justification. These are indeed in fleshly relation "children of the kingdom," being naturally descended from the patriarchs. But when some of them demanded baptism on that ground, John denounced them, and expressly rejected that claim. The repentance which he preached was the turning away from all legal and fleshly dependence, and the fruits which were meet for such repentance were the broken and contrite spirit, by which they should mourn their utterly lost condition. Those who bore such fruit were identified as being led by the Spirit of God. Those who knew no higher righteousness than that which could be attained by obedience to the law of Moses were and are forever cast out into that outer darkness which is not illumined by the life-giving light of the Sun of righteousness. The weeping and gnashing of teeth is not that godly sorrow for sin which moves those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. It is expressive of the impotent rage which marks the defeated efforts of the enemies of truth and righteousness. Such weeping and gnashing of teeth is never accompanied by the hatred of sin, and the desire to be conformed to the image of Jesus. The love of Christ is never found in those who are cast out of the kingdom of heaven. They who love the appearing of the Lord must be led by his Spirit, and all such are the sons of God.

It is not intended to deny that there are seasons when the true born children of grace are called to feel the bitterness of being cast out of the presence of their Lord; and in such severe chastening they do feel the pains of hell as having full power over them; but they are not left in hell. Even in their sorest distress there is the longing for deliverance from sin, which can never be found in that sorrow of the world which worketh death. The selfishness of carnal enmity may long for release from misery, but it never can produce the desire for that perfect righteousness which is revealed in the glorious face of Jesus Christ. With those who hunger and thirst after righteousness, it is often the case that the dark waters of affliction may prevail against them, and sorrow may endure for a night; but joy cometh in the morning. That morning is ushered in by the rising Sun of righteousness, who always appears for the joy of them that love his appearing, and for them there is always healing in his wings.

Brother Williamson will please compare this effort to comply with his request with the inspired standard, and accept only what is in accordance with that rule. We should be glad to hear from him or any of our brethren on the text, which we have but briefly considered.

(Continued from page 323.)

It cheered and revived my drooping mind. I am alone in my room now, and am trying to sit up some, but find it almost impossible to stay up ten minutes at a time, and am so weak that I can scarcely hold my pen. I have undergone another operation, and am slowly recovering, but am so weak and frail that the doctor said yesterday it looked as though I would not be helped much. I was so glad when I heard you were coming in August that I scarcely could await the time when I could be buried with Christ in baptism. But this rejoicing did not last long. I soon felt my sinfulness so great, and was so cast down with the weight of sin, that I thought, How can a just God pardon me? How can he suffer me to enter his fold? so wretched and so vile I seemed. My vain thoughts were so great that I could not even mention them were I to attempt to do so. For several days the darkness was so great that I despaired of life, and wished time and again that I had never written to any one. But the Lord came in a way I had not thought for, and spoke peace to my troubled soul, and there was a great calm.

JULY 9th.

I HAD several trials yesterday, and did not get this rambling letter done; so this morning, by God's tender care and loving mercy, I again was permitted to arise from my weary bed, although I did not think I could. I was almost led to think that my time here was nearly done, and that I could be with Jesus and see him as he is. O! the agony I suffered would be hard to describe. It seemed as though each rapid beat of the heart would still me in death. My recovery is doubtful, I know, though with God all things are possible, and if he wills it I will regain my former health. If not, O may he bend my will to his. If he keeps me in the bonds of afflictions he certainly has a just cause for so doing. I know that if I were left to choose my own path it would be different, and whither would I go? The lower I sink the more peaceful is the rest.

"Without thy sweet mercy I could not live here;
Sin soon would reduce me to utter despair;
But through thy free goodness my spirits revive,
And he that first made me still keeps me alive.

Thy mercy is more than a match for my heart,
Which wonders to feel its own hardness depart;
Dissolved by thy goodness I fall to the ground,
And weep to the praise of the mercy I found."

I was glad to hear your dear wife was better in health, and if God wills it so she will be restored to health. I hope to see you soon and hear you talk of the goodness and mercy of the Lord.

Yours in hope of a better world,
LIZZIE HIMES.

HOPEWELL, Pa., Aug. 24, 1893.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND—MY DEAR BROTHER AND FAMILY:—If one so sinful as I may address you thus. As I sit here meditating on the past my mind almost fails me. It seems as though I hardly dare claim so sacred a relationship as to address you, or any of the family of God, as brother or sister. Just one week ago to-day we took the parting hand. How different was last week passed from this. Yesterday a Dunkard minister tried to prove to me that I was on a certain road to hell. He said it caused him to shudder when he heard I was baptized again; when I had been baptized aright, to think I would go astray. "That was your father's fault," he said. I assured him my father had nothing to do with it; that I believed it to be the work of the Lord, and not of man. I told him how different were my baptisms, how sweet was my watery grave last Tuesday, and how peaceful I felt. Could a mother lay her infant down with more ease? O how sweet was the day, and how peaceful the waters. The place is ever before me, as plain as though it ran beside the house. In his argument, when I would attempt to say anything, he would tell me to hush and wait till he would say all, and then perhaps I would have more light, and would know what I was talking about. He told me several times that much learning had made me mad; that he was afraid of this some time ago when he read some of my writings. I at last told him that better by far was it for me to hold my peace and not talk, than to talk with one who had no hearing ear, and who yet was in Babylon, and I would end my talk with him. If the Lord be for me, who indeed can be against me? Let the world move and say what they will, let them condemn me; it is not the world who giveth the crown. He talked awhile after that, and asked me a few questions, but I answered him nothing. When we went to take the parting hand he said, "Now, Lizzie, don't be cross because we differ in our views, but come to see us. But the Scriptures are so plain that I thought I must try to convince you that you have gone astray, and O how sorry we are for you." I told him his words were idle, and I had no hearing ear for them; that the Lord had made me see what a wretch I was, and not man, and I had no works to offer the Lord to make him love or save me; that when it came to works, no flesh could stand before God. He seemed very kind to me, and at different times during our conversation I noticed tears in his and his wife's eyes. But, my dear brother, his conversation, his preaching, his prayers, could not move me. The Lord was with me, and I could not be moved. How firm a rock is the name of Jesus. "Lord, how are they increased that trouble me! Many are they that rise up against me. Many there be which say of my soul, There is no help for him in God. Selah. But thou, O Lord, art a shield for me, my glory, and the lifter up of my head. I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah. I laid me down and slept; I awaked; for the Lord sustained me. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about. Arise, O Lord; save me, O my God; for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly. Salvation belongeth unto the Lord; thy blessing is upon thy people. Selah." This psalm is very comforting to me, and of late seems to suit my case. My mind dwells much upon our meeting face to face. How different from what I expected.

AUGUST 29th.

IN writing the beginning of this letter I was taken very sick, and was quite bad for a few days. The doctor says he can do nothing more, only for temporary relief, and another operation would be against my life. He told my husband it was to be kept from me, that things were so doubtful either way. But they cannot frighten me. I am not afraid of dying before my time. I had such a dear letter from Attie Curtis, and am not worthy of such a sweet welcome. I must try to finish a letter commenced to her last Saturday. My head has been so bad that I do not feel like writing. I cannot write any more. Love to you and all. Father and mother send love to you and yours.

Your unworthy sister,
LIZZIE HIMES.

OAK CREEK, Ore., Aug. 31, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed I send you a letter written by sister Boyd, of Dilly, Oregon, which you will please publish if considered by you worthy a place in the columns of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

I am truly sorry that we have to see in the SIGNS a notice to delinquents. I wish the brethren would stop that notice by paying up.

Your brother in hope,
J. P. ALLISON.

DILLY, Oregon, Aug. 1, 1893.

ELDER J. P. ALLISON AND WIFE—MUCH ESTEEMED FRIENDS IN CHRIST JESUS:—Your highly esteemed letter was received several days ago, and we ought to have answered it before now; but the many cares in this life and the sinfulness of our hearts cheat us in many ways not perceived by the unregenerated. I am often made to question the wisdom of my attempting to write at all on spiritual things. It is true the children who have been enlightened are free, and when God loosens their tongue it speaks with the wisdom of God, which is foolishness to the unbeliever. Here the doubts of my poor soul are overwhelming. How can one so prone to sin lay claim to any of the blessed truths that apply to the children of the only true and living God? Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." Can one so vile claim to be a follower of the meek and lowly Son of God, who withstood all the temptation while in these low grounds of sin and woe; who was reviled and spit upon, and reviled not again? O! this stubborn heart, this guilty conscience. Like one of old my heart cries out, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" And Paul was certainly a follower of that meek and lowly Jesus. His mouth was opened, and he spoke of the hidden things of God; hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed unto babes. "Except ye be converted and become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Now, my dear brother and sister, I am not fit to speak of these things. My walk is so crooked, my conversation is so often the reverse of that which is good, that my thoughts quake and my pen falters. But I have pondered much over some things that I am about to speak of. If you will bear with me in my weakness, and reprove me if I go wrong, I will try to set forth some of my views in as plain a manner as I can, hoping God in his goodness will keep me from error. I believe I mentioned in a former letter to you that my mind was to write to you on a subject that bothered me. You told me to write it for the SIGNS; but I tell you candidly that I tremble at the thought; yet we are told to fear no man, but rather to fear God. You are at liberty to do with this as you see fit. So, in the presence of Almighty God, and with fear, I hope, I will address myself to every one of the beloved family before whose eyes these lines may come, trusting the Lord will give you wisdom to accept or reject according to the right way.

I wish first to call attention to prayer, unuttered or expressed. With myself I find that prayer expressed in audible words takes on a sound of hollowness that makes my heart quake. I try to use becoming language, which causes me to almost lose sight of the most solemn feeling, which gives place to one of disgust at my expressions, addressed to one whose eye is upon me, and who knows all my need better than I do, a poor worm of the dust. Unuttered prayer seems to come of a purer origin, if I may use such an expression in connection with myself. I find a feeling different from any other that possesses me, a feeling the flesh dares not tamper with, for it kills. Brethren, is there any one like me? Well do I know "It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps;" neither can he think a good thought, much less do a good act. Surrounded by the cares and turmoils of a busy life, harassed in mind and weary in body, the heart set on trying to economize, and at the same time provide enough for our dear dependent ones to eat and to wear while in the body, can we at a set time or at a moment's notice give thanks for what we receive? Can we kneel down at night, or at any time that custom requires, and utter a fervent prayer to the Father of all light for the many blessings bestowed on us, poor, weak mortals? Let the children of our King think, and think seriously of these things, and act as the Spirit directs. He that feels like praying, let him pray; but do not bring to the altar any set form for the sake of custom or habit. We are believers, but it does not follow that we can sit at a table and utter at will a heartfelt prayer. We claim to be, and hope we are, children of the only true and living God; but so long as we dwell in this fleshly tabernacle we will be cumbered more or less with worldly things; and holding what is popularly called "family prayers," seems out of place among Old School Baptists. If the heart could always enter into these things I would not object to believers kneeling down daily, or a dozen times a day, for that matter; for it is true that we cannot praise and adore the heavenly Master enough. But we are told to enter into our secret place, or closet, and there pray. Again, it is a custom among some dear brethren I know to require their children to kneel down with them; for what? Some say it is setting a good example before our children. Is teaching our children hypocrisy setting a good example? Compelling them to listen to our uninteresting routine of words, to which they have listened many times, and often wished we would cut short, and sometimes falling asleep through weariness, the little knees aching, and the mind wandering to something of a more pleasing nature. In all this where is the good among so much evil? Prayer is too holy an act to be given over to form. When it is governed by form it consists more or less of the same material, and is falsely called prayer. One will say, That is a small matter to make such a noise over. But that is one of many errors which some of our people are drifting into. I feel that I must mention another. Many, I am grieved to think and say, are in the habit of using the appellation brother or sister promiscuously; and I maintain that we have as much authority to invite these same characters to partake of the emblems of our Lord Jesus Christ. Other denominations are profuse in the use of these terms. We, as children of our spiritual Father, and dwelling together in church capacity, are commanded to be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. "Be ye separate," saith our God. We overstep authority when we use the appellation in connection with any except the acknowledged followers of Jesus; those who have gone down into the watery grave, thus acknowledging him who hath loved us and saved us with an everlasting salvation; those of like precious faith with us, as our brethren.

May God bless truth and pardon error.

MRS. J. K. BOYD.

THE GIFTS AND CALLING OF GOD.

BROTHER Jephtha Watkins, of South Carolina, requests my views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES on Romans xi. 29, which reads as follows: "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." That is, God does not call his people because of repentance, or on the ground of their repentance; neither does he endow them with any gifts because of repentance. We find the apostle in this connection treating of the doctrine of election exclusively; showing by conclusive argument and clear impressive reasoning that God calls and blesses his chosen people because it was and is his pleasure to do so, and for no other reason. In our text the apostle Paul was writing to the church at Rome, telling them of the salvation of Israel, notwithstanding their rebellion and wickedness against God; for their salvation depended not on any goodness or foreseen merit in themselves. In the preceding verse Paul tells the Roman brethren that the salvation of Israel does not depend upon their acceptance of the gospel; so they need not think that because Israel are enemies to the gospel they are lost, for they are beloved of God for the fathers' sake; that is, beloved because of the everlasting promise made to the fathers. Then Paul appeals to their (Romans) own experience for proof; tells them that in time past, when they were dead in trespasses and sins, they received mercy from the hand of God, even while they were unbelievers. God called them from nature's night into the marvelous light and liberty of the gospel, freely gives them repentance through his dear Son, and then gives them evidence of the forgiveness of their sins, and then gives them faith in Jesus Christ his Son for salvation and eternal redemption.—Acts v. 31; Heb. xii. 2; Matt. i. 21. So we cannot help but see that Paul in this chapter (Rom. xi.) puts a quietus upon the unscriptural Arminian notion of repentance upon the part of the creature as a condition of eternal salvation.

There is another standpoint from which we might consider this text; that is, the unchangeableness of God. The word "repentance," as used in the holy Scriptures, carries the idea of changing or turning; but from the connection of this Scripture we cannot escape the conclusion that the prime idea of the apostle while penning our text was to confute the conditional idea of salvation. It is perfectly safe to say that all the gifts of God to his people, and his calling of his people, "are without repentance" in every sense of the word. All the gifts of God bestowed upon his people, whether in time or eternity, and his calling of them, are "according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." All his purposes are immutable, and hence unalterable and unchangeable; so then "the gifts and calling of God are without repentance" entirely. Repentance is in no sense the cause of the gift of eternal life, or fruits of the Spirit. The calling of God of every sinner from nature's night to the marvelous light and liberty of the kingdom of Jesus is entirely without repentance, both on the part of God and the sinner; for God blessed all his chosen people before the foundation of the world with the promise of eternal life and all the graces or fruits of the Spirit, and treasured them in his Son for them.—Eph. i. 4. He does not give them eternal life because of repentance, but without repentance; for repentance itself is the gift of God, and is the fruit of eternal life, and an evidence that one has eternal life. God does not save and call sinners according to or with their repentance, but according to and with his eternal purpose and grace, which he gave us sinners in Christ Jesus before the world began.—2 Tim. i. 9. O what a storehouse of spiritual blessings is our blessed Jesus! All things needed for the perfecting of the saints are found in him. O what provision is made in Jesus for God's people, embracing everything needed for their salvation, preservation and everlasting happiness! God gives his people eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Rom. vi. 23. Not through or with repentance, but through Jesus Christ, who is the embodiment of truth and life eternal. Hence, as soon as the promised seed, the redeemed children of God, receive the divine favor experimentally (when they are quickened into the divine life), they are in receipt of the truth and divine life, and are capacitated to grow in this glorious favor or life; and all the graces or fruits of this eternal life will be developed more and more, and the knowledge of this eternal truth will be more and more developed as the child grows.—2 Peter iii. 18; Eph. iv. 15, 16. The first glorious gift of God to his children is eternal life, which is the embodiment of all the other gifts; for in the gift of eternal life God gives them the heirship of all spiritual gifts (blessings); and then, after the child of God receives the gift of eternal life, it receives the blessed and heavenly gift of the knowledge of its total depravity in human nature. Then comes the godly sorrow for sin, which works repentance. Then God gives them that glorious and heavenly deliverance from sin and condemnation experimentally, the work of faith; then every good and perfect gift necessary to qualify the saint to fill the position assigned him in the divine economy. So God calls all his children, without repentance, according to his own eternal purpose; and they receive every gift from his heavenly hand according to his eternal purpose in Christ Jesus before the world was, and thus are prepared to fill the position in the kingdom of God which they were ordained to.

Right here this subject begins to expand, but I shall have to close. I have written in great haste, and in the midst of company; but I hope it will prove satisfactory to our dear brother Watkins, if published, and will be of comfort to the readers of the SIGNS.

I am, as ever, your poor, little, unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,

WM. R. WELBORN.

STATE ROAD, N. C., June 26, 1893.

RINGGOLD, Va., Sept., 1893.

BRETHREN G. BEEBE'S SONS:—Brother John T. Lumpkins has requested me to write for publication through your paper, using for a foundation a text of Scripture recorded in 1 Thess. v. 6. "Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober." This Scripture, like all other, is true in the sense in which it is meant. A wrong application will render it wholly unprofitable. You will notice in the preceding chapter, thirteenth verse, the apostle's charge to these Thessalonian brethren, not to be ignorant concerning certain ones which are asleep; while in the text under consideration we are told not to sleep. Hence the importance of our giving heed to the subject under consideration, lest we use one Scripture to the destruction of another. It seems that different sleep is spoken of; therefore let us be careful to understand what is meant by the text; what kind of sleep is objected to, &c. These brethren are told that they are the children of light and of the day; not children of night and darkness. "Therefore let us not sleep," &c. Day and night naturally come upon all men. All that are blessed with natural eyes, minds, &c., see and realize the difference. We have no power to hinder this natural occurrence. At the appointed time it will be so. We use the natural day for time of labor to obtain food and blessings in this life, and night for rest from labor. Natural things are often used to acquaint or prepare our minds to receive spiritual things; and now may the God of heaven enable us to dive deep into the mystery of this Scripture so beautifully and solemnly set forth, so that the children of the day now may be edified and comforted. Let us remember that we are fast traveling to meet the night of death, and after this the resurrection. Therefore we, the children of light, should not in a sense sleep, but watch and be sober. "For they that sleep, sleep in the night;

and they that are drunken, are drunken in the night." How great and how sad is the difference shown here between the children of the day and light, and the children of night and darkness. Let us remember that our daily walk and conversation shows to which class we belong. We are told how we ought to walk to please God. For God hath not called us to uncleanness, but unto holiness. Now, brethren, let us therefore be alive, faithfully discharging our every duty, showing that we are children of the light, until we shall have to sleep the sleep which is in Jesus, which is not forbidden. In the morning of the resurrection, when the Lord shall descend from heaven with the voice of the Archangel and with the trump of God, the dead in Christ shall rise first; and those that are alive upon the earth shall be caught up together to meet the Lord in the air. How indescribable, how language fails to tell, the joy of such a meeting. Now, brethren, if we claim a part in this resurrection, what are we doing to-day? Are we watching? Are we sober? How solemn, how sad, if we are found wandering in darkness, dissipation, and all forbidden paths traveled by the children of the night and darkness. Let us remember the apostles do not say we cannot sleep this dangerous sleep, but exhort us not to do so. How good, how gracious and how great is the power of our God in giving us the Scriptures, and to put in trust with some of our brethren the gospel, all to keep us out from this forbidden sleep, or death to all our religious pleasures. Brethren, let us watch and be sober, that the Lord may be praised.

Your brother in hope,

R. L. DODSON.

MORTONSVILLE, Ky., Sept., 1893.

ELDER BEEBE'S SONS—KIND SIR:—If you will permit one so unworthy as I to thus address you. I will send two dollars in this letter to aid in publishing the ever-welcome and dear old SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I hope the good Lord may prosper you in the good work. I am often bowed down, and fear that I am not one of the elect. If I am, why so cold and lifeless? I do love to hear the Old Baptists preach better than any people I ever heard, but I seldom have the privilege of hearing them. I would so much love to have some of the ministers visit us. I am willing to pay them. Excuse this; I did not expect to say much.

Respectfully,

MATTIE S. WARE.

ELDON, Iowa, Sept. 4, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—A few more months and I shall be eighty-six years old. While blessed with health and eyesight, to be deprived of the dear old SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which I have read from its first issue to the present, would be a grievous loss. I hope you will not let my name be stricken from the list at any time during the remaining few days or years at most that the laws of nature retain me in this life; and at my death if any delinquency occurs I have children whom I can safely assure you will pay the last farthing and continue the paper in their own name.

Yours in the bonds of christian love,

REBECCA FLINT.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

SUPPLY EXHAUSTED.

AN unusually large and sudden demand for our small type cloth-bound hymn books has entirely exhausted our supply, but we have the book now in press, and expect to have them ready for delivery by the first or middle of November next. We have a number of orders now on hand which we will fill at the earliest possible day. Parties who have orders now in, and prefer to do so, can remit the balance and have any of the other styles of binding mailed them immediately. Any one wishing to have their money returned, if they will inform us, we will refund it to them.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Lewis Butler, of Sanford, Maine, died Sept. 23d, 1893, aged 68 years, 9 months and 8 days.

He was baptized by Elder Quint, Oct. 8th, 1877. Our brother for a number of years was Clerk of the church at North Berwick. He was a brother beloved, and in his removal the church feels that she has lost a useful and faithful member. There was manifest in this beloved brother the Spirit of Christ, he being meek and lowly in heart. Down to the end of his pilgrimage he acknowledged himself to be a poor sinner, depending upon the mercy of God alone. He spoke of his hope being in the sovereign and abounding grace of God.

During his last illness, when unable to attend the meetings of the church, he manifested his interest by inquiring after their welfare, and expressed his soul's longings for the prosperity of the household of God. Our brother was one who cheerfully gave of his earthly substance for the temporal needs of the church, and for the support of the gospel ministry. He could have wished during his sickness to live some time longer, to have been able to see his dear wife (our sister Butler) a little further on in her journey through this life; but the gracious Lord brought him even in this into resignation to the will of God, and he expressed his willingness to go.

At his funeral the writer preached from the words, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes."—Hosea xiii. 14.

FRED. W. KEENE.

By request of a daughter of the deceased I send for publication through the SIGNS a notice of the death of Mr. Abram Gladden, in the 85th year of his age.

He was buried from his late residence near the Harford Church-house, where he still lives in the memory of many who were entertained at his hospitable home; but many of them are now gone the way of all the earth. Among them were Elders Frances, Thorne, Beebe, Hartwell and Leachman, who were especially fond of him. In regard to the doctrine held by the Old order of Baptists he was very decided and firm, but never seemed to feel his way clear in making a public profession of the truth as it is in Jesus, although I have heard him on different occasions speak of his travel of mind in the things of the kingdom.

The deceased was twice married, but his family was not large. One son and two daughters survive him. His wives were suffered to remain with him but a short time, and consequently the last years of his life were spent in loneliness and sadness; but now being freed from the tabernacle in which he groaned, being burdened, he leaves others to mourn, but not without hope. The children are comfortably situated in homes of their own.

I was requested to attend the funeral, but my arrangements were such that I could not. He sleeps in the Harford church-yard beside his wives, undisturbed by the sorrows of the way; asleep until all who are in their graves shall come forth. Our best wishes remain with those bereaved ones. May the Lord be near them.

WM. GRAFTON.

FOREST HILL, Md.

SISTER Ellen Miller departed this life January 13th, 1893, aged 82 years and 3 months.

She had been a member of the Old School Baptist Church sixty-five years. During this long period she adorned the doctrine of God her Savior, and walked worthy the vocation wherewith she was called. She was a life-long reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and a firm believer in the doctrine set forth in that periodical. She had resided for many years in a comfortable home within a few yards of the Tapscott meeting-house. Her home was the home of all her brethren. She was a woman of many virtues, and well-beloved by all who knew her, especially by the household of faith.

Elder J. C. Ried was present at her burial, and spoke to the praise of God and the comfort of the people. Our dear mother in Israel has left the land of the dying and entered the land of the living. To the saints of God

"There is no death; what seems so is transition.

This life of mortal breath
Is but the suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portals we call death."

H. M. CURRY.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE yearly meeting at Welsh Tract will commence (the Lord willing) on Saturday, Oct. 14th, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue two days.

Those coming from the north will take the train leaving Philadelphia at Twenty-Fourth and Chestnut Streets at 8:15 a. m. on Saturday, via B. & O. R. R. to Newark. Those coming from the south will take the train leaving Baltimore at 3:40 p. m. on Friday, or on Saturday at 7:00 a. m., via B. & O. R. R. to Newark, Del. Those coming on the Delaware R. R. will take the train leaving Clayton at 4:09 p. m. on Friday for Wilson, changing cars at Porter.

We extend a cordial welcome to all lovers of the truth, and hope to be remembered by our ministering brethren.

P. M. SHERWOOD, Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting will be held (the Lord willing) with the First Church of Roxbury, at Batavia Kill, Delaware Co., N. Y., on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 18th and 19th, 1893, commencing on Wednesday at 11 o'clock a. m. All lovers of the truth are cordially welcome, especially brethren in the ministry.

The train from the east due about 11 o'clock, and from the west past 2 o'clock, will be met at Roxbury village on Tuesday, the day before the meeting.

WM. BALLARD, Clerk.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Primitive Baptists will convene (the Lord willing) with the Gilead Church, in Miami Co., Kansas, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 13th, 14th and 15th.

Those coming from the east and west will come on the A., T. & S. F. R. R. to Gardner. Those coming from the south will come on the K. C., F. S. & G. R. R., and change cars at Olathe for Gardner. The train leaves Kansas City at 9:10 Friday morning.

We earnestly request brethren and sisters who love the truth, and who are in good standing at home, to visit our little association. The place of meeting is seven miles due south of Gardner.

WM. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Indiantown, near Powellville, Wicomico Co., Md., to commence on Wednesday, Oct. 18th, 1893, and continue the two following days.

Those who contemplate attending this meeting will get tickets for Pittsville, Md., via Salisbury. Those coming from New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington will take the early train on Tuesday, so as to connect with the train on the B. & E. R. R. which leaves Salisbury about 1:00 p. m. for Pittsville, where they will be met and conveyed to places near the meeting. Those coming from and by way of Baltimore can either take the Enoch Pratt or the B. & E. boat Tangier. Both leave Baltimore about 4:30 or 5:00 p. m. The Pratt will not arrive in Salisbury until about 9:00 a. m. Wednesday, while the B. & E. train arrives at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m. Tuesday. I think it would be better to come on the B. & E. Those who are not acquainted with the route will go down on the steamboat wharf on Light Street, pier 9, and board the B. & E. steamboat Tangier, which leaves (if no change by then) at 4:30 p. m., and will land at Clabourn about 8:00 or 9:00 p. m. Then take the train, which will arrive at Pittsville about 11:00 p. m., where they will be met by friends in and near Pittsville.

We hope to see a goodly number of the friends and kindred in Christ, those who are not hunting for gold, but for the hidden treasure which is found nowhere but in the Lord's sanctuary. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, especially ministers.

Done by order of the church.

L. A. HALL, Clerk.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1893.

NO. 42.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 28, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As I promised in my former letter to the SIGNS, I feel now like trying to pen a few thoughts upon the Scripture found in James iv. 7, 8, according to the request of "E. O." in a former number of the SIGNS. The Scripture named reads as follows, "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double-minded."

The special question asked by "E. O." is this, "Is not this language addressed especially to the church?" "E. O." says it is claimed that this language belongs to the world also. I have been hindered from replying to this request much longer than I had intended by sickness in my family, followed by frequent and continued absences from home; but to-day I will try to answer the request as best I may.

First, I will respond to the question, "Is not this language addressed especially to the church?" by saying that unquestionably it is so. A glance at the immediate connection should settle this question at once. Going back to the eleventh verse of the third chapter, the apostle designates those to whom he is writing as "brethren;" and now running on down to the eleventh verse of this fourth chapter he again designates those to whom he is writing as "brethren." If one thing in the writings of all the apostles is clear and well-settled it is this, that they never call any man "brother" unless they have the evidence that he is a child of God and a believer in Jesus. Unregenerate men are never by the apostles called brethren. For a believer to call an unbeliever "brother" is to speak falsehood. It is saying that we believe a man is a child of God, when we do not believe it. It is to give that which is holy to dogs, which is expressly forbidden by the Savior.

From the eleventh verse of the third chapter to the eleventh verse of the fourth chapter the admonitions and warnings and exhortations and accusations are all addressed to these whom the apostle calls brethren, as any one who reads carefully may at once see; therefore it belongs not to the world of the ungodly, but to professed followers of Christ.

But before leaving this thought I desire to call attention to another thing important always to be remembered when we read the epistles. Without any exception at all they are all addressed to believers in Jesus. Let any one who questions this open the New Testament and read the headings of each and every epistle. With two or three exceptions the direct address given in the first place is to the church, or to saints, or to one individual believer in some locality; and in the two or three exceptions to this rule further on in the epistle it is shown that the address is to the same character. There is not one word in any epistle that can be possibly construed as being addressed to the world or the ungodly. Some things are said of the world, or the unregenerate, but not one word to them. There is not a word of promise, of admonition, of reproof or warning that belongs to unbelievers at all as a direct address. He that would take a letter addressed to saints of God, to the faithful in Christ, to the holy brethren, to the church or churches, and hand it out or seek to give any of its contents to the unregenerate world, is dishonest, or careless, and is as guilty as he who misappropriates funds committed to his hands in trust by his fellow-men. Modern revival work is mostly based upon this ignorant or dishonest misappropriation of the exhortations, admonitions and promises of the epistles. It is as though this letter, addressed to the SIGNS, should get miscarried, and should be picked up by the editor of some other paper, and he should claim that it was for his paper, and for every other paper as well as for the SIGNS. Promissory notes given to A. do not belong to B.; and so promises given to believers and saints do not belong to the world. The religion that claims for unregenerate men what does not belong to them is a dishonest religion. Mark, I do not say that all who thus misunderstand the epistles are dishonest. I only say that the system based upon this misuse of the epistles is dishonest.

I can well understand how many of the children of God, reading such Scriptures as those contained in this text and its connection, should be led to ask, Can it be possible that any child of God can be guilty of such sins against God and crimes against men as are named in this connection? But those who question thus forget for a time their own experience, and that it is recorded that saints in former ages have fallen in just such ways; and it is precisely for the very reason that the people of God still carry about with them a nature prone to sin, and are liable to be entrapped by the wiles of the enemy and their own fleshly lusts, that just such warnings and admonitions are repeatedly given in the Scriptures. John said, "These things write I unto you, that ye sin not; but if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father," &c. Saints of God are yet sinners also, and they confess themselves to be sinners; and yet they desire to perfect holiness in both the flesh and the spirit. To the soul who feels his proneness to sin, and yet abhors his sins, and desires to be aware of them, and to depart from them, all these warnings, admonitions, reproofs and exhortations, as well as all the promises, come as an excellent oil, that soothes and heals, instead of bruising and wounding him. The mind of such an one cannot be too often stirred up by way of remembrance of these things to suit him. A dear brother, known in all this section for his humble life and love of the truth, once said to me, "I love to hear preaching that tells me my faults."

The New Testament knows nothing of that religion which denies that the people of God are sinners still. The humble confession of an inspired apostle was, long years after he became an apostle, "I am the chief of sinners;" and another said, "In many things we all offend." The New Testament does indeed speak of a religion which boasted of its piety and great attainments; but it was the religion of the Pharisee, and not that of Christ. Prophets and apostles and all holy men of old confessed their sins, and deplored their failures, and besought the mercy of God. It has been reserved for professed christians of this day and land to put forth a claim of perfection, and so to contend that the warnings and rebukes of the New Testament belong not to believers, but to the unregenerate among mankind; but the word of the New Testament is addressed to the living, and not to the dead; and the living hear it, and rejoice in it, and bless God for every admonition, as well as for every promise of grace and mercy.

Now to these brethren James says in the text, "Submit yourselves therefore to God." The word "therefore" shows that these words are a conclusion drawn from a preceding statement. In the preceding verses the apostle speaks of envy and strife and wars and fightings among them. He accuses them of seeking the friendship of the world, and declares that they who do such things are adulterers and adulteresses, because having been married to Christ, they are now seeking to be united to the world. These who indulge in such things are proud and disobedient, regardless of the authority of God. From these God turns away his face; but he regards the humble and obedient, and bestows his grace upon them.

"Therefore," he says to his brethren, be not proud and disobedient, but humbly submit yourselves to God, whose you are, and whom as children ye ought to serve. Thus the expression, "Submit yourselves therefore to God," means that his children should regard his will and obey his word. Paul meant precisely the same thing when he besought his brethren at Corinth to be reconciled to God; that is, lovingly receive and obey his commandments. Strife and debate and warring and pride and lust and the friendship of the world suit our fallen nature, but are opposed to God and godliness, and they who do such things do not submit themselves to God; but those who avoid such things do submit themselves to God, for this is the will of God concerning them.

"Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." It seems to me that James is here but carrying out the same thought. The devil stands here, as elsewhere, for all within us or without us that is opposed to God and godliness. As God the Creator of all is the embodiment of all that is good, so the devil or Satan is the embodiment of all that is evil. As God was manifest in human flesh in the person of his Son, our Savior, so Satan takes upon himself the forms of men, and in them opposes all that is true, or that is of God. It seems to me that the meaning of the apostle James in this text is, that we are not to give place to the evil passions of our nature, or to the temptations from without, which would lead us into wars, strife, envy, and every evil word and action. In other words, he regards all that is contrary to the commandments of God as the offspring of pride, and as of the devil, and so to be always resisted, as enemies to God and to us. And he says if these things are resisted they will flee from us. Not resisted in our own strength, for that would be but to feed our self-righteous pride, and so give Satan a victory over us in one quarter of the field, while we vainly supposed we were successfully resisting him in another quarter; but in the strength of that grace which the Lord gives, and of which James in the connection of the text testifies that our God "giveth more grace." Resisting the devil, then, means simply looking to and resting upon him who once conquered this, our deadly foe, and who said, "Get thee behind me, Satan." And seeing Jesus, the victory and its fruits are already ours. Looking to Jesus, the devil flees, and our evil passions have no power. Seeing him, the tempted soul often realizes such a victory that though he searches for his foes he cannot find them, and so he experiences the power of these words, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

"Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." All this is experimental. The proud doers are departing from God, and soon by bitter experience they learn that he also knoweth them afar off and resists them; but the humble ones are his delight. They walk in obedience, and to them the dear Lord manifests his presence. Walking in his commandments, they find a great reward, the joy of his presence. Drawing nigh to God means looking to him, and regarding his word; and to such the Lord comes, and to them is given such assurances of his presence and favor, as the proud and disobedient can never have. It seems to me that this language is, in substance, the same as when Jesus said, "Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father in heaven; but whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father in heaven." Now, let it be remembered that exhortations addressed to living, but weak and erring believers, are not the same as Arminian warnings and threats, addressed to the dead, to arise and live. God's children may be disobedient, and receive the proper chastisement, or they may be willing and obedient, and eat the good of the land; and it is not in any degree legal or Arminian to exhort them to avoid the one or seek after the other.

"Cleanse your hands, ye sinners." When a child of God transgresses, he is a sinner. When he meddles with sin, his hands become defiled. The expression, "Cleanse your hands," is simply a figure of speech, saying in substance, Turn away from your transgressions. Suffer not the wrong to remain upon you. Do not cling to it. It is such a hateful thing that the child of God cannot bear to have his hands defiled with it. It is only another way of saying, "Depart from all iniquity."

"And purify your hearts, ye double-minded." I once heard a dear sister say that she did not see how a child of God could be double-minded. I came near responding that I did not see how any one else could be. And, indeed, so far as the conflict between sin and holiness, between serving God or serving self and the devil, no one else surely can be double-minded. But I do not understand the apostle here to speak of what we commonly call the "warfare," but of that state of feeling and that course of conduct of which he says, "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." Some such brethren have always been in the churches. It is impossible to tell where we will find such ones at any given time. Now, the apostle, it seems to me, uses the word here to characterize those who have professed to be the servants of God, but have yielded their members as the instruments of sin. Their hearts were not single. They needed purifying. They needed that evil and earthly affections should be subdued, and not allowed to control them. Paul in Colossians uses language that expresses the same sentiment. "If ye then be risen with Christ, SET YOUR AFFECTION ON THINGS ABOVE, NOT ON THINGS ON THE EARTH," &c. This does not imply any power to change our own heart. But as those who love God, we are to put away from our hearts and lives all things that are offensive to him. He who loves God, and desires his presence in his heart, must desire to cast out all uncleanness from the place where God dwells.

I leave these thoughts with "E. O." and the readers of the SIGNS.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ,

F. A. CHICK.

LAMONTE, MO.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send this, and the experience of my precious crippled sister, by permission. This was written to my dear mother, and that of my sister, as you will see, was written several years ago to your dear father. Her reason for not then sending it is best known to herself. If I have any knowledge of the travail of a subject of grace, they are both good, and are of much comfort to me, and I thought would be to others who have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come. Dispose of them as you think best, and all will be well.

J. A. TEAGUE.

[THE article mentioned above from brother Teague's sister appeared on page 313 of present volume.—ED.]

DEAR MOTHER:—For the first time in my life I will try in my poor way to tell you what I hope the good Lord has done for me, a poor, ruined and lost sinner. My mind reverts back to night one week, when I was blessed in meeting my brethren and sisters in my own house, and in hearing our beloved pastor preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. But not so with me to-night. But brother

Turner sent me his experience, and it affords me great comfort as I read it, for I believe he has been brought by a way he knew not; yes, a way he never knew. To-night my mind runs back to my boyhood of fifteen or sixteen years, to a way that I had worked out; for I had heard so much talk about Jesus that I wanted to be like the people I heard talk so much about him, so I went to work. I would go to protracted meetings, and when they would call for mourners to come and be prayed for I would go time and again; but alas! sad disappointment! for I would go away feeling worse than when I went up; for this is not that way that our blessed Savior speaks of. He says, "And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known." So I traveled on and on with a sad failure on every side. Well do I remember one day when sister Jane came home from meeting, and said, "John, dear brother, what a precious Savior I have found. I wish you knew him too." I did not then think much about it. She finished clearing away the dishes, and then left the room. I took a seat by the table, and the first I knew my eyes were filled with tears. There being a chair by the stove, I fell into it and wept and cried. Poor soul, something was the matter; there was something wrong with poor me. I never had felt this way before. I said, "May be by to-morrow this feeling will leave me;" and so it did, but soon returned. I thought, O poor soul! what shall I do, or whither shall I go? I would often go to some thicket, or to the woods, or to my dear father's barn, where I would try to pray for mercy; but no mercy could I find. Thus I went on month after month, and year after year, still feeling that I was a poor sinner. I finally came to Missouri, but still I was the same poor sinner. One day while I was sprouting for Mr. Cladfelter, all at once "eternity" flashed through my mind, as if shot by a cannon. I thought of my poor soul. Where will you stand in eternity? Another day while I was at work I said, "I will work and pray to-day." I would work awhile, and then try to ask the Lord to have mercy on me. O how lonely I felt. I felt that I had no friends, like one forsaken. I went to meeting, and when I came to a certain gate would try to pray. I would look all around me to see if anyone was in sight. If a leaf, or anything, would make a noise I would tremble with fear. I tried to pray time and again. I tried to tell my blessed Redeemer the burdens of my poor heart. I felt that if this poor soul went to hell God would be just; for how could he save so vile a sinner and be just? But I got to the meeting, and while sitting there I thought I heard a voice say, "Come up." I broke out weeping. The next day while at home alone, the others having gone to meeting, I picked up my Testament, opening it, and found the Scripture, "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness," &c.—Psa. li. I never before had read it when it seemed as it did then. Some of the members asked me afterwards if I had received a hope yet. Sometimes I told them I had, and at other times I doubted. But I hope the blessed Savior has led me in a way that I never knew before. Praise be to his holy name. I then made up my mind to join the Methodists, and did so, but soon found there was no home or comfort for me there. What they believed I could not, for it did not harmonize with what I hoped I had experienced; neither could I find in the sacred record any authority for their belief or practice. Going to their meetings gave me no comfort, and so I seldom went. There was a people I thought to be the people of the true and living God, and O, how I loved them, and longed to be with them. But I thought, How dare I go to them, and insult those dear, good people of God by offering my poor self to them? for I had very often made fun of them, and said many mean, hateful things about them. I would now go to hear them preach at Walnut Branch Church, in Pettis County, Missouri. Elder R. M. Ogle was their pastor. I never will forget their dear, loving faces as they sat there, looking so happy, and seeming to love one another so much. Yet all this was not for poor me. Their singing and songs seemed full of praise to my dear Savior. How I did long to be with them. Several times have I gone to meeting, and when the dear pastor would open the door for the reception of members I could hardly keep my seat, for I so much wanted to be with them. I went to see the dear pastor lead two willing subjects down into the liquid grave, to follow their dear Lord and Master in the sacred ordinance of baptism. Before administering the ordinance he took this text and preached at the water's edge, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." I felt the force of text, and it seemed the entire discourse was for poor me; and when he gave the opportunity, I could not longer stay away, but tried in my weakness to tell a portion of what is here written. I was unanimously received for baptism, which took place shortly after. When the time came for me to follow my blessed Lord in baptism the water looked so lovely and good that I could hardly keep from running down into it. That precious time I never shall forget; for I felt so light and happy it seemed I could never more sin or have trouble; but alas! how sadly mistaken I was; for since that time I have felt so sinful and unworthy that I thought I must not leave my name longer on the church-book, for why should I continue to disgrace those dear people by leaving my vile name amongst them. But when so low down under the burden of sin, this language comes to my relief, "My grace is sufficient for thee." I am at times almost ready to give up; but that little hope, although at times almost gone, yet never entirely leaves me, and I am made to rely on my blessed Lord's promise, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." So I am made to still cling to that precious hope which is said to be "as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil," and is cradled in the arms of his never-failing love.

Now, dear mother, I might write much more of my poor, imperfect experience, if one, but will stop. If you can see anything in this that looks like a genuine christian experience, give all the glory and honor to Jesus' matchless name.

J. Q. A. WALL.

WALLACE, Kan., June 12, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—As I see that my subscription expires in June, I write to ask for your paper until I can pay for it, which I hope will not be long. I like the SIGNS very much, and thank you indeed for printing that notice in February, asking for information about the churches in this part of the country. I received several letters, one from Davis Burch, telling me of a church north of Hayes City. I was permitted to go down to their meeting the first Sunday in May, and had the blessed privilege of uniting with them, being baptized by Elder N. S. Burch. I do not feel quite as lonesome as I did, for I now feel as if I had a home; but I would like to hear preaching. I often feel to say, Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life. I had been wishing to be baptized for a year and a half, although I was immersed in 1879 by a missionary. How well brother Brink expressed my feelings regarding baptism; for I once thought as he did about it. But I hope I have been taught by the Lord, and have been led in a way that I knew not of.

I will send the experience of my grandfather, and would be very glad to see it published, if you think best. He is now about seventy-four years old, and has preached the Baptist doctrine for a number of years. I was raised a Campbellite, and have had to leave father, mother, brothers and sister (so far as religion is concerned), to live with the despised Old Baptists; but the doctrine is dear to me. If my soul is not saved I cannot help it. I realize that I have no power to save my own soul, much less any one else. Last week I heard a lady say she thought the good deeds she had done had saved some souls. I thought that she must feel proud. I cannot even live as I have a desire to, for sin is in everything that I do. I do not feel as if I had ever done a good deed in my life.

I enjoyed the extracts from Irving very much; also the piece from Abbie Coddington, of Nebraska.

May God be with you, is my prayer. I am your unworthy sister, if one at all,

MINA HANSAN.

DEAR SISTER AND DAUGHTER:—“Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me,” was the saying of one of old; and such was my condition, notwithstanding my parents were as good by nature as is common among our race; yet they were only natural, and their offspring could be nothing more. Thus as I grew up in life I revealed the fact that “the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.” This saying of the apostle was fully proven in my case. I was taught by my parents all the moral rectitude that man can teach man; yet I was as ignorant of God's righteousness and my own state as if I were dead to all good; and truly I was “dead in trespasses and sins,” where all God's people walked before being quickened into life. It was not yet revealed whether my body was a vessel unto honor or unto dishonor. It is the use of the vessel that constitutes it honorable or dishonorable; and all the powers of the saints, or the wild, delusive roar of antichrist, with all their deceitful machinery, were not able to quicken me, a poor dead sinner. Like others of our race, I rolled sin under my tongue. I followed the gay pleasures of the ball-room and the race-tracks. In a word, I “walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience.” Alas! I knew not God. I only feared his wrath; and as the devils looked for a time to come when they would be tormented, so I believed the wicked would be punished for their crimes; yet all this could not deter me or change my course. It is true, when the terrors of hell were depicted before me by the ministers of antichrist, I was often alarmed, and while in that state of mind I resolved to reform my ways, and repent, and pray to God, and finally go to heaven; all of which the ministers of Satan told me I could do, and I felt sure they knew. But when it pleased God to quicken me into life, as he did my brethren at Ephesus (as I hope), then, and not until then, did I ever see myself as I truly was, a poor, condemned sinner; and I acknowledged the condemnation to be just. As the word “quicken” implies first impulse of life and mobility, so it was with me; there was a struggle, but not according to knowledge. I had been told to pray, but alas! how dare so vile a sinner as I offer to approach a just, righteous and holy God? I was without words, and I had no plea to offer. I could only turn from the place with a sense of the just condemnation that must rest on one who was so vile, and yet presume to make supplication before a holy God. I resolved to do better, but my resolutions all failed me. I felt that my case grew worse instead of better. All my efforts were in vain. I talked with one in whom I had much confidence before, but he taught me to do what I had been trying to do for a long time, and I found that he did not know any more than myself what to do. He told me I must give my heart to God; but when I inquired how to do this, he told me to do what I had been trying to do before. He was a sore comforter to me, and left me wounded and sorely afflicted. I knew not where to go or what to do. I felt that God was just, and he could not look on sin with any allowance. O how sad was my condition! I was without hope and without God in the world. There was no eye to pity, no arm to save; but yet my poor, distressed spirit was asking for mercy, but could not see how a just God could bestow mercy on one so vile as me. While in this state of sorrow, woe and misery, when I could not expect any relief, suddenly my burden was gone. I was shouting praise to God. All nature around appeared to wear a different appearance, and my soul was happy beyond expression. I never will be able to express the joys I there felt in believing that God had been so merciful to one that never had been able to merit such an unspeakable gift of grace. I felt that my troubles were all over, that I would never sorrow again; but O! my child, I did not know that I had only been delivered from my former state of darkness and distress, into that marvelous light and liberty of the children of God, to enter into that christian warfare, so necessary for our good and to the glorifying of our God in his dealings toward us, his beloved saints. But you ask how long was I so happy? I answer, it was but a little while until I began to ask myself, What can this mean? Is this the forgiveness of my sins, or am I deceived? Yet my burden was gone. I had such great fears that I was mistaken, that I got down off my horse (this all occurred on the foot of the mount on which Joseph Smith is said to have made his last prophecy, in Hancock County, Illinois, in the year 1839), and for the first time in all my troubles I found words to ask the Lord to give me a knowledge of his forgiveness, if it was so; if not, to punish me for my crimes until he should see fit to forgive me, and save me at last. My sister, you will see at once that my prayer was not right. I was praying for knowledge, instead of faith; and you know it is written, “The just shall live by faith.” Thus I traveled on, sometimes rejoicing in believing that my sins were forgiven, and sometimes fearing that I was deceived.

Here I will relate a little incident that occurred while I was thus in doubts and fears. I was riding on the road, and wishing for some christian to tell me if they ever had such feelings; and while I was musing in this way, brother Guymon rode up. It shocked me; but after the usual salutations, I began by saying that I had heard good people tell how they felt, describing my case as though it was some other person. I told him I would like to know whether he ever had such feelings. He then told me his travels; and by the time I had heard him through, my soul leaped for joy. I had found one brother. I loved him with that love that never will fail, neither in this life, nor in that which is to come. He exhorted me to go to the people that felt as I felt, that had doubts and fears as I did; and more, he exhorted me to obey my Lord, who had been so merciful to me; to take his yoke upon me, and learn of him. Now, my sister, to what people could I go, except to the Primitive Baptists? I knew I had one brother, so I prayed the Father to conduct me aright, and give me strength to obey his commands; and when I had an opportunity, with much fear and trembling I asked the people of God to give me a place with them, unworthy as I was. I was received with much joy on their part, but with fear and trembling on my part. I was baptized by brother Walker, in December, 1839, in Hancock County, Illinois.

I have given you some of my travels, in as brief a manner as I could and make it plain, and I desire to hear from you when you have an opportunity. You know I love you, as I love all saints. My heart embraces you when I think of your past trials. O how I want to see you! but I must say, “God's will be done.”

Dear one, pray for me. Farewell,
J. MARTIN.

DILLY, Ore., Aug. 16, 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—You will find inclosed a letter written, as we believe and trust, by one of God's sorely tried and afflicted servants. Brother Grafton abode with and near us in this far western land for over two years, during which time our intercourse was that of near and dear kindred in Christ. It has pleased God to frequently lead him in paths only trodden by the sorely tried, coming from the fiery furnace strong in the faith of God's elect; and it hath pleased the heavenly Master to open his mouth, and no uncertain sound comes forth, but praise without stint to the most high God, ascribing to him all honor and glory forever. Amen.

MRS. J. K. BOYD.

HUGHESVILLE, Va., Aug. 3, 1893.

MR. AND MRS. J. K. BOYD—MY PRECIOUS BROTHER AND SISTER:—After about two months of sore
(Continued on page 333.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 18, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

WHO IS A DISCIPLE?

"If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple."—Luke xiv. 26.

In compliance with several requests for our views on this text, we submit the following thoughts in connection with these words of our Lord Jesus. It must be readily understood that it is impossible for us to separately answer the many patrons who constantly submit applications for exposition of portions of Scripture. No mortal is competent to such a task; and even if one had the understanding requisite, time and space would forbid that such comments should be published in a weekly paper. Since we have never assumed to understand all the divine mystery hidden in the inspired record, our patrons will pardon us for failing to comply with so many of their applications for instruction on such portions as are not opened to our own view.

In considering the words of our text it is important to notice what were the circumstances under which they were spoken, and the characters to whom they were addressed. None were following Jesus but those natural Israelites among whom he had wrought miracles and given deliverance to the sick and afflicted. While many of them were attracted by those wonderful works which they witnessed, their minds could comprehend in all that they saw only some mysterious power by which Jesus had ability to command the elements of nature. To this secret force they ascribed the works which in reality attested his divine character. Their traditional religion rejected his claim to be the Messiah. They could not come to him as the Christ of God, because they were not of his sheep. It was only as drawn by selfish motives that great multitudes went with him; and it was to them that he spoke these words. In them is contained the unerring test by which the people of God are distinguished from all the world of false religionists.

There is a sense in which every professor of religion does claim to come to Jesus. He says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven; many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Only those whom God has ordained unto eternal life do in reality come to Jesus. So he says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." And to forever prohibit the presumption that this number may be enlarged, he says in the same connection, "Murmur not among yourselves; no man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day."—Matt. vii. 22, 23; John vi. 37, 44. Doubtless all the multitude of Jews who heard these teachings of Jesus considered that they had come to him. They even pressed upon him in their anxiety to hear and see him; but they never could in truth come to him as the Christ unless they were drawn by the power of God. They might come into his presence as a man, and follow his literal footsteps, yet never see him as the true Messiah, nor come to him as the Deliverer of Israel. So, that great multitude who heard this declaration of Jesus were no more included as having come to him, than are they who have never heard his name. Those who come to him in truth receive the rest which he alone can give. They are drawn by the resistless words which he speaks, which are spirit and are life. To all such there is deep meaning in the words of Jesus. They cannot afford to regard them lightly. They are life and food to them, and they can have no other refuge but in the name of Jesus.

It is only as drawn by the power of God that any sinner can ever come to Jesus; and all who are so drawn are thereby shown to be born of the Spirit. To all such he has given instruction both in the written word and in the internal testimony of his Spirit, by which they are in every particular thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Not only is this standard of righteousness revealed in the precepts which bear the seal of divine authority, but our Lord himself has in all things given the perfect pattern of practical obedience to the law of his own kingdom. All his commandments are embodied in his one injunction, "Follow me!" When this word of Jesus is written in the heart of any of the children of Adam, it will manifest its power in the deep desire to do everything which is enjoined by the authority of the King of saints. To those who are thus led by the Spirit of God to wish to walk in obedience to the law of the Lord it is not necessary to present the hope of future reward as an inducement to observe the things which God has commanded; neither do they need the terror of future punishment to cause them to desire to be free from the pollution of sin. So effectually does the Spirit work in the heart of every one in whom the love of God is revealed that there is no stronger desire than the wish to be free from sin, and no greater dread than to be subjected to its hated control. When the love of righteousness reigns in the heart of a conscious sinner he can imagine no more severe torment than hopeless subjection to the power of sin. His highest aspiration is to be delivered from the cruel power and dominion of the law of sin, whose working in his members gives him continual pain. Thus God works in him the will to work righteousness in the fulfillment of every direction of the law of Christ. Although they find their walk and conversation the very reverse of what they desire, yet every one who has the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost, feels and knows that he would if he could be conformed to the holy example of the Lord Jesus in every particular. None ever have this internal evidence of the work of God but such as are true believers in the Lord Jesus Christ as the only and effectual Savior of his people from their sins. All such have in truth come laboring and heavy laden unto him, and he has given them rest in the revelation of his redeeming grace. But they are now brought to that gospel liberty wherein they shall find rest unto their souls only in taking the yoke of Jesus, and learning of him. Never was there such service as that which is thus rendered by the subjects of his authority to the King of saints. Their largest liberty is in obedience to his law, and their most bitter bondage and suffering is in conscious disobedience. It is of the perfect law of the Lord that the Psalmist says, "O how I love thy law! it is my meditation all the day." This is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, by which its subjects are made free from the law of sin and death. The reward of keeping the statutes of this law is in keeping of them, and not for obedience. The service of this perfect law is only acceptable as being rendered in fervent love. In such service every subject of his grace does come to Jesus not as seeking compensation for service rendered, but as having no other refuge, and as trusting alone in his sovereign grace and infinite love and mercy. These are they who must say with Peter, "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life; and we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God."—John vi. 68, 69. None who are thus brought to call upon the name of the Lord in the day of trouble shall ever fail of receiving an answer of peace and salvation. Such are the poor to whom the gospel is preached, while the rich, who trust in their own works for justification, are sent empty away.

Much anxiety has been experienced by the subjects of electing love from a misapprehension of the text under consideration. Finding their natural affection still clinging to the dear ones with whom they are associated in the relations here specially mentioned, they have been ready to confess that they have no right to hope in the salvation which is in Christ. It is only needful that the language of our Lord be carefully noted in order to see the fallacy of this suggestion of the adversary. The same hatred which is to be felt toward the kindred named, is also to extend to his own life also, in order that one may be the disciple of Jesus. Certainly this is not to be understood as conflicting with the direction of the apostle that enjoins, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." And the reason is given, "For no man ever yet hated his own flesh."—Eph. v. 25, 29. The proper understanding of one portion of the inspired record never can contradict another portion of the same truth. There is no room for doubt that this expression conveys the same principle contained in the record Matt. x. 37, 38. "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." From a comparison of these two passages it appears that the meaning of both expressions is the same; and it is evident that in the quotation from Matthew, the Lord presents the superior importance of the love of God as contrasted with the ties that pertain only to this mortal state. Unquestionably he taught this truth when he instructed his disciples on the mount, saying, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." In the experience of the saints it is ever found to be the sacrifice of their spiritual comfort when they are overcome by the temptation to give the precedence to any earthly consideration. In attaching superior importance to the claims of any of the ties specified in our text, the saints profess that they love those things more than they love their Lord. Jesus does not say that in such action there is evidence that the one so doing is not a subject of saving grace. Nothing which sin can prompt the saints to do can destroy that eternal life which is given to all them who were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. They are "kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." Until that omnipotence shall fail there is no possibility that one of them shall perish. But there is serious importance in the question whether one who hopes in the grace which is revealed in Jesus, can claim to be his disciple. This claim signifies that he who asserts it is one who learns from and renders obedience to the Lord Jesus. None is entitled to be called the disciple of Jesus while he cherishes any earthly relationship as worthy of higher regard than the answer of a good conscience toward God in keeping the commandments of Jesus. He may be a vessel of mercy whose eternal life is hid with Christ in God; but he can no more be called a disciple of Jesus while giving superior consideration to these natural ties, than could Saul of Tarsus be counted a follower of Jesus when he was breathing slaughter against the saints as a persecuting Pharisee. That proud adversary was not less a chosen vessel when thus acting out his carnal mind than when he labored in the apostleship; but it is manifestly erroneous to say that he was a disciple of Jesus when he kept the raiment of them that slew Stephen. So, in our text, the Lord declares that even though he should come to him as the only hope of his salvation, he could not yet be his disciple while any earthly affection could be interposed to forbid implicit obedience to every commandment of Jesus.

To sum up briefly our understanding of the text, it is that while there is no condition to be performed by the sinner in securing his eternal salvation in Christ, it is not possible that any man should be a disciple or follower of Jesus so long as he clings to any created object as more worthy of consideration than the commandment of the Lord.

SUPPLY EXHAUSTED.

AN unusually large and sudden demand for our small type cloth-bound hymn books has entirely exhausted our supply, but we have the book now in press, and expect to have them ready for delivery by the first or middle of November next. We have a number of orders now on hand which we will fill at the earliest possible day. Parties who have orders now in, and prefer to do so, can remit the balance and have any of the other styles of binding mailed them immediately. Any one wishing to have their money returned, if they will inform us, we will refund it to them.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 331.)

conflict, with fightings without and within, trying to keep my mouth shut, and my stammering tongue still, I have again been forced to take up the sword in defense of the glorious gospel of Christ. Hearing of a three days meeting at this place, by the help of the Lord I journeyed thither, not knowing what awaited me here, save that bonds and afflictions await me in every place. Our meeting closed last Sunday. Elders Beebe, Eubanks and White were present, and such expounding of the glorious gospel of our dear Redeemer I never before heard in all my sorrowful life. As cold water to the thirsty soul, so was the good news from that heavenly country. I was made to realize indeed that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. I hope I witnessed something of the order of the house of God, and the sweet love and fellowship of the brethren, which the world neither knows nor cares for, but which flows from heart to heart through the sweet power of the Spirit dwelling within. I find here a people who rejoice in God's predestination of all events, whose minds are not entangled in that yoke of bondage which would limit the decrees of Almighty God.

It is now Thursday, and I am still here. I find it hard to tear myself away from these dear people, who sit around me by day and by night, eager to catch every word that falls from my trembling lips, which gives God all the glory. I have attempted to speak to them on four occasions. On Tuesday night I used that beautiful text in the fourteenth chapter of Exodus, in which occurs that most wonderful language of Moses, "Stand still, and see the salvation of God." I was given a goodly portion of my old time liberty, and I endeavored to strip the creature of all his boasted strength in good works, and to place him in the same condition that we find the children of national Israel when facing the Red Sea, with mountains on either hand, and Pharaoh and his host in the rear, without any visible avenue of escape. These poor, trembling, afflicted Israelites, who have already asked Moses the sorrowful question, "Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness?" "It had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness." O how often the poor child of God, when shrouded in sin and thrall, seeing himself ruined in the fall, is made to cry out, like these Israelites of old, Surely my condition is made worse. I was alive without the law; but now I am dead in sin. O! it were better that I should have served under the law, than that I should perish forever in the gulf of dark despair. But such is the righteous demand of the law, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." The decree has gone forth; but as time moves on, and that poor soul sees, with the apostle Paul, "The law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin," the justice of God's holy law stares him in the face. He sees that he is condemned, but God is clear.

"And if my soul were sent to hell, Thy righteous law approves it well."

Now he is made to stand still, and to see the salvation of God. No poor sinner ever has nor ever will see the salvation of God while vainly working in the great field of morality, plowing, as it were, for Jesus. You know they still sing,

"With your hands on the plow, hold on, Working for Jesus, you know."

I say no poor sinner ever has nor ever will see Jesus, until they are made to stand perfectly still; until they are brought to the end of the law for righteousness; in other words, until they are entirely out of a job of that kind, and entirely out of material, and all their own righteousnesses are become as filthy rags. Then every one who is brought to this stand still condition is blessed with the privilege of seeing the salvation of God. But they can never see this salvation while they are at work upon their own theories; for they are too busily engaged to ever look on Jesus; nor do I believe they ever think of him as their Savior, much less feel their need of such a Redeemer. No, every one shall be brought to the end of the earth, that legal covenant, in which they trusted, before they can see the salvation of the Lord. The first covenant must in every case be taken away before they can receive the second. Thus all the ends of the earth, all who are brought to the end of the law for righteousness, shall see the salvation of God. Thank God, all such poor, helpless creatures are commanded to look unto him and be saved. Ah, says one, there is something the creature has to do; he has to look, if he would be saved. But, my precious brother and sister, we can stand still, and look; and as we never see Jesus in the glorified state as our Redeemer, save as by the eye of faith, and that is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast, where in the name of God does this boasting come from? Certainly it is excluded by grace. And if they are justified by works, they could have no more right to glory before God than Abraham had.

I have met many precious brethren and sisters here, whose kind and brotherly love to this poor worm of the dust will be long remembered. I am now at dear old sister Furr's, widow of the late Elder Joseph Furr, whose house is ever open to receive all God's afflicted and poor people who journey thither. I am in a very unsettled frame of mind, and feel to say with the poet,

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

My prayer is that the Lord will help my unbelief. I am in his hands, and what he appoints is best, even if I do murmur at it still. I left home last Thursday. My wife and children were reasonably well. My trip has had a good effect upon me, to cheer my drooping spirit.

If you see anything in this scribble worthy a place in our dear family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, you are at liberty to send it to brethren Beebe for their disposal. I make this request, as several have asked me of late to write again for our paper, and this may answer.

With love unfeigned, I hope, in the Lord Jesus Christ, for you and all inquirers of our faith, I am yours in hope of life eternal,

J. A. GRAFTON.

WHITESBURG, Ky., Sept. 19, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—While visiting the Eastern Associations, many of the brethren and sisters requested me to give through the SIGNS an account of my trip. I have always thought minute accounts of tours made by ministers were unprofitable, and I seldom say anything about those made by myself; but I cannot disregard the wishes of my brethren. For the four years I have been in the ministry, I have been trying to preach and trying to quit.

I left home in April for Virginia, not expecting to preach a sermon while away, but rather go on one of my quitting tours. But after attending to my affairs in Virginia I decided to go down into Tennessee to spend a few days with the brethren, but not to preach any. Still I attended their church meeting at Springdale on the first Sunday in May, and agreed to be at Union Church on the second. I had my arrangements made to go home as soon as this appointment was filled. But on my way from Springdale to Union the impression arrested me to attend the eastern associations. I felt ashamed of myself for such a thought having entered my mind, still I could not banish it. I tried to pray God to remove the impression from me, for I felt sure it must be of the flesh; but in this my heart condemned me. I thought I would not go, but was all the while making my arrangements to be off. On Sunday morning I baptized a young sister by the name of Tennessee Munday, and after the meeting the brethren sent me to the railroad. In the evening I took the train for Baltimore. I cannot describe my feeling as the train hurried me on. The question, Why are you going? was continually in my mind. O! why was I? I could not tell. I felt as one being led to destruction, with no power to return. I thought, What would I do when I got there? I thought I would tell no one I was a minister. But I had written Elder Chick that I was coming, and said to him, "What if they should ask me to preach?" I felt I could not. Then the promises of God would present themselves; but I could not believe they embraced me. He has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And he told his disciples, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." But I could receive no comfort from it, for I could not believe he would be with one so vile and corrupt as I. So, when it was all summed up, I had no hope. But when I met the brethren at Cockeysville, on their way to the Baltimore Association, I felt once more at home. They treated me so kindly that I was constrained to thank God for having placed me among them. When I was introduced to Elder Jenkins, and he said, "I hope you will feel at home," my heart almost melted within me; and all the brethren and the sisters at the Association gave me such a hearty welcome that I was made to cry out with the poet,

"Dissolve my heart in thankfulness,
And melt mine eyes to tears."

At the Delaware and Delaware River Associations I found the same manifestations of love among the brethren. O what comfort it gave me to find those able brethren contending for the very same doctrine I have received so many scourgings for preaching in the west. The doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, and the eternal vital unity (or oneness) of Christ and his church, which by so many in the west is so highly stigmatized, was clearly set forth; and not only the ministers, but all the members, with few exceptions, earnestly believe and contend for this doctrine; nor do we find the brethren striving about words to no profit.

I have given an account, in a recent number of the SIGNS, of my three months sickness in Philadelphia, and of the kindness of the brethren and sisters toward me, so I will not rehearse it. On my return home I attended the Rock Spring Association in Kentucky, and the Powell's Valley in Tennessee. Especially at the latter we had a pleasant meeting. I arrived home Sept. 6th, found my father's family well, and myself little wearied from my one hundred miles ride on horseback from Tennessee. I am happy to say my health is now better than it has been for the last two or three years; still I have not much strength yet. Whether my visit was profitable to the brethren I cannot tell, but I know it was to me, and am fully satisfied it is one of the all things that work together for good to them that love God. Sometimes, I believe, God blessed me with liberty to speak to the honor of his name and the comfort of his people; while at other times he led me and brought me into darkness, and not into light.

Brethren Beebe, I am ashamed to send this, but it is the best I can do. I want the brethren and sisters to feel I have love and fellowship for them, and I desire to comply with their requests. With love to all the household of faith, I am,

J. W. FAIRCHILD.

LONG VIEW, Texas, Aug. 13, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have often scribbled on paper, thinking I would send it to you; but after looking it over I would abandon the idea, knowing you had better and more interesting communications, written by those who are far ahead of me, who have so little worldly qualification. But the apostle Paul said that God had chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise of this world. I know that the wisdom of this world is contrary to the wisdom that is from above; and no man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost. It excludes all human effort. No one can speak or write anything to comfort or enlighten God's people unless directed by the Holy Ghost. I fear continually that such is too wonderful for such a rebel as I; that I have learned the doctrine from others; that I have caught the shadow and not the substance. I am continually hoping for something to reconcile my mind and give me rest. But rest is not for the children of God while here in these low grounds of sorrow. There is nowhere to lay their head. All is vanity and vexation of spirit. They lament and mourn and complain at their lot, and wish for their will to be done; and their will is to shun tribulation. But if they could shun tribulation there would be no hope; for "tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope." So I believe that tribulation is a part of the inheritance of the children of God while in the flesh. If it is not, I freely confess that I am a stranger to the condition they are in. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."—Heb. xii. 6. So then he that is without chastisement is not a son. I fear to claim that I know anything about the chastening of the Lord; but I hope I do. "Hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for?" If I knew at all times and under all circumstances that I were received as a son, chastisement would be joyous instead of grievous. We can know nothing concerning eternity, nor what God has prepared for them that love him, except by revelation. We are looking through the veil of flesh, as through a glass darkly.

Well, I better quit this scribbling, lest I weary you. If there is anything in this worth space in the SIGNS use it; and if not, all will be right with the scribbler, who is less than the least of all. Remember me at the throne of grace.

Yours in hope,

W. H. SHADDOCK.

LEON, Ala., April 10, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—It is with pleasure that I take my pen in hand to try to write you a few thoughts of an unworthy saint; for if one at all, the least of all. I have been reading the SIGNS OF THE TIMES about four months, and I like to read it as well as I like to read my Bible. I have been living with the Primitive Baptists about twenty years, and the longer I live with them the better I love them. I often hear them preach, and they tell my feelings better than I can tell them myself. For twelve months I thought I was going to die; I knew not what was the matter; but in my weakness I tried to pray to my heavenly Master to have mercy on a poor sinner, as I felt myself to be; but the more I prayed the worse I got. One night I could not sleep. It appeared to me that my breath was getting shorter and shorter. It seemed to me I was traveling a narrow dark path. I saw a light ahead of me, and when I came to it I heard a voice speak and say, "Come in out of the dark;" and when I had stepped in there was the happiest people I ever saw, singing; and when the sun arose that morning it and the trees of the forest seemed to be rejoicing with me. I felt like I would never see any more trouble. This poem came in my mind,

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound!
That saved a wretch like me;
I once was lost, but now am found;
Was blind, but now I see."

'Twas grace that taught my heart to fear,
And grace my fears relieved;
How precious did that grace appear
The hour I first believed."

I thought I might be wrong, so I waited a month before I went to the church and was baptized. I was then living with my parents and two sisters, but they are all dead now. I feel to be like one alone. O! is there anyone like me?

"Tis religion must supply
Solid comfort when we die;
After death, its joy will be
Lasting as eternity.
Be the living God my friend,
Then my bliss shall never end."

Brethren Beebe, I want to subscribe for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES six months, if no longer. Address my letters to Leon, Ala. Well, I will close by saying, I remain your unworthy sister, TABITHIA JANE CARTER.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscription to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for in the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Juniata Primitive or Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Providence Church, Bedford Co., Pa., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Oct. 4th, 5th and 6th, 1893, to the churches of which she is composed.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Another year has passed away with its many changes, and the time has again come to meet together in an associated capacity; and as it has been our custom to call your attention to some subject, in the form of a Circular Letter, we will call your attention to the foreknowledge and predestinating purpose of our God in the salvation of his chosen people, and their final glorification and conformation to the image of Jesus. We will use the Scripture, as a basis or foundation, found in Rom. viii. 29, 30. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified." We might ask the question, What is foreknowledge? It is one of the attributes of God, which is perfect. There is nothing in heaven or in earth but what God had a purpose in its creation, and will fill the very purpose for which it was created.

Now, the apostle says, "For whom he did foreknow." Can we find those characters in God's revealed word? We say, Yes. "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel. For the Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance."—Deut. xxxii. 8, 9. "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matt. i. 21. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out. For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me; and this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day."—John vi. 37-39. We might name many more Scriptures as to who the characters are that are addressed as the foreknown of God. They are all that were chosen in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world. These characters are predestinated to be conformed to the image of his Son.

The word predestinate means an absolute certainty; unchangeable in its nature. Foreknowledge and predestination are so closely connected that one cannot exist without the other. To deny one is to deny both, and destroy the whole chain of God's revealed truth, and make God a mere creature instead of a Creator.

The conformation to the image of his Son is yet in the future. "That he might be the first-born among many brethren." In the Scriptures he is called our elder Brother. He is called the Son of God. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God."—1 John iii. 1. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Therefore, being born of God, he is our Father, and Jesus Christ is our elder Brother. "Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called." The religious world says, God is calling everybody, by the preachers, by death in the land, and by sickness, if the people will only hear. All these things are natural, and have their natural effects upon the natural ear. But the apostle is talking about another kind of call. In writing to Timothy he calls it a holy calling.

Jesus says, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live."—John v. 25. It takes the same power to call a dead sinner from the grave of sin and condemnation in which he is enveloped, that it did to call a dead Lazarus from the grave in which he lay. All the legal preachers that ever have lived, from that day to this, might have stood at Lazarus' grave, and he would have remained dead. Just so it is with the sinner. With all the modern machinery of the day they have never been able to give life to one sinner. But when Jesus calls, his word is life, and the sinner is made to see the awful condition he is in, a sinner justly condemned by God's righteous law, and he begins to cry, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." Still being ignorant of the righteousness of Jesus Christ, he tries to work himself into the favor of God by forming resolutions and performing good works. Thus he toils on till his strength fails, and he sinks in hopeless despair. But whom God calls, them he also justifies. In this helpless condition Jesus whispers, Son, or daughter, be of good cheer; thy sins, which are many, are all forgiven. Your sins were all laid upon me, and I have died that you might live. I have borne the curse that was due to you. I have the receipt in my hands and feet and side. The Father looks upon you in love through me. I died for your sins, and arose for your justification. Jesus has fulfilled all the law's demands, and freed us from its rigid claims; and if the Son makes us free, we are free indeed.

"Whom he justified, them he also glorified." Jesus prayed to his Father, saying, "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world."—John xvii. 24. The saints only have a foretaste of the glory that is in store for them after their journey in this wilderness world of troubles and trials; but they are enabled by an eye of faith, with that blessed hope of assurance, to know that when they shall put off this body of clay they will enter into that rest that remains to the people of God; and when the bodies of the saints are raised, and fashioned like unto the glorified body of Jesus, then they will be conformed to the image of Jesus, to which they were predestinated; the whole work, begun and completed according to God's own will, not a stain of creature works, from first to last, that it may be of grace, and not of works.

Dear brethren, as we have been made partakers of these precious things, may we lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us; and may love and fellowship abound among us, keeping ourselves free from all the institutions of the world, secret or open, not authorized in the word of God. As John says, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

Our association has been one of great interest, and one that will be long remembered by the church with whom it is held.

E. V. WHITE, Mod.
AHIMAAZ MELLOTT, Clerk.

RECEIVED FOR CHURCH HISTORY.

W. E. Addington 2.50, C. D. Nixon 4, Wm. Harris 4, W. J. Ragan 4.—Total $14.50.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Juniata Primitive or Old School Baptist Association, to sister associations with which she corresponds, sendeth love in the Lord.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We are willing to bear all the reproach the religious world is pleased to cast upon us; for they persecuted Jesus because he testified of the world, that the works thereof were evil. The religious Pharisees persecuted him because he tore off their cloak of hypocrisy and exposed their true character. And if they persecuted Jesus for the truth, we should not think it strange if they persecute his people. May God grant us grace to know and do his will.

Dear brethren, we desire a continuance of your correspondence, both by messengers and minutes. Our next association is appointed to be held with the Sidlinghill Church, Fulton Co., Pa., to commence on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, 1894, and continue three days, where we hope to have your messengers with us.

E. V. WHITE, Mod.
AHIMAAZ MELLOTT, Clerk.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

At his late residence, in Warwick, N. Y., on the afternoon of Tuesday, Sept. 19th, 1893, Deacon David Brook passed calmly away from the pains and trials of earth. Although he had tremblingly hoped in the salvation revealed in Jesus, for many years, it was not until June, 1888, that he had strength given him to make a public profession of his faith; when at the close of the Warwick association he and his wife were received in the fellowship of the Warwick Church. He was born in Yorkshire, England, March 10th, 1818, and was brought to America when an infant, and for many years he had lived in the vicinity where he closed his earthly career. Being of a very quiet and unassuming disposition, he mingled little with the world, but devoted himself to his own domestic concerns. His widow, our beloved sister Brook, two brothers and one sister, survive him. May the grace of God be their comfort and support.

On account of the illness of his older brother, Deacon Samuel Brook, the funeral services, which were held at the house, were very brief, consisting of the reading of hymns 807 and 808 (Beebe's Collection), and a short discourse by the pastor who baptized him, from Psal. lxxxix. 15. Both the hymns and the text were selected by our departed brother.

Ed.

OUR dear father, Joseph Arbuckle, departed this life Sept. 2d, 1893, at the residence of his nephew, A. R. McKees, Memphis, Tenn., aged 89 years. He was stricken with paralysis over three years ago, and was helpless, but could sit in his invalid's chair. He had three strokes, two this year. In the last his tongue was paralyzed, so that he never spoke nor ate afterwards. He lived only one week.

Father married Elder David Clark's daughter, Lura Anner, in the year 1822. They raised ten children, six of whom survive. He lost his wife in the year 1863, and married Susan Sheppard in 1880. She has been a faithful wife. He professed a hope in Christ at the age of seventeen years, and joined the Primitive Baptist Church. He was firmly established in the doctrine, and never hesitated to advocate it. He manifested in his life and conversation the godly example of those only who are planted on the Rock Christ Jesus. In his first affliction he did not express a willingness to leave his earthly ties, until a vision was given him of his Savior, who said to him, "I am the way, the truth and the life." He had another vision of the Savior at the river Jordan. After these visions he expressed a willingness to go at the appointed time. Those visions would overcome him to speak of them. He never seemed to suffer pain, only when he lay in one position too long. He closed his eyes the last day, and slept until he breathed his last. His face in death bore evidence of the spirit having departed in view of celestial beauties. In looking on his dear face it seemed almost sinful that we should grieve as we did. He was strongly attached to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and had taken it over forty years, I think. He has left a devoted wife, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and many warm friends to mourn their loss. He was greatly attached to one of his sons, who stood by him to the last.

N. J. SHIPP.

Silas Starr was born Sept. 19th, 1842, and died May 27th, 1893, aged 50 years, 8 months and 8 days. He was baptized in January, 1872, by the late Elder Thomas Rose, and was one of those who went into the organization of the Fairview Old School Baptist Church, in Fulton Co., Pa., where he remained a faithful member till he moved to Huntingdon Co., Pa., and put his membership in the Springfield Church, where he remained a faithful member until called home to that rest that remains to the people of God.

Brother Starr commenced speaking in public shortly after his baptism, and continued to speak occasionally until he was stricken down with dropsy, from which he suffered very much for one year. I miss him very much, as he was always willing to take a part with me in the services. He was a beloved brother for his faithful, upright walk.

He leaves his sorrowing companion, who is a member of the Springfield Church, one son and four daughters, with the church, to mourn their loss; but we trust our loss is his eternal gain.

On the second Sunday in September, at the Springfield Church, I tried to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing friends, from the words found in 2 Tim. iv. 6-8.

May the Lord's mercy be extended to the sorrowing family, is the prayer of your unworthy brother,

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.
NEEDMORE, Fulton Co., Pa.

Mary Stillings, of North Berwick, Maine, was baptized by Elder Hartwell, Oct. 8th, 1835, and died July 7th, 1893, aged 75 years and 3 months.

About twelve years ago our sister fell and broke her hip, in consequence of which she was an invalid the rest of her days, and the last few years of her mortal pilgrimage she was confined much of the time to her bed. About a year ago the writer visited this dear sister, then confined to her bed of affliction, and held sweet converse with her upon the things of Christ, which were so precious to her soul. At her request I read a portion of the Scriptures and spoke in prayer. The remembrance of this season of communion together in the things of Christ has many times been sweet and comforting to my heart. While on a visit last July, with the North Berwick Church, I learned of her death, and was called upon to attend her funeral, and preached from Ephesians v. 14, and sung hymn 1112, which she desired to be preached from and sung at her funeral. The above named text and hymn were used on the day that she was baptized.

Thus in her dying hours the memory of that day on which she put on Christ Jesus in baptism was precious to her soul. After years of bodily suffering the gracious Lord called her to put off this tabernacle. We followed her remains to the family burying-place, where they are interred, to await the resurrection of the just.

ALSO,

Nancy Johnson, of North Berwick,

Maine, was baptized by Elder Hartwell in 1832, and died Sept. 22d, 1893.

Our sister, who attained the good old age of 90 years and 3 months, was born at Bauneg Beg, Maine. She was the mother of seven children, four of whom survive her, namely, Mr. Tristram Johnson, Mr. Frank Johnson, Mrs. J. B. Ham, of North Berwick, and Mrs. Bradley Ross, of Danvers, Mass. Our aged sister was able to attend the yearly conference of the church, and expressed her delight in the doctrine of God her Savior, and her desire for the welfare of the church. On Sept. 14th she was prostrated by a paralytic stroke, and in a few days the Lord called her to resign the earthly tenement, and she departed this life, as we believe, to be with Christ, which is far better. In conversation with her on several occasions it was so good and encouraging to listen to her rehearse the loving-kindnesses and faithfulness of the Lord to her soul for so many years; and we thought of those words,

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne."

FRED. W. KEENE.

Mrs. Malissa Whitaker, my mother's sister, died on the second day of last February, in the 69th year of her age.

She had her ankle broken when she was quite young. It was set several times, but they could not get it to stay in place. It caused a sore from which she suffered a great part of her life, and caused her death by eating her foot off. She suffered great agony, but bore her sufferings with the patience and fortitude of a Christian, never complaining in all her sufferings. She was not a member of the church, but said she wanted to be if she could believe that she was fit. She was a firm believer in the doctrine of salvation by grace alone. She was a devoted wife, a kind and loving mother, and a good neighbor. Too much could not be said in her praise. She was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a devoted husband, Wm. Whitaker, four sons and two daughters (five children having gone before her), one brother and two sisters, with many other relatives, to mourn their loss, which we have evidence to believe is her gain. She said she only feared the sting of death, but was ready to meet it. The Primitive Baptists would always find a welcome at her home, as her husband is a firm believer in the doctrine they advocate. They have had two daughters and two sons-in-law to join the Old Baptists.

Elder M. Hurst preached a very comforting sermon to a large congregation of relatives and friends, after which her remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery. A precious one from us has gone.

SUSIE C. DODSON.
WINTON, Ga., Oct. 2, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of the bereaved family, and in obedience to the promptings of my own desires, I forward to you for publication in the SIGNS the obituary of our sister, Lucy A. Blizzard, who departed this life August 12th, 1893, after a short illness, in the 48th year of her age.

I have known our deceased sister intimately for nearly twenty-five years. In frequently repeated visits at her home I learned to know her as a humble believer in Jesus; and my confidence in and fellowship for her was never abated from the first. With her and her sister, who was taken home some years ago, I had many pleasant hours of conversation upon the things that they both loved.

Sister Lucy, as we all called her, was of a very timid and retiring disposition, and felt deeply her unworthiness of the favor of God. This feeling also hindered her from confessing her Lord in baptism for many years; but a few years ago she came to the Ebenezer Church, in Baltimore, and was gladly received and baptized. It was a joyful day to her, of which she often spoke. About a week before she passed away she spoke to her father of her gladness that she had come out and confessed her Lord in baptism when she did. As the last hour of her mortal life drew near she said with deep earnestness, "Jesus is sweet to me now."

It was my sad privilege to be present at the funeral, and to try to speak a few words for the comfort of the living. May God comfort the bereaved father, family and church, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake.
F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 9, 1893.

SISTER Caroline Ashburn was born in Clark Co., Ky., in 1810, and departed this life at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Isaac Stipp, in Clintonville, Ky., July 26th, 1893.

She was a daughter of Elder Archie Bristow. She was married to Hiram Ashburn, and moved to Missouri, where three children (two sons and a daughter) were born unto them. While there she joined the Baptist Church. After some years she moved to Kentucky, and joined the Mt. Carmel Church by letter, where she remained an active, orderly, faithful member until released from the sufferings of this life to enter into the joys of that beyond. She was a regular reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for many years, having been a Baptist more than sixty years. She was ever firm in the faith of him in whom she believed. She was prominent among the faithful, and was well known and much loved by the Baptists here, and by those who visited them. One of her delights was to visit the brethren. Her counsels were good and wholesome. We miss her much in our meetings and at our homes; but she is no doubt now with Jesus, which is far better than being here. She had a good home in her last years with her loving daughter, who rendered her as comfortable as a loving heart and willing hands could until the last.

She did not believe in praising the dead, hence this brief notice concerning her. May the Lord grant reconciliation and the sufficiency of his grace to all the bereaved.

J. G. EUBANKS.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,
G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address
GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1893.

NO. 43.

POETRY.

MY SHEPHERD.

"He leadeth me!"
And so I need not seek my own wild way
Across the desert wild;
He knoweth where the shaded pastures lie,
Where the still waters glide,
And how to reach the coolness of their rest
Beneath the calm hillside.
"He leadeth me!"
And though it be by rugged, weary ways,
Where thorns spring sharp and sore,
No pathway can seem strange or desolate
Where Jesus "goes before."
His gentle shepherding my solace is,
And gladness yet in store.
"He leadeth me!"
O love that draws, but never drives me on,
Close be my following!
In blessed fellowship of joy or pain
Taught still thy praise to sing;
And never thorn shall wound my way-worn feet
But Christ first felt its sting.
"He leadeth me!"
I shall not take one needless step through all,
In wind, or heat, or cold;
And all day long he sees the peaceful end,
Through trials manifold!
Up the far hillside, like some sweet surprise,
Waiteth the quiet fold.

M. K. A. S.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WHEREFORE DIDST THOU DOUBT?

WHEN the disciples awoke Jesus, and said, "Lord, save us: we perish," he said unto them, "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" Then, after having thus spoken to them in the midst of the storm, while the waves covered the ship, "he rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm."—Matt. viii. 23. When Peter, afraid of the boisterous wind, and "beginning to sink, cried, saying, Lord, save me," Jesus, as he stretched forth his hand and caught him, said unto him, "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" In each case it looks as though there were causes enough for fear and doubt, and no reason that we can see why one should not be fearful. There certainly appeared no reasonable ground to expect deliverance from the winds and waves, which were still raging when the dear Savior asked the questions. In each case they might have replied, "Why, Lord, look around and see the condition we are in. How can we possibly be otherwise than fearful and doubting? Would it not be foolhardy presumption in us to think of being able to escape from the power of the elements? We see no signs of the sky clearing or the winds abating; and if we did, yet long before the waves could become quiet our boat must go down." "And I," poor Peter might say, struggling alone in the mighty deep, "how dare I have the faintest hope of salvation? What wicked presumption was it that made me step out on the wild water? Surely I deserve to perish. And yet I did not think it was presumption then. I felt full of love to thee, and desired to come to thee, and felt no fear, but was calm and peaceful as though I stepped on a smooth and solid path; for I thought that thou didst call me. And now I am sinking down."

But the dear Savior was not questioning them as natural men, depending upon reason to guide them, and upon their courage and strength to sustain and deliver them, but as men of faith, directed by the Spirit, and sustained alone by a trust in the Lord. These are they who have been called to be followers of Jesus, and to walk in paths beyond the power and province of reason, or of the wisdom of men, and where the natural powers of mind or body avail them nothing. While they are sailing smoothly along upon a calm and pleasant sea, this does not appear, neither is Jesus apparent while circumstances are so suitable to the natural desires. He is either asleep out of their immediate view, or is in the mountain praying for them, while they are alone in the vessel in which he has constrained them to embark. The storm is necessary in order that they may know their entire dependence upon him, and have no confidence in the flesh. Peter steps out upon the water at the bidding of Jesus, not in self-confidence, but in the mysterious power and confidence of faith, childlike. But that power of faith is withdrawn from him now, that he may know how much it is to him, how helpless he is without it, and that he may see wherefore he doubted. The moment faith is withdrawn from us, doubts arise; for faith looks alone to Jesus, and causes trust and confidence to be alone in him; and then there can be no doubt, for he has all power, and all things are possible to him, and therefore to those who believe in him. But the natural mind looks to the flesh, and trusts in the flesh, where there is no power or goodness at all. It was not as reminding them of any ability in themselves to sustain themselves till the storm should cease, or to work their boat to land, nor as reproving them for not being more energetic and courageous and patient, nor as intimating that there were prospects of better weather soon, that Jesus said to them, "Wherefore didst thou doubt?" "Why are ye fearful?" but as reminding them of his own presence, and of his power already felt and witnessed by them.

This question of the dear Savior has often been upon my mind with reference to myself, and many another poor sinner who has been given a precious hope in Jesus, and yet who seems inclined to doubt concerning the character of that hope as soon as a great storm of temptation and trouble arises in the soul. "Wherefore didst thou doubt?" Who gave you that hope? It certainly appeared to me it must have come from the Lord. Did you have anything to do in raising it up in your own heart? Of that I feel sure I can say, no! Seldom, if ever, has a doubt thrown its shadow upon me. Well, look that ground over and over again. What an impossible work was done (impossible with men) when that hope was given you. You had seen and felt your sinful character and condition very deeply and very clearly. And did any way ever suggest itself to your mind in which you could get to be holy? While you could not help crying for mercy, did it appear possible to you that a holy and just God could have mercy upon such a sinner, or that any mercy he might bestow in saving you from punishment would be able to make you pure and holy? And that was what you wanted, to be holy. O how your poor soul hungered to be righteous. Now remember how you wondered when you felt that weight of guilt and condemnation gone, and found your soul rejoicing in hope of salvation, and your mind filled with peace instead of trouble. Think it over again. Did you do anything to bring that about? Not any more than I did to bring the morning. It was an absolute surprise. Whatever you were looking for in the way of possible mercy and hope, you were not expecting it in this way. You were brought by a way that you knew not.

Well, let us consider the wonderful works of the Lord, and the power of his work. "His work is powerful and full of majesty." Why have you ever doubted whether this work was his? Because I am vile, and because the vileness of my heart is at times manifested so as to overwhelm me with shame, and self-loathing, and fear. But were you cured of vileness, and made clean and pure before the adorable Redeemer visited you with his salvation? Has he taught you in his word that this precious hope was given you because you were worthy of it, or that he loved you because you were lovely, or have you learned in his word, or felt in your own soul, that that work of grace has cleansed your nature from sin and depravity? It is a hope of salvation, a hope of redemption, a hope of righteousness, that was given you. "What a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Therefore, "We wait for the hope of righteousness by faith." "We are waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." The earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." We hope and wait for deliverance "from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." "Now he that hath wrought us for this self same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit."

Now look into your heart and contemplate the wonder of that hope ever having been there at all, and the still greater wonder, it sometimes seems, that it is there yet; that it has not been killed and rooted entirely out by the disastrous power of sin and the terrible assaults of the enemy. For you must acknowledge that the same hope is there to-day that was first put into our hearts, notwithstanding all the reasons which the devil has shown us why we should not hope. The storms that have almost desolated the soul, the waves of trouble which have many a time gone over the frail vessel, have not shaken that hope, though they have shaken our confidence in it. Even our doubts have not disturbed it. On the contrary, all this opposition and adversity have only made it stronger. They have only made more manifest the strength and durability of the Lord's work.

"Wherefore didst thou doubt?" Because the storm is fierce, and the waves are high, and "clouds overspread my wintry sky." Because I am such a vile, sinful being, and am so continually transgressing the dear Savior's commands, in thought and word and deed. Well, the dear Savior has never promised you any better weather in this respect while you remain in this mortal state. He has not told you to look for comfort to the prospect of the clouds breaking away so that no more storms will afflict your soul on account of sin in this world. He has not promised you that you shall be free from the bondage of corruption until your change shall come. But he has declared that in him you shall have peace, and you have found it so. Faith brings us into the knowledge and experience of that peace. Our cries amidst the terrors of the storm awake him, bring him to our view, and cause his voice to be felt in gentle reproof for our forgetfulness of him as our only trust, and in glorious power to hush the storms of affliction, and cause the waves of trouble to be still. As soon as he awakes we feel and see that he is Lord and Master of the storm; and afterward, when we can bear the knowledge, we shall learn that he himself "commanded and raised the stormy wind," and that it has only "fulfilled his word." From the most terrible wave of trouble that ever approached a poor soul his voice is heard, saying, "It is I; be not afraid," and all fear is gone in a moment. He reaches out his hand to the sinking Peter, and at once the boisterous wind loses its power to agitate his soul, and the treacherous water becomes as a pleasant garden path, even while the waves and winds are still roaring. He steps upon the vessel, and not only is there at once a great calm, but "immediately we are at the land whither we went." The sea itself, with the waiting, and watching, and toiling, and fear, are gone, and in the quiet haven of his love we are enjoying, by the glorious power of faith, a season of sacred rest and comfort. When he will, he is able to "fill us with all joy and peace in believing, that we may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost." In the world we shall have tribulation; that he has declared; but with every soul of whom that is true this also is true, that in him they shall have peace.

The Lord's work cannot be hurt or destroyed. It is not by pleasant things that it is tried. It is not kind, tender expressions to the natural ear that comforts and encourages a child of God. The minister or brother is not to say anything merely because it has a kind, encouraging sound, with the hope that therefore it will encourage the one he is anxious for, nor refrain from the expression of a truth because he fears it may have a discouraging effect. That would be presumption. Say what is on your mind of gospel truth, if it is your lot to speak. Tell what the Lord has done for you, if your lot is to talk of his work, not considering whether it will appear to others as a great or a small experience. Speak the word of exhortation or reproof that rests upon your spirit, when the Lord appoints you to this work, without thinking of how or where it may fall, without trying to either soften or increase its force on account of any person. The Spirit that gives the word will cause it to have free course and be glorified. The word, not the speaker of it, will be glorified.

A hundred saints might say to you in the time of doubt and trouble, "We are confident you are a christian," without removing one cloud from your sky. But let your experience of darkness be told in your hearing by one you never saw, by the poorest beggar, and there will be felt a thrill of joy and a reviving of hope. The same effect will be experienced when the minister of the word brings your soul's exercises to view in preaching, whether in expounding the word, or in reproof, exhortation, or rebuke.

Let all tenderness and loving-kindness characterize our intercourse one with another, dear brethren. Let us be as considerate of the feelings of others as we think they ought to be of ours. Let us think not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let us be careful that no secret arrow be concealed in our words spoken to or about a brother; but let plainness and candor characterize all our communications, and love be in the motive and the manner. But let us not think that this requires any holding back of anything which the Lord has laid upon our minds. We, of course, have to be well assured that the Lord has given us the word, for our own deceitful nature would cause us to use the Scriptures as an angry man would use a whip or sword, while we persuaded ourselves that we were actuated by holy zeal. But it does seem as though even a sheep, the most stupid of all animals, ought to know when he is angry, when he has some one in his mind as he writes, of whom he is saying to himself in some back room in his heart, "I think this will hit him. I am sure anyone would know who this means. It is rather hard, but he deserves it, and I want him to feel the stroke." I am sure we can tell when love so exercises us that we feel such a tender care for the wanderer, whether known to us personally or not, as a father would feel for his erring child, causing a great anxiety that the word may come to him with loving power, with restraining, constraining, restoring and healing power.

Sometimes we hear and read exhortations not to speak of subjects on which there is controversy. Of course if no one ever spoke what had been objected to by another, there would be a kind of quiet, but no peace. We do not want dead peace, but living peace; not the quiet of a bundle of dead sticks, but the peace like that among the branches of a living tree. Tell what you think the Lord has taught you, not what some preacher or some writer of a former age has told you to say. If I have never thought of that before, I will consider it, and may be rejoiced, as I have often been, to find a fresh reviving of my experience through your words. There are no stereotype plates for new editions of experience and preaching. The pages of this book are new with each one, newly written, newly expressed, and often seems to each as though it must be new to every other one. But to the surprise and joy of all, it turns out to be always the same writing by the same spirit, on the fleshly tables of every heart.

The doctrine of God's sovereignty, of his supreme and absolute and eternal power and purpose and wisdom, is the doctrine which comforts the weakest and poorest. When a dish is fixed up by anyone with any part of that glorious truth slighted, questioned, omitted, under the idea that such doctrine, even if true, which few venture to positively deny, is too strong for the weak children, such a dish will be found to have no strength or comfort for those who feel themselves weak, but will suit those only who are strong in their own estimation, who are not ready nor willing to ascribe all power unto the Lord, but claim some for themselves, and some for the devil. It is astonishing how many there are who persist in this claim of power for the devil and wicked men, even after they have had to give up all such claim for themselves. It requires such teaching as Job received to bring to anyone the full assurance of the truth that neither the devil nor any wicked man has any power at all except what is given him from above. When a natural man hears such an assertion, he is prompted at once to reply, "Why doth he yet find fault? for who hath resisted his will?" When one whom God has prepared to receive this truth hears it, he bows humbly before God, with the feeling that inspired the psalmist to say, "I will hear what God the Lord shall speak," or Job, "I know that thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from thee. Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful for me, which I understood not." But those who are strong in themselves, among the Lord's quickened people, are the very ones who are weak in the faith, and are such as need milk, not able to bear strong meat, but to have the doctrine carefully and clearly expounded to them in love, so that its sweet and rich and strengthening qualities may be understood and recognized by them in their own experience.

There are times when there is especial comfort in knowing that the Lord "commanded and raised the stormy wind" which was so terrifying to us, and which he afterward rebuked, though it only "fulfilled his word;" that the deepest darkness which we ever experienced was his secret place, in which he made his power and goodness known to us; and that "dark waters and thick clouds of the skies," such as still make his disciples cry out for fear, as they did of old on the sea of Galilee, are only his pavilions, the tents spread out for him by the obedient winds, in which he dwells with them, and around them, and moves with them from place to place, and in which he takes them into the most sacred nearness to himself, making them feel his tender love and protecting care more in the midst of the storm and darkness than they ever did in the pleasant day time, making them realize, while the waters are raging beneath, and the clouds are dark and stormy above, that they are abiding under the shadow of the Almighty, so that they are "not afraid for the terror by night, nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon-day."

It gives holy comfort, and inspires thanksgiving and praise, to know that the Lord not only made the rainbow, the everlasting covenant of grace and peace, but that he also prepared the dark cloud against which alone the rainbow is ever shown to us.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Oct. 6, 1893.

STATE ROAD, Del., Oct. 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—In attempting to write anything for publication, I like to feel that I have something to say that will be worth reading. It is not always that I can feel assurance of this. If I write now it will probably be on the subject of church order. It is much more common with our able writers to treat on doctrine than on order. But a professed belief of the truth does not amount to much unless there is a walking in and maintaining of that truth. Whatever may be said about gospel order may be all summed up in this, Walking in the truth.

Brethren, I presume, sometimes fall into irregularities unthoughtfully, and only need to have their attention called to it. I sometimes hear some brother or sister speak of joining a church, probably of the missionaries, but were not baptized. On some account they had declined to be baptized, and never were baptized by that people. We have frequent accounts of this kind in the published experience of those who have favored us with an account of their travels. I have inquired of some of our own ministers out west and south-west about this, and understood them to regard the vote to accept them as candidates as really voting them into the church; and upon this proceed to extend to them the hand of fellowship. All this looks strange to me. The receiving of unbaptized persons into membership in a gospel church, looks to me like gross disorder. I need not wonder at Missionary Baptists doing so, but our people should not follow them in disorder. I might inquire whether such members are subject to church obligations, and liable to discipline? Can they be given letters of dismission as in fellowship? I once witnessed in another er denomination the giving of the hand of fellowship by the preacher and quite a number of the members, and then baptized afterward. The whole thing looked so awkward and unscriptural that it was far from my thoughts that such irregularity could ever occur among the Baptists. We have not a single instance on record in the Scriptures of any one being received into the church unbaptized. If we entertain the supposition, which must always be possible, that they will decline to be baptized, their irregularity and disorder of such proceeding must be apparent. It has been quite a common thing among us for candidates to be baptized at a different place from where they expected to unite, that being understood at the time. Then no letter of dismission is required. The vote is put and taken as a general thing in this way, whether the candidate be received as a candidate for baptism, and after baptism into the fellowship of the church. Then no further voting will be required, and if they stray off, the church is free from responsibility. I have another point of order on my mind, but I feel much delicacy about touching upon it, lest I might appear in the character of a critic, and might unwillingly criticise some ministering brethren that are receiving and deserve the highest respect. In worldly matters custom is said to make law, and I do not know but what custom in churches may have sometimes the force of law. Different sections have different customs, and what people are accustomed to will be accepted oftentimes as right. We have had preachers sometimes visiting the churches of this section from a distance, and entire strangers to our people, who would take upon themselves, without a word of countenance from the church about it, to give pressing invitations to candidates to come forward and offer to the church. This, sometimes at a Sunday appointment, where there would be no opportunity for consultation by the members, and the regular pastor of the church absent. I do not know what they would expect to do, or expect the church to do, in case some one or more should accept their invitation. It certainly would seem that a faithful gospel minister would want to know something about a person before admitting them to the sacred ordinances. I would not for a moment question the validity of baptism administered by other than the pastor; still the pastor has the advantage over a stranger in regard to personal acquaintance. A church that is blessed with the labors of a faithful pastor I presume would prefer always that he should administer the ordinances for them.

The churches that I have been acquainted with, generally attend to the transaction of church business themselves, the minister being regarded rather as a servant than a master. If some minister from abroad should come through here and baptize somebody that I had no confidence in, within the bounds of a church that I was serving, it may readily be seen what disorder would result. I am not at all apprehensive that such a thing will ever take place, as the churches would maintain their authority. But the point is this, it ought not to have come to that; preachers should teach good order as well as sound doctrine, and they should be examples to the flock. The zeal thus manifested in regard to ingathering of any that may be without, would certainly be commendable if it were always tempered with discretion; but a zeal in serving the churches ought always to be according to knowledge. I have sometimes witnessed some minister talking to an entire stranger of whom he can have no personal knowledge, urging him or her to make a profession, and insisting upon it that it was their bounden duty to offer to the church. Some knowledge of the facts might lead them to see that they had acted quite indiscreetly. What we have a right to say to persons outside of the church depends upon the state of mind that they are in, and the exercises they have been passing through. This of course we must have some knowledge of, before we can speak advisedly. I have used the word disorder, as contrasted with good gospel order. It may be said that no harm has yet resulted from any of these things. I do not know that there has, but the time to speak of irregularities is before any harm comes. The maintenance of good gospel order will never involve the churches in confusion, and it will not be likely to ever bring a stain upon the reputation of a gospel minister.

I submit these reflections, not without some misgivings about the propriety of having them appear in print.

Yours with regards,

E. RITTENHOUSE.

LIGHT AND SHADOWS.

THE Lord knoweth that like a garden in a dry time am I wasted away. Hard is my heart, and the flowers are withered. Dead are the leaves of the rose; gone are the lilies of spring time. The branches of the vine are drooping, and the leaves falling away. The fruit that erstwhile was so sweet is dried up, and the fowls of the air come and peck at the dead grapes. The still waters are sunk into the earth, or have been dried up by the sun. The earth is dry and hard, and the grass seems dry and dead. Day after day the hot sun is like a consuming fire. Night after night have I been in my garden, and standing, I know not where, have felt the hot winds blow over me; and I can see the cedars, like lofty dim shadows, standing where all else seems dead. Looking up I see the sky like a dark face, and the stars like many eyes looking coldly upon my desolate garden. O!

if I could but sink down in this dry earth, and be out of their sight; if I could but dig a grave where I stand, and be buried here in the midst of this desolation. I strike with my feet, and with my own hands try to hollow out a place where I can hide before the dawn comes again with its scorching sun; but in vain. The place where I stand seems hard as rock, and my strength is spent with hunger, for no fruit can I gather from any garden. My eyes are red with weeping for my loved one, who has left me. The one that loved and who comforted me is gone, I know not where. My friend, my strength, my all, is gone and left me in time of sorest need. O for one word of love from my friend to comfort me, that I could lie down and die in peace, so worn out with grief, thinking that all have deserted me, because I am not worthy of a friend, and have nothing wherewith to feed them if those who still love me should come, since my garden is dead. If they should come they would turn from me in wrath, saying, "You have deceived us in asking us to come when you have nothing to give." I could but say, Yes, it is so, and your anger is just. I will lie down here and die. But my bed is hard, and I cannot sleep. A black cloud is rising, and the wind storm is blowing so I cannot stand against it. When I try to rise, it blows me down, though I try and struggle till my strength is gone, and I can only lie still on my hard bed. My strength is spent, and I cannot move. Surely death will come and give me rest. The lightning flashes across the blackness, and by its light I again see the desolation around me, and then all is blackness. Surely I am so near death I do not care for rain; for my friend has left me, and I am almost dead. Visions come and fright me till I wonder if I am dead, and if these visions are what the dead see. It begins to rain, but that which made me glad when my loved one was with me, and my friends around me, now falls coldly upon me. Yes, it is rain, and is falling upon the dry earth, and refreshing the garden. This I know; but I am cold and helpless, my loved one is gone, and I must die out in the cold. I think the rain will soften the hard earth, and I will sink in the mire. Well, at least that will soften my bed. All night it rains, but my bed does not soften. Surely the earth is so dry and hard that the rain cannot make it soft, and only runs off and leaves it hard as ever. At last the light of day comes, but full of clouds is the sky. I see that the garden is growing, and the glad plants are lifted up, and the branches of the vine are refreshed; but I am cold and helpless, and cannot rise; still I say, I must die. I hear a step, and some one is standing by me. Surely I know that step, but I cannot move or turn to see who it is. Then I hear a sweet, familiar voice say, "Arise, my love, and come away." It is my loved one, that I thought had gone away forever. Nay, my friend, I cannot rise, for I am almost dead, I am so cold. I think he left me because he did not love me, I was so unworthy, so useless, and fit only to die. But with words of love he lifts me, wraps me in his mantle, and takes me into his house, where we have lived and feasted with our friends. My friends are there, and a feast is spread by the hand of my loved one, and we are feasting; for he has said to me, "My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distill as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." I say to him, "My friend, I have lived so long with you, and yet I know you not. I am nothing, and yet you love me." Then he says, "A mother may forget her child, but I will not forget you. For a little time I hid my face from you, for you did not feel that you needed me, though I knew you loved me, because I first loved you. Now you know you need me, and lo, I am with you alway. I was near you, and you knew it not, O thou of little faith." My friends come around me, and seem to look at me with sad, reproachful eyes, because I doubted them; but I know now it is only my guilty, doubtful heart. How ungrateful I have been. My friend who saved me has ever been with me, loving me, helping me, giving me tokens of love, good, kind friends, every good gift; and yet only a little time his face is turned from me, and I am the same hard hearted, sinful, ungrateful one. Surely I will doubt no more.

My brother, or sister, if you have the love of God in your heart, and the witness that this is true, is it necessary for me to apply this description of a drouth and the coming of rain upon the earth to your experience? You have read it through, and in reading it have applied it all along, so that you hardly know which it described the best, the nature of your experience, or an experience of nature. You, too, have had at times many days of peace, so that one beautiful day followed another, until you forgot the source of your peace, and felt strong and secure in your own strength; and you felt, when you looked about in your garden, you found that the same sun that had made the days so lovely, had been burning your garden, until there was nothing to feed upon, and you lost sight of your strength, and fell; but when the Lord said, "Arise, my love," and raised you up, it was not the earth that you laid down upon, but a rock, that the rain could not wash away, but only washed the dirt away from it, so you could see you were on a sure foundation, and could sink no lower than the Savior's feet. That is the safest place for us. Though that rock may seem hard, and the rain make us sensible of our coldness, it is best, for then we feel the need of his mantle of charity, which is love. Then, O! my brother,

(Continued on page 341.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 25, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE SEAL OF GOD.

"AND the Lord said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof."—Ezekiel ix. 4.

It is not our purpose to attempt a general exposition of the text as it applies to the literal visitation of the just judgment of God upon the nation of Israel. Neither do we hope to present all that might be learned from its application to the spiritual Israel as the antitype of that nation whom God chose to be his peculiar people in a national relation. The one point to which we would call attention is the definite characteristic by which it pleased the Lord to distinguish his chosen people, whom he would save from the destruction appointed to the transgressors in that figurative dispensation, and to seek for the antitypical significance of that mark in the experience of the saints in this day of the revelation of the gospel.

It will be observed that this prophecy was not addressed to the nations of the heathen world, nor did it denounce condemnation against the wickedness of any others but those whom the Lord had chosen to be his own peculiar people. In all of the record of the history of the nation of Israel there is presented a typical picture of the character and conduct of the chosen generation of the spiritual Israel. This is the real and essential meaning of all concerning them that is left by inspiration in the word of truth. At the time when this prophecy was given to Ezekiel the prevalence of idolatry had brought the judgments of God upon the children of Jacob. Even the sacred temple of God was defiled with the sacrifices of abomination, and the people had forgotten their allegiance to the Lord. This transgression of the covenant by them brought upon them terrible judgments, under which many of them were destroyed by the sword and pestilence, and their survivors were carried into captivity in Babylon. It was when these awful calamities were impending that this prophet was moved to proclaim this message to the house of Israel. But there was to be a manifestation of discriminating grace even in this righteous visitation of divine wrath against the rebellious nation who had forsaken the law of the Lord. While divine justice required that the wrath of God should be revealed against the wickedness of this idolatrous nation, there must be also a display of sovereign mercy in the salvation of such of the people as were selected by the favor of God. These were they who were marked, as stated in the context, by the man clothed with linen, and having a writer's inkhorn by his side. It is not intimated that there was an effort made to induce the people to make themselves fit for the reception of this mark. Certainly none of those who were engaged in the abominations described in the preceding context were found sighing and crying because of them. There is nothing in all that is here written concerning them that intimates that in all their abominations they had any thought of their obligation to observe the law of the Lord. Evidently they were well pleased in the devotions in which they were engaged. So, in the antitypical Jerusalem, in the organized church under the gospel dispensation, there is no such thing possible as that one of those who are worshiping the idols of human devices should ever sigh and cry for all the abominations which are done in the midst of Jerusalem. All such idolatrous professors are satisfied that they are pursuing the safe and prosperous path in which they enjoy the favor of the religious world, and they have no occasion to mourn either for their own evil deeds or for the evils which prevail in the organized church. They are never found groaning under the conscious guilt which causes the subjects of grace to sigh and cry to the Lord. Their only regret is that they do not receive the popular praise to which they feel that their merits entitle them. This is very different from that grief which causes the saints to mourn their own sinfulness and inability to live, as they earnestly long to do, in obedience to all the commandments of the Lord. Those who really sigh and cry for all the abominations that are done in the midst of Jerusalem, find occasion for their deepest grief in the evil of their own heart, which constantly condemns them. They can find no ground for boasting in their own works of righteousness, nor can they claim acceptance in the sight of divine justice on account of any merit in themselves. Such are the characters whom our Lord pronounces blessed, as "they that mourn." Eternal truth gives assurance that "they shall be comforted." Their comfort is beyond all that this world can afford; it is ministered to them in their deepest sufferings by the Comforter, whom the world cannot receive, neither knoweth him. None ever know the sweetness and fullness of its everlasting consolations but those who have been delivered by the goodness of God out of the depth of condemnation and utter helplessness. To all such it is the sum of all comfort when they receive the assurance that they shall be delivered from the power of sin, and conformed to the glorious likeness of their holy Redeemer.

Of these mourners, who sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst of Jerusalem, the testimony of prophecy has declared that "They shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."—Mal. iii. 17. Since they are peculiarly set apart to this infinite manifestation of divine favor, it is consistent that they should be suitably distinguished from those who have no part in this infinite grace. The wisdom of God has provided the most perfect and unmistakable seal by which to identify these subjects of his eternal love. Not only is it a mark which no efforts of the natural mind can imitate, but it is so hidden from the research of reason that it cannot even be desired or thought of. It is confined exclusively to those who are described in our text. There is no uncertainty with regard to the favored ones who were to receive this mark of the saving grace of God. The Lord gave the specific direction to the man who had the writer's inkhorn by his side, and he could not set the mark which signified life and grace, upon one who was not included in the commandment of the Lord; neither was it left to his discretion whether that mark should be set upon one of them whose grief was attested by his sighing and crying for all the abominations that were done in the midst of Jerusalem. This was given as the decisive characteristic by which this servant of the Lord was to be governed in selecting those upon whom he should set this mark of the preserving care of the Lord. Indeed, in the revelation of the gospel of the grace of God it may be safe to consider this very mourning as the mark itself by which the children of grace are distinguished from every other character in the religious world. None can really mourn for sin but those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. All who bear this mark must be led by the Spirit of God, and therefore they are the sons of God. This is clearly the mark which is set upon them in obedience to the commandment of the Lord; for the carnal mind is enmity against God, and consequently it cannot even wish to sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst of Jerusalem. It is contrary to every instinct and principle of natural selfishness that one should by his own choice select the portion of poverty and sorrow by reason of which these blessed ones are described as sighing and crying.

As it was in the vision of the prophet distinctly specified that the Lord sent the man exclusively to set a mark upon the mourners in Jerusalem, so in the antitypical signification of this revelation, such mourners as bear the distinguishing mark of the Spirit of life in Christ

Jesus are found only in the city of our God, the New Jerusalem, the church of the living God. On all such mourners the Holy Ghost has set the mark of electing love, by which they are separated from the world of them who trust in their own righteousness for justification before God. While they still find in themselves all the evils of their carnal nature, and suffer constant grief because of their inability to do the good which they would do, they cannot efface that mark which has been set upon them at the commandment of the Lord. They still sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst of Jerusalem. One peculiarity of this true mourning of those who are thus marked by divine commandment is found in the consciousness that in themselves they bear all the corruption and vileness by reason of which they are compelled to sigh and cry. By this knowledge of their own sinfulness they are cut off from everything like boasting, and forbidden to reproach those who are left to work out the iniquity by reason of which the ways of Zion do mourn. Instead of claiming strength to walk more consistently than others, they are continually fearing that their steps may yet slip, and their actions may demonstrate that they have no part with them that love the Lord. This mark is never seen upon the forehead of any but those who are the true subjects of that divine grace which chose the saints in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before God in love. Such mourning is not merely the fear of future punishment as the consequence of sin, but it is the effect of the love of righteousness and hatred of sin which is inseparable from the life of Christ Jesus, by which they are governed. There can be no such mourning in any sinner's heart unless the love of righteousness is there implanted by the Spirit of truth. That mark secures the subject of its divine sealing as one of the vessels of mercy which God afore prepared unto glory. No power of sin or temptation can defeat that sovereign election of grace. The power of God preserves every one bearing this mark unto that glory which was given them in Christ according to the eternal purpose of God, for the development of which all material things were created. Of the truth of this doctrine it is not often that the saints are tempted to harbor any doubts; but they are more commonly troubled with the question as to their personal interest in the electing love of God. For the comfort of such as feel this cruel doubt, this mark is left on record. It cannot be counterfeited, and none can bear it except by the express commandment of that God who cannot lie, and who will not repent.

Nothing less than divine wisdom could have selected such a mark as this by which to identify his chosen saints. Finite intelligence would consider it a more appropriate mark for the objects of eternal love to be free from the afflictions and sorrows by which sighing and crying are produced. It was upon this principle that the religious world rejected the Lord of glory. They could not recognize the Mighty God in him who was a man of sorrows. He told his disciples that they must be despised and rejected of men, as he was. This wonderful mark can never produce self-confidence in those who bear it. This is signified in the specification that they were marked upon the forehead. While this mark must be very clearly exposed to the sight of every one who should see them, it is never possible that one should see the mark upon his own forehead. By this appointment of the Lord the saints who are mourning for prevailing sins must ever esteem others better than themselves, and find the evil of their own hearts the most deplorable abomination, because of which they sigh and cry. This grief can never prompt its subject to find fault with his brethren, or to claim himself as the standard by which others are to be judged. The more clearly the light shines in the heart of one of these mourners in Zion, the more ready will he be to show a loving and forbearing spirit toward the weakness and frailty of those who are overcome by temptation. Love that is without dissimulation is that charity which suffereth long and is kind. Where that heavenly grace rules in the heart, it always embraces every one who is sighing and crying for all the abominations which he feels in himself. This is the mark by which the favored subjects of divine grace are identified now, as they were in the vision of the prophet.

GONE TO THE BINDER.

AN unusually large and sudden demand for our small type cloth-bound hymn books has entirely exhausted our supply, but the sheets for a new lot are now printed and in the hands of the binder, and we expect to have them ready for delivery by the early part of November next. We have a number of orders now on hand which we will fill at the earliest possible day. Parties who have orders now in, and prefer to do so, can remit the balance and have any of the other styles of binding mailed them immediately. Any one wishing to have their money returned, if they will inform us, we will refund it to them.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE.

ELDER Fred. W. Keene having changed his residence from Kelly's Corners, N. Y., to North Berwick, Maine, wishes his correspondents to address him at the latter place.

PERSONAL.

WILL some of the Old School Baptist friends in the State of Washington please send their post-office address to me at Elmwood, Peoria Co., Ill.?

SMITH KETCHUM.

(Continued from page 339.)

what a beautiful world. The world of nature is beautiful, and it seems to grow more so every day to me as I study it. But it is the same to-day as it was last year, only I am learning to see its beauties. It is lovely in all seasons, and needs them all. When winter wraps it in a blanket of snow; when spring is making its mantle of green, trimming it here and there in beautiful flowers; when summer sun ripens the fruit, and dries up vegetation, so that the soil is rested; when autumn says, Ye must die, that ye may come forth in newness of life. All seasons are needful, and all are beautiful. But when the light divine shows poor unworthy me some of that beautiful spiritual world, I cannot describe its beauty, and can only cry from the dust at Jesus' feet, "I am a worm, and no man; but great and wonderful are thy works, thou King of Peace."

So if this has given you, "little one," any comfort, I want you to say, I thank thee, Our Father, that it has pleased thee to reveal thy love to man; and pray for me, for I am a worm, and no man. The billows of temptation and doubt, the waves of trouble and sin, roll in upon me, and I can only cry, "Lord, have mercy upon me, a sinner." Without the grace of God I would sink in sin, destroy the trust of those who love me, and dishonor the cause of Christ, and be swept down to everlasting destruction by the billows of trouble, sin and death, that sweep over the lives of all men. Then let God be praised, and no man thanked; for all that the best man can do is his duty, and duty is the just debt of all men to man. Let us live together in love, and thank God for the blessings he has heaped upon his loved ones. May he grant us peace, that we may be contented to do his will, is my prayer for Jesus' sake.

Your brother, I trust, in Christ,
DUDLEY G. JOHNSON.

SEPTEMBER 28, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send some extracts from letters I received a few years after I was baptized, from a very dear sister. She was a mother in Israel to me, loving, kind and forbearing. Although she is at home with Jesus, free from the trials and conflicts of this life, to ever praise and adore the dear Savior of sinners, she is still remembered by many of the household of faith.

Your sister, I hope,
M. E. DAVIS.

FEBRUARY 8, 1887.

MY PRECIOUS SISTER MARTHA:—You will see that I have waited a long time, hoping I would have something to write that would interest you, and be able in part to say something that would show I was alive to spiritual things; but you will see that I am dead. O! can it be that one like me ever knew anything of the Spirit? When I read your dear letter I could enter in with your feelings. Can it be, if I am nothing, that I could understand the language of Canaan? It is still sweet to my taste. But you cannot know what it is to be separated from the flock, and to hear no preaching since the fourth Sunday in September. Well, I know God is able to feed me, if it is his will, even if I am in the wilderness; for we read that he spreads a table in the midst of our enemies, for his children. We are told to let patience have her perfect work; but I am so impatient; yet I want to live without a murmur, and wait God's time, knowing that I cannot hasten nor retard it. I find that I cannot do the things that I would. Well, if Paul could not, is it not a great comfort to us? for we know he was a chosen vessel of the Lord to preach his everlasting gospel to the Gentiles. I want to dwell upon the goodness and mercy of the Lord; but I am so troubled with a wandering mind. If I try to come before the good Lord, my mind is often carried away to something vile. O! it scares me. Then in comes the devil and says, "If you were a christian you would have good thoughts;" and I am ready to agree with him. I have often, after going to my bed, tried in the best manner to call upon God, and have fallen asleep, and awakened frightened. Well, once old brother Trott said in his preaching that he had done the same thing. It was a comfort to me. How often we are tried in different ways. I have been so troubled. When we hear one of the servants of the Lord tell of their trials, and feel that they are christians, we take courage. If it were not for past manifestations I should give up. I try to put all my trust in God, but that is more than I can do without his aid. I often feel, "Is his mercy clean gone forever? Will he be favorable no more?" And yet he is bestowing blessings upon me all the time, I not deserving the least of them. If I am in the covenant of grace I know I am safe; and if not, I know I cannot put myself in it.

I WAS very glad to hear from you. The evening I got your letter I felt so forsaken, and tried to beg the Lord that I might have some little token of the love of the church. You must not expect to hear much from me. Cut off from you all, with no preaching, I do feel that I am a poor pilgrim, wandering in a dry and thirsty land, and, worse than all, shut up in darkness; so you can just think how it is with me. O for one ray of light to cheer me on my way. I have to go back to the time when my dear Redeemer sent down into my heart his love, and filled my heart with love to his holy name. O how I loved him. I could say from my heart, "My Lord and my God." But now I am afraid I do not love him. I am so cold and dead that I cannot feel one spiritual emotion in my heart, except this, I love you all, and love the truth, and feel to say,

"My soul shall pray for Zion still,
While life or breath remains;
There my best friends and kindred dwell,
There God my Savior reigns."

I envied you all at meeting on Saturday and Sunday, sitting under the droppings of the sanctuary, and the food was sweet. I am a poor wanderer, miles away.

I RECEIVED your letter. I am well. Old age is all I have to suffer, with my wretched, wicked, hard heart. Brother Francis came to Quantico in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel, and I, a poor and hungry one, was filled; but the praise is God's, who was pleased to fill his servant's heart with his presence, and to open my heart to receive it; but I cannot keep it, no more than the children of Israel could keep the manna. Have you seen the last number of the SIGNS? Brother Chick has written on Job. I tell you it has caused me many anxious inquiries. But, my dear sister, you cannot feel like any but Job, who served God for the love of holiness. When I look within and see so much sin and vileness, how can it be that I love holiness? Yet I do love to see Jesus in the walk and conversation of the dear brethren and sisters, but I fear it cannot be that I love him as I ought, when I think how long I have been kept from you all. On the fourth Sunday in last July I had such a feast. You remember the text was in the Song of Solomon. "Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth," &c. What a precious gift the Lord has given brother Badger, as well as to all others; for all grace comes from him, with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning. O how glad I am that he is in one mind, and none can turn him. He is God, and beside him there is no Savior. But for his merciful kindness what would become of us, poor, needy, helpless creatures? God is love.

I NEED not tell you how glad we were to get your letter. Just think, I have not heard any preaching since last April; and I have been so worldly minded that I feel like the Lord has forsaken me. How distressing it is to me. But I must wait my Maker's will. The devil tempts me to believe I never knew anything spiritual. Then I try to recall the time when my heart was filled with God's love and praise. Then there was no room for doubts and fears. Brother White said in his sermon at Frying Pan that if we ever have felt that love once, we are sure of heaven. But when shut up I cannot take comfort in anything. My faith is so faint I dare not take the children's bread. My cry is that he will give me a clean heart and a contrite spirit. Paul says it is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.

Your loving sister,
HARRIET HIXON.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 3, 1893.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS:—I forward you for publication, feeling sure that you will agree with me as to its worthiness for that purpose, a most precious letter voluntarily written to me by that dear old Elder, Samuel Bradbeer, of Gardner, Ill., as a response to inquiries I had made regarding the time of meeting of the Verona Old School Baptists. The message sent by him to me came with such a comforting power that I was only able to read it through eyes dimmed with tears of joy, and with a heart full of love for the writer, who should be the bearer of such a treasure of spiritual food for me. I have not asked him for permission that it be published, for I know the dear old man would not consent to its being withheld, when possessed of the knowledge that it is replete with "some of the rich treasure of Jesus' grace, to be brought forth for meat to feed the flock which is purchased with his blood."

In response to the Elder's invitation I visited his home on Sunday, Aug. 27th, and passed a few very precious hours in company with him and a little gathering of saints to whom he preached with great power from above. "Did not our heart burn within us while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures?" Surely the Comforter was manifested to us all with great power. The Elder spoke upon the subject of the apostles' doctrine, and the Lord graciously led his mind in setting forth in great clearness and beauty to our minds the perfect doctrine of our Savior Jesus Christ, which has by the power of God been kept to these last times pure and precious, for the sanctification and perfecting through spiritual guidance of his saints here on earth, and kept in all its power and strength as that same doctrine of the apostles to this present time, against the assaults of men, who try to move heaven and earth to pervert it into a doctrine conforming to the carnal mind. Thanks be to God, their efforts cannot prevail against the Rock of our safety.

This dear old servant of our God is in very feeble health, and not at all strong in body; but I verily believe he is like Paul, who said, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." His mind is wherein he is possessed of a strength exceeding greatly that of Samson; for God has made it a well filled storehouse of his treasure for his people, to be opened at times and places according to his will; for I believe that no flesh can preach the things of the kingdom without the door of utterance being opened by the power of God.

Yours in hope of an enduring crown of righteousness, which is Christ in us.

CHARLES W. HAMILTON.

GARDNER, Ill., April 16, 1893.

MR. C. W. HAMILTON—DEAR SIR,

BROTHER, AND FELLOW PARTAKER OF THE HOPE OF ETERNAL LIFE IN CHRIST JESUS:—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied unto you, through the knowledge of him who has called us to glory and salvation. As I have heard of thy inquiries for the shepherds' tents, where the Shepherd feeds his flock, and makes them to lie down at noon, I have concluded that thou also art a son of Abraham; and if a son, then an heir, according to promise, of grace, life and blessing in Christ our Lord. So, as thou art no more a stranger, but being brought nigh by the blood-shedding of our Surety and High Priest, thou art one of the family of Christ, and of the household of the faith of God's elect. If you and I are created in Christ Jesus, we do not want a formal introduction to each other; and if the Holy Spirit has made us acquainted with the plague of our own hearts, we will soon be acquainted with each other; for the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. Brother Gilbert told you of an old earthen vessel, very weak and feeble, into which the Lord's flock have thought that the Master has put some of the rich treasure of his grace, to be brought forth for meat to feed the flock which is purchased by his blood. That poor, old, base, despicable vessel now tries to write this to you. But I tell you, dear brother, I often have to grope around that meal barrel pretty well before I can find enough to make a little cake for myself, much less to feed the sheep or lambs. But when the risen Lord comes and kindles a fire of coals, there is no lack of fish or bread.

I saw your letter in the SIGNS. Brother Gilbert had told me you wrote to him before. I went to his house, a few of the brethren and sisters came on Sunday, and we had a little refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Brother Gilbert went to the depot, in hope of finding you, but was disappointed. I live near Gardner, sixty-three miles on the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis R. R. Could you come down, say Saturday evening, the 26th, you could return on Monday. There is an old sister and her daughter at Gardner. I go there and have a talk frequently. Sometimes brother Gilbert and others come over. We would be very glad to see you, and would be glad of your company as long as you could stay. I need not write much about myself. I am an uneducated, ignorant old Englishman, with great sins and very small gifts. The rest I can tell you when you come, as we hope you will. If you will read B. F. Coulter's letter in the SIGNS of July 19th, you will get a better description of myself than I could write.

We are a scattered few who still hold our names at Verona. Please write soon, that I may have plenty of time to try and get a few to meet you. On account of my poor health, and being so far apart, we have had no regular meetings for a long time.

Now, may the God and Father of our loving Lord Jesus make all grace abound toward you, so that your faith and hope may not stand in the power of the flesh, but in the power and grace of the eternal Jehovah, is the prayer of your old, unworthy brother,

SAMUEL BRADBEER.

WARRIOR, Ala., Aug. 17, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please give credit on my subscription to the SIGNS for the inclosed amount, and oblige. I would be glad if I could send several new names with the subscription price, but such is not the case. While it is not without some sacrifice on my part, even so small an amount, I am unwilling to be deprived of the weekly visits of so welcome a visitor as the SIGNS OF THE TIMES is to our humble home. I have frequently thought that if I were competent to intelligently compose it, an account of what I hope have been the dealings of the Lord with me might be interesting to some of the saints. Especially has such been the case since the published correspondence in the SIGNS of Elder Jenkins and brother Brink, which was instructive as well as interesting to me; and it may be it was more so on account of the relation I yet sustain to the Missionaries. However, such an opportunity has never been granted me to change that relation as was granted to brother Brink, or it might now be different; for I think the attitude of both denominations to each other, and the relation they sustain to the church of Christ, was clearly and forcibly set forth in said correspondence. Why it is that I have never been permitted to hear such oral preaching as you Old School Baptists are constantly blessed with, I cannot see; but such is the case. I am fifty years of age, and never have I heard an Old School Baptist preach; but I have the book that contains the doctrine they preach, and my little experience teaches me that it is true, although I was for a long time so completely entangled in the Missionary net that I could not understand my own experience. But it pleased the Lord to enable me to see the inconsistency of the doctrine of salvation by grace alone, and at the same time depend upon the act of the creature, together with many other inconsistencies taught by the Missionaries; as, for instance, that baptism is not essential to salvation, but is essential to obedience, and obedience is essential to salvation; also, free moral agency and election and predestination. There are several others that I could mention, but will not now. In the first place, in order to accomplish his purpose concerning me, the Lord separated me from kindred and friends and native land, and cast my lot among strangers in a strange land, which was accomplished by my moving to the state of Florida in the year 1882, and back to Alabama in 1884, and since then from place to place, here and there, being destitute and afflicted in more ways than one, until the year 1887, when I came to this place. Here I came across Dr. Watson's "Old Baptist Test," and Jesse Cox's commentary on the book of Revelation, both of which I highly prize for the truth's sake; also Hassell's Church History, the very thing I wanted. From it I learned of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which I immediately sent for, and have not missed a number since; and I hope I may never, as long as I live, be deprived of the blessing of perusing its pages, for it has been a source of pleasure to me. Also the two volumes of the book of "Editorials" and the "Everlasting Task" I esteem a very great blessing, which have thrown a great deal of light on the teaching of God's word. So, brethren editors, and correspondents of the SIGNS, write on, with the ability that God gives, and may he bless your labors to the good of others as he has to me.

While there are a great many people in this part of the state claiming to be Primitive Baptists, they seem to be somewhat divided. We have what are known as Georgia Baptists. From the best information I can gather they are more like the Old Baptists represented by the Bible and the SIGNS OF THE TIMES than any of the others; but I cannot say positively, for I have never heard any of them preach, although I have often desired it. My circumstances are such that I have never been able to get to such remote points in the country as all these churches are located. While the greater portion of my life and travels in this world are mysterious to me, I seem to realize the fact, more especially of late years, that notwithstanding my own sinfulness and unworthiness, and the terrible opposition that has always been so prominently manifested in me to his will, that the eternal purpose of God is having much to do in directing my steps through this world; and if God be for us, who can be against us?

But I will close, lest I weary you. My object in writing is simply to do something, if possible, by way of encouragement to you, brethren editors of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, in your labors in the cause of truth, and if you think it will be benefited in any way by publishing this, you are at liberty to do so.

Yours to serve in christian love,
G. E. KEYS.

BATH, Maine, Sept. 14, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—While I was at North Berwick, attending the yearly conference, some of the brethren wished me to write about it for the SIGNS. It is always a pleasure to comply with the wishes of those whom I love for the truth's sake. When I attempt to write anything for our family paper, the SIGNS, it is with fear and trembling, until the thought comforts me that you will not publish it unless you think lovers of the truth will be satisfied with it. I feel that the theme of this letter should be of the great and wonderful works of the Lord; for Elders Chick and Keene were determined to know nothing save Jesus Christ and him crucified. I heard the mercy, power, goodness and love of God spoken of in a way that it was a joyful sound. I am made to feel at times my sinfulness, and it is then I cry, "Have mercy upon me, O Lord." And when that mercy is revealed in my experience I sing, "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever." The goodness, love and power of God in bringing me from nature's darkness into his marvelous light, and enabling me to come to this dear people and tell them what great things the Lord had done for me, causing them to receive me, so I have felt I was no longer a stranger or foreigner, but a fellow-citizen with the saints, and of the household of God, is very sweet and precious to me. When I have the privilege of hearing those whom the Lord has called and set apart to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ, and they with boldness and clearness tell the dealings of the Lord with his children, and I find that experience in a measure has been written in my own heart, my joy is unspeakable and full of glory to God. The gospel preached in its purity must always be Jesus, because the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." There is no other way, truth and life, only Jesus. He came to save his people from their sins. We can see no beauty, form or comeliness in the crucified and risen Jesus until we have been made to know we were helpless and lost sinners, and God reveals him unto us as "mighty to save." From that time in our experience, until the close of our journey here, no other name can be so sweet, so dear and precious to us. We shall desire to be in the company of those who will exalt that name above every name that is named. I am sure I was in that company during the three days meeting at North Berwick; also the next week at our association, held with the church at Whitefield. I was able to attend every meeting, and knew no weariness of body or heaviness of mind. The witness within testified that the flesh and blood of Jesus was set before us by his servants, and a great gladness filled my heart.

"May Christ be first, and Christ be last,
And Christ be all in all;
Who died to make salvation known,
And raise us from the fall."

I was pleased with the warm welcome I received in the homes of the brethren, and the love and fellowship which was manifested for me was highly prized. Many around me have attended the World's Fair; but I believe I have tasted of a purer, sweeter joy in the company of a few followers of the meek and lowly Lamb, than can be found in all this world can give. "And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace." There is great rejoicing (and I hope thankfulness) in our hearts that Elder F. W. Keene is coming to settle with the church at North Berwick. The Lord will bless his labors, and make him know his "labor is not in vain in the Lord."

I am well aware that this letter does not contain a narration of my visit as I would like to give, and I am afraid some will be disappointed. But my mind has been led to write of the theme which is far higher, more lasting, and something which will remain with me through all time; and when this veil of flesh is taken away, the same song of redeeming love in all its fullness will still go on.

I have been sick with throat trouble and cold since my return. It is necessary for me to know I still bear about this body, as I forget myself while listening to the preaching, and speaking with my brethren. I am glad I feel that you will not publish this unless you think best. May we be made to realize that our God charges not, and his greatness is unsearchable. Your unworthy sister,
ATTIE A. CURTIS.

AUGUST 3, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—If one so unworthy as I feel myself to be should address you as brethren. I have for several years felt that I wanted to write something for our family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, but, always felt that it would be like the writer, imperfect all the way through. I am a poor, imperfect, sinful worm of the dust. When about fifteen years of age, I was made to feel that if I were to die then I would be forever lost. I tried to ask God to be merciful to me, a poor sinner, and forgive my many sins; and I have a hope that God did, for Christ sake, forgive my sins, and gave me a love for things that I once cared nothing for, and a hatred for things that I once loved. That was many years ago; and in all these years I have had that hope; but it has, and does yet at times, grow very faint. I live in darkness so much of my time, it seems the most of my time that I am in darkness, doubts and fears; not doubting the power of the omnipotent God, but fearing that I have all these years been professing something that I do not possess; caught at the shadow, while the substance passed by. O! if I am deceived, most miserable is my condition. God knows my heart, that I do not want to deceive any one; and I thank God that I know I cannot deceive him. I try to ask him, the most of my time, that if I am deceived he would undeceive me. At times my faith is so strong in him that I believe at evening time it will be light with me. In my younger days I would think that if I lived to be old I would be good; but alas!

the older I get the more of my imperfections I see. Like Paul, I can say, "For what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that I do." I often think that if I had experienced such a change as I hear some tell of, or some that I read in the SIGNS, I would not live so much of my time in darkness, doubts and fears. Some tell us that all nature seemed to be changed, the trees all seemed to be rejoicing, and the birds seemed to be praising God.

"Tis a point I long to know,
Oft it causes anxious thought,
Do I love the Lord, or no?
Am I his, or am I not?"

All the words of this good old song suit my case. I have to acknowledge with shame that I do not live in the discharge of my duty, as I think a professed follower of Christ should. Sometimes when I bow in the presence of my God, to try to pour out my soul in prayer to him, and my eyes overflow with tears, I feel rejoiced; but this is only at times. I have at times bowed the knee in prayer, and before I would get up I have asked the Lord if what I had tried to say was a sin. My God knows all about me, better than I know myself. If I know my own heart, the greatest desire I have in this world is to be a christian; but O how far from being a christian I feel myself to be! I think surely no one that is a christian ever has so many sinful thoughts as I do. I have never in all my long life had any good works to boast of, like some I have heard talk. My good works would be all as filthy rags, and like the fig-leaf aprons that our first parents made in the garden; all of no account. I know that I do hunger and thirst after righteousness. I love to hear the dear brethren and sisters talk of the things of the kingdom; and I know this, if I know anything, that if I am ever saved, it will be by grace, and grace alone, free and unmerited on my part. Now, brethren, with all my shortcomings and imperfections, doubts and fears, coldness and leanness in spiritual things, yet I daily crave to be spiritually minded.

Brethren editors, if you see anything in this worth publishing, do so; if not, all will be right with me. This is my first attempt to write for publication. Please remember me at the throne of grace. Please give your views on Isa. lxxv. 20.

A POOR SINNER.

HAMMACK, Ky., Sept. 17, 1893.

VERY DEAR BROTHER COX:—I was very glad to read your letter in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, in answer to my inquiry on Jude vi. 12. You said you did not know whether I was a brother or sister. If I am anything to the dear family of God I am a brother; but I very often feel that I am the least of all saints, if one at all.

Some months ago I wrote to brethren Beebe for their views on Heb. xi. 35, but I have never heard from them on the subject. Since then I believe the Lord has shown me the true meaning of the Scripture. What I wanted to know was the meaning of the words, "And others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection." I could not understand how one christian could enjoy more of the glory of God, in the eternal world, than another; for I believe we are all one family, and that one will receive as much as the other. Although some may undergo more severe afflictions in this life, yet I do not believe their happiness will be any greater than those who have not been so much afflicted.

The apostle was treating of faith; the faith, as Peter expressed it, of God's elect. I understand this faith to be the gift of God. Without this faith it is impossible to please God. Through this faith we understand the worlds were framed by the word of God. Through this faith the apostles and prophets would not accept deliverance at the hands of man, but were tortured, that they might obtain a better resurrection. Jesus says, John xii. 25, "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." But, my brother, what is it that makes a man hate his life in this sin-defiled world? Is it not that faith which God has implanted within him by his Holy Spirit? Surely it is. It was faith that drove Peter to Christ when many of the disciples turned back and walked no more with him. And Peter said, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God."

We find in the fifth chapter of John only two resurrections spoken of; a resurrection unto life, and a resurrection unto damnation. Here we find that those who have done good will be raised unto life, and those who have done evil will be raised unto damnation. Well, what is it to do good? Is it not to maintain our integrity, as did faithful Job? Then, if those old prophets would not accept of deliverance from being tortured, that they might obtain a better resurrection, it was through the faith that God had implanted within them, and not by anything they had done within themselves. So we see that a resurrection unto life is the better resurrection here spoken of.

Dear brother, after reading these few scattering remarks, if you think they would be of any comfort to a poor child of God, you may send them to the SIGNS to be published; but if not, consign them to the wastebasket.

Your brother in hope of eternal life. Write to me. I love to correspond with the poor and afflicted people of God.

ELDAN BARTLETT.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—BELOVED BRETHREN:—It is with a degree of gratitude to our God, who keeps his beloved Zion, as well as the feet of his saints, that I drop you this note, feeling to say, "The Lord is my refuge and strength," yet well knowing how utterly unworthy I am to receive the many mercies and favors from his hand during all my journey as a believer and a professor of faith in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The longer I live the more I know of my weakness, and the less I feel like talking about the wonders of his hand to helpless sinners. Yet there is no subject I so much like to meditate upon. But am I one of the number? The Lord knows them that are his. There I leave it, hoping I am his.

The Lord has remembered us of late by adding to our number (the Second Church of Roxbury) by baptism; and to-day brother Keene baptized a dear young sister in the Middletown Church. So amidst the losses in number by death, the gracious God brings others to confess his great name.

We regret the removal of our dear brother Keene as a preacher from our midst, while feeling a sympathy for our brethren in North Berwick, Maine. We must say, The will of the Lord be done, trusting that in his new field of labor the Lord will be with him unto the edification and mutual comfort of the saints.

Dear brethren, I do feel day by day settled in the truth of God's word, and can say by way of inquiry of my own heart before the Lord,

"Hast thou a lamb in all thy flock
I would disdain to feed?
Hast thou a foe before whose face
I fear thy cause to plead?"

I am glad the Lord knows my heart. With love to all the household of faith, I am affectionately yours,

J. D. HUBBELL.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—August 21st, 1893, at her home in the village of Oak Hill, Peoria Co., Ill., Mrs. Sarah Lynch.

Sister Lynch was born in Martinsburg, Va., May 6th, 1830, and was married to Joseph Lynch Sept. 7th, 1866. Removing soon afterward to Illinois, they settled in Oak Hill. She received a hope in Christ in early womanhood, and came before the Harmony Church about the year 1878, and was received into fellowship and baptized by the writer. She was very deeply experienced, and quite well-read in the Scriptures, as evidenced by her personal experience published in the SIGNS some ten years ago. Her maiden name was Hutchinson. She was a niece of the late John Hutchinson, of the same place. The late Elder John Stipp, of Oregon, was her uncle, and Elder G. Y. Stipp, of Illinois, was her own cousin. When the final summons came it found her ready, and she fell quietly and peacefully asleep, and was laid quietly and gently away in her last resting-place to await God's pleasure concerning the dead that die in the Lord.

Her funeral occurred August 24th, the services being conducted by the writer.

SMITH KETCHUM.

ELMWOOD, Ill., Oct. 14, 1893.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt... $5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1893.

NO. 44.

POETRY.

SONG IN AFFLICTION.

Selected by Mrs. M. E. Parsons.

LEAD me gently, tender Father,
Though the way be rough and dark;
Though the threatening tempests gather
Fiercely o'er my little bark.

I can trust thee—thou wilt never Leave thy helpless child alone;
O may storm and sunshine ever
Bear me toward thee, holy One.

Not for sunlight would I pray thee,
Days with earth-born radiance bright;
Give me, Lord, a heart to pay thee
Grateful praise through sorrow's night.

Faith that gilds all gloom with gladness,
Spans with rainbow-hues the cloud;
Joy triumphant over sadness,
Though the soul with grief be bowed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REMEMBER LOT'S WIFE.

Luke xvii. 32.

THE doctrine of God our Savior comes to us not by observation, neither by a great display, as men herald their doctrines, with loud-sounding instruments, with horses and chariots, but as the gentle showers upon the growing grain, and as the dew which is distilled in the quietude and secrecy of the night. It finds lodgement in our hearts by a process that we know not of; therefore are we led in paths that we have not known.

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

By no manner of carnal searching or reasoning can we find out God. His knowledge and instruction is received only by those who are no more dead in sin, but who are alive in the salvation of God. The corn of wheat, when it is buried in the earth, is dissolved by death, the body becoming separated from the germ of life, which life is made manifest in growth, and goes on unto maturity; so with the children of a spiritual existence. When this mortal body, which is dead because of sin, is quickened by spiritual life, the growth in grace goes on, never ceasing, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." In ourselves we cannot observe the growth, and our doubts and discouragements arise, because we fear a growth in us has never been started; but hope sustains us, when faith shows unto us the growth in others, and assures us that only the eye of faith can perceive it at all. A growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ means volumes to him who is exercised by faith to taste the fruits thereof. It means a perilous and a weary journey. It means heartaches and sore afflictions. It means enemies from without, and enemies from within. It shows pillows of stone upon which the tired head has lain at night, to be turned into pillars of remembrance in the morning. And a foundation for all this unnatural disquietude is presented, a knowledge of the Adamic creature, by the reflection from the knowledge of the glory of God which we have received in and through our gracious Redeemer. Inasmuch then as our pathway is strewn with earthly obstacles, over which we trip and stumble, it behooves us to "remember" all the way the dear Lord hath led us in the past, that we may learn by past experience how to avoid such in the future. Faith lights the way, hope sustains us, and love directs us to the object of our desires. But experience is our teacher in all the daily deportment of our christian journey. As we stand and look upon the beautiful fields of ripened corn, which stands tall and graceful as it is being waved to and fro by the gentle south winds, and which only four months ago could not be seen above the ground, realizing that its growth is so gradual and silent that no man can see it grow, we have a faint conception of how we grow in grace, and how our lessons are ministered unto us, and how unconscious we are that we learn at all. "Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little, and there a little."—Isa. xxviii. 9, 10. In our experience there are almost always one or more circumstances connected with our travel to which we can look back with some assurance, and which we can more clearly remember than some others. In like manner, the Savior exhorting us to watchfulness and prayer, especially with regard to the last perilous times, carries our minds away back to the days of Sodom and Gomorrah, enjoining us to "remember Lot's wife." For hers is a character that has stood throughout all ages, as a warning to poor pilgrims that pass her way; and as plate the sad result of her disobedience, so the very remembrance is a lesson learned, to the girding up of our loins; and although we have to learn the lesson many times, yet each time we remember we are still more strengthened to hold on our way.

In the character which we are to remember, there are three things to be considered. First, the city of destruction from which the woman fled. Second, the act of disobedience and its results. Third, the working of all the circumstances together for good to them that love God.

The city of Sodom well represents this world with its multitude of inhabitants, and the church as a separate people in the world, but not of it, and is a typical pen-picture of the Scripture as recorded by John, "And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness." As in the days of Sodom and Gomorrah, when all the world followed after strange gods, save a few souls, the peculiar treasure of the Lord, who worshiped the Lord the true God, so in these later days in which we live, the world runs riot with all manner of evil and mockery, save a few souls who have not bowed the knee to Baal, standing separate from the world, and who are the people of the living God. The angels of the Lord sent the Lord's people out of the doomed city before it was destroyed by fire from heaven. So also hath he given his angels charge concerning his elect, whereby, being exercised, they do flee from the wrath to come, realizing they were born in the city of destruction, which the fire of God's wrath must destroy; and now they seek a city "which hath foundations, whose maker and builder is God." Since the world was made, and sin entered into the world, the carnal mind of man has been and is enmity to God, and therefore cannot, neither desires to, worship him. The children of God, who were by nature children of wrath even as others, are turned about from the love of the world, by the love of God which is shed abroad in their hearts; and they now love God, because he first loved them, and gave himself for them, in the person of his only begotten Son. They are the only people who realize the torments of a hell, or who have felt the burning heat of the fire which consumes all flesh. None others have cause to flee, for this world is all they desire. Even the sons-in-law of Lot refused to listen to their father-in-law when he gave them the message of the angels that their city would be destroyed. "He seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law." So while the world is wasting its breath, crying every one to his neighbor, "Come, and we will save you," the people of God are waiting patiently for the Lord, outside the walls of the doomed city, with the sweet cry of thankfulness in their heart to the Lord, who has shown them great mercy.

The act of disobedience and its results. Jesus said, "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." By which kingdom we understand him to mean, not the heaven of immortal glory, but the kingdom which he has set up within us, and over which he is the King, in this time state. Now, whosoever entereth this kingdom, and looketh back to the beggarly elements of the world, for the satisfying of his desires, is not fit for the kingdom; therefore he dies to all the comforts, benefits and joys of it. This, however, is not a falling from grace, as some would have us believe, "But a certain looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." It effects our time salvation only; for the eternal life of the saints is preserved in Christ Jesus, and cannot be touched. Lot's wife, whom we do well to remember, is a striking example of this; for while she had turned her back upon Sodom and Gomorrah, there were many things she had left behind her, dear to her heart, and for which her heart yearned, even to cause her to disregard the command of the angel of the Lord, who said, "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee; neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountains, lest thou be consumed." But yielding to the desires of her flesh, she looked back, "And she became a pillar of salt." The becoming "A pillar of salt" is not of ordinary significance, but most important; for it stands as an unalterable truth, in proof of the doctrine of the perseverance of the saints. Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men." But however much it may lose its savor, it continues always to be salt, never changing to any other substance. Thus may we cling to the truism, "Once a saint, always a saint."

The causes therefore by which the savor of the salt is lost are those which bring tribulation, sorrow and affliction upon the poor child who is fleeing from the city of destruction. In the hour of weakness he falls from his first estate; he looks back to the place from whence he came; his comfort and joy and consolation are all taken from him, and he becomes a standing pillar of warning to all who pass him by; and the inscription is written upon him so plainly that all who run may read; and it is always this, "Remember Lot's wife." When we think we are strong, and may not fall because of looking back, then do we discover how weak we are. Sometimes we are all unconscious how strongly the earthly ties are pulling us away, and making us unfit for the kingdom; and ere we are aware, we are in the mire, our clothing soiled and torn, and perhaps we have dragged a confiding brother down with us; and as our eyes are opened to our sad and lost condition, we realize at the same time what "a fearful thing [it is] to fall into the hands of the living God."

The working of all the circumstances for good to them that love God. It is not possible to make a comparison, or even show the contrast, between the perfection of God and the imperfection of man, because the knowledge of the perfection of God is far beyond our comprehension; and even should we comprehend it for a moment, then it would be entirely beyond our feeble expression. The apostle got but a glimpse, and saw things unlawful (impossible) to utter. It is not possible for us, who are under law, to comprehend him who is above all law; and when our brethren charge us, saying, "If you say thus and so, you make God the author of sin," they utter words without knowledge. We cannot make God the author of anything. He is infinitely beyond our judgment, beyond our jurisdiction, beyond our highest flight of thought, beyond everything of which we have any conception; so that with the measure of wisdom and knowledge appointed unto us, we can only stand and behold the wondrous harmony and beauty of redeeming love, and the wondrous power of reigning grace, with wonder, with awe, and with reverence. When the word of inspiration tells us that "we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose," and we trace out and gather up the circumstances of the life of one of the saints, we can plainly see in what beautiful harmony it all is with such declarations of holy writ.

Let us for a moment reopen the page, and take up the thread of the life of the wife of Lot. Lot was of the family of Abram, who was sent out of his own country and from his idols, separated from the world, and constituting the head of a peculiar people, known to this day as the people of God's peculiar care, and a type of the church or body of Christ. This woman, being Lot's wife, was the bosom of his family; therefore whithersoever he went she should follow, because the wife is lawfully subject to her husband. So in the affairs of the church, which is subject to the law of life which is in Christ Jesus. Lot with his wife and children are a representative family, typifying the church in the world, yet separate from the world. Each one of that family present the peculiar characteristics of the saints of God in their fleshly weakness. Lot in his weakness desired to go to the little city called Zoar, rather than to the mountains, where he was commanded to go. The daughters each deceived their father, and so became the mothers to the heads of two tribes, both antagonistic to the tribes of Israel; and now, all things working together for good, out of the tribe of Moab, from the elder daughter, sprang Ruth, the mother of Obed, the father of Jesse, the father of David. Lot's wife manifested the same willingness to flee for her life as did the others; and, be it known, she possessed a mother's love; and she left daughters in Sodom, who were the wives of her sons-in-law. And while the act of disobedience was just as sinful, she was presented with the greater temptation to look back. So in the enjoinder to "Remember Lot's wife," we are to look beyond the mere fact that it was one of the "salt of the earth" that looked back; but we must look at the inner life of her who yielded to great and manifold temptations, even greater than any presented to us, and we have fallen; that by so considering her many temptations, and the strength of her adversaries, we may gird up our loins, pressing forward, turning not back; that we may give the Father none occasion to use his rod upon us. And this is the great good which has resulted to them that love God in all ages, the woman being an example by which we through fear and trembling do walk in the path of the just, as we "Remember Lot's wife."

B. F. COULTER.

1910 N. 22d St., PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

BATH, Maine, Aug. 28, 1893.

ELDER S. H. DURAND—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I find my mind filled with the thought of the love God has for us, and I feel like talking with you about it, knowing you have been very patient with me in the past. He loved us when we were dead in sin, quickened us, led us about and instructed us, and gave us the same love wherewith he loved us; and how very kind and tender hearted it makes us. How gentle and forbearing we are to our brethren when this love is in exercise in our hearts. The only reason we can give for loving God is "because he first loved us." He gave us strength to obey his commands, and "in keeping of them there is great reward." It is in him we live, move, and have our being. It is such a wonderful love to me while I am made to meditate upon it. I find these words very sweet, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!"

It has been the will of God to give me evidences of having this love shed abroad in my heart, so I have rejoiced in Christ Jesus and walked joyfully. You will never know the comfort some words gave me which you wrote in a letter to me only a few months after you were here; for it is impossible for me to tell you with my pen, or even if I could speak face to face with you. The Lord had made me know a sweet peace and joy which the world could not give. He had enabled me to express it to you, and then gave you the right words to write, and filled my heart with comfort as I read them; and they have often returned, bringing some of that comfort. This is the reason I have felt like writing to you now. The evidence has been so sweetly felt of my acceptance with the Beloved, that I am loved with an everlasting love, and was chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. As my mind was led to one passage of Scripture, and then another, concerning the love of God to a sinner like me, and the joy filled my heart, your words returned. Probably you have forgotten them, although I may have repeated them to you. I think I have felt more like repeating them when I have been writing to others. "The Lord has greatly blessed you with the gift of spiritual things, that more than compensate for the loss of anything and everything of a temporal character." I do think that if every desire and ambition had been granted me in worldly pleasures, I should not have been satisfied. But, my dear brother, when spiritual joy has been given me I could say, "It is enough." I was satisfied. O! so content and happy, my joy was truly unspeakable. A friend called on me the other day, who is alone in the world, and in our conversation she spoke of no one caring whether she lived or died. I thought about it after she went away, and of course thought that I could not have my parents many more years, and my brothers and sisters might be taken before I was, when it came like a flash, "You will always have your brethren; they will miss you." I could not help feeling a great desire to be kept, so my walk and conversation might never offend one of my brethren, that I might ever dwell with them while here in this world. They are very dear to me, and many happy and peaceful hours have been spent with them; not only when I have seen them face to face, but when I have been using my pen as I am now. I am often so completely absorbed in trying to write of what is in my mind, I feel I am with the one I am writing to, and the cares and perplexities which come in our every day life, slip away from me as they do in the presence of my brethren when we are talking of things of the kingdom, and the power of God. I hope this is my theme in every letter. I know the strain seems feeble when I am in darkness and destitute of spiritual joy, but I hope it will never vary from the key note, Jesus, the one altogether lovely, the Savior, the Son of God, the Word which was in the beginning, and was with God, and was God. That Word was made flesh, and dwelt among men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. He bore the sins of his people in his own body on the tree. He died, was laid in the tomb, and at the appointed time he arose from the dead, and every heir of glory was with him.

"Of God's great love, ere time began,
His thoughts of peace to rebel man,
Let Zion sing, nor e'er refrain,
To aid the sweet, immortal strain."

"Wake then, my soul, thy God to praise,
In all thy sweetest, noblest lays;
No seraph's song should rival thine,
A sinner saved by grace divine."

I have thought, since sister Bessie sent me her last letter, and told me you had baptized sister Lizzie Himes and her brother, that you must feel a sacred pleasure in leading those whom you believe to be children of God into the water and baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Yourself being called and set apart for the preaching of the gospel, and to attend to the ordinances of God's house, must cause you a deep sense of unworthiness; and yet every time you are made to feel your own weakness and inability, you are more firmly established that with God all things are possible. You are nothing; Christ is all. I think you will perceive my mind has been taken from the disappointment of not seeing you, and made to dwell upon heavenly things, without my saying so. I still feel sorry I cannot see you this year, but I hope the earthen vessel which contains the treasure I have been writing about will be spared and permitted to visit us next year. It is the will of God for this treasure to be in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. I am getting ready to meet the brethren at Berwick next Friday, and hope it is the Lord's will for me to go. I should be glad to find a letter from you when I get home, as that would be next best to seeing you. I am going to close my letter on this sheet of paper, and hope you will not be weary reading it, or weary listening to it if sister Durand or Bessie reads it to you. I hope I have been able to express clearly that Jesus is the name which is precious to me.

"Jesus! the name that calms my fears,
And bids my sorrows cease."

I hope this will find you all in usual health, and that the Lord will make you realize his goodness to you every moment of your lives, and you will taste the same joy which he gives me. Have I tired you out yet with my letters? I have not grown weary writing, for the joy of the theme prevents me. My parents send love to you all. I am always glad when a letter comes from either of you. God alone can reconcile us to his will and restore unto us the joy of his salvation.

Your sister,

ATTIE A. CURTIS.

ASHLAND, ILL., Nov 7, 1892.

ELDER I. N. VANMETER—KIND FRIEND:—I have been thinking for a long while I would like to have a talk with you regarding the trouble I am in, caused by living out of the church I believe to be the church of Jesus Christ. As you doubtless know, I have been identified with the M. E. Church; that is, my name they seemed determined to retain on their church-book, after many times requesting different ministers in charge to erase it, for the reason that I was no Methodist, never was, and never could be. It is true I knew little of their doctrine when I united with them, being rather young, and was over persuaded. I have never felt at home among them. I felt that I was doing myself an injustice, claiming to be something I was not, by allowing them thus to retain my name; but when I so many times in all kindness asked the favor, I cannot see why it was, unless they think more of numbers than anything else. I sometimes think they do. The last talk I had with any of their ministers in charge was about two years ago, when Mr. Haco had charge of the circuit. Accompanied by one of the sisters I went to the parsonage, where we had a lengthy talk, I insisting that I was no believer in the doctrine he advocated, and I hoped he would be kind enough to erase my name. I told him, having no faith in the doctrine, I considered it a sin to claim to be something I was not. I also told him I was not satisfied with the baptism I received, as they preached one thing and practiced others. I feel that it is a punishment of which I am justly deserving for allowing myself to be led contrary to my better judgment by vain mortals to unite myself again to the world, after my dear Savior had taken my feet from the mire and the clay, and set them on the Rock of Ages, and put a new song in my mouth, even praises to his name. I have never been dissatisfied with my loving Savior, but many times with my sinful self. When overtaken with grief so deep, I felt that only for His dear loving arm to bear me up I never could have survived such deep sorrow. But how precious to my soul in my loneliness, a poor orphan, without dear mother or father to look to for earthly comforts and advice. I am made to say, "Thy will be done" in all things. I do not mean to murmur or complain, for while this is my lot his grace has been sufficient for me in every time of need. While under conviction, for days and nights I found myself powerless to do anything to merit my everlasting salvation. Then was the wonderful power and beauty of God's love shown to me. Then was I made to rejoice in a Savior's love, and see the vanity of human help. O that beautiful light that shone around me and made me so happy in a Savior's love. I have my dark and doubtful seasons, but yet ten thousand worlds like this I would not accept in exchange for the little hope I have. I come to you as to an earthly parent, and ask you what I had best do? I feel too unworthy to come before the church, and again I feel that I can never be doing what I realize to be my duty to God, and for my earthly comfort, living outside of the church and away from the dear people of God, the Primitive Baptists, "saved by grace." I listened to Elder Murray last Sunday, from your accustomed pulpit, to this text, "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."—Hebrews v. 9. It was a beautiful discourse. I enjoyed it. Mrs. Bone, of Richland, was received as a candidate for baptism. For December meeting there are to be present three able ministers, beside yourself, if so that you can be present. I was very sorry to learn that your dear companion was sick. I trust she may be spared to cheer and comfort you the few remaining years you may remain to talk to the little ones at Yatesville, and other points, if it be the will of our blessed Redeemer. I may have written too much, but I want an expression from you, so thus address you on this, to me, the dearest theme mortals here below can talk about. With kind regards to your family (although strangers yet I feel to know them) I conclude.

Very respectfully,

MATTIE WALKER.

MACOMB, ILL.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I inclose you a letter written to me by Miss Mattie Walker, of Ashland, now of Jacksonville, Ill., which some of your patrons desire to see in the SIGNS. I have just got her consent to have it published, though she had intended it for me only as a private letter. At the time she wrote I was watching over my sick wife for many weeks, and could not meet with the church where I had frequently met the writer of the inclosed letter, being about eighty miles from the church. I wrote to her to go to the church (Union) at Yatesville, where I have attended more than twenty-five years. She did so last December, and she and three others were baptized by Elder G. W. Murray, and seems to be at home.

I. N. VANMETER.

SUNDAY, Sept. 24, 1893.

ELDER WM. L. BEEBE—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I have often expressed to you the pleasure I derive from reading the editorials that appear from time to time in our dear "family paper," also the communications from our loved kindred in Christ with which it so richly abounds.

My desire is to read the paper very carefully, and I am never satisfied with a hurried glance at its contents. As I perused the editorial in the issue of the thirteenth instant, it was with a feeling of gratitude to the God of all mercies that "Infidel Baptist Doctrine" had under the guidance of the Spirit received at your hands such a faithful rebuke.

I beg to assure you of my hearty approval and appreciation of all you have written on the subject. If God was as man, the blasphemous language of the learned D. D. would not be tolerated. God is indeed long suffering, else such characters would be stricken down.

I do truly feel grateful to my heavenly Father, that although I was once a member of the sect with which this D. D. stands identified, I never was permitted to believe or endorse the God-dishonoring doctrine he holds. Although a "New School Baptist," a great worker, a zealous Sunday-school teacher, a regular attendant at the meetings of the church, and a participant in all the religious exercises and worldly entertainments that go hand in hand with them, I never felt that I could in any way help the sovereign Ruler of the universe in the salvation of a sinner.

I tried with such ability as I trust the Lord gave me to point out to my Sunday-school scholars the distinction between the righteous and the ungodly. The difference between light and darkness. The efficacy of the blood of Christ Jesus to save from all sin, the truth ever being precious to me that he alone could and did apply that cleansing blood. That salvation is of the Lord, of grace, and not of works.

While it is true that I walked with the New School Baptists for many years, and during that time my eyes were blinded, yet there is a sense in which I did not walk with them, though identified with them. I do feel that the Lord led me (like Jacob) about and instructed me, for each year the gulf between me and the N. S. B. church seemed to widen. At last I was brought to the "ends of the earth," and made to look and behold "Zion, the city of our solemnities," and "Jerusalem a quiet habitation."

How beautiful that broad river and stream wherein no galley with oars and no gallant ships pass, looked to me as the Lord presented it to my view, while your father proclaimed the precious truth in my hearing.

When I hear New School Baptists advocating such false doctrine as your able editorial refutes, I feel like crying aloud, "I never was of that order." How it must wound the feelings of some poor, hungering, dissatisfied soul to hear such utterances from the lips of one they have been led to regard and esteem as a true minister of Christ Jesus.

Sometimes it is in this way that the Lord calls a dear one out from the ranks of Babylon and turns his or her face Zionward.

It is a comfort to know that God reigns, and everything that transpires is only working out his eternal decrees. At times it seems the grosser the error, the more clearly shines forth the truth to those who have been given eyes to see.

Your sister in Christ,

H. M. HOBBS.

NEW YORK CITY, No. 186 East 72nd St.

ST. LOUIS, Mich., Oct. 8, 1893.

EDITORS SIGNS OF THE TIMES:—

I have received the SIGNS for October 4th, which is, as usual, richly laden with food from the Master's table, for God's humble poor. First, there is the letter of sister Adela Jones, about love and hatred natural and spiritual, given in a very modest and (to me) experimental manner; of the workings of Christ in us the hope of glory, as I sometimes hope to have felt, causing us to hate the things we once loved, and to love the things we once hated. Natural love is proper in its place; but alas! I feel another law, warring against the law of the Spirit of Christ, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members, so that I cannot do the things that I would; for when I would do good, evil is present with me. The love of money, which our sister spoke of, is the root of all evil, and I have felt its withering effects, and have seen some of its devastating and cruel work. But love for husband, wife, children, and such, is not evil in a natural sense; but when we allow this love to influence us so as to break the law of love to Jesus, it becomes sin to us; and then we hate it with the mind of Christ, although it may hold us in captivity for a season; for we hate with the pure mind the very garments spotted with the flesh.

Second, there is the letter of our beloved brother Powell, of Sandusky, Alabama, of no uncertain sound. It seems that the Lord is about to prepare his ministers to remove everything that offends from his church, which includes all sickly sentimentalism, and false doctrine, and useless practices, which are not according to sound doctrine, that the things which cannot be shaken may remain, which will be the apostles' doctrine.

Dear editors, you may publish this if you think best.

Yours in love,

DAVID TITMUS.

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 1, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE BRAZEN SERPENT.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Please give your views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, on Numbers xxi. 8, and greatly oblige a seeker for the truth,
T. D. BOAZ.

MAYFIELD, Ky., Sept. 23, 1893.

R E P L Y .

"AND the Lord said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole; and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live."—Num. xxi. 8.

Among all the types given to the children of God under the Mosaic dispensation perhaps none more clearly than this circumstance presents the doctrine of salvation by grace through the atonement of Jesus. In order to a correct understanding of the significance of the figure it is necessary to observe all the incidents connected with that which is written in this verse. As well might one expect to appreciate the true significance of a picture by seeing only a detached portion of it, as to understand a scriptural type by studying an abstract expression of the record in which it is written. Every character and every circumstance presented in the account of the manner in which the Lord gave this commandment to Moses must be seen as the shadow of that substance in which the body of Christ is revealed as the end of all prophecy, and as the antitype of all the stars in the dark firmament of the heavens of the patriarchal and Jewish dispensations. It should always be remembered in reading the Scriptures of the Old Testament, that they are bearing witness of Jesus, and any interpretation of their testimony is necessarily wrong if it fails to speak of him as the end of all revelation.

In the first place, it must be noted that there is no account that any other nations were affected by the affliction under which the people of Israel suffered on this occasion, by reason of which they confessed their sin, and besought that Moses would pray for their deliverance. It was the Lord who sent among the people of Israel fiery serpents which bit the people; "and much people of Israel died." This was the nation whom God had chosen as his own peculiar people, and with whom he had established his covenant in their father Abraham. In rebellion against the commandment of the Lord they transgressed the covenant which the Lord had given to them, and by the terms of that covenant they must suffer the penalty of their disobedience. The fiery serpents were not merely permitted to come among the people, and bite such of them as were not cautious to avoid them; the same Lord who brought Israel out of Egypt, was he who sent this plague upon them. As easily might one escape the lightning which is sent for his destruction, as one of those rebellious Israelites could avoid the bite of those fiery serpents which the Lord sent among the people. Infidels and idolaters may indulge in speculation as to where those fiery serpents originated; it is enough for the humble followers of Jesus to know that they obeyed the will of our God in punishing his rebellious natural people. So, in the antitype, the will of our Lord is done in every stroke of his chastening rod which falls upon his disobedient people. But it must be remembered that even those whose carcasses fell in the wilderness did not become uncircumcised heathen in death; they were at last dead Israelites. Death did not change their relation to Abraham in whom they were the chosen nation of the Lord. In dying in the wilderness they were cut off from the enjoyment of the land of Canaan; but that inheritance does not typify the everlasting bliss of the saints in glory. So long as Israel occupied that promised land they were subject to continual afflictions from the enemies whom the Lord had commanded to be round about them, and from the Canaanites whom they never could exterminate from among them. Surely this is not typical of the final glory of the redeemed people of our God. They who hope in the salvation of the Lord rest in the assurance that there is no sin nor sorrow in that throne where they hope to reign with Jesus in the glory which was his before the world was. In that eternal sabbath they shall be satisfied when they awake with the perfect likeness of their glorified Lord. In the record under consideration, as in all the types of prophecy, the shadow of things in the gospel day is accurately given. This is expressly written as the purpose of God in all the calamities visited upon the nation of Israel. Referring to these judgments, Paul says, "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come. Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. x. 11, 12.

Let it be observed that the chosen people of God had murmured under the weariness of the way in which they had been led, and spoken against God and against Moses, and despised the food which had been furnished for their support in journeying through the wilderness. Then the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died. Under this visitation of the chastening of the Lord the people came to Moses confessing their sin in speaking against the Lord and against him, and besought him to pray unto the Lord that he would take away the serpents from them. In complying with their prayer, and interceding for them, Moses appears as a type of Jesus the Mediator of the everlasting covenant. As the symbol of the inexorable law he could make no intercession for any sinner. The law demands the life of every transgressor. But infinite mercy and wisdom presented in the answer to the prayer of Moses the typical expression of the whole gospel of the grace of God. It was by the commandment of that same God whose law they had transgressed, in consequence of which they were delivered to the destroying serpents, Moses was directed to make a fiery serpent, and set it on a pole. The learning of the Egyptians had not taught Moses that this was the proper remedy for the deadly bite of those fiery serpents. It was the one way in which God would afford relief to the distressed sinners against his covenant. In this is displayed the predestinating purpose which made this experience of the rebellious Israelites the accurate figure of the great deliverance of the subjects of that election of God by which Jesus saves his people from their sins. Divine wisdom shines in the whole of this vivid expression of the testimony of Jesus. Not only is the prayer of Moses typical of the effectual intercession of Jesus for all his redeemed Israel; it also declares the wonderful truth that the voice of divine justice speaks the deliverance of all for whom Jesus intercedes. This indispensable principle is not seen by the wise and prudent teachers of carnal religion. As the same law which condemned the sinner is fully satisfied in the sacrifice of Jesus, so justice commands, "Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom."—Job xxxiii. 24. That perfect and satisfactory ransom is not silver and gold. No price can be acceptable as a bribe to turn away the sword of divine justice. The law of God finds in Jesus the very life of all his members, which alone can satisfy and honor its utmost requirement. But he must be made sin, which is the antitype of the fiery serpents whose terrible bite caused the people to die. So Paul declares, of God, that "He hath made him [Christ] to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."—1 Cor. v. 21. There is no possibility of mistaking the application of this figure, since it is explained by Jesus as signifying what must be done to himself. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John iii. 14, 15. Since this settles the application of the type, it only remains for those who love the truth to trace the particulars in which it is manifested in their individual experience.

The fiery serpents which were sent among the people well represent the effects of the sins which bring death to all the comfort of the saints. Not even the apostles and inspired prophets were free from the distress occasioned by the bite of these deadly serpents. It was this which caused Paul to cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" As in the figure, the transgression of the commandment of God by Adam brought death upon all his race, so in the antitype, in the church which is the body of Christ, every member is justified freely in the perfect righteousness of him who is head over all things to that body. Since all the sins of all his body were borne by Jesus in his one offering of himself, there can be no possibility that they for whom he died should be yet required to render atonement for themselves. It is not therefore under the law of sin and death that the saints are to be arraigned for judgment. Yet they are not without law to God, but under the law to Christ.—1 Cor. ix. 21. While natural religionists cannot see any law for the restraint of such as are under no obligation to the law of a carnal commandment, those who are taught of God know their allegiance to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, by which they find true liberty in yielding their members servants to righteousness. When they are captivated by the alluring devices of sin, in that bondage of corruption they find the real death of all their spiritual comfort, which is more terrible than the natural death which resulted from the bite of the typical serpents which afflicted the murmuring subjects of Moses. For this cause the admonition is left on record for our learning, "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;) and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. Then after citing the severity of that judgment which was visited upon the despiser of Moses' law, and contrasting his guilt with the greater wickedness of him who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace, the reason is given, "For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."—Heb. x. 23-31. These just judgments with which the Lord visits his disobedient people are the fiery serpents known to the experience of the saints. But it must not be forgotten that the Lord provided for the bitten Israelite the only relief ever known as the antidote for this deadly bite. This is found alone in the sight of Jesus, who was lifted up as the fulfillment of the prophetic sign recorded in our text. Not only in the redemption of his people from death in their first deliverance, but in all their subsequent conflict while striving against sin, the sight of this antitypical Serpent who is lifted up for all the sins of his people, is the only living antidote for their follies and transgression against the perfection of his infinite holiness. Whenever they look away from this divinely provided remedy they die to all hope of deliverance from guilt. But every one who has fled for refuge to lay hold on this blessed hope which is set before the chosen people of God, obeys the word of the Lord who says, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else." —Isa. xlv. 22. It is only as he was made to be sin for his people that our Lord Jesus can be typified by this serpent of brass, which Moses made and put upon a pole. In that humiliation he is well represented also by the serpent as the type of wisdom; for he learned obedience by the things which he suffered. He knows what is the power of sin and temptation, by personal experience in all points. He was made a curse for us; and it is only when this wonderful mystery is seen by the saints that they can find life in trusting the efficacy of his blood for the remission of their sins. Thus this typical serpent of brass testifies to the saints that unfailing grace which saves them from all their daily sins against his commandments in the gospel kingdom, as well as from that curse of the law of sin and death, under which they were condemned as children of the first Adam. The ever living Mediator of the new covenant is our spiritual Brazen Serpent; without him there could be no living hope in the heart of any conscious sinner; but whosoever liveth and believeth in him shall never die. He says, "Because I live, ye shall live also." May the Spirit of truth apply this assurance of his grace to the comfort of every troubled believer, and to the name of Jesus be unceasing praises evermore. Amen.

GONE TO THE BINDER.

AN unusually large and sudden demand for our small type cloth-bound hymn book has entirely exhausted our supply, but the sheets for a new lot are now printed and in the hands of the binder, and we expect to have them ready for delivery sometime during the present month. We have a number of orders now on hand which we will fill at the earliest possible day. Parties who have orders now in, and prefer to do so, can remit the balance and have any of the other styles of binding mailed them immediately. Any one wishing to have their money returned, if they will inform us, we will refund it to them.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Corresponding Meeting of Virginia, in session with the Ebenezer Church, Loudoun County, Va., Oct. 11th, 12th and 13th, 1893, to the several churches and associations with which we correspond, sendeth greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Another year has been rolled back on the calendar of time since it was our privilege to meet together as the Corresponding Meeting of Virginia; and though during that interval time with her thin fingers has removed some dear ones whose privilege it was to meet with us in days that are past, and whose faces we shall see no more on earth, yet they have left behind them a memory in our hearts, a remembrance that is fragrant with the incense of love, which time cannot remove. It is written, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." And though they are now absent in body, yet spiritually in time we hope we have experienced with them that death, and have tasted of the world to come experimentally in our own souls, looking forward to the coming of our Lord Jesus to take us also to our heavenly home, where we shall see Jesus as he is, and be satisfied; for the psalmist declares, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

Dear brethren, in writing you this letter our desire is to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance. We are willing to let the potsherd of the earth strive with the potsherd. Let us be as little children at the feet of Jesus and our brethren, and as much as in us lies follow the example of our Lord and Master.

The churches of the Corresponding Meeting of Virginia are dwelling in peace. There are no contentious spirits amongst us that we know of. Brotherly love seems to abound throughout the churches, and the members esteem each other as better than themselves. Our ministers come to us in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. They have no dogmas of their own to preach. Christ and him crucified is the burden of the word they bear unto us, as the way, the truth and the life. The members of the churches manifest that brotherly love one toward another that is characteristic of Primitive Baptists, causing our meetings to be pleasant, in the enjoyment of each other's company. Peace and love abound among the churches of the Corresponding Meeting of Virginia. We feel to pity those who speak evil against us. Our desire is to glory in the cross of Christ, and to suffer reproach for his name's sake, and that brotherly love may continue throughout our correspondence. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore."

Our mind is directed to the letter of the apostle Paul to the Ephesians, second chapter. "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

Dear brethren, the quickened sinner realizes the force of the apostle's language. He can testify to the truth of having been dead in trespasses and sins, and of walking according to the course of this world, of the prince of the power of the air, and of manifesting that spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience; having had his conversation in the lusts of the flesh, fulfilling the desires thereof; and in all his nature, as the production of a disobedient heart, showing himself to be a child of wrath, and without God or hope in the world. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ." The word "hath" is in the past tense, and not the future, and is experimentally understood. The word "dead" is also in the past tense. "Were dead in trespasses and sins." "Hath quickened us together with Christ." The psalmist says, "All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies." "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy, to deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine. Our soul waiteth for the Lord; he is our help and our shield. For our heart shall rejoice in him, because we have trusted in his holy name. Let thy mercy, O Lord, be upon us, according as we hope in thee."—Psalm xxxiii. 18-22.

Our experience, dear brethren, is the daily cry for mercy. The psalmist in the fifty-seventh psalm expresses the prayer of every quickened sinner, saying, "Be merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me; for my soul trusteth in thee; yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast. I will cry unto God most high, unto God that performeth all things for me. He shall send from heaven and save me from the reproach of him that that would swallow me up. Selah." The apostle says that this mercy is on account of his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins. It seems there was a cause beyond the present, reaching back to him who was in the beginning. The apostle, in this same chapter to which we have called your attention, says, "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Then this great love reaches back to the creation, as one of the ordinances of God; in which workmanship we have the vital unity of Christ and the church, his body, embraced in this creation. For the apostle says, speaking of Christ and the church, "For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church; for we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." "Created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them," by the work of love, working in the heart of the believer in Jesus. The prophet Jeremiah says, "The Lord hath appeared unto me of old, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee." Jesus in his prayer to the Father says, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world. O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee, but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it, that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them." Therefore the apostle could say, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast." Time would fail us to tell of this mercy and great love; for we know and feel and see but in part.

In conclusion we will say, in the words of the apostle, "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

Our meeting has been largely attended, the churches have been well represented, the reports from the churches are favorable, the brethren dwelling together in peace and unity, and there have been gatherings in some of the churches. The preaching has been good. Christ and him crucified has been preached, to the comfort of the saints.

Our next session is appointed to be held with Bethlehem Church, Prince William County, Virginia, to commence on Wednesday before the third Sunday in October, 1894, when and where we hope to meet you again.

J. N. BADGER, Mod.

G. G. GALLEHER, Clerk.

The Salisbury Old School Baptist Association, convened with the Indian-town Church, Oct. 18th, 19th and 20th, 1893, to the churches of which she is composed. Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

IN accordance with our established custom we present to you this our annual Circular. We have nothing new in doctrine to present, but that which is always new, however old it may be in respect to time. We realize by the teaching of the Spirit that all the rich provisions in our heavenly Father's storehouse are always both new and old, and are adequately sufficient for the edification of the church, the body of Christ, being complete in doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness, so that we may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Impressed with this truth, how appropriate is the admonition, "Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle."—2 Thess. ii. 15. The word "therefore" in this Scripture implies a reason and cause why we are thus admonished; and by reference to the 13th verse of the chapter the reason is given. "But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." If such be the case with us, brethren, therefore (for the reason given) stand fast, and hold the traditions which we have been taught. In order to stand firm and fast we must have a solid foundation to stand upon; and we are assured that "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Upon this rock the church is built, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. The fearful, trembling children of God, amid the ever-changing and shifting scenes of time and things temporal, have a sure foundation, a firm standing. The church of Christ, through trial and persecution for ages, has ever been able, through grace, to stand fast, immovable, always abounding, not in their own work, but in the work of the Lord, established and built upon the foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord, Is laid for your faith in his excellent word."

"Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle."

The Scriptures of divine truth present a distinctive difference between the traditions of men (commonly called theology) and the traditions taught by the word. Hence we are earnestly admonished by the apostle Paul to "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."—Col. ii. 8. Hence those who are taught by the word have learned that to follow after or hold the traditions as taught by the progressive religious teachers who now infest our land and country, is to disobey the teachings of the word, live after the flesh, and die to all spiritual enjoyment. These modern self-constituted teachers of progressive religion are included in the same offense as their prototype, the carnal Jews, to whom Jesus said, in scathing rebuke, "Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your traditions?"

It is said to the church by the prophet Isaiah, "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children."

The traditions which we are enjoined to hold is that which is taught by the word. It is written in our experience and engraved upon the tablet of our hearts. It is a tradition taught only in the school of Christ. The word teaches the heart, and every lesson is complete and effectual. By the word we are taught what poor, helpless sinners we are; that in us, that is, in our flesh, there dwelleth no good thing; making us abhor ourselves, like Job, and repent in dust and ashes; and when we are taught and realize our total depravity, we are made to realize the omnipotent power and absolute authority of our Teacher, learning by experience that "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart." O how searching is the word that tells us all things that ever we did. Is not this the Christ? The word not only kills, but makes alive; and through our experience we learn that salvation is alone of the Lord. Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but of his own mercy he saved us. The testimony of all the saints testifies to the same doctrine of salvation by grace, and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God. Glorious and eternal consolation, revealed unto us by the Spirit, that we were from the beginning chosen unto salvation, establishing us in the invulnerable doctrine of election, predestination, effectual calling, and eternal salvation of every vessel of mercy for whom Jesus died.

Therefore, brethren, beloved of the Lord, "Stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle."

The epistles of Paul, and all the teachings of the written word, are in confirmation of the teaching of the word or Spirit in the experience of every child of grace. Therefore if we have imbibed any tradition not in harmony with what is taught in the writings of the apostles, the judges in Israel, we do well to discard it at once, and repudiate that which is not in accordance with sound doctrine, as we have been taught by word and epistle. We feel bound to give thanks to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, that you, as an association of churches, have been kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ever since its constitution, free from all the numerous theories, dogmas and heresies of modern times. How thankful we should be.

Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good work.

T. M. POULSON, Mod.

J. H. TRUITT, Clerk.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—In complying with the request of our last annual meeting, I will address you a letter in the form of a Circular, and for a text will call your attention to the following Scripture, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."—Eph. ii. 8. The apostle said this grace was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Christ was as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world. Doubtless the Bible teaches eternal and unconditional election. Some are opposed to election as we Baptists preach it, and as the Bible teaches it. But we know that Christ and the apostles preached it; so when any oppose election they oppose the choice of God, the work of God. Suppose there were no such thing as eternal election, that God made no such choice, would you be willing for God to have his choice now? Would you rather risk God now than before the world was? Is he more wise and just now than he was then? If not, why do you object to election? Has he not the sovereign right of choice? When we oppose election it is plain evidence that we are unwilling for God's will to be done, unwilling for God to rule. It is by grace that we are saved. If it were of works, man would have a right to boast; but it is the gift of God. The Scriptures plainly assert that salvation is of the Lord; and the apostle has said, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." Quickened means to make alive. God chose his people in Christ before the foundation of the world. And not only so, but he saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose. We had sold ourselves for naught; but Christ was our Surety and our dear Redeemer. Forasmuch then as Christ is our Redeemer, we are his redeemed; and the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion. Jesus says, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day." If a law had been given which could have given life, or taken away sin, Christ would not have died. But it took the blood of Jesus Christ, which blood cleanseth us from all sin; that is, the sin of his people. For in all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence immediately saved them. It is the Spirit that quickens or makes alive; for it is by grace that we are saved. Jesus says, "I am the good Shepherd: the good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep;" that is, for his people alone. So it is not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Dear brethren, the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call; for unto him shall the gathering of the people be; and he will be to them a God, and they shall be to him a people. So it is obvious, as David said, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Therefore let us stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and not be carried about with every wind of doctrine; for the time will (is) come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and shall (are now) be turned unto fables.

Dear brethren, let us love one another indeed and in truth; for love is of God. May the Lord enable us all to bow in humble submission to his will.

JAMES M. JUSTICE.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Salisbury Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Indiantown, Wicomico County, Maryland, October 18th, 19th and 20th, 1893, to the several associations and meetings with whom she corresponds, sendeth love in the Lord.

DEARLY BELOVED:—Our ever-faithful, unchangeable, covenant-keeping God has permitted us once more, under his blessing, to meet in an associate capacity, and we have been favored to sit together in an heavenly place in Christ. Our hearts have been cheered by the coming of so many of your able and faithful ministers, who came laden with the untold and unsearchable riches of Christ Jesus. They came indeed in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel; and by reason of their presence, and their words of encouragement, we have felt to thank God and take courage, and feel to go on our way with renewed strength.

We are glad to be able to say that the reports from all the churches are favorable, all are at peace among themselves, and with each other, enjoying the same sweet fellowship which has ever existed and has remained unbroken among the churches of this Association from its organization in 1782 to the present time. This Association has ever been favored with a sound and faithful ministry, and the result is that the enemies of truth have never succeeded in making inroads, or in drawing away disciples from the ranks of the churches.

There has been no great ingathering, but many of the churches report a slight increase from last year, and there has been a small increase in the aggregate. We still occupy the same ground upon which we have ever stood by the grace of God, believing that the salvation of sinners is wholly by God's grace, through the blood and righteousness of Jesus Christ our Lord.

We desire a continuance of your correspondence, as we believe it to be profitable unto edification.

Our next session is appointed to be held with the church at Broad Creek, Sussex County, Delaware, commencing on Wednesday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1894, when we hope to again have the privilege of greeting your messengers and receiving your messages of love.

T. M. POULSON, Mod.

J. H. TRUITT, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

PLEASE STOP MY PAPER.

At least nine out of every ten writing us to discontinue their paper add that it is not on account of their objection to anything the paper contains, but that they are not financially able to continue it. We would ask all such if they have taken into consideration the amount they have economized by stopping their paper, It is less than four-sevenths of a cent a day.

MARRIAGES.

At the home of the bride, in the town of Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., on Oct. 11th, 1893, by Elder Benton Jenkins, Mr. Elva H. Bogart and Miss Emma Frank Smith, granddaughter of the late Dr. A. C. Hull.

At the residence of the bride's aunt, Oct. 18th, 1893, by Elder G. N. Tusing, Mr. George Barr and Miss Alice Peters, daughter of Elder R. W. Peters, all of Fairfield Co., Ohio.

By Elder T. M. Poulson, Sept. 26th, 1893, at the house of the bride's father, in Somerset Co., Md., Mr. Clayton Sermon, of Worcester Co., Md., and Miss Sarah E. Hastings.

By the same, Oct. 1st, 1893, at the house of the bride's parents, near Pittsville, Wicomico Co., Md., Mr. Levin W. Messay and Miss Ella Beauchamp.

By the same, Oct. 4th, 1893, near New Church, Va., Mr. Andrew Ayers and Miss Ary Marsh, both of Accomac Co., Va.

By the same, Oct. 10th, 1893, near New Church, Va., Mr. Oliver F. Townsend and Miss Jennie Marriner, both of Accomac Co., Va.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Mrs. Meriba R. Butler, daughter of Mr. H. and Martha Paris, of Maquoketa, Iowa, was born June 6th, 1854, married to B. F. Butler Oct. 24th, 1874, and died of consumption, caused from the effects of "La Grippe," Oct. 12th, 1893.

She was the mother of seven children (six boys and one girl), two boys having preceded her to the house not made by hands, while in infancy; therefore she leaves four boys, and an infant daughter not quite seven months old, together with a bereaved husband, an aged mother and sister, besides a large circle of sympathizing relatives and friends. She was the embodiment of true womanhood, being possessed of a gentle but firm disposition. Her tongue was unacquainted with guile, eschewing evil, and esteeming others more worthy than herself. In religion she was steadfast in the faith of God's elect. On the fourth Sunday in June, 1881, she was baptized by Elder Smith Ketchum, in the fellowship of the Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church of Red Oak Grove, Henry Co., Ill.

She was compelled to take her bed only five short weeks, her strength enabling her to keep up most of the time until then. She had spent part of three summers here, and was always benefited. One year ago we determined to give up our home in Rockford, Ill., believing that a permanent residence here upon a farm would endow her with usual health; but alas! the grim monster must have its prey. She could not stay where sorrow and pain must be endured. While she expressed her desire to stay with her family if she could have her health, she desired to go rather than suffer. Not one word of complaint in all her sickness was she heard to utter, but was fully resigned to bear whatever the heavenly Father willed. She realized all until the happy spirit took its flight to that bourne from whence no traveler ever returns. The night before she died she said, "I am so tired; I want rest, I want rest." How soon the desire was granted! Yet we mourn not as those without hope, believing that those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him when he comes with the shout of the Archangel; therefore we wait patiently for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body.

Yours in tribulation,

B. F. BUTLER.

HOLMES, N. D., Oct. 23, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send a notice of the departure of another of our dear old sisters from our little circle here to receive that crown of righteousness, as we trust, that awaits all them who love the appearing of our Lord and Savior.

Julia Creig was born Oct. 18th, 1813, and departed from us July 14th, 1893, aged 79 years, 9 months and 26 days. She lived in the state of Indiana until grown, and was married to James Creig, the date of her marriage being unknown. She became a member of a Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church in Indiana, moved to Iowa about the year 1846, and joined the Pilgrim Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists in Keokuk Co., Iowa, remaining a worthy member until called home to dwell forever with the glorified saints above, where she will know even as she is known, and be forever blessed.

The writer of this notice tried to speak to the comfort and edification of a large number of friends and relatives who were present.

A. RICHARDSON.

HAYESVILLE, Iowa, Oct. 24, 1893.

Mrs. Nancy Hutchings, of Schoharie Co., N. Y., departed this life at the home of her granddaughter, being more than 90 years of age.

She had been a widow for thirty-five years, and a member of the Baptist Church for about fifty years, and had led a life of unexampled faith and unflinching submission to the will of God, though she had lost nearly every member of her immediate family, and longed so earnestly to be with Jesus. The memory of her saintly life must rest as a benediction on her grandchildren, who all loved and revered her. She had retained both physical and mental powers to a great degree, and after an illness of only five days fell asleep in Jesus. Her last utterances were of prayer to God, and assurances of his support. About half an hour before she died she was heard to repeat these sustaining promises, "The Lord is my portion; he will help me in my tribulation." "Rejoicing in blessed immortality."

The deceased was buried by the side of her husband, Morgan L. Hutchings, at their old home at Franklinton.

MARY W. MYERS.

Edward B. Walton departed this mortal life on Sunday morning, Oct. 15th, 1893.

Brother Walton was baptized on April 7th, 1889, by Elder Joseph L. Staton, in the fellowship of the Salem Church, of Philadelphia, and remained a consistent and much-loved member until he was taken from us. He was appointed Clerk of the church at the last church meeting, July 29th, 1893. He leaves a wife (sister Hattie Walton), one son, several relatives and many friends, with the Salem Church, to mourn his departure.

As one by one our loved ones are taken away, and we are left desolate, so are we drawn deeper and closer to the throne of God's boundless grace, where our gracious Redeemer sitteth at the right hand of the Father, continually making intercession for all his anointed. So in the strength of his precious love we can say, with Job, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

His remains were laid away in Cedar Hill Cemetery on Thursday, Oct. 19th. Elder Charles Bogardus spoke words of comfort to the living from John xi. 25.

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 23, 1893.

DIED—At his residence in Logan, Ohio, on Sept. 26th, 1893, George W. Brehm, aged 52 years and 2 months.

He was born in Hocking Co., Ohio, and was first married to Eliza Snoke, of Fairfield Co., Ohio, who died in 1875, leaving five young children. Little Willie soon followed. They were baptized in early years by Elder G. N. Tusing, of Columbus, Ohio, and were orderly Old School Baptists.

On Sept. 5th, 1878, he was married to Miriam J. Rhodes, of Hindsburgh, Orleans Co., N. Y., who is left with three young girls. He was taken with malaria, his old complaint, but continued to attend to his pension and law business until a few weeks previous to his death. He has been the Mayor of Logan, Ohio, four terms, Justice of the Peace eight terms, and was manager of the Ohio Democrat. He was resigned to the Lord's will, and desired to go. Our loss is his eternal gain. Though called to pass through deep waters of affliction, in losing a faithful and beloved husband, nearest and dearest of all below, yet I would not call him back to a world of sorrow and pain, feeling assured that our loss is his eternal gain. "Be still, and know that I am God," sustained me as they bore his remains to their last resting-place in our city cemetery, where many sympathizing friends and citizens followed. I often hear it repeated by those who knew him long and well that his place cannot be filled. We miss his wise counsels, and his voice is heard no more on earth; but his deeds remain, and though dead, he in a sense still lives. Many kind words are spoken and written, but Jesus only can heal the bleeding wound.

M. J. BREHM.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—In harmony with the wishes of the bereaved family, and of the church of which she was a loving and an honored member, it becomes my duty to forward to you a tribute to the memory of our sister, Martha J. Polkinhorn, who was taken to her final rest Sept. 24th, 1893, in the fifty-fourth year of her age.

Her departure was very sudden and unexpected, being from a heart trouble of some kind, from which she suffered but a few hours, when she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. I could say much concerning the worth of this dear sister, whose firm adherence to what she believed to be true and right, and gentle courtesy to all with whom she met, and kindness to the needy and dependent, endeared her to all who knew her; but these were gracious qualities for which she would have desired to give all praise to God, the Giver, could she have seen them in herself as others saw them in her life. Her estimate of herself was always very humble, and she counted herself a poor sinner saved by sovereign grace alone. I have heard her earnestly refer to the words of the hymn,

"Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to thy cross I cling,"

as being often the best expression of the constant feeling of her heart.

She was the daughter of the late Henry and Marianne Polkinhorn, and was born in Baltimore, Md., but from infancy lived in Washington, D. C., where she died. Her sisters, who deeply feel the sad bereavement, inform me that but a few hours before the end, while yet in great suffering, she expressed her entire resignation to the will of God if it were his pleasure to call her hence; and but a little before the end came she prayed earnestly and audibly for her brothers and sisters, and committed them to the keeping of God.

She was buried from her late home in Washington, D. C., on Friday p. m., Sept. 29th. Elder Purington, who had been for many years her warm and intimate friend, was with me at the funeral, and spoke much to the comfort of the bereaved family and church from 1 Cor. xv. 57, 58.

She was baptized in the fellowship of the church at Southampton on Sunday, June 3d, 1877, by Elder Purington, being on a visit there at that time. Not long afterward she removed her membership to the Shiloh Church, in Washington, where she continued a faithful and well-loved member to the end. In a letter which she wrote, speaking of her baptism, she said, "I feel to thank God for the privilege of being one of the household of faith. I trust I may always with a faithful and loving heart be able to say, 'Kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.'" To this she added a couple of stanzas, which I will subjoin.

"Leave me not to mere profession,
To have nothing but a name;
Give me, Lord, the sweet possession,
Of thyself, though clothed in shame.

"Leave me not again to stumble
On the lofty hills of pride;
Dearest Jesus, make me humble,
Keep me near thy wounded side."

I would be glad to say much more, but I am already exceeding the proper limits of an obituary, and so will forbear. I cannot close, however, without expressing my own deep sense of personal loss, for she has been a true and steadfast friend to me. Our comfort is that to her to live was Christ, and to die was gain. May God comfort the bereaved family, and give grace to us all to say, "Thy will be done."

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 20, 1893.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE yearly meeting of the Olive & Hurley Old School Baptist Church will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 15th and 16th, 1893.

Those coming from the east will be met at Olive Branch, and those from the west at West Shokan and Brown's Station.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to attend.

A. BOGART, Clerk.

THE church at Broad Creek, Sussex Co., Del., expects to hold her yearly meeting on the second Sunday in November, 1893, and Saturday before, commencing at ten o'clock each day. Brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Trains from the north and south on the Delaware R. R. pass Laurel between two and three p. m., which will be met on Friday (10th), and visitors will be welcomed and cared for.

The anniversary meeting at Delmar occurs on the following Tuesday (14th). We hope to see a goodly number of visiting ministers and brethren.

A. B. FRANCIS.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.
Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

D. L. Blackwell June 93

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1893.

NO. 45.

SELECTED.

GOOD IS THE WORD OF THE LORD.

Isa. xxxix. 8.

BY THE LATE MR. HALLETT.

I SHALL not occupy much of your time in noticing the history of which our text forms a part, but just remark that these words of good king Hezekiah were spoken under very peculiar circumstances. If you read the chapter preceding our text, you will find an account there of what were the exercises of this man's mind during his painful affliction, when the prophet was sent to him with this message, "Thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live." It is evident, my friends, that the king was at that time in great darkness of soul, as he tells us he came to the conclusion that he should "not see the Lord, even the Lord, in the land of the living." At the same time, it is evident, the blessed Spirit operated most powerfully in his soul as a spirit of grace and supplication, though it seems the king could not give utterance to his feelings. The deep exercises of his mind were so weighty, the sorrows of his soul were so great, that they were beyond any language of which he was master to express. He could not express what he felt in words, therefore with sighs and groans he poured out his complaint to God. He tells us, "Like a crane or a swallow, so did I chatter; I did mourn as a dove; mine eyes fail with looking upward: O Lord, I am oppressed; undertake for me." Yet it would seem he had not faith to believe that the Lord would answer his prayer, and grant him the request of his lips; and therefore he comes to the conclusion that "I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul, and then lie down in sorrow;" for he goes on, "Behold, for peace I had great bitterness [but mark the wonderful change]; but thou hast in love to my soul [not for worthiness in me] delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back." He then breaks out in blessing and praising God. But the enemy, taking advantage of these things, proves the truth of Mr. Hart's words, namely,

"The heart uplifts with God's own gifts,
And makes e'en grace a snare."

For when the king of Babylon sent ambassadors to king Hezekiah to congratulate him on his wonderful and marvelous recovery, he shewed the men every thing that he possessed, all that was in his own house, and all that was in the house of the Lord. It was under these circumstances the prophet was sent to him to make inquiry whence these men came, and what they had seen. Hezekiah acted in a very straightforward manner, as every one who fears God should. He tells all the truth, keeps nothing back; he does not attempt to hide anything he had done, but tells the man of God that he had shewed these men everything. Then said the prophet, "Hear the word of the Lord of Hosts: Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried into Babylon; nothing shall be left," saith the Lord; and of thy sons which shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away, and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon." When the king heard these words, he said, in the language of our text, "Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days."

Now, we must not confine the goodness of the Lord's word to this special occasion, or in these two particular things that related to the king, namely, peace and truth in his day; because "whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." Also, "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." Therefore, in speaking from the words to-night, I shall endeavor to point out some of the good things in God's word. "Good is the word of the Lord."

I must first remark that by the word of God something more than the letter of truth as recorded in this book is intended, and certainly something more than simply preaching the word is meant. For man, vile, wretched man, we see, continues to turn a deaf ear to the voice of God in the Scriptures; hence we read of the Lord's calling, and man's refusing to answer. The Lord calls by the written word; in fact, this is the voice of God to the children of men.

In the patriarchal age, the Lord's general way of communication to man was by dreams or visions. In the prophetic age, Paul tells us,

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." When the Lord Jesus Christ came, the seventy weeks had expired, and he appeared to make an end of sin, to finish transgression, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and bring in everlasting righteousness; then the visions of God were sealed up. And God the Father speaks to the children of men by his dearly beloved Son; but after the ascension of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost is poured out in an extraordinary manner on the followers of the Lamb, who were to be his witnesses. The twelve apostles were to go forth; they were the twelve ministerial foundations; and upon the word of God (Old and New Testament being sealed), from that time to this, the general way of speaking is by the written word. But, as I fallen, ruined man turns a deaf ear to this; so in respect to the preached word. The Lord raises up, commissions and sends forth men to preach the everlasting gospel; and in this preached gospel he says, "To you, O men, I call, and my voice is to the sons of men." But unless a supernatural power attends the word preached, it is not effectual to the conviction and conversion or salvation of ruined man; therefore something beyond the written word, or the preached word, is here intended by the "word of the Lord."

Having made these few remarks, in the first place I would say, whatever is intended by "the word of the Lord" in the text, and other places, it is certain the voice of the Lord is full of majesty; and until it is so in your case and mine, we are in no wise benefited by God's word, though it is a good word. We read, "The voice of the Lord is powerful. The voice of the Lord is full of majesty. The voice of the Lord shaketh both heaven and earth."

Now, my friends, hearing the word preached cannot of itself accomplish these things. Therefore, by "the word of the Lord" something beyond this is intended. But not to keep you any longer upon the threshold of the subject, I will, by the Lord's help, endeavor to point out to you what "the word of God" does on behalf of a ruined sinner, passing over the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the incarnate Word. When I say, "passing over the Lord Jesus Christ," I do not mean in any way to leave him out of the question, but simply this, not to occupy your time to-night by entering into the glorious purpose and design of the Son of God, who is expressly said to be the Word of God. For "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God; and the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us," and so on. If we were to attend to this, we should find indeed that "Good is the Word of the Lord!" What preciousness, my friends, is found in this incarnate Word! There is such a large field here that I must not presume to enter it to-night, but confine my few remarks to "the word of God" as relating to the soul's experience. If God's word is powerful, you must feel the powerful effects of that word to experience any benefit from it. If the voice of the Lord is full of majesty, it must come to us with majestic power ere we receive any benefit therefrom. When have we felt the power of God's word? When that word has been attended with majesty to our souls. We can then indeed say, in the language of Scripture, "The voice of the Lord is powerful;" and in this case we speak from heartfelt experience.

The first good thing I shall notice relative to "the word of God," and which all the Lord's children experience, is light; for we are told, "The entrance of thy word giveth light." Now, this appears to me to be the first thing in the conversion of a sinner: say what you will, this is the first thing that leads savingly to the conversion of a ruined sinner to the precious Jesus. Man by nature is in a state of blindness and gross darkness. "For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." And we are told that this darkness is in the mind or heart; that the understanding is darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart. "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not." Now, as this blindness is in the heart, this light shines not merely in the head or judgment; for the veil of ignorance may be taken away from the judgment, and a person may have clear views of truth; they may have a clear head, may be sound in doctrinal truths, yet be still blind in their mind, alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart; consequently God's word is a light that comes into this dark, benighted heart. Hence the apostle saith, "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This light shining in a sinner's heart is the light of life, and is one thing that distinguishes them from the children of the flesh; for we are told that the children of God are children of light, and the children of the day; not children of the night, nor of darkness; for "the entrance of thy word giveth light." If this light hath shined in thy heart and mine, it has discovered things that were previously hid from our view. "Whatsoever maketh manifest is light." Truly the Lord discovereth deep things out of darkness, and bringeth out to light the shadow of death. I must not dwell here, else I could notice many things, the fruits and effects of this true light, as there is a false light as well as the true light.

One effect of this true light shining in thy heart is the opening up and disclosing to thy view the exceeding sinfulness of sin, the heinous nature of sin, the awful consequences of sinning against God, and the awful position in which you stand as a guilty sinner before God. These things thus opened up are disclosed in such a manner as they never were before. All men will confess they are sinners. If I were to go through this large place, and put the question to every individual, he would say, Yes, most assuredly I am a sinner; I know I am a sinner; I know it from facts; and facts are stubborn things that cannot be withstood. But the question may be taken in this way: they confess with their mouth they are sinners; but as to the feeling part, they are like a person guilty of a capital crime, who has not yet been apprehended, not taken into custody. He knows he is guilty; but as he has escaped detection, he is not so deeply concerned about it as if he were brought to justice. His motto is, "No catch me; no have me." Consequently all the time he is at large, though he is conscious of his guilt, still he is not distressed about it. But let him be apprehended, brought to justice, and placed at the bar, put upon his trial, the witnesses to have been examined, the evidence conclusive, his guilt confirmed, and the jury brought in their verdict of guilty, the sentence passed; then the man knows what it is to break the law. Thus, in a spiritual sense, when the Holy Ghost brings a sinner to books, when judgment begins at the house of God, he knows what sin is, the demerit of sin, the exceeding sinfulness of sin, the awful consequences of sinning against God. This brings him to make the same confession with the prophet, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." This is one thing which has been disclosed and made known to him as the effect of light shining in his heart.

Another thing, the effect of this light, is a discovery of the nature of God's holy and righteous law—the law in its spirituality being applied to his conscience, as the ministration of death; like to a looking-glass, in which he sees his features exactly portrayed, and his character set forth in the Scriptures of truth.

Another thing disclosed to his view, is the insufficiency of his own righteousness to justify him before God; the insufficiency of all his doings, promises and vows, to atone for his past crimes. This brings him to the place of the stopping of mouths. He is brought to despair of all hope from a covenant of works. This may be the work of many months, or the Lord may cut the work short, accomplish it in a shorter period. In this respect the Lord is a sovereign. But ultimately the poor sinner shall have the light of life shining in his heart; he shall have his eyes directed to the Lord Jesus Christ as the only door of hope opened for a poor sinner; as the only way of access to the Father; as the only way of justification; as the only way to eternal life; as the only salvation; as the only mediator between God and man. If this is the case, it may be true, that "light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart." When the sinner's eye is directed to the glorious person of the Son of God, as every way suited to his ruined state and condition, Christ appears to the poor sinner's view as the fairest among ten thousand; and though he may not be able at present to appropriate the benefits of the Savior's death, for want of faith, still he discovers that in Christ which is exactly suited to his need; consequently Christ becomes exceedingly precious to his ruined soul; and in the Lord's own time he shall have a believing view of the Lord Jesus. When this is the case, he says with Job, "Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." Then is brought to pass the words in the Proverbs, "The light of the eyes rejoiceth the heart, and a good report maketh the bones fat." When the eye of faith is fixed upon Christ, the sinner is enabled to believe in Christ to the joy and rejoicing of his heart. "Better is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of the desire; for light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun."

These few things are the effects of the true light shining in the sinner's heart. "The entrance of thy word giveth light."

In the next place, God's word being quick and powerful, brings life with light into the soul. I have heard men contend about this point, as to which enters the soul first—light or life? I think there is no need for this contention—no need for this nice distinction. This light is the light of life. You might as well attempt to separate heat from light, as to make a distinction between light and life. Christ came a light into the world, and this light was the life of men.

We are told also that God's word is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart. David drew comfort in after days from his former experience that God's word had quickened him. "This is my comfort in mine affliction: for thy word hath quickened me." We are told by the Savior himself, "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." This precious word, which quickens dead sinners into life, must be immediately from God; because this life is everlasting life. True spiritual life in a poor sinner's soul is eternal life, one of the streams that flows from that river, the river of God's pleasure, as an earnest of their future inheritance. Consequently those who are blessed with this light in their souls are passed from death to life, and shall continue to live. Thus the voice of God is full of majesty. The voice of the Lord is powerful, inasmuch as it quickens the soul into newness of life.

In the next place, the word of God is good, as it oftentimes raises a sinner to a hope in his mercy. Hence you find that David speaks on one occasion, "Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope." Now, my friends, upon what is our hope grounded? Is it on what we do, or on what we have done, or what we purpose doing? or is it grounded on what the Lord hath said, not merely what the Lord hath left on record, but what the Lord hath spoken to my soul individually? "Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope." Religion is a personal thing; we must have the Lord speak to us individually ere we are raised to a sweet, comfortable hope in the Lord's mercy. As the Lord spoke to David, so he speaks to his children; not merely by the written word, or by the ministry of the word, but he speaks to the heart. "Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her;" or, as it reads in the margin, "I will speak to the heart." Now, sometimes the Lord speaks comfort to a poor sinner, one overwhelmed with grief and sorrow, with distressing and disquieting fears on his mind, ready to conclude he shall never obtain mercy or find favor with God; one who is led out in earnest prayer and supplication to the Lord day by day, to give him a token for good, to shew him mercy, and grant him salvation. The Lord is pleased at times to speak some precious word home to his heart. Some passage of Scripture may be fastened on his mind, attended with the power of the Holy Ghost, with savor, dew and unction. This raises his poor soul to a hope in God's mercy; so the Holy Ghost is pleased to speak secretly to the heart: he whispers, as it were, to the mind of the poor sinner, saying, "Fear not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." No matter how the Lord speaks, or what the Lord says; for he always accomplishes the end he has in view, and the soul is raised to a comfortable hope in the mercy of God. I shall never forget some time back, one Saturday night, retiring to rest. I had been so tried, the trouble was so heavy upon me, that I was almost overwhelmed; and the next day, I knew, if spared, I should have to meet the people. In the morning I awoke with these words on my mind, "By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death, and was not found, because God had translated him; for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." The words did not seem applicable to my case; but they were attended with unction, dew, savor and power to my soul. The grief, sorrow and despondency of my mind were gone; the Lord had dispersed them, and I had a sweet and blessed enjoyment of the Lord's presence in my soul, such as I can never describe. I went to the chapel, and preached from these words; and some present here to-night perhaps recollect hearing the discourse, though it was many miles distant from this place. "Remember thy word unto thy servant, on which thou hast caused me to hope."

Now, my friends, bear in mind, "Good is the word of the Lord." Has the Lord opened your blind eyes to see your ruined state, to see the position in which you stand? Has he opened your blind eyes to see a door of hope, a way of escape, in the person and finished work of the precious Jesus? Then I will say here, as I said the other evening at Nottingham, that the eye affects the heart; the eye is the inlet or high road to the heart. If your eye has seen Jesus as the way, the truth and the life, as the foundation of life, so that your heart has been sensibly touched, sensibly affected, you know what it is to have your heart and soul drawn forth in earnest prayer and supplication for a faith's view of interest in the precious Jesus—for a revelation and manifestation of him and his great and precious salvation to your poor, lost, ruined, miserable soul. Thus thine eye affects thine heart. Has the Lord spoken the word of life to thy soul? Has he granted thee newness of life, and delivered thee from a state of death in trespasses and sin? Time will not admit of my going into many particulars, as a sure evidence of the life of God in the soul; but I would ask, Has the Lord spoken a cheering word to your heart? Has he spoken a word in season to your soul? Has he enabled you by faith to receive the word, to rest on what the Lord has said? Then he that believeth is passed from death unto life. A sweet, sensible hope has sprung up in thy soul. This has made way for patience. The language of your heart is, under this work, "I will quietly wait and patiently hope for thy salvation." In the language of the prophet you say, "Therefore I will look unto the Lord; I will wait for the God of my salvation; my God will hear me." This will be the effect of the soul having been raised to a sweet, sensible hope in God's precious word. Now the soul will, with David, remind the Lord of what he has said, "Remember me, O Lord, with the favor thou bearest unto thy people! O visit me with thy salvation! Remember the word unto thy servant upon which thou hast caused me to hope!"

In the next place, the word of the Lord is good, inasmuch as it is food to our souls. A man once said to another, under trying circumstances in providence, "You must live by faith." My friends, faith will not feed our hungry bodies, though it oftentimes strengthens a poor sinner's soul, and enables him to trust God as the God of providence under trying circumstances. Still the body must be fed; food must be administered to it; nature requires it; else we should ultimately starve to death; nor will faith feed a hungry soul. We read, "The just shall live by faith." Yet faith is not the food; faith is to bring the food, which is something else, into the sinner's heart. By faith he receives the food, which food is a distinct thing from faith. He feeds upon that which faith brings in; as we commonly say in our ordinary conversation, Such a man lives by his calling, another lives by his trade, and a third lives by his labor; so that what a man lives upon spiritually is distinct from faith. Then, say you, what is it? It is "the word of God." "Man shall not live by bread alone; but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord shall man live." "Thy words were found," saith the prophet, "and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart." The Lord is oftentimes pleased to make the written word meat and drink to the sinner's soul. He is oftentimes by faith enabled to feed on the precious Jesus, whose flesh is meat indeed, and whose blood is drink indeed; and oftentimes the Lord is pleased to feed his children through the medium of preaching. He declares he will send them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding. Peter was commanded to feed the flock of Christ, and not to overlook the lambs. "Feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." The Lord's ministers are to place provision before the people, to spread the gospel table, as instruments in the Lord's hands. The Lord alone can give an appetite for the provision; the Lord alone can give power to partake; the Lord alone can feed the soul; and the Lord alone can cause them to understand and digest the food. The Lord is oftentimes pleased to attend the ministry of his word with power. When this is the case the following text is the experience of his family, "They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places; they shall feed, and lie down, and none shall make them afraid." It is oftentimes the case, in hearing God's word, that the sinner's path is cast up, his experience is traced out, the very feelings of his soul are described. What he wants, the things after which he presses, are also described. In the sermon preached the Holy Ghost is pleased to apply the word with divine power to his heart; he receives the truth, he feeds upon it, and returns from the house of prayer somewhat refreshed in mind and satisfied in soul, and therefore will say, "Good is the word of the Lord." "It was truly precious. I was enabled not merely to hear with the outward ear, but was enabled to hear to my soul's profit, the comfort of my heart, and the joy and rejoicing of my soul; indeed it was a word in season to me. It was a pleasant word; it was health to my soul and strength to my bones." Thus a man lives by the word of God daily. It is by faith we are enabled to rest on the Lord under the most trying circumstances. As our bodies are strengthened and refreshed by partaking of food day by day, so our souls are strengthened in the Lord through faith, resting on what the Lord hath said unto us. It is said of Abraham that he was "strong in faith, giving glory to God;" in proof of which he offered up Isaac, his only begotten son. It may be said of Habakkuk that he had a strong faith in God's providential mercies, presupposing a famine in the land. "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." Here is indeed living by faith on what the Lord hath said. "Good is the word of the Lord."

In the next place, God's word is good, inasmuch as it heals all our maladies, of which David had a very blessed experience when he said, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies." How many maladies have we! yet God's word is a sovereign balm for the whole of them. The dreadful malady of unbelief! how often does the word of God, as it were, put this enemy to flight, so that we are healed, at least for a time, from this dreadful malady. Thomas would not believe. He seemed determined not to believe; as if he had said, You will not impose on me. "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." He might as well have said, Faith in my case must come in seeing as well as hearing. But when the Lord said, "Thomas, reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless, but believing," Thomas answered and said, "My Lord and my God!" He did not want to thrust his hand into the Lord's side; it was enough for him; the Lord spoke, and it was done; his unbelief was put to the blush; his unbelief fled. The Lord oftentimes speaks, my friends, and heals the soul's dreadful malady.

Another dreadful malady is a hard heart, a benumbed conscience, the depravity of our nature, the overruling plague in every faculty of the soul, the fountain of the great deep broken up. My heart is hard, says the man, and my conscience is benumbed. But oftentimes the Lord has spoken and healed us of this malady; our heart has been made soft. "A soft word breaketh the bones," puts feeling into the benumbed conscience, and lays us low in the dust of self-abasement. The goodness of God leads the soul to repentance; true contrition, compunction and godly sorrow flow into the heart; the darkness then flies away, the sun ariseth; and then is fulfilled this Scripture, "Thou makest darkness, and it is night, wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth. The sun ariseth; they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens. Man goeth unto his work, and to his labor until the evening." Man goeth forth to his work of faith, his labor of love, and the patience of hope, till the evening.

Another dreadful malady is the guilt of sin. If you know what it is to have the guilt of sin on your conscience, the Lord has a remedy suited to the malady. He said to Mary Magdalene, "Thy sins, which are many, are all forgiven." He spoke, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast. The guilt of sin is removed from the conscience; that heavy weight is taken from the mind; the sackcloth is put off, and the soul is girded with gladness; the soul is brought up out of the horrible pit and miry clay, his feet set upon a rock, his goings established, a new song put into his mouth, even praise unto God. We are told of Mary, that having had much forgiven her, she loved her Savior much. This word of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

"Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses. He sent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their destruction."

Now, again, the word of God is good, inasmuch as it has cleansing properties as well as healing. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." We must have the externals as well as the internals of religion. If we have the latter, we are sure to have the former. If the malady of the soul be healed, certainly we shall know what it is to be cleansed as well as healed; washed in the water of regeneration. "And be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." "Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him;" mortifying the deeds of the body; putting on, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering. Let the word of Christ dwell richly in your heart.

If we have been convinced by the word, quickened by the word, raised to a hope by God's word, if we have had the malady of our souls healed by God's truth, then, my friends, we shall know what it is for the word to cleanse us, what it is to be cleansed by the washing of water by the word, walking circumspectly in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, having the guilt of sin removed from the conscience, the affections purged from idols, and the heart purified from dead works, serving the living and true God. "How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" That which separates between an ungodly world and you, between empty professors and those that love God, having this influence upon your soul, shewing itself in your whole conversation before men, is the effect of God's word; therefore it may be truly said in this respect "Good is the word of the Lord."

I shall notice in the next place, that it is "the word of God" that liberates the captive sinner. "The king sent and loosed him, even the ruler of the people, and let him go free." Here is, my friends, a gail delivery from the right quarter; not brought up and bailed, or let out the

(Continued on page 357.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 8, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE SALT OF THE EARTH.

"Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men."—Matt. v. 13.

To those who feel themselves utterly destitute of merit, and who can adopt the language of Paul, "I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing," it is incomprehensible how this language of our Lord can apply to them. So far from claiming to exert the preserving influence which would be signified by the character of salt, they feel that they are themselves in need of the righteousness of the Redeemer for their own deliverance from the pollution and condemnation of sin. The wily adversary is ever ready to take advantage of their unbelieving fears for the purpose of leading them to deny their trust in the salvation which is revealed in the Lord Jesus. Certainly in their own hearts it is painfully felt that they have no righteousness in which they can assert a claim to the approval of infinite justice; much less can they find in themselves any power by which the earth might be benefited as by the preserving quality of salt. Examining their own conduct, and seeing the evil of their own vain thoughts and earthly desires, they are unable to refute the cruel accusations which are brought by the tempter to overthrow their trust in the grace of God for salvation from their sins. Then they are directed to such portions of the inspired record as the language of our text, and in the distorted light of reason it seems that they are cut off from that hope in God which is their only refuge. No device of the adversary is so effective in destroying the comfort of the saints as that by which he distorts the words of inspiration so as to make them seem to forbid their hope in that grace which is revealed in Jesus Christ. In thus wresting the language of Scripture they are led to conclude that the charges of their accuser are confirmed by the truth of God; and, if it were possible, they would be driven to despair under the consciousness of their own guilt and just condemnation. But the love and mercy of God ordained deliverance for them in the grace through which they are saved from their sins by the atoning blood of Jesus. While they are subjected to severe assaults of temptation, and their hope seems almost lost in the darkness, yet they are kept from falling into despair by the power of God, which ministers to them strength just sufficient for every time of trouble. Being thus constantly taught their own dependence, there is no room for them to claim power to exert a saving influence over the earth or any of their fellow-mortals.

In considering the truth as declared by Jesus in our text, it is to be remembered to whom the declaration was addressed. It will not be in harmony with the teaching of truth if that which was spoken to the enemies of God shall be applied to his chosen people; nor yet will it be consistent with that truth if the gracious comforts of the gospel are presented as belonging to those who have not the love of God shed abroad in their hearts by the Spirit of truth. By reference to the commencement of this chapter in which our text is recorded it will be seen that before speaking this divinely wonderful discourse Jesus withdrew from the multitudes of people who had followed him. Nothing here recorded belongs to any others, therefore, except "his disciples." None are his disciples but such as are taught by him. All such must be born of the Spirit, and thus qualified to receive his heavenly teaching. Not only are the subjects of this spiritual instruction first manifested as being children of God, but they are given the seal of his Spirit whereby they are made to hunger and thirst after righteousness, and to mourn because of their sins, thus realizing that they are indeed "poor in spirit." It is manifestly a perversion of the word of the Lord to apply it to any others but such as he identified in speaking this divine testimony. Since the subjects of salvation were by nature the children of wrath even as others, it is evident that in themselves they have no power to save their fellow-mortals; nor can they claim that the earth is saved in any manner on account of their merit or preserving influence. Hence it cannot be in that sense that this assertion of divine truth is to be understood. Yet it is true that the chosen vessels of mercy are, as stated in our text, "the salt of the earth."

In the use of this strong illustration our Lord has given the assurance that the grace of God has not only chosen his people unto salvation in the consummation of eternal glory, but that this is the ultimate purpose for which all the material creation was brought into being, and to which all things are made subservient. To the view of the natural mind it seems that the saints are but a very small portion of the race of mankind, and it appears absurd to claim that all worlds and all events are ordered for the accomplishment of the purpose of grace in bringing this little flock to the full enjoyment of that infinite bliss to which they were chosen of God before the world was created. In looking at the things which are seen, even the subjects of electing and saving grace are themselves driven to question the reality of that assurance by which they are caused to hope in the salvation of God as it is revealed to them by the faith of the Son of God. Finding in themselves no good thing to commend them to the favor of God, they are cut off from all confidence in the flesh. Thus by the system of salvation by grace boasting is excluded, and the glory is due exclusively to the electing love of God. Having in themselves no righteousness, the subjects of that election can never claim that they had power to control the eternal choice of God. They must ever confess with David, "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger forever. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities. For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust."—Psalm ciii. 8-14. Certainly David could not claim that he had merit to save the earth, or any of his fellow-sinners, since he thus humbly confessed his dependence alone upon the grace of God for his own deliverance from sin.

Since it is for the sake of his chosen people that the material creation is preserved, the saints may well be designated as the salt of the earth. But for their preservation and development there would be no revealed use for the continuance of time. Created intelligence is incapable of comprehending the infinite purpose of God in the works of his power, even as they are seen by natural minds. Much less can finite creatures guess at what would become of this earth were this purpose of God to be withdrawn from its preservation. While one of the chosen vessels remained in Sodom, the destroying angel could not pour upon that guilty city the vengeance of eternal fire; and until Noah had entered into the ark, the earth could not be drowned. Certainly these precious saints were the salt by which their polluted surroundings were saved from destruction until the time appointed was fulfilled. It was not that they had power to cleanse their sinful fellows from the corruption of their evil works, for this could never be done by the combined efforts of all the saints. So the Lord said to the typical Israel, in denouncing his judgments against their sins, "Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast; though Noah, Daniel and Job were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness."—Ezek. xv. 19, 20. In thus specifying those eminent examples of divine favor, it is clear that the Lord excludes the possibility of his decrees being changed by the intercession of any number of his chosen people. This exposes the vanity of those efforts of will-worshippers who agree to join in concerts of prayer for the purpose of changing the counsel of God in reference to the salvation of sinners. While the earth is preserved for the sake of those chosen vessels of mercy who are developed in time, it is not that they have any merit in themselves. It is only as was said of the nation of Israel, "Thus saith the Lord, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it; so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all."—Isa. lxxv. 8. As the earth is only preserved for the manifestation of the election of divine grace, in that sense they are indeed "the salt of the earth."

The peculiar fitness of the similitude used in this text is more manifest as it is closely observed. While it is true of salt naturally that it may be so mingled with pollution as to be practically useless, it is impossible that it should be so polluted that any portion of it shall cease to be salt. Where it has been so mingled with earth as to be invisible, it may yet be recovered by proper chemical process, so that none of the salt is lost. But while it is useful in preserving and imparting savor to food, when the salt itself becomes unsavory by mingling with corruption, there is nothing to preserve it. So, where the saints have become so conformed to the corruption of the world as to lose their likeness to their Lord, they are "good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men." The salt is not annihilated by its mixture with corruption, but it is useless for the purpose that renders it valuable. So the saints, when conformed to the world, have not ceased to be the subjects of that salvation which is in Christ Jesus, but they have ceased to glorify him in their body and in their spirit, which are God's both by creation and by the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. In the apostolic age there were instances developed in which this loss of savor was manifest, and they are left on record for the instruction and admonition of the saints in all succeeding ages, not as examples to be copied, but as warnings to all who come after them. In our own time, such cases have been painfully witnessed in some sections, if not in every church. When one who has been manifested as a disciple of Jesus, and has been received in the fellowship of the visibly organized church, so far yields to the evil of his natural mind as to obey those wicked emotions which lead to ungodliness, he therein denies the authority of Jesus, and the inevitable result must be that he will feel the truth of the word of the Lord, "Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." This does not signify that one whom God has ordained unto eternal life in Christ may be finally lost in consequence of his sinful denial of his Redeemer; but it is in his present experience that the unfaithful saint realizes the bitterness of being denied by Jesus, as the result of his departure from the path of obedience and truth. Under this severe chastening he must groan with unspeakable bitterness, feeling himself cast out from the enjoyment of divine favor, and having no companionship in the world. Like the unsavory salt, he is "good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men." He can have no comfort among the saints whose fellowship he has forfeited, nor can the unbelieving world afford him a comfortable abode. His ruined state is well represented by the polluted salt, which cannot be wholly lost in its mixture with corruption, yet is no more suitable for use as in its purity it is adapted to exert a saving power over that to which it is applied.

The best illustration of the meaning of this solemn instruction is seen in the case of such as hope in the grace of God for salvation, yet fail to walk in obedience to the commandment and example of the King in Zion. While they may confess that salvation is alone by the grace of God as revealed in Jesus, yet failing to walk in obedience to the law of the Lord they are unsuited to the fellowship of the church, and can find no companionship in the world. Thus they are trodden under foot of men, as well as cast out from the enjoyment of that place which belongs to the obedient followers of our Lord. Such as are thus described in our text are not found mourning under a sense of their own vileness, or longing for conformity to the purity of Christ; their corruption produces self-confidence and pride; they are ready to condemn others; but they are well satisfied with themselves. The salt in them has not even savor enough to expose their own carnality. The living power of that salt is manifest in every one who mourns his own sinful heart and wandering footsteps. May the grace of God keep us with all saints in the way of truth and holiness, and forbid that we should ever be found trusting in any other power but the grace of our Lord Jesus, as the salt by which we must be saved from ourselves, as well as from the pollution that is in the world wherein we sojourn as pilgrims and strangers.

NOW READY.

THE cloth-bound hymn books are now ready, and we have mailed all orders on hand. If any one who has sent an order for these books has not received them by the time they see this notice, they will please inform us.

(Continued from page 355.)
wrong way. No, no! but the king sent and loosed him, even the ruler of the people, and let him go free. The Savior saith, "If the Son make you free, ye shall be free indeed." And he says of his own children, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." If we consult what the prophet Isaiah says relating to the Savior, we shall see he speaks in the following manner: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God: to comfort all that mourn." Here we have the Savior commencing preaching glad tidings to the meek, binding up the broken-hearted, proclaiming liberty to the captives. This is a very blessed proclamation. Still something more is wanted. Every man sent to preach the gospel makes proclamations of peace to lost, ruined sinners; yet something more is wanted. They are not only to preach glad tidings to the meek, but to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, the opening of the prison to them that are bound. Something more than this is needed; something more than this is done. There is not only the opening of the prison-doors, but the Savior actually brings the prisoner out of the prison-house. We must preach to you as the Lord has commanded the heralds of salvation, the ambassadors of peace, to proclaim in your ears a full, free and finished salvation by the precious Jesus. What is the gospel? It is a proclamation of good news and glad tidings; it proclaims pardon for the base, the vile, and forgiveness for culprits. But this is not enough for you. Good news it is, you are constrained to say, so it is; but it does not gladden my heart, because I am shut up in prison. We will go a step further; we will proceed gradually. He opens the prison-door, that you may come out. The minister opens up the Scriptures of truth, opens up particular things, shews the way in which Christ has freed his church and people, which is like to opening the door. But though the door is opened, still something is wanted. Proclamation is made in your hearing; but something more must be done; you cannot free yourself; your soul is locked in irons; you cannot go forth, though the door is open. The Savior must do the next kind act, bring the prisoner out of the prison-house. When a ruined sinner is set free by the precious Jesus, and the proclamation of the gospel is attended with the power of the Holy Ghost to his heart, he is loosed from his bonds, the fetters are knocked off from his soul, he is taken by the hand, and led out of the prison-house, and his soul set at happy liberty. Then, in that sinner's case, it is the same spiritually as it was in Lazarus bodily, when he came forth from the grave, with the grave-clothes about him. The Savior said, "Loose him, and let him go." His hands and feet were unbound, the napkin was taken from his face, and the man was set at liberty. When these things take place in a sinner's soul, we can then compare him to Naphtali, or pronounce him to be a Naphtali in the true sense of the word. He is "a hind let loose," set at happy liberty, and "giveth goodly words." And when this is the case, who is to bring the sinner back? Who is to file a second indictment against him? I answer, None. "If the Son make you free, ye are free indeed." But say you, Will the soul always be thus free, and not entangled again with the yoke of bondage? The Lord oftentimes lays his people in the stocks, so that they have to complain, and say with David, "Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name." But, I maintain, if the Lord makes free the sinner, he is free indeed, is delivered in a legitimate way, and it is not for men to bring him back again. "It is God that justifieth; who is he that condemneth?" Thus the truth makes free; and whatever change takes place in the feelings, they are the Lord's free men still. If you have enjoyed this liberty, had your pardon sealed home upon your conscience, your soul unfettered, and set at happy liberty, you can say, in the language of the text, "Good is the word of the Lord." Good indeed was the word when he spoke pardon to my soul, liberated my captive mind, brought my soul into the liberty of the children of God. I ran the way of his commands then with alacrity and delight. "I will run the way of thy commands, when thou hast enlarged my heart." "Good is the word of the Lord."

Once more. "God's precious word will sanctify the soul. Hence Christ says, in his address to his Father, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." If the word of truth has a sanctifying influence, it must be good. But it may be asked, What is sanctification? It certainly is a very important subject, and there is a great deal of contention in the religious world about it. Some talk of "progressive sanctification." If they mean by this that a person gets more righteous and holy, until he arrives at last to sinless perfection, I must say there is no such sanctification to be found, only in the minds of deluded men and women; for the Scriptures declare no such doctrine. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." My views of sanctification are simply these: First.—One very important part, or branch of sanctification, consists in the Father setting apart in the decree of election his own blessed family, as we read,

"He hath set apart him that is godly for himself;" that is, for a special purpose and special end, as the things in the temple. The priests who ministered in the sanctuary service were set apart to that work and place to which they were appointed: so the children of God were sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Christ Jesus, and called.

Secondly.—These are all sanctified with the blood of Christ. His righteousness justifies from the curse of a broken law, and his blood cleanseth from all sin; it delivers from sin, and from going down into the pit of hell, which is the wages due to sin; and in this precious blood we have redemption, even the forgiveness of sins. Hence we read, "That he might sanctify the people with his own blood, he suffered without the gate: let us therefore go forth to him without the camp, bearing his reproach." In this way Christ is made of God unto us righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Take away sin from man, and you leave him a righteous man; impute to him the righteousness of Christ and he becomes the righteousness of God in it; consequently the Lord doth not behold iniquity in Jacob, nor perverseness in Israel.

Thirdly.—We are sanctified by the Holy Ghost. All those who are sanctified by God the Father, and made perfect by Christ, are by the Holy Ghost called with a holy calling, gathered from the east, west, north and south, set apart from the world, vessels of mercy prepared for the Master's service; as the Lord saith, "This people have I formed for myself, they shall shew forth my praise;" and the Holy Ghost, working powerfully in the sinner's heart, makes him willing to give himself into the hand of the Lord, to take up his cross and follow Christ, and is solemnly dedicated to the service of the Lord. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." I do not know what kind of doctrine you get in Coventry as to perfection, but I think the apostle here certainly explains himself. He says, "Let us go on unto perfection." What does he mean? He tells us: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man;" not tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, but built up in the truth, rooted, settled and grounded in the truth. This is perfection; first babes in knowledge; then little children; then young men, and afterwards fathers. First the blade, afterwards the ear, then the full corn in the ear. The grain is ripened, the sickle is thrust in, the corn cut down, and gathered into the garner. In this respect, the saints do progress; but as to getting better or holier, it is like the Ethiopian expecting to change his color, or the leopard his spots. Depraved nature is ever the same, unchanged and unchangeable. The grace of God is a distinct thing. Grace and flesh are very near neighbors, yet in no way related, but quite distinct. Unless we are able to distinguish between these two, we shall never understand the Scriptures, nor the mystery of faith in a poor sinner's conscience; the flesh and spirit; the old man and the new; the law in the members, and the law in the mind. These are found in the self-same soul. The old man will not get better; but the saint will grow in "grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." They go from strength to strength, till they all appear in Zion before God. This is being sanctified by God's truth. We frequently ask God to sanctify our trials. Now, in this respect, how often the truth has had its sanctifying influence in our souls. The Lord often so overrules or manages our trials for us that they end in profit to our souls, and bring glory to his precious name. "Good is the word of the Lord."

I will close the whole by saying that one word of the Lord is peculiarly good—God's promise never to leave or forsake us, or the work of his own hands. He is the Rock, and his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment; a God of truth, and without iniquity, just and right is he. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

The Lord grant you and me to know from heartfelt experience that the word of God in this respect is truly good. May the Lord add his blessing. Amen.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

EVERY SUBSCRIBER AN AGENT.

FROM now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

Any old subscriber who will pay up his own subscription to December, 1894, and send us a new subscriber at one dollar between now and the first of January next, may also with the order send a new name FREE, making three subscriptions to the end of 1894 for three dollars.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscription to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 5, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you inclosed a short letter which I received from brother Slawson some little time since, which will explain itself. I do not feel that I can now add anything more upon the "means" heresy, as suggested by brother Slawson. Perhaps I may be able to do so in the future. Meanwhile I would be glad for any brother to write upon it who feels to do so, for its God-dishonoring nature cannot be too plainly exposed. I am glad that brother Slawson can indorse what I wrote upon the subject.

I remain your brother in hope,
F. A. CHICK.

BURDETT, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1893.

ELDER F. A. CHICK—MY DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—I was greatly pleased and edified in reading your article in the SIGNS this morning of yesterday's date (August 9th) on the subject of "means" in the salvation of sinners. Yet though so good, and so far above my ability to write, there is still one proof which seems stronger than any other single one that you cited that was directly from the Bible. You will find it in Acts xviii. 9, 10. It seems that Paul had been preaching for a time in Corinth, and had not yet been blessed with the sight of many who received his testimony, when the Lord appeared to him in a vision at night, telling him to "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city. And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them."

The point in this you will anticipate, no doubt, before I state it. That is, that God declared that he had much people there before Paul had preached to them, or had used any means to convert them; and as God is of one mind, and changes not, those people at Corinth that were then his could not be made so by Paul's preaching. They were his people before the world began, and Paul's preaching could have no saving power in them, only to make them glad and rejoice in the knowledge of Jesus in name, whose Spirit of holiness, I believe, he makes his people love even among savage nations; for he has a people in every nation, kindred, tongue and people.

I feel impressed that the Lord will not have me proceed farther in other expressions on this point, as I thought in God's help to try to do when I began. It is about six years since my hand became tremulous, but for a year past has been at times almost well again, when I seem to be writing in the line of my duty; but I judge that God will not help me to write more now, because I am sure his guidance is as manifest in my physical frame as it is in my mind. I think he hinders me sometimes from doing things that I seek to do through physical agencies. It makes no matter to me how a thing is brought to pass; it is God that has done it all the same, "for of him, and to him, and through him, are all things." Nothing ever happened outside of him, and never will, any more than it could happen outside of space. If I should attempt to prove the reverse of this I should be found fighting against God; and I am sure, dear brother, that you understand how unequal the contest is for mortal man to fight against omnipotence.

I do not find a better chirography in this than I began with, but I write much easier than when I began, though I have been continuously at it. What may be the reason for it God knows, and he fills his purpose in it, for there can be nothing outside of his purpose. I am aware that many believe many things to be outside of his purpose, who believe that some things are according to it; but I trust you are not embraced among them. I can only say that I have no theory in the matter, but believe as I cannot help believing, because God wrought it in me.

Your brother in the Lord,

W. B. SLAWSON.

P. S.—I wrote the above last evening, and the thought occurred to me this morning that possibly you would do as some others have done with my letters, and send it to the SIGNS for publication without asking my consent. I do not forbid you to do the same, but recommend you to take up the subject again on the basis of Acts xviii. and treat it yourself, as I am sure you can do it so much better than I can. At the first glance I think of Hiram, king of Tyre, who "was a lover of David," and ask why he loved him, if not because he had passed from death unto life, and loved the living ones in Zion. Then there is the widow of Sarepta, that entertained Elijah; and possibly Naaman, servant of the king of Syria, who was cured of his leprosy by bathing in Jordan, as directed by Elisha. These things could be dwelt upon to much profit, I think. Please do it.

W. B. S.

NORA SPRINGS, Iowa, July 7, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—There has been a subject on my mind for some time past, and I will attempt to offer a few thoughts, which you may print if you think best, in hope that some brother or sister may be enabled to more fully enter into the subject; for being a part of the "Scripture given by inspiration of God," it is no doubt "profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness," &c.

A Levite, one of those whose office it was to stand in the outer court of the temple and "minister before the congregation," had for his wife a woman of Bethlehem, an Israelite, born in the city of David.

These sons of Levi seem to me to typify in the gospel dispensation the ministry, though perhaps not the perfect image "of these good things to come."

This Levite's wife, after her husband had taken her away, returned to her earthly father's house, and sowed to the flesh four months.—See Judges xix. Her husband, in spite of this, went to bring her to his home. Her father delayed their return in every way possible; but when he would not be hindered longer, they started on their way to the house of the Lord; for there is where this Levite declared he was going. Compelled by circumstances to lodge in Gibeah, the house was surrounded by "sons of Belial" (Benjaminites, too, they were), who sought the poor Levite's life. Hedged up by circumstances, to save his own life he surrenders his wife to their brutality, and she is slain. Her truant return to her father's house has cost her life, and her husband conveys her body to his home. He then divides it into twelve parts, and sends a part to each tribe of Israel "in all their coasts." The tribe of Benjamin was almost exterminated for the crime, and left without wives; were only granted those "who did not come up to worship," and the "dancers," &c. Yet in the battle, when the great sin of Benjamin was by the command of the Lord avenged, they prevailed the first and second days, and even slew thirty the third day, before the battle was against them.

Now, what instruction are we to receive from this inspired account? Is it not a warning to the church, and every Bethlehem-born soul, not to return to the earthly estate, and live after, and sow to the flesh? "For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

Then, again, the love that prompted the Levite to go to her rescue. He was no hireling, that cared not, but, enduring the shame, he went to her rescue in her degraded, fallen estate. I feel that in this character I see the type of the true gospel minister, who tries to reclaim erring brethren, in the spirit of the divine Master, and conduct them back to the "house of the Lord;" "to the weak becoming as weak," to save them from the errors and delusions of this world, from the lo heres and lo theres preached for gospel in this age, coupled with all the machinations of the flesh and the devil, which war against our hope.

How different the character of this Levite is from king Saul. David must put on Saul's armor; but it would not fit; it was too large altogether. Saul was modest at the time of his anointing, and "hid in the rubbish," and had to be brought out. No doubt he would profess great meekness, and claim to be only dust and ashes; but now this beardless youth will not, or cannot, fight in Saul's armor, and goes out only in the strength of Israel's God (an innovation surely), and chooses by command five smooth stones from the brook; and with the force given by the sling, the giant is slain; and now what is this we hear? "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his tens of thousands." The same spirit which actuated the sons of Belial, now attempts the destruction of David.

The deeds of the flesh are manifest, and envy and hate do their deadly work. The church is disrupted, and its parts go abroad, with the sad history "for a testimonial in all the coasts of Israel." Sometimes the fight seems unequal, and for two days the wrong prevails; but let brethren take courage; for at the appointed time the Lord will fight for you. Remember, we war not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, and spiritual wickedness in high places. It is God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. O that he would turn again the captivity of Zion, and build her waste places, and turn the feet of the loved ones to come and worship in his holy mountain; and, approaching by that new and living way which he hath consecrated through the veil, that is to say, his flesh, offer up spiritual sacrifices, holy, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. May we watch over one another for good (not evil), and not be overcome of evil, but rather overcome evil with good.

I do love the SIGNS for the good messages in it, and I do want sometimes to travel east and meet the brethren of Chemung and others associations in New York, and hear those able ministers whose writings I sometimes see, and which are so much comfort to me.

I will close my letter by saying, do with this as you please.

I am, I hope, your brother in gospel bonds,

GARRETT MURPHY.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 27, 1893.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I desire to express my appreciation of an article written by our dearly loved brother H. Cox, published in the SIGNS of September 27th, setting forth the precious truth the Spirit of Christ in David gave utterance to in the language found in Psalm cxxvi. 6. Our brother is favored to see and rejoice in a very sweet portion of the doctrine of God our Savior. I refer more particularly to the truth as it is in Jesus regarding the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the sleeping saints. To my mind the article referred to is simply grand. It is with me a matter of regret that so few of God's dear children see the truth that God in his infinite goodness has revealed to our brother. I hope I have been taught that unless the Spirit shall take of the things of Jesus and show them unto us we shall never see them; and so when in conversation with our kindred in Christ I find that they are ignorant of the truth our brother has given expression to, or when I listen to the preaching of the gospel by one of God's ministers, and hear it said that Jesus is not to come again, and that so far as the saints who have departed this mortal life are concerned the resurrection has already taken place, the feeling I have (when led by the Spirit of Christ) is that God has not as yet revealed this portion of his truth to them. Until it is so revealed I cannot expect them to see it. May the great Teacher in Israel instruct us one and all, and enable us to feed in the green pastures of his word. Amen.

R. M. STRONG.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Mrs. H. Halsey, N. Y., 1, Mrs. N. B. Libby, Iowa, 1.—Total, $2.00.

MARRIAGES.

At the residence of the bride's parents, near Howell's Depot, N. Y., Oct. 31st, 1893, by Elder Benton Jenkins, Mr. Wm. Ashton, of Denver, Colorado, and Miss Ella E., daughter of Mr. Harrison Thompson.

Nov. 1st, 1893, in the city of New York, by Elder Wm. L. Beebe, Mr. Charles G. Dolson, of Kingsland, N. J., and Miss Annie Allen, of New York.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEPARTED this life Oct. 8th, 1893, after a short yet complicated and severe illness, brother Harmon Slauson, of Batavia Kill, Delaware Co., N. Y., in the 54th year of his age.

Truly in this sudden and sad bereavement our dear sister Slauson is bereft in a fourfold manner, for her sorrowing heart was bowed under the loss of brother, father and mother in less than six months time, and but for the sustaining grace of God she must have sunk down under the heavy weight.

Brother Slauson's death was supposed to be caused by rheumatism of the heart, with other ailments. He was an active member of the First Old School Baptist Church of Roxbury, uniting nearly thirty years ago. We sadly miss him in our meetings, as well as at his dear home. Many have been the pleasant visits that I have enjoyed under his hospitable roof; but I shall see him no more. All would appear desolate on the earth at times were it not for the efficient reign of grace. The Lord alone can overrule this tribulation wisely. May the lone widow and relatives turn to their stronghold as prisoners of hope; and may he bless them with his holy presence, enabling them to be still and know that he is God.

Brother Slauson left besides his wife a step-mother, seven brothers and four sisters, with their families and other relatives, as well as the church, to mourn. His funeral was largely attended at the meeting-house, where Elders Vail, Keene and myself attended the services to comfort the afflicted.

J. D. HUBBELL.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

By request of the deeply afflicted mother, our dear sister, I send you for publication a notice of the death of our cherished niece, Libbie Bellis, wife of John W. Bellis, and daughter of the late Wm. Rittenhouse. She died at her home in Stockton, N. J., Sept. 7th, 1893, aged 29 years, 9 months and 11 days.

She had never made a public profession, but for years had manifested an interest in the truth, and had a decided preference for Old School Baptist preaching. She leaves to mourn their loss an affectionate husband, three small children (the youngest only three weeks old), a loving mother, four brothers and two sisters, besides many other relatives and friends, to whom she had greatly endeared herself.

Three times within a little more than three years has the bitter cup of bereavement been pressed to the unwilling lips of the mother. First her son Charley, then her husband, and now her daughter, have been taken from her fond embrace, and we feel that her afflictions are heavy indeed; but we hope that she and the grief-stricken husband, together with all the bereaved, may bow in quiet submission to the righteous Disposer of all events, and rest in the sweet assurance that she whom we were all so unwilling to spare has been taken by the loving Savior to dwell forever in his blissful presence beyond the reach of mortal woe.

A comforting discourse was preached at her residence on Sept. 11th by Elder B. Bundy to a large and solemn audience from Job xix. 21, after which the remains were interred in the Frenchtown cemetery.

A. K. RITTENHOUSE.

LOCKTOWN, N. J., Oct. 28, 1893.

By request I send for publication in the SIGNS the notice of the departure from this mortal state of sister Mary E. Woolford, of Church Creek, Maryland, Wednesday evening, Oct. 18th. She was the second daughter of brother Whitefield Woolford, and widow of brother S. B. B. Woolford. Her age was 73 years.

Many who read this in different and distant parts of the country will remember her as she appeared in her hospitable home, or as a visitor at associations, and will involuntarily say, "Our dear sister!" There were eleven brothers and sisters younger than herself, and two older. I will quote from a letter of her sister, Susie L. Woolford:

"When she left the home of her youth a bride it was to enter the old, ancestral home, within calling distance of her fondly-loved ones, always ready to come in joy or sorrow. Her beloved husband was an invalid for some time. Lovingly and faithfully she devoted herself to him; and when he was taken home to dwell in the house of the Lord forever she turned to her little ones. Her baby-boy, Frank, when eleven, was thrown from his horse and killed almost instantly. She thought her heart would break, but these words came with great power and comforted her, 'Be still, and know that I am God.' In a few days after his death she received a letter from Elder Barton, then more than eighty years of age, telling her of having called with Frank to see a friend whose arm had been crushed. As they walked away Frank said, 'Elder Barton, this is very sad; but it is the Lord's will, and it is not right for us to murmur.' She, with a sister older and one younger than herself, was baptized in the beautiful river at the foot of the lawn, Sept. 16th, 1843. Father wrote in the church book, 'What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits to me? The church is full of joy and rejoicing.' Fifty years in the church here, loving to honor and adore her heavenly Father, and with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs singing and making melody in her heart unto the Lord!

"She had for a year been almost imperceptibly failing. Five weeks ago she spent the day in the dear old home of her childhood, with a pet niece who was to leave the next day for school in the far west. Careful and loving hands attended to all that could be for her help and comfort; and she laughed at being treated as an invalid, and said, 'I believe you think I need help. Why, I feel strong and well.' Two weeks before the last she was taken with a troublesome cough, arising from an abscess on the lung. She was anxious for me to go to the association, and prompted the doctor to insist on my going. Every day she would say, 'I think I will be up to-morrow.' She was lovely during that two weeks, looking, with her folded hands, to say, 'My work is done; I lay me down to die.' We had many precious talks about the wonderful love that unites the saints of God. One day she said, 'If it is the Lord's will I would like to get up for a little while; but he knows best.' The last night, after sleeping sweetly for hours, she awoke, saying, 'I feel bad.' Ella said, 'Where, mother?' The reply was, 'All over.' Then, 'I want to tell you, I want that you shall live together, a happy little family.' 'O mother, how can I give you up?' Calmly she said, 'The loss is all yours; to me it is eternal gain.' Then she repeated some precious portions of Scripture. Turning to me she said, 'If I die I want my children to send for Elder Durand to preach my funeral. He preached darling Frank's and Lulu's. He will come.' Soon she said, 'They are sorrowful now because we cannot be at the association.' After awhile she fell asleep, and slept so soundly that we feared she would not wake. We called for her son and his wife, and sent for her daughter, who was at home with her very sick husband. The sun rose upon a touching scene; the son, two daughters, daughter-in-law, eight grandchildren and her sister kissing her farewell, the little ones sobbing as though their hearts would break. She could not speak, and the touching appeal, 'Call me once more, mother,' brought no tear to her eye. Though conscious, she seemed to be beyond earthly love. All day Ella sat beside her, and toward the last she would raise her arm and place it around her neck. She lingered until after sunset. Fourteen were around her bed. She passed away so quietly that we could not tell when she ceased to breathe. Faithfully and tenderly she was nursed by Ella and her son's wife."

I will add but little, though my heart would prompt me to say much. It has been a little more than twenty-nine years since I first met sister Mary at her own home, and from that time I have known her as a devoted christian, a loving sister and a faithful friend. Her house was one of the pleasant homes for those who love the truth, and I am glad to know that it still remains so. All of her family united in the cordial welcome which she gave to all who came. With her the duties that devolve upon a member of the church were highly prized privileges, and it seemed her highest pleasure to fulfill them. She remembered them to the last, making some arrangements with reference to the meeting at the church there on Sunday and Monday night, and with reference to the association which began on Wednesday at a sister church. The many brethren in the ministry and others who have visited that church from time to time know how dear it was to her, and how highly she appreciated the ministry of the word, and how careful she was to have the meetings kept. However few might be at any meeting, she was one of that few able to go. In conversation she made spiritual things first.

The funeral was on Sunday, Oct. 23d, and was attended by the large number of immediate relatives, except some whom sickness and others whom great distance prevented, and by a large number of devoted friends. Their sad faces showed the place she held in their hearts. Psalm xxiii. was read at the house; and the words in John xi. 25, "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die," were read for a text at the meeting-house. The most profound attention was given by the large congregation to the preaching of the gospel.

A friend and sister to whom she was very dear, who was present at the funeral, has suggested the following beautiful and appropriate stanza to close this notice:

"Rest, weary head!
Lie down to slumber in the peaceful tomb;
Light from above has broken through its gloom.
Here in the place where once thy Savior lay,
Where he shall wake thee on a future day,
Like a tired child upon its mother's breast,
Rest, sweetly rest!"

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa.

CHURCH NOTICES.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Middletown & Walkill Old School Baptist Church, held at Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 28th, 1893, brother Fred S. Brink, a member of said church, was licensed to preach the gospel wherever in the providence of God a door may be opened to him; and we heartily commend him to the fellowship and confidence of the churches of the saints.

BENTON JENKINS, Mod.

G. A. EMORY, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

The yearly meeting of the Olive & Hurley Old School Baptist Church will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 15th and 16th, 1893.

Those coming from the east will be met at Olive Branch, and those from the west at West Shokan and Brown's Station.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to attend.

A. BOGART, Clerk.

The church at Broad Creek, Sussex Co., Del., expects to hold her yearly meeting on the second Sunday in November, 1893, and Saturday before, commencing at ten o'clock each day. Brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Trains from the north and south on the Delaware R. R. pass Laurel between two and three p. m., which will be met on Friday (10th), and visitors will be welcomed and cared for.

The anniversary meeting at Delmar occurs on the following Tuesday (14th). We hope to see a goodly number of visiting ministers and brethren.

A. B. FRANCIS.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt.. 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1893.

NO. 46.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 27, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By private letter brother J. M. Armsberry, of Mason City, Neb., has requested me to write in the SIGNS upon the words found in 2 Peter ii. 1-3. I feel somewhat like trying to comply with his request. The Scripture referred to reads as follows: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not."

During all the past years of my ministry my mind has not been often led to speak or write of the things which seem to me to be couched in the words of this and other similar Scriptures. Not that I have counted them as light matters, but that somehow my mind has not been led to rest upon these things. Since the above-named request came to hand, however, I have felt like trying to comply, and so to-day I have taken my pen to that end. I have seen different views presented by brethren writing upon this same Scripture, and I do not suppose that what I may write here will meet the views of all; and I trust that I may not so write as to appear careless of the feelings and views of brethren who may differ. I have long ago learned that it is easy for me to be mistaken in my views of a text, or of anything whatever; but I will suggest such thoughts as seem to me in harmony with this Scripture, and leave them for the judgment of others.

In a letter published in the SIGNS recently I said that no part of any of the epistles was addressed to unregenerate men, but that sometimes unregenerate men were spoken of. This is not a captious striving about words, but is a matter of real importance for us to remember when we read the epistles or discourse upon them. I thus refer to this because it seems to me that in this second epistle of Peter and second chapter we have some things said about men who are not believers, but enemies of our Lord Jesus Christ.

This letter is addressed to them of like precious faith with Peter and the rest of the apostles; and it seems to me that the second chapter contains a warning against deceivers and ungodly men. Men who make a profession of godliness, and have never felt its power, but are seeking to serve their own interests, are ever the most dangerous enemies to the truth and cause of God. The people of God are to be especially aware of them.

I wish to also say that for a long time I was divided in my mind as to the characters designed to be set forth in this chapter. This grew out of the fact that there are two or three expressions in this chapter which I found it difficult to apply to men who had never been true believers; such as the words in the first verse, "Denying the Lord that bought them," and the expressions found in verses twenty and twenty-one, which I will not pause to quote. While on the other hand it seemed impossible for me to believe that the things said in the balance of the chapter could ever be applied by the Holy Ghost to men who did truly believe in Jesus. I am aware that some brethren, for whose judgment and understanding I must ever have a higher regard than I can ever have for my own, believe fully that all that is written in this chapter belongs alone to true but erring disciples of the Lord Jesus.

Yet I must frankly say that of late years my mind has become somewhat settled to the contrary of this view, and it has seemed to me that Peter is here earnestly warning his brethren against evil men who have never really known the Lord, but have crept in among them and won their confidence by false professions. One reason for this is the very principle mentioned before, viz., that here when speaking of these false teachers the third person is continually used, and never the second person. These false teachers are never directly addressed; they are never warned against their pernicious ways, nor exhorted to forsake them. This, it seems to me, cannot be comprehended if indeed they were disobedient but real children of God. Those who had obtained like precious faith with the apostles were warned against these false teachers, lest they be led astray by them; but these false teachers who, if indeed they be real disciples, were in a worse plight than those whom they led astray, have yet no warning nor exhortation addressed to them in all this letter. This, I say, seems inexplicable to me upon the ground that they ever had been real believers in and disciples of Jesus.

But how, it may pertinently be asked, can this view be in harmony with the expression referred to above, viz., "Even denying the Lord that bought them," &c.? I might well ask, How can the view that these were real disciples be reconciled with all the balance of the chapter? But asking a question is not answering another; and so I will suggest what seems to me most consistent with this chapter, and with what the Bible teaches concerning the doctrine of the atonement. I have been led to the conclusion that this expression, "Even denying the Lord that bought them," relates to the public profession which they had made, by which they had crept into the fellowship of the churches. Membership in the churches, and a place as teachers in the churches, could never have been theirs had they not professed faith in Christ. Now they use the very name of Christ as vantage-ground upon which to assail him and his words and his truth. We must also remember that as yet there had been no warring organizations, claiming to be churches of Christ, and so among themselves these false teachers arose; and with true believers these false teachers had confessed Christ as a Savior. Now it seems to me more reasonable to believe that the apostle here refers to this profession, not, however, meaning that they had really been washed in the Redeemer's blood.

As regards verses twenty and twenty-one, I will just remark that if they do not refer to those who are allured away by these false teachers, rather than to the teachers themselves, do they say or imply anything more than or different from the narrative recorded by Matthew in chapter twelve or by Luke in chapter eleven concerning the unclean spirit which goes out of a man? The Savior himself applied this parable to the Jews who had run after him earnestly, but were now turned against him with greater rage than ever. They had better never have known even what they had known, for their last state was worse than the first.

Before entering upon the words of the text I will call attention to a few similar Scriptures. First, read the law concerning false prophets in Deuteronomy xiii., beginning at the first verse. All that is written in the law holds out no evidence that the false prophet may be one who has really known the Lord in the salvation of his soul.

Jesus, in Matthew xxiv. 11, said, "And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many." Paul, in Acts xx. 29, 30, says, "After my departure shall grievous wolves enter. * * * Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things," &c. In 1 Corinthians xi. 19 Paul says, "For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." In 1 Timothy iv. 1, 2 we read, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron." Read also 2 Timothy iii. 1-5, which is too lengthy to quote here, but which is very similar to the chapter containing the text upon which I am writing. In 1 John iv. 1, 2, disciples are told to try the spirits, because many false prophets are gone out into the world; and the test is that true prophets confess that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, while false prophets deny Jesus. Lastly, read also the epistle of Jude, which almost repeats this second chapter of second Peter. These Scriptures all seem to me to bear upon the same thing, and to present to view the same ungodly characters, and strengthen me in my conclusion that these false teachers are not disciples of Jesus, except by outward profession merely.

This, then, according to the text, we have to look forward to: there shall be false teachers among us. Not only men who teach sentiments and doctrines that are false, but men who are false themselves, having no regard for the truth. These are altogether different teaching from true brethren who may inadvertently hold and teach for a time some mistaken sentiment. Such mistakes the best and wisest and most God-fearing teachers are liable to; but God forbid that we should call such ones false teachers. False prophets were men who knew not God, and had no love for him nor for his people; and the same is true of false teachers now. The reason why heresies are suffered to come in is given in 1 Corinthians xi. 19, "that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." Heresies introduced by false teachers act as a test to separate the precious from the vile.

They privily (or secretly) bring in damnable heresies. All heresies are to be condemned; but all wrong views of texts of Scripture are not damnable heresies. Damnable heresies are such as amount to a denial of Christ, either by teaching that he did not come into the world to save sinners, or by denying that sinners are saved by his coming. Either sentiment denies the work of Christ, and is a damnable heresy. Sixty years ago our fathers faced and fought a denial of Jesus Christ in the form of a theory of an atonement which was powerless to save anybody, which was taught by Andrew Fuller. In these latter years their children have been compelled to fight this same heresy, which came up in the form that sinners of Adam's race were not the subjects of election and redemption. This is as emphatically a denial of Christ as is the general atonement theory, which is a theory without any atonement at all. Both are surely damnable heresies.

"And bring upon themselves swift destruction." This was illustrated sixty years ago, when Andrew Fuller and all who taught as he did were soon separated from the true followers of Christ, who believed in Jesus as a real and a full Savior; and it has again been illustrated in these latter years by the utter cutting off of those who brought in the heresy that Christ did not die for sinners of Adam's race; a theory so subversive of all the hope that is set before us in the gospel that I cannot think of it other than as a damnable heresy.

"And many shall follow their pernicious ways." The literal meaning of "pernicious" here is insolent, outrageous behavior, intemperate, licentious, lascivious. Surely abhorrence could not find stronger language than this in which to express itself; and yet many shall follow these ways—many professed followers of Jesus, and some of them no doubt sincere but illy-informed children of God. Sheep are the most foolish creatures living, and the Lord's sheep often do not belie their name in this respect; and so false teachers again and again make inroads upon the flock, like grievous wolves, devouring and destroying. May God ever keep us from such hurtful snares.

"By reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." In verse thirteen of this same chapter the apostle testifies of these false teachers that they are "spots and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you." Jude says, "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear." As a white garment, when spotted and defiled, is spoken evil of because of the spots upon it, so likewise these spots of defilement cause the way of truth to be evil spoken of. Professing the name of Christ to be upon them, by their deceivings they cast reproach upon that name, and men hold in contempt the name and religion of Jesus because of them. The doctrine of Jesus always will be abhorrent to the natural man; but how terrible it is when professed followers of Jesus live beneath even that honesty and morality practiced by the world!

"And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." In other words, these false teachers think of nothing and desire nothing but their own advantage; and instead of seeking for gain by open legitimate labor or trade, in competition honorable and above-board, they pretend to desire the good of the humble followers of Jesus, and are more gushing in their professions of love than any true teachers ever are or have need of being; and so deceive many of the unsuspecting of the children of God, and thus are able to trade to their own profit upon the very love and fellowship which are so precious among the people of God. This very love of God and of his people in the hearts of his little ones prompts them to liberally minister of their earthly goods to those who seem to them to be loving and zealous servants of God; and thus these false teachers, deceivers and selfish as they are, impose upon the people of God in many ways, and make merchandise of them, that is, use them for their own gain or advantage. Their words are feigned; that is, they do not speak their true sentiments, nor let their true purposes be known.

But the judgment of God against them does not linger, and their damnation does not slumber. God is not blind to the evil that is in them, nor to their ungodly deeds, and they shall receive their own reward. In the verses that follow the apostle puts these false teachers by the side of the angels that sinned, who have been cast down to hell, and delivered into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment (or condemnation); by the side of the ungodly world drowned in the flood; by the side of Sodom and Gomorrah, condemned to be overthrown as an example to the ungodly, and to all who, like these cities, should lead filthy lives; and by the side of natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed; and he adds that they "shall utterly perish in their own corruption." He compares them to Balaam, the son of Bosor, who prophesied for reward; and he says the mist of darkness is reserved for them forever. I must confess that I can easier understand how the language in verse one and in verses twenty and twenty-one can be used of those who have only a head-knowledge of the word, and have only the outward profession, than I can understand how all the rest of the chapter can apply to any who have ever had a saving knowledge of the truth.

The people of God are here warned to expect such evils to arise among them. They are therefore bound to have a watch set within as well as without. It is hard to believe that evil men can desire admission into the churches for the sake of the gain to be made out of it; yet such things have been, and such things must be expected. These men are never satisfied with the plain, simple doctrine of the cross, but must magnify themselves instead of Christ. There are many selfish motives which actuate men besides the love of mere self. A great name, great influence, great power, to be a leader of men, are strong motives in many hearts; but all these motives are contrary to Christ, and are for the advantage of self. Thus heresies of every kind and name are brought in, and Jesus is denied and wounded in the house of his friends. How abhorrent such a spirit must ever be to a true, humble christian minister we see expressed in Paul's language in 1 Corinthians iii. 1-8. God forbid that such a spirit as desires leadership should come in and deceive the churches now.

I cannot close without returning for a moment to the expression, "Even denying the Lord that bought them." "Even" denying, &c.; as though this were the crowning heresy of all damnable heresies. Practically I can see no difference between the spirit that denies that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, and has perfectly paid the ransom price for his chosen, and that spirit which denies that men have been bought. It is denying the Lord to deny that Christ has come; and it is denying Christ to say that he has not perfectly accomplished the redemption of sinners of Adam's fallen race. Both are damnable heresies; and according to the force of the word "even" in the text, are the extreme of damnable heresies. May God grant that none of his children among our churches be led into these errors of the wicked, and enslaved in this bondage of corruption, under the deceitful hope of finding larger liberty there.

I leave these remarks. I trust that I have not seemed to assail wantonly the dear brethren who may differ from me. These views seem to me to be scriptural, else I should not have written them.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ, whom we desire to always confess and never deny,

F. A. CHICK.

Ghent, Ky., Oct. 3, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The psalmist says, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."—Psa. cxxxiii. 1.

The word unity is defined by Brown thus; "Unity of the Spirit is that union which subsists between Christ and his saints, by which the same Spirit dwells in both; and that unity of saints among themselves, by which, being joined to the same Head, and having the same Spirit dwelling in them, they have the same graces of faith, love, hope," &c.

The psalmist introduces this subject by calling special attention to the great truth he was about to record. He says, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Evidently it is good because they have the same Spirit dwelling in them. They are made experimentally christians by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit; and that indwelling is because of their being born of the Spirit. Our Lord said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." This presents the contrast between that which exists in all the posterity of the first Adam and those who are born of the Spirit. The former cannot dwell together in unity, because of the indwelling of the corruptions which are the product of the birth of the flesh. In all ages of the world laws have been enacted and courts established to compel communities to dwell together in harmony. But the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus is that which causes his saints to dwell together in unity. Naturally the sons of the same father are brethren; but they do not always dwell together in unity. Cain and Abel did not dwell in unity. Joseph and his brethren did not dwell together in unity. So it has been through all the past ages, and so it will be to the end of time. The apostle says, "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revilings, and such like."—Gal. v. 19-21. The apostle says these works of the flesh are manifest. Those who are by divine grace enabled to look within and see the corruptions that dwell in their earthly nature are ever realizing that these works are manifest. Yea, those works of the flesh are causing the children of the kingdom to fear and to doubt their being born of the Spirit. It was the power of those indwelling corruptions that caused the apostle to cry out in deep agony of soul, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" All the wisdom and learning of men, all the powers of earth combined, could not accomplish that great and wonderful work. But he realized the impotency of all things except the sufferings and death of Christ. He says, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him." Then, evidently, salvation is of the Lord, and he, he only, can deliver us from the body of this death. That body of death was all those corruptions of the flesh. They exist, and have existed through all past time in all the fallen sons and daughters of an apostate Adam, and result by reason of their unity with him, and consequently by reason of the birth of the flesh. That flesh is not changed by or in the birth of the Spirit. It remained the same in the apostle, and it remains the same in all the saints. Those corruptions were and are sin in all its horrid forms; and the wages of sin is death. The Lord says by the prophet, "Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine. The soul that sinneth it shall die." Evidently all are sinners, because the corruptions of the flesh are in all by reason of the birth of the flesh. A stream cannot rise higher than its fountain-head. The converse of that truth could be as easily established as that any that are born of the flesh are without the corruptions of the flesh. Those corruptions are sin, and the wages of sin is death. Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression. To Adam a law was given, and he transgressed that law, and by that transgression became a sinner and subject to death. But his descendants sinned and death reigned over them when no law had been given them. The great Lawgiver had not said to those who lived from Adam to Moses, "Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Yet death reigned through all those long ages and centuries in all its fearful forms. And why? Because they were all the seed of an earthly Adam, in whom and in whose posterity dwelt all those corruptions of the flesh which are sin; and the wages of sin is death. The Lord said, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Then, evidently, all who are born of the flesh must die. Adam died, and all who are born of the flesh are but Adam multiplied. But Adam is "the figure of him that was to come." As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Our Lord said, "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship in Spirit and in truth." None, by reason of the birth of the flesh, can worship God in spirit and in truth, because of the indwelling in them of the corruptions of the flesh. They are carnally minded, and the carnal mind is enmity against God. The wise king of Israel said, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." But of those who are not born of the Spirit the apostle says, "There is no fear of God before their eyes." He further says, "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit." "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Then he does not worship God in spirit and in truth. But they that are born of the Spirit have dwelling in them and reigning in them the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. Against such there is no law. There is no law against them, because they are the gifts of God, given to all his saints in the spiritual birth. This is why they dwell together in unity. When beholding the great beauties and glories of the plan of life and salvation through the finished work of their glorious Redeemer, then those heavenly gifts permeate their hearts. It is then they sweetly sing,

"O love divine! how sweet thou art!
When shall I find my willing heart
All taken up by thee?
I thirst and faint and die to prove
The greatness of redeeming love,
The love of Christ to me."

Having the graces of the Spirit dwelling in them, they love God, and love one another, and have unclouded joy dwelling in them, when they are made to know that their glorious Lord hath said to them, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." Obedience to that command is easy, sweet and precious, because they are all born of the same Spirit, heirs to the same glorious inheritance, and destined to the same heavenly home. He also said to them, by his apostle John, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." God is love, and the dear saints who love each other have this assurance that they are partakers of the divine nature; that they are created in Christ Jesus. They are created for his glory. In this they have joy and rejoicing. They rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. They cry out, "According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise to the ends of the earth. Thy right hand is full of righteousness. Let mount Zion rejoice; let the daughters of Judah be glad because of thy judgments." They love to walk about Zion and behold her beauties; for it is there their glorious King reigns in holy triumph. It is there they dwell in heavenly unity. It is there they dwell in peace—that peace that passeth understanding. The world cannot understand or comprehend that joy and peace which reign in the Zion of our God, because to the world is not given the graces of the Spirit. None but those who are born of the Spirit can know or understand why saints love each other so. Moses, away back yonder, before Israel had crossed the Jordan, said, "Happy art thou, O Israel! who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency." Moses beheld spiritual Israel, a people saved by the Lord. And in this gospel day the cry of the saints is, "Salvation is of the Lord." Moses ascribed salvation unto the Lord; and you, dear little ones, in all your hours of rejoicing ascribe salvation unto the Lord. So there is a unity of spirit, a unity and harmony, between you and him who received the law on the top of that mount which quaked to its very granite base because of the presence of the great I Am. That law entered because of sin. It was given because of the corruptions of the flesh. It was the law of sin and death; hence none could be saved by it. Moses did not ascribe salvation to that law, except a temporal salvation. He said to the children of Israel, "And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken to my commandments which I command you this day, to love the Lord your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, that I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thy oil."—Ex. xi. 13, 14. The salvation under the law was conditional and temporal. If Israel obeyed his commandments they should have the early and the latter rain; but when they rebelled, drouth, famine and the sword were sent upon them. But the salvation which is through the atoning blood of Jesus is not conditional. The angel said to Joseph, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Of that people the psalmist says, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness;" that holiness which is given them when they are born of the Spirit. O how beautiful is that holiness! It is not of the law, for "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin."—Rom. iii. 20. It is not by works of righteousness which we have done, but by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost. It is because God works in his saints to will and to do of his good pleasure. He creates in them a clean heart, and renews in them a right spirit. "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Then surely they are born of the Spirit, born of God, born not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. They belong to a spiritual kingdom, to that kingdom which can never be moved, nor be left to other people. In that kingdom they have all things that pertain to it. The graces of the Spirit are sweetly enjoyed by all the inhabitants of that kingdom, and they dwell together in the unity of the Spirit and in the bond of peace.

These thoughts have occurred to me when meditating on the joys that pervaded the hearts of God's dear people at the Licking Association at May's Lick last month. All was unity, all was harmony, at that meeting. Not a discordant note was heard. Jesus was preached by the heralds of the cross with whose presence we were blessed. Yes, that dear name was proclaimed to us in its great and wonderful fullness by Elders Gold, Badger, Durand, Lester and Eubanks, greatly to the comfort, instruction and edification of God's dear people. But all the beauties and glories that shine forth in that ever-precious name can never be seen nor told by the dear servants of our God till they are disrobed of mortality. Then they will be like him and see him as he is—see him in that glorious immortality in which all his redeemed host will be clad, when they come forth from the dark caverns of the tomb.

The saints had met at that association from many lands and climes, and they were kindly and hospitably entertained. They drank deeply from that great fountain, the glorious gospel of the Son of God. But the hour of separation came, when the parting hand was given and the parting tear was shed. There was one little one in that company who could from the depths of his heart adopt this language of the poet,

"Farewell, my dear brethren, farewell
all around;
Perhaps we'll not meet till the last trumpet shall sound;
To meet you in glory I give you my hand,
Our Savior to praise in a pure social band."

Please dispose of these thoughts as you may deem best, and believe me affectionately yours,

H. COX.

BENTONVILLE, Ark., Nov. 30, 1889.

EDITORS SIGNS OF THE TIMES—MY FRIENDS BELOVED IN GOSPEL BONDS:—In my feeble condition and solitude of thought the past has been my theme of meditation, the old landmarks of our everlasting Father, made sacred by his blood, and delivered to his church through the channels of his love, all of which our venerable fathers maintained and defended up to the time of their departure, and left as a legacy to the few now standing upon the walls of Zion, saying, "O Lord, give not thine heritage to reproach, nor let the enemy triumph." My pilgrimage has extended over sixty years with the dear Old Baptists, with loved ones of Mount Gilead, Kentucky, who for twenty years sent me as a messenger to Licking Association, there to behold the greetings of the saints, and the power and demonstration of the word, as it fell from the lips of the chosen servants of our God. Though now resting in eternal bliss, their words speak. It is sad to think of some departing from the living God, to serve other gods, as their ill-advised course proves they are not the meek followers of our dear Savior. In looking over the Minutes of the last session of the

(Continued on page 365.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 15, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

JUSTIFICATION BY WORKS.

G. BEEBE'S SONS:—I have felt so sad and doubtful lately, in regard to my acceptance in him who alone saves from all sin, that I have longed for some sweet assurance that I have been born again. If I am a child of grace I know I am the least; and of sinners I am chief. I often pick up my paper, the SIGNS, when cast down, and find much comfort from its pages. Please give your views on James ii. 24, if it is not asking too much, and oblige an INQUIRER AFTER TRUTH.

R E P L Y .

"Ye see how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only."—James ii. 24.

When one is found mourning under conscious sin, and hungering after that righteousness which is never found in the works of the flesh, the heart of every one who has been quickened by the grace of God must respond to that manifestation of the Spirit of truth. The very trials of those who are perplexed by such temptations, and writing bitter things against themselves as justly condemned before God, bring them into the most perfect fellowship with all who have fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope which is revealed in Christ Jesus. There can be no greater privilege afforded those whom God has called to the ministry of the word of truth than that by which they are enabled to remove from the path of any believer one occasion for doubt, under which the adversary has led him to question the reality of his hope in the grace of God. Yet not even an apostle could apply such comfort to one of the saints unless it is given by the great Comforter, the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, neither knoweth him. Much less can any uninspired minister of Christ assume to remove the dark mystery which oppresses the bewildered pilgrim in this gloomy desert of earthly trial. Still in the gracious providence of the dear Redeemer it is given to those who are led by his Spirit to comfort one another by reference to the consolations left on record in the inspired Scriptures. In this way the saints are fellow-helpers of each other, and so they do bear one another's burdens.

Many of the humble followers of Jesus have been troubled by the devices of the adversary, who would represent the declaration of our text as conflicting with the clear testimony of Paul when he says, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast."—Eph. ii. 8, 9.

In order to find the consistency of these two portions of inspired testimony it is only necessary to observe the literal connection of the passages. In his epistle to the saints at Ephesus Paul is dwelling upon the doctrine of divine grace in the redemption and salvation of enemies against God. There could be no hope for such characters in a system depending upon anything to be done by them. It is of the most vital importance to them, therefore, that they should understand that their own works have no part in securing the benefit of that salvation. As well might the dead Lazarus have rendered service by which to induce the Lord to give him natural life, as the sinner dead in sin could comply with conditions, or do any work whereby he might attain to eternal life. This is the essential truth which is established beyond contradiction by Paul in this letter to the Ephesian saints. So it is also plainly recorded in the demonstration addressed to the saints at Rome, that it is not by the works of the law that the promise is fulfilled. "Therefore, it is of faith, that it might be by grace, to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all."—Rom. iv. 16. No interpretation of any portion of Scripture can be correct if it conflicts with this unequivocal doctrine of God our Savior.

In the connection of our text James is presenting the law of Christ as "the perfect law of liberty," by which the spiritual Israelites shall be judged. He rebukes the presumptuous wickedness of those who would indulge their sinful inclinations under the pretext that they are thereby showing their faith in the power of divine grace to save them from justly merited condemnation. This rebuke is enforced by the specific and practical illustration. "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him?" Notice particularly that this is addressed exclusively to those whom James recognizes as his brethren. All such are included in the one salvation from sin and death which is alone by the blood of Jesus. But there is a salvation found in obedience to the law of Christ, which is not attained by those who live after the flesh. In disobedience the redeemed subjects of electing grace do bring upon themselves the rod of divine chastening. There is no evidence of living faith in one who can disregard the direction of the Spirit of Christ without receiving that just chastening by which the Lord manifests his faithfulness to his chosen people. His claim to have faith cannot save the believer from the just reward of his departure from the way of truth. As he has sown to the flesh, he must of the flesh reap corruption. It is to the churches of Galatia that Paul writes, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Gal. vi. 7-9. Since he includes himself with those to whom he writes, there can be no question of the limitation of this exhortation to those who are already recognized as disciples of Jesus. None of the exhortations of the gospel are addressed to any others but such as have been called out of darkness and translated into the liberty of the sons of God. All who are yet in nature's night are under death and condemnation. In that condition it is not possible that they should obtain divine favor by anything which they can do. Neither is there in the inspired Scriptures any commandment addressed to them. Already God has poured upon them the just condemnation which is awarded by his holy law. All his precepts are confined to those who are made alive in the kingdom of Christ. There is not any law given which can give life. To his living people the Lord has spoken every direction which is written in the Scriptures, and all his saints have the perfect law written in that new heart which is given them. The fulfillment of this law is love.

In pursuance of the same admonition to which reference has been made, the apostle brings a practical example. "If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." The conduct of one who could thus mock the distress of a sufferer would give no evidence that the love of God dwelt in him; and it is hardly conceivable that the fellowship of the Spirit would be in fervent exercise toward him unless there had been some other mark shown by which he might be identified as a subject of the grace of God. There is doubtless such a thing as a rational consent to some point of truth as attested by the evidence which is manifest to the natural mind; but it is not possible that one should have that love of God which is manifested in the fellowship of the Spirit, except as it is the fruit of the Spirit whereby its possessor is sealed as an heir of God and a joint heir with Christ. That belief which is not associated with love is evidently only the same which devils have, and which causes them to tremble.

The faith which is the fruit of the Spirit is only manifest in works of obedience to the commandments of the Lord. This is evident in the practical experience of every subject of divine instruction.

The apostle illustrates the meaning of the text by the reference in the context to the cases of Abraham and Rahab. It was not that they received faith as a reward for their works, but their action showed the power of that faith by which they were led to do what was contrary to natural reason in each of their cases. When God called Abram alone, and led him into an unknown land, his natural mind could not have understood that it was the peculiar mercy of God by which he was required to sacrifice every earthly consideration, and go forth as a stranger. There was no possibility that Rahab could have known by reason that Jericho should be overthrown by the spies whom she received, when she sent them out by another way. The works of both the characters to whom reference is made, clearly demonstrate the power of that faith which could move them to act contrary to the dictates of reason and their own natural inclination. It will not be claimed that they received faith in consideration of what they did. It is certain that they could not have performed the works recorded of them but as they were moved by the controlling power of that faith which overcame the opposition of natural reason and feeling.

To bring the subject down to our practical comprehension, it may be illustrated by the case of one who claims to believe that salvation is exclusively by the grace of God as revealed in Jesus Christ, yet looks to his own righteousness to commend him to the favor of God. Such works would not show his faith to be in God, since his whole dependence would be upon his own action by which the divine favor was secured. He would not be justified in claiming to believe in the doctrine of God as the only Savior of sinners, while trusting in his own merit to bring himself into the benefit of that salvation. Neither would such a professed believer be justified by presumptuously living in defiance of the law of Christ, and claiming that he was trusting in the grace of God for his salvation. His works would prove the falsehood of his profession. On the other hand, when one is found mourning his destitution of righteousness, and longing for conformity to the holiness of Jesus, his walk and conversation bear witness that he is led by the Spirit. Obedience to the commandments of the Lord attests the reality of the work of grace in the heart of the sinner, and the power of faith will thus clearly appear in justification of his claim to be a believer in the doctrine of Jesus, who says, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him."—John xiv. 21. When one is found yielding obedience to the law of Christ in the Spirit, and walking in the ordinances which are enjoined upon the disciples of Jesus, those who have obtained like precious faith cannot fail to recognize the full justification of his claim to be a follower of Christ. It will not be necessary to investigate his history, or look after his understanding of the theory of the doctrine, before the love and fellowship of the Spirit will embrace him. The works which result from the love of Christ only justify him in the sight of the saints, to whom they are displayed. This is the practical truth inculcated by the whole argument of the apostle in this connection. So by their obedience to the law of the Lord all the saints are justified; while in disobedience they not only practically deny their allegiance to Jesus, but also convict themselves of inconsistency and departure from the way of truth. It was alone of this justification that James was writing to the "twelve tribes which are scattered abroad."

CLERGYMEN AND VICE.

UNDER this heading the World recently criticised the sensational conduct of those professed ministers of Christ who are engaged in visiting the haunts of vice and immortality in New York, as spies, seeking for evidence to bring the law to bear against those who conduct them. However sincere may be the parties whose proceedings are called in question in this brief remonstrance, it is certain that there is neither commandment nor example in the law of Christ to authorize their manner of warfare against the evils which they seek to suppress. In all the deep corruption of depraved mortals nothing more blasphemous can be found than the effrontery of this eminent light of carnal religion, when he claims to have the example of Jesus for pretending to take part in the vice of those whom he would betray into the hands of legal avengers. In preaching the gospel of the grace of God, which brings salvation to sinners, the Lord Jesus and his chosen apostles never were found by their practical course endorsing that wickedness which they reprovied in their verbal teaching. Surely in visiting such criminal resorts as hide from the light of day, Dr. P. does not obey the injunction given to Titus, "In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works." Is it not by reason of such boasting professors as this proud D. D., that the way of truth is evil spoken of? That must be a very gross departure from the law of Christ which calls from the secular press such pointed rebuke as is contained in the following caustic remarks.

DR. PARKHURST preached about preachers yesterday. The sermon was in a way an apology for his own methods.

He holds that it is the preacher's business to go where vice and sin are and to see them for himself in order that he may be equipped for war against them. "Even the Son of God," he said, "could do nothing for us except by becoming frankly and honestly one of us."

But it is nowhere recorded that the great Teacher thus cited as an exemplar ever went spying after nastiness or that he ever sought to reform the unfortunate fallen classes by hiring some of them to commit criminal indecencies in his presence in order that he might get them sent to jail and make himself talked about.

There is doubtless a germ of truth in Dr. Parkhurst's suggestion. The teacher who would teach well must have a sympathy with humanity and a knowledge of human life which cannot be acquired in velvet-lined seclusion. But all that any preacher needs to know of vice and crime may be learned without participating in them and without resort to questionable methods of a sensational character.

Dr. Parkhurst's own success in reforming the vicious or putting a stop to crime has scarcely been conspicuous enough to entitle him to instruct the clergy generally in methods.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

NOW READY.

THE cloth-bound hymn books are now ready, and we have mailed all orders on hand. If any one who has sent an order for these books has not received them by the time they see this notice, they will please inform us.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

G. W. Sullens having changed his address from Fairbanks to Pimento, Indiana, requests his correspondents to address him at the latter place.

BROTHER John McConnell's address, until further notice, will be, residence, box 358, Ridgewood N. J.; place of business, 121 Franklin St., New York.

(Continued from page 363.)

Licking Association I beheld with regret the little few left in defense of truth as maintained by your venerable father and others, who marked the pages of history with words of wisdom and comfort to Zion's children in after years. May our God clothe you with power and demonstration from on high, that you may follow in the footsteps of your father, and adorn that good old paper, so long the herald of truth, that its pages may go forth with the motto, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," and that Zion's children may look upon them as "apples of gold in pictures of silver." I looked over an article written by your venerable father some time ago, from the text, "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works," &c. It breathed the rich sentiment of vital unity, which made it necessary for our blessed Savior to stoop to earth and suffer, to redeem his lost bride.

I have been too unwell to finish this letter at the date. My old arm of nearly ninety years usage trembles so that my letters are ill-shaped; yet I feel assured that your kind nature will pass it by. My object in writing was to mail you an old and valued letter written to me in the year 1864 by brother Dudley. As his memory is indelibly written in my affections, I desire that it be published in that good old paper, that brethren may think of his labors. You can look it over and dispose of it as you think best. Should you decide that it would be a tribute to his memory to give it a place in your columns, you can make reference to my imperfect letter for so doing. May our Father's blessing guide you.

Your brother,

M. D. HORD.

NEAR LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 19, 1864.

MY DEAR BROTHER HORD:—When we contemplate the fearful confusion, strife and animosity which pervades our people, north and south, how we have abused the best civil government ever vouchsafed to man, how regardless we have been of the source whence we receive all our blessings; how we have rendered to Cesar so much more than was Cesar's, and to God so much less than is God's; should we wonder that God has a controversy with us as a nation, and that in that controversy his peculiar people are involved? Our extraordinary prosperity as a nation, the development of all the elements which constitute a great and powerful nation, right here in our America, instead of calling forth the warmest emotions of grateful hearts to the fountain of all good, seems to have filled us with pride and self-reliance. We forgot the hand which fed and clothed, visited and cheered us on our pilgrimage, until adversity has overtaken us, and seems to threaten our very liberties. Yet our people seem not to be humbled. They seem not to remember the admonition, "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, for he will have mercy, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." If I could see God's chosen, redeemed and regenerated people humbled, and could hear them earnestly crying, "Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach;" if I could see them manifesting anything like humility, as though they felt the wound they had inflicted on the Lord Jesus in the house of his friends; and could I hear them pleading for pardon and forgiveness through the atoning blood of the Lamb; I should then hope that God, having sufficiently chastised, was about to remove the scourge from our nation.

There is one thing that affords me sincere consolation in the midst of our national troubles. While other denominations have been rent asunder by their different opinions on national troubles, the Old School Baptists here, and so far as I have heard from them, are one people; thus manifesting that the bond of union, religiously, is stronger than the political bond of union, with them. There are differences of opinion among them, as among other people, with regard to our troubles; but I have endeavored to impress on the minds of the brethren, that while the physiognomy of men differ, while their minds are differently constructed, or brought under different influences, we should accord to them as much honesty of purpose, as much conscientiousness, as we claim for ourselves; that we claim of them no more forbearance, because of difference of opinion, than we cheerfully accord to them; to freely give and take.

Our last association is looked upon as one of the happiest and most interesting interviews, not only that we ever had, but that we ever witnessed. I believe I have not heard an individual allude to it but was impressed, as all seem to have been. The intercourse among the brethren was characterized by the utmost frankness and cordiality, the preaching all of a piece; Christ and him crucified was the theme throughout, and at the close the brethren and sisters hardly knew how to separate. A friend belonging to another order, who was with us, thus characterized our meeting, "I went to Mount Carmel, to the association, with an impression that there was no such thing as vital religion on earth—that religion was a mere form; but I soon began to witness the warm greetings of the members as they met; and when worship was introduced, the warm animation in singing the songs of Zion, the fervency of the appeals at the throne of grace, and the fervency and zeal with which the ministry spake of the glories of God's kingdom and talked of power, so that I forgot myself and the world with its troubles and turmoils, for the time. I felt that that was nothing less than the house of God, and the very gate of heaven." You are to understand that I do not propose giving the words of the friend, but his impressions clothed in such language as seems to me to convey his ideas. I think I have never witnessed kinder and more affectionate greetings among the brethren; and, witnessing their intercourse, one would forget the troubles and strifes which seem to be deluging our land with fraternal blood.

On the Sunday after our association, I tried to preach at Bryans, suffering very much with what I then supposed to be neuralgia of the face, which soon proved to be a most violent attack of diphtheria, which it was thought for several days might terminate fatally. Although my physicians and friends thought I suffered intensely, yet I cannot realize that I was a great sufferer. My mind seemed in that frame that if the alternative had been presented to stay or go, I should have been at a loss to decide. Thinking of myself alone, to depart and be with Christ is far better. Yet, when I consider the condition of the churches, it seemed, if the Lord would make me useful to them I ought not to be unwilling to stay, and with them bear for a time the troubles of our mortal state. The only pang I felt at the thought of leaving the world was occasioned by the thought of leaving the dear brethren with whom I had so long taken sweet counsel.

My wife joins in kind regards to you, wife and family, with all friends. God bless you all.

THO. P. DUDLEY.

DUTTON, Ark., Aug. 23, 1893.

ELDER WM. L. BEEBE—DEAR BROTHER:—I wish to say that the editorial in the SIGNS for Aug. 16th meets my special approval. Not that there are any of your editorials that I disapprove; but for some time I have noticed a tendency on the part of religious fanatics to convert our once free government into an engine of oppression for conscience sake. From the admission of my state, in 1836, until a few years ago, any person who religiously observed one day in seven, though it were not what is called the "Christian Sabbath," or Sunday, was exempt from punishment for laboring on Sunday. But the State Legislature, influenced by religious fanatics, led on by the spirit of Cain, undertook to enforce uniformity, and compel Jews and Seventh Day Baptists to observe two days in the week, or suffer the penalty of the law. Seven persons of the Advent faith in Washington County were indicted, tried, found guilty, and imprisoned as violators of the law, because they chose to observe the seventh instead of the first day. While the trial was pending, upon a motion by defendants' counsel, the presiding Judge ruled that "No man had a right to set up his conscience against the laws of his state." If this is not exactly identical with the policy of Papal Rome in the Dark Ages I am unable to see the difference. At least fifty millions of human lives were destroyed by the most cruel means that diabolical ingenuity could invent; blood enough was shed to fill a stream ten feet wide, ten feet deep, and twenty-five miles long, and all because the ruling power held that it was criminal for men to set up their consciences against the laws of the state.

When such things begin to be revived, even in this enlightened age, it is time to sound the note of warning. Man is only the same now as in all former ages. From the days of Cain to the Protestant "Reformation" the earth was continually running red with blood, simply to coerce the consciences of men. When once begun there is no telling where it will end.

With love to you all, I remain your brother, I hope,

C. W. ANDERSON.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 19, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—It is with much hesitancy that I ask space in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, our dear paper. I often feel a desire to express my sincere thanks for your highly prized paper, which I still read through your kindness. I have taken my pen to tell you how much comfort I receive from the many comforting letters, many of them containing so much of my own experience, which strengthens my hope, so that, unworthy as I feel myself to be, I want to bear testimony to God's love, and his kind care over me, the most undeserving of all that ever did hope in his mercy. He is our only refuge in time of trouble. All my trust, all my hope, all my peace, is from him. O that I could love and praise him more. I want to live nearer to my God; but, as it is written, "The good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that do I." If my good works are to save me I shall come short; but it is by grace we are saved. May the Lord lead me in the right way, and keep me by his power, for of myself I can do nothing. My own works are as filth in his sight. I trust the Lord has opened my eyes to see what a poor, helpless creature I am, and so unworthy. I had very serious thoughts at times, and would lie in my bed and think I never would try to pray, for I felt I had sinned away my day of grace. I had many troubles to contend with. Yet I thank the dear Lord of heaven that I do love to go to our meetings and be with the saints, and that he has led me out of darkness into his marvelous light. I have had some happy moments, and also some very sorrowful ones, since being received into the church; sorrowful because I come so far short of what I wish to be. Although I try to do better, yet I find I cannot do the things that I would. I have had many trials to endure since the death of my husband. I love God's people for the truth's sake, and feel to say, as did Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee."

SARAH A. LONG.

COLEMAN, Texas, Sept. 21, 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—By request, I send you a few lines for publication, if you think them worth it. About six years ago I saw a letter in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from Mrs. J. N. Trott and her husband, of McCulloch Co., Texas. In it they stated that they knew of no Primitive Baptist Church in the country. I wrote them a letter, informing them that there was a little church in Coleman County, and inviting them to come and see us, which they did. When they came, I met them and called them brother and sister. They said, "Not so; for we are not members." They continued to visit us about once or twice a year, and on Saturday before the second Sunday in this month sister Trott told the church the reason of her hope, and was received. She requested to be baptized near her home, that her children and grandchildren might be present. The church decided for Elder Grigg and myself to go the next Sunday to brother Trott's house, preach, and receive members for the church. We did so, and received brother John B. Trott, son of Elder Samuel Trott, deceased.

Brother J. B. Trott is in his eightieth year. His wife, J. N. Trott, is in her sixty-seventh year; and the writer of this is in his seventieth year; and all three are very feeble. Brother Grigg and I thought it best for both of us to baptize, one of them at a time, which we did. There were five children and twelve grandchildren present. The family is highly esteemed by all who know them. If any of brother Trott's friends wish to write to him, his address is Waldrip, McCulloch Co., Texas. The little church to which they belong holds the doctrine of election; that God chose his people in Christ before the world was, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love; that they are saved by grace alone; that none can come to the Father but by the Son; that none can come by the Son only they that were given him by the Father.

Your unworthy brother in gospel bonds,

R. A. WALKER.

DANVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—In view of the wanderings and blunders along the crooked pathway of my life since I hoped in the mercy of God through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, I have been reminded frequently of a copy of several stanzas, copied and given to me by my uncle, Hezekiah West, more than fifty years ago, a copy of which I inclose for the SIGNS, if you deem them worthy of space. I am not certain whether he was the author of them or not, but my recollection of his peculiarities leads me to think them an expression of his personal experience. He was an early patron and correspondent of the SIGNS, and will be recollected by your older subscribers. He was, I believe, coadjutor with Elders Gilbert Beebe, Samuel Trott, Gabriel Conklin and others, in the work of separation and weeding out of the false doctrines and practices introduced to the Baptist churches by the emissaries of antichrist.

In his correspondence with the SIGNS, these verses may have been published, as also "Different views of Baptism;" but as I have no recollection of seeing them in print, I thought your readers might enjoy reading them in connection with the many interesting and instructive editorials and communications with which the SIGNS is filled every week. If I have "blundered" in supposing that I am an object of Christ's love, I have at least taken great satisfaction in reading to-day the remarks of brother H. Cox on Luke vi. 43, wherein he shows so plainly the distinction between nature and grace—between what man can do and what God does for him. There is also much comfort in the editorial on "Blessed Mourners," only I somehow hesitate and doubt as to it being applicable to my case. But God knows, and I try to leave it there.

With christian love, yours,

P. WEST.

THE BLUNDERER.

BLUND'RING through this world I go,
Bound to heaven or endless woe.
Blunders all my life do fill;
O how blund'ring I do feel!

Blund'ring on in youthful days,
I pursued my blund'ring ways;
Who the wonder e'er can tell
That I blunder'd not in hell!

Jesus cried aloud to me,
"Blund'rer, stop! thy blunders see!"
O what light around me shone,
Making all my blunders known.

Since to follow Christ I've fix'd,
Horrid blunders have perplex'd;
Never I to heaven do pray
But in a poor and blund'ring way.

If for God I ever speak
Most of blunders I partake;
Jesus' praise can ne'er declare
But my blunders still are there.

When the gospel I do hear
Dreadful blund'ring is my ear;
If the word of life I read,
Still my blunders drive ahead.

What a life I do pursue!
Scarce my blunders dare review!
How the scene is blund'ring up,
Blund'ring on from step to step!

O what pleasure and delight,
When but once I blund'ring right!
If salvation e'er is given,
I shall blunder till in heaven.

Then my blunders all will end,
Shouting praise to Christ, my Friend,
Whose kind hand sustain'd me here,
While I was a blunderer.

MARRIAGES.

By Elder G. N. Tusing, at the residence of the bride's parents, Nov. 1st, 1893, Mr. Wm. Lenz and Miss Minnie Fox, all of Hocking Co., Ohio.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Mrs. Rebecca Pearson, wife of Aaron Pearson, departed this life on Sunday, Sept. 3d, at the house of her son-in-law, Mr. George Lewis, in Philadelphia, which had been their home for the past two or three years. She was about eighty-three years of age, and she and brother Pearson had been members of this church for about fifty years. The funeral was on Thursday, Sept. 7th, at the meeting-house in Southampton, where Elder Wm. J. Purington preached on the occasion. I was absent at the time in Kentucky.

Since brother and sister Pearson went to live in the city we have had three or four meetings there, which were much enjoyed by them. At the last one she was not able to be up; and after the preaching some of the friends went to her room at her request and sang a hymn at her bedside. I also read a psalm and spoke in prayer. She was at that time quite blind, but her spiritual sight seemed clear, and she expressed a great deal of comfort in her heart of the meeting. Our brother is supported and comforted in his loneliness by the truth of the gospel, which has long been very dear to him, and which he has always defended with great earnestness and zeal. He is favored, as she was, to have the loving care of a daughter, with her kind husband and daughter. Two other daughters also are often there, and there are two sons and several grandchildren, all of whom, so far as I know, have a kind regard for the truth and for those who love it.

ALSO,

Christian Strawhacker passed away on Thursday, Sept. 7th, the day of sister Pearson's funeral. He was about 65 years of age.

When quite young he came from Germany, and engaged at once with Elias Hogeland, who with his wife is now a member of this church. That was his home for a number of years, until by his industry he became possessor of one of his own; and after his wife, a most excellent woman and a believer, was taken from him, and his three sons went for themselves, he went back to that first home he had in this country to spend the last few years of his life, and there received the tenderest care during the months of his failing health. His wife died suddenly in 1880, or about that year. Not long before that sad event she had returned from a meeting, her last, very much animated about the hymn beginning, "I would not live away," which she had heard at the meeting. She read it, and asked him, "O Chris, did you ever hear such a hymn?" He saw no interest in it then, but he knew what she then felt six years afterward. It was in 1885 that he received a hope. He was reading Isaiah xlv. 24, 25, when the wonderful light appeared; and how often he would try to tell the wonder and surprise of his soul, when after the charge, "Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, * * * but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities," while he was feeling the dreadful weight and agony of that condemnation, which he knew was true and just, and while he seemed to be waiting for what must follow, the next words burst upon him with such trumpet-like sound, so unexpected, so wonderful, "I, even I, am he that blot out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins." He was baptized on Sept. 6th, 1885. He was a spiritually minded man, and the church was his home. Instead of easily finding an excuse for staying away from a meeting, he deeply felt the loss when he had to miss any, whether on Sunday or any other day, whether in the meeting-house or at the homes of brethren. For the past five or six years he had served as Deacon, of which this church has four; and he truly used the office well. It was very pleasant to hear his voice in the conference meetings; and if his broken speech could not all be understood by any one, yet enough would be understood of that which was rich and savory to make it very pleasant for the lover of the truth to hear him. Many both of ministers and others who have visited us will remember his animated and spiritual conversation.

For two or three years he had spoken of a desire to depart, and said he often wished when he looked upon the face of one of our number who had been taken away that it was he. He failed very gradually. While he could talk I had some pleasant visits with him. For some days his voice was too weak to be understood. I was away when the end came. It was peaceful.

He leaves three sons, one of whom was with him during the last of his sickness. He was highly esteemed in the community, and a large congregation gathered on the occasion of his funeral on Monday, Sept. 11th, to whom Elder Purington preached the gospel of the grace of God, in which is the only true and abiding comfort known in this world of sin and sorrow.

ALSO,

Mrs. Emily White, aged 73 years, entered into rest on Thursday, Sept. 28th, and the funeral was on Monday, Oct. 2d, on which occasion I spoke to a large company of mourning relatives and friends gathered at the house.

She was baptized in the fellowship of this church more than fifty years ago by Elder James Bowen, and remained a faithful member until her departure. When her health allowed her to be at the meetings her seat was seldom vacant. She was troubled much of late years with heart disease. During all her sicknesses, and in an especial manner in the last, she seemed to feel the sustaining power of the hope she had so long possessed, and to be comforted at times by her dear Savior's presence. The last time I spoke to her she said she hoped it would not be long before she would be taken; that she had no fear of death, but felt ready and glad to go.

She leaves a husband, one daughter, who is a member of the church, one son and several grandchildren. Two granddaughters, with her daughter, sister Rachel Hogeland, were with her all the time, being part of the family. May the Lord give such comfort to the bereaved as he only can give.

Thus three of our number were taken from our earthly companionship during the month of September. We deeply feel the loss, yet would be reconciled to the Lord's will.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 3, 1893.

DIED—On Wednesday morning, Sept. 13th, 1893, at the family residence near Clayton, Kent Co., Del., Mrs. Julia T. Rees, wife of Thomas A. Rees, in the 41st year of her age.

Mrs. Rees was the only daughter of sister P. Wilson, who has for years been a devoted member of the Bryn Zion Church; and the family, including sister Wilson, whose home was with her daughter, belongs to our Bryn Zion congregation. The death was unexpected, and shocking in its suddenness. Mrs. Rees had undoubtedly had some premonitions of her approaching dissolution, but she had kept them in her own heart, only to be revealed when the lips should be closed in eternal silence. She had even marked a passage in the Bible to be used as a text at her funeral. As I was sick at the time, and could not attend, I will write some comments, at the request of the family, upon the passage, to be published in another part of the SIGNS, in hope that some consolation may be afforded therefrom for the afflicted family. The passage may be found Psalm xxiii. 4. She has left us a testimonial with regard to her feelings and exercises in approaching the dark valley through which she would so soon be called to pass in the shape of some poetic stanzas which she had selected and copied, to be read at her funeral. It seems to me as eminently proper that they should be inserted here, as the summing up of this obituary.

"Abide with me, fast falls the eventide; The darkness deepens: Lord, with me abide.

When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,

Help of the helpless, O abide with me.

"Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;

Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;

Change and decay in all around I see: O thou who changest not, abide with me.

"I need thy presence every passing hour; What but thy grace can foil the tempter's power?

Who like thyself my guide and stay can be?

Through cloud and sunshine, Lord, abide with me.

"I fear no foe with thee at hand to bless; Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.

Where is death's sting? where, grave, thy victory?

I triumph still, if thou abide with me.

"Hold thou thy cross before my closing eyes,

Shine through the gloom, and point me to the skies.

Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;

In life, in death, O Lord, abide with me."

Sharing the afflictions and rejoicing in the consolations of the bereaved, I remain,

E. RITTENHOUSE.

DIED—Our much-esteemed and well-beloved brother, George W. Gill, of Luella, Drew Co., Ark.

Brother Gill was born April 11th, 1811, and died Oct. 18th, 1893, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. H. R. Lander. He passed away just as we have heard him say that he wanted to go, suddenly. He was the oldest man in this community. He said that his time of departure was near at hand, and that he was willing to go at any time. He had just come from our association; and previous to that he had visited his daughter in Arkansas Co., attended the district meeting in north Louisiana, and was with us at our home meeting, where he will be missed for a long time by all who knew him, for he always attended our meetings regularly. He died while going to supper, and never spoke a word after he fell. His daughter said that he was quite lively the evening he died. It seems that he knew his time of departure was at hand, that he had fought the good fight, that his course was finished, and that he had kept the faith once delivered unto the saints. Brother Gill had been a subscriber for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for a long time, and was with the Old Baptists at the time of the split between them and the New School Baptists. He said that he expected to take the SIGNS as long as he lived.

It was our sad privilege to attend the burial of our brother. Elders Anderson, Blithe and Carter, with other precious brethren and a goodly number of relatives and friends, were present. His favorite song, which he had selected to be sung at his grave, was sung.

"While sorrows encompass me round, And endless distresses I see, Astonished, I cry, Can a mortal be found Surrounded with troubles like me?" &c.

After the singing brother C. W. Anderson prayed; after which we went to the church-house, where brother Anderson preached an able sermon. Brother Gill was strong in the doctrine of election, predestination and foreordination, believing that all who were chosen in Christ Jesus, all who were predestinated unto eternal life, Jesus paid the full redemption price for when he cried, "It is finished!" We sorrow not as those who have no hope; for we believe that Jesus died and rose again, and that all who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

FANNIE J. ALLEN.

LUELLA, Ark., Oct. 30, 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—Again we are called upon to record the death of a loved one; yet thanks be to God, our sorrow is illumined by the christian's hope. My dear aunt, Mrs. Clarinda Cooper, died at the home of her son-in-law, Joseph F. Hamilton, near Falmouth, Pendleton Co., Ky., June 16th, 1893.

She had been in feeble health for several years, and had endured great bodily suffering, but bore it with christian patience. When the final summons came she was ready to obey the call of her Master, and like a brave soldier of the cross she calmly met the grim monster; for she in her experience knew that her crucified and risen Savior had for her robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory.

Clarinda M. Hull was born in Mason Co., Ky., July 29th, 1822, being the sixth child of Samuel and Sarah Hull. Her parents were a father and mother in Israel. She joined the Mt. Gilead Church of Old School Baptists, and was baptized by Elder Samuel Jones, upon the relation of her experience as an unworthy sinner and of a hope in Christ, in her twenty-first year, and about fifty years she adorned her life by a christian walk and a godly conversation. She was united in marriage with Wm. G. Cooper, of the same county, by Elder Thomas P. Dudley, at the old Mt. Gilead Church, June 30th, 1844. Six children were born to them, all of whom except one, Mrs. Anna C. Hamilton, preceded her to the grave.

May that God who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb heal with the balm of Gilead, if consistent with his holy will, the wounded hearts of her aged husband and her only surviving child, consoling them with the thought, as well as her other relatives and many friends, that the dear departed was as but ripe corn gathered to the garner of her Lord.

JOHN S. POWER.

FLEMINGSBURGH, Ky., Oct. 13, 1893.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

SPECIAL OFFER.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c., costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford, as follows:

From now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us an additional dollar for two new names.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1893.

NO. 47.

D. L. Blackwell 13 Jun 93

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHENT, Ky., Nov. 4, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER BARTLETT:—I owe you an apology for failing to answer your letter of Sept. 17th, 1893, which I find published in the SIGNS of Oct. 25th. Other engagements have engrossed my time, so much so that I have neglected my correspondents; and now I have doubts about interesting you by anything I can write. Your views contained in your letter to me present the great truth given to us by the word faith in the sacred volume. Faith is one of the fruits of the Spirit, and is evidently given to the saints in the great work of regeneration. None can please God but those who are in the exercise of ever precious and living faith; a faith that works by love, which is also a fruit of the Spirit. None love God but those who are born again, born of an incorruptible seed, which liveth and abideth forever. It is written, "A seed shall serve him: it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation." Christ is the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head; and he is that incorruptible seed which liveth and abideth forever. Therefore his saints are born of God. When born of God they are given all the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, faith, temperance. These all dwell in our glorious Lord, and are freely given to all his redeemed, and were secured for them in him before time began; for they were chosen in him before the world began. As they were chosen in him, their unity with him is eternal. In that unity is secured to them all the blessings that are bestowed upon them and secured to them by his sufferings, death, resurrection and mediation. But those blessings are not made manifest in them by reason of any other relationship that they bear. Therefore our Lord said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." By the natural birth we have secured to us earthly things, and by the spiritual birth things that are heavenly, holy and divine; and faith is one of those bestowments. It was in that faith that others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. Our Lord said to Mary and Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." That belief in him is that faith which works by love and causes the saints to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, not accepting deliverance by any means that might be offered. "Not accepting deliverance" from the tortures inflicted on them by a wicked world. "They loved not their lives." The apostle says, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." In that knowledge he knew him, whom to know is life eternal. He thus knew him because he of God was made unto that apostle, as well as to all the saints, wisdom. Having that wisdom, and beholding him in his excellent glory, they have that faith which causes them to rejoice in Christ Jesus, having no confidence in the flesh. When he thus reveals himself to them, they cry out in the language of Thomas, "My Lord and my God." Then the sorrows, afflictions and persecutions of earth recede from their view, and all the deliverances from the hands of those who persecute and afflict them, that might be offered them by vain man, could not shake their faith in a better resurrection. That faith reaches to and takes hold of Jesus, who is the better resurrection. It is in him, and him alone, they have secured to them that better resurrection. He being the life of his people, their life is hid with Christ in God; and they, when beholding him by faith, are enabled to say, When he who is our life shall appear, we shall also appear with him in glory. They in their unity with their glorious Lord are made heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; and he, because of his unity with the Father, was raised from the dead, and became the first-fruits of them that slept. Hence his was the better resurrection, for it was first from the tomb. He says, "I and my Father are one." The prophet says, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise." Here the unity of the Father and the Son and his saints in the resurrection is declared. "Thine they were, and thou gavest them me," is the language of the Son. They are joint heirs with the Son, and part of that inheritance is their resurrection from the victory of the grave. Then surely it is a better resurrection, for it is all of and in Jesus.

In your letter you spoke of the two resurrections; one a resurrection unto life, and the other unto damnation. Evidently those ancient and greatly afflicted and persecuted saints were looking away by faith to the resurrection unto life; and they could not look to it by faith without beholding it in Jesus, for he is the resurrection. Abraham saw his day and was glad; and so did all the ancient saints who would not accept deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. Accepting deliverance from persecution at the cost of surrendering their faith in him who was to come, was to sacrifice all their hopes of that resurrection with its ineffable glories. But they all obtained a good report through faith, yet they received not the promise of the gospel. Though Christ had not preached his own everlasting gospel and fixed in the hearts of his saints by being veiled in a human body and suffering the penalty of the law that they had violated, yet he was a quickening Spirit; and in giving them that faith which enabled them to look away to that glorious day when he would come and make one great offering for sin, they were quickened, made alive, which was evidence to their faith, and caused them to refuse deliverance from their persecutions by a sacrifice of their faith. They knew that life and resurrection were indissoluble; and being enabled to realize in themselves and know that God was a quickening Spirit, they were made to look away to that better resurrection, the resurrection of Jesus. He said by his servant, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." That language was addressed to his saints in the gospel day; but they were no better than those ancient saints who were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. The saints who were thus addressed by the apostle were quickened, made spiritually alive; and so were those ancient saints; and they both looked to the resurrection of Jesus. He was the ensign to his people. An ensign in military parades is the color-bearer, and his place is in the middle of the company, so that all, both on the right and left of that officer, might dress by him and keep in perfect line. The ancient saints by faith looked forward to that great day when Jesus would come forth from the tomb a triumphant conqueror; and those whom the apostle addressed looked back to that great and glorious day when he made manifest his power over death and the grave. The prophet says, "And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious." O how glorious is that rest to the saints of ages and climes who look by faith to that better resurrection. In that faith they that have lived, and those that are now living, and those that will hereafter live on the earth, all in their day have looked and will look to that glorious morning when he broke the bands of death and came forth a triumphant conqueror, proclaiming to an astonished world, "Mine own arm hath brought salvation unto me." In that salvation from the powers of darkness, from the sting of death and the victory of the grave, all his saints were one with him. In that unity they were with him. This is the great truth that the prophet declared when he said, "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise." The poet sweetly sings, "Hail, sacred union, firm and strong! How great the grace, how sweet the song! That worms of earth should ever be One with incarnate Deity."

"One in the tomb, one when he rose, One when he triumphed o'er his foes; One when in heaven he took his seat, While seraphs sung all hell's defeat." Then, surely, my dear brother, our glorious Lord is the better resurrection; and when you arose and came forth from the dark and gloomy prison-house of the law, and was made free, you had a sweet foretaste of that better resurrection. By grace divine you were made to know that while in that dark prison-house you were dead in trespasses and sins; but when made alive by the quickening Spirit you saw that none had the power to deliver you but him who was the end of the law for righteousness. In him you rejoiced as your resurrection and your life. To him you looked by faith with a fond and glorious hope that through him you would ultimately triumph and obtain that better resurrection. Now this poor, little, feeble, ignorant one who writes to you, sometimes in gloom and sadness, desires to adopt these lines of the poet, as applicable to himself,

"While on the verge of life I stand,
And view the scene on either hand,
My spirit struggles with my clay,
And longs to wing its flight away."

Where Jesus dwells my soul would be,
And fain my much loved Lord to see;
Earth, twine no more about my heart,
For 'tis far better to depart."

You will please accept these rambling thoughts as a token of my love to you and all the dear saints who by faith are looking away to that great and glorious day when our risen Lord will come in holy triumph and call from the darkness of the tomb all his redeemed, and clothe them in robes of spotless white and never ending immortality, and take them to dwell with him throughout a never-ending eternity.

While you and I may never meet on earth, O may it be our blessed lot to meet in that happy throng and join that sainted host in songs of praise and adoration to his great name who hath done all things well. Please write me when you have leisure, and believe me truly yours in hope of a blessed immortality beyond the grave.

H. COX.

STATE ROAD, Del., Nov., 1893.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—I have promised in an obituary notice to offer some comments on the following passage of Scripture, in connection with said obituary. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."—Psa. xxiii. 4.

The psalmist had not probably ever yet had the black shadow cast over him; but he had been enjoying a sense of the divine presence and of the divine protection to such an extent that he felt that he had nothing to fear from any quarter. Death seems to be selected, not only as the last enemy, but as the worst and most to be dreaded of all enemies. Of all valleys this one, of the shadow of death, is the deepest, darkest, coldest and deadliest of all valleys known to the children of men. Some earthly valleys are so deep that the shadow of the earth is always upon them, and the rays of the natural sun never penetrates the depth of their gloom. A shadow is caused by some dense, dark body, or substance, coming between us and the sun. If there were no sun there could be no shadow. We could know no shadow unless we had known and enjoyed the light. Death rather naturally looms up as the execution of the original sentence against transgressors. If it comes between us and that life and immortality which was brought to light through the gospel, its shadow is impenetrable, and the darkness is overwhelming. If the Lord is with us at any time it is as a Savior. He is not known, or loved, in any other way. His salvation is a deliverance from death and the fear of death. In the days of his sojourn here on earth he was much of the time in company with his disciples. His presence was always a source of pleasure and comfort to them. But it was expedient for them that he should go away. The Spirit of truth, the Comforter and Guide of his people, would come and ever be with them. This Spirit would not merely be as a person portions of the time in their company, but would live in them. They would possess and enjoy in their own life an exaltation above condemnation and death with all the terrors thereof. There is therefore now no condemnation to them. A complete deliverance is ordained and provided for them, who otherwise through fear of death would have been all their lifetime subject to bondage. It is not said, If thou wilt be with me, I will fear no evil; nor even, Thou wilt be with me; but, "Thou art with me." What he was as being with him, he always would be. God's salvation, when realized, removes forever the sting of death, and leaves nothing to fear. There is an ownership brought to view, the power of which is felt. The Lord has undertaken for me, and now claims me as his own. The rod here is to be understood as representing the Redeemer's authority. He has authority to open prison doors, and to deliver lawful captives. No charge can be sustained against those for whom Christ died. What his rod signifies is fulfilled in them. In that sense he is with them. The rod of his strength has gone forth out of Zion, and the contemplation and experience of it is an unfailing source of comfort. Even in the valley and under the shadow of death, with this rod in all that it signifies for support, there is nothing to fear. There is undoubtedly a remembrance of past experience, and of deliverances already wrought, that warrants this faith and hope with regard to conflicts yet to come. No one could ever feel this assurance, nor would they be likely to ever express it, unless they had the experience of it in their own life. The shadow of death shuts out all light of every kind, and methinks that nothing but the vital energy of spiritual life within could surmount the darkness and terror of that hour. Comfort could not possibly come in that dark and dismal vale from any other quarter. If the Lord has so made himself known to any one as to be a sufficient strength to them when heart and flesh fail, we may be well assured that he will be their portion for ever. How it softens the affliction to the hearts and minds of those who weep around the dying bed, when they see that death is disarmed of all its terrors, and that no evil is either felt or feared. We cannot be expected to know what we can say, or how we shall feel, when that fearful shadow shall fall upon us. We walk by faith, and our faith will always be dependent upon the evidences that we have at the time.

"His love in time past forbids us to think He will leave us at last in trouble to sink." We need not want dying faith through all our life. It would not be for our comfort. The believer's day is one that is neither all the time clear, nor always dark; but it is all known to the Lord, and declared in his word, followed by the emphatic declaration that "At evening time it shall be light."

I submit these reflections with christian love and sympathy for those for whose sake they were written.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

HUEYSVILLE, Ky., Oct. 7, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I do not know how or what to write you. I will say that if the Lord is not in it nothing will be written to your comfort or edification. All who accept the Bible must receive its teaching in order to be a believer of it. You may ask nearly every person you meet if they believe the Bible, and they will tell you they do. But ask them if they believe in eternal, particular and unconditional election and predestination, and they will tell you they do not. This doctrine is true, and if they do not believe it they are in the list of unbelievers in the Bible. The doctrine of election as taught in the Bible is received by none but those in possession of eternal life. The unbeliever does not know how eternal life comes. Ask them, and they will tell you it comes by keeping the commandments, or by some other round of duty. They do not believe that Jesus is the Christ, but that a place of bliss is prepared for every one who will subscribe to, do the commandments, or perform certain rounds of duty, which, they say, is the only way of salvation. If this be so, the words Christ, Savior and Jesus should have another meaning; for according to the above they cannot mean that Christ alone saves poor sinners, but that he has given them a law whereby they can save themselves; thus making Christ an auxiliary to salvation. This we do not believe; for the Bible nowhere teaches that Christ is a helper to salvation; but it does teach, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Another reason why we do not believe that salvation is conditional is that it would fail to deliver any one from their sins. If they should keep the whole law it would not be redemption. It fails to restore, because they fail to keep it. If they should keep the whole law from their birth, they could not be restored, because there is the debt of the first covenant yet against them, and they have not a cent to pay it with. If we had all been placed in the same attitude of Adam, we all would have done as he did. "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."—Rom. v. 12. The marginal reading is, "In whom all have sinned;" which shows conclusively that all were under the just condemnation, and subject to all the penalties of this violated law.

If it be true that Christ only came to give us a chance to be saved, then all is lost; for death is passed upon all, for that all have sinned. The elect, as well as the non-elect, if conditionalism be true, must suffer the pangs of hell; for the elect are not different in nature from the non-elect. They "were by nature the children of wrath, even as others," being "dead in trespasses and sins."—Eph. ii. But we have better things to speak unto Zion. "For Christ is not entered into holy places made with hands, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." "But now once in the end of the world, hath he appeared, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."—Heb. ix. 24-26. All those for whom Christ has entered into heaven, there to appear in the presence of God, shall they not be with him? Those whose sins he put away, having died for them, shall they be required to suffer the punishment due to sin? If so, where is the justice of God? God is just; and if he punished sin in the person of Christ, for me, then I may be consoled by the glorious fact that there is no flame of hell for me. It is written of Jesus that he came to do the will of God. "He taketh away the first [covenant or will], that he may establish the second."—Heb. x. "By the which will we are sanctified, through the offering of the body of Jesus, once for all." The clause, "once for all," means that Christ died once for all them who are embraced in the will, covenant or testament of our God. "I come to do thy will, O God." "This is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day."—John vi. 39. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me." This blood of the new testament, or covenant, which was shed for many for the remission of sins, shall it fail to accomplish its desired effect, to remit the sins of many?—Matt. xxvi. 28. It cannot fail; for "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." It is said of Christ, "He shall not fail nor be discouraged." O how comforting are these words to those whose only hope is Jesus. The reason we love to hear Jesus preached is that he is all the hope we have of that blessed land. The words come with so much comfort to those who have passed from death unto life, "For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord: I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts. * * * For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." How plainly this is taught in our experience. When God wrote his laws in our hearts, opened our eyes to see our lost and ruined condition, we were made to hate sin, and to thirst after righteousness. We did all we could to get rid of this awful weight which seemed to be crushing us down to hell; but nothing could we do. At length we came to the ends of the earth, and were made to cry, Thou art just; I am justly condemned. Lord, save, I perish. It was here we heard the glad news of the new covenant, "I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Here we for the first time could claim with assurance that "Jesus died for me, and I am his." What a dear Savior is Jesus! His presence disperses our gloom, raises up those that are cast down, casts out all fear and doubt, and gives us the blessed assurance that we shall enjoy the bliss of eternity. Then shall we, who are sorely afflicted and compassed by many sorrows in this sin-smitten world, rejoice in the kingdom of God, crying, Holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, just and true are thy ways. There, I have a humble hope, I shall be with you to chant the sweet music of salvation through Christ while eternity rolls her endless round.

Pray for me, brethren, when it goes well with you. May God bless to your comfort what I have written.

A. L. ALLEN.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 14, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you the inclosed letter for insertion in the SIGNS, if you think best, feeling sure it will be read with tender interest and deep sympathy, especially by those who remember the former communications of this afflicted sister. How comforting to feel the assurance that there is One who hears the broken moans of this sad and wearied one; that he knows all her grief and pain and loneliness, and not one sorrow is hidden from his view. He will heal her broken heart and bind up all her wounds. How many tempest-tossed souls on beds of languishing can testify to the loving faithfulness of the great burden-bearer, and that "underneath are the everlasting arms." Sometimes he lifts them above their pain and sorrow into a place of broad rivers and streams. Though chained by disease, so that they cannot go out into the glad sunshine, yet in spirit they can roam in green pastures, and rest beside still waters. He who drank the bitter cup, can sweeten it for his followers by his wonderful love.

As so many are desirous to hear from our beloved sister Mary Parker, I will quote a paragraph from her last most touching and interesting letter. She says, "So often during the past year there have been many things I long to say, but have been obliged to leave them unsaid, because I was too weak and suffering to write what I wished to. I was very ill indeed all of last week, had so many hard chills, followed by burning fever, and the hives. My face was swollen terribly, and my left eye was swollen shut. I had, and still have, such a maddening desire for cold water. I cannot get ice, and you cannot know how I suffer day and night. It brings tears of gladness to my eyes when I think of that far country where the inhabitants shall no more say, "I am sick," and where we can drink from a pure crystal fountain, to thirst no more. O! can it be that such joy will ever be mine? And not only this, but there we shall see Jesus, the lover of our souls, and bask in the sunlight of his dear presence forever more. How my poor, tried, weary soul longs to hear the glad summons, 'Child, thy Father calls, come home.'"

What a welcome message for the tired pilgrim who is weary waiting for the dawn, and longing for home. Then will appear the beauties of an eternal day, revealing the glories of the New Jerusalem. All conflicts over, all tears wiped away. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

In hope, your sister,

BESSIE DURAND.

KALONA, Iowa, Oct. 2, 1893.

MISS BESSIE DURAND—DEAR SISTER:—I have been thinking ever since I read your good letter that I would write you a few lines, but I have had no chance for writing. I have to be by my dear sick brother-in-law's bedside nearly all the time. He is very low, and is not contented unless I am by him. I lie in my wheel-chair and fan him. My dear friend, it seems to me that if I had a thousand tongues I could tell no one what I have passed through during the past summer. The 8th of last April my dear sister, my sick brother-in-law's wife, died. I have lived with them about thirty-three years, and they have cared for me during my sickness. Sister was taken quite suddenly, and was sick only a few days. She was a firm believer in the Old School Baptist doctrine, and loved to read her Bible and the SIGNS. It was so hard to give her up; but the Lord has taken her, I believe, to himself; and while my heart is filled with trouble and grief here, I feel sure that she is happy in her Savior's presence, and I think brother will be with her soon. About a month since, I think, he met with a great change. He told us he was so happy, and that we all looked so good to him. He talked very nicely. He told my other sister and I that he could not live. He said, "I can't stay with you much longer, but I hope to meet you all in heaven." He has been very sick ever since soon after sister's death. He was taken down some time the last of April, and I have been by him most of the time, and fanned him during all the warm weather. My other sister has been faithful to him, and has never left him, only when she could leave him in the hands of some good friend while she slept. I have suffered terribly in the time; but, dear friend, I seldom think of myself. My other troubles are far ahead of my own suffering, but I hope that the Lord will sustain me through it all. I often feel that I cannot bear my troubles. Sister and I will soon be left alone, and she is not strong; but I am trusting in the Lord. I know he will do all things right; but we are poor, weak mortals, and cannot refrain from grieving when we must give up our friends; but I hope to meet them again. I hope your sister is very much better, and will be restored to perfect health.

OCTOBER 10.—Brother is dead; he passed away the morning of the 4th, at ten o'clock. He suffered terribly until nearly the last, but passed peacefully away. His last words were, "O Lord." It was hard to give him up. Sister and I are left to battle with this cold world alone. He was such a good brother to me during the last fourteen years that I have lain here a suffering invalid. He has never spoken unkindly to me, and I have never seen a frown on his face. Whenever I would ask him to do anything for me he was always willing and ready. O! it is so lonely without him.

Dear Mary Parker, I presume, is still suffering. If you write to her please tell her of my great loss, give her my best love, and tell her that I very often think of her. It has been some little time since I have heard from Mrs. Benedict, but she was a little better at that time. Dear Sadie Vanvelsan is no more. She was one of my correspondents.

Give my love to your brother and family, and accept my best love yourself.

Your loving friend,

SUSIE C. PARKER.

CHENEY, Neb., Sept. 24, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—Through the goodness and mercies of our covenant-keeping God, I am still spared, and truly hope I am thankful to God, who is the giver of every good and perfect gift; for it is through him we live, move and have our being. Then, with the desire to write, may the God of all grace guide my thoughts in that way that his name may be glorified, and to the comfort of those who love his cause and the order of his house, and are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are build-ed together for a habitation of God through the Spirit."—Eph. ii. 20-23. Paul's letter was not only addressed to his Ephesian brethren, but to all the faithful in Christ Jesus. "Grace be to you." Who? All the faithful in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. "And peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ." Then it includes the church of the living God, which Jesus set up here in the world, and said the gates of hell should not prevail against it. But in all of her troubles, trials and afflictions Jesus is her present help in every time of need. It must needs be that offences come, but woe unto that man by whom they come. God has a purpose in all his works.

Jesus has told us the lot of our inheritance here in the world. He says, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Again he says, "If ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." Then may we not take comfort in tribulation? Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And not only so, but we glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Then let us go on our way rejoicing, through evil as well as good report, knowing that the Lord will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear, but with every temptation will make a way for our escape. David said it was good for him to be afflicted; for before he was afflicted he went astray. Just so with the church. When she is in prosperity, then she begins to trim her ways to seek love, and court the friendship of the world, and give a little here and a little there, in order to shun persecution and gain the good will of those who oppose the doctrine of God our Savior, and become anxious to increase in number; and before they are aware, they have Ishmalites to mock; and soon they will begin to sow seeds of discord among the brethren, and stir up strife, and begin to say, "Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us."—Psalm ii. 3. How cunning they are. They say, "Let us break their bands asunder." What bands? The bands of love, which have bound them in a bundle of love to each other, which they received of the Father in Christ Jesus our Lord. For he who knew no sin was made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. God declares that he loved them with an everlasting love. Jesus says, "No man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him;" and they that love God love those that are begotten of God. So these are the bands they want to break, and cast their cords from us. So you see destruction and misery are in their way, and the way of peace they have not known. They are not willing to quietly go out from among them and leave them in peace, but the peace and fellowship of the church must be broken and destroyed, if possible. We will cast away their cords from us. But what says the wise Master-builder? He says, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." No, not one of her stakes shall be removed, nor one of her cords be broken. His kingdom shall stand, and we will do all his pleasure. Yes, the Father has delivered all power and authority into Jesus' hands, until he brings all the purchased possession into his kingdom; and when the last one is brought, then time shall be no more. He will take them to himself, to forever behold the beauty of that mansion that was prepared for them before the highest dust of the earth was laid.

JOSEPH BRUCE.

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 22, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

DELIVERANCE OF ZION.

"DELIVER thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon."—Zech. ii. 7.

An esteemed sister requests a commentary from some brother on the prophecy recorded in this connection including from the fifth verse to the end of the chapter. Without by any means intending to discourage any one who may feel disposed to gratify her desire, the following thoughts are submitted with the hope that they may not prove altogether unprofitable to those who read. The subject is too important to be exhausted by all that can be written by mortals. It will afford us much pleasure to receive the views of any of our readers who may feel impressed to contribute them for the profit of all the saints.

In the prophecy of Zechariah the national people of God were about to be restored to their own land after their long captivity in Babylon. True to their typical design, the natural Israelites were a rebellious people, and even when they were enjoying the special favor of God in being brought out of bondage, they were continually seeking to ascribe the glory of their deliverance to their false gods, the idols which their own hands had made. It would involve a denial of the infinite wisdom of God to assert that he had no purpose in this manifestation of carnal enmity which was so prominently characteristic of the nation whom he chose from all the peoples of the earth, that they should be the type of his spiritual Israel. It must be confessed that in every point in which the inspired record describes the chosen family of Jacob there is presented in a figure the exact description of the election of grace, as they are subject to the vanity of the body of this death. Under that legal dispensation there was no discrimination between the subjects of divine grace whose faith embraced the Messiah as prefigured in all those legal shadows, and the carnal Israelite who saw nothing beyond the literal observance of the ordinances which God had given by the hand of Moses. It was but the necessary consequence of their limited and natural understanding of the advantages bestowed upon them, that they should trust in themselves as being righteous, and despise others. On the other hand, the very revelation of that grace by which the Lord made known to his spiritual election their interest in his salvation, invariably caused them to see and feel their own utter vileness and destitution of merit. So Moses considered his stammering tongue an insuperable barrier to his performance of the service to which he was called by the word of the Lord. "And Moses said unto the Lord, O my Lord, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant; but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." Reason would find in this infirmity an entire disqualification for speaking to Pharaoh, or commanding the tribes of Israel. But the answer of the Lord exposed the carnal pride from which this objection arose. "And the Lord said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the Lord? Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say. And he said, O my Lord, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him by whom thou wilt send."—Ex. iv. 10-13. Thus the life-giving word of the Lord is quick and powerful to the silencing of every argument of carnal reason which would rise in opposition against the commandment written in the heart of his people. Yet that same word forbids boasting on the part of him to whom it is addressed, since its entrance always shows him his utter helplessness. The light of that word never fails to expose the exceeding sinfulness of sin in the heart which is illuminated by its divine radiance. Therefore every one who hears it is conscious of the justice of his condemnation, and can hope alone in the infinite grace of God in Christ Jesus for the forgiveness of his sin. Such helpless characters will not understand that this direction in our text implies that they are left to their own exertions for deliverance from the bondage of corruption. As when that word called Lazarus from the grave, the power for its fulfillment was in itself, so in our text, every one whom the Spirit of Christ recognizes as the Zion of God is delivered by the irresistible and omnipotent life which is in the word of the Lord itself.

As addressed to the whole election of grace, as the embodiment of Zion, the language of our text calls her to look away from the covenant given by the hand of Moses, and to trust alone in the grace which should be revealed in the glorious gospel of Christ Jesus. Under the legal dispensation the subjects of grace were in no wise to be distinguished from the carnal descendants of Israel. In this particular they were in that confusion which is always signified by the name of Babylon. Never could there be such discrimination between the natural and the spiritual Israel as should separate the true subjects of divine grace from the fleshly heirs of Jacob, until the covenant of Sinai should be fulfilled and taken out of the way. So long as that dispensation continued there was no deliverance from that hopeless confusion, under which the children of God differed nothing from the servants whose perpetual toil could never attain unto the righteousness of God. Thus the true Zion was held in bondage with the carnal servants. In announcing the coming of their strong Redeemer to dwell in the midst of his people, there was the preaching of deliverance from that confusion under which they were held in Babylonian slavery. There can never be any dwelling with the daughter of Babylon unless the subject of grace is held there under the bondage of thick darkness. This is the condition of every saint who is still striving for justification by the performance of duties enjoined by the law of a carnal commandment. Hopeless confusion must ever cover them while thus dwelling with the daughter of Babylon. From this state of darkness they can be brought out only by the effectual commandment of the Lord which delivers them from the power of darkness, and translates them into the kingdom of the dear Son of God.

Under that dispensation where all the children of Israel were required to work unceasingly in obedience to the fiery law, nothing could secure for them the answer of a good conscience toward God as having paid all the just demands of that covenant. It demanded everything, and furnished nothing. Yet the pride of the natural heart prompts the free-born children of divine grace to seek for justification by the works of that law. From that dwelling with the daughter of Babylon the voice of redeeming love calls in our text to every ransomed sinner; for the name ZION is the family name belonging to all who are included in the election of grace. When this word is applied by the Spirit of truth to the heart of a sinner it never fails to give him the deliverance it commands. In this way alone can any one ever enter into the liberty of the sons of God. Until thus delivered, even the chosen people of God in their experience differ nothing from those servants who are in perpetual bondage under the curse of the law. "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them."—Gal. iii. 10. Surely that must be the joyful sound of the gospel which calls upon Zion to deliver herself from this weary and unceasing servitude. Well may the favored saints rejoice to hear the sound of that trumpet of liberty which proclaims their deliverance from the confusion of tongues which characterizes the Babylon where slavish bondage is cheered by no hope of liberty and rest. Throughout the Scriptures this name "Babylon" is applied to that system of religion which is built upon the works of righteousness to be done by the sinners who seek to be justified in their own merits. Not even the free-born children of God can find peace while they are held captive in the delusion which leads them to look to their own personal obedience to the law for justification before God. Every attempt to obtain the commendation of the law by rendering service to its just demands involves the saint in hopeless confusion, since the bondage of the law has no place in the kingdom of grace. Those subjects of divine favor who are saved by the redemption that is in Christ do not owe any service to the law. When they attempt to render obedience to that hard taskmaster, they seek to "dwell with the daughter of Babylon;" and there is no liberty found in that house of bitter servitude. This lesson has to be repeatedly learned in the experience of the saints even now. It must have been a great mystery to the saints under that legal dispensation which had the sanction of the commandment of the Lord by Moses. Then even though they saw by faith the salvation which should be revealed in the Messiah, it was still their duty to render obedience to the law of Sinai. It is not strange that they could but dimly comprehend the grace which was promised in the testimony of the Spirit of Christ which was in them. Under the gospel dispensation there is no authority for the saints to surrender that liberty of the sons of God unto which they are called. Therefore it is in anticipation of this day of liberty that the words of our text are addressed to the spiritual Zion of God. To every one who is saved by the blood of Jesus, it is declared, "Sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace."—Rom. vi. 14. The daughter of Babylon does not recognize this glorious deliverance of the children of Zion, but constantly demands the satisfaction of all the requirements of the inexorable law. From this heavy bondage the love of God calls upon his Zion to deliver herself. That deliverance is brought to every subject of redeeming love when he is enabled to see Christ Jesus as the end of the law for righteousness to him. Thus in the ministration of the Spirit the word of the Lord is made effectual in the personal experience of each one who is led by grace to receive it in its living power.

If there were any uncertainty in regard to the application of this text to the church under the gospel dispensation, it would be explained by the context. There is but One who can claim, as in the next verse, to be the Messenger of the covenant, whom the Lord of hosts hath sent unto the nations for the deliverance of his Zion. It is in this gospel day that the Lord has added many nations to the manifest subjects of his salvation; and he does now dwell in the midst of them so that they do know their Savior as the Messenger whom the Lord of hosts has sent unto them. When this wonderful assurance is applied by the Comforter, as speaking to them personally, they are thereby delivered from the yoke under which they were oppressed as dwelling with the daughter of Babylon. No other power can ever bring deliverance to the chosen Zion of God.

Time and space would fail us to speak of all the precious testimony of Jesus contained in the portion specified by our inquiring sister. In the individual case of every saint, such of those treasures as are for their profit are revealed. Without that application by the Spirit no uninspired words can lead a saint into the light of true understanding concerning any portion of the Scriptures.

LEPROSY IN THE FLESH.

THIS most loathsome of all diseases, and so awful in its end, which God alone could deal with, and in whom alone its cure was found, as no natural remedy was prescribed or even hinted at, was evidently a type of something that should and does correspond to it in the gospel church and kingdom of the Redeemer. The apostle says, "The law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things." It is evidently true that the writers of the New Testament have presented the real substance or antitype of all the types and shadows of the legal or shadowy dispensation. Let us therefore look into the New Testament for the substance of this shadow; and may the Lord give us light and understanding.

Leprosy was found in Israel, the elect people of God, who were in all things a type of spiritual Israel. The disease was not only found in the persons of the Israelites, but also in their garments and houses. Although it was a natural disease or distemper, yet it was sometimes inflicted by the immediate hand of God, as in the cases of Miriam, the sister of Moses; Gehazi, the servant of the prophet; and king Uzziah; as a punishment for their sins. That it was a type of some special sins and disorders which should be found among the spiritual, antitypical Israel there seems little room for doubt. The apostle John has marked a difference between the sins of the subjects of Christ's kingdom saying, "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin; and there is a sin not unto death."—1 John v. 16. 17.

We may judge somewhat of the great importance of the spiritual matter set forth in this type, when we remember that the lawgiver Moses has dwelt with more prolixity upon the subject than almost any other ceremony of the law. The thirteenth and fourteenth chapters of Leviticus are devoted to a description of the distemper, &c., and it would be well for the reader now to turn to and read those portions of holy writ.

We have a somewhat lengthy description of the marks or evidences of this disease. This was very necessary, as what sometimes appeared to be leprosy was not so; and what sometimes appeared not to be leprosy was really so. In no case was the judgment of the matter to be left to the suspected person. The priest was to decide the matter. The person suspected of having the leprosy was to be brought to the priest. It could not be expected that he would voluntarily go to the priest if he really had the distemper. Sometimes time and patience were required to determine the matter. While there might be certain signs in the flesh that were uncertain, yet there were certain signs, when developed, which could not be mistaken nor deceive. When an Israelite had been brought to the priest, and the priest had pronounced him a leper, he was excluded from the society of men, and from access to the tabernacle of God, until his recovery was perceived by the priest who had pronounced him leprous; for he who was afflicted with the disease was not only in danger of defiling those with whom he came in contact, but also the garment he wore, as well as the house in which he dwelt.

There came a time in the experience of the leper, when the disease came to its greatest height, having infected the head. Then he was to use the emblems of deepest mourning. His garments were to be rent, his head was to be bared, and he was to wear a covering upon his upper lip, and was to cry, "Unclean! unclean!" as he went about.

When we consider how much depended upon the judgment of the priest, we need not think it strange that he was ordered to proceed with great caution in his examination of the symptoms of one accused of having leprosy. One was not to be accused of having the loathsome disease when some slight symptom appeared in his flesh that might be thought to be that. If there was reason for surmising that one had the symptoms of the malady, he was to be shut up (not out) for seven days, and on the seventh day was to be examined by the priest, and judged according to the symptoms. We may learn from this great caution that the saints are not to be judged hastily, and condemned as heretics, or as vile persons, unless there appear very evident signs of sin having complete dominion over them. Even those among the saints who are accused of being heretics, or very vile, disorderly characters, have certain rights which the saints are by the law of Christ bound to respect. They are not to be hasty in rendering judgment against any Israelite. All must appear before the judgment seat of Christ in the church; for he is our great High Priest, whose word and judgment through his apostles, as judges in Israel, is to decide the character and condition of every one who may be accused of being affected with spiritual leprosy or heresy.

Not every Israelite who had a blister, freckle or spot in his skin was a leper; no more so than every infirmity or sin in a spiritual Israelite is to be judged sufficient cause for shutting him out from the company and companionship of the saints; for, says the apostle, "In many things we offend all," or all offend. It is well for us all to remember the solemn words of our High Priest to his disciples, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."—Matt. vii. 2.

Even when leprosy was found in an individual, if it was found that the disease was not gaining upon nature, but rather that it was being expelled from the system, or if the disease was not in sight deeper than the skin, or spread not in the skin, or if it were somewhat dark, and black hairs were in the rising, or if it covered all the skin from head to foot, in such cases the person was pronounced unclean. Indeed these were favorable symptoms, showing that the distemper was on the surface, and had not attacked the vital parts of the person. It showed that nature, being yet strong, was throwing off and working out the disease; that the whole fountain of blood was not corrupted by the disease.

David, who realized the uncleanness of his nature, that he was a sinner, and whose only hope was in God, said, "There is no soundness in my flesh." "My wounds stink, and are corrupt, because of my foolishness." "For my loins are filled with a loathsome disease, and there is no soundness in my flesh." "I will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry for my sin." "Forsake me not, O Lord; O my God be not far from me. Make haste to help me, O Lord my salvation."

The leper in the type whose disease did not spread in the skin, well represents that saint who, like David, or like Peter, is raised up from his fall into transgression, repentance being granted unto him. Such sins are more like "a scab." Such characters are washed and made clean through the word that Jesus speaks unto them. "Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you."—John xv. 3. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit."—1 Peter i. 22.

The person in the type whose plague is not in sight deeper than the skin, represents that saint in whose life there are some external blemishes, but who nevertheless delights in the law of God after the inward man.

The one who from head to foot was all turned white, and thus manifested that the disease was confined to the external parts, represents such a character as the apostle Paul, who said, "I know that in me, (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing. For to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not." Job said, "Behold, I am vile." "I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Isaiah said, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Those characters who know, feel and confess that they are sinners, that from the soles of the feet, even unto the head, there is no soundness in them, have the spot of God's redeemed and cleansed and justified ones; and their great High Priest has examined them, searched them, and pronounced them clean, and told them to go and offer in his holy courts the sacrifice of thanksgiving and praise, even the fruit of their lips.—Heb. xiii. 15.

In the case of the leper who was to be pronounced unclean, because he was a leper indeed, the hair in the plague was turned white; the plague was in sight deeper than the skin of his flesh; there was quick, raw flesh in the rising; it spread itself farther and farther in the skin; but the worst of all kinds of the distemper was that in the head. The law says, "He is a leprous man, he is unclean. The priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean: his plague is in his head."

White hairs are spoken of in the Scripture as representing debility and decay, and that death is fast coming upon the individual wearing them. The Lord says of Ephraim, "Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not; yea, gray hairs are here and there upon him, yet he knoweth not."—Hosea vii. 9. The Lord, by the prophet Ezekiel, speaking of the whoredoms of Israel, says, "How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord God, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious whorish woman."—Ezek. xvi. 30. Hence the one who had the white and yellow hairs in the sore of his leprosy may well represent that one who lives in the lusts of his flesh, with no strength to resist the temptations; such characters as are described by the apostle, Phil. iii. 18, 19, "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things." This is a leprosy which in sight is deeper than the skin, where the victim works wickedness with full consent, and whose conduct proclaims that his heart is not right in the sight of God. We also read in the Acts of one Simon, who believed, but whose heart, the apostle told him, was not right in the sight of God. Peter said to him, "Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity." It was to Jerusalem that the Lord said, "Thy way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee; this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reacheth unto thine heart."—Jer. iv. 18.

The quick, raw flesh that appeared in one stage of the leprosy might well represent those "damnable heresies" of which the apostle Peter speaks, saying, "There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction." How apt are such characters to spread their leprosy, so that many among the saints follow their pernicious ways. "But shun profane and vain babblings; for they will increase unto more ungodliness." The apostle Paul says, "Their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymeneus and Philetus; who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some."—2 Tim. ii. 16-18. The apostle instructs Timothy in this connection, saying, "The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth, and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will."—2 Tim. ii. Our High Priest, by his apostle Paul, has said of these leprous, heretical ones, "A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself."—Titus iii. 10, 11. "He is a leprous man, he is unclean. The priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean. His plague is in his head."—Lev. xiii. 44. In such a character we see what is fitly represented by the quick, raw flesh. He cannot bear reproof or rebuke from any, however spiritual, or in however gentle a manner he may be told of his fault. How different is such a character from the humble subject of God's grace, who desires God to search and try him, and see if there be any wicked way in him, and lead him in the way everlasting. Such will say from their heart, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: keep the door of my lips. Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work iniquity; and let me not eat of their dainties. Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head; for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities."—Psalm cxli. 3-5.

In the ceremony of cleansing one from whom the plague of leprosy was removed, he was to be brought to the priest, or rather the priest was to go to him; and the priest was to pronounce him clean, after having examined him thoroughly. Then the healed one was to bring certain oblations, for his cleansing, to the priest. On the first day the priest was to take for him two birds alive and clean, with cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop. An earthen vessel was to be filled with running [living] water, over which one of the live birds was to be killed. The other bird, with the sprinkling instrument of cedar wood, scarlet and hyssop, were to be dipped in the blood and water, and the healed leper was to be sprinkled seven times with it, and the living bird was to be let go into the open field. But although the leper is thus pronounced clean by the priest, yet he was to cleanse himself by washing his clothes, shaving his hair, and washing his body. Then he might come into the camp; but he was to remain out of his tent seven days. Having been separated from the living, he had in a sense been dead; but he now appears, as raised to life. Instead of his former state of corruption, he now appears as sound, healthy and vigorous, ruddy and white. This appears to be signified by the living birds, the cedar wood and the scarlet, the hyssop signifying the sweet smell about him, instead of the former "stink."—Psa. xxxviii. 5. The sprinkling seven times shows forth that perfect cleansing by the application of the blood of Jesus Christ, by the Spirit, in the personal experience of the saints. David says, "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inner parts; and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."—Psalm li. 6, 7. We thus learn from the record that there is a marked difference between the healing and the cleansing of the leper. The restoration to his place among the people was upon the first day. After seven days, and upon the eighth day, when he is restored to his tent, the cleansing is complete. In the case of a spiritual Israelite who has been restored to communion and fellowship with his brethren, there is experienced the answer of the prayer, "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit."—Psalm li. 9-12.

The two live birds, clean ones, according to the law, are both needed as typifying the dear Redeemer. While it may be that the two natures of the Redeemer are here shadowed forth (for he was both God and man), yet we are inclined to the belief that the real thing shadowed forth in them is that which is expressed by the apostle, in speaking of the work of Jesus Christ, "Who was delivered for our offenses and raised again for our justification."—Rom. iv. 25. "Without shedding of blood is no remission."—Heb. ix. 22. That the running water was an emblem of the Spirit of God is very evident, which is always found wherever the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus is found in those earthen vessels afore prepared unto glory. "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us."—2 Cor. iv. 7. "He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive."—John vii. 38, 39. And the Spirit of the Lord God was in and upon the dear Redeemer while in the flesh and under the law accomplishing the work of redemption. He was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit."—1 Peter iii. 18. "Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, &c."—1 Tim. iii. 16. "By one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Heb. x. 14.

The living and released bird, though not slain, as the other bird was, was yet dipped in the blood of the slain one, and is thus seen to be one with or identified with it. The crucified Jesus is also the risen and living Jesus, "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead."—Rom. i. 4. His resurrection from the dead declares his justification, and that of those for whom he died, as his death alone could not or did not declare it. We shall never know Jesus in the power of his resurrection until we have known him in the fellowship of his sufferings. No one has ever experienced the cleansing power of the blood of Jesus, but has also had the desire to put off the old man, and to put on the new man; for, says the apostle, "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."—1 John iii. 3. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."—2 Cor. vii. 1. There is a "hating even of the garments spotted with the flesh."—Jude 23. As Jesus was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so those who are risen with him are in the newness of his resurrection life to walk, having their conversation in heaven. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it might be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. iii. 20, 21. Thus will be completed the work of the week, or seven days, of our mortal pilgrimage, when we shall enter upon the eighth day, which in the Scriptures signifies the beginning of a new dispensation, or a new beginning, or completeness; for the eighth day is the beginning of a new week.

"There we shall see his face,
And never, never sin;
But from the river of his grace
Drink endless pleasure in."

In the ceremony of the cleansing, on the eighth day two he lambs, without blemish, one yearling ewe lamb, without blemish, and three tenth deals of fine flour, for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and one log of oil, were to be brought to the priest. These being presented, together with the one to be cleansed, were to be offered in sacrifice as the law prescribed. The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews informs us that in all the sacrifices under the law there was a remembrance of sin made; and they all point to that one offering of Jesus. In them we see Jesus and his perfect work.

The blood of the trespass offering was to be applied by the priest to the extreme parts of the restored leper—the tip of his right ear, the thumb of his right hand, and the great toe of his right foot; and above the blood, the oil was to be applied; and what remained of the oil in the hand of the priest he was to put upon the head of the restored one, to make an atonement for him before the Lord. These are indeed speaking things, and in substance said to the one to whom applied, that he was prepared to hear the word of God, to handle things without defiling them, and wherever in Israel he might go he would not be avoided, being clean. The oil was doubtless an emblem of the Holy Ghost, which is the Spirit of sanctification. By the blood of atonement the sins of the redeemed are put away; and this the saints realize when the peace-speaking blood is applied. "Now he which stablishes us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God; who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts."—2 Cor. i. 21, 22. "Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things."—1 John ii. 20. By the blood of Jesus we are said to be justified (Rom. v. 9), and by the Spirit we are sanctified. By the remainder of the oil in the hand of the priest, which was poured upon the head, was signified perhaps that of which the apostle speaks, Titus iii. 5, 6, as the "renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior." As redeemed by the blood of Jesus, what manner of persons ought we to be? "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."—Rom. xii. 1, 2. May all our powers be devoted to his service. May our footsteps be ordered in his word, our ears circumscribed to hear his commands, and the work of our hands be such as shall glorify him and show forth his praise. Amen.

J.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

WE are again compelled to call the attention of a number of our subscribers to their delinquency. We are publishing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES this year on more liberal terms than ever before, and really below what we can well afford. With many the neglect to send on their remittances is more from thoughtlessness than from intentional neglect. The inconvenience to us is just the same whether the payments are held back from inability to pay, or from indifference, or through carelessness. Will not our brethren and friends, every one when they read this notice, look at the date next to their name, and if they find it in arrears, please make a special effort to send on their subscription? We are furnishing more reading matter for the price of the paper than any publication of our order and at double the expense, and need the money to meet our liabilities falling due.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT

That great care should be taken in sending a renewal of subscription to give us the same name as the one to whom the paper is already coming. If the party is married be sure the initials are given correctly; for if the paper is coming in the wife's name and the husband writes us to send the paper the next year, and signs his own name, we have no means of knowing that the person to whom the paper is going is his wife; and not finding his name on our list he is entered as a new subscriber and the paper sent to both; or if the paper is going in the husband's name and the renewal sent on in the wife's name, the result will be the same. The best way is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing the name pasted either on the margin of the paper or on the wrapper in which it comes.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE time is fast drawing near when the question, "What shall I get for a Christmas present?" will be the inquiry. We would suggest that you look over our list of books advertised on last page and see if you cannot find something there that will be appropriate. The cloth-bound books of "Editorials" we will mail from now until Christmas, both volumes, for three dollars. All our other books are quoted as low as we can possibly afford to sell them.

The extra inducements we offer for new subscribers to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES will enable almost any one to order a copy for their friend, which will make a lasting present.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Mount Pleasant Old School Baptist Association, to the several churches composing her body

VERY DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Another year with its joys and sorrows is numbered with the past, and we are favored to greet you again with our annual Circular Letter. The principles of faith and doctrine have been set forth from time to time, and, we believe, maintained by this association. The old principles of faith and doctrine as advocated and believed by our aged brethren, which met with such extreme opposition to the truth and order of God's house, is what we as a body believe and hold to, standing unvaryingly, uncompromizingly in the faith and doctrine of God our Savior. To preach the total depravity of man, his utter helplessness, and entire dependence for life and salvation eternal, was unpopular then, and is yet. The more modern system advocated by those who went out from among us, that of man's instrumentalities or agency, in the salvation of fallen man, was likewise met, disbelieved and opposed by our brethren, as they then stood in their lot, wielding "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," believing the cause that they had espoused was sacred; that it was God's cause, and he would maintain it; believing that the weapons of their warfare were not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds. Notwithstanding the overwhelming numbers that then opposed the church in her order and doctrine, she stood firm, and yet stands firm and unshaken, and will be maintained and upheld by Israel's God; yes, by him who has said that he will maintain the cause of the poor. And in all this we have nothing to glory, save in the cross of Christ; for if we had been left to ourselves, or to man's free will, we would have run after the doctrines of Balaam, and of men utterly destitute of a knowledge of Jesus and his power to save. Therefore we can only say, as Paul said, "By the grace of God I am what I am." To God shall be all the praise. Dear brethren, may you by this grace be kept in the truth, to abide in it steadfastly, inquiring after the old paths, to walk in them; walking in the truth in love, keeping yourselves separate from the world and its vain, professed religion, abstaining from every appearance of evil, living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, faithful in the discharge of every duty, doers of the word as well as hearers. This is your reasonable service, and according to the teaching of God's grace.

Finally, brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil; praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

J. S. TURNER, Mod.
E. F. RANDELL, Clerk.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists, in session with the Sulphur Fork Church, Henry Co., Ky., Sept. 1st, 2nd & 3d, 1893, to the several associations with whom she corresponds, sendeth greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—By the grace of God, in his merciful providence we have again, according to the previous appointment, met in our annual meeting. This meeting has been a very pleasant and harmonious one, all subject to the law of Jesus, and dwelling as brethren in unity. We rejoice at the coming of your messengers with messages of love. We desire that you will still remember us, so that our correspondence may long be pleasant, and that we shall still be joined together in the one Lord, one faith and one baptism. The ministers of our Lord have been favored and blessed to declare the gospel of Christ to us with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

The next session of our association will be held with the church at Mount Hope, Harrison Co., Ind., (near New Albany the nearest R. R. point), commencing on Friday, before the first Saturday in September, 1894, when and where we hope to again meet your messengers and hear of your welfare.

J. S. TURNER, Mod.
E. F. RANDELL, Clerk.

The New Hope Primitive Baptist Association, now in session with the church at Mt. Pisgah, in Drew County, Arkansas, to the association with whom we correspond, sendeth greeting.

ONCE more we have been permitted to meet in peace as a band of brethren, and have been highly blessed to converse with each other concerning the goodness of God.

Dear brethren, we feel grateful to God that we have been blessed by hearing the truth preached by our visiting brethren, E. C. W. Kirk and J. B. Vandevender, messengers from Cadron Association, by whom were sent a letter and a bundle of Minutes as correspondence. Dear brethren, we gladly received your correspondence. Our esteemed brother, Elder C. W. Anderson, of Dutton, Ark., preached the truth in demonstration of the Spirit and power. We, as little children, desire your prayers, that we may continue to meet in peace and love one with another, as dear little children of the Lord. As corresponding messengers we send the following brethren, whom we deem worthy, to sit with you: Elders J. H. Blythe, T. B. Little, brethren J. J. Herring, J. P. Aycock, W. S. Robertson, H. H. Carter, G. W. McVey, G. M. Erwin. We desire to continue correspondence with you as heretofore, in order that we may be helps to one another. As such, we hope to meet a goodly number of your corresponding messengers at our next session, which will be held, the Lord willing, commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in October, 1894, with Ephesus Church.

T. B. LITTLE, Mod.
WM. DAY, Clerk.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Maria Fullerton Southard was born in Ohio, Nov. 2d, 1812; was married to Elder Lot Southard May 22d, 1834; and died in an Asylum in Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 7th, 1893, making her 81 years old.

Her remains were brought back to her old home church in Crawfordsville on the 9th, where many old friends, brethren and sisters assembled and listened to a very comforting sermon by the pastor of our church, Elder J. H. Oliphant, from 1 Corinthians xv. 35. Then we followed the dear old body to our beautiful Oak Hill Cemetery, and laid her, where she had so often expressed a desire to be, beside her faithful companion.

Having no daughters of her own, after her husband's death she spent one year with me, and I love to recall the pleasant hours we had together. She was a great Bible reader, and very fond of the SIGNS. Her memory was very good, and she was always ready with a Scripture or to repeat a hymn. I asked her to tell me her experience, and write her own words:

"I was raised by Presbyterian parents in a very strict way. I was sprinkled when three years old, and taken into the church proper when I was sixteen. At that time I had many serious thoughts, feeling too unworthy for such a high privilege. About that time I had a dream. The evil one took me to see the bottomless pit, and I could not dance any more after going to a party and taking my place on the floor. I trembled so that I had to go home. I was under deep conviction for a long time. At one time these words came to me with power, 'Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.' They seemed to be my prayer for weeks and weeks. After awhile the answer came with great comfort and joy, 'I will; be thou clean.' Elder Flint baptized me several years after we were married. I waited a long time to get better, or to live free from sin; but I spent all my living, and grew nothing better, but rather worse."

From this dear saint I first learned that a minister's wife has to bear the cross and yoke equally with her husband. Elder Lot Southard in his early ministerial life preached every Saturday and Sunday; and the country (in Ohio) being new, and the churches quite a distance apart, necessitated his being from home much of the time, leaving his faithful wife to care for her little children, and with their help make the living from the store kept within one room of their house. The sickness, sorrows, deaths, anxieties and privations of which I have heard her tell, if enumerated, would fill a book; but I am admonished to be brief, and I can but say with Paul, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." I feel confident that she has gone where there is fullness of joy.

From one who will long cherish her memory.

LINA W. BECK.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

SPECIAL OFFER.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c., costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford, as follows:

From now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us an additional dollar for two new names.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS,"
FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1893.

NO. 48.

CORRESPONDENCE.

VITAL KNOWLEDGE.

A GREAT deal of the Scripture is understood by us traditionally. The meaning of it we have heard from men, or have found written for us in books, and we have accepted it as the true understanding, which it may be; but it has no vital power in our heart or life. It is only that which the Lord has spoken unto us personally of which we have a true, vital knowledge. The words which he speaks to us "are spirit and life" to us; and no others are.

How different appear those portions of the word which have thus been revealed unto us, and have been food to our hungry souls, from any others, and in how different a way we consider them. Every word in such portions seems well placed, and necessary to the rich meaning which has been opened to our view. But it is not so when considering any Scripture whose meaning we have received at the hands of men, and which we consider settled beyond any right on our part to question. Tradition brings an interpretation to us in an arbitrary way, and forces it upon us. Anything we may see in the language which appears inconsistent with the accepted meaning, we pass over as unimportant, or as not yet clearly understood. We do not feel that we have the right to travel in any path but that marked out by the religious teachers; and we know that many will not allow any claim to an experience concerning any portion of Scripture that would show an interpretation varying from that which has been authorized by schools and councils of men. This has often clogged the minds of dear saints with a quantity of useless theological lumber, dead religious knowledge. And the fear of appearing presumptuous and self-confident has kept many a poor soul from expressing to the brethren what he has experienced with power and what has really been taught him by the Lord, lest he should appear to regard himself as knowing more than the fathers, and be thought to feel wiser than others, when he truly feels that he is the poorest and most ignorant of all.

Whatever the Lord teaches has a power in it, which will make itself felt in the soul, and must find expression in the life. And we are to remember that each one of the children of Zion is "taught of the Lord." Every vital truth is received directly from the Lord. The anointing of his Spirit, which they receive of him, "teaches them of all things." No apostle or prophet or pastor was ever sent to one of God's little ones with any spiritual knowledge beyond what had already been received from the Lord.—1 John ii. 20, 21. The teacher is sent to witness to that divine teaching, and to set in order before the little ones the doctrine and order of the church of God, into the vital knowledge of which each one has been brought by a spiritual birth, and by the revelation of the Spirit. And when the truth of any experience and revelation claimed to have been received of the Lord is to be tried, it must be by the inspired Scriptures of truth alone, and that before the judgment seat of Christ, an orderly church of God, and not by the interpretations and standards of men.

Whenever any portion of Scripture is spoken to one by the dear Savior, the interpretation of it will be in accordance with his experience, and will fall pleasantly in with it, and further explain it; and we shall then find that every word in the inspired language, every word which properly belongs there according to the rules of language, is needed, and is in its proper place. It is right and necessary to understand the language, and to resort to every available means to get the exact language used by the inspired writer. I do not think that any one has really supposed that any of our brethren regard the knowledge of language, or of any science or art, as without value, nor that any of them regard such knowledge as ordinarily the subject of revelation.

When the words used by the inspired writer, or their equivalent in any other language, are found, and their literal meaning understood, the true spiritual interpretation of the declarations will be found to be in accordance therewith, and we shall find no need to correct the language, nor to omit any part of it. We shall also find that the interpretation, as thus received, brings the Lord's experienced people together, as all have been taught the same things, by the same Spirit, and are really "of one heart and of one soul" in the kingdom of God. A Scripture that is thus opened to one by the Spirit will present things that are new as well as old. There is a vital freshness and newness in the manifestations of life, in the daily experience of growth. But even though a Scripture may be expounded so that the meaning now expressed may have never been expressed before, or never heard by those who now hear it, yet it will be manifest to living souls as according to the mysterious exercises of their own minds; as throwing light upon their experience; as having refreshment for them; as causing them to lose sight of earthly teachers and their fancied claims upon us on account of superior learning and wisdom, and calling forth praise out of our hearts to the Lord. As to the tribunal before which the conflicting views regarding the interpretation of any portion of the inspired Scripture are presented, and where the decisive judgment is given, we find it not in the schools of men, nor among the wise and prudent; nor are its decisions set down authoritatively in libraries of theological writings, nor even in the most experimental of books or epistles of uninspired men; but among the poor, tried and afflicted believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, whether learned or unlearned, we find that tribunal; and the decisions are written daily and hourly, in the only forms of epistle that are ever needed to commend one as God's servant in the ministration of his word at any time; "written not with ink, nor on tables of stone, but with the Spirit of the living God, upon the fleshly tables of their hearts."—2 Cor. iii. It is easy to charge one with innovation, or with making claims to special revelation, because he speaks of the Scripture as the Lord has brought it to his own mind, and tells of the wonders and beauties unfolded to his own soul, and of the living light and warmth experienced under its divine power, instead of copying or repeating what some dear saint, or some learned theologian wrote a hundred or a thousand years ago. The word given to the saints in past years and ages was for their necessary food, and instruction, and reproof, and thorough furnishing, then, each one in his lot, preparing them for whatever they had to do and suffer. When it is our lot to read of them, the circumstances under which they were, their exercises under the Lord's dealings with them, their declarations concerning the heavenly food given them, their expressions of praise to God, all this is comforting to us; for they become witnesses, a "great cloud of witnesses," to confirm our souls. But nothing of that can be our food or instruction to-day. The same Lord gives the same word to us to-day and it may show to our souls much that never was expressed by them, nor even seen; though there will be no conflicting doctrine. The things that come out of the treasure house of the Lord are dispensed by him to suit every special time, state, circumstance and need, and they are always new, and yet always old; always "that which was from the beginning." Whatever grows is constantly unfolding new things. The leaf of last spring will not be hung upon the branch the present season, nor will the fruit be kept as a standard by which to prove that which shall again appear. The living tree will always be justified by its leaves and fruit, and "wisdom is justified of her children."

One might say, "He is certainly paving the way for a leap into some heresy, and for cutting loose from the old landmarks." I have never been afraid of any such suspicion, for I am not conscious of any ambition in writing or speaking on these things, nor of any special theory to promote or defend. From the first, my public work seems to have been forced upon me by the power of the word that was given me, which was able, to my unspeakable surprise and joy, to break up the darkness within, and fill my soul with "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ," raising up a precious hope of life and immortality through the dear Redeemer, who was that moment revealed to me as having died for me. The word given me then, and since then, from time to time, with saving power and grace in times of awful extremity, always unexpectedly, and to my wonder and amazement, has wrought so peculiarly and mightily within me that I must speak; "I was weary with refraining, and could not stay." I have never been able to prepare myself for this work of preaching the gospel, nor to make any improvement in it. I have read with comfort and profit many things written by experienced men in all ages, sermons, letters, expositions, experiences; but I have never been able to make use of them in my ministry. I can neither repeat nor work over what another has written or said. When I am at liberty there is more in my own full soul than I can utter; and when I am shut up memory cannot give me a key with which to open any door which the Lord has shut, nor light to dispel the darkness in which he has enshrouded me. I have tried to advance in the knowledge of my native language, in which I would like to be thorough, and also have a desire to obtain as much as circumstances and ability will allow of all useful knowledge. Yet I often question whether this desire is not of the flesh; for I find that when I feel most powerfully the working of the Spirit within me, and a disposition to "meditate upon these things, and give myself wholly to them," the desire for worldly knowledge seems to be quite gone. But while I think it my duty, and so far as I am able to judge for others, the duty of all christians, and especially ministers, to study as far as they can to get a correct knowledge of their own language, yet I have to say that even that, so far as my own experience goes, is only a servant, and a very weak and helpless servant; unable to furnish any spiritual help; unable to carry the least spiritual message except when specially prepared and directed by the God who sent food to Elijah by the ravens; very liable to be overvalued by its possessors, and therefore never allowed to bring praise to the Lord's servants from the hearts of his dear children; a servant that will always be at hand when needed, and which is never needed when not possessed; for no child of God will ever fail to receive the necessary food and help and comfort at any time because of the lack of any worldly knowledge.

It is not without cause that I speak of this liability to be drawn away from the Scriptures of truth, as a standard, to the writings of men. In every division in the church those who depart, however slight the departure, will be found following some living man, who seeks to establish or defend some institution or work not commanded in the Scriptures, or who raises the war-cry of heresy against the established churches of the saints, because of personal bitterness against some one of her faithful servants, or because of personal ambition; or they will be found measuring themselves and others by the writings of some servant who has gone. I have known ministers (I believe they were such, though erring) take books and pamphlets and Circular Letters into the pulpit, and read and argue from them to show who was in the right. No matter how good the book, nor how faithful the servant who wrote it; that is not the Lord's appointed ministry, nor is there comforting and healing power in such ministry. "Preach the word." That is the command.

But in regard to men, we know that all are liable to err on some point, and to use forms of expression at one time which they would not use upon a farther experience and knowledge; and no true servant would want to be quoted as a standard, or as the founder of a sect. Many have written views upon some mysterious subjects which they would not want set up as a standard, though still holding them, because they know that only the language of Scripture is an infallible standard. What they wrote served for the time and occasion, as did their sermons and exhortations; but they would say to all the saints, "Take the Scriptures for your guide, and look to the Lord to give you light. We may have said things that will not be profitable to you, and you could not safely follow the works from our pen as a guide; but the Scriptures are safe." Also, the views of men have often been erroneously reported, and what they said incorrectly transcribed, so that often the name of a strong man is sometimes associated with an erroneous sentiment, which he never held nor expressed.

I feel that it is a truth that cannot be too carefully remembered and considered, that the children of Zion "shall all be taught of the Lord," and that the teaching of one soul will not avail for another, nor the ministration of the Spirit to one church answer for another church by being repeated to it, nor the fund of knowledge experienced by the churches in one age of the world be transmitted, as worldly knowledge is, for the advantage of the churches in succeeding ages. The showers that fell upon the corn and the vine in former ages will not water the fields and vineyards of to-day; neither in our personal experience, nor in the case of churches in successive ages, can the light of one day be hoarded and carried into the next. We often wish to do so, and complain of our poor memory, and of our carelessness in letting the sweet light and comfort which has been given us to-day slip away. But it has served its purpose; and if we could carry it along into another day we would have no use for it, for to-morrow will be full of its own light. To-day's bread is not supplied from yesterday's store, but is given us to-day.

The same God who established the churches in the apostles' day builds them now, and appears in his glory in that work as he did then. He builds them no more easily now than then because of what men have preached and written during all the intervening ages, and what councils have decided; nor are they any more beautiful, nor in any way improved, on that account. He works in the same way to-day as then; and without the aid of men, other than as gifts established and ordered in the Scriptures, he sets a church in order, and gives her peace and prosperity to-day as always heretofore. The apostles and all other gifts have been established as it has pleased him; and he still sets the dominion of those ordinances of the gospel heavens in the earth according to his will. What a comfort and pleasure it is to the servant of God to visit one of those churches of God where only his work appears; where there is no ambition to build after any pattern but what the Scriptures present, nor to take any other rule for their faith and practice; one of those "little hills" of Zion where the growth is natural, not with graded and shaven lawns, and trees planted for beauty; a church where the members have been drawn together in love and mutual confidence, desiring each other's company, delighting in each other's conversation, and seeking each other's welfare; seeking gifts of the Lord "for the work of the ministry" to them; coveting the best gifts, not in the sight of men, but in the sight of God; knowing that what he gives is best, and therefore "content with such things as they have;" desiring to walk humbly before him, to give no occasion for reproach from the world, and to have the fellowship of all the churches of the saints. Such a church is indeed "beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth."

"There my best friends, my kindred dwell,
There God my Savior reigns."

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 15, 1893.

"I CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine."—2 Tim. iv. 1, 2.

I desire, if it will not be in the way of better matter, to offer a few thoughts on the above Scripture. This was a solemn charge given by the inspired apostle Paul to Timothy, a young minister of the gospel; and one that the humble ministers of our God would do well to take heed unto.

"Preach the word. We find among us (I desire to measure inside the temple) brethren who seem to think that the minister can preach Christ and him crucified, and never say anything about that glorious and soul-cheering doctrine, to wit, the absolute sovereignty and unlimited predestination of our God in all worlds, times and events, and that according to his eternal purpose which he purposed in himself before the world began. But, dear brethren, I am not able to preach Christ, the Savior of sinners, without these glorious principles for a foundation. Sometimes, under such preaching, brethren do not seem to relish everything that is said; and because they cannot with their carnal reason harmonize these principles of truth they say they should not be preached, because they give offense; and they will sometimes quote from Paul where he says, "Wherefore if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend."—1 Cor. viii. 13. Now, the apostle did not say, If my preaching the truth offends my brother I will preach the truth no more while the world standeth. There is a vast difference between making a brother to offend, and offending a brother. But the apostle charges Timothy to "be instant," which means to be present, urgent on all occasions, "in season, out of season." So I understand that it is our duty to preach the truth in its purity on all occasions, regardless of the consequences, leaving that with the Lord; not shunning any point of doctrine for fear of not pleasing somebody; neither making a hobby of any particular point to please somebody; to reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine; not in an angry or abrupt manner; not bringing a railing accusation against a brother. We read that "Michael the Archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee."—Jude 9. How beautiful it is to thus speak to our adversaries; and if a brother or sister should bring a railing accusation against us, it does not justify us in doing likewise. But let us be meek, and show a spirit of forbearance; not forsaking the truth at all, but manifesting that charity that covers a multitude of sins, and which is an abiding principle with God's dear children.

Sometimes it is the case that a minister decides (I speak from experience) that because he does not understand some particular point of doctrine which some other brother preaches, that it is false; and to manifest his zeal for God he denounces it as heresy; and perhaps he becomes high minded, and decides there is a great work before him, in the way of purifying the church; and he wants to make a declaration of non-fellowship for somebody. Here comes trouble, divisions, wars and confusion. The peace of the church is destroyed, love and fellowship seem to be gone. Where at one time there seemed nothing but peace and harmony, now nothing but strife and confusion is found. There is no long-suffering, no forbearance, no charity, no meekness, no quietude, but all is strife and confusion. Such will always be the consequence when we walk after our own fleshly lusts and ambitions; but such is never the result of preaching the truth in its purity, reproving, rebuking, exhorting, with all long-suffering and doctrine.

Dear children of God, I have always had more trouble in fellowshiping self than anybody else; consequently if I were to start to make a declaration of non-fellowship I would have to commence at home. Now, my brethren, may it be the will of the righteous Monarch of the universe to give us all the spirit of forbearance. May we watch over one another for good, and not for evil, following after the things that make for peace, and things whereby one may edify another. May our ministering brethren ever be found striving for the peace and harmony of Zion, realizing that woe is unto the shepherd that scattereth the flock. Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. "For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ." "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear; clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever. And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him. These are murderers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, how they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit. But, ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."—Jude 4, 12-21. "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" "Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

I have thus offered a few scattering thoughts, and called attention to the above Scriptures, hoping they may comfort and edify some poor, tempest-tossed child of God. Some of God's children have seemed to be harassed and tormented a great deal with those who have perverted the truth; and it being impossible to answer the numerous inquiries regarding such troubles, I have given a few general suggestions for the comfort of all such.

I am, I humbly trust, your brother in Christ,

A. H. WILLIAMSON.

LUVERNE, Ala., April 24, 1893.

RUNYAN, KY., March 26, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of a very dear and precious sister I thought I would write of some of the Lord's dealings with me, and commit the same to your better judgment. But I feel like Jeremiah of old when he was called to speak to Israel. Being a child, I know not what to speak; but if he will touch my lips with the finger of inspiration then I can speak something that will be of comfort to the children of God. Jesus says, "Without me ye can do nothing." I can do nothing within myself.

I was raised under the Old, Predestinarian Baptists, and went to hear them proclaim salvation by grace, the only way to God. I always thought I could not get forgiveness of my sins by my own merits. But probably the cause of my not wanting to try to roll away my sins was that I was raised under Old Baptists, my parents being such. The members often came to our house and talked of salvation by grace. I would listen to them, hoping and trusting that I would see and believe as they did. I thought I would wait upon them, hoping and trusting I would receive a righteous man's reward.

The beginning of my trouble was in the spring of 1891, when in my twentieth year; but I hardly knew what it meant. It continued until July, when I was at a meeting, and a sickness came over me such as I never before had, while the brethren were preaching. Ever since then I have been troubled in a way that I never before was. As I went home with some of my friends I thought no more of my sickness; but when I left them it came back to me. Then I said if the Lord would help me I would do better. Although I had made several promises before this; yet they were of no effect. This is just the way of man, not knowing what he is doing when he is trying to rule over the Lord. Bear with me, for I want to relate two dreams. I dreamed I was in my sins, and that I saw the Lord coming, riding upon the clouds. I thought this was the great and dreadful day of the Lord. When I saw him I tried to hide from him, but could not. Everything seemed as white as snow. He turned, and did not pass over me. In my second dream I was traveling up a high mountain, on a straight road, and when I had reached the top I saw my dear Savior sitting at a table. He arose and took me by the hand, and I said, "Lord, what is my doom?" He told me, but I do not remember his words. Here I sank down in despair. But he said, "For it is written," and started to get a book. Then I said, "Lord, I believe every word thou sayest." He then disappeared from me, and everything was as pure shining gold before my eyes. Where the book was lying was the prettiest place I had ever seen. Here I awoke, and felt very sorry that it was not a fact.

One night as I lay down upon my bed I heard a voice saying, "Come out of the world." This only aggravated my woe more and more. But all the time I would seek for places of pleasure, and very often would find none; but when I did, I had double the amount of trouble. Sometimes I would seek the lonesome groves; but when I would get there I would leave them just as I had went, fearing some one might be there and see me; for I did not want anyone to know of my trouble. I would ask the Lord to pardon my many sins and transgressions, often using these words, "Lord, pass by my sins, if it be thy will; and if it is not thy will, send my soul to hell, for thy righteous law approves it well."

Thus I went on until the meeting of Old Powder Creek Church on Saturday. I returned home with a troubled mind and heaviness of heart. I wanted Elder A. Hatfield to be with me that night, to pray for me; but he did not go, and it grieved me much. That night I lay down on my bed in my father's house, but could not fall asleep. I lay awake until about ten o'clock, when I thought I was sinking through my bed, my burden was so great. But when it rolled off me I arose on my bed, and then lay down, feeling easier than I ever before had felt in my life. But I would not make any alarm over it, for fear I was mistaken. I was made to praise God for his love and mercy, using this hymn,

"I'm not ashamed to own my Lord,
Or to defend his cause;
Maintain the honor of his word,
The glory of his cross."

Then came this Scripture to my mind, "Go home to thy friends and tell them what great things the Lord hath done for thee."—Mark v. 19. All this time I wanted to tell this to some one, and thought I would tell my father of it in the morning; but when I arose I would not tell him of it, for fear I was not right. While lying on my bed I chose the place where I would like to be baptized, and the person to baptize me. I wanted to be laid in the place where my father and mother had been laid in the month of June before. I went to meeting next morning thinking I would not offer myself to the church; but at the close of the meeting I offered myself, and they received me. Elder Hatfield said he was well satisfied about me. They proceeded to the water, where I followed my dear Savior in the watery grave. Then I thought I would not see any more trouble; but alas! I have seen more trouble day after day, more or less. In this world we shall have tribulation. Paul says, "We glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. For when we were without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."—Rom. v. 3-6.

Now, dear kindred, if you can draw any comfort from this, it is beyond my short sight, although at times I feel to tell what a dear Savior I have found, and to speak comfortably unto Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. I am a poor, weak, way-worn, sad pilgrim, sojourning here below. I am no better than was Paul in regard to imperfections. He said, "I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) there dwells no good thing; for to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not. I feel like the poet who said,

"Like one alone I seem to be;
O! is there anyone like me?"

If there is one like me I would like to hear him talk awhile. If I am saved, it is alone by the grace of God.

Your unworthy brother,
JEFFERSON FARLEY.

GRAIN VALLEY, Mo., Feb. 6, 1893.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Words are signs of ideas; but words that do not convey an idea are very poor things. I fall so far short of commanding language to convey my thoughts, or to express my feelings, that it is a difficult matter for me to express my feelings so that my brethren and sisters can understand how I feel in regard to my own imperfections, and the beauty of the perfection of Christ's kingdom. I often express myself (when I feel a blessing or a favor has been bestowed upon unworthy me by my brethren or sisters, or in any way it may come), that I am not worthy. Then it is suggested to me, Really, do you feel unworthy? Am I a recipient of that which enables one to see themselves unworthy? I know (I hope I know) that nothing short of the faith of God's elect can make one feel unworthy of God's spiritual blessings. Christ said to the centurion, "I will come and heal thy servant." The centurion said, "Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof." O! listen. What heavenly words come from our Savior (if so be he is our Savior), who knows the very thoughts and feelings of a poor sinner, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Hence it took faith to discover to the centurion his unworthiness. Even so now it takes the same faith to make one feel unworthy in the sight of God; and the same faith that gives God's people to see their unworthiness, enables them to rejoice that they are counted worthy to suffer for the name of Jesus. They rejoice in the faith that gives them to feel worthy to feel unworthy; for, be assured, without this faith one cannot feel their unworthiness, nor rejoice to be found worthy to suffer for his name. This faith is the fruit of the Spirit. By it we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and

(Continued on page 382.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 29, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

WATCHFULNESS.

"WATCH therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."—Matt. xxv. 13.

Too much importance cannot be ascribed to the admonition here quoted, since it is in substance repeated by our Lord on several occasions. Not only was it his pleasure to leave this direction in plain words for the guidance of his disciples, but the divine Teacher by many parables illustrated the importance of the instruction thus given them. In the immediate connection of this text several very striking parables are presented showing the necessity of rendering obedience to the injunction so impressively spoken exclusively to those whom Jesus had called to be his own followers. Evidently it is no holiday amusement to which the subjects of electing love are appointed in the eternal counsel of the will of God. The very first step in following Jesus requires the denial of self, including an unreserved renunciation of all the desires and wishes of the natural mind. No power short of the omnipotence of God is sufficient to accomplish this necessary work. All the conflicts and afflictions of their earthly experience are essentially and indispensably needful to the manifestation of this work of the Spirit in each individual saint.

It must be observed that this direction was not spoken to the carnal multitudes who were following our Lord from merely natural motives; to his chosen and called disciples he gave the commandment as recorded in our text; to them alone can it be applied without doing violence to the word of Jesus. Certainly it cannot be construed as teaching those who have not the love of God in them that by watching they may attain to its possession. Neither can it be understood as designed to show those who are dead in sin by what efforts of their own they may obtain righteousness and eternal life. Not only would such a perversion of the text involve the contradiction of all the revealed word of truth, but it would also outrage the consistency of common sense. It should require nothing more than sound natural reason to discern the absurdity of addressing to the dead an admonition to watch. The only commandment ever given by Jesus to dead sinners, translates them into eternal life, just as the only commandment he ever gave to those who were physically dead, in every case called them into natural life.

In all the discourse in which the admonition of our text is included, the Master was instructing his own chosen disciples with regard to the severe conflicts and sufferings which they must endure when he should be taken from their companionship, and they should be left as sheep without a shepherd. He did not flatter them with the promise that by watching they should be able to avoid the assaults of the adversary, or to escape the appointed tribulation through which they must follow him; nor was this the end to be attained by their watching. The sole object for which they were enjoined to watch and be ready was the coming of their Lord. This was not then a weary vigil of constant apprehension, as if in the momentary expectation of an invading foe. As faithful and diligent servants they were to bear in mind that their allegiance was due to him who had called them, and never forget the assurance of his coming for their joy. That coming is not to be regarded as referring to some indefinite period in the future when time shall cease to be; it is in such an hour as they think not that their Lord comes in the individual experience of each of his followers. Whatever may be the popularly accepted notion in regard to the final destiny of all men, it is certain that the subjects of electing love are called to give a strict account to God continually for all their words and actions. "For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more; but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way."—Rom. xiv. 11-13. When the light of truth shines in the heart of any conscious sinner he will find enough to engage all his powers in watching the fearful manifestation of iniquity therein revealed, without giving attention to the frailties and infirmities of his brethren. This is clearly taught and enforced in all the parables spoken by Jesus as they are recorded in the context. However we may fail to see other important truth which may be hidden in those dark sayings without which our Lord spoke not to the multitudes, it is manifest in all of them that the disciples were admonished to constant vigilance in searching their own secret thoughts and emotions. To this application of our text the experience of every disciple brings confirmation. They unite in complaining that their most bitter sorrows arise from their own evil hearts. How important to their peace they feel it to be that they watch against that fountain of corruption!

By the word "therefore" it is shown that the text is the legitimate conclusion from the preceding instruction which is here written. No interpretation of the parables can be correct unless it is conformed to the application by which our Lord makes them result in this solemn admonition to the disciples, by which they are enjoined to constant and earnest watchfulness. In connection with this same admonition in the preceding chapter Jesus says, "Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods." This is said of the faithful and wise servant. It is applied by Jesus directly to his own disciples in impressing upon them the need of giving heed to the admonition to "watch!" There is no period in the sojourn of the saints in time when it is not needful for them to obey this commandment of their Lord.

The reason assigned in our text, as in other expressions of this admonition, is one that would have little weight with those who are but working for the reward which they expect to receive when their work is finished. They would be more influenced by the definite knowledge of the day and the hour when their labors should be rewarded by the coming of him from whom they expect the wages for which they are laboring. Such a servant would be better described by the evil servant who said, "My lord delayeth his coming." But to them that love his appearing, the fact that they cannot know when he will reveal his presence to them is the very strongest incentive to constant watchfulness. This is according to the assurance left on record for the comfort of the saints. "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and UNTO THEM THAT LOOK FOR HIM shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." None can claim an interest in this promise of his coming unto salvation but those expressly designated. They who are longing for the manifestation of their dear Redeemer but find in the continued hiding of his face occasion for more devoted and unremitting watchfulness. So the anxious wife looking for an absent husband, as the weary hours of his absence drag slowly by, becomes more deeply concerned. When he comes he will find her watching; not that she expects pay for her services in looking for his return, but that her love will not allow her to be indifferent. Much more does the Spirit of Christ by the power of heavenly grace move those who are led by that Spirit to watch for the coming of him whom their soul loves above all the affections which pertain to this transitory and perishing world.

The perfect law of liberty by which the saints are judged in the gospel kingdom, is not like that law which was written on tables of stone for the natural Israelites. They needed to be taught by priests and kings, to remind them of their duty to observe the precepts of that law which was ordained for their government. In the new covenant the Lord has promised a better order, in which nothing is left to depend upon the works or will of his chosen people. In this holy city, new Jerusalem, which is the church in gospel liberty, there is no occasion for teaching "Every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord! For they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."—Jer. xxxi. 34. There can be no question but that this prophecy applies to the present dispensation of the gospel kingdom of Christ, for so it is explained in the epistle to the Hebrews, viii. 8-12. Instead of this assurance of divine favor authorizing indifference and carelessness in those for whose instruction it is written, the inspired writer declares that because of the very sure provision of grace in our behalf, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."—Heb. ii. 1. Nowhere in the Scriptures is there any intimation that the eternal salvation of sinners is suspended upon conditions to be accomplished by the will of created beings. That salvation is according to the determinate counsel of God, who has declared the end from the beginning. So Paul says, "But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth; whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thess. ii. 13, 14. The everlasting salvation of his people was secured by the victorious work of Jesus when he bore their sins in his own body on the tree of Calvary. Nothing can ever be added to that perfect work of the Redeemer; neither can the piercing scrutiny of infinite justice find any defect in that fulfillment of all righteousness by which the holy law was satisfied in the one offering of Jesus. There is no room for the watchful anxiety of the saints in regard to that salvation. They know that the only hope in which they can find rest is in the complete work of Jesus, in whom alone they stand justified freely by his grace from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses.

While carnal reason sees no occasion for watching on the part of those whose salvation in Christ is thus assured, the saints learn in their daily experience the importance of unceasing vigilance so long as they remain in this bondage of corruption. They are not so much exposed to attacks from outward enemies as from the lusts which war in their own members. Even when safe from all the persecutions of avowed adversaries, the law of sin which still is in their members, brings them into captivity under its cruel oppression, so that they often have to cry to God for deliverance from the power of this strong adversary. Well may they be constantly mindful of the wiles of their ever present enemies! Only by the grace of God are they strengthened to resist their deceitful wiles. When walking humbly in the footsteps of the Captain of their salvation, it is with joy that they can hail the coming of the Son of man in their personal experience. There is no moment when they can afford to forget that they are under law to him who has bought them with his precious blood. Therefore they need to be ever watching lest they be found forgetful of his commandments, and receive his chastening rod at his appearing. It is certainly in this experimental sense only that there is occasion for care that the Lord shall find his servant watching at his coming. Few of the saints have long walked as disciples without personal experience of the coming of the Son of man in visiting their transgressions with his rod. And few have failed to receive the answer of a good conscience toward God when they have been made to rejoice in the coming of their Lord to approve their obedience to his law. In this different experience they have received the reward of rendering themselves servants to righteousness. They do not need to look beyond their present state to find the blessing and the chastening which are provided for the obedient and for the disobedient children of the kingdom of their faithful and gracious Redeemer. Certainly the blessings of the obedient are confined to the subjects of divine favor; and it is "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."—Heb. xii. 6.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

NEW HOPE ASSOCIATION, ARK.

ANCIENT Israel was a type of spiritual Israel in the gospel dispensation. The laws, ordinances and rites of that people were, as the apostle says, "patterns of things in the heavens." Their murmurings, rebelliousness, and the consequent chastisement, "happened unto them for ensamples [margin, types] unto us." Those unto whom it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven would do well to heed the lessons taught by these types. "Whatsoever was written aforetime was written for our learning." God did not drive out all of Israel's enemies. "The Lord hath given commandment concerning Jacob, that his enemies should be round about him." He has use for them, to "prove his people, whether they will walk in the law of the Lord or no."

The Israelites were continually partaking of some of the abominations of the nations around them; and, as indicated by the type, the Lord's people in this day often partake of the religious abominations of the (denomi) nations around them. The Lord sent prophets unto the people, "rising up early, and sending them, saying, Do not this abominable wickedness," and warning them of the terrible desolation that would come upon them in consequence of their corrupt practices. But they would not hear. They even stoned to death the prophets who bore to them the messages of mercy—murdered in cold blood the men who from love to them hazarded their lives in trying to turn them away from doing things that would bring destruction upon them. How severe, and yet how just, was that judgment that made their land an "utter desolation, without an inhabitant." By the rivers of Babylon, their harps hanging upon the willows, the withering, blighting curse of God resting upon them, whichever way they turned, the city of their fathers' sepulchres lying waste, its walls broken down, and its gates burned with fire, they lament and bemoan their folly, and sorely grieve and repent that they refused to obey the prophets whom God in mercy had sent unto them, warning them that this would be the awful consequence of their transgression. "If the words spoken by angels were steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

What fascination these abominations must have had for the children of Israel! How dear to them were those corrupt practices that they should become so enraged against those who would dare speak against them, that they would put them to death! This proves that they dearly loved those abominations, and doubtless considered them the most important part of their religion, and felt as if they were doing God service in torturing to death one who would dare oppose them. But that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination with God. Just as indicated by the type, the Lord's people in this day are continually borrowing from the Babylonish customs of the denominations around them, and they become enraged at whoever dares to protest against them, and are ready to persecute and cast out such a one. If they would only consider that these things are highly esteemed among men, they might know that they are an abomination with God. If we would reflect upon the fact that these things are popular with, and practiced by, all worldly religionists, we might know that the Lord's people could not indulge in them and yet be "diverse from all other people."

One great cause of Israel's disobedience was that there were always so many false prophets to encourage the people in their transgressions, and to withstand the true prophets when they warned the people of the desolation they were bringing upon themselves. And so it is now. "But as there were false prophets among the people, even so there shall be false teachers among you."

Things are continually creeping in among us that are borrowed from other denominations, and highly esteemed among them, that the Bible does not authorize. We denounce Sunday Schools, mission boards, &c., because they are not authorized by the Bible; we contend that the Scriptures furnish the man of God with all the instructions and examples necessary for every good work; and yet we practice shaking hands while singing, and some other things that they do not authorize. It will not do to say that these things are too little and insignificant for the Scriptures to notice; for then they would be too little for the Lord's people to practice. But the shaking of hands while singing is not a harmless, inert something, or mere nothing. It brings down fire from heaven in the sight of men. There is something wonderful and mysterious about it. It makes women shout, and men hug and embrace each other. It either brings down the Spirit of God to warm our hearts, or it manufactures a base counterfeit resemblance of it. In either case it would be incompatible with Primitive Baptist doctrine. It is of heaven, or else it is of men. It is authorized by the Bible, or it is of Babylonish origin. It is a solemn, sacred duty, or it is abominable wickedness. Is it not a fire of our kindling? If not, why does it come only when we shake hands while singing? Cannot all who participate say, "Aha, I have seen the fire, I am warm?" "Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks, walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of my hand, ye shall lie down in sorrow."

Strange that shaking hands while singing should do such wonders; but it is well known that it produces in the participants a feeling of inexpressible happiness. It makes one feel excessively full of love. He is raised to a fever heat with a kind of intoxication; and in obedience to that inexorable law by which all vibrating bodies (fixed ones are not subject to it) pass from one extreme to an opposite extreme, he becomes cold, envious, jealous and hating towards those for whom his heart was so excessively full of love while under the excitement. Hence come wars and fightings among us. In following unauthorized practices, things which are highly esteemed among natural men, and appreciated by the old, natural or fleshly man of the christian, we sow to the flesh, and of the flesh reap corruption. It is feared that this practice is a prolific source of the bickerings and dissensions that now mar and disturb the peace of Zion. Thus by the heat of our own fire which we have kindled we lie down in sorrow.

This is the great motor-wheel, so to speak, of the Arminian revival meeting. This electro-magnetic feeling generated by singing and shaking hands, and less effectually by other means, constitutes the essence of worldly religion. Without it the revival meetings of worldly religionists would soon pass out of existence. When all other means fail in these meetings, this is often resorted to with success. The preacher having failed to raise an excitement by his vivid picture of hell and the torments of the damned, together with the fearful dangers of procrastination, and the whole concern seeming to be about to die from coldness, he now resorts to another device. He proposes that the congregation sing a hymn; "and let all the christians, those who feel that they are on their way to heaven, strike hands." This generally does the work. Some woman raises a shout, almost unconsciously exclaims, Glory! and wildly and frantically claps her hands, showing that she is under the influence of some powerful controlling agent. A peculiar electro-magnetic feeling takes possession of the participants, particularly those most easily affected. Their eyes are suffused with tears, and every one seems filled with love and intense happiness. It is a kind of intoxication, a delightful feeling which men dearly love and crave; and, like every other species of intoxication, has its reaction. Strife, bickerings and ill feelings follow, as certain as languor and depression of spirits do natural intoxication. It is bad enough to be drunken with wine. It is far worse to be drunk with the wine of Babylon.

Some twenty years ago, on Big Mulberry, Franklin County, Ark., one of these electro-magnetic revival meetings assumed gigantic proportions. Large numbers of people were powerfully affected. Quite a number of young men under its mysterious influence attracted considerable attention. They embraced each other with their arms, and a considerable group was thus formed, huddled together, swaying to and fro under the influence of the great intoxicating power. They gently patted and childishly cuddled each other, exclaiming frequently, "O how I love you, brother!" The meeting finally closed, the great blast died away, and one of bitterest neighborhood feuds followed in its track. Strange to tell, but it is true, that group of young men, so prominent under the influence of the mysterious agent at meeting, were likewise the most conspicuous characters in the quarrel. They were now carrying deadly weapons for each other, and the same tongues that had exclaimed so tenderly, "O how I love you!" now swore with terrible vengeance, and threatened to kill the objects of their excessive love while under the influence of man-made religion. The intoxication was produced by the wine of Babylon, and was connected with the hatred that followed. It has long been noticed by close observers that hatred, quarreling, and ill feeling and crime in general, follow in the wake of the great revival. May the Lord deliver us from the intoxication and consequent reaction of this miserable infatuation. The result of shaking hands while singing, among Baptists, is exactly like it.

The arguments used in favor of the practice are deceptive. At the close of the associations, and some other meetings, we must take the "parting hand;" as if there were no other time than during divine service to bid the dear brethren and sisters farewell, as an act of hospitality; and that must be done, too, while singing. It is the peculiar effect that is desired, for generally after the congregation is dismissed they take the "parting hand" again, and, as it should be done, without singing. "O! I can't think it wrong for God's people to shake hands," interpose the advocates of the practice; as if we must do this as a part of the religious ceremonies, and while singing, so as to get up an excitement and a shout, or not at all. As if opposition to an innovation upon the worship of the infinite God, who will not accept an offering made by strange fire, was designed to prohibit or prevent the ordinary acts of hospitality in a friendly salutation or a loving farewell when not engaged in worship.

History gives no account of this practice in the church for eighteen hundred years after Christ. It was introduced among the Baptists in the present century. Hassell says, page 583, in enumerating the inventions of men in matters of religion in the nineteenth century, that among them were "protracted and distracted meetings, * * * anxious seats, mourner's benches, affecting tunes, sobs, sighs, groans, convulsions, human resolutions, hand-shaking," &c. On page 918, he quotes from "The History of the Kotocton Association," by Elder William Fristoe, published in 1808. Speaking of "some few called Baptists," Elder Fristoe says, "These have departed from the simplicity of the gospel, and from the examples of Christ and his apostles and the primitive saints, and have introduced human inventions and contrivances, for the avowed conversion of souls. The preacher, after ending his sermon, comes down from the pulpit, singing a hymn on some tender and affecting subject, with a tune of mournful sound, * * * accompanying the singing with a shaking of hands and exhortation, with great appearance of affection." Here is the origin of this practice. It was not invented by Christ or the apostles, nor sanctioned by the prophets, but by a few disorderly Baptists in Virginia, about the beginning of the present century. No previous mention of it is made in history, and it certainly is not found in the Bible, unless by denunciations of "fires of our own kindling," "offering strange fire unto the Lord," &c. It is strange that Primitive Baptists who oppose human inventions in matters of religion should have ever tolerated it for a moment. If the Scriptures are a perfect rule of faith and practice, let us reject everything that they do not authorize, let it be great or small. Offering unto the Lord by strange fire is sin. Offerings unto him must be made only by fire kindled by himself. To his name be praise forever. Amen.

W. A. BARHAM, Mod.
C. W. ANDERSON, Clerk.

EXPLANATORY.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—You will please find inclosed three dollars to renew my own subscription to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for the year 1894, and you will send it for the next year (as per statement in first column on last page) to Mrs. E. M. Austin, Leguin, Ga., and J. M. Adams, Nunnally, Ga., and very much oblige your brother in love,

You do not say whether we have the privilege of sending more than two names at the rate of one dollar each; by that I suppose you do not intend to extend it.

WM. ADAMS.

COVINGTON, Ga.

REPLY.—Brother Adams is one of the warmest friends and most efficient agents the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has; and if we have not expressed our terms in the notice in the first column on the last page so that they are clear to him, there are doubtless many others who may be in doubt about our meaning. We therefore publish his letter and our answer for the satisfaction of all who may have any doubts in regard to our meaning.

The third paragraph, commencing, "From now until January first, 1894," we meant to read free and independent from all the others. We mean by it that old subscribers have the privilege of sending us as many new subscribers as they choose at one dollar a year, whether they have taken advantage of the terms of the fourth and fifth paragraphs or not.

The first side of the paper, containing the last page, was printed when the above letter was received; but we will try to change the reading of the terms by next number, so that they can be more clearly understood. —ED.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE time is fast drawing near when the question, "What shall I get for a Christmas present?" will be the inquiry. We would suggest that you look over our list of books advertised on last page and see if you cannot find something there that will be appropriate. The cloth-bound books of "Editorials" we will mail from now until Christmas, both volumes, for three dollars. All our other books are quoted as low as we can possibly afford to sell them.

The extra inducements we offer for new subscribers to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES will enable almost any one to order a copy for their friend, which will make a lasting present.

(Continued from page 379.)

without it it is impossible to believe in him or please God.

Brethren Beebe, I have been much edified in reading the many able communications in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. It is a great comfort to the poor, little, tried saints of the Zion of our God to know that our God has servants that he has called into the gospel field, given them a sword, and the ability to wield it to perfection. Of all Israel, there was found one (David) who was able to fight with and kill Goliath, the great champion and enemy of all truth. And David had to go to battle in his own robe, with the ability God had given him, and in the name and strength of Israel's God. He was a faithful witness; and we have long since learned by experience, and the teachings of the holy Scriptures, that God has ever had, and now has, his faithful witnesses, who are clothed with authority and power from on high, and who are not afraid to meet the most exalted champion of all the powers of darkness; and truly they are many, and are all being fed at Jezebel's table, and are getting fat, boasting of their wealth and great numbers. Upon this hypothesis they claim to be the church, the ground and pillar of the truth. By her flattery she has gained her wealth and great numbers. But there is in the midst of them a few poor, despised Nazarenes that will not be gulled by their flattery. These little few will not be satisfied with anything short of the absolute sovereignty of God. They want the plural on the principles of the doctrine of Christ; not doctrines of men and devils. Jezebel (mystery Babylon) has in all ages tried to get these poor and afflicted ones that Christ left in the midst of her to worship her god (Baal), with her prophets, by different methods, such as making laws to punish them in the most cruel manner that could be invented, by the influence of her husband. Seeing she could not accomplish her purpose, she began to multiply very fast, and dressed her children up in their Babylonish garments and made them look as pleasing to the eye as she possibly could. She held them up, and tried to get the bride, the Lamb's wife, to kiss them. But with all their gaudy dressing their deformity is still exposed to the little few who have the light of God's grace shining in their hearts; and because they will not kiss and make much over the little things, they say such people are unkind, are selfish, their doctrine is driving souls to hell, and they ought not to be allowed to live. If they could unite their forces, we that believe in discriminating grace would now have to suffer martyrdom. But God has confounded their language, so there is a confusion of tongues. When the servants of the Most High sound the great trumpet, down comes their whole fabric, as did the walls of Jericho. They began to cry, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Some cry one thing, and some another; so the most part know not what the others want. Dear brethren, it does seem from every appearance that the old lady's cup is almost full, that she has about reached her zenith. All the world has become corrupt, through her fornication. She is reeling to and fro like a drunken man. Whenever that day comes, she has got to fall, and great will be the fall. He that has spoken it is faithful, and doubtless there will be a fulfillment of his grand purposes. The saints are admonished to rejoice at her downfall. But O how sad and lamentable it is to see the corruption (pride) that has gotten into the church. It seems we are in the Laodicean state, neither cold nor hot. It is an absolute fact, according to the reading of the Scriptures and history, that the church of Christ has ever been in a more spiritual condition in times of adversity than in times of prosperity; but while it seems corruption has gotten into her ranks, yet the Lord has a few that follow him whithersoever he goeth, and are holding fast their crown, that no man take it. May God keep all his redeemed by his power, if it is his will. Brethren Beebe, accept the thanks of a poor sinner, whose hope is in the Lord.

H. W. NEWTON.

OPELIKA, Ala., Oct. 26, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have just read the issue of the SIGNS for October 25th, in which is an article from Elder E. Rittenhouse, in which I heartily concur. I think he is right, and wish that some of the brethren, if they have the mind, would write on order, how we should behave ourselves in the house of God; for I understand that Paul has reference to that, with other things that pertain to order. I have seen the same errors that brother Rittenhouse refers to, and they look awkward; but custom seems to be law in some places. The right hand of fellowship is extended to express something, and that something I understand to be church fellowship; an acknowledgment of like faith, walk and practice.

His remarks about traveling preachers, and of opening the door of the church, also looks awkward to me; and the very things we wish to avoid, we thereby plunge into. I can cite an instance where a traveling preacher passed through, and a man offered himself to the church. He wanted this traveling preacher to baptize him, and he did so. At the next meeting he needed to be reprimanded, and finally had to be excluded. The whole affair weakened the church, and it took some time for the church to recover from it, if she has entirely recovered yet. I believe that the man would not have offered himself if I had been present, as he knew I knew him too well. This thirst for numbers has crippled churches. It is much like the spirit of Leah, who, when she had increase for Jacob, thought he would love her for the increase, while the facts in the case proved that he loved Rachel, although she was barren. I also see in this increase business Hagarism, to disgust. I rejoice in a proper increase; but the increase by the effort system is Hagarism. God said, "At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son." It is when God comes that a supernatural son is born, which is the glory of God and of Israel also. I have known people to be worried out of countenance by preachers after them, nearly as bad as the Arminians. When Elijah poured the barrels of water on the altar, and filled the trenches, doubtless some said, What does he mean? But it was to prove God and the true fire. It is good to-day and will hold good always. Better to do that than to blow our own sparks.

Yours in hope,
W. LIVELY.

MARRIAGES.

Nov. 19th, 1893, at the residence of the parties, State Road, New Castle Co., Del., by Elder E. Rittenhouse, Mr. Alanson E. Rittenhouse and Miss Anna B. Frazier.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At his home near Prescott, Walla Walla Co., Wash., Peter Smith Walden, aged 45 years, 6 months and 7 days.

His disease was paralysis of the heart, from which his life ebbed peacefully away at six o'clock in the evening of the fourth day after the first attack. He was baptized about Dec. 25th, 1871, by Elder John Stipp, and received into the fellowship of the Siloam Church, in Marion Co., Oregon. He had been an attendant at that church from its constitution, in his early childhood. As he grew in years and in knowledge his understanding was awakened, and prepared to receive the things of the Spirit. For several years previous to his baptism he was a profound student of the glorious truth of the gospel, so much so that no amount of work as student or teacher could pervert his mind from the daily companionship of the Scriptures. He passed through many severe trials, and was often mourning the dark and lonely seasons; but through it all he came forth as gold from the refiner's fire, and at all times deposed himself as having on the breastplate of righteousness and the whole armor of truth. In the year 1877 he moved his membership to the Mizpah Church, in Umatilla Co., Oregon, with Elder G. E. Mayfield as pastor. He married Mrs. Sarah Potts in February, 1878, since which time their home has been in Walla Walla Co., Wash. His last meeting with the church at Dayton, Wash., was last June, when the Columbia River Association was in session. He seemed to experience great delight in the preaching and society of the brethren, his joy being remarked by those present, as a cup overflowing with fullness. He leaves a wife, six children, a mother, three sisters and two brothers.

"How blest the righteous when he dies,
When sinks a weary soul to rest;
How mildly beam the closing eyes,
How gently heaves the expiring breast.

"So fades a summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er,
So gently shuts the eye of day,
So dies a wave along the shore.

"Farewell, conflicting hopes and fears,
Where lights and shades alternate dwell;
How bright the unchanging morn appears!

Farewell, inconstant world, farewell."

MARTHA J. LEE.

HARTLAND, Wash.

Mrs. Louisa Benson was born Sept. 18th, 1811, and died Sept. 6th, 1893, aged nearly 82 years.

Her maiden name was Gill. Her father many years ago was a member of the church at Black Rock. Her husband, Mr. John Benson, died in 1862, leaving her with a large family of children to care for, which she did carefully and well, and lived to see them all settled in life and doing well. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Benson, in Woodbury, after a very brief illness. She had been in failing health for two or more years, but of late had seemed much better, and was able to go from her son-in-law's, Mr. John Bond, near Black Rock, to her daughter's but a few days before she died.

In September, 1880, she came to the church at Black Rock and related a hope in Christ of many years, and was gladly received and baptized. She has been a faithful member. Her seat in the house of God was never vacant when she could avoid it. She was also thoughtful concerning the pecuniary burdens of the church, and did not neglect her duty up to the full extent of her ability. She was a good listener, and enjoyed the preaching of the word much. My conversations with her were often pleasant and profitable to me. We shall deeply miss her from our meetings, and her children will miss a kind and thoughtful mother.

I was absent in Maine at the time of her death, so that Elder Grafton was sent for, and came and spoke greatly to the comfort of the friends at her funeral, as I was informed by several of the friends. May the God of all grace be near, and comfort all who mourn, is my prayer.

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 22, 1893.

AGAIN the hand of the Lord has fallen heavily upon our household. Our dear mother, Harriet F. Bickers, died at her home in Lexington, Ky., Oct. 12th, in the 65th year of her age.

She was born in Anderson Co., Ky., received a hope, was baptized in early life, and has since been a faithful follower of him who is meek and lowly in heart. It was often her privilege to sit, as did Mary of old, undisturbed at the feet of Jesus, in the full enjoyment of that good part which cannot be taken away.

Mother was sick only five days. Her trouble was pneumonia and an affection of the heart. She felt that it was her last sickness, and talked calmly of her death, saying she was ready to go if it were the Lord's will. As the evening shades of her last day on earth gathered she fell into a sweet sleep, resting for almost an hour. When she awoke her face was radiant with joy indescribable, and she began talking of Jesus and his love, quoting many of the precious promises, and speaking words of comfort to our breaking hearts. A great change had passed over her, and we knew that the end was near.

"O dearest one, we saw thy white soul shining
Behind the face,
Bright with the beauty and celestial glory
Of an immortal grace."

She told us we must not grieve, for it was the hand of God, and he doeth all things well; that she had no fear of death, and that we would meet again where partings are no more. To her two daughters who did not get here she sent messages of love, and also desired to be remembered to their little ones. When she had finished talking she said she must go to sleep; and from a natural slumber she gently passed at half-past twelve o'clock into that blessed sleep in Jesus. Among her last words were, "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." O may we, her desolate, sorely tried children, also lay aside every weight, and through our blinding tears look trustingly to Jesus in this the day of our great trial. Our father, mother and brother have been taken in three years. None but those who have been so sadly bereaved can know the desolation that has been wrought in our hearts. But God is a refuge for us; his promises are sure. "My grace is sufficient for thee."

"Life is a count of losses
Every year;
For the weak are heavier crosses
Every year.
Lost springs with sobs replying
Unto weary autumn's sighing,
While those we love are dying,
Every year.

"But the truer life draws nigher
Every year,
And its morning-star climbs higher
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter,
Every year."

CORA BICKERS.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 19, 1893.

Nelson Kelley died at his residence in Columbia township, Jackson Co., Mich., Sept. 11th, 1892, of a long and complicated illness involving heart trouble.

He was born in Delaware Co., N. Y., and came to Michigan in early life, where he married Margaret Brooks, and settled in the home where he died, being one of the pioneers of Jackson County. Commencing life with nothing but health and the good gift of economy and industry, they soon made for themselves a good home, and accumulated an abundance of this world's goods, which they left to be enjoyed by their two remaining children, Merchant Kelley and Mrs. Eva Flint. He was nearly seventy years old at the time of his death. He was not a professor of religion, but often attended our meetings, and in his long illness would express a desire to depart from his tried and suffering life. Toward the last he would repeat some of our sweet old hymns, one a parting hymn, and another commencing,

"Salvation! O the joyful sound!
'Tis pleasure to our ears;
A sovereign balm for every wound,
A cordial for our fears."

When asked if he felt it to be a cordial for his fears, he acknowledged that he did. He lived a quiet and peaceable life, and died a peaceful death. His funeral was preached by Elder W. L. Lines.

ALSO,

Margaret Kelley, wife of Nelson Kelley, died at her home on the morning of Aug. 11th, 1893.

She had been afflicted many years, and had a most distressing cough and nervous trouble; but on the morning of her death she had partaken of breakfast, and seemed to shake while eating. In a short time her granddaughter heard her fall to the floor, and when she could summon assistance she was dead.

She professed a hope in early life, united with the Baptists before the division, and always remained in sentiment with the old order. She was born in Delaware Co., N. Y., came to Michigan in her young life, and married as before stated. She was one who looked well to the ways of her household, and was untiring in the duties thereof. She was seldom abroad; and her choice way of spending her leisure hours was in reading her Bible and hymn book, which she had well learned, and he beloved paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I lived by them one year, and enjoyed their company very much. She was firm in her belief in the doctrine set forth in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and seemed much attached to our pastor, Elder Lines, and attended our meetings as regularly as health would allow. In all her many different moods and frames of mind she said that whenever she picked up her hymn book she found some hymn that just suited her feelings. One of her favorites commences, "Begone, unbelief; my Savior is near." Their two children being married and settled, leaving them alone, they took their first grandchild, Maggie Flint, to live with them almost from her birth, just to have her to care for and to love. She leaves a brother and two sisters, besides her children and grandchildren.

Her funeral was preached by Elder Thomas J. Wyman, for whom she entertained a high regard.

ALSO,

Mrs. Matilda Kelley was born in eastern New York, came to Michigan in early life, and died at her home in Columbia township, Sept. 1st, 1893.

She was the daughter of John and Mary Every, and was married in her young life to Wm. Kelley. She was nearly seventy years old at the time of her death. She was the mother of four children, one lovely daughter preceding her to the grave many years ago, for whom she greatly mourned. The other three (one girl and two boys) survive her. She acknowledged a hope, and often related her experience, yet never gained confidence to be baptized, but always attended our meetings, often walking two miles, and saying it was a pleasure to do so. She much enjoyed the preaching and company of the Old Baptists. She possessed the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. Her sickness was long, and at last she died peacefully, saying she was not afraid to die, and was ready to depart, giving some directions about her funeral. She was a widow many years, and lived alone, trusting in God. She was tenderly cared for during her illness by her daughter, Hattie Choat, and her two sons, Edgar and John T. Kelley, who live to remember her. Her funeral was preached by Elder Thomas Swartout. She was one of the "poor and afflicted people," and consequently one of my friends.

ALSO,

Emma Swartout Smith, eldest daughter of brother Zetus and sister Harriet Swartout.

She was afflicted from childhood, but was of an ambitious nature, and followed the vocation of teacher some years, finally marrying Birchard Smith, nearly two years ago, and moved to the city of Lansing, where she resided until June of the present year, when she came home to attend our association, visit her parents and friends once more, and to die. She was born in Columbia township, Michigan, and was nearly twenty-nine years old. Before she died she said she had a presentiment of something about to take place, and, as her mother was an invalid, she feared she was going to die; and now she said, "To think it is I!"

Her disease was of the chest, and she just panted her life away. Being afflicted, she was one of my friends, and always looked up into my face with such a pleasant and trusting look. In her dying hour she would look upward with such an earnest look, and say, "O blessed Jesus!" manifesting that her trust was there, and there only.

"Look upward in a dying hour,
And live, the prophet cries;
But Christ performs a nobler cure
When faith lifts up her eyes."

According to her request, her funeral was preached by Elder W. L. Lines, of La Fontaine, Ind., himself choosing this subject, "The maid is not dead, but sleepeth."

These, we trust, all died in faith.

"Swiftly thus our fleeting days
Bear us down life's rapid stream!
Upward, Lord, our spirits raise;
All below is but a dream."

KATE SWARTOUT.

WOODSTOCK, Mich.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

SPECIAL OFFER.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c., costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford, as follows:

From now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us an additional dollar for two new names.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1893.

NO. 49.

POETRY.

PSALM XCIX. 2.

THE Lord is great in Zion!
My soul, repeat the lays;
Join saints in high communion,
Swell everlasting praise.

The Lord is great in Zion!
Transcendent is the theme!
Before him bows creation,
All heaven adores his name.

The Lord is great in Zion!
Bless'd Spirit, make him known—
The Rock of my salvation,
The Lamb upon his throne.

The Lord is great in Zion!
I hope on this to dwell,
And shout, in open vision,
"He hath done all things well!"

THE BORDER LANDS.

To "Aunt Lydia" Mullock.

FATHER, into thy loving hands
My feeble spirit I commit,
While wandering in these border lands,
Until thy voice shall summon it.

Father, I would not dare to choose
A longer life, an earlier death;
I know not what my soul might lose
By shortened or protracted breath.

These border lands are calm and still,
And solemn are their silent shades;
And my heart welcomes them until
The light of life's long evening fades.

I heard them spoken of with dread,
As fearful and unquiet places;
Shades where the living and the dead
Look sadly in each other's faces.

But since thy hand hath led me here,
And I have seen the border land;
Seen the dark river flowing near,
Stood on its brink, as now I stand;

There has been nothing to alarm
My trembling soul. How could I fear
While thus encircled with thine arm?
I never felt thee half so near.

What should appall me in a place
That brings me hourly nearer thee?
When I may almost see thy face,
Surely 'tis here my soul would be.

They say the waves are dark and deep,
That faith has perished in the river!
They speak of death with fear, and weep.
Shall my soul perish? Never! never!

I know that thou wilt never leave
The soul that trembles while it clings
To thee; I know thou wilt achieve
Its passage on thine outspread wings.

And since I first was brought so near
The stream that flows to the Dead Sea,
I think that it has grown more clear
And shallow than it used to be.

I cannot see the golden gate
Unfolding yet to welcome me;
I cannot yet anticipate
The joy of heaven's jubilee.

But I will calmly watch and pray,
Until I hear my Savior's voice
Calling my happy soul away
To see his glory and rejoice.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1893.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WORLDLY AMUSEMENTS.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Several times of late, and also in former years, I have been asked questions by different ones with regard to the above-named subject. Of late the matter has been brought to my mind again, and I feel like trying to suggest some reflections which have occurred to me with regard to it.

The Bible differs from nearly all other books embracing religious systems, in that it does not lay down minute rules to govern the followers of Christ. It is true also that the gospel differs from the legal covenant in the same way. The Jew was bound by a multitude of set rules, which controlled (or sought to do so) the commonest actions of everyday life; but under the gospel dispensation we have life and spirit instead of form. The law put a wall around men; but the gospel puts love within men, and makes love the obedience which we owe to God, and the duty which we owe our neighbor.

So we find in the Scriptures of the New Testament no hard and fast verbal rules laid down with regard to the theme named above, but rather certain general principles and statements, which, however, seem to me to fully cover the ground. I will, first of all, refer to some of them. "Only let your conversation [manner of life] be as becometh the gospel of Christ."—Phil. i. 27. "That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing."—Col. i. 10. "I beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called."—Eph. iv. 1. "For our conversation is in heaven."—Phil. iii. 20. "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation."—1 Peter i. 15. Soberness also is enjoined in 1 Thess. v. 6, in Titus ii. 2, 4, and in 1 Peter iv. 7. Soberness in these places means not merely abstaining from what is commonly called drunkenness, but a sober life in conduct, in speech, and in all that pertains to our life on earth. In Colossians iii. we are exhorted, if we be risen with Christ, to seek those things which are above, and not on the earth, and to set our affections upon them. We are told (Col. iii. 5) to mortify our members which are on the earth; and in Ephesians we are told to put off the old man, and to put on the new man, &c. Repeatedly we are exhorted not to live after the flesh. We are told (1 Cor. vi. 19, 20) that our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and that we must not make them the members of an harlot; and in Colossians iii. 17 it is said, "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." These stand among hundreds of similar admonitions; and they certainly show that the calling of a believer is a very high and holy one, and that the whole manner of life in all things should be conformed to it. There is not an act, thought or word but what ought to be subjected to this test, viz., Is it for the glory of God, and does it tend to our growth in grace and knowledge? It seems to me that this subject of worldly amusements must be brought to the test of the general principles embodied in the above-quoted Scriptures, and in many others that might be quoted.

All the exhortations and commandments of the New Testament are summed up in the one word, "love." Love is the fulfilling of the law of God, and love worketh no ill to his neighbor. Love in the heart will lead us to ask at all times and concerning every step of the way, Will this or that be to the glory of God, or to his people's good? When I have been asked if certain worldly amusements were right and lawful for a christian to engage in, instead of giving a direct answer of yes or no I have generally felt to refer to these general principles, and to say, Will it be for the glory of God, or do you feel that you can ask God to bless you in it? Or sometimes I have said, Do you feel as though it will add to the joy of your spiritual life? For the Scriptures say, "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

There are many things pertaining to the affairs of this natural life that are right in themselves. Our God has ordained labor, social friendships and relationships, and the gladness and joy belonging to these things are right. In these things we may serve Christ, as well as in preaching, praying and singing psalms. Our Lord himself in the days of his flesh acknowledged all human relationships that were ordained of God, and the obligations that grow out of them. He was not separate from the people in their joys any more than in their sorrows. He was present at weddings and social assemblies with the rest; but still even those highest and best human relationships and associations he held in entire subordination to the interests of his kingdom. He said, "Whosoever loveth father and mother more than me is not worthy of me." But there were places where Jesus was not found. There were things approved by men in which it is not recorded that he had any part. He who is our life is also our exemplar, our pattern in all things. Where Jesus went we may go; from places which knew him not we also should be absent.

There are some things which go to make up the amusements of certain classes of men concerning which it is hardly possible for a believer to be perplexed for a moment as to the right or wrong of them. They are things from which the more careful and moral among unregenerate men start back with abhorrence; and christians who have the mind of Christ must certainly know at a glance that such things as I shall name are an abomination in the sight of God. Such things as games of chance, embracing all forms of gambling, from a raffle or grab bag at a church fair to playing dice or cards for thousands of money, or such gambling as is carried on under the forms of law, at Boards of Trade, or betting upon any occasion whatever, whether for a penny or thousands of pounds, or horse-racing, or lotteries, or drinking at the public bar with besotted men; these all are openly vicious in their effects, and therefore sinful in their nature. Surely if a child of God enters into any of these things he does so with his eyes open, and has no cloak for his sin. Concerning this class of amusements, no child of God would ever think of asking, Are they right or wrong? One of the best proofs of their sinful nature is that if any believer should be entrapped by any of these things he would be ashamed for the church of God to know it. Of these things it is not needful that I should speak at any length, because all will see at a glance how they who do such things harm their own souls, and wound the Savior, and cause his religion to be reproached; and yet concerning even these open sins, how constantly must we be kept by the grace of God, else we shall wander into them.

It was not concerning the things just named that the questions of which I spoke at first were proposed to me. To make the matter plain and simple (and I desire always to be plain), I will say that these questions have been asked of me, "Is it wrong for a christian to attend now and then the theatre or opera, to dance under certain circumstances, to take part in social games or sports, such as lawn tennis, croquet, or playing cards where money is not at stake?" Now it seems to me that these things can only be decided by bringing them to the test of such Scriptures as these which follow, "Do all in the name of the Lord Jesus," "Do all to the glory of God," and others like the texts to which I have referred in the former part of this letter. Let us ask of ourselves questions like these, Can we expect to meet the Lord Jesus at such places? Can we do such things to the honor and glory of God? Will they conduce to our growth in grace, and will they add to our spiritual comfort, and help us on in the narrow way? Can we conceive of Jesus or his apostles as engaging in such things or frequenting such places? One thing is sure, I think, viz., we should all prefer not to hear of our brethren being in such places or doing such things. I am sure also that not one of us, in our first love, believed it possible that we ever could find pleasure in such things. We did not any of us then have to ask whether it were lawful or right for us to be engaged in such things. Our soul's rich experience of the love of God was joy enough. We could not even conceive that worldly pleasures could be a joy to us; and it is only when this first joy has become dim that we can even think that the foolish amusements of earth could possibly be desirable. Who that was filled with the joy of God's presence ever wanted to attend theatres, operas, dancing parties, or to play tennis, croquet or cards? How dim the fine gold has become when these things become our delight!

But I have been asked the question in this form: Granting all this last paragraph to be true (and no doubt they say it is true), granting that we have become dull and cold and carnal, have we yet sinned against God in indulging in these things? I have felt at times to answer in this way: Have you in these things glorified God? Have you done in these things that which will edify believers? Will your doing these things have a tendency to encourage and strengthen the weak and timid and tender ones of your Father's house? Have you helped by doing these things to unite yourself to your brethren and your brethren to you by closer ties? Have you found these things to be to the spiritual advantage of your own soul? Have you by these things shown that you are not of the world, even as Jesus is not of the world? Does the world itself respect your profession as much as it did before?

If it be asked still farther, Are these amusements sinful? is it not within bounds of truth to answer thus? If they wound Jesus Christ they are sinful. If they offend the little ones they are sinful. If they cause the world to say, "There is no difference between church members and us," they are sinful. If they injure our own spiritual growth and comfort they are sinful. If we cannot carry a heartfelt sense of the presence of Jesus Christ with us into them they must be, they are sinful. If we can engage in theatre-going, dancing, card-playing, tennis, &c., and in them glorify God, edify believers, and strengthen and encourage the weak of the flock, and unite ourselves more closely to the children of God, and them more closely to us, and profit our own souls, and show that we are separate from the world, and make all men respect our profession of godliness more; if, I say, we can engage in these things, and produce these good and holy and God-honoring results, then may we safely do them ourselves, and encourage all others who love the Lord to do the same. But if the reverse be true, then is it a sin and a shame to engage in them; and we shall assuredly appear before the judgment-seat of Christ to answer for our transgressions, and shall receive the rod.

I believe that all the children of God have a heart to do right, to serve and glorify God, and to help one another; and I am sure that none who love God will be offended when such things are presented. Neither have I written here for the sake of any particular brother or sister, for we all need to be reminded of the right way again and again, lest we err. I am sure that no child of God ever felt that he could go straight from the theatre, the dance-hall, the card-table or the croquet-ground with a fitting frame of mind to the Lord's table, or to the waters of baptism, or to the house of prayer, or to the hearing of the word of God when preached by spiritual men.

Are not these all good reasons for letting such things alone? Social converse is not a hindrance to these things, neither is engaging in any honest avocation, nor sharing in any of the joys that belong to the natural relationships which are ordained of God; but, brethren, must we not all bear testimony that what are called worldly amusements do prove stumbling-blocks and hindrances in our way? If they are hindrances, are they not wrong, and do we not sin against God and against our own souls when we engage in them? I do not believe in saints of God going about with a long face, and an appearance before men of fasting. If any man has a right to rejoice and wear a shining countenance it is the believer in Jesus. There is no more religion in a sigh than in a smile; but the joy of a child of God is in his Father and elder Brother, and in the fellowship of saints, and not in worldly vanities and amusements. The religion of Christ has joys more exalted than the vain pleasures of earth; and who that has once tasted them could willingly exchange them for any carnal joys!

In these things I write from personal experience. I have learned for myself in former years that to engage in worldly amusements was death to my spiritual comfort and joy. I could not engage in such things without feeling that I had unfitted myself for spiritual meditation and conversation. If I know anything at all about what an experience of the joy of a present salvation means, I certainly lost that joy when I engaged in worldly amusements. I felt that I certainly was not redeeming the time, but wasting it. I could not enter into spiritual conversation with my brethren after such indulgences. I could not feel that any inquiring soul who saw me thus doing light and trifling things would be encouraged to come and converse with me; and I always felt that every one who saw me had reason to doubt the sincerity and reality of the profession which I had made. I hope I shall not be understood as desiring to set myself up as a pattern for others; but this has been my experience.

I want also to say that I should not have written these reflections had not some of the Lord's children, as I believe they are, asked me such questions as I have named, and I felt like answering them in this way. The way is very narrow, and it becomes us to walk softly in it. We surely cannot be too careful in all our journey while on the earth. May the spirit of liberty in Christ make us free from all the bondage of the world; for we have been called unto liberty, only we must not use liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

I remain your brother in the hope of pleasures everlasting through Jesus Christ,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 23, 1893.

BRANTFORD, Ont.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—There is nothing, perhaps, spiritually, more trying to our perplexed human minds than when we are in a strait betwixt two conflicting points, such as whether to speak or not to speak, whether to write or not to write. Probably this is all of the flesh. I know not. But if ever doubts and fears have made me realize their true existence and power over me as a personal and, I believe, in some way responsible unit in God's creation, it has been under such questionings, Ought I, or ought I not? Will it be for the glory of God, for a testimony to be set aside, or for the comforting and strengthening of some of his children? If I am led by his Spirit I know full well it will find an echo in the vibrating chords of every heart which the Spirit has just then attuned to throb with his glory. Yet if of the flesh it will find an echo too, even the deceitful counter tenor of the false angel of light. And so greatly at times does this puzzle and try me that I am all but persuaded there is nothing better than to spin and sew, to eat and drink, and leave off meddling with matters too high for me. If I only could! I wonder if any other has traveled this uncertain realm before. When you passed through Brantford you kindly intimated at parting that you would be glad to hear from me. But this is my trouble, I have had a subject on my mind for a long time, which has already been treated of in the SIGNS. Before it appeared there my convictions were deeply rooted out; and although I have examined testimony for and against, they hold fast; yet I know from what I have read in your paper that the balance of belief is against me. Now, I have no desire to make a martyr of myself in print, and the only question that weighs a feather with me is, Does this weakness amount to spiritual dishonesty on my part? I have no fear of upsetting any old christian, but I have a fear that in withholding somewhat I should seem more sound, according to Old Baptist views, than I really am. Their friendship I long to retain, yet not on the peace at any price policy; so I felt that if I ever wrote again I must discharge my conscience on the parable of the leaven. If therefore this finds a place in your columns, on me be the error, if such, and farther light be sent.

The first place in which this parable is found is in that famous list of veiled truths which our Lord lifted from his casket of pearls, above the heads of a mixed yet separated audience. It is found in Matt. xiii. 33, following the mustard seed parable. On this occasion, Matthew tells us, Jesus went into a ship, because of the multitudes gathered to him; thus leaving them on the shore, although in hearing distance. The narrative does not clearly state whether the disciples went into this boat with him, were there before him, or came separately to him from among the people. But the substantive truth is plain from the questions put and the answers partially unfolded by their teacher, that the meat of these sayings was for the healing of those whose eyes had been or should be anointed with spiritual discernment. The repetition of this same parable is found in Luke xiii. 21, under different circumstances. Luke in opening his gospel declares that having had perfect understanding of these things from the first, as many had undertaken to write of them, he also, in order or turn, desired to confirm their word, and, we may infer, perhaps more precisely arrange some parts. In Matthew therefore we appear to have the utterance of this truth in its nut or unshelled form; but in Luke it is applied as a comment on the faultfinding of his adversaries when he loosed the woman who had been bound with a spirit of infirmity eighteen years. Here it is so plainly linked with the mustard seed again as to force the conviction that these two must have a deep relative connection. Please read the surrounding verses for yourselves. I will here say that I think these parabolic teachings have both a backward and forward looking aspect. It will not do to confine them literally to any one period of time, as their substance runs through all. Thus I have heard many conflicting statements as to what is the kingdom of God. To me his kingdom is one, running through all ages, having both an outward and inward development in each. These developments alter their aspects, but the spirit of them is the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

Now a passing word on the mustard seed, key-note to the leaven parable. This mustard seed I take to be the Lord Jesus Christ himself, or God among men in human form. The scribes and Pharisees looking only through the eyes of natural understanding could see no traces of the Messiah or Deliverer, for whom they looked, in the carpenter's son; and his distinct condemnation of their multiplied additions to Moses embittered them. The form of words used, a man took this seed and cast it into the garden (Jewish then), embodies the sacred truth that Jesus came not by constraint, but willingly; the figure of the mustard seed showing that he had an inferior nature and will, even as others; for he took not on him the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham, and was in all points tempted even as we are, yet without sin. The great mystery of all Scriptural teaching is that it presents us God in a twofold form, or as the Spirit indites it, God manifest in the flesh, power and weakness. This twofold form creates a field of hidden beauties, in which the gospel traveler loves to meditate at eventide; for there he hears the sweetest songs of the birds of paradise, culls some of the loveliest flowers of grace, and pricks his hand with those hard sayings from which flesh shrinks, and yet faith will reach after.

Now concerning types I will say humbly that I do not think they alter their essential teaching in Scripture, although they may appear at first glance to do so; hence to recognize that meaning is to be guided in the path of understanding. It was in the veil of flesh that the Son came to sow the truth concerning himself, first in the Jewish fold, and afterwards through the lips of his disciples, sons of God likewise, in the wide field of the world.—Mark xvi. 15. The unfold of these truths being, in all ages, the Spirit of truth, the Comforter of the orphaned family of grace. In this case we find Jesus using these two parables as a commentary on the existing state of the church under the law, and as anticipatory warnings of evil that would reappear, associated with his own gospel branches. Was the sacred Temple of David now a spring shut up or a fountain sealed? No. It had spread the shadow of its branches so wide that the fowls of the air could lodge therein; and shortly should appear that amazing sight or a Roman governor and Jewish king (Luke xxiii. 12) making friends over the crucifixion of the true Prince of David's house. And so should it yet be; for whenever a gospel church stretches forth its hands to the world with the longing cry of more! more! barrenness, desolation and spiritual death result. The indignation of the ruler of the synagogue concerning the outward breaking of the Sabbath, and his utter heartlessness for the poor daughter of Abraham, is a pithy showing up of the spirit of form against the spirit of faith in all time. So the natural branches grow apace, but the kernel is ever perfect in number and in mind, being one body in Christ.

Just here a note of explanation. Jesus in quoting his own parables is not teaching that the mustard seed and its growth is only the development of the true Godhead in him; neither when he speaks of the leaven and its spread does he portray the pure rule of grace in the heart. What he does speak of is the outward resemblance and bewildering form under and by which the heavenly seed is both hidden and yet sustained, and this of necessity while here below. The earthen vessel which has a sinful nature has been prepared for the nursing of the heavenly babe. Its opposition to that heavenly stranger continues through all time, yet in some mysterious way which we know not yet that opposition shall go into death, the corruptible vessel put on incorruption, and the personality of the redeemed soul in its rising be kept entire. It is because of this twofold representation of the sons of God that all their work is imperfect, and the clouds and vapors of sin arise. Only the Son himself had full control over all circumstances and all temptations. Alas! how often are we made to feel it; for this is literally Esau's mountain and Jacob's wilderness. Therefore the true wheat is only as a handful of corn on the top of the mountains; nevertheless it shall bear rule over the wild boughs on which it waves. So the church on earth and the true christian on earth is the oddest of all rational creatures to read. By the powerful insight given him into the corruptions of his own heart he often feels the very grounds of his hope sinking beneath his feet; and in view of Esau with his four hundred men hastening to slay him, he wrestles in agony of spirit with the only man whose help is worth praying for. Then, as the morning of deliverance dawns, he cries aloud, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me," and quietly sets his peace-offering before the coming thunderbolts of wrath; for these have been presented to him by the wounded hand of the avenger of blood himself; yet to the world and Laban this princely Jacob has often proved himself a wily and treacherous man. May our heavenly Law-giver keep us all from the very appearance of evil, though it be the laming of all our earthly strength.

Now then, this outward, puzzling and corruptible resemblance of the body of Christ's flesh is the photograph which these parables set before us, and that in their true order of manifestation; the head or man first, sowing his seeds of truth, as a type of the Spirit of truth; the woman or church second, as a type of sinful flesh, introducing the leaven of corruption; and as this man at least never yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it unto eternal life, so in the bruised meal of the second parable we find the heavenly Redeemer made sin by the hand of the woman to whom he had sworn his love, as she introduces for his life-blood the fruit of the vine of the earth.

I will next point out our Lord's own way of using leaven as a type. In Matt. xvi. 6, he says to his disciples, "Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees;" the meaning of which warning causing much debate among them, he thus unfolds in verse eleven, "How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees? Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and Sadducees." There is little if any difference of opinion as to what is shadowed forth by the miracle of the multiplication of the natural bread; that is, that he who thus fed literally the hungry thousands then following him, would ever be present in the power of his Spirit to unfold the seeds of gospel truth to his own hungry Israel, and thus convert them into the heavenly manna of their souls, that they might no longer cry, "What is it?" but know of a surety that this same Jesus was the bread of life broken for them. How fitting then is the warning which follows, that these apostles who were to become distributors of bread to all nations should be careful lest in passing through their lips the simplicity of the truth should be permeated by the natural wisdom of man, and the desire for proselyting lead them to study smooth things, as did these legal teachers of their own nation. Now pass on to Luke xii. 1, and read again, "In the mean time when they were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." This solemn injunction of the tried Master is thrown out to his little band of disciples in the very heat of a fierce assault of the Pharisees upon his teachings, yet carried on in so wily a manner as to appear as if they would learn something from him; and knowing that they likewise should yet go through similar fiery trials for his truth's sake, Jesus reminds them that a higher tribunal is ever sitting and judging the very motives of professed worshipers; teaching them by his own example not to fear them who could only kill the body of flesh, lest by that fear they should be led into a feigned service, and thus be plunged into the hell or grave of separation from the light of his countenance and power of his Spirit, but rather patiently confess him before men, knowing that the scoffs and cruelties of their fellows should be followed by the peace of God which passeth understanding, and the radiant recognition of the angelic brotherhood of Jesus.

From this explanation of the typical meaning of leaven the Savior's earnest teachings and expositions to his disciples continue until we reach the parable in the thirteenth chapter and twentieth verse; and there is not, to my view, the slightest intimation from his lips that he was now using it in an exactly reverse sense to what he had done before. This I consider eminently worthy of notice in the case of the great Teacher himself.

The next notable passage, 1 Cor. v. 6-8, concluding with Paul's serious appeal to the erring Corinthians, is on a line with the "beware" of Christ. "Therefore let us keep the feast; not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." Mark, he does not say, but with the leaven of God's grace, as he might fittingly have done if the type was alterative in its teaching. At the risk of seeming to push the point, I will also quote from the "Douay Version," which I highly prize as a whole, when comparing obscure passages. "Your glorying is not good. Know you not that a little leaven corrupteth the whole lump? Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new paste, as you are unleavened." Mark, the figure of paste bread or lump corresponds with the meal which the woman took to hide the leaven in. Passing to Gal. v. 9, we find the same expression, "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump," used as a comment on what would be the effect of the adding of circumcision to the doctrine of christian liberty, from the Mosaic law. The apostle assures them that though it might appear an added grace, it would eventually form a yoke of bondage, and finally result in their entanglement afresh. The passages cover the New Testament use of the term leaven, so far as I know.

It may be well, before more critically reviewing this very interesting parable, to go back to the Old Testament, in prayerful hope of some light on those passages which seem to bear a contradictory evidence. It seems almost needless for me to remind Old School Baptists at least that holy writ abounds with passages whose separated wording appears to confute other statements; and those doubtless are the trial

(Continued on page 389.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 6, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FOLLOW PEACE.

"FOLLOW peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."—Heb. xii. 14.

One of the exclusive names by which inspired wisdom characterizes the Lord of life is expressive of the wonderful fact that his kingdom is not built upon the ruins of nations despoiled in war, whose vanquished armies have been slain with the sword, and whose treasures have been wrested from their unwilling grasp by superior strength. The glorious King of saints is emphatically "The Prince of Peace." While it is indeed true that he is "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords," it is not by methods which prevail among sinful men that this dominion is established. The princes of this world hold their thrones only by the military power of their subjects; and when they are desirous of extending their empires they must resort to the use of weapons of destruction by which to overcome their adversaries. All the nations of earth are thus built up in the blood of their subjugated victims. This is the history of the world from the earliest records. But the kingdom of Jesus is neither of this world, nor after the order of those kingdoms which are thus established by might and power of the men of this sin-cursed earth. There is no other source from which real peace can come to the living children of divine grace but as it flows from their heavenly King; and he has given to them the sacred rest of that perfect peace which can never be disturbed by all the assaults of their cruel adversaries. When speaking comfort to them just before he was crucified, he said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—John xiv. 27. Throughout the volume of that Scripture which is given by inspiration of God the perfection and beauty of peace is presented; and the saints are assured that they have the gift of the peace of God as their portion while sojourning in this enemies' land. Yet to the sight of finite reason they appear to be an afflicted and poor people, troubled on every side, and of all men they seem to have the least claim to the enjoyment of peace. Not even to their own natural mind can they show the infinite peace which is their support in all their tribulations. It is often the case that they are so troubled that they cannot find rest in any refuge to which they may resort. The psalmist says, "Great peace have they which love thy law; and nothing shall offend them." In the margin the original is translated, "They shall have no stumbling-block." This explains the sense in which nothing shall offend them.—Psalm cxix. 165. While they find no stumbling-block in the doctrine and commandments of Jesus, they are called to encounter constant opposition in their own carnal mind and in that evil heart of unbelief which cannot receive the testimony of the Spirit through faith. Thus in their practical experience they learn the truth as declared by our Lord, that the gift of his peace to them is "not as the world giveth."

The peace of God passeth all understanding, and even while it abounds in keeping the hearts and minds of the saints through Christ Jesus, to the blinded and bewildered eyes of reason it appears that they are ready to perish in their manifold troubles and conflicts. The very same saint who is so troubled that he cannot speak, calls to remembrance his song in the night, and in the assurance of living faith he finds the victory of peace in the remembrance of the works of the Lord and his wonders of old.—Psalm lxxvii. There is no rest for the conscious sinner in remembering his own works. As often as he recalls them his heart is troubled with the conscious pollution of his most devoted efforts to render satisfaction to the holy law, by which the exceeding sinfulness of his heart is exposed, and in which he sees the justice of his condemnation. That remembrance but aggravates the distress of the troubled one. But when in the light of divine revelation the Spirit of truth takes of the things of Jesus, and shows the tried one the wonderful works of the Lord, in that remembrance he receives peace as a river of everlasting consolation. Since this peace is not of this world nothing temporal can disturb its sacred fullness of comfort and rest. It was given to the worthies of old who were persecuted, "being destitute, afflicted, tormented," even when they wandered about with no refuge but in dens and caves of the earth.—Heb. xi. 32-40. It is now ministered to the subjects of electing love only when they are called to endure afflictions by which they are forbidden to claim the victory as the result of their own merits or prudence. So Paul and Silas taught the saints, "confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."—Acts xiv. 22. "Let not then your good be evil spoken of; for the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things where-with one may edify another."—Rom. xiv. 16-19. In this experimental sense there is no such thing as entering into the kingdom of God without enduring the "much tribulation" which is the only way of entrance. Natural or earthly peace must be found in avoiding such tribulation, hence there can be no mistaking the rest of carnal indifference for that perfect peace which is to the subjects of grace the present enjoyment of the kingdom of God. This distinction must not be forgotten if the saint would avoid the perplexity resulting from failure to rightly divide the word of truth.

As enjoined in our text, the peace which must be followed, is that same heavenly principle which is defined in the inspired Scriptures above quoted. It is inseparable from that holiness which is included in the admonition under consideration. No peace can be genuine unless it bears this peculiar mark. The adversary is ever ready to propose terms of peace based upon the sacrifice of this divine seal. He even dared assail the Captain of our salvation with such a temptation. He has never been able to suggest any temptation to one of the followers of Jesus but that it was included in the charge which Jesus repelled when he "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." When the rebellion of carnal pride would lead the disciple to deny his allegiance to his Lord, and prompts him to follow the dictates of his own mind, reason offers the suggestion that he is under no obligation to obey the commandments of Jesus unless they are endorsed by his own judgment. There is in this temptation a denial of the obligations to yield his members servants to righteousness, which is the consecration or holiness with which the chosen subjects of divine grace are made holy and without blame before God in love. In the present experience of the saints there is no such thing as "seeing the Lord" in the answer of a good conscience toward God, without this holiness. So long as the heart is divided by some lingering confidence in the flesh, the saint lacks this indispensable qualification for seeing the Lord. The typical law as written on tables of stone, required that there should be no other god to dispute with him the possession of the heart of the Israelite, and to divide the love which was demanded by the Lord their God. It was therein declared that the Lord God is a jealous God, and that he will not have any rival in the devotion of his chosen people. That God who has redeemed his people from the power of death, has the right to claim this exclusive devotion by which the subjects of his infinite favor are set apart as holy unto himself. In following peace and this holiness, the saints are not puffed up with that pharisaic pride which would cause them to trust in themselves that they are righteous, while they should despise others; in the case of all such as are led by the Spirit of truth, the effect is to cut off boasting, and deliver them from all confidence in the flesh. Instead of finding themselves in a position to glory in their own merits, they are brought so low that each of them must esteem others better than himself. When thus conscious of their own utter unworthiness, they are from necessity compelled to trust in the Lord and to rely alone upon his infinite grace for justification in his sight. The holiness which they are to follow is the remembrance that they are not their own, being bought with the precious blood of Christ, a price beyond comparison with all the treasures of earth. While devotion to this sacred truth must bring upon them the enmity of all the powers of iniquity, including the world and the flesh and the devil, it is only in this way that they can follow peace with all, as enjoined in our text. There can be no real peace attained by the sacrifice of truth and godliness. Neither is the peace of God, to which the saints are called in one body, either broken or disturbed by the malice and rage of all opposers of the doctrine and order of the gospel. So great is that peace that it makes the believer joyfully triumphant even though his body may be tortured, and his heart and flesh may fail. It gave the victory to those saints who were slain for their devotion to the faith of the promised Savior. No earthly peace could compare with the sacred assurance which shone in the face of the martyred Stephen, as his dying breath was poured out in prayer for those who were murdering him. The inspired record testifies that he did see "the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." What effect could the wrath of puny mortals have against that heavenly revelation by which the power of death was vanquished? The peace of God enabled the suffering saint to count it all joy, though he sealed his testimony with his life blood. In being favored thus to consecrate his last breath to the confession of his Lord he certainly did follow holiness; and in that path of the just he did see the Lord as the perfect light of everlasting day.

The manner in which the saints are to follow peace and holiness is clearly defined in the closing portion of this admonition. It is only by "Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God," that the pursuit of peace and holiness can be kept in view. Evidently this can never authorize the sacrifice of any portion of the doctrine and order of the gospel for the sake of conciliating the favor of those who have not received the love of the truth. In such a course there would be no avoiding roots of bitterness whereby many would be defiled. Instead of finding peace in that way, the deceived one would be imitating the conduct of Esau, who profanely despised his birthright, selling it for one morsel of meat. In this strikingly expressive type we are to learn the infinite excellence of the spiritual privileges of the saints, and the utter folly of measuring the most valuable earthly things in comparison with the heritage which is given to the children of grace in the gospel kingdom. Esau's profanity consisted in this error. He reasoned consistently so far as the natural mind could see. The birthright could not profit Esau if he must perish of hunger before he received the inheritance. Carnal wisdom would therefore conclude that he made a good bargain in exchanging his rightful title for the food which was needful for his present wants. Every believer is equally "profane" when he allows any earthly consideration to divert his steps from following the pathway of obedience to the commandments of the Lord. In no other way can any one follow peace and holiness, but in strict submission to the directions which are given in the inspired record. In that infallible standard the man of God is perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. There is no peace to the disobedient subject of grace. He will find trouble and sorrow in every way which his own heart devises. In the path of implicit obedience the saints behold the face of their Lord in righteousness, and have the answer of a good conscience toward God. This is the way of peace. The Spirit of Christ always directs those who are led by it in this way to "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE time is fast drawing near when the question, "What shall I get for a Christmas present?" will be the inquiry. We would suggest that you look over our list of books advertised on last page and see if you cannot find something there that will be appropriate. The cloth-bound books of "Editorials" we will mail from now until Christmas, both volumes, for three dollars. All our other books are quoted as low as we can possibly afford to sell them.

The extra inducements we offer for new subscribers to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES will enable almost any one to order a copy for their friend, which will make a lasting present.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

(Continued from page 387.)

portions by which our spiritual knowledge is developed as we earnestly desire to be taught, not by each other, but by the great Revelator himself.

I have glanced over thirteen passages (how many more there are I know not) in which leaven, as a type of evil, is plainly forbidden; but as there appears to be a need at times for round about stages, I pray your forbearance in following one; and if the mists of unbelief and ignorance trouble us all around, may we be favored with some dawns of the heavenly Sun.

In Lev. v. 11 we find written, "But if he [the poor Israelite] be not able to bring two turtle doves, or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a sin offering. He shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put frankincense thereon; for it is a sin offering." What does this flour represent? In Scripture, corn, barley, wheat, &c., are each used as grains which, when bruised, make the flour or meal of which man's bread is compounded and baked. Jesus is called a corn (or seed) of wheat. On this tenth or consecrated portion of bruised wheat no oil (significant of blessing), no frankincense (rising up as a sweet savor), was to be put. How clearly does this set forth Jesus as the sacrifice and sin-bearer of his people falling into the ground or grave of death, under the curse of the law, for his people. "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." On this tree or cross all the visible tokens of God's wrath rested. In this suffering as the wicked one, God took no pleasure in the sense of joy, though it was his pleasure to bruise him, in view of his turning many sons unto righteousness, and destroying by the power of the eternal Spirit which dwelt in him (and which suffered not his flesh to see corruption) death, and him that had the power of death, even the devil; of which destruction his rising on the third day was the manifest proof, as 1 Cor. xv. 20 puts it. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept." And this brings us to an Old Testament passage, Lev. viii. 13, "Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace offering." With these passages I will quote another. "Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread."—Ex. xxiii. 18. Still another. "No meat offering which ye shall bring unto the Lord shall be made with leaven, nor any honey, in any offering of the Lord made by fire. As for the oblation of the first-fruits [of the leaven and honey], ye shall offer them unto the Lord; but they shall not be burnt upon the altar for a sweet savor."—Lev. ii. 11, 12. We certainly have here texts which in their letter-form are contradictory and puzzling. I ask the question in all sincerity, Does the leaven as a type represent both good and evil? To my mind it does not, but is consistently used in each of these passages to set forth a fact which I believe all Scripture and experience teach; that is, that evil or sin is in the world by the express (though secret) purpose of God; and yet as all his children are in reality redeemed therefrom, because it is contrary to the perfection of his nature, they are experimentally to feel and outwardly manifest their abhorrence of the same.

First, then, for Lev. vii. 13. What are the cakes fried, baked, &c., unleavened, and anointed with oil, which the preceding verse tells him are to be accompanied by the leavened bread? The verse reads thus, "If he offer it for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried." I answer, it is the same blessed truth shown in the twelfth verse as that spoken by Paul in Rom. xii. 1, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." In these cakes or divided pieces we have the separate members of the Lord's body, made of the same fine flour as he was, baked or tried in the fiery furnace of affliction, and counted as unleavened, or free from sin, in virtue of their heavenly Head, who knew no sin, and manifested as such by the pouring out of his holy life or Spirit in their hearts; so that the apostle elsewhere, in Heb. iii. 1, addresses them thus, "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Why then is the Israelite, as he acknowledges with thanksgiving that he has received personally an evidence that he is one of this blessed family, besides that to offer his leavened bread? Because if he does not he leaves out of his thank offering the whole foundation on which his peaceful hope is built, even the atoning work of Christ. In the leavened bread of leavened loaves, or pieces, is the truth which the first figure omitted; for here we find the same body of Christ, with its head, declaring that by nature it is sinful, that its elder Brother was slain for it, a truly leavened loaf, or otherwise the law of God could have found no victim in him. So Jesus appears as the slain Lamb, crucified for his flock, and his flock crucified with him; and thus the thankoffering of life and holiness finds its root in the destruction of death and sin. So every true song of praise is based on the foundation fact that the beloved Son of God, who knew no sin, became sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

The next and very apparently contradictory passage, Ex. xxiii. 18, is to my understanding in holy harmony with the substantive truth. The blood of God's sacrifice, with which no leavened bread was to be offered, brings before us in type form that hallowed feasting of the saints on the work of Jesus finished for them on the cross, and approved by his resurrection, which is also figured forth in gospel days by the Lord's table. Concerning this spiritual table we are admonished in 1 Cor. xi. 28. "But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup." Also 2 Cor. xiii. 5. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith." What is the unworthiness above all unworthiness of which the child of God can be guilty? Is it not in bringing to that feast any hope of salvation founded elsewhere than on the solid rock of faith in the atonement of Jesus? And if the blood of the sacrifice were common to every man born into the world, as many say it is, then most surely every man so blessed would be eternally saved, though he might lose the present joy of it. But as all Scripture and experience refute this presumptuous doctrine, it is a specimen of the very warning uttered. No such leaven or corrupt teaching is to be introduced into the faith, lest the spiritual judgment of the downfall of the church be fulfilled in the awfully mixed body of clean and unclean, seen in 1 Cor. xi. 21. "One is hungry;" that is, finds no spiritual food for his soul. "And another drunken;" that is, filled and elated with fleshly doctrines—heresies.—Verse 19. No wonder such a body is sickly and nigh unto death. Feeding is typical of pleasure, renewal of strength. Any destructive element in the food, unless checked, proves itself by reverse effects. Under the law the priests fed on the sacrifices of the people, while their food in turn was blessed unto them by that appointed tithing. In the church Jesus is the bread of life to his body; and he in turn finds in them the marriage feast of his heart. Hence nothing but his own life current passing through them as cleansed wells, and returning to them again, can ever quench the thirst of his soul.

The last of my present quotations now comes into review, Lev. ii. 11, 12. Here again we have a distinctive relative teaching. In the form of a meat offering, no leaven and no honey were to be burned as a sweet savor; that is, as a basis of acceptance to be consumed with satisfaction by the fiery law of God and found perfect. The most powerful and enlivening (as leaven) utterances of man, and the sweetest outpourings of human affections (as honey), must forever stand aside. They being weak through the flesh would perish under the burning ordeal, as the glory of the grass when the sun riseth upon it. But as first-fruits of joy by a poor redeemed sinner, hiding under the shadow of the great sheaf, Christ ripe unto glory, through him they might be presented; for, remember, it is the sinner who is redeemed, and only the sinner conscious of salvation that can sing, even though marred by ignorance and sin, "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift," salvation by grace.

The only lines that come to me are these memorable ones,

"A guilty, weak and helpless worm,
On thy kind arms I fall."

If it were not for the same reason which forced me to begin this paper, I would yet throw it aside unsent. A melancholly sense of my utter helplessness, added to ever increasing cares of the world, are freezing my heart, and yet I seem bound to stagger on.

The next passage to which I will turn is found in Lev. xxiii. 17. "Ye shall bring out of your habitation two wave loaves of two tenth deals; they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are the first-fruits unto the Lord." I would like some of the dear brethren and sisters to read prayerfully the connection in which this verse is found. I can only here indicate pointers as they seem to me. These two loaves I take to be figures of the church of Christ; the Israel of God as it emerged from under the law on the day of Pentecost, and the Israel of whose existence none had dreamed as it sprang in buds of promise from the wild olive tree of Gentile origin, whom even erring Peter was inclined to reject, till the Spirit assured him that what God had cleansed was neither common or unclean.

In verse fifteen we see, on the morrow after the Sabbath (the resurrection day) Christ himself as the sheaf of the wave offering brought typically to the point. At the close of the seven Sabbaths or rests, ushering in the fiftieth jubilee day of Pentecost (that is, the waiting period between Christ's resurrection and the full pouring out of the Holy Ghost), a new meat offering (verse 16) is to be presented to the Lord; this new meat offering showing the one redeemed church, over whose salvation angels rejoiced, and Jesus saw of the travail of his soul and was satisfied—fed spiritually. Its two branches, Jew and Gentile, two loaves, the fairest first-fruits (sheaves) that ever were waved before the glorious presence of God; because they drank of one holy life from the great first-fruits, Jesus; baked with leaven, figuratively the corrupt principle destroyed by fire, and only its lightness left. As in Samson's riddle, out of the eater came forth meat, so in the person of Jesus sin was judged, condemned and destroyed, he having through death destroyed him who had the power of death, which is the devil. Thus (verse 18) seven lambs (purified ones), the seven churches in Revelation, appear with the bread, or as pieces of the bread; for these are one; while the Savior, as the "two rams, the kid of the goats, the young bullock," crowns his work of love by making this redeemed bread an offering of a sweet savor made by fire (his own suffering) unto his Lord. But I must hasten. Thus the offering of this new sacrifice, loaves baked with leaven, embodies much doctrine under law. All human sacrifices had been forbidden, because none of them, being sinful, could by any means redeem his brother. But when, at the appointed time, at the close of law, and as its end, the sinless Lamb was revealed, that which was in itself a curse, even death, became the kernel of eternal life; and in his hands who had power to lay down his life and take it again eternally in a resurrection body, death, the curse, was swallowed up in victory.

One glance at another passage and I will close for the present. If ever God opens the way using these sections of thoughts as key-notes, I may more specially dwell upon the leaven parable itself. Now I feel I must bring this letter to a close. I can truly say of it, it has been born in sorrow and cradled in tears. As I commenced it against my will, so I send it. Thorns have bristled around every step of its way. There is only one more passage I feel like mentioning just now; it is found in Amos iv. 5. "And offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven." A little light on the connection of this passage will show that it forms no part of a gracious charge to be kept, but is simply a solemn recount of the multiplied transgressions of his ancient people, wherein they had mixed his pure commands with the idolatrous worship of the nations around; hence the leaven of sin appeared in every case; and for these causes God in his righteous judgment should give them in return cleanness of teeth and want of bread in all their places.

In closing, my hope is that some one more spiritually minded than myself may be given visions of understanding on the deeper truths of Bethlehem's well. I have followed no beaten track, having none to follow; for although I have read many assertions pro and con, few seem to touch the real substance of the matter. If I have advanced error, I desire to be forgiven; and as I do not feel just now that I have any claim upon anyone, unless he that is highest of all have compassion on me, I remain a weary traveler, hoping and waiting for the light.

MRS. J. STREET.

CURTIS, Jones Co., Miss.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have for a long time had a desire to address you, but a sense of my weakness has kept me from doing so. If the Lord will, I will tell you of some things that I believe to be the truth, as I believe the Lord has revealed them to me. Paul says in his letter to the Ephesians, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." We hear the prophet of old saying, "The beast of the field shall honor me; the dragons and the owls; because I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen. This people have I formed for myself; they shall shew forth my praise."—Isa. xliii. 20, 21. I know we can serve him if he gives us the will. Some say we can serve him of our own will; but the apostle says, "It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." The prophet of old says again, "But now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not; for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine." There are some people in our country who believe that the apostles are the only chosen people; but the apostle Peter did not so believe, for he addresses "the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia, elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied." I do not understand Peter to be addressing the rest of the apostles, but all the elect people of the living God. So I believe they are scattered all over the land; and the Lord says he will send his angels, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds of the earth. He will bring his sons from far, and his daughters from the ends of the earth. He will gather his people wherever they may be. I am not uneasy but what the Lord will do his pleasure in heaven above and among the inhabitants of the earth beneath. There are people in our land who believe there will be some of the Lord's people lost on account of their not doing, or exercising what they call their free will. If that were true, there would be none of Adam's race saved. That is not God's plan of saving his people. He saves them according to his own purpose and plan and will. The prophet says, "But Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation. Ye shall not be ashamed or confounded, world without end."

Dear brethren, we as a people, bearing the name of Primitive Baptists here in the south, believe in that God who has all power both in heaven and earth, as you do in the north; for your God is our God. He is the God that rules the whole earth. We hear him saying, "Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me. Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." Yes, I believe the Lord will do his will in heaven and earth. Heaven is his throne, and earth is his footstool. He is omnipotent and omnipresent, everywhere at the same time, and is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. There is but one true and living God; but there are many gods in the world, claiming to do wonderful things for the people. There are many claiming to convert sinners, and who claim that it takes money to send preachers to preach, in order to save sinners. They claim that there are thousands of sinners who are perishing on account of not having the gospel preached to them. Ah, my dear brethren, where is their faith? To whom do they look, and in whom do they trust? They do not look to that God who says, by his apostle, "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

Dear brethren, I will close by saying, I hope the Lord will give you grace in time of need, with all the dear people of God, especially the correspondents who write for your dear old paper, which I prize above all other papers I have ever read. I cannot express the comfort I have received from it. I expect to read it as long as I am able to pay for it. I would rather do without some of my daily food than do without your dear and faithful paper. It contains the truth from the dear people of God all over our land. I cannot see how any of them can do without it.

Do with this as you think best. I remain an unworthy sinner saved by grace alone. That is my only hope of being saved, through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

E. A. NOBLES.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

INDIGENT FUND.

DURING the past year the brethren and friends have contributed nearly two hundred dollars, to assist us in sending the SIGNS to those who love to read them, but are not able to pay for them. We sent the paper this year to from three to five hundred of these readers, and if our brethren feel willing and able to assist us, we shall try to continue them on our list for the coming year. Judging from the letters of gratitude we receive, there are none who more highly appreciate the paper than those who receive it from this fund. All remittances for this fund will be acknowledged in the SIGNS, and our readers will thereby be enabled to see just what support the fund is receiving.

WHO SENT IT?

SOME one from Livingstonville, N. Y., sent us an order to discontinue their paper, but did not give their name. If the party will write again and give us their name, as well as address, we will obey their order.

NOW READY.

THE cloth-bound hymn books are now ready, and we have mailed all orders on hand. If any one who has sent an order for these books has not received them by the time they see this notice, they will please inform us.

RECEIVED FOR CHURCH HISTORY.

Elder E. Rittenhouse, Del., $2.50.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Attie A. Curtis, Maine, $3.10.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

SISTER Mary Ann Holeman was born in the state of Ohio, April 12th, 1821, the daughter of Thomas and Ailsey Stocton. Her mother's maiden name was Johnson. She moved to Kentucky, thence to Indiana, and later to Illinois. She was married on the fourth Saturday in August, 1840, to Uriah Holeman, with whom she lived until her death, sharing with him the trials of a long and eventful life. She professed a hope in Christ many years ago, and united with the New Hope Church of Primitive Baptists, in Illinois, and was baptized by Elder Vanmeter, where her membership remained until her death. She moved with her husband to the state of Missouri some years ago, being inconvenient to a church of her faith. She never joined a church in Missouri, though she and her husband greatly desired church privileges. She had helped to acquire quite a competency of this world's goods.

She died at her pleasant home near the city of Stanberry, Gentry Co., Mo., July 12th, 1893. While she left no children to mourn their loss, yet she leaves an aged and almost heart-broken husband and many relatives and friends, who feel that the hand of providence has dealt them a heavy blow. Brother Holeman has the deepest sympathy of us all. A large congregation met at the residence, where, under a beautiful grove in the yard, the writer tried to speak words of comfort to the people; after which her remains were quietly laid away in the White Oak cemetery.

R. A. OLIPHANT.

DIED—Nov. 9th, at her home near Athens, Menard Co., Ill., Mrs. Emily Kincaid, in the 85th year of her age.

The deceased was the daughter of James E. and Tabitha Brasfield, and was born Sept. 16th, 1809, near Richmond, Madison Co., Ky. With her parents she removed to this vicinity in the fall of 1834, and on Oct. 17th, 1837, she was married to Archie Kincaid, with whom she lived happily for more than fifty-six years, and was blessed with seven children, four of whom and her aged companion mourn her death. She leaves also ten grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The deceased had been an invalid for the last seven years, and a great sufferer, which she bore with a great deal of patience and christian fortitude. She was never united with any church, saying that she felt too unworthy, but bore through her long and useful life the fruits of the Spirit of Christ—love, joy, faith, &c. I have been acquainted with her nearly forty years, and can truly say that she was a meek and humble follower of Jesus, and one whose faith was in Jesus alone, having no confidence in the flesh; whose faith as she approached death seemed to be brighter and brighter, and she longed for the time when she would be released from sin and suffering, and be with a loving Jesus, where sorrow and suffering can never come. As we looked at her calm and beautiful face in death, which we had seen so often showing so much suffering, we felt that all was peace and comfort with her, and that she was with that Jesus whom she had loved so long and faithfully.

She was buried Nov. 11th, in Indian Point Cemetery, after funeral services at the house by Mr. D. I. Strain. A large concourse of relatives and friends followed her to the grave.

PHILEMON STOUT.

COTTON HILL, Ill., Nov. 23, 1893.

Nancy K. Mowers, wife of James Mowers, and daughter of the late Elder Samuel Hare, who used to preach through Schoharie Co., N. Y., years ago, died March 15th, 1893, of consumption, at her home, No. 139 South Knox St., Albany, N. Y., in the 56th year of her age.

She was not a member of any visible church, but indorsed the doctrine of free grace, and was a child of grace, if the writer understood her speech, which the Lord had seen fit to open to her through his wonderful mercies. She led a very quiet life, and did many a charitable act, which she never did to be seen of mankind.

She leaves a kind husband, a daughter a young lady, and a married son, to mourn her departure from earth to a more precious place which the Lord has prepared for his own.

ALSO,

Charles Mowers died July 5th, 1893, in the 25th year of his age.

He was the only son of James and the late Nancy K. Mowers. He was taken from this earth very suddenly. He went to Howe's Cave, Schoharie Co., N. Y., on the 3d of July, intending to spend a few weeks with his uncles and aunts near that place; but, alas! we know not the time of our end on this earth, which the Lord has seen good to keep from us. He was a young man well liked by his associates, and was unspotted from all the religious creeds of the world of to-day, as we are commanded to have no other gods before us.

The deceased leaves a wife, one sister and a father to mourn his absence from earth; but may the Lord comfort them in these hours of affliction, and teach them to know that he careth for us all.

EZER LIVINGSTON.

ALBANY, N. Y.

IN obedience to the impressions I have of the desires of her many friends, with great sorrow I send for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES a notice of the death of my dear wife, Mary E. Bailey, who departed this life Oct. 2d, 1893, after a short illness of typhoid fever, in the 29th year of her age.

She was not a member of the Old School Baptist Church, but manifested an interest in the truth, and had a decided preference for what they preach, and loved dearly to read the SIGNS OF THE TIMES; telling me once, after I had been out, that she had read it through before she stopped, and said it was the best religious paper she ever saw. She has frequently told me what she hoped were the Lord's dealings in revealing his love to her, while at home by her father's fireside, when she said she felt very happy. During her sickness she seemed to feel the power of the good Master's presence. She spoke concerning her hope the day she died, and said to me, "I hope I am firm." I think her natural love for her father excelled that of almost any child I ever saw. She was blessed with a gentle disposition, and was ever ready to speak kind words to me, which was the joy of my little home. These words were her delight, "I would like to do thus and so, if it is the good Master's will." She said to one present near the last, "I don't know whether I will ever get up from here or not; but if I don't it will not be the first one." She met death with smiles on her countenance, and died as she had lived, quietly and peacefully.

Her funeral was preached by Elder T. M. Poulson, using for a text Matthew xviii. 2, 3, to quite a large congregation, in the Old School Baptist meeting-house in this place. She leaves with myself one little child and many other relatives and friends to mourn our loss of a kind companion, a loving mother and a true friend; but we sorrow not as we would without hope of her, for we truly believe that she is asleep in Jesus.

Her love to me has been so free,
Her conversation sweet;
'Tis hard to bear to journey where
With her I cannot meet."

H. H. BAILEY.

SNOW HILL, Md., Nov. 22, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of the friends I send you for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES the obituary of John Hands, who departed this life at the home of his son-in-law, John Campbell, in Washington, D. C., on Saturday, Nov. 11th, 1893, aged 84 years and 9 months.

There was no special disease, but the end came through the general wearing out of old age. Through several years of failing health and strength he was tenderly cared for by his daughter and her husband and family. Of Mr. Hands it may be truly said that a good and kindly man has lived and died. I have known him for perhaps ten or twelve years, and have ever found him the same humble, quiet, unassuming man. His son-in-law, brother Campbell, informs me that in all the years he has known him he had never seen him angered or excited, unless it was when he heard of oppression of the poor and weak. For these his tenderest sympathies always went out. I am informed that many poor and orphaned children owed their start in life to his kindness and bounty. Many he had taken to his home and cared for until they could care for themselves. Thus his life has been one of long-continued kindness and usefulness. In the life which was seen by his fellow-men he lived out the religion defined by James as being "to visit the widow and orphan in their affliction, and to keep one's self unspotted from the world."

So far as I am informed, he had never made a public profession of religion. From conversation with him at different times I know that he had a humble opinion of himself. Just a few weeks before his death he made a special request that Elder Beebe should come to the house and preach for his special benefit, and expressed great satisfaction in his company and conversation. He was spared to old age, and quietly fell asleep; and his friends have hope in his death, and do not sorrow as those who have no hope.

I attended his funeral on Monday, the 13th, and spoke briefly from the words in Romans viii. 24, 25. May our God, the God of all grace, comfort the dear friends, and especially the two daughters who ministered to him in his declining years.

I remain your brother in a precious hope,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 29, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—By request of our esteemed brother, Samuel Dennison, I forward the following notice of the decease of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Dennison, for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Sister Dennison was born in Chester Co., Pa. March 19th, 1820, her maiden name being Harlan. She was married to Samuel Dennison Dec. 10th, 1846, and was baptized in the fellowship of the London Tract Church, Chester Co., Pa., by Elder Joseph L. Staton, in June, 1888, where she continued a faithful and highly esteemed member until her decease, which occurred at the residence of her husband, in New Castle Co., Del., Aug. 13th, 1893. She was taken down with her last illness about January 1st, 1892, with heart trouble, attended with dropsy and other ailments. Her sufferings were intense, but she bore all with patience and christian fortitude. Her son, Mr. John W. Dennison, writes:

"It was remarkable with what patience and fortitude she bore up under intense suffering. Her nature was quiet and undemonstrative, but I have no doubt of her implicit faith in the finished work of the Lord Jesus Christ."

She was laid to rest in the cemetery at London Tract, to await the resurrection at the sound of the last trump. Her funeral was very largely attended, friends and neighbors attesting the esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. She leaves her husband and five sons, besides the church and a large circle of friends, to mourn the loss of wife, mother and friend; but not without hope, for we have every reason to believe that our loss is her eternal gain. May the God of all grace extend the comforts of his word to our aged brother and the sons and the church, and prepare us all for the summons which most surely awaits us to follow her into the dark portals of death; and may our gracious Redeemer light the way to us, as he did to her.

Your brother in hope,

A. B. FRANCIS.

WILLARD, Va., Nov., 1893.

ORDINATIONS.

At the request of the church of Christ at Ebenezer, Montgomery Co., Ala., of the Primitive faith and order, the following named Elders, to wit, R. F. Missildine, H. King, J. A. Mills, J. B. Hattaway and A. H. Williamson, met with the church on Saturday before the first Sunday in November, 1893, for the purpose of ordaining brother W. N. Hayes to the functions of the gospel ministry.

The presbytery organized by electing Elder J. A. Mills Moderator, and Elder J. B. Hattaway Clerk.

Then proceeded to the ordination as follows:

R. F. Missildine examined the church as to the qualifications of brother Hayes, which was satisfactory.

A. H. Williamson proceeded to examine brother Hayes touching his faith and call to the ministry, which was satisfactory.

The presbytery then proceeded to set brother Hayes apart to the work whereunto God had called him.

Prayer by J. A. Mills.

Laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

H. King then proceeded to deliver the charge.

Benediction.

A few very appropriate remarks were made by J. B. Hattaway.

J. A. MILLS, Mod.

J. B. HATTAWAY, Clerk.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of this volume, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

SPECIAL OFFER.

FROM now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars, and we will send additional new ones at one dollar each.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us one more dollar for two new names, and one dollar each for additional new subscribers.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

Ever since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c, costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 23 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 50

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1893.

NO. 50.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE VALLEY OF BACA (WEeping).

WHAT would we not give sometimes that the fountain of the great deep in our heart of anguish and sorrow might be broken up by a flood of weeping? Pent up sorrow is hard to bear. It is a time of great darkness, a night time experience. It is as though a wall was round about the suffering one, and not even the soothing words of the dearest friend, or the words of wisdom and truth and love from the Lord's anointed, could penetrate and reach the seemingly frozen heart. The sorrow that comes from natural causes, and also that which comes from a knowledge of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, both enter into the christian experience; and it requires the same grace to dispel the clouds of despair in the one instance as in the other. Every circumstance that enters into or goes to make up the sum of a natural life, forms a part of the spiritual exercises of that individual; because each one being ordained of God forms a chain, link by link, that drags the conscious sinner down to a place where his utter helplessness is not only apparent, but a dread and absolute certainty; and this is the very place where the Lord seeks and finds him, and from whence he takes him up, delivering him out of all his trouble. When one is in the midst of affliction, surrounded by all the elements which produce it, as a frail bark upon the mighty waters is carried hither and thither by the contending waves, while from above comes the rushing wind and beating rain, the mind of that one is darkened, the soul is in thick darkness, and he cannot come forth, because it is the power of darkness that has enshrouded him. And in consequence of the darkness, he cannot see that he is being led by a sure hand and a safe guide. He cannot then understand the necessity of being humbled before he can be exalted. And while he realizes that the doors of his dungeon are securely locked and bolted, he cannot see the loving, powerful hand within his prison-house. The sins of all God's people were atoned for in the one great offering of the Father, who offered up Jesus, his only begotten, on the cross upon Calvary, nearly nineteen hundred years ago. And when he arose triumphant over death, hell and the grave, every member of his body arose with him. Therefore all were delivered in that dreadful literal three days and three nights. But not until (through suffering, with groanings and weeping, by an experience of grace through faith) we have in terrible reality passed through that awful time, in the fellowship of his suffering, can we realize a deliverance out of darkness into a full manifestation of light, and rejoice in it. In all this are we made rich in the blood of Christ through suffering. So says the psalmist, "Who passing through the valley of Baca make it a well; the rain also filleth the pools." The travel of the christian journey is necessarily through the "valley of Baca." No true follower of Jesus can escape it; for "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." The door of the sheep is Christ; and as he suffered the just for the unjust, so an entrance into the gospel kingdom must come through suffering. Not until we attain to a knowledge of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, by a work of grace in the heart, can we have sorrow for sin; because through every natural avenue, in which the works of the flesh are made manifest, there is a desire in the natural heart to do the things which the inherent principle of the sinful flesh sets in pleasing array before us; therefore do we love sin. It is a part of our carnal nature, and with the flesh we serve its rigid law. With the entrance of the light of the knowledge of God's glory in our heart, comes also sorrow and affliction and weeping. Do I go bowed down, mourning and weeping all the day long? If so, then another power, other than the power of sin, reigns in my mortal body. And this other power is the power of faith through grace, which brings forth fruit meet for repentance. My own mind at the present moment runs something like this. The weighty matters of the nations causing them to struggle and strive for supremacy, do not disturb me. The rise and fall of contending political parties in my own country does not cause an exaltation of joy nor a depression of spirits; because faith tells me that the hand of God controls the affairs and destinies of all nations. The devastation of which I read, on the sea and on the land, from tornadoes, shipwrecks, railroad horrors, and other causes, do not move me to reply against God; for I know that God in his wisdom has ordained all such. And the God in whom I trust, the God of heaven and of earth, is a God of love. "His work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment, a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." But among the million inhabitants of this great city in which I live, are a few souls bound together by mysterious consent, with chords of love, stronger than any earthly tie could ever produce. They are God's peculiar people, and my name (however unworthy) is numbered with them. If a cloud the size of a man's hand should hover over that little band for harm, then the deepest anxiety and consternation would take possession of me, and my heart would bleed and weep for the cause of my beloved Zion; for therein is my treasure; and where the treasure is, there will be the heart also. The very fact of "passing through" the valley (according to the Scriptures) maketh it a well. The trial of affliction which causes weeping is the result of grace abounding. The hands of man, therefore, and the works of the flesh, have nothing whatever to do with the digging of the well. The poor, conscious sinner works and works, in the effort to extricate himself from his trouble, until he finds, when he has come to the end of all earthly strength, that he has accomplished nothing. The last straw has failed him, and he sinks. But in such condition his fall is always in a safe place, at the very feet of Jesus, and he finds his Lord not angered; but "In his pity he redeemed them," spreading the mantle of his love about them. At the right time, and in the right place, the Lord lifts his loved ones from the dunghill, and sets them among princes. "When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them. I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys; I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water." In the valley of Baca, at the time of weeping, the well is digged by an unseen hand, of the power of grace. Have you ever been troubled upon your bed at night in the agony of a horrid, frightful dream, and all at once, when you are about to be plunged into destruction, you awake to find yourself lying quietly and safely upon your bed, with the glad rays of the morning sun peeping through your blinds, wishing you a happy good morning?

Truly "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Through all the night of our sorrow and weeping, the hand of the Lord is making the well. The sweet and living waters from the throne of the Father's glory flow into it. We drink and we are filled, and O how refreshing is the draught. The valley of Baca is turned into a garden of nuts, abounding with sparkling springs and bubbling brooks of God's surprising and wonderful love. Is it any wonder then the psalmist could sing, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters; he restoreth my soul?" Does not this exalted condition remind you of a beautiful transparent lake of clear cool water? Your eyes delight to look upon it, your heart thrills at the knowledge of the handiwork of God, the Creator. But you know also that at the bottom of this thing of beauty is miry, earthy clay, which when stirred up chills you with the changed view. The beauty is marred, the water is defiled, and you turn away in sorrow with weeping. Such indeed is the human heart, magnified and made glorious by the rich clothing of divine grace. But alas! that which is born of the flesh continues to be flesh, and underneath the robe of righteousness is the same depraved Adamic nature, which, when stirred by the lusts of the flesh, drags the poor soul down again and again into the valley of Baca, and there is weeping. Yet above this dread valley the star of hope forever shines, and by its light we behold the rainbow of promise, and in golden letters upon its variously tinted surface we read, "He shall deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee. In famine he shall redeem thee from death, and in war from the power of the sword." And thou shalt answer out of the deep, dark valley, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." "Who passing through the valley of Baca make it a well." And such a well! replete with living water, inexhaustible, and ever at hand, to assuage the thirst of the wayfaring man, whose "tongue faileth for thirst." It is absolutely certain that if one weepeth because of a consciousness of the depravity of his own heart, he will also laugh when he receives the glad tidings of great joy that the Father for Christ's sake hath forgiven his sins. Jesus when speaking to the twelve whom he had chosen, said, "Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh." The night song of the sin-burdened pilgrim is a sad, sad song, a wail in the darkness, having no light, condemned under an outraged and violated law. This song is sung, not in the darkness alone, but amidst fear, dread and horror of death; the distress of one that is lost, one that is forsaken. "Thou makest darkness, and it is night, wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth; the young lions roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God. The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens." So comes the end of the long dark night in the "valley of Baca." The Sun of righteousness arises, the fear and dread have flown, and behold, the whole valley is a well, and the water therein springeth up into everlasting life. How sure is the hand of Jesus to guide and to direct. He knoweth all the way we should take, and he leadeth us in the right way. The dear old apostle "wept much because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon. And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not. Behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof." Jesus is "The root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." He stretcheth forth his hand to every timid, waiting, weeping one, and dries up all tears. Sometimes we weep and we know not why; we do not understand the cause of our sorrow. There is "death in the pot," and we have not discovered the source of it. Perhaps I have wounded one of my Father's little flock to my hurt and to my wounding, and, like Lamech of old, must be avenged seventy and seven fold. How jealously should we guard the good name and the best interests of our brethren. To our sorrow do we often find what an unruly member the tongue is, and what a great fire a little spark kindleth. A little word spoken against a brother, and soon forgotten, may cause a running sore, perhaps never to be healed in this life; and we wonder why it is not with us as in months past. The cloud, at first small, grows larger and more dense. The poison must be eradicated, and how? The poisoner and the poisoned, and every one who has been contaminated (it is a vile contagion), must go down together into the "valley of Baca," and, like the Syrian leper who must wash seven times in Jordan to be healed, they must be cleansed by washing in their own and each other's tears, and reconciliation must come through a repentance that is not to be repented of; for the blood of Jesus (in the valley of weeping) cleanseth from all sin. The Lord alone can prepare our hearts to see our own faults in such a way that we dare not, neither do we desire to, make excuse for them. The natural heart has no power to forgive a wrong. Then how can we petition the Father to "forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us?" The natural heart cannot. But Jesus, the Mediator between God and us, is able in us to forgive all trespasses. He is in his people. He softens their stony heart. He intercedes with the Father. He takes up their cause and pleads it. The fountains of the great deep in the heart are broken up, and in a flood of weeping every cloud disappears from the sky. Then, "Who passing through the valley of Baca make it a well."

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 21, 1893.

LONG GREEN, Md., Nov. 8, 1893.

MRS. S. H. DURAND—MY DEAR SISTER:—Your letter of recent date was welcome to me, although I was not in a good frame of mind; but it helped me. I suppose brethren may think, from a letter of mine published in the SIGNS, forwarded by brother Grafton, that I was entirely above trouble of any kind; and I confess I was at that time. But "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" I have learned and relearned this same lesson until I ought to know it; but no, I have to learn it every time, that he alone has wisdom and knowledge, and I have none whatever. If I rejoice, it is of him. If I am sorrowful, it is of him. I cannot change or alter in any way; yet I am not satisfied. If sorrowful, I want to rejoice; that is, I want to be in that frame of mind. But if I rejoice, I do not want to be sorrowful; yet I cannot be one or the other without each other in their turn. I cannot rejoice unless I have been sorrowful; neither can I be sorrowful unless I have rejoiced; at least that is the way it seems to me at times. I have been in a peculiar state of mind spiritually for some time, which I cannot describe. I have had trouble, that is, worldly trouble, enough to make one feel badly. But this trouble is of another sort, of another life, deeper than I can think or feel naturally. It is beyond expression; it is beyond thought or the power to think. I know there is something the matter, but what? I know that I am sinful, depraved, and weaker than the weakest; but this is not all. There is something deeper than all this knowledge, and what is it? I may think and worry over it, yet I cannot tell. Who can? "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." Now how can I understand these frames of mind, these severe exercises? You may say, By the Spirit of God that is in you. Yes, but how am I to know that? This is the trouble. How am I to know this while being tortured with all the evil devices of Satan? Can I take courage from that? Can I rejoice when I am tempted to deny God? Can I rejoice when I am tempted to deny my brethren? Can I rejoice when I am ready to deny that there is even a God at all, and that all things happen as they may? Can any one rejoice that there is a God, and that he rules all things as pleaseth him, unless his Spirit dwells in that one? If I cannot rejoice, it must be because the Spirit of God does not dwell in me. This certainly is the evidence; but the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, stare me in the face; the great depth of that wisdom and knowledge, there being no bounds to it. He must have all. Then why should I complain if he hides his smiling face, and it is night, and all the beasts of the forest do creep forth? Why should I not rejoice even then, if I know that this is part of his wisdom? He has the knowledge, but not I; and while under the cloud we cannot see his hand nor acknowledge his wisdom and knowledge, but just realize our own ignorance, weakness and nothingness. Can we get any lower or any less than that? But when the Lord lifts the cloud, and the sun appears, we are ready prepared to acknowledge his wisdom and knowledge in just what we have been suffering under, and rejoice, not because we are relieved from this burden, but because we can then see Jesus even in our afflictions and sorrows; and that he has been leading us all the time in wisdom and knowledge; that he has brought us through the fire, purified and made ready for his use, service in love, obedient, ready to fall at his feet and call him blessed. Could we do this if we did not pass through the fire? I think not? We are made up in our fleshly minds of all kinds of dross, and it is important that it should be burned off; and so the Lord leads his precious ones. But has he led me in this way? Is he leading me now in this unseen path? If in the fire, is it the Lord that is leading me there? This is the all-important question to me. As I said in the commencement, I do not realize why I am thus—why I should be so completely in such darkness. If I am left or given over into the hands of Satan for the destruction of the flesh, why is not the flesh destroyed? I have been for some time in his hands. But can it be that the Lord has forgotten to be gracious? Is his mercy clean gone forever? Or have I never known his mercy? Or has he never known me? This is my trouble now. "Darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." But this darkness with me seems felt, and O how great is the darkness? It is impenetrable, except by God. It may be, and I partly believe it is so, that I do not know what is the matter; that I am just living a dead life, if there possibly could be such a thing. I even went, or Satan led me, so far from duty as to stay away from our regular meeting on Sunday, and communion time, and did not realize what I had done until it was too late. This, to me, is a serious thing, and I doubt if I ever get over it. Why I did so I cannot tell; but one thing I do know, it has made me feel ten times worse than if I had gone. For a little while I felt that it was the Lord's doings, and for a purpose; but soon I came to the conclusion that it was just a happen so. But this gave me no comfort, and I am still heartily sorry that I did not go; indeed I am ashamed of it; but it is likely that is the flesh, as I just don't like the name of the thing. And when some of the brethren wrote me, believing me sick, what could I say? I just had to acknowledge the whole thing and sink to the bottom; and I have not the least doubt but that they all think much less of me than they professed before. I am undone, a worm, and no man, no life, no nothing. I am aware that I have in times past experienced some kind of rejoicing, but I really fear it was all imagination. Indeed it looks that way. I have tried to comfort others in times of spiritual darkness, and it seemed I could see the hand of God in leading them to greater and more lovely things; and I have tried at this time to take some comfort out of that; but no comfort is in it, but it is rather against me all the time.

Probably I have written enough, and more than enough, on this subject; but I never could write of anything that my mind was not led into. For a month or more I have felt my lonely condition to such a degree that I can hardly bear up under it. It may be that this is the cause of my peculiar exercises. It never so occurred to me before; and yet this may be grasping at straws; still it all revolves back to something deeper still.

The loss of my barn did not disturb me a particle, my mind being otherwise led. A new one will be finished by this coming Saturday night, and a much larger one. The burning of the old one did not disturb me, neither do I feel elated over the new one. I am just a kind of a dead man, and do not seem to know or care for anything.

I wish I could write something more cheerful to you, but I cannot. My mind is barren of everything otherwise than what I have been writing about. If I were capable of loving I would send my love to you and all the rest. I address you as dear sister; whether from habit or not I cannot tell.

Yours in the slough of despond,
MILTON DANCE.

P. S.—This is Nov. 13th. As you will see by the other date, I have carried this letter in my pocket five days, afraid to send it, and afraid to burn it. But on yesterday, while riding along the road the Lord appeared in his glory, sitting upon the throne of his glory, and the church of the living God appeared as all glorious, beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, with her walls and bulkwarks. "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined," glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders. Now how easy it is to talk of his wisdom and knowledge. How different now, encouraging, upholding, leading by his own right arm, or power. When the Lord opens, none can shut; and when he shuts, none can open. This now seems wonderful and glorious. I suppose I preached a sermon to myself while riding along the road in my buggy. The Lord hearkened, and, I hope, heard; for I have been joyful ever since, the glory of the Lord shining around. But if I do not stop I will write so much that you will tire of reading. I only write this to tell you that the Lord is good, that his mercy endures forever.

Yours in hope,

MILTON DANCE.

"BEHOLD, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."—Rev. iii. 20.

In the first place, we must have a proper conception of the intent and purpose of the Scriptures from beginning to ending, in order to understand them. There is not one word in holy writ, from Genesis to Revelation, of a gospel nature, which is not wholly intended for the children or church of the living God. The historical parts of the book are but links in the chain, and lead alike to grand works and show the power of God in the preservation of the chosen family. The leading characters are but types of things to come, foreknown by the Creator, and for examples to the chosen of God in after time. The condemnatory clauses against the world and the flesh and the devil are intended for those especially designated. Now, for whom was our text intended? The book called Revelation in its introduction says, "John to the seven churches which are in Asia; grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his throne; and from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen." I have given the quotation entire because of its wonderful strength and force in showing what is meant. "John to the seven churches which are in Asia." What are churches, and who constitute the membership of churches? If then the whole book is addressed to an organized body of the chosen people of the living God, what right has any man to wrest it from its holy place and cast it to the multitude? Would not this be casting pearls before swine? The text under consideration is immediately preceded by the words, "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore and repent." If (and I think the book is certainly plain enough, that he who runs may read) it is intended only for those he loves and chastens, and they alone have the right to be zealous, how holy and blessed a privilege it is to be able to repent, and to feel that we are under the rod. "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."—Heb. xii. 5, 6. How full of consolation to the poor downtrodden, disconsolate children of God is such gospel. They alone can receive it. "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear."

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Now, brethren, if any man among us thinks he must stand still after being called, someone is greatly in the wrong; for the Master said to his disciples just before his apprehension, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." John says, "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death."—1 John v. 16. The very day we first felt we were one of those of whom the apostle speaks when he says, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins," we became sons to fight the gospel fight every day of our lives. Failing in the fight, we are scourged because we are sons. The Lord said to the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." Jesus taught his disciples to pray, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." The apostle says, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able." These expressions show, and we feel it in our hearts, that we are every moment subject to the machinations of the evil one; for who among us has not to say every hour, "Get thee behind me, Satan?"

"If any man." I believe I have been explicit enough for my brethren; but the persistent Arminian will not down. "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God."—1 Cor. i. 23, 24. "John answered and said, A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven."—John iii. 27. "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."—John i. 13. "Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves. No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day."—John vi. 43, 44.

Is not this testimony sufficient to forever settle the Arminian's "any man?"

"If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." The Savior says, "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them."—Luke xii. 37. Brethren, "ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men."—Matt. v. 13. I am glad of the fact that we are poor, downtrodden and few. The true witnesses were never many. May we not lose our savor. God forbid that you should ever understand me to even hint that we can ever be other than salt. "We are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul."—Heb. ix. 39. "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is born of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not."—1 John v. 18. But we may lose our savor, we can come under the rod, and feel O how desolate and sad and cast down before him who chasteneth. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the waters of life freely."—Rev. xxii. 17. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."—Isa. lv. 1.

Beloved brethren, the Spirit and the bride call the chosen children, and every one of them will go; for all of them will thirst and hunger for the priceless milk and wine, which is without money or price. They will be given an ear to hear in the good day of the Lord, when he has promised to go in through the door opened to him when he knocketh.

J. E. STINSON.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Nov. 22, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed I send you for the SIGNS a letter from sister Attie Curtis, which I feel sure will prove of interest to many, as it has been to me. Truly the best thing of all is to praise and exalt the name of the blessed Savior, our dear and exalted Redeemer.

The SIGNS for November 22d has come this morning, and I want to say that I have greatly enjoyed the article signed "J." It is one among the most satisfactory articles upon the law of the leprosy in the Old Testament that I have ever seen. I would like for the dear brother, if he can feel inclined that way, to say something through the SIGNS upon the difference between the ceremonial cleansing for the leprosy provided by the law of Moses, and the real healing of leprosy wrought by the Savior in various instances. As I said, I am greatly pleased with the article in the present number of the SIGNS.

I remain your brother in hope,
F. A. CHICK.

BATH, Maine, Nov. 17, 1893.

ELDER F. A. CHICK—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I was very glad at the coming of your letter, and read it with much pleasure. I was glad you spoke as you did of my letter in the SIGNS. I was feeling cast down about it, as the meetings had been so full of enjoyment, and I had expressed but very little of the joy my heart had been filled with, and had not written of my visit in a satisfactory manner. When I read these words of yours, "I am glad you were not left to write in any other way than you did. To glorify the blessed Lord is more, far more, than any number of incidents in a visit. Not that I would censure the narration of such incidents, but the 'good part' is best," I felt a gladness spring up in my heart that the Lord had enabled me to glorify him. That is the desire of my heart, to speak and write so as to exalt the precious name of Jesus. I have had a place to travel through with no spiritual joy in exercise in my soul. I could not answer my letters; for when I cannot feel the joy of the theme of God's salvation it seems impossible for me to write. I have been led into the light again, and had many beautiful thoughts of the fullness dwelling in Jesus. I wrote a long letter to Elder Keene the other day, and tried to tell him some of my thoughts; but my mind seems full yet, and I cannot rest easy without having a chat with you. I have been singing these words to-day, and there is such sweetness in them because they express what I hope I have experienced:

"A bleeding Savior, seen by faith,
A sense of pardoning love,
A hope that triumphs over death,
Give joys like those above.

"To take a glimpse within the veil,
To know that God is mine,
Are springs of joy that never fail,
Unspeakably divine.

"These are the joys which satisfy,
And sanctify the mind;
Which make the spirit mount on high,
And leave the world behind."

You know, dear brother, the Lord has given me much joy since the evidence of sins forgiven, and I do think the great cause of my rejoicing has been on account of the finished salvation which Jesus wrought. "And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace." O! there is so much treasured up in that precious name Jesus. I would like the gift to bring out some of the fullness that I hope I have received, and how I have seen him as my wisdom, righteousness, sanctification

(Continued on page 397.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLE TOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 13, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

CONFESSION AND BELIEF.

"But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart; that is, the word of faith, which we preach; that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. x. 8-10.

In compliance with the request of our correspondent, "J. A. L.," which will be found in another column, we take pleasure in submitting a brief comment upon the text cited, and also in answering the questions proposed in connection therewith. It is doubtless true that many others are as much bewildered as our inquiring friend, by the false teaching of the ministers of antichristian organizations. There is unmistakable evidence of the inspiration of the Scriptures in the fact that even their literal significance is concealed from the scrutiny of the wise and prudent of this world. He that sitteth in the heavens has in derision all the kings of the earth who take counsel together against him and against his Anointed. He has committed all power in heaven and in earth to our triumphant Redeemer. He holds the keys of death and hell; so that the testimony of the psalmist is manifestly fulfilled, "Our God is in the heavens; he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased." The very opposition of the carnal mind against the truth of the doctrine of Christ is made to attest the absolute certainty of the accomplishment of all that is written of the determinate counsel of God in the salvation of his people from their sins, and in pouring just vengeance upon the workers of iniquity.

In reply to the questions as to the consistency of preaching the infinite sovereignty of God and the responsibility of man, it might be sufficient to say that there can be no consistency in the doctrine of the responsibility of the man on any other ground but the recognition of the just sovereignty of God. If God has not the righteous authority to command the obedience of his creature, man, then it must follow that man owes no compliance with such precepts as his Creator has given, so that the sovereignty of God and the responsibility of man are inseparable principles in the same doctrine of revealed truth.

As to the inquiry in regard to preaching the gospel to the unregenerate, no created being is authorized to change that which God has emphatically settled in the inspired record. There is no conceivable circumstance under which the gospel can be preached to any other character but that to which it is limited by the definite word of the Lord. None of the ministers of Christ, not even the inspired apostles, have power to extend the efficacy of the gospel beyond the boundary within which Jesus himself has confined it. That is a false charity which claims greater liberality than God displayed in ordaining unto eternal life every sinner whom he chose in Christ Jesus before the world began. Even common reason should show the absurdity of that pretended benevolence by which men who hate the holiness of God are offered a chance to avail themselves of the privilege of loving him, while it is impossible that they should ever be willing to accept such an offer. The natural man has no other mind but that which is carnal; and even in the saints it is positively declared that "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace; because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be; so then they that are in the flesh cannot please God."—Rom. viii. 6-8. The fallacy concealed under the pretence of anxiety for the accountability of man, is the real denial of the just condemnation of all men as sinners already guilty before God. All false doctrines agree in denying this truth, and in representing the matter of salvation as resting upon the choice of the sinner here in time. None of the devices of the natural mind ever claim to present salvation for sinners already lost. Yet these are the only sinners whom Jesus came to save. To such utterly destitute ones alone is the grace of God revealed unto salvation from their sins. Certainly there is no scriptural warrant for preaching that by their own will such as love sin may attain to the love of righteousness. To them that perish the preaching of the cross is foolishness; will our friend claim that they might be instructed by preaching to know the power of God in that same foolishness? If not, then they are not benefited by the preaching; but if they can be made to know God by the word of the preacher, then they receive eternal life through that word. This is too manifestly absurd to require a word of argument in its condemnation. The gospel can never be preached in truth to any but the chief of sinners, who are poor in spirit, lost in hopeless guilt, and entirely without strength. To such helpless ones it is glad tidings of great joy to hear that "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."

The inconsistency of that preacher who sometimes gives strong sermons on doctrine, while at other times declaring that a man may believe the truth of God, and yet be lost, may result from his own utter ignorance of what he is saying. This is the most favorable view of his case. The more probable explanation is that he knows the literal truth of the doctrine which he preaches, but has not received the love of it; such belief causes devils to tremble. The omnipotent grace of God alone can deliver one from that power of darkness.

Now, in reference to the text submitted for our views, it will be needful that we be brief in its discussion. By the Spirit of Christ Paul was shown that the words quoted from the thirteenth chapter of Deuteronomy are fulfilled only as testifying of Christ. He is the Word, to whom Moses and all the inspired prophets give witness. This Word is not to be brought again from the dead by a messenger whom men shall send; neither is he to be brought down from above by the efforts of men. To every one who is called by the grace of God from death to life it is declared in our text that this Word is nigh that chosen subject of electing love. As if in anticipation of the perversion of this truth suggested by the preacher to whom our inquirer refers, the apostle defines just how nigh the Word is to the believer. It is not just near enough to be of no benefit to him. It is even in the mouth and heart of him to whom this divine assurance is given. This is the Word of faith, not the word of appeal to dead sinners. While the religious world is full of the preaching of works as the basis of salvation, the preaching of inspired apostles is the Word of faith. Not only is this Word itself the living power of God unto salvation; it gives eternal life to every one in whose heart it is shed abroad by the Holy Ghost which is given unto them. Surely no sane man will claim that the eternal purpose of God is dependent upon the consent of dead sinners for its fulfillment. Not only would such a claim necessarily deny the sovereignty of God, but it would involve also the denial of his perfect knowledge, since there could be no knowledge of what the will of man might decide until it should be developed in time. Hence, it is evident that there can be no consistency in any system which represents the salvation of sinners as conditioned upon their own choice. Nor does it avoid this absurdity when it is conceded that God has certain foreknowledge of the final destiny of all his creatures. If this concession means anything it must be that it means that every event must be precisely as God has foreknown it. But this is the absolute predestination of all things. The only possible escape from the truth in this theory is in the assumption that the choice of the sinner or some other power has fixed the result, instead of ascribing it to the eternal purpose and wisdom of God.

The text asserts without condition and positively to the character addressed that "The Word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart." It is difficult to conceive how this can be distorted into a declaration that "The Word was nigh thee, ready to be appropriated into the mouth and heart, if taken advantage of." And even if such a translation might be made, it could not change the fact that none could be benefited by that divine Word but such as have received the love of the truth, that they might be saved. So the enemies of the doctrine of Christ would not have gained any advantage even though they could thus change the inspired testimony. There would also be a necessity for changing the remaining portion of our text to correspond with the alteration of this clause. It should not be "that is, the word of faith, which we preach." To sustain the proposed perversion it must read, "even the choice of the sinner." In no place has this false doctrine been preached by inspired men; hence it will be necessary to refer it to the original preacher of the free will of man. His discourse will be found in Gen. iii. 1-5. He converted the woman, and the earth has ever since groaned under the consequent curse. His emissaries have never given up the business of making converts, but zealously labor even to this day in the same work. There is no difficulty in detecting his teachings, since it is always in contradiction of the truth which God has spoken.

There is no other character who can be the subject of the salvation of which our text speaks, but that one in whose mouth and heart is the living Word. By the faith of the Son of God alone can this Word be received as the Lord Jesus, "Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification."—Rom. iv. 25. "Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."—1 Cor. xii. 3. For any one destitute of the indwelling Spirit of God to confess with his mouth that Jesus is the Lord, could be nothing better than the uttering of words without knowledge. None can truly bear witness of that which is not certainly known by him. They who are led by the Spirit of God alone can truthfully confess the Lord Jesus; they only know him as the Savior of his people from their sins. For any others to confess him as their Savior would be to testify to that of which they were ignorant; and all such testimony is false. It is impossible that any should believe in his heart that God has raised Jesus from the dead, except those in whose heart it is revealed by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto the chosen vessels of mercy. There can be no sincerity in that confession with the mouth which is not authorized and sustained by the belief of the truth in the heart.

There can be no need of argument on the closing expression of the text. Only that belief which is sincere in the heart can be unto righteousness; and that belief can only be manifested as expressed with the mouth, or by open confession. This cannot teach that the salvation of the saints from death and sin is dependent upon their belief or their confession. That salvation is complete in the finished work of redemption which Jesus came to perform. Nothing can ever be added to that salvation by all the belief and confession of all the subjects of electing love. The salvation which results from that confession which is rendered "with the mouth," is deliverance here in this temporal state from the bondage of delusion and false doctrines which are set for the purpose of entangling the saints in the snares of the adversary. There is no other character for whom these snares are set but the subjects of divine grace, who are chosen in Christ unto eternal deliverance.

The whole argument in this chapter and its connection is directed to showing that the salvation which is by the blood of Jesus is not limited to the tribes of natural Israel. The observance of this fact will relieve the perplexity which may bewilder the believer in failing to notice the subject under consideration. The unavoidable condemnation of every conditionalist theory is plainly recorded in the subsequent context. "So then, faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." There can be no belief without that faith which is the only evidence on which belief can be predicated; and since no created power can produce faith, it is certain that none can believe the truth but as it is the pleasure of God to give them the testimony of faith. Then there is salvation from temporal assaults of the adversary in that confession which is made with the mouth.

THANKS!

THE kind and efficient aid which the brethren and friends are rendering in increasing the circulation of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES is truly encouraging. Although the extremely low rates at which we are receiving additions to our subscription list do not more than pay the extra expense of sending the paper to the new subscribers, yet we feel highly gratified in the increase of the circulation of the paper, and hereby tender our sincere thanks to all who are interesting themselves in its behalf.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

(Continued from page 395.)

and redemption; and not only mine, but I have seen the perfection of the church in him, and lost sight of myself. It has been no cross to me to not mingle with the world and enter into its pleasures, for the fullness of Jesus which I have received has more than satisfied me. You know more fully than any one how I have been led, for I wrote to you at the very first of the change which had taken place, and have felt free to write to you ever since; and yet, when I feel as I do now, it seems as if I have scarcely touched the theme which gives me so much joy, the precious blood of Jesus, cleansing me from all sin; for without shedding of blood there could be no remission of sins. "A sense of pardoning love," a sweet evidence that I am included among those for whom he died, and my sins forever blotted out, "a hope that triumphs over death." Yes, dear brother, Jesus conquered death, hell and the grave. He has been wrought in my soul the hope of glory.

"Our Jesus is the christian's hope,
Wrought in us by God's power;
It holds the weak believer up
In the distressing hour."

Surely the joy and gladness in my heart is not of the world, for if it were so I could do something to retain it; but in a short time I may be destitute of all this sweet peace, and not be able to claim a single evidence that I have been born again. Then, when by faith I see Jesus again, this new song, "even praise unto God," will be put into my mouth, and the way I have been led will all seem new to me. I have had only one theme, salvation by grace, since I was brought from nature's darkness into his marvelous light, and the love of God shed abroad in my heart. It makes no difference whether I write of election, predestination or the resurrection; the power, wisdom and love of God must be brought to view. Jesus and his finished work must be the foundation, the building, the headstone; and we must always say, "Grace, grace unto it." Isaiah said, "Let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. Let them give glory unto the Lord, and declare his praise in the islands." I would like to express the melody in my heart so that you could understand that I am rejoicing in the evidence that I am one of the inhabitants of the Rock, Christ Jesus, and cannot help singing,

"Jesus, thy boundless love to me
No thought can reach, no tongue declare."

That in spite of the weakness and sinfulness of the flesh I am giving glory unto the Lord and declaring his praise. O what a beautiful, wonderful song it is! I hope as you read this letter the Lord will enable you to behold a bleeding Savior, and give you a sense of pardoning love; and then your heart will be filled with the same song, your spiritual ears will hear my glad song of triumph, and perhaps you will find yourself singing these words with me,

"All hail the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

Well, dear brother, I have written many words for you to read, and I should hesitate to send it; but you are so accustomed to my long letters and my much speaking that I know the love and fellowship you have for me will cover all failings. I would like to step in and hear Elder Keene preach; for the brethren are so glad he has come there to live with them that it would be pleasant to hear them express their gladness. I know that I should hear the name of Jesus exalted, God honored and glorified, in every sentence of his sermon. I feel the Lord is good to us to give us one whom he has made so well capable of declaring the truth.

But I shall have another sheet of paper if I am not careful, and I do not wish to weary you. Give my love to sister Susie Woolford. I am so sorry for her; but she is in the care of our God, who is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. He can comfort and sustain her. I am glad you are in usual health, and hope the Lord will make us all realize something of his goodness to us every moment of our lives. Mother and father and sister Susie join me in love to you all. I hope to hear from you again when you have the time to spare. I will not ask you to answer my letters, for that seems an impossibility to me.

Your sister in hope,

ATTIE A. CURTIS.

SANDUSKY, Ala., Nov. 20, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The associational season for this year is over in these parts. I have been permitted to be at only two this fall. Our own association convened with the Little Vine Church, about twenty-five miles north of my home, on the 15th, 16th and 17th days of September. Eleven churches reported in peace, and some of them a little increase. Our own church could report but one addition, while our religious neighbors of other orders by the effort system have added to their numbers by the fifties and hundreds. Our own case reminds me of poor old Sarah and Rachel. We can have no increase until the Lord gives it. Our meeting was one of harmony and peace, both in the business and the worship of God. On Saturday it was made known that a sister desired membership with the Little Vine Church; and late in the evening an opportunity was extended by that church, and she came forward and told the dealings of the Lord with her. She was baptized Sunday morning, in due time for the full day's service. Love and peace were manifested to the end, and we all could realize "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," and to part in peace, desirous to meet again, in hope of the presence of the Lord among us again. I went to one of our corresponding associations, about forty miles northwest, and all was harmony and peace there. The parting was the same. On Saturday evening I heard a man preach who has been blind twenty years or more. He stated that he had never read any in his life; but he has had the Scriptures read for him, and he retains and applies them better than many who can read. He lined verbatim the hymn, "Grace! 'tis a charming sound!" and offered fervent prayer. He then arose and quoted his text, in the sixth chapter of John, "For he himself knew what he would do." He quoted sufficiently from the same chapter to show what gave rise to the text, and then used it successfully and appropriately for an hour or more, making it manifest that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. In the case of this man, without eyesight or education, "Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" in calling the blind and illiterate to declare the unsearchable riches of Christ in this late age of the world? It is said that the "Rev. Sam Jones" had an audience of about eight thousand people in the city of Birmingham last night, and from what I hear his discourse was a tirade mostly upon the wicked; not a morsel of food for a saint. I am satisfied that the poor blind man can tell more of Jesus and salvation in one short discourse than has ever been revealed to poor Sam. Should he ever receive the high calling of God in Christ Jesus he will then be able to see that what the law saith, it saith to them that are under the law; and he will then begin to try to speak "comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." I do not envy such men, and would not put one straw in their way to obstruct their success; but I cannot appreciate such as true gospel ministers.

The husband of the sister that joined the church in time of the association has joined since. I was at a church near Jasper, forty miles away, on the first Sunday, when a brother who lives in the town joined. Elder Kitchens and myself, by request, spoke in the Methodist house in the town on Saturday night. I had never been in the town before. I found the people social and generous; and I received so many invitations that I feel inclined to visit there again. There are more sheep in that town who know the joyful sound of salvation by grace. There had been a tent meeting there the week before by a "Missionary Evangelist," and from what I could learn his tirade was about like that of Sam

Jones; but they say he got enough change to get off to the World's Fair. One aged lady remarked that she had been told of her meanness often enough; she knew all about that, better than they could tell it, and she wanted to hear something else. Such is an evidence that they do not feed the sheep; and abusing sinners will not make sheep of them.

So far as I can hear from all our corresponding churches, all are in peace. I visited but the one association of our correspondence. Our association is twenty-seven years old. There are eleven churches, and six ordained ministers, or Elders. The regular time to convene is always on Friday before the third Sunday in September. Our Articles of Faith embrace the doctrine of one true and living God, the doctrine of original sin, the total depravity of man, election, effectual calling, the final preservation of the saints, baptism, the Lord's supper, and the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. The terms "predestination" and "vital unity" do not occur in our articles; but the doctrine of election, effectual calling and the resurrection of the just could not be preached with any certainty and yet leave out the other two principles. All the saints of every nationality have spiritual life in Christ, were all chosen in him before the foundation of the world, were predestinated unto the adoption of children, to be conformed to the image of Christ, and in due time each one will be called with a holy calling. By one Spirit all are baptized into one body, So "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." This seems to be a close union.

Our Articles of Faith also assert that the Scriptures are the only rule of faith and practice; and none of our churches nor corresponding churches will recognize any of the old or new institutions of men, no matter how lamb-like they may appear. I am satisfied that if a member were to join the "Farmers' Alliance" he would be excluded, if he could not be reclaimed; because we do not affiliate with any of these things. Some decide that we oppose them, but we do not. We are willing for others to have just as many institutions as they want, and we do not interfere with them. If we believed in them, many of us have not the money to pay so many entrance fees and monthly dues, and have not the time to visit so many lodges. We cannot contribute as much as we desire to the poor saints, and our church duties are not as full every time as we would like. We are commanded to keep ourselves from idols.

Yours in hope of life eternal,
P. J. POWELL.

TALKVILLE, Ala., Feb. 5, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The good Lord still spares my unprofitable life, and gives me poor health and a feeble body; but I feel thankful, and will praise his holy name. David has said, "The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works." I am glad that I am permitted again to pen you a few lines, and to express in my poor way my gratitude to you and those dear brethren who have been kind enough to send us the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I know it is the Lord's doings, for I am taught that every good and perfect gift comes down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variable-ness nor shadow of turning. I wonder many times how we could live and do without the precious paper. It contains all the preaching we have. I know of but two Old Baptists in this country. I have heard but one sermon in three years. We have good, kind neighbors and friends, and I love them. No doubt many of them are children of God; but we do not agree on the doctrine, and seldom talk on the subject. I read the SIGNS, and am satisfied I can live upon and digest what it contains. It brings forth things both new and old. But reading that paper has not made me a predestinarian; I have been one for several years; but it has unfolded many things that were hidden. I believe in the predestination of all things, small and great. I believe the Lord is in everything, and controls this world. We are here in this dark corner of the world, shut out from preaching, and are the poorest of the poor. We ask, Why is it so? I read, "The Lord maketh rich, and the Lord maketh poor." Again, "I know thy poverty; but thou art rich." I do feel that the Lord has blessed us in our extreme poverty, and that I have gained much wisdom thereby. I would not exchange my lot with many that are rich. I would not be as I was years ago, before poverty, sorrows and afflictions came. David says, "Before I was afflicted I went astray." Even our dear Savior, "Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." I feel sure of one thing, that we will have as much and more than we deserve. I feel to be unworthy, poor and sinful; and if a child of God, I am the least of all. I am not afraid of starving, but I have been afraid we would have to do without the SIGNS. I think more of it than anything else we have on the place.

Dear brethren and sisters, one and all, pray for us and our children. I feel that we need the prayers of God's people. I have heard of an Old Baptist, Elder Presley, passing through and preaching at this place three months ago, before we came here. I wish he would come again. I hope the Lord will send us a preacher, for I would love to hear preaching once more.

With love for you, dear brethren, and all the readers of the SIGNS, I am your unworthy sister in affliction, MARIA N. BOGLE.

JULY 11, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR SIRS:—I have lately heard a sermon by a New School Baptist minister on the text Rom. x. 8-10, which he called "the plan of salvation," and which, he affirmed, was so simple that any person could avail himself of its benefits and be saved; "and yet," he said, "in the face of all that the Savior had done for them, some will rush thoughtlessly on to the flames of hell and be damned." He said that election and predestination were glorious Bible truths which a man could believe and be lost at last. He said the sinner had nothing to do with doctrine; that his place is to attest his election by his belief, according to the plan laid down in the word. Among other things he said that the rendering in the eighth verse was incomplete, inasmuch as the idea to be conveyed was that the word is nigh thee, "ready to be appropriated into the mouth and heart, if taken advantage of." This same minister sometimes gives strong sermons on doctrine, which in connection with such a talk as the above, seems very confusing and bewildering.

Kindly give your opinion of such characters, through the SIGNS, at your earliest convenience, and an exposition of the Scripture named. The Old School Baptists believe in the predestination of all things; that the path of a man is marked out from his birth; and yet it is not considered amiss to caution, advise and teach every one to take the right course in the world; to be honest, straight and correct in every particular. Can the gospel be preached consistently in the same way to the unregenerate? It may be said that all such admonitions are addressed to the saints; but are not even the saints just as powerless to move in the right way as are the wicked, unless guided by the Almighty?

Yours truly,

J. A. L.

(Editorial reply on page 396.)

PATMAN, TEXAS, May 10, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I would like to say something about the great mercies of God, as he has said, "I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Our God in his wisdom could well say so; for in the eternal purpose which he purposed in himself was provided the great sacrifice, which has forever perfected all them that are sanctified. In Christ dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. He is the power of God, manifested to take away our sins; not for a season only, but forever. So the sinner by him is made perfect. O glorious thought, that the sinner has an offering made for his sins which is acceptable with God. And not only this, but the same Jesus is exalted a Prince and a Savior to give repentance unto Israel and remission of sins. These thoughts are consoling to a sinner like me, saved by grace if saved at all. Where are those whose hope is in the Lord? By their fruits ye shall know them. As every tree is known by its fruit, so the good seed will produce the good tree, which will bring forth good fruit. And surely none can speak reproachfully of the seed that produced it, which is Christ, or be dissatisfied because he worketh all things after the counsel of his own will; for his work is to do the Father's will, whose will is that of all the Father hath given him he should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last-day. On this, and this alone, is all my hope for salvation.

Yours in gospel bonds,

W. B. JOHNSON.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Greenville Old School, or Predestinarian Baptist Association, held with the Refuge Church, at Spencer-ville, Allen Co., Ohio, September 1st, 2nd & 3d, 1893, to the churches composing the same, sends this her annual letter of love, and comments upon this subject as suitable to the occasion.

THERE is no subject so dear to us as that of God's love; and therefore we quote the brief text "Love is of God." This text implies that God is not only love, but that real love proceeds from God as its only source. That which bears the semblance or image of love among men often proves to be the effect of lasciviousness or sordid selfishness, and ceases when passion fails, or disappointment cheats them of their selfish desires; but with God there is no change. "Having loved his own, he loved them to the end." His love had no beginning, and can have no end. He loved them with an everlasting love, and therefore with loving-kindness he draws them. The eternal love of God proves the eternity of the beings loved; their life in Christ coexisted with his love; and each created vessel of mercy in time receives a measure of the Spirit, a gift of life, a partaking of the divine nature, in the operations of the new birth, which in no sense changes the element of either the life received by, or the life created in, the vessel of mercy in Adam. The vessels of mercy as created in Adam were, in their created natures, no different from the vessels of wrath, but were by nature the vessels of wrath, even as others, and, as such, could not have been loved because of their innate goodness foreknown, but only because of God's own purpose and grace which he purposed in himself (where their divine life existed in eternal union with Christ) before the world began. While the love that is of God contemplated his children as he predestinated them to be in their final glory, it also viewed them in all the intermediate relations of their existence, spiritual and natural. Through each successive station, from the eternity of the first choice, God's love followed them in all their members, faculties and functions of life, action and temporal death, and no condition of existence in relation to their birth in time-innocence or guilt, poverty or riches, ignominy or fame, weakness or strength, ignorance or knowledge, has ever biased that eternal love that provided full and complete provisions of grace for the chosen vessels of mercy afore prepared unto glory. The absolute love of God absolutely decreed the infinite variety of circumstances attending the life and being of each saint, to demonstrate to each individual the final wisdom of his infinite purpose; but we, as sinners, may seriously inquire as to the evidence that God loves us. If we love God, it can only be by a return of the same love wherewith he loved us before the world began. Ye may know that ye are of God if ye have love one for another. The experimental evidences that God loves us, and that we love God, are manifest only as fruits of the Spirit, which are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, temperance, faith: against such there is no law." Do we love God's words whatever they may be? Are we resigned to whatever he purposes concerning us? Are we in some sense in accord with whatever he has spoken to our hearts or revealed in his word as our duties toward him, his people, or the world at large, and desirous of fulfilling his commandments? If these duties are impressed upon us, if the desires of our hearts are daily in exercise for holiness, and in hatred for sin, if we prefer Jerusalem above our chief joy, if our waiting souls are anxiously looking forward by faith for a joyous acceptance of the glory and the fullness of God, these can but comfort us and sustain us as the evidences of God's love, and are sweetly applied to our comfort under each trial in life; but their chief sweetness is only to feel that all are blessed to us under the kind love of an ever-gracious Father, and prompts us to desire the most closely to follow God's law of love, and not a law of compulsion.

Dear brethren, are we thus actuated in our private and public walk before the world? Are we honest, virtuous and upright in the sight of God and man? If so, we should rejoice that God alone hath made us thus to differ from many others, that we may lovingly appreciate his favor and praise him forever.

Finally, brethren, may this love direct us all to accept God's appointments in love, whether they seem joyous or grievous, that we may honor him in our bodies and in our spirits, which are his, knowing that no obedience is acceptable to God which is prompted by fear, restraint or compulsion. "Love is the fulfilling of the law," and the only evidence through obedience manifested, that we love God and that God loves us.

A. B. BREES.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Mount Enon Primitive Baptist Association, in session with the Kissimmee Church, Osceola Co., Fla., to all sister Associations with whom she corresponds, sends christian love and salutation.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—In the mercy and providence of God we have been once more permitted to meet in the capacity of an association. Our representation is full, and peace and harmony prevail throughout our borders, and we have been enabled to transact the business without confusion or discord; for which we desire to thank and bless his holy name. We also desire to express our gratitude to God for the messengers which have been sent us laden with the glad tidings of the gospel of peace. Dear brethren we desire a continuation of your correspondence.

Our next session will be held with the Empire Church, Lake Co., Fla., three and one-half miles south of Mascott, on the O. B. R. R., convening on Friday before the second Sunday in November, 1894, at which time and place, if the Lord will, we hope to meet you again.

D. S. STOVER, Mod.

M. L. GILBERT, Clerk.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Abraham Park was born in Bourbon Co., Ky., Feb. 14th, 1809, and died Nov. 21st, 1893, aged 84 years, 9 months and 7 days.

He moved with his parents to Muhlenberg, and from thence to Bartholomew Co., Ind., where he married Miss Ruth Lee, who survives him. In 1851 he moved to Marion Co., Iowa, and settled on the farm where he died. Ten children were born to them, eight of whom are left to mourn their loss of a dear father. He was such a man that to know him was to love him. He wore the badge of honor all his life. He was in deed and truth a father to the fatherless and a friend to the widow. It was his high ambition to administer to the poor and needy. His honest, honorable and upright life was all the profession he ever made, although he was a Baptist sympathizer. May God bless this sad bereavement to the remaining family. May we all die the death of the righteous, and may our last end be like his.

JOHN BIXLER.

Mrs. Mary H. Staples, wife of Gilbert B. Staples, was born in North Berwick, Maine, and died of consumption, August 9th, 1893, aged 29 years, 4 months and 3 days.

After the death of her baby boy, some fourteen months ago, her bodily health declined until the Lord released her from this mortal tenement. She never made a public profession of religion, but was enabled to be very patient in all her sickness. The night on which she closed her eyes in death she talked to those around of hearing sounds of sweet music, and tried to sing herself; but her dying, faltering tongue could not express what we hope was the heavenly melody felt in her soul. Just before she died she told her sorrowing mother that she felt reconciled.

She leaves her husband and baby boy, with her parents, two brothers and her sister, to mourn her departure. Elder Hiram Campbell attended her funeral and preached the blessed gospel of Christ.

and spoke comforting words to the bereaved ones. Our sister, Mrs. Daniel Quint, finds expression in being bereaved of her daughter in the words,

"Dearest daughter, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

May the God of all consolation comfort the hearts of the sorrowing ones, is the desire of

FRED. W. KEENE.

NORTH BERWICK, Maine, Dec. 1, 1893.

OUR aged sister, Mary Sparks, widow of Samuel Sparks, died Nov. 19th, 1893, aged 88 years and 25 days.

She was born in Warren Co., Ohio, in 1805, was married to Samuel Sparks in 1825, moved to Sangamon Co., Ill., in 1834, and after two years moved to Logan Co., Ill., in the neighborhood where she lived until the Master called her home. She became a Baptist in her youth, and held the profession of her faith until the last. She was an orderly, true follower of Jesus. She leaves seven children, and many grand and great-grandchildren, to mourn their loss. After she became a widow, seventeen years ago, she made her home with her youngest son, Samuel, who has done well his part. May the Lord reward him.

Sister Sparks was a loving and careful mother, a good friend, and a consistent christian. May her example be a light to us all in patient waiting for the Master's coming. The writer tried to speak words of comfort to the family and assembled neighbors.

ALSO,

OUR beloved brother, Jesse Owens, died suddenly of heart failure at his home near Maroa, Nov. 24th, 1893.

The deceased was an orderly, earnest follower of the dear Redeemer, laboring for the peace and unity of the church, and always at his place of duty. He was a member of the New Providence Church, in De Witt Co., Ill., being baptized by the writer about the year 1875. He leaves the church, an afflicted widow and three children, with many friends, to mourn their loss.

He was born in Posey Co., Ind., Aug. 12th, 1832, and was married to Maria Stuart Oct. 12th, 1856. He was laid in the Old Baptist grave-yard, where two others of the same church have been so lately laid—Deacon David Squires and his aged companion. I tried to speak words of comfort to the brethren, the family and neighbors at the residence of brother Owens on Nov. 28th; after which he was buried to await the last summons.

J. H. RING.

MT. PULASKI, Ill., Dec. 1, 1893.

DIED—In Palatine, Ellis Co., Kansas, August 16th, 1893, Edgar M. Tatum, aged 38 years, 1 month and 1 day.

The deceased was born in Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and moved in the fall of 1878 to Salt Creek township, Mitchell Co., Kansas. His health was very poor for several years, the result of a sunstroke in the summer of 1877. It affected his eyes so that he was never afterward able to read nor to write, more than to sign his name to his business papers. He was married to Miss Julia Ellen Butler, July 16th, 1881, and moved to Palatine, Ellis Co., Kansas, in the spring of 1892. He leaves his dear wife, one son, two daughters, his father, mother, four brothers and three sisters to mourn the loss of one who was near and dear to us all; yet we mourn not as those without hope, as we believe that he was a subject of divine grace.

His health was very poor, and he was under sore trouble of mind in the winter of 1883. He brought his wife and came to stay at our house, as he said he felt so bad that he could not stay at home. I thought his ill health was the cause of his feeling so bad; but my eldest daughter, Mrs. Julia A. Blair, who had come from her home in Osceola Co., Iowa, to make us a visit in the autumn, told me she believed that Edgar was under trouble of mind, and that he would never get well until he met with a change. At times he sat despondent, and seemed to lose all interest in everything. His trouble settled over him so much that it seemed to me he looked like one who was condemned to die. About two o'clock one night in April his wife told me that Edgar thought he was going to die, and that he wanted his grandfather and myself to pray for him. We hastened to him, and his grandfather prayed for him, and I also tried in my feeble way to pray for him; but before I had finished he commenced to rejoice, and exclaimed, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God almighty! just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints!" "Bless the Lord, O my soul; praise his holy name for his goodness to the children of men." "O that all men would praise the Lord; for he has all power. He can heal in the twinkling of an eye. Ma, have strong faith in God; he will save his people. Do not fear to trust him. O praise his holy name!" He continued praising the Lord for two long hours, until he could only whisper the words. His father was in Iowa on business at that time; but his brother, who was staying with us, said, "Ma, Edgar is going to die." But I answered, "No, he is going to get well." His health improved from that time on; yet he had heart trouble at times, but was able to be up most of the time. At the time of his death he had felt better than usual; had worked all day cleaning out his well in the barn; had eaten his breakfast and dinner, and had not complained; but about three o'clock he dropped dead while watering his horses at the well he had just fixed. His wife had gone to look after the cattle, as he feared they would get out of the pasture, and there was no one near but his three little children. His little seven-year-old son ran to him and tried to raise his head; but he only gasped a few times and was gone. When his wife returned she sent for the neighbors and a physician, but he said that nothing could have done him any good.

It is so hard for us in our declining years; but we hope to be with him at rest ere long. He never joined any church, but firmly believed in the Predestinarian Baptist doctrine, salvation by grace, and not by works.

His sorrowing mother,

JANE TATUM.

APPOINTMENTS.

PROVIDENCE permitting, Elder A. B. Francis, of Virginia, will preach for the church at New Vernon, N. Y., on Sunday, Jan. 14th, 1894, at 10:30 a. m., and at Middletown at 3:00 p. m. of the same day.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Margaret Craven, Pa., 1, Mrs. T. V. Richardson, Md., 2.—Total, $3.00.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE time is fast drawing near when the question, "What shall I get for a Christmas present?" will be the inquiry. We would suggest that you look over our list of books advertised on last page and see if you cannot find something there that will be appropriate. The cloth-bound books of "Editorials" we will mail from now until Christmas, both volumes, for three dollars.

The extra inducements we offer for new subscribers to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES will enable almost any one to order a copy for their friend, which will make a lasting present.

SPECIAL OFFER.

FROM now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars, and we will send additional new ones at one dollar each.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us one more dollar for two new names, and one dollar each for additional new subscribers.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

Ever since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c, costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1893.

NO. 51.

POETRY.

THE DECEITFUL HEART.

A HEART I have, O what a heart!
That's filled with murder, lust and pride;
That seeks vain glory and applause,
And every evil thing beside.
It claims the homage of the world,
And grieves if honors be denied;
And oft are imprecations hurled Against these things that chain its pride.
It lusts for mines of silver, gold,
And feasts upon the sordid sight;
And loathes to quit its hateful hold
Of riches brought within its might.
To gratify its large desire
It many false ways doth invent;
And in the farthest ends of earth
I often find its errands sent.
Sometimes to good I feel inclined,
Or hope at least it is the case;
But soon I feel a wandering mind,
And legions soon possess the place.
A heart I have, O what a heart!
Bow down to it, ye saints of God!
'Twould be your judge (blasphemous thought!)
And rule you with both rod and sword.
Let worldlings boast with righteous face,
And vainly purge themselves from sin;
They cannot understand my case,
Nor to my captive soul come in.
Let brethren err in word or deed,
Can I condemn them for their sin
While my own ways deserve my heed,
And such a heart I have within?
Lord, haste the time when I no more Shall feel the plague of heart within;
But on yon happy, happy shore
Drink everlasting pleasures in.

THOMAS COLE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ELECTION.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETH-REN:—This Bible doctrine of election has been the belief, the hope and the solace of the people of God in all ages. All who have believed in salvation solely by the grace of God, in opposition to the theory so pleasing to the pride of men, that salvation is by our works or conditions of our performance, either in whole or in part, have always felt themselves shut up to a belief in election. It has always seemed to them that if the doctrine of election be denied, then salvation by grace is a mere notion, a hope entirely unsupported by any proof, and utterly false.
Therefore all who believe in salvation by grace feel to contend that the choice of God, and not the choice of the creature, is the moving and effectual cause of this great work of redemption; and so election must always be to them a sweet and precious and God-honoring theme, fraught with the greatest comfort to the believer, while it humbles him, and gloriously exalts the name of his God and Savior. I have, ever since I first hoped in the mercy of God, rather than in my own goodness or obedience, felt that this theme was most precious to me, and have ever rejoiced to speak of it in my ministry when my mind has been led to it in any way. I feel a desire to write upon this theme for the SIGNS to-day such things as occur to me, and I trust that it may prove to be for the comfort and edification of all who have ever felt the power of the Savior's own words, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain;" or of these other words, "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts," &c.

Like every other precious doctrine of the word relating to our salvation, this doctrine has often been perverted and abused by those who know not the grace of God, and has often been a source of perplexity to many honest inquirers, and many who know that if saved at all they must be saved by grace. Such expressions as these are common when we present the Bible doctrine of election:
"It makes God out to be unjust."
"God is unjust if he does not give all a chance to be saved." "You believe that God made a part of mankind to be saved and a part to be lost." "If this doctrine be true, then let a man do all the good he can, if not chosen he must be lost; and let another do all the evil he can, and if chosen he must be saved." These and many other things are said about it. To all these we might reply by simply pointing to the plain, simple declarations of God's word, and by saying, as did Paul in the much-hated ninth chapter of Romans,
"Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?
Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor and another unto dishonor?" In this text the word "power" means "right"—he has a right to do this; and when in this chapter Paul says that it is written that God loved Jacob and hated Esau, and decreed that the elder should serve the younger, before the children had been born, or had done good or evil, whether it refers to Jacob and Esau personally, or rather to their descendants, and in whatever sense it is said that God loved the one and hated the other, this much at least is beyond controversy, viz., that Paul here teaches that our God chooses men to salvation according to his own will, and without any regard to their good works, and passes by others.

But besides this, there are other answers which we can make to these above-named objections; and first, election does not involve injustice in God, even according to human ideas of justice. It simply involves the idea of abounding mercy. All men have sinned, and all men simply merit eternal wrath. Those who perish are not dealt with unjustly.
All are justly under the curse. The first lesson which the Spirit of God taught the penitent thief was the justice of his condemnation. The first lesson taught the children of God who may read this is the justice of their own condemnation. Therefore our God might have left all, old and young, to perish, and his justice could not have been impeached. He was under no obligations to save any being who had sinned, and we all had sinned; therefore election does not show injustice, but simply mercy upon whom he will have mercy.
Election injures no one. It is not responsible for the condemnation of any man, but it is worthy of everlasting hosannas as the ground, the only ground, upon which any can be saved.

Second. Election does not imply any such statement as this, "God made a part of mankind to be saved and a part to be lost." "God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions," is the testimony of the word. Election finds men sinners already, and has to do with them as sinners. Election has nothing to do with making men sinners; neither has it anything to do with the condemnation of any man.
Election relates alone to the choice of men who are already sinners, and already condemned to salvation.

Third. Election does not involve the horrible notion that a man must be lost if non-elected, no matter how much he may want to do good, and love and serve God; nor that a man must be saved if elected, no matter how bad he is. No man could by any possibility advance such a statement as this unless he were utterly confused in his mind as to what election is, and as to its relation to salvation. It is sufficient to answer that the same God who has chosen a man to salvation has chosen him unto good works, and through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth; so that the best evidence of election is that a man feels the curse and burden of his sins, and wants to be saved from his sins; while the man who loves sin and lives in sin shows no evidence that he is chosen to salvation. If such an one has been elected, the same grace that chose him will so work in his heart that afterward he also shall choose God with all his heart, even as God has first chosen him.

But now we must ask, Is election a scriptural doctrine? This is the supreme test. If there be no "Thus saith the Lord" for it, no matter what our reasonings may be, we are not bound to believe it; while if it be stated in the Scriptures we are bound to accept and believe it, no matter how much our reasonings may condemn it. I trust I am writing to those who believe that the Bible, every word of it, is just as God would have it, and that all its teachings are his will revealed to men. I will not here occupy space to quote every text where the words elect, election, choice or chosen occur, because it is not needful, and to do so would occupy too much space. Isaiah xlv.
4: "Israel mine elect." Isaiah lxxv.
9: "Mine elect shall inherit it."
Matthew xxiv. 22 and Mark xiii. 20:
"For the elect's sake." Luke xviii.
7: "Avenge his own elect." See also Mark xiii. 22-27. Romans viii. 33:
"Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" Colossians iii. 12: "Put on therefore, as the elect of God," &c. 1 Peter i. 2:
"Elect according to the foreknowl-edge of God." See also Romans ix.
11, xi. 5, 1 Thess. i. 4, 2 Peter i. 10.
John xv. 16: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." Acts
ix. 15: "He is a chosen vessel."
Romans xvi. 13: "Chosen in the Lord." Ephesians i. 4: "According as he hath chosen us in him," &c.
1 Peter ii. 9: "A chosen generation," &c. Psalm lxxv. 4: "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth," &c. Also every type relating to the people of Israel, and all that is said about them, teaches the doctrine of election. These Scriptures to which I have referred, and others to which I could refer, not only teach the doctrine of election, but also show that it is a doctrine common to the Old Testament as well as the New, and that it was often in the minds of the inspired writers, and that it is closely interwoven with their teaching regarding many of the great mysteries of our salvation. But perhaps the thought may arise, It is true, choice and election are common words in the Bible. None are so foolish as to deny this. But what kind of an election is taught there, and upon what ground is it based? Therefore it is well to examine their teaching a little more particularly.

First. It is not a time election; it is an election from before time. We might argue this from the doctrine of the unchangeability of Jehovah, with whom there can be no new purpose or knowledge, and who therefore cannot choose now what he has not from all eternity chosen, nor determine the salvation of any man now whose salvation was not determined from all eternity; but we have besides plain scriptural testimony to this doctrine. It will be sufficient to quote two or three expressions: "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God."—1 Peter i. 2. "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world."—Eph. i. 4. "Who hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation."—2 Thess. ii. 13. Certainly if language can prove anything, these Scriptures directly show that this election took place before time, according to God's foreknowledge, before the foundation of the world, from the beginning; and whose farthest thought ever reached far enough back to find the place or time of "the beginning?"

Second. It is a personal election; that is, it is not an election of a nation or family, but of individuals. Under the old covenant Israel was chosen as a nation or family from among other families of the earth to fill a temporary place and to serve a temporary end; but this was not to the salvation which is in Christ, and which is consummated in eternal glory. Now God has chosen persons to eternal life, and deals with persons or individuals in his work of grace. Thus Jesus said to the twelve, "I have chosen you," that is, these persons to whom he was speaking; and the saints at Ephesus were the chosen ones. In short, in the New Testament all is personal. God is presented as dealing with souls—the souls of men individually.

Third. Election is unconditional; that is, it is not based upon foreseen good works of ours, nor upon anything whatever save the absolute purpose of God. Paul plainly settles this in Romans ix. and in Ephesians i. In the latter he says that the very design of election is that we should be holy. The election is before the holiness, and the holiness is the result of the election, and therefore manifestly cannot be the cause of it; and in Romans ix. Paul expressly and of purpose says that the choice of Jacob, whether as a man or as a people, was upon grounds totally irrespective of his good or evil works. If anything is settled then by Scripture, it is that election is unconditional. Of course I have instanced but few of the many Scriptures bearing upon these points.

Fourth. It is an election to salvation. It is not an election to an office, to be a nation, nor to any earthly end or advantage. It is true that our Lord has chosen certain men to be apostles, teachers, preachers, and witnesses to his name. It is also true that he has chosen for each one his place and his work in his kingdom; but the texts of Scripture to which I have referred do not relate to these things, but to salvation—salvation from sin and to eternal glory. If they do not relate to this, it would be hard to prove that any portion of the word does relate to final salvation.

Fifth. It is an election of men and women to salvation. The election is to salvation, not because of salvation. "We are chosen to salvation."—2 Thess. ii. 13. The election or choice, then, is of those who need salvation; and surely none but sinners need to be saved. It is an election of men according to the foreknowledge of God the Father. In 1 Peter i. 1 these elect ones are the strangers scattered throughout the various countries named; and in Ephesians i. 4 the saints and faithful brethren at Ephesus are said to be the chosen ones. In Romans viii. 33 Paul throws out the challenge, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth." Here, if anything is taught, it is that the elect needed justification and are justified. This is true of sinful men, but not of beings who are holy. My object in presenting and insisting upon this truth is to show the fallacy and utter unscripturalness as well as unreasonableness of the notion that "eternal spirits," and not men, are the subjects of election. Everywhere in the word "vessels of mercy" are presented as the subjects of God's love and choice. I have often been puzzled when I have seen such views as the one alluded to above, viz., that holy, eternal spirits, and not sinful men, were the elect, to know how it was settled as to what portion of sinful men these elect spirits should enter into here on earth; for I have understood it is held that these spiritual beings do come down, and for a time abide in the bodies of men. Now how, if election of men be not true, is it decided into whose bodies these spirits shall enter and abide if not by election? What utter folly and nonsense all this is! Besides, the very laws of language itself will not allow us to speak of an election without involving the idea also of a passing by, or non-election. If then spirits eternal and holy are elected, what becomes of those holy, eternal spirits who are not elected or chosen? O brethren, let us stick to the old-fashioned simple truth that our God did from all eternity choose some of fallen men to salvation, and did according to his holy and sovereign purpose ordain to pass by the rest, and leave them to perish in their sins.

Sixth. As everything pertaining to salvation is in Christ, so this choice is said to be in Christ. Paul uses the adjunct "in Christ" in his epistles more than seventy times. With him everything is in Christ; not as water is in a cup, but as life is in that which possesses it. Christ himself is all good, all blessing, all comfort, all joy, all help, strength, hope, wisdom and redemption to his people. If we have these things we have them only because we have Jesus. It pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell. He is our life. We have life, eternal life, given us by the blessed Savior, who quickens whom he will; not as a thing separate from Jesus himself, but given us in giving us himself. Christ is our life. So if we are chosen, the choice is also in Christ, as Jesus is first of all and pre-eminently "the elect of God." It is not said that we were in him before the world was, for we were not then created; but the choice was in him, and all spiritual blessings were in him treasured up for those who were the elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father. Let no man blasphemously ascribe the attributes of Jehovah to any other being; and eternity is one of his attributes. There is no other eternal being save Jehovah; and so Paul in Romans xvi. 7 could say that certain brethren were in Christ before himself.

Seventh. Election is in harmony with what the Scriptures teach concerning christian experience. It certainly is in harmony with the experience of the penitent thief, and with the experience of Paul himself. It is in harmony with vital experience to-day. I recall a conversation with a friend some years ago, who was, I believe, a member of the Methodist Church. She said, "I do often enjoy Old School Baptist preaching, and like many things they say; but I cannot understand election." I said, "Tell me your experience first." She then went on to say that her first conviction for sin came to her as she was on the ball-room floor dancing. I said, "Was anything said to cause this feeling to arise?" "No," she said. "Could you put away this conviction?" "No; I tried to do so, for I did not want to leave the room, and I felt that I could not refrain from weeping." "Had you any evidence that any one else felt as you did among the company that night?" "No, I do not suppose any one did." "Now, do you not see," I said, "that the very substance of the doctrine of election is in your own experience? For why should you alone out of the whole company be convicted of sin by the power of the Spirit of God?" She said, "I never thought of it in that way before." It is true of all of us that if we have learned that salvation is all of grace, then we must in the end be blessedly led into this doctrine of personal, unconditional election.

There is a complete chain of harmony in all the doctrine of God our Savior. So if the doctrine of total depravity be true, personal election must be true; for the totally depraved, it is plain, never will of themselves choose God, but God must choose and call them. It is in harmony with effectual calling. It is manifest that there can be no such thing as effectual calling except upon the ground of election; and any calling that goes beyond the doctrine of election in number carries inconsistency upon its face, and practically denies election. Election is in harmony with a definite and finished atonement. A general atonement by the side of election would be altogether incongruous. If election be true, then is particular atonement true. If one be a false doctrine, so is the other. It is also in harmony with the doctrine commonly called the final perseverance of the saints. This has always been seen so plainly that all who have held to the one have also believed the other; for surely if God from all eternity has purposed the salvation of any man, he will to all eternity see that his purpose is fulfilled. Election is God's purpose to save men. Election is also in harmony with God's sovereignty. The one necessarily implies the other. If election is to be carried out, then absolute sovereignty must do it. Election might fail were Jehovah not unlimited in his dominion. It is also in harmony with his foreknowledge of all things. If our God did not from eternity know all time things, then there could be no certainty that the man elected to salvation would ever be born on earth. If election is personal, certain and definite, then all that in any way influenced his birth and growth and continued existence must be positively foreknown; else, as said before, it might fall out that the man chosen would never exist on earth. Election is in harmony with predestination of all things. If we believe that God foreknew all things, we meet no more difficulties than we already have met if we go on to believe that he predestinated all things; and election and predestination always stand or fall together in the faith of men as well as in the Scriptures. Churches who have denied the one have always in the end denied the other; while generally those who have believed in the one have also rejoiced in the other.

I leave these thoughts for the brethren. They have seemed full and rich to me.

I remain your brother in the hope of life through electing grace,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Dec. 7, 1893.

THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

THERE are some religious and political thoughts in connection with the World's Fair, that some of the readers of the SIGNS may be interested in. Religion and politics have been so completely interwoven and so closely identified in all history, that it is almost impossible to treat one without to some extent dealing with the other. This is not only true in the history of past nations, but it is also true in America, where the complete divorce of the church and state has been the common boast.

This great exposition, planned and carried out by the United States Government in honor of Christopher Columbus, the traditional discoverer of this continent, has come and gone, and left its great lessons impressed upon the very heart and life of our nation. It was indeed a great teacher, a mammoth object lesson, in every department of human effort, science and progress, a vivid panorama of the past, a brilliant and gaudy picture of the present, and a mingled prophecy of hope and fear for the future. While it has impressed all nations with the greatness of our resources, and exemplified the tact, skill, ingenuity and energy of the American people, it has also revealed our national vices, weaknesses and follies. In politics it has shown our people to be patriots more in word than in deed, and that they are more and more inclined to rave over European royalty and to ape the airs of foreign aristocracy. That genuine democracy that laughs at kings and scorns all ranks of assumed nobility is almost a thing of the past. The homage paid to dukes, counts and infantas is enough to make the Revolutionary heroes turn in their graves and regret the day they shed their blood, to be trampled under foot by generations so unmindful of the price of liberty and so unappreciative of the boon of freedom. Instead of improving this supreme opportunity to show all nations the sterling principles of true American independence, our people shamefully ignored the chief feature of true democracy, and bowed before Monarchy, aristocracy and Popery. They succumbed to that universal proneness of the human heart to laud assumed superiority, empty titles and nominal rank.

The Fair was a great school for the student of human nature, or more technically, for the student of anthropology. The study of human nature means the study of politics and religion. Had I been asked, after a few day's observation in this great school of nations, What is the chief characteristic of man that distinguishes him from other animals? I would have answered, The love of money. Or if I were called upon now to give a logical definition of man, I would answer, Man is that premmal that loves money making. The love of money, the adequate differentia of my definition, although the color of the skin and the shape of the nose may differ in different races, yet the same insatiable desire for gold, the same unrelenting principles of greed and covetousness, are deeply fixed in the hearts of all nations. Money was the watchword of every one, and the "open sesame" to everything. It oiled the tongue of the wily Turk as he chattered and bowed and grinned from morning till night in his perfumed stalls of oriental merchandise. Money quickened the pace of the polite Chinaman as he glided to and fro like a great black butterfly amid the gorgeous exhibits of the "Celestial Empire." It lit up the almond eyes of the erudite Japanese as he almost prostrated himself before everyone who might chance to ask the price of his wares. The sight of a dime caused the flat-faced Esquimaux to endure the heat and worry of a strangely foreign climate. The desert Arab begged and danced and howled for the shiny stuff, while the American Indian and the South Sea Islander kept up their characteristic war dances and religious capers from day to day with unflagging interest and unabating zeal, stimulated by the paltry reward of a few pennies. As for the Christian (?) nations, such as the English, French, German, Italian, Spainard and American, they all were moved to exertions by the same motive, but went upon a much larger scale. Their superior intelligence and Christian (?) training gave them a decided advantage over all the heathen people in facilities for obtaining the coveted stuff. This superior ability, acquired through generations of experience, enabled them to make merchandise of the heathen. It was under the direction of Christian (?) management that the heathen were placed on exhibition and induced to dance and yell and perform all their religious rites and ceremonies upon the public stage, for the amusement and entertainment of Christian (?) audiences, which paid round sums of admission. Thus the heathen were hired by Christian (?) management to perform, and Christian (?) audiences paid to see what Christians (?) are trying to convert them from in their own country. This inconsistency was as astonishing to the heathen as their performances were amusing to their American audiences. While every artifice was resorted to by tradesmen and vendors of all varieties of wares and trinkets, to extort money from the public, the good church people were not idle, but improved their time by meeting every day in conventions to devise plans for filling the Lord's treasury; and while merchants were daily footing up their accounts and calculating their gains or losses, the religious congress was figuring on how much money it will yet require to convert the world.

"Midast, they say, possessed the art of old
Of turning whatsoe'er he touched to gold.

This, modern men can reverse with ease,
Touch them with gold and they'll turn to what you please."

The love of money is one of the strongest evidences of the unity of the human race, an evidence that the philosophers have failed to notice, and is a living witness to the scriptural declaration that the Lord made of one blood all nations.

The Fair will undoubtedly create to some extent a reaction in the foreign mission craze that has raged in this country for more than half a century to the disgrace of the name of Christ and to the great disturbance of his people. It seems to me that a few day's attendance would be sufficient to open the eyes of sensible people to the gross misrepresentations, false claims and dishonest tricks resorted to by the advocates of this infidel enterprise. Here one had the opportunity of comparing the dispositions, motives, moral sentiments, aesthetic tastes and intellectual abilities of all nations. Not only were the products of different nations on exhibit, but the people themselves were there, making an object lesson on all nations a possibility. By observation it could be seen that the claims of the advocates of missions, as to the condition and character of the so-called heathen nations, are untrue. Take China and Japan for example, as these nations are among the most coveted fields for mission enterprise. The exhibits of China, representing all classes and conditions of society, compared most favorably with those of any other nation. It is true that in ponderous labor-saving machinery (which may be interpreted machinery for promoting laziness), and implements of war, industrious peace-loving China fell far behind the Christian (?) nations of Europe and America; but in exhibits showing honest toil, patient industry, exquisite skill and marvelous ingenuity this nation surpassed all others, perhaps. Of all the beautiful, elegant, wonderful articles of human handicraft in that vast, varied, cosmopolitan display, the Chinese hand-made silk embroideries were without doubt the most exquisite. I never saw anything in the whole realm of art more delicate and refined in taste, more unique in design, and more artistic in finish. The porcelain exhibits from Japan exemplified the same rare skill, exquisite taste and patient perseverance. These exhibits alone, without further testimony, furnish sufficient proof of the sterling worth, excellent government and peaceful prosperity of the heathen nations. But the people themselves, representing these nations, were examples of true politeness, courtesy, culture and propriety not to be found among Americans or Europeans.

The South Sea Islander, who, perhaps, among the least civilized of all the nations at the present time, were a very pleasing and interesting people. There was nothing repulsive either in their looks or manners; but on the contrary, they were well-favored, even handsome. They wore a look of innocent simplicity that was not only inviting, but indeed charming, and which showed them to be unacquainted with many of the predominating vices of higher civilization. They carried about them a modest intelligence that impressed the observer with the fact that they were not fools by any means. They observed the follies and insincerity of the general public, and seemed to wonder as much at these unexpected characteristics of the Christians, as they are called, as the most consummate egotist of the nineteenth century stripe wondered at their simplicity and rudeness. But the most serious blow to foreign missions does not come from the enlightening of the American public with regard to the true character and condition of the heathen nations, but from the heathen themselves becoming better acquainted with the home life and character of the American people. The Bedouins, who were so unmercifully preyed upon by the money sharks of Chicago, returned to their native land disgusted with the very name of Christianity, and burning with revenge against the missionaries who had represented this country to them as a land of angels, all on account of the people being Christians. They see nothing of superior virtue in the American people to verify the exalted claims of their religion; but upon the contrary they see a more than ordinary amount of foul play, a double portion of greed and insincerity. The proof of the pudding is the eating thereof. The heathens have been eating the pudding, and are becoming convinced as to its merit. Missionism must fall in the light of intelligence. It is beginning to wax old as a garment now, and as soon as the eyes of all people are open to the falsity of its claims, the dishonesty of its schemes, and the worthlessness of its results, as a vesture it will be folded and laid away. The Fair cannot help having a favorable influence in this direction.

The religious exhibits proved too much for the good of either Catholicism or Protestantism. The World's Congress of Religion (and the thing is certainly most appropriately named, for it is far from being Christ's Congress of religions) came to the conclusion that there is some good in all forms of religion of whatever name, and that there is not much radical difference after all. There are at present about nine great religions, as they are called, which include all the different sects of the world. These nine, I suppose, were all represented, and found more to agree upon than any of them expected. The general sentiment prevailed that all should work to the upbuilding of each other, and that the time is near at hand when the sectarianism will be done away. It

(Continued on page 405.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 20, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

FERVENT CHARITY.

"But the end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer. And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover the multitude of sins."—1 Peter iv. 7, 8.

In common with all the language used by inspired servants of God in the testimony of Jesus, the words "fervent charity" are distorted by the teachers of the religion of this world, so that the true signification of the language is hidden; and the deluded followers of such false guides are unable to detect the fallacy of their erroneous doctrines, because they are consistent with the perverted judgment of the natural mind.

"But the end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer." This is not an appeal to the fears of those to whom it is addressed, as if the design were to scare them into attention to the admonition following and immediately connected with it. Neither can any honest reader claim that it is applicable to the unbelieving world, since the whole epistle is limited in its opening sentence to the peculiar people designated as strangers scattered throughout the countries named, and more definitely described as "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." Unto these "obedient children the announcement is but another form of expression for the message which the angel of the Lord brought to the shepherds of Bethlehem. It is "Good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." To those who have their portion in this transitory world it is indeed a fearful revelation of the just judgment of God, when they hear that they have consumed the limited moments appointed them here. To them this awful word declares that all their treasures are swept away, and they must be cut off from everything in which they have trusted for joy and comfort. It is nothing strange that they should regard the words of the apostle with terror, and construe them as designed to alarm those to whom they were written. But to those scattered strangers, to whom this letter belongs, the end of all things signifies their release from the body of this death, and their awaking in the perfect likeness of their beloved Redeemer. Thus they are assured that their conflict is nearing its triumphant end. It is to this consoling truth that their attention is called in the immediately preceding context. However weary they might have been in the experience of that tribulation which Jesus assured them they should have in the world, they could find no relief in forsaking the pathway which bears the marks of the example of their Lord; suffering with their Savior, they are partakers of the victory which he has already gained; and in their present experience they reign with him. It is only with him that they either reign or have the victory.

Since the tribulations and conflict of this temporal state must soon be overpast, and the momentary sufferings are nearly all fulfilled, it is important that these strangers and pilgrims should be found walking in newness of life, as becometh saints. They are encouraged by the assurance that the end of their afflictions draws near, and from this consideration they are exhorted to "be sober, and watch unto prayer." This admonition does not authorize the conclusion that under other circumstances they might indulge their carnal inclinations, eat and drink with the drunken, and yield their members servants to sin. It is but the recorded expression of that willing obedience to the law of Christ which is written by the Spirit in the heart of every one who is born of God. This is the peculiar glory of the government of Christ. No commandment of his is grievous to them who are born of his Spirit. They have no higher joy than to walk in all his ordinances, because his law is the very principle of life by which they are animated. Often under the burden of continual trials the fainting saint is tempted to resign his hope, and give up all trust in the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. The adversary suggests that if indeed the Lord has chosen him unto eternal glory he would not leave him to be thus tormented by great and sore troubles. This is readily received by the natural mind, and the feet of the weak believer are well nigh slipped when he thus looks at the things which are seen. But for the delivering grace of the Captain of our salvation the hope of the tempted one would indeed be utterly cut off. At such a time of need it is not within the power of words to express the joy with which the perishing one hears the gracious word that "The end of all things is at hand." That is the proclamation of infinite and complete victory over sin and death. Well may such sweet assurance encourage the ransomed one to "Be sober, and watch unto prayer." Let no vain thought presume upon the fact that the conflict is near its end, and take license to deny the Lord by disobedience to his commandments. The very fact which encourages them that love God and are the called according to his purpose, in the certainty of the nearness of their deliverance, is the ground of renewed diligence in walking humbly before God as obedient children. It is manifestly inconsistent for them who hope in the grace of God for salvation from their sins, while sojourning in this polluted world, to be conformed to the alluring vanities of time. Of those who thus live after the flesh, Paul well says, "They profess that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate."—Titus i. 16. The grace of God cannot dwell in any sinner without making him feel that the service of sin is itself hateful and distressing to him. There is no evidence that the love of Christ is in the heart of one who can take pleasure in unrighteousness. While the saints are yet subject to the vanity of the law of sin working in their members, they groan for deliverance from its hated power. In this groaning of the prisoner the Lord hears the prayer of faith. None ever feel this longing desire for release from the bondage of sin, but those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and all such are already blessed of the Lord. It is not with their natural mind that they watch unto prayer. Neither is their being sober, merely abstinence from wine and strong drink. The admonition in our text enjoins that sober mind which is inseparable from watching unto prayer. The wine of Babylon produces intoxication which causes those who are drunken with it to feel strong enough in themselves, so that they have no occasion for prayer. The sober saint having no confidence in the flesh, has no other resource but in watching unto that effectual, fervent prayer, which is never unavailing, but always sustains the fainting and destitute one. Such prayer cannot originate in the will of man; it is the intercession of the Spirit according to the will of God, and is always heard, even though its answer is not seen by reason.

"And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover the multitude of sins."

This most important consideration for the practical conduct of the saints may well command the particular investigation so forcibly demanded by the strong language in which it is recorded. In the precedence here given to the injunction it may be understood that nothing else will compensate for the neglect of this admonition. Let it not be forgotten that none but the elect of God can be embraced in the urgent appeal. It is not sufficient that they should be firmly established in the theory of sound doctrine; not even their belief that there is one God is so important as this possession of fervent charity among themselves. Then let us examine whether this indispensable seal of discipleship is found in ourselves. As it is "above all things" it is certainly in vain that we claim to be followers of God as dear children if we have not this mark of his Spirit. The world of false religionists with one voice claim that they have a great deal of charity; and they are equally unanimous in charging that the true disciples of Jesus are utterly destitute of this divine grace. While the humble followers of the apostles are not reckoned among the nations of professed christians, they have nothing to fear if they bear the peculiar sign which is presented in the text. There is no other people identified by this secret witness; neither can all the efforts of the wicked ever succeed in counterfeiting this divine mark, which is set exclusively upon them that sigh and that cry for all their conscious vileness and departures from the precepts and ordinances of the Lord. Measured by their outward deportment as seen by men, the Pharisees will always appear to be more righteous than the true children of God. But the test as presented in our text proves none to be led by the Spirit of God but such as have this fervent charity. It is indeed the very first mentioned in the statement of the gracious fruit of the Spirit, being the very same word in the original text which is translated "love" in the list of graces given by Paul in the text, Gal. v. 22. Manifestly this heavenly fruit does not originate in the corrupt heart of the natural man. Consequently it cannot be found in any other character but such as are born of God. So John says, "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." Certainly there is no direction given by the Spirit by which the saints are authorized to put on a false appearance of love which is not in truth felt. Such hypocrisy is expressly forbidden by the injunction, "Let love be without dissimulation; abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good; be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love."—Rom. xii. 9, 10. This is the most assured evidence that can be found for the confirmation of the hope of any believer. That love which embraces every one in whom the image of the Redeemer is seen, and esteems others better than self, can exist in none but those who have the life of Jesus dwelling in themselves. This is the "fervent charity" enjoined in our text. When it is hidden beneath the pride and covetousness of the carnal mind, there is no manifest assurance that the uncharitable one has the Spirit of Christ in his own heart. But when this divine grace is in lively exercise the evidence is conclusive that the Spirit has sealed its subject unto the ultimate glory of the presence of God. It is not so much for the peace of others as for the comfort of himself that the saint is thus admonished to have this fervent charity. While it is indeed good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity and perfect love, every disciple of Jesus must find all his own consolation in the witness of that love which is in him.

self. It is entirely distinct from that false love which embraces everybody indiscriminately. It is by divine authority restricted to the elect strangers scattered abroad, and must be confined among themselves. Any charity which does not recognize this limitation is but a base counterfeit. The fervent charity which is the fruit of the Spirit cannot go beyond the election of divine grace, who are the vessels of mercy which God has ordained unto eternal life through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. It would involve the claim that divine love was too limited in its application, if the saints might have fervent charity toward those whom God had not embraced in his infinitely wise and gracious election. Hence, this specification that it is only "among yourselves" that the saints can have this fruit of the Spirit.

"For charity shall cover the multitude of sins." So long as they are subject to vanity in the body of this death there will not cease to be occasion for the mutual exercise of that forbearance toward one another which will require this fervent charity to be in full control of each of the saints. When we feel that our brother has trespassed not only against us, but also in erring from the truth, it will always appear plausible to denounce and expose his transgression. Especially is this course according to our mind when there is no question of the guilt of the sinning brother. But how does this treatment of the offending one agree with this instruction of the law of Christ? Charity always seeks to save the fallen victim of temptation, even though the multitude of his sins might discourage the forbearance of the natural mind. This spiritual principle of tender solicitude for the sinner in the church of the living God, never suggests the transgression of the directions given in the inspired record. While the repenting sinner is to be forgiven "until seventy times seven" times, there is no liberty given to the church, or to the individual disciple, to retain in fellowship one who shows no sign of repentance. Those who have been long in the membership of the organized church will be likely to recall incidents in the past wherein this rule has been practically illustrated. There may have been a willingness on the part of the transgressor to do all that the letter of the law of Christ demands, and yet those who were spiritual could not fail to see that there was no repentance nor charity in his heart and conduct. In other cases there may have been greater transgression on the part of the sinner, yet the manifest repentance could not fail to command the exercise of that fervent charity by which the multitude of sins was so completely covered that the sinner was fully restored to the love and fellowship of the church.

Where this fervent charity reigns in an organized church, there the peace of God abounds, and there is no room for envy, hatred, strifes, and all the hateful works of the flesh. In its absence there is nothing by which the saints can be distinguished from the enemies of truth and righteousness. Then well may they be admonished to "Let brotherly love continue."

PLEASE DO.

It will be of great assistance to us, and save us many dollars, if the brethren and friends who sent on a new subscriber with their own subscription for this year will either see or write the parties, and inform them that their subscription expires at the end of this year, and request them to renew, or if they do not intend to become regular subscribers to have their paper discontinued.

We should be sorry to discontinue from our list the name of a single person who intends to renew their subscription for 1894, but we cannot carry their names long on an uncertainty. They have now had the paper for about a year, and must know by this time whether they like it or not.

INDIGENT FUND.

DURING the past year the brethren and friends have contributed nearly two hundred dollars, to assist us in sending the SIGNS to those who love to read them, but are not able to pay for them. We sent the paper this year to from three to five hundred of these readers, and if our brethren feel willing and able to assist us, we shall try to continue them on our list for the coming year. Judging from the letters of gratitude we receive, there are none who more highly appreciate the paper than those who receive it from this fund. All remittances for this fund will be acknowledged in the SIGNS, and our readers will thereby be enabled to see just what support the fund is receiving.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE time is fast drawing near when the question, "What shall I get for a Christmas present?" will be the inquiry. We would suggest that you look over our list of books advertised on last page and see if you cannot find something there that will be appropriate. The cloth-bound books of "Editorials" we will mail from now until Christmas, both volumes, for three dollars.

The extra inducements we offer for new subscribers to the SIGNS OF THE TIMES will enable almost any one to order a copy for their friend, which will make a lasting present.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

(Continued from page 403.)

is true that there are no radical differences among the nine great religions of this world, for they were all founded by man, and the fundamental idea of them all is man's ability to reform himself into newness of life. Where all are agreed in one leading idea, the only difference that can arise is to how this reformation is to be brought about; but there is not much room for difference here again, for all seem to think that it can be accomplished in almost any way. The difference in all Arminian sects is ceremonial differences arising from policy as to what suits men best in the way of religion. But the leading effort of the World's Congress is to put down all differences, break down all discords. While men may be able, if God wills, to put down all differences from among human sects, there is one difference that they never can remove, and that is the difference between grace and works. They may clear the Broadway of all stones of stumbling and rocks of offense, but they can never remove from Zion that stumbling-stone which God himself hath placed there. They may put down divisions that men have made, but that division that Christ came to send can never be put down, and the sword that he came to send can never be sheathed by human power, nor that fire which he kindled be quenched by the ingenuity of this world. Neither can all heathen raging and vain imaginations of the people add one cubit either to the stature of Christ or antichrist, make one hair black or white, or turn the hand of God from the fall of a single sparrow.

While there is no difference in the root of all false religions, no difference in the soil in which they flourish, and no difference in the fruit they bring forth, there is a difference between Christ and antichrist, between the religion of Jesus and the religion of this world. All the man-made sects of this world are united under one general government, and led and controlled by one leader, and that leader is the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience. The founders of all earthly or natural religions were nothing but reformers, and they know nothing beyond the idea of reforming men; but Jesus was not a reformer, but a Savior of men; not merely a teacher, but a regenerator; not a restorer, but a Creator; not a repairer of the old, but a maker of all things new. Herein is the difference between Christ and his mission of salvation, and the world's comprehension of religion. The tendency of all reformed things is to lapse back into the state or condition from which they were reformed. Great reactions follow all great reformations either in politics or religion. This fact is verified to-day in the tendency of Protestantism to relapse into Catholicism, of which it was only a reformation at first. If the World's Congress should effect a compromise and a general reformation of conflicting creeds, it would only be preparing the way for the entrance of a far more deplorable state of affairs, as it is a law noticed and stated in the Scriptures that the last end of such things is worse than the first. A few day's attendance at the World's Congress of religion impresses one most deeply with the power and iniquity of Babylon. Their great swelling words of vanity are an unerring index to the depth of man's ignorance and presumption. Their throat is indeed an open sepulchre emitting the fume and stench of rottenness, corruption, and dead men's bones.

We all remember the great ado made by every species of religious fanatics concerning the closing of the gates on the American Sabbath. Religious sects were loud in their clamor to force a free people (free in name at least) to observe a traditional Sabbath; and the Congress of this nation so far forgot their sacred trust, and the principles of our national constitution, and the right and conscience of those whom they represent, as to donate a large amount of the people's money upon the condition that the gates be closed on Sunday; thus legislating in matters of religion, and buying the favor of religious fanatics, out of the public treasury. All this was done upon the plea that this is a Christian nation; thus acknowledging a national religion, or, in other words, a union of church and state. I was forcibly reminded of all this when I came upon some images of Christ, in the most elaborate patterns, marked for sale with the prices attached. O how inconsistent, to say nothing of the wickedness of it. Did not the same law that said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," also say, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything in the heavens above?" If one of these Jewish commandments is to be observed by American religionists, is not the other one equally binding? The Savior of sinners was once valued and sold by a religious nation; but now, since he is exalted above the reach of all principality and power, his professed followers must gratify their greed and covetousness by selling his images only.

The custom of the heathen nations, especially the Greeks and Romans, was to deify their heroes by assigning them a place among the gods, and holding feasts and games and seasons of revelry in their remembrance and honor. How closely is this relic of heathen civilization followed in our own country. Columbus, a traditional hero, and that, too, of another nation, has been exalted above all the gods of America, for the last year especially. This prodigious Fair was in honor of him; his name headed everything, and all things redounded to his praise. No other hero, either ancient or modern, has ever received such deified honors in the history of this world. The extremes of this hero-worship was reached in raving over a small urn of dust purporting to be the ashes of his remains.

This same sentiment of deifying men is still further exemplified in the American people. In the celebrated fresco painting in the canopy of the dome overhanging the rotunda of the National Capitol, entitled, "The Apotheosis of Washington," and intended to represent the powers, resources and sentiments of this nation, the central figure is the deified Washington represented as ascended from earth and seated on clouds of glory. This central or chief deity is surrounded by other figures representing the different departments of our government, and the different industries of our people. Among these figures are Alexander Hamilton, the god of finance; Professor Morse, the god of invention; several ideal goddesses of purely American creation; and nine out of the twelve Olympian deities of ancient Greece completing the group; Neptune in his seashell chariot; Vulcan at his forge; and Mars hurling thunderbolts of war; the other ones surrounded by the various symbols of their duties and characters. All this in the national building of a nation claiming the religion of Jesus as their national religion. But this is not all; among a number of expensive oil paintings that decorate the walls of the rotunda is one entitled "The Baptism of Pocahontas." In this painted lie the heathen maiden is represented as kneeling before the priest, arrayed in the conventional gown and surplice of the Church of England, who with the expression of hypocritical piety upon his face is just raising his baptized fingers out of a small fount of water to moisten the brow of the kidnapped girl. This libel on the sacred rite of baptism was purchased by Congress at an enormous price, and paid for out of the people's treasury, thus giving the influence of government patronage to the perversion of Bible truth, and to the outrage of believers' consciences. The statuary that adorned the buildings and beautified the grounds of the great Fair represented almost every myth known to the ancient classics and heathen mythology. It is enough to make a sensible heathen laugh to hear men call this a "Christian nation."

H. M. CURRY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 5, 1893.

MR. HANDY CULVER—DEAR BROTHER:—It is not that I have never had any desire to write to you or to any of the brethren, but because I have always felt too weak, too unworthy and too insignificant in the sight of a just, true and holy God, to even try to say anything which might be of interest to one of his dear children. Since I have been in Philadelphia I have not had the pleasure to meet with the people whom I love, except on very rare occasions, until the first of October. Since that time I have been to the meetings of the church every Sunday. Last Sunday was communion day, and I was invited to partake with them. I should be glad to meet with the Little Creek Church again, which seems more like home than any other place. The church here feels the loss now of one of its members who died only three weeks ago. He was clerk of the church and one of its most highly esteemed members.

The questions often come up to me, Did I do right in joining the church? Have I ever had an experience of grace? Have I any right to even claim a name among the children of God? If so, why am I so prone to forget the true and living God, and indulge in those things which I know to be wrong and sinful? Indeed the very things I wish to do are the things I cannot do; for when I try to do good, evil is present with me, so that I cannot do things that I would. There are two members within me, each warring against the other, so that there is a warfare constantly going on within my mind, and I am compelled to say with sorrow that too often the old, Adamic nature seems the stronger. I would that it were not so, for it gives me much trouble indeed to awake and find myself indulging in the very things I hate, and which I know to be wrong; but it seems that I can never realize the sinful act that I am committing until it is sadly too late, and then I am left again in that same pit of trouble and distress. It is then that I am made to look back and say, How can any one who has had an experience of grace be guilty of such vile, sinful acts?

I often think that if my brethren only knew me as I know myself to be, they would say that my name has no place among them, and that I should not be counted as one of the "little flock" that has been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. I often go to meeting with my mind running in every direction except in a way as to listen to what is being expounded by the servants of God. Everyone seems to be listening with an open ear to what is being said, and go away feeling that they have been blessed by hearing what was joy and comfort to their souls, while I am too blind to receive even one word of comfort. If I could only be as my brethren are, how comforting it would be. But when I am permitted to listen with a hearing ear, and with understanding also, how comforting it is! It seems that I cannot listen and understand as I did once. At the time when I joined the church there was always a word for me, no matter where I heard the word spoken and expounded. But since then I have fallen far short of what I hoped would be my future. Instead of becoming a better christian, I get worse. Every day I am made to see deeper and deeper into my sinful nature, and instead of being brighter, the cloud grows darker. Will there ever be a time when that cloud of gloom and despondency will be rolled away, and I can feel that bright sunshine warming and illuminating my poor sick soul? I hope that it will be the pleasure of my dear Lord to roll away this cloud of darkness, and to reveal unto me the things of his kingdom; to give me a hearing ear and an understanding heart, that I may be able to more clearly understand the things of the Spirit of God. There has been in my mind what seems to me an unanswerable question, ever since I have had any exercise of mind concerning spiritual things, and this question the poet has well expressed.

"'Tis a point I long to know,
Oft is causes anxious thought,
Do I love the Lord or no?
Am I his, or am I not?"

If I am his, why am I thus? Why am I constantly being enticed and led away by the things of this world? Why do I not drop these vile, sinful ways, and become a true follower of Christ as my brethren and sisters are? I often think that perhaps I do wrong to complain as I do. I suppose my sufferings and afflictions are no more than in justice are given me as punishment for my sins. If I could only do the things which I believe and know to be in accordance with the teachings of God's holy will, and leave other things alone, it would give joy and peace to my poor soul. But the old, Adamic nature is too strong, and to my sorrow I stumble and fall into the snares of sin and wickedness of the world.

Brother Culver, do you ever get to feel at times that you are the most vile and sinful creature that ever existed? Do you not feel at times that the place of everlasting destruction would be the right place for such a vile, corrupt creature, and that "If your soul be sent to hell, God's righteous law approves it well?"

If you have such feelings as these, your experience and mine agree; for indeed, I am almost ashamed at times to even claim to know anything about an experience of the grace of God. I love to sit and listen to brethren talk about their experience, of Christ's dealings with them, how they have been led, and what seasons of joy they have been brought through. I love to hear them discuss different portions of Scripture, according to their own understanding. But what I love most of all is to hear some poor, little, humble soul tell of his or her trials and troubles which so nearly correspond with my own. The only time that I can get any real comfort from a gospel sermon is when it comes right home to my own experience. One word of comfort to a troubled mind and a sorrowing heart is worth more than thousands which do not serve as either food or drink to the dry and hungry soul. That is why I could always listen to Elder Staton's preaching; not because he was any better than other ministers, but because he could always tell my own experience.

Although I have not heard from you since I sent my contribution to the church, I hope the church debt is cancelled, and that everything is in a prosperous condition. Perhaps I will have the pleasure of meeting with the church on the third Sunday in December. I hope that it will be my privilege to do so. It has been now more than a year since I was at Little Creek, and I would be glad to see the brethren and sisters once more. I suppose we should not expect a life of joy and pleasure in this world, as this life is only short, and is full of sorrow. Considering all the trials, tribulations and afflictions that beset us in our sojourn here, I suppose we should be thankful that it is no worse, and remember that all things work together for good to them that love God. No doubt there is such a thing as expecting too much, and it troubles us because we fall so far short of what we expect. It is an easy matter to form resolutions in this life, and think that we will do better in the future, live more upright, and try to walk in an acceptable manner before Christ. But how distressed we are when we find that we have forgotten that resolution, and are freely indulging in those very things which in our own will and determination we thought we would not do. So I have found that it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps. In these resolutions and determinations of our own is where we often learn how weak we are. For when we try with all our might and strength, and then fail, we see our weakness, and the power of God. If it were not so, I suppose we would soon become as proud, conceited and selfish as those who claim to have the power and strength to direct their steps and turn in any direction they choose, regardless of any other power either in heaven or in earth. It was only to-day that I heard a lady say that there was no power that could change her from what she was; that there was nothing from which to change her; that she had been sanctified, and had nothing to be changed for; and unless she asked God to change her, he would not do so; but if she should ask him, he would willingly do so. Well, I thought that she had gotten beyond the apostles, who said that we are saved by hope. I am always satisfied to even be recognized as one of those who are trying to find out the "old way," and glad I am that I have been given such a hope. It is the sweetest thing that I ever experienced, to have that hope encouraged by evidence in my experience that it has been given me of Jesus Christ, and of him alone. It is when we are brought down in our weakness and inability at the feet of Jesus, and made to see our own feeble strength, that we are ready to exclaim, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God almighty! Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

This is more than I thought of writing, and perhaps it is more than I should have written, unless I were able to write something of some interest to you. Pardon me for not having written sooner, and also pardon anything that I have said amiss. Hoping to hear from you soon I remain one in search of the truth,
CHAS. A. LECATES.

KANSAS, Ill., Nov. 17, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Having just read the SIGNS OF THE TIMES of the 15th instant, and seeing your liberal offer for new subscribers sent in by old ones, I at once concluded to send you the pay for two new ones and will send others if I can. The doctrine advocated in the editorials, and also by most of the correspondents of the SIGNS, is the doctrine of God our Savior, and is that which I esteem above all things else. Believing with all my mind that God is sovereign, I love to hear and read that which ascribes all honor and glory to his name. I have but little faith in some of the preaching and writing that is now being promulgated, that God is powerful, but that there is another power besides him. I am also heartily sickened out of hearing excuses made by poor, finite men, for God, for doing his work, and in governing all things according to his will, for fear he may be accused of being the author of sin. I feel like calling attention to the ninth chapter specially of Paul's Roman letter, to all such would-be apologizers. In my feeble way I try to preach election, predestination, and the sovereignty of God, believing that he is the author of all things, and that Paul was not mistaken when he penned the wonderful words, "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Rom. viii. 38, 39.

It is now a little over fifty years since the Lord in his mercy gave me this faith; and as I know I shall soon be called hence to realize the truth of it, I am rejoiced to be able to say I am perfectly resigned in the assurance of not being mistaken in the plan of eternal salvation; and I can also say, I hope in humbleness, that my own case is included in and perfected by the righteous life and obedient death of the Lord Jesus Christ.

JAMES M. TRUE.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

ELDER Frank Loden having changed his address from Canton to Lindale, Smith Co., Texas, requests his correspondents to address him at the latter place.

WRIGHT RUSHING having changed his address from Cheney to box 854, Spokane, Washington, requests his correspondents to address him at the latter place.

MARRIAGES.

Oct. 26th, 1893, by Elder T. M. Poulson, at the Old Baptist meeting-house at Nassaongo, Wicomico Co., Md., Mr. Joshua L. Freeny and Miss Mary Ann Fooks, both of said county.

By the same, Dec. 12th, 1893, in Worcester, Md., Mr. Wm. E. Wilkerson and Miss Mary W. Taylor, both of Worcester Co., Md.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

John Gadsby, of Brighton, England, the originator and publisher of the Gospel Standard, of London, England, as well as of the Christian Monthly Record, and author of "My Wanderings," and other works of Biblical and oriental travel, died Oct. 12th, 1893, aged 84 years.

His funeral took place at Manchester, England, on Thursday, Oct. 19th. He was the second son of Wm. Gadsby, minister of the gospel, and author of "The Everlasting Task for Arminians."

Mrs. Mary Furbush was born Jan. 14th, 1815, and died July 30th, 1892, her age being 77 years, 6 months and 16 days.

The subject of this notice was baptized by Elder John Cleland, Oct. 2d, 1830. She united with the church at Rewastico, and remained a worthy and consistent member until called home. We miss her much, as her words were a comfort to us at all times. She dearly loved the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and was a careful reader of her Bible; but we trust that our loss is her eternal gain. We sorrow not as those who have no hope. May the Lord comfort all who mourn.

SUSIE L. GILLETT.

ATHEL, Md., Dec. 10, 1893.

THE subject of this brief sketch, James C. Morris, was born in Holmes Co., Miss., May 7th, 1837, and died at his home in Collins, Ark., Nov. 17th, 1893, aged 56 years, 6 months and 10 days.

In early life he selected teaching as his life profession, and devoted himself to it until the outbreak of the late war, when he enlisted in the Southern Army, going out as a member of the Fourth Regiment of Mississippi Volunteers, under General French. He took part in all the principal engagements in Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia. He was also at the siege of Vicksburg. He was finally taken prisoner, carried to Ship Island, and held there as a prisoner of war until the surrender. He was married to Miss Narisa Baker Feb. 13th, 1868, with whom he lived happily until the day of his death. He became a member of the Primitive Baptist Church shortly after his marriage, of which church he remained a consistent member during the remainder of his life, dying in the triumphs of faith. His last illness was severe, but short, lasting only a few days. He leaves a devoted wife and a host of relatives and friends to mourn. Paul says of Christians who mourn departed friends, "That ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." We who are alive and remain unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ shall not prevent them who are asleep; but the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

"Why should we mourn departed friends,
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms."

A FRIEND.

Lucy Ann Squier was born in Borden-town, N. J., Sept. 22d, 1816, and died Oct. 6th, 1893, at half-past two o'clock, aged 77 years and 14 days.

She was the daughter of James and Anna Todd, and was the oldest of a family of twelve children. She came with her parents to Jacksonburgh, Ohio, in her fifteenth year, and was married to David Squier Dec. 23d, 1835. She and her aged companion lived together almost fifty-eight years. To them were born two children: Lewis P., who lives in Nebraska, and William Alonzo, who has always lived at home. In her religious belief she was a Predestinarian Baptist, and was baptized by Elder Lot Southard in 1853. She has been a faithful member, and prized her church-meeting days above everything else.

She was first taken with "La Grippe" about three years ago, and has never seen a well day since, and for the last year has been a great sufferer. She had the constant care of her aged companion. She left her husband, in his eighty-third year, two sons, eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. She had some peculiar wishes about her funeral, which her family has carried out. The funeral was conducted by Elder L. O. Davis.

ALSO,

David Squier departed this life Nov. 16th, 1893, aged 82 years, 7 months and 23 days.

He was born in Butler Co., Ohio, March 26th, 1811, and was married to Miss Lucy Ann Todd Dec. 23d, 1835. He was the third son and child of Abraham and Mary Squier. He had eleven brothers and sisters. His wife preceded him to the grave just six weeks lacking one day. Since then his desire has been to go to his home "over there." Two children were born to them: L. P. Squier, whose home is in Aurora, Neb., and W. A., who lives at home. He leaves two sons, eight grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren, a brother aged eighty-seven, three sisters and many dear friends to mourn for him. He was a man of an uncommonly pleasant disposition, a kind husband and a loving father. He treated his children with such kindness that the longer he lived the better they loved him. He belonged to the New Providence Church of Old School Baptists and was baptized by Elder J. B. Moore, June 19th, 1858. His life was an example that we would do well to follow. His funeral was conducted by Elder L. O. Davis.

Our friend, J. F. Thompson, departed this life March 31st, 1893, at his home in Fairfax Station, Va., aged 28 years, 2 months and 20 days.

The subject of this notice was the younger of two children of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Thompson. Mr. Thompson was killed in a mill when our friend was but an infant, leaving a widow broken-hearted and broken up, with the two little boys to watch over with all a mother's anxiety until they should come to think and care for themselves. The boys were spared to her until the date at the head of this article; but previously "Jack," as we always called him, was married to my niece, Miss Annie Ledman, had just bought a comfortable home, and had one darling babe born unto them.

It was seen that our friend "Jack" was a subject of throat consumption, which took him from us very rapidly. He left his wife and little prattling babe and mother, with all who knew him, with much sorrow and sadness; and yet to his wife there was another stroke awaiting her; for in the short space of four months the darling babe was also taken, and was laid beside its father in the cemetery at Fairfax C. H.

There was something about "Jack" that won the respect and good-will of all with whom he came in contact. There was one trait that I will mention here, which is to me sweet to contemplate; it was his regard for his mother. I saw him about one month before he died, and he desired me to convey a message to his mother; and as he was aware that his dissolution was near at hand, he was particular in the wording of that message, lest he should give painful alarm.

It is at that dear mother's request that I pen these lines. She says she would like to have them published as a token of respect and a mother's regard for a dutiful son, and as a memorial record for her. May the Lord sustain each heart made sad by this dispensation of his providence, so that it may redound to his glory and to their good, is the desire of the friend who pens these lines.

ALSO,

Our little friend, Julian G. Walker, departed this life Oct. 29th, 1893, aged 7 years, 7 months and 20 days.

He was the youngest son of Thomas H. and Sarah J. Walker, by whom he was beloved and cherished in all parental affection, and therefore in his death comes a crushing sorrow that the Lord alone can heal. Little Julian was one of those children of whom it is said that he was too much developed for the number of his years. He went about asking questions and reasoning concerning things as though all the years of manhood were on him, so much so that his parents watched him closely; but he was not to stay here with us long. He had just entered school, and came home one day feeling rather unwell, and grew worse until the doctor was sent for, who pronounced it a bad case of diphtheria. The neighbors at first were rather reluctant about going to see the little sufferer, but I think nearly all at last went there. They informed me that he called for and had his sister sing for him the hymn beginning, "Jesus, lover of my soul," saying that was his favorite. We all wonder at his having a favorite hymn; yet that God who rules all things can give the little child to enjoy the Redeemer's shining face. He lingered nine or ten days, and passed away. At that solemn moment the weeping father met his daughter-in-law on the door-step, and told her that his child was dying. She went in and attended to the last sad rites of such solemn moments. Elder E. V. White was telegraphed for, but could not come. I was sent for, and went to weep with my friends. We sang the little one's favorite hymn, looked to the Lord in prayer, and laid away our little one, mingling our tears with the bereaved.

May the Lord grant unto us a spirit of submission to this dispensation of his providence, as in the manner laid down in his word, "Thy will be done." May the daughter-in-law, who without reserve went in and administered to the necessities of the moment, feel the assurance that she is not forgotten, nor yet her reward to come.

Their friend in sympathy,

ELI T. KIDWELL.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Elder J. D. Hubbell, N. Y., 2, Angeline Hill, N. Y., 1, Mrs. Lewis Butler, Maine, 1, Lewis B. Ford, Mass., 2, Wm. Betzer, Ohio, 1, M. B. Niven, Pa., 2, Charity Armsworth, Ill., 50c, Mrs. J. S. Ater, Ill., 50c, John T. Campbell, D. C., 3, Elder W. Adams, Ga., 1, Sarah Hawk, Ind., 3.—Total, $17.00.

SPECIAL OFFER.

FROM now until January first, 1894, we authorize every old subscriber to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers. All new names will be entered on our list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1894.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list as soon as received and continue them to the end of 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars, and we will send additional new ones at one dollar each.

Any subscriber who has already sent two dollars for 1894 may send us one more dollar for two new names, and one dollar each for additional new subscribers.

To all desiring extra copies to distribute to aid them in procuring subscribers on these terms we will send them free.

Ever since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has been published as a weekly it has been our desire to increase its circulation sufficiently to enable us to reduce the subscription price to one dollar a year. This we cannot afford to do with a list of less than ten thousand; we therefore make the following most extraordinarily liberal offer as an inducement to our brethren and friends to assist us in procuring new subscribers, and assure them that as soon as we reach the number above mentioned we will lower the price to one dollar a year. Doubtlessly there are comparatively few of our readers who have any idea of the expense and labor necessary in publishing the SIGNS. We will therefore for their benefit say a few words by way of information.

The editorial and manual labor in preparing copy, writing articles, setting type, making up the paper, getting it to press, &c, costs just as much for one copy as for ten thousand copies, to say nothing about office-rent, and all our other fixed charges. After the first copy is printed the expense is but a very small amount above the cost of the blank paper to furnish duplicate copies. For this reason the larger number of copies printed the cheaper they can be furnished to each subscriber. At our present number we cannot afford to publish the paper at less than two dollars a year, but if our brethren and friends will interest themselves in sending us additional names we can furnish the extra copies at a reduced rate; and to enable them to assist us without loss to themselves for time and labor spent in our behalf we will make the most liberal offer that we can possibly afford.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1034 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 22 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.]

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 61.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1893.

NO. 52.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHENT, Ky., Nov. 11, 1893.

DEAR SISTER HALL:—For some cause, I know not what, I have for some days past been thinking of writing to you. But all the time this thought has prevailed that if I were to write I could say nothing that would interest you. This truth often comes up forcibly before me. The less I think of and about myself the more my mind and meditations rest upon the wisdom, power, mercy and love of our God made manifest in the gift of his dear Son, who "by one offering hath forever perfected them that are sanctified."—Heb. x. 14. That offering was his sinless and holy body, that body that was prepared him. He says, in addressing the Father, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: in burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure."—Heb. x. 5, 6. Offerings were continually being made in the temple service in that long shadowy dispensation, but they did not make the comers thereto perfect. They were only types and shadows, but they pointed away to the offering of that body which was prepared him. Therefore he said, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not." Those offerings, as well as all other things pertaining to that temple service, were for national Israel. The Gentiles did not have the law given to them. It was given to the descendants of Abraham only. You and I are Gentiles, and if salvation is by the law we have no interest in it. But it is written, "By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin."—Rom. iii. 20. Therefore that is the law of sin and death. But the law of life in Christ Jesus is a different and more glorious law. That is the law of life.

This train of thoughts leads us to contemplate that life which is in Christ Jesus; and in looking to that life we behold the wonders of redeeming love. All the family of the first Adam, by reason of their unity with and in him, are dead in trespasses and sins. He was driven out of Eden, and cherubim and flaming sword were placed by the Almighty in the east of the garden to guard the way of the tree of life. Eden represents infinite purity, and the man and woman could no more return to that state of purity in which they had resided before they transgressed. Their condition was a state of death. But in order to redeem any of those who by their unity with him were dead, a ransom equal to that undertaking must be found. Surely none who pertained to earth could be accepted as a ransom, for the earth was cursed for man's sake. All the offerings under the law were of the earth. No land or clime could produce an offering or ransom equal in value to the great undertaking of redeeming man from the state of death in which he was involved by reason of the violation of that holy law. Then how silly it is for any of Adam's race to talk about going to heaven by their good works. Surely

"None but Jesus, none but Jesus,
Can do helpless sinners good."

The apostle says, "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." "But I am carnal, sold under sin."—Rom. vii. 12, 14. The ransom to redeem him who was carnal, sold under sin, must be holy. The law that Adam violated was holy. It emanated from infinite holiness and purity, and nothing could have satisfied its demands but that which was preeminently of the same character. Nowhere in the vast expanse of created worlds could one be found who was fitted for the great undertaking of redeeming fallen man from the vortex of sin and death, but the immaculate Son of God. In him infinite holiness and purity resided. "In him was life; and the life was the light of men."—John i. 4. He said, "I am the good Shepherd: the good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John x. 11. He further says, "Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again." All the family of the first Adam are dead in trespasses and sins, are carnal, sold under sin; but here is one who is life, and who is infinitely holy. This presents a complete contrast between the Redeemer and that which was to be redeemed. That Redeemer, possessing life and holiness, was able and did redeem his people from death, and was made unto them life and righteousness. He gives to those redeemed ones eternal life, and says they shall never perish. But to accomplish this great work he must go down into death. He must suffer the full penalty of sin, which was death. And when in the agonies of the cross he said, "It is finished," all the demands of that law of sin and death were met and fully canceled. The prophet says, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "He was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken. And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth."—Isa. liii. 6, 8, 9. His pure and holy character is thus described by the prophet, and his sufferings foretold, as well as the great and wonderful things accomplished by his humiliation and death. "For the transgression of my people was he stricken," was the language of the Almighty by the prophet. The eternal purposes of God in the suffering and death of his dear Son were declared by the inspired prophet of the Lord long before they were accomplished on Calvary. But this prophet, this servant of the Most High, to whom this great and wonderful prophetic vision was given, said further, "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities."—Isa. liii. 10, 11. Their justification was because he bore their iniquities. It was thus that he "by one offering hath perfected them that are sanctified." They were sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Christ Jesus, and in time they are called. Spiritual and eternal life is given them, and they are enabled to behold the beauties and glories of the great plan of life and salvation accomplished by the humiliation, suffering, death, resurrection and ascension to the right hand of the Father, where he ever liveth to make intercession for those whose iniquities he bore when he passed through that baptism of blood and suffering.

Ah, my dear sister, when we meditate upon the deep humiliation and suffering of our dear Redeemer, O how our hearts should be filled with love and adoration to his dear name, and what deep desires should fill our whole being to give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name. But alas! this poor little one as he journeys toward the tomb is made day by day to realize that in and of himself he has no offering to bring into the courts of our God. And that holy place where saints do congregate often, seems too sacred for his sin-polluted feet. I can appropriately ask the question, "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" But the psalmist answers that question by saying, "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart."—Psalm xv. 1, 2. But, dear sister, if we apply this to ourselves how few of us can claim a place in the tabernacle of the Lord, in the holy hill of Zion, which is the true church of our Lord Jesus Christ. To him alone who worketh in his saints to will and to do of his good pleasure can we look for that grace which fits us for our oft weary pilgrimage. It is then that we remember that he hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee." And by the prophet he says to his saints, "Thou [Israel] art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away. Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."—Isa. xli. 8-10. The right hand of his righteousness with which he upholds his saints is that righteousness wrought out by him when he met and suffered in his own glorious person all the demands of that law of sin and death on which we have been meditating. Under that law he suffered and the waves of the wrath of God against sin went over him, but he rose triumphantly over all its foaming billows, and now says to you, dear sister, and to all his redeemed and loved saints, "Fear not, it is I." But afflictions and sorrows bestrew the pathway of all his dear saints while in their earthly pilgrimage. But for their comfort they are told, "In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old."—Isa. lxiii. 9. Then surely he who has all power both in heaven and earth, and who in his love and in his pity redeemed them from the curse of the law of sin and death, by suffering the fearful penalty of that law in that body which was prepared him, will never leave them or forsake them, but will bring them off conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him that hath loved them and given himself for them, to whose great and holy name be all the glory.

You will please pardon me for having written so much that may not interest you. Our general health has been some better since we saw you at the Association. Write me soon. My wife joins me in love to you and all the dear brethren and sisters among you.

H. COX.

SHELburn, Ore., Nov. 8, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have been looking over some of my old SIGNS; and no difference how old the paper is, it seems that the contents are all new. The glorious gospel of the Son of God is like the garments of the children of Israel while they were passing through the wilderness; it never wears out nor waxes old. The doctrine of salvation by grace is a doctrine that we feed upon, and we can feed on no other. For we know that in our own case, if we had been left alone, we would have continued in sin. And the reason is, that the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit, because they are foolishness to him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Man in a state of nature is not spiritual, but carnal. Then there must a change take place; for the natural man is dead in trespasses and sins. Yea, the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint. There are wounds and bruises and putrefying sores from the sole of the foot even to the head. Again, the apostle says, "They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." "There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God." "Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips; their feet are swift to shed blood; and the way of peace they have not known. There is no fear of God before their eyes." Again, they are aliens from God, and strangers from the covenants of promise, are without hope, and without God in the world. This was not only the condition of the Jews, but of the Gentiles also. For the apostle says there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God. And the great Captain of our salvation saw the condition of his bride. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This love of "the world" was represented by the parable of the man that found a treasure hid in a field. He went and sold all that he had, and bought the field, for the treasure that was hid therein. Then, in view of this fact, the apostle could say, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." Yes, he laid aside the glory that he had with the Father before the world was, and took upon himself, not the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham. The offerings under the old covenant were the bodies of the beasts which were types and shadows; and it was necessary that Jesus should have somewhat to offer. Therefore when he came into the world he said, "A body hast thou prepared me." And he said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." And now what is the will of God? "This is the will of him that sent me, that of all that he hath given me I should lose nothing, but raise it up again at the last day." Then he came to fulfill the law in our law room and stead. And he being the head of the body, yea, more, he being the life also, when he laid down his life he laid down her life, and divine justice was satisfied; for that was all it ever demanded. "In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." And now the apostle says that "if one died for all, then were all dead." But he does not leave them there. The third, appointed morning he comes forth a victorious conqueror over death, hell and the grave. For he had said before, that he had power to lay down his life, and power to take it again. "No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." And now see how the prophet Isaiah portrays this event some seven hundred years beforehand. "All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "He is led as a sheep to the slaughter; and as a lamb is dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth. He is taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? for he is cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgressions of my people was he stricken. And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was there any deceit in his mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief." And what was all this for? Why, "In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them and carried them all the days of old." He is pressed as a cart with many sheaves. Again, "The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me." See him in the garden of Gethsemane, sweating as it were great drops of blood, falling down to the ground, and crying out, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Truly the poet could say,

"On him almighty vengeance fell,
That must have sunk a world to hell;
He bore it for his chosen race,
And thus became their hiding-place."

We hear a great deal said about offers; but this is the only offer that was ever made for the children of God; and the offering was accepted, and was complete; for the apostle says that "by one offering he hath forever perfected them that are sanctified." And again, "He that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." They are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, of the household of God, and are built up a spiritual house, a holy nation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people, that they should shew forth the praises of him who hath called them out of darkness and translated them into his glorious kingdom. And now ye are no more aliens and strangers, no more darkness, but light in the Lord. And we can see the fitness of the expression of the apostle John, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." Yes indeed, we who were in such a deplorable condition as has been shown in the outset, are now "the sons of God." And if sons, then heirs of God, and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God." Not by the will of the flesh, nor by the will of man, but of God. Ye now have the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The adoption has not taken place yet, but it is just as sure as if it had. The apostle to the Romans says that we which have the first fruits of the Spirit do groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. This will be at the resurrection, when these vile bodies of ours shall be changed and made like the body of our glorious Lord. Then will be brought to pass the saying, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law;" but God giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Yes, it is Christ and him crucified, the way, the truth and the life. There is no other way or name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved, only in and through the Lord Jesus Christ. It is not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. We hear the question asked sometimes, "Will not God save his people?" I would rather put it, Has he not saved them? Yes. The apostle says, "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." We see that the saving comes before the calling; and we see that the calling is a holy calling. And now it is to these that the apostle was talking when he said, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom he did foreknow, them he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth; who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God; who also maketh intercession for us," "according to the will of God." And if he makes intercession for us, it will be just as effectual as the atonement is. Not one of these little ones for whom Christ died shall ever perish; because he came to do the will of his Father, and that was to save his people, whom the Father had given him before the foundation of the world. And when he cried out on the cross, "It is finished!" it is reasonable to suppose that he meant the redemption of his people. And now he has entered in through the vail, that is to say, his flesh. You see the Jewish high priest entered in through the vail once a year; but now that vail is rent in twain from the top to the bottom; showing that the type was then brought to an end, because the antitype has come. And now the apostle says, "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us through the vail (that is to say, his flesh), and having a High Priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." He has not entered into that place made with hands, but into heaven itself, there to appear in the presence of God for us. And as the ringing of the golden bells on the high priest's robe was evidence to the people that their high priest still lived, even so as long as we can hear the gospel bells we may know that our High Priest liveth, and that he will bring us off at last conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him that loved us and gave himself for us. And when he comes to make up his jewels, will it be possible that this sin-defiled, corrupt worm of the dust will be among that number that have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb? Shall we be among that innumerable company that John saw standing on the sea of glass? Shall we sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and of the Lamb, saying, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty! just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints?" If so it will be enough.

D. BRIDGES.

ELGIN, Union Co., Ore.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send you a short letter from Elder W. C. Wisdom, of Missouri. If you think proper I would love to see it in the SIGNS. Elder Wisdom paid us a visit last June, and all the brethren who heard him were pleased with him.

Brother Beebe, I would like to read an article from you on Isa. xix. 18, 19, with the connection which follows.

In gospel bonds your brother, I hope,

G. E. MAYFIELD.

LOUISBURG, Mo., Sept. 13, 1893.

ELDER G. E. MAYFIELD—DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—After so long a time I will this morning try to answer your letter. I thought I would wait until after our association, and have something more to write. It closed on the fourth day of this month. We had a good meeting, and not a single discord in all the business transactions. All the preaching was salvation by grace, to the honor of God and the comfort of his saints who were present. The congregation was estimated from five to eight hundred people.

I will try to answer your questions. First, you ask for my views on the new man. I suppose you want to know what or who the new man is that is spoken of by Paul in Ephesians iv. 24. It appears evident to me that the apostle had allusion to that holy principle of spiritual life, with its holy desires and heavenly aspirations.

Your second question is, "Who is to put on the new man?" I answer, Those of Adam's race who are born again, born of God, who are created in Christ Jesus. How is he to be put on? "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt," &c.—Eph. iv. 22. The expression, "old man," refers to that which was first in manifestation; not the human form, but the natural being, with its earthly tendencies and sinful desires. If we be risen with Christ we should seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering."—Col. iii.; Eph. iv. 22; Rom. vi. 4; Eph. vi. 11. Many other parts of the Scriptures might be referred to, but I will only refer to these at this time.

You ask, "Do all men by nature possess the new man?" I answer, No, not one of them." "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned." All unregenerate men walk according to the course of this world (Eph. ii. 2), having no aspirations for heavenly things, but after the things of the world. Neither do I understand the Bible to teach that God, Christ, or any of the apostles commanded or exhorted the unregenerate man to put on the new man; but it is those who are risen with Christ, those who have heard him, and have been taught by him; those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious; those who have the Spirit of God in them; as many as are led by the Spirit of God.

Now, dear brother, it appears plain to me that the apostle in all his letters to the saints (for he wrote to none but saints) regards them as possessing two widely different and distinct natures. This is clearly set forth by Christ when he said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." That which is born of the flesh is born of a corruptible seed, and to a corruptible inheritance, which inheritance is eagerly sought after. But to be born of the Spirit is to be born of an incorruptible seed, to an incorruptible inheritance, which is undefiled, and fadeth not away. It is reserved in heaven for all the redeemed of the Lord.

So I conclude that to put off the old man is to put away lying, speaking truth every man with his neighbor; putting away idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, strife, seditions, envyings, revelings, and such like, which are the works of the flesh, and are contrary to the doctrine of Christ. To put on the new man is to walk in that strait and narrow way that leads to life; to love one another; to pray with and for one another; to be patient in tribulation; to be ready to every good work; to be gentle, showing all meekness to all men; to let our daily walk and conversation be after Christ.

Now, my dear brother, I have answered your questions in my weak way as best I can. These are my views; but I am open for instruction. I have not written this with a view of having it published. I do not think it worth the room it would take. It is too awkwardly written to go before the public (I mean the brethren), especially those able expounders of the Scriptures. When you read it I think you will be of the same opinion. I hope you will consider my weakness, and let me hear from you soon. My love to you and family, and to all the brethren in Grand Ronde Valley. Farewell.

W. C. WISDOM.

NEW HOLLAND, Ohio, Oct. 20, 1893.

TO THE dear brethren and sisters who compose the churches at North Berwick and Bowdoinham, Maine. Grace, mercy and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. May one who feels unworthy to call you by the endearing name of brother or sister, who feels too vile and full of sin to dare claim a relationship with you and with the dear Lord Jesus Christ, come for a few brief moments into your solemn assembly, in order to testify of the goodness and mercy and long-suffering of our covenant-keeping God in caring for one of his afflicted poor, who has so long been helpless upon a couch of pain, and who has put it into the hearts of you, his children, to send me not one but many cups of cold water, not one of which will go unnoticed or unrewarded by him whose eye is over the righteous, and whose ear is open unto their cry.

When our dear sister, Abbie G. Clark, first sent me word that she would like to do some sewing for me, I scrupled much as to whether it was right to thus burden the dear one, and place myself under such heavy obligation to any one. My pride, which has been a terrible thorn in the flesh ever since the hand of affliction came upon me, rose in rebellion against allowing even my dear kindred in Christ to become acquainted with the exhausted condition of my wardrobe and the true state of my finances; but a repetition of sister Clark's kind offer, and a word of persuasion from others, finally caused me to lay all pride and scruples aside, and to gratefully accept the offer. What a source of comfort and joy it has been to me none can know but him who sees all things. Now that my limbs discharge the dropsical water constantly, more than a gallon escaping during every twelve hours, if I sleep at all my clothing becomes saturated, and on awaking I often have to change. The effusion both stains and rots the goods, which, together with the offensive odor, renders it necessary to have my clothing frequently cleansed by washing. This, together with my heavy weight, and my inability to move about on my couch, as do others, is a constant wear on the material. I wear the same clothing at night that I do during the day, because I cannot get into bed and cover up warm and snug as others do, but must sit both day and night on the edge of my couch, and, owing to the inflammation and soreness of the flesh, without any covering except a very light shawl. A lady once remarked to me, "You surely do not ever wear out your clothing, as you cannot work nor go about." How mistaken! In my peculiar condition my dresses become worn and faded very much sooner than they ever did in health. I trust my dear kindred will pardon me for thus so minutely entering into the details of my everyday life. I do so that you may know why I have so willingly, so thankfully and joyfully accepted the donation of so many wrappers from your kind and generous hands; and now, my dear kindred in Christ, our adorable Lord, I desire to be allowed to thank you one and all in my poor, stammering way for your great kindness, and also for your great christian forbearance and patience with me. I stay so long among you, have long been such a burden to the dear ones at large, that it is a great marvel that all do not lose patience and tire of me.

To dear sister Clark, who, though herself not strong, has made up the material given her for me so neatly and tastefully that I feel I am quite spoiled, I feel that I owe unbounded thanks. While she has labored for my needs in this line, dear sister Attie Curtis deserves credit and mention for her great kindness in disposing of my little book. Through its sale I now am surrounded with many much-needed comforts that I could not otherwise have had. For all this, and for your patronage of the book, I desire to be very thankful, not only to all the dear kindred, but also to the great and good and wise Giver of every good and perfect gift. Notwithstanding it has pleased the Lord to show me great and sore troubles, how sweetly and surely has he verified his promise that "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee;" and though I suffer such excruciating distress and pain all the time, he loadeth me daily with benefits, and daily strews my path with the choice golden blessings of his beneficent hand. There are times when Satan seems to gain the mastery so far as to fill me with darkness, coldness and fear; but his presence and power have been so wondrously and plainly made manifest in my poor life that I cannot doubt his living, abiding existence and presence, and his all-saving power and love. Let us all trust him, for he has said that he will be with us even unto death.

With a tender, affectionate farewell, a prayer that I may not be forgotten by you, and that you will ever remember me in your prayers, I am one of the very least, if one at all,

MARY PARKER.

INDIGENT FUND.

DURING the past year the brethren and friends have contributed nearly two hundred dollars, to assist us in sending the SIGNS to those who love to read them, but are not able to pay for them. We sent the paper this year to from three to five hundred of these readers, and if our brethren feel willing and able to assist us, we shall try to continue them on our list for the coming year. Judging from the letters of gratitude we receive, there are none who more highly appreciate the paper than those who receive it from this fund. All remittances for this fund will be acknowledged in the SIGNS, and our readers will thereby be enabled to see just what support the fund is receiving.

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 27, 1893.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE PORTION OF THE LORD.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—When convenient please give your views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES on the text, Isaiah liii. 12, particularly who is meant by "the great," and "the strong?" And in what way is the spoil divided?

Yours in love,

W. J. MAX.

PINSON FORK, Ky., July 7, 1893.

REPLY.

"Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors."—Isa. liii. 12.

While desirous of complying with the request of our esteemed brother so far as presenting our views may go, it is not without much reluctance that we attempt to expound in this text what may be mysterious to his understanding. But since nothing but the truth can be of value to any believer there can be no good reason for withholding such sentiments as may seem right to our mind. If the truth of God has been revealed to one of the children of his grace it is not individual property; it belongs to the whole family of the redeemed. If our most cherished idea is not given by the Spirit, then it is not the truth of God, and it is of the very highest importance that it should be exposed to the light of comparison with the inspired standard, that its falsehood may be made manifest. Certainly there can be no profit in believing a lie, however it may seem delightful to the natural mind. It is still false, even though it may be kept out of the light of scriptural condemnation. So, truth can always afford to bear examination; the light will vindicate it. There can be no impropriety in comparing any point of doctrine with the inspired record. If found consistent with this standard it is established; if it will not bear this test, it is already condemned. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. viii. 20.

It must be observed that the verse cited by our inquiring brother is only the closing expression of that prophetic declaration of which the whole chapter is but a small portion. It is needless to tell believers that the end and substance of this prophecy is the testimony of Jesus. He only was wounded for our transgressions, and was bruised for our iniquities. With no other stripes but those which he received are his people healed. This identifies the gracious Redeemer as the character unto whom the promise of God is recorded in our text. It can be none other but the man whom the Lord made strong for himself, and upon whom he laid help, as upon one who is able "to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." The great mystery of godliness is embraced in the subject involved in this infinitely glorious consummation of all the work and sufferings of the holy Savior of his people from their sins. The promise is not a merely momentary impulse of divine goodness and mercy. It is the declaration of that eternal counsel of the immutable will of God in which all the chosen vessels of mercy are ordained to be holy and without blame before him in love. That decree embraced the choice of Jesus Christ as the life of every member of his body, and secured that perfect righteousness in him by which all his members are freely justified from all things which the law could lay to their charge. But in the fulfillment of that divine purpose of redemption it was provided that he must satisfy the utmost requirement of infinite justice. By reason of their being involved in sin it was only by bearing their sins in his own body on the tree of Calvary that he could deliver them from just condemnation. This was the full completion of his inconceivably glorious service in saving his people from their sins, by which he did finish the work which was given him to do. In thus satisfying the utmost demand of justice against his body, Jesus did blot out the handwriting of ordinances which was against us, and took it out of the way; so that now instead of denouncing wrath against the subjects of electing love, that same justice commands, "Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom."—Job xxxiii. 24. In the salvation of his people from their sins Jesus magnified the law and paid every claim of justice, so that nothing could be laid to the charge of one of those for whom he gave himself a ransom. No created being had the power thus to meet and satisfy the great and flaming sword of inflexible justice. Less than the omnipotence of God could not give himself up to death, and then by his own immortality, with all his body rise in newness of life "far above all principality and power and dominion." In this was fulfilled this promise of the mighty God. It was in bringing again from the dead our Lord Jesus, as that great Shepherd of his sheep, and as the victorious Conqueror of death and hell, that the eternal counsel of God was manifestly revealed in dividing him a portion with the great. It is impossible for the conscious sinner to conceive of any greatness like that of the holiness and justice of the law of God, in which he reads his own helpless condemnation. It is in contemplation of this amazing miracle of grace that the question is asked by this enraptured prophet, "Shall the prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful captive delivered? But thus saith the Lord, Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered; for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children. And I will feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh; and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine; and all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob."—Isa. xlix. 24-26. This is the wonder of wonders in the experience of every subject of redeeming grace. In his ability to satisfy the utmost requirement of the holy law of God, our Lord Jesus conquered all the powers which held his members under condemnation. They were indeed "lawful captives," and they were the prey of the mighty. By the sacrifice of himself the dear Redeemer delivered them from their terrible captivity. It was none other than divine justice which held them captive; and the miracle of grace appears in that Jesus did so fully satisfy that justice that it not only released the lawful captives, but interposed all the omnipotence of God for their salvation from the sins by which they had been brought under condemnation. There is no comfort to the saints in the carnal notion of a strife between God and the devil, in which the saints are represented as captives under the power of Satan, and the Lord is seeking to redeem them from his dreadful oppression. The utmost efforts of earth and hell can do nothing except the power is given them from above. The devil never had any lawful claim against the chosen people of God. When they sold themselves for nought to the service of sin, they could not convey a just title in the transaction, for the reason that they were already the property of the Savior, having been given to him in the everlasting covenant, which is eternal. In dividing to our Lord a portion with the great, our God gave him the perfect righteousness by which he magnified the holiness of divine justice in the condemnation of sin in his people, and in the same wonderful gift was included the full justification of every member of his elect body through his own complete obedience to every tittle of the holy law. Thus the division which is effected by the hand of God does award to Jesus the just recompense for all his toil and suffering, and also that same divine decree does give to his own unwavering truth and justice everything which can be demanded in satisfaction of the law which condemned the chosen people whose sins were laid upon their mighty Redeemer.

The reason assigned for the division promised is in accord with this understanding of the division. It is "Because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors." In all this great work of our strong Redeemer he is identified with his people, and they are one with him. According to the predestinating grace of God all his saints are chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. So Moses wrote, "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel; for the Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance."—Deut. xxxii. 8, 9. It never was the purpose of God that this portion of the Lord should include Esau and Amalek. Neither was it ever the will of your Father that one of the little ones of Jacob should perish. Therefore, the great justice of God must approve the righteous decree by which it is forever established that "No weapon that is formed against thee [the Zion of God] shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment, thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." There can be no division of the heritage of the divine Son of God from the portion which is appointed unto every one of his people, since he recognizes them as his own brethren, and his word declares that they are "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." In pouring out his soul unto death, he paid the debt which justice demanded of his body, the church. He alone could satisfy that demand, because justice could accept nothing but the life of the sinner, and that life was the light which was in Jesus.—John i. 4. Only as being thus identified in life with his people could Jesus bear their sins. Justice could never be satisfied with even a perfect substitute. The sentence is, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." The risen Lord said to the disconsolate disciples, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?"—Luke xxiv. 25, 26. Evidently this question indicates that there was not only necessity for the suffering of Christ, but that it was the only way in which infinite justice could be honored. It was not by arbitrary power that Jesus was made to bear the sins of his people when he was numbered with the transgressors. It pleased the Lord to bruise him for the sins of his members. Thus in being numbered with the transgressors according to infinite justice he bare their sins in his own body on the tree.

It was by this one offering that he perfected forever all them that were sanctified by God, the Father, and preserved in himself, and who are called by grace as they are manifested in time. He did in his one sacrifice of himself without spot to God make everlasting intercession for the transgressors. His blood is the never failing memorial by which justification unto life is secured to every one for whom that precious blood was shed. This is the antitype of that blood without which Aaron must not enter the holy place that was made with hands. By his own precious blood our gracious Lord ever intercedes for all whose sins he bore. He is not now in his own person learning obedience by the things which he suffered. It is by his triumphant work of making an end of sin, that he ever liveth to make intercession for the transgressors. While he lives in the glory which was his before the world was, every one for whom he suffered is vindicated by that fact from all condemnation. He says, "Because I live, ye shall live also." This is his intercession for the transgressors. If one of all the sins laid on him were still charged against his people, then justice could never have allowed the bars of death to be broken in his resurrection. Thus the very fact that he lives is the everlasting and effectual intercession for every transgressor whose sins he bore.

By the terms "great" and "strong" in the text we understand the justice and holiness of that divine law under which the saints were held as condemned captives. We know of no other power which is either great or strong, except that inflexible law of which our Lord declared, that it should not pass away until it was fulfilled in every jot and tittle. In satisfying and magnifying the pure and holy sentence of that law, our victorious Lord ransomed his portion from the bondage under which they were justly held captive, and in his victory they all are forever justified. As his righteousness is given to them, they can never come into condemnation. They are free from the law by the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; and now their allegiance is alone due to him who loved them and gave himself for them.

PLEASE DO.

It will be of great assistance to us, and save us many dollars, if the brethren and friends who sent on a new subscriber with their own subscription for this year will either see or write the parties, and inform them that their subscription expires at the end of this year, and request them to renew, or if they do not intend to become regular subscribers to have their paper discontinued.

We should be sorry to discontinue from our list the name of a single person who intends to renew their subscription for 1894, but we cannot carry their names long on an uncertainty. They have now had the paper for about a year, and must know by this time whether they like it or not.

CLOSE OF VOLUME SIXTY-ONE.

WITH this number we complete the sixty-first year of the publication of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Sixty-one years—about two generations! How few are left of those dear old soldiers of the cross who first subscribed their names to the support of the publication! They have nearly all been called home. Yet God in his great mercy has raised up other able defenders of his truth, and we are assured that he will never leave himself without witnesses. While all things pertaining to this time state are continually changing, the truth of God always remains the same; and the same old, old story as told in the experience of the saints and the proclamation of his gospel is ever new.

Of late years there have been some who have accused the SIGNS OF THE TIMES of changing from the principles upon which it was founded nearly two-thirds of a century ago. While we are painfully aware of our many shortcomings, and our utter inability of ourselves to write or do anything as we should, yet we do feel that we are established in the principles published in the Prospectus of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES in the year 1832, and with the ability which God has been pleased to give us we have contended for those precious truths. We have from time to time republished these articles, and we have but to refer our accusers to them, and to the articles found in the columns of the paper now, to refute their slander. We have no more respect for error on account of its age than we have for the new inventions and innovations of anti-christ of the present day; but we do feel that that little band of brethren who at the "Black Rock Division" stood so boldly in defense of the faith as it was once delivered to the saints, against the torrent of error and innovations that had well-nigh obliterated the visibility of the church of God, must have been after passing through this fiery ordeal purged of all worldly ambitions and aspirations in drafting these principles of faith; and until it can be shown that they are not sustained by the inspired word of God we must ever hold them sacred.

The circumstances of the year just closing have in general been very much the same as the many preceding it, and consequently reference to incidents would have to be a repetition of what has been written time and again; but we do not feel willing to close without expressing our appreciation of the kind forbearance of our brethren and friends with our many imperfections, and returning our sincere thanks to them for their support of the paper, both by their able contributions to its columns, as well as by their financial assistance.

With these brief remarks we bid you adieu for 1893.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—In the city of Middletown, N. Y., on Sunday night, Dec. 3d, 1893, of asthma, after many years of suffering, Mrs. Harriet Arminda Beyea, aged about 74 years.

Although Mrs. Beyea had never made a public profession of her faith in the Redeemer of sinners, she was a lover of God's truth, and a regular attendant upon the ministry of the word whenever circumstances permitted. Her husband, Mr. Thomas K. Beyea, who was a twin brother of Deacon Samuel B. Beyea, of the New Vernon Church, died on August 16th, 1881. She was a daughter of the late ex-Sheriff Horton, of Sullivan Co., N. Y., and is survived by one brother and one sister.

The funeral services were held at her home in Middletown, and were conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins; after which her mortal remains were laid beside those of her companion in the cemetery of the New Vernon Church.

BROTHER Wm. O. Beakes departed this life at his residence near Howell's Depot, N. Y., on Friday evening, Dec. 8th, 1893, in the 86th year of his age. Just two weeks previous to his death he fell and broke his hip, and this with general debility caused his death.

The deceased was born in the town of Walkkill, N. Y., and was a son of Joseph and Anna Beakes. He was married to Abigail Howell in the year 1835, and after a married life of about fifty-six years, on the 17th of April, 1891, she entered into everlasting rest, leaving her aged companion to walk life's weary road alone. They were both baptized by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, in the fellowship of the New Vernon Old School Baptist Church, on Sunday, Sept. 24th, 1843, and continued honored and beloved members of said church during their sojourn on earth. They are survived by two sons and three daughters, two brothers and three sisters, with the church, to mourn their departure.

The funeral services were held at the New Vernon meeting-house, and were conducted by his pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins; after which his mortal remains were laid by the side of those of his companion, who had preceded him "to the house appointed for all living."

"While on the verge of life I stand,
And view the scene on either hand,
My spirit struggles with my clay,
And longs to wing its flight away."

Harry S. Halstead, elder son of the late John R. Halstead, Esq., of Unionville, Orange Co., N. Y., died on Saturday evening, Dec. 8th, 1893, in Unionville, at the residence of his mother, Mrs. Emma S. Halstead, aged about 22 years and 6 months.

Harry was a bright, kind-hearted young man, respected and esteemed by the entire community. He possessed more than ordinary business ability. He was in the store with his father in Unionville for some time. At the time of his death he was in business for himself in New York. Only a few weeks since he looked forward to a career of business usefulness which would be satisfactory to those with whom he had dealings and honorable to himself.

The tidings of his dangerous illness, followed so soon by the shock of his death, has cast a gloom over the community. Devoted friends watched tenderly around his bedside; but the care of friends and the gentle ministry of those nearest and dearest to him could not save him from the grasp of death.

Harry had bright prospects for the future, and died just when life seemed most attractive, desirable, and the hardest to give up; but faith triumphed, and in sweet submission he yielded to the divine requirement of him who doeth all things well.

To the afflicted family we can only offer our profound and heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the care of the living heavenly Father.

The funeral services were held in the Unionville Presbyterian Church on Tuesday at two o'clock p. m., and were conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins, of Middletown.

What is life? 'Tis but a vapor;
Soon it vanishes away.

J. C., Jr.

DIED—In the city of Lambertsville, N. J., Nov. 30th, 1893, Mrs. Mary Pierson, aged about 73 years.

The subject of this notice was a member of the Old School Baptist Church of Hopewell, N. J., but how long she had been a member of the church I do not know; but during the fifteen years or more perhaps that I have been acquainted with her she clearly showed that salvation by grace was her only trust. For a number of years she suffered much bodily affliction, so much so that she was deprived, a large portion of the time for a number of years, from assembling with the church at the regular meetings for worship; but she was of a cheerful disposition, and her company was very pleasant. She had expressed a desire that she might not be sick and helpless long, to be a care and burden to her friends, and her desire was granted; for the day she died she had been out in the yard, came back into the house, seated herself in a chair, and immediately expired, without a struggle or dying groan. She left a number of children and grandchildren, as well as other relatives and friends, and the church of which she was a worthy member. Her husband died a year ago, who was not a member of the church, but had no use for the vain theories of the present time, but believed that the church of God was redeemed, and not a member of the body of Christ would perish.

Her funeral was numerously attended Dec. 2d, 1893, and these declarations of the Lord Jesus Christ were used to base some remarks upon: "And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. While I was with them in the world I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the Scripture might be fulfilled."

ALSO,

DIED—Very unexpectedly, on Dec. 8th, 1893, in the city of Trenton, N. J., Miss Ruth A. Holcombe, aged 44 years and 2 months.

Sister Holcombe was rather indisposed for about two weeks, but was considered not in any way much sick, but merely the effects of a cold which she had; but the day she passed away she called for her friends, but they were out at the time, except a lady who was boarding there. She hastened to the room where the loved one was, who said to the lady, "I am dying;" but while there was a hope that the dear one was mistaken, in about fifteen minutes it was evident that she was not mistaken, for she was dead. It was a crushing blow upon the dear family, as well as her many friends. She passed away very calmly. The suffocation that seized her appeared to be the result of inward drowning, or an overflowing of the heart, caused by the breaking of an abscess or tumor in her stomach; but be that as it may, death came thus unexpectedly.

Sister Holcombe had been baptized about fifteen years, and during the time that she was a member of the church she adorned her profession by a well-ordered life. When in the company of the members of the church her theme was concerning the finished work of the dear Redeemer, and the walk of his children in this vale of sorrow; and she was so mild, yet cheerful, that she had no unkind words to utter against any, but was truly a peace-maker in all the relations of life. Her membership was in the Second Hope-well Church, or Harborton, and great to them is the loss. She has left one brother, one sister, and numerous other relatives and friends.

Her funeral was at Stockton, N. J., the 11th inst., and was very numerous attended, and there were many tear-bedimmed eyes as the last farewell gaze was given the loved one sleeping in death; and it was certainly the most pleasant corpse that the writer ever saw. The text upon the sad occasion was 2 Cor. v. 1-5. Yours in sorrow,
WM. J. PURINGTON.

ORDINATIONS.

At the request of the Old School Baptist Church of Christ called Holly Springs, Newton Co., Ga., the following named Elders, to wit, J. G. Eubanks, E. L. McDaniel and Wm. Adams, met with the church on Saturday before the second Sunday in December, 1893, for the purpose of ordaining brother J. F. Moss to the functions of the gospel ministry.

The presbytery organized with Elder Wm. Adams Moderator.

Then proceeded to the ordination as follows:

Elder Wm. Adams examined the church as to the qualifications of brother Moss, which was satisfactory.

Then proceeded to examine brother Moss touching his faith and call to the ministry, which was satisfactory.

Prayer by Elder E. L. McDaniel.

Laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

Elder J. G. Eubanks then proceeded to deliver the charge.

The right hand of fellowship was given by the presbytery, followed by the brethren and sisters.

Adjourned in regular order.

WM. ADAMS, Mod.

S. H. STARR, JR., Clerk.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

E. Chandler, N. Y., 3, Mrs. Ann White, Md., 2.—Total, $5.00.

EXTENSION OF TIME.

FOR several numbers we have published special terms to subscribers already on our list for procuring new subscribers before January 1st, 1894; but as some have complained that the time is too short, we have decided to extend it, and until March first, 1894, we authorize every subscriber on our list to act as agent for us in procuring new subscribers, and for every new subscriber they send us they may retain one dollar, and send us one dollar. These terms apply only to new subscribers.

For every two new subscribers and three dollars sent us we will enter the two new names on our list for 1894, and credit an old subscriber one year; making three subscriptions for a year for three dollars, and additional new ones may be sent at one dollar each.

N. B.—No new subscriber can send to this office and get the paper for himself for less than the regular rate.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:
Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.
Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.
Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address
GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK.

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE CHURCH HISTORY

FROM CREATION TO A. D. 1885.

BY ELDERS C. B. & S. HASSELL.

[The supply of the Cloth and of the Leather bindings is exhausted, and before running any more we must have some idea of how many copies will be wanted; we will therefore receive remittances for these books to be delivered the last of the year, or money refunded.]

This book contains 1084 pages, together with a fine steel engraving of the senior author, Elder C. B. Hassell. In the front part is a complete "Table of Contents," divided into chapters, and in the back part is a complete Index, making it most convenient for reference. The work is now ready, and will be mailed to any address, postage prepaid, at the following prices for single copies:

Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt...$5 00
Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt... 4 00
Leather, Hand Bound..... 2 50
Cloth Bound..... 2 00

CLUB RATES.

The price at which the History is sold by the single copy will not admit of much reduction for club rates; but to partially repay our brethren and friends for interesting themselves in its circulation, we are authorized to make the following reduction for six or more copies ordered at one time:

Six Copies of Genuine Turkey Morocco, Gilt.....$27 00
Six Copies of Imitation Turkey Morocco, Gilt..... 23 50
Six Copies of Leather Hand Bound 13 50
Six Copies of Cloth Bound..... 10 00

The order may be for six or more copies, all of one style of binding, or assorted, as may be desired; but no order received for less than six copies, and in all cases the cash must accompany the order. The books can be ordered each sent to a different address, or all to one person, as preferred. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

INDEX TO VOLUME 61.

COMMUNICATIONS.		F.		M., J. A.		EDITORIALS.
A.		3, 327		299		Introductory to Volume Sixty-One
Alexander, Lydia	25, 54	Faulkner, P. J.	9	Martin, J.	331	The Apostles' Doctrine (1 Tim. iv. 11)	12
Allison, J. P.	179, 239, 325	Fisher, M. D.	34, 230	Murphy, Garrett	358	Works of Faith (James ii. 14-17)	20
Anderson, C. W.	222, 366	Francis, A. B.	63, 73	Norris, Thos.	63	New Jerusalem (Rev. xxii. 1-6)	28
A Poor Sinner	343	Fairchild, J. W.	70, 243, 333	Newton, H. W.	379	Give None Offense (1 Cor. x. 32, 33)	36
Allen, L. L.	370	Flournoy, R.	78	Nobles, E. A.	390	The Sevenfold Light (Isa. xxx. 26)	44
Adams, Wm.	382	Fetter, C. G.	129	Oliver, M. D.	17	Revival of the Widow's Son (1 Kings xvii. 21, 22)	52
B.		Fanny	287	Opdyke, R. M.	78	Mr. Battersby's Sermon (Matt. xiii. 33)	60
Bowen, Mattie S.	9, 211	Farley, Jefferson	379	Oliver, J. F.	242	Building upon the Foundation (1 Cor. iii. 12)	61
Butler, B. F.	10, 187	Grafton, Wm.	43	Powell, P. J.	2, 215, 315, 397	To Correspondents	62
Beck, F. W.	13, 147	Grafton, J. A.	113, 143, 331	Poulson, T. M.	14	Adoption (Romans viii. 15)	68
Broder, Jos.	18, 238	Gwartney, A.	115	Parker, Mary	14, 71, 77, 139, 306, 411	Thy Will be Done (1 Tim. ii. 4; iv. 10; 2 Peter iii. 9)	76
Badger, J. N.	27	Garrard, S. H.	262	Pate, B. S.	50	Ordained to Condemnation (Jude 4)	84
Butler, Lewis	34	Guernsey, S. C. F.	270	Purington, Wm. J.	73, 90	The Righteous Judgment of God (2 Thess. i. 6-10)	92
Bruce, Jos.	34, 115, 371	Hanks, Lee	3, 94, 187, 271	Power, J. S.	157	Covenant Meetings	93
Battersby, J.	35	Hibbs, Ellen	11	Purvines, C. C.	175	Covetousness (1 Tim. vi. 10)	100
Bolt, S. E.	42	Hamlet, N. H.	23	Pedigo, A. T.	245	Christ Made Perfect (Hebrews v. 9)	108
Beeman, J. C.	46, 322	Hanson, Mima	34, 331	Phillips, Eliz.	294	Keeping the Sabbath (Exodus xx. 8)	116
Brown, E. A.	54	Hubbell, J. D.	42, 171, 344	Parker, Susie	371	The Blessing of Abraham (Gal. iii. 8)	124
Burch, N. S. & L. J.	59	Hawk, Nettie	43	Rutledge, J. A.	15	Chastening of Israel (Isa. v. 14)	132
Bartley, D.	85, 105, 145, 233	Hart, I. M.	46	Richardson, A.	15, 319	A Handful of Corn (Psalm lxxii. 16, 17)	140
Burleson, J. F.	99	Harvey, H. A.	51, 260	Rittenhouse, E.	75, 338, 370	Praise in the Wrath of Man (Psalm lxxvi. 10)	148
Burks, W. P.	127	Hart, R. F.	54	Rees, Maria	77	Gospel Preaching (2 Tim. ii. 15)	156
Bridger, Thos.	130	H., R. F.	58	Runyan, Nevada	78	Offending Members (Matt. xviii. 9)	164
Brees, Almora	143	Hutchinson, A. D.	59	Rumney, Hester	86	Stand Fast (2 Thess. ii. 15)	172
Boggs, E. H.	155	Hilyard, Jos.	175	Reed, Amos	142	Self-Examination (2 Cor. xiii. 5)	180
Brink, F. S.	161, 193	Hecker, L.	186	Rounsavell, M. M.	246	Your Reasonable Service (Rom. xii. 1, 2)	188
Boyd, Mrs. J. K.	179, 194, 325, 331	Hamilton, C. W.	247, 342	Rochelle, Lucinda	278	First Last, and Last First (Matt. xix. 30)	196
Beeman, J.	195	Heath, C. C.	262	Runkle, S. E.	283	The Unfailing Refuge (Psalm lv. 22)	204
Baird, L. M.	245	Hagans, A. H.	282	Street, Mrs. J.	22, 386	Seeking Jesus (Matt. xxviii. 5)	212
Bundy, B.	259, 262	Hawthorne, Fanny	290	Swartout, Kate	51, 202	The Throne of Grace (Hebrews iv. 16)	220
Brewster, Lucinda	270	Hamilton, B. F.	295	Supplee, S. G.	63, 286	Thorns (Matt. xxvii. 29)	228
Bevins, M. A.	286	Himes, Lizzie	323	Storkes, Jennie	135, 294	Walking Worthily (Eph. iv. 1-3)	236
Bevins, T. J.	291	Hixon, Harriet	341	Sayer, S. E.	174	The Word of Life (Ezek. xvi. 6)	244
Bolt, W. L.	298	Hobbs, H. M.	347	Sawin, J. G.	178	Footsteps of the Flock	252
Bundy, James	314	Hallett, Mr.	353	Slawson, W. B.	214, 358	Puritan Laws	260
Bradbeer, Samuel	342	Hord, M. D.	363	Smith, E. L.	223	Pittsburg Sunday	260
Bartlet, Eldan	343	Ivey, Charles	263	Shepherd, A.	259	Light in Darkness (Psalm xviii. 11)	268
Bogle, M. N.	398	Johannes	131	Speirs, R.	319	The Great White Throne (Rev. xx. 11)	276
Bridges, D.	410	Jenkins, Benton	161	Shaddock, W. H.	334	Blessed Mourners (Matt. v. 4)	284
C.		Jones, H. B.	253	Strong, R. M.	359	Infidel Baptist Doctrine	292
Curry, H. M.	5, 30, 101, 127, 153, 321, 403	Jones, Adela	314	Stinson, J. E.	395	Condemnation and Justification (Romans v. 18)	300
Chick, F. A.	27, 41, 57, 89, 121, 137, 169, 201, 207, 229, 249, 258, 265, 282, 307, 329, 358, 361, 385, 395, 401	Johnson, D. G.	339	Thomas, S. W.	3, 222	Fruits (Matthew vii. 20)	308
Curtis, A. A.	54, 138, 266, 342, 346, 395	Justice, J. M.	350	Titmus, David	19, 155, 347	Fellowship of Comfort (Romans i. 11, 12)	316
Coulter, B. F.	91, 170, 209, 221, 230, 297, 345, 393	Johnson, W. B.	398	Taylor, Ruth	145	Faith of the Centurion (Matthew viii. 11, 12)	324
Cox, H.	122, 147, 178, 210, 235, 241, 281, 305, 362, 369, 409	Kercheval, W. F.	27	Theobald, E.	147	Who is a Disciple (Luke xiv. 26)	332
Cox, W. C.	139	Kennard, D.	135	Thompson, R. B.	207	The Seal of God (Ezekiel ix. 4)	340
Coddington, Abbie	177	Kinney, P. S.	186, 245, 307	Thomas, J. L.	219	Brazen Serpent (Num. xxi. 8)	348
Cole, Thos.	206, 214	Keene, F. W.	193, 250, 266	Thomas, Z.	219	Salt of the Earth (Matt. v. 13)	356
Crask, James	218	Kidwell, Eli T.	242	Touchstone, J. L.	227	Justification by Works (James ii. 24)	364
Case, Rd.	254	Kelsey, S. A.	246	Teague, J. A.	275, 330	Clergymen and Vice	365
Cloud, H. S.	261	Kessler, Dora	258	Teague, E. C.	313	Deliverance of Zion (Zech. ii. 7)	372
Cheney, L. D.	262	Keys, G. E.	342	True, J. M.	407	Leprosy in the Flesh	373
Clark, A. M.	307	Lester, A. B.	95	Vail, D. M.	1, 230	Watchfulness (Matt. xxv. 13)	380
Cox, F. L.	314	Lay, Margrey	119	Varnes, M. H.	47	Follow Peace (Hebrews xii. 14)	388
Carter, T. J.	334	Linn, M.	127	Varnes, E. D.	58	Confession and Belief (Romans x. 8-10)	396
D.		Long, S. A.	151, 366	Van Horn, E. M.	211	Fervent Charity (1 Peter iv. 7, 8)	404
Durand, Silas H.	1, 14, 49, 81, 97, 139, 225, 266, 273, 285, 289, 323, 337, 377	Lively, W.	151, 206, 234, 255, 294, 382	Vanmeter, I. N.	347	The Portion of the Lord (Isaiah liii. 12)	412
Dance, Milton	55, 270, 394	Leedom, Lizzie P.	257	Winfield, D. F.	34	Close of Volume Sixty-One	413
Durand, Bessie	119, 185, 231, 371	Lewis, M. P.	293	White, Lizzie	155
Davis, Cecil	123	Leonard, D. M.	299	Wyman, Sarah	167
Dove, A. F.	246, 247	Long, F. O.	319	Williams, Silas	203
Dale, J. F.	287	L., J. A.	398	Williams, W. B.	207
Dodson, R. L.	327	Lecates, C. A.	406	Welborn, W. R.	217, 326
Davis, M. E.	341	Mayfield, G. E.	27, 411	Wells, Rebecca	231
Dudley, Thos. P.	365	May, W. J.	33, 98, 154, 299	Wagner, James	107, 274
E.		McConnell, John	74	Ware, M. S.	327
Elmendorph, R. A.	99	Meredith, P. F.	75	Wall, J. Q. A.	330
Ensor, Rachel	229	M., J.	114	Walker, Mattie	347
		McKean, M. J.	174	Walker, R. A.	366
		Matthew, M. B.	214	West, P.	366
		Morgan, A. C. R.	217	Williamson, A. H.	378
		Meredith, J. B.	223	Wisdom, W. C.	411
		Morningstar, A. & S.	239	Yeoman, J. H.	91, 218
		McAlpine, Malcom	254

OBITUARIES.

A.
Atherton, Mrs. J.	151
Adams, E. H.	223
Arnold, Mrs. S. C.	295
Arbuckle, Jos.	303, 335
Ashburn, Mrs. C.	336
B.
Blocker, Mrs. E. & W. H.	6
Bowen, L. C.	7
Boys, Hannah	15
Baker, Mrs. Emma	31
Burroughs, R. H.	47
Baldwin, M. J.	47
Brown, Mrs. L.	80
Bar, Mrs. H. N.	111
Batten, Eli	151
Bogart, C. A.	159
Ballard, Mr. & Mrs. Jonathan	175
Been, Wm.	199
Brasel, Mrs. M.	263
Bradbury, Benj.	263
Burch, Mrs. L. J.	278
Bishop, Mrs. H. B.	311
Butler, Lewis	327
Brooks, Deacon D.	335
Blizzard, L. A.	335
Butler, Mrs. M. R.	351
Brehm, G. W.	351
Bellis, Mrs. L.	359
Benson, Mrs. L.	383
Bickers, Mrs. H. F.	383
Bailey, Mrs. M. E.	391
Beyea, Mrs. H. A.	413
Beakes, Wm. O.	413
C.
Craig, Mrs. R. A.	15
Carpenter, Mrs. A. M.	16
Campbell, Mrs. M. J.	47
Clendenning, Margaret	72
Carmon, Mrs. J.	87
Carpenter, Mrs. L.	95
Cockerham, P. C.	103
Chamberlain, Mrs. S.	111
Copeland, Elder J. B.	151
Cox, A. M.	159
Carroll, Mrs. A.	207
Cole, Leah	223
Carey, Mrs. S.	247
Canon, F. J.	311
Creig, Mrs. J.	351
Cooper, Mrs. C.	367
D.
Davis, Mrs. E. & Parthena	64
Dance, Mrs. Milton	103
Dennison, Mrs. E. A.	391
E.
Elmendorf, Elias	15
Elsea, Mrs. D.	15
Edmonson, Mrs. Charles	143
Emory, Mrs. E. A.	208
Elmendorf, N. M.	295
F.
Foster, Mrs. J.	55
French, Mrs. C. L.	55
Faulk, Mrs. M. J.	103
Faulkner, E. M.	111
Frazier, Mrs. R.	167
Fooks, Mrs. S. A.	231
Furbush, Mrs. M.	407
G.
Gorsuch, Mrs. Arian	31
Greenland, Mrs. Rebecca	39
Guernsey, Ira	40
Gray, Mrs. N.	87
Gordon, Gen. A.	87
Garland, Mrs. R.	119
Goodall, Mrs. L. B.	119
Gainer, H. T.	127
Grafton, Mrs. Wm.	183
Gladden, Abram	327

Gill, G. W.	367
Gadsby, John	407
H.
Huntley, M. E.	23
Hardy, J. L.	47
Henderson, Ann	64
Haggard, Mrs. S.	87
Horr, Mrs. A.	103
Holeman, Daniel	111
Holeman, M. B.	127
Hastings, W. L.	135
Hearing, Mrs. V. A.	159
Harding, Elliot	167
Hall, Dr. J. H.	183
Hasting, Elisha	183
Hartenbower, Mrs. M.	183
Horton, Mrs. A. T.	199
Halstead, J. R.	247
Huffman, Deacon J.	279
Hursey, Mary E. & Mr.	279
Hutchings, Mrs. N.	351
Holeman, Mrs. M. A.	391
Hands, John	391
Halstead, Harry S.	413
Holcombe, Ruth A.	413
J.
Jarrell, Mrs. E. J.	119
Jeter, Mrs. S. E.	183
Johnson, Nancy	335
K.
Keller, H.	199
Kirby, Mrs. M.	263
Kelly, Norman	263
Kelley, N., Margaret & Mrs. M.	383
Kincaid, Mrs. E.	391
L.
Lemmon, Mrs. M.	7
Lemmon, M. M.	8
Lillibridge, Mrs. M.	79
Lee, Elder Jacob	127
Lindsey, Mrs. F.	159
Lancaster, D.	167
Lake, Jacob	183
Lynch, Mrs. S.	344
M.
Moore, W. H.	6
Mendenhall, Deacon C. C.	7
Marshall, W. B.	31
McDonald, L. A.	40
More, A. J.	55
Myers, Mrs. F.	79
Meador, Mrs. S. L.	111
Moore, Mrs. M. L.	127
McMurtry, J. M.	127
Mace, J. W.	143
Morris, J. W.	200
Manby, Thos.	247
Mellott, Mrs. M.	295
Martin, Mrs. M.	303
Miller, Ellen	327
Mowers, Mrs. N. K. & Chas.	391
Morris, J. C.	407
N.
Newlon, J. F.	135
Nowell, Mrs. S.	183
Nichols, Mrs. J. E.	279
O.
Oliver, Mrs. M. D.	7
O'Connor, Mrs. P.	79
Oliver, Mrs. Martha	167
Owens, Jesse	399
P.
Purington, J. W.	6
Parsons, P. R.	303
Polkinhorn, M. J.	351
Pearson, Mrs. R.	367
Park, Abraham	399
Pierson, Mrs. Mary	413
Q.
Quackenbush, Mrs. M. A.	287

R.

Russell, G. W.	6
Richardson, Mrs. M. E.	23
Reynolds, Mrs. E.	79
Rumney, Hester	88
Robey, Mrs. M. S.	127
Reed, E. G.	167
Rigsby, L. J. & Mary	303
Rees, Mrs. J. T.	367
S.
Stovall, J. D.	6
Scudder, A. C.	15
Stone, Mrs. M. A.	23
Spitler, Benj.	39
Scruggs, Mrs. T. T.	48
Stringer, Mrs. E. P.	64
Street, Mrs. H.	103
Stewart, M. H.	103
Steers, J. G.	103
Shaddock, R. I.	103
Silcott, Norval	119
Smith, Wm.	143
Singrey, J. L.	159
Shockley, G.	183
Savidge, Mrs. A. C.	199
Streight, Mrs. S.	263
Starr, Silas	335
Stillings, Mary	335
Slawson, Harmon	359
Strawhacker, Christian	367
Southard, Mrs. M. F.	375
Smith, Mrs. E. S.	383
Staples, Mrs. M. H.	399
Sparks, Mary	399
Squier, L. A. & David	407
T.
Tomlin, Deacon W. L.	6
True, F. G.	7
Trout, Elder S.	56
Tucker, Jos.	143
Tombs, Mrs. E.	247
Tatum, E. M.	399
Thompson, J. F.	407
V.
Vredenburg, Anna M.	64
Vermilyea, Ed.	175
Venartsdalen, Mrs. M. A.	231
Virts, D. A.	278
Van Velsan, S. A.	311
W.
Whitcomb, I. B.	6
Watkins, James	72
Wilcox, Charles	79
Wight, Ely	79
Winchell, Mrs. L.	87
Warren, A. W.	104
White, Mrs. Lizzie	111
Wells, Mrs. M.	278
Whitaker, Mrs. M.	335
Walton, E. B.	351
Woolford, Mrs. M. E.	359
White, Mrs. E.	367
Walden, P. S.	383
Walker, J. G.	407
Y.
Yeates, T. B. & Mrs. M. R.	47
York, Mrs. P.	151

CIRCULAR LETTERS

Baltimore	189
Delaware	190
Delaware River	197
Warwick	198
Chemung	213
Roxbury	301
Maine Conference	302
Licking	309
Powell's Valley	310
Lexington	317
Maine	317
Juniata	334
Corresponding, Va.	349
Salisbury	350
Mt. Pleasant	375
New Hope	381
Greenville	398
CORRESPONDING LETTERS.
Baltimore	191
Delaware	191
Delaware River	191
Warwick	198
Chemung	216
Particular Covenanted Baptist	229
Roxbury	303
Powell's Valley	311
Licking	318
Lexington	318
Maine	318
Juniata	335
Salisbury	351
Mt. Pleasant	375
New Hope	375
Mt. Enon	399
ORDINATIONS.
Scott, John L.	24
Mellott, Ahimaaz	159
Fisher, John H.	223
Hayes, W. N.	391
Moss, J. F.	414
CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.
Little Flock, Fla.	271
POETRY.
I long for a nearer view of my God	1
Why doth my life from year to year	1
'Tis grace that first the work begins	1
O wherefore accuse ye your brethren	33
He feels most sensibly within	33
The whole-hearted need no physician	73
I came to the spot where the lone pilgrim lay	73
Jesus, I love thy blessed name	81
This is the word of faith	105
Hast thou faith to believe in this blest book of truth	105
My nature is so evil	113
'Twas in the silent hours of night, my thoughts did upward fly	119
Fear not, ye little flock	129
In holy Scripture we are told	129
When I was called to follow Jesus	145
The wonderful love of God to me	192
My soul, begin a song	249
Jesus, I love thee, and adore	249
All the way seems dark before me	265
I know not, the way is so misty	265
I sometimes turn me from the page of glory	311
He leadeth me	337
Lead me gently, tender Father	345
Blund'ring through this world I go	366
The Lord is great in Zion	385
Father, into thy loving hands	385
A heart I have, O what a heart	401

SELECTED.

The Power of Grace	5
Ought Infidel Publications be Prohibited by Law	30
The Leaven Which a Woman Took (Matt. xiii. 33)	35
Black Rock Minutes	65
Comparison of Heathen and Christian Civilization	101
Extracts from Four Orations by Ed. Irving	110, 117, 125, 133, 141, 149, 158, 165, 173, 181
Good is the Word of the Lord (Isa. xxxix. 8)	353