The first mid-term graduation in several years was held in Binkley Chapel December 19. 82 graduates and their families participated in the festivities. Dr.

DECEMBER GRADUATION

Chauncey Daley, editor of Kentucky's Western Recorder, was the commencement speaker, joining his son, Phillip, who was a member of the graduating class. These graduates bring the total of Southeastern alumni to 4,582.

During the regular meeting of the Wake Forest Town Board, December 17, the town presented to Southeastern Seminary a citation for community involvement. The citation, in form of a plaque, reads:

CITATION

"In appreciation for their many gifts and cooperative spirit in civic affairs."

Orientation for new students is scheduled on campus January 8-9. Registrar, Fred Sandusky, says there will be 90-100 new students beginning their work the spring semester. Classes begin January 12, 1982.

ORIENTATION

The tradition goes on! Southeastern Seminary will host the community for a New Years Day lunch. The menu: black-eyed peas, turnips, hog jowl, corn bread, and tea - all served in the cafeteria by members of the faculty and staff.
