Akin elected sixth president of SEBTS

By Staff

Dr. Daniel L. Akin became the sixth president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary on January 15, 2004, after a unanimous vote of election by the Seminary's Board of Trustees.

Known by many as a leader in Southern Baptist life, Akin, 47, is admired and respected for his dedication to his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and his commitment to teach and proclaim His Word.

"I am excited about the election of Dr. Akin as the sixth president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, for several reasons: He is a visionary leader, a wonderful expository preacher, a fine educator and astute theologian," said Bart Neal, Southeastern's interim president for the past six months. "Dr. Akin displays that rare combination of a brilliant mind and a passion for evangelism. I know that this is God's will, and I also know that God will use Dr. Akin's leadership to guide Southeastern to a bright future."

Akin, who previously served at Southeastern as Assistant Professor of Theology and Dean of Students from 1992-1996, was Vice President for Academic Administration/Dean of the School of Theology at The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, KY, a position he held until his return to Southeastern today.

Akin was also elected to the position of Professor of Theology and Preaching.

After earning a Bachelor of Arts in biblical studies from Criswell College in 1980, Akin went on to earn both a Master of Divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1983 and a Doctor of Philosophy in humanities from the University of Texas at Arlington in 1989.

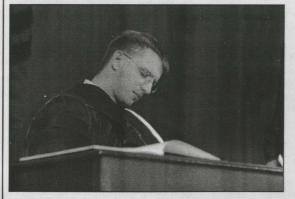

"I am extremely honored and genuinely humbled at this opportunity," Akin said. "I do count it a great, great honor to come back home and be part of one of the greatest schools in the world."

Timothy Lewis, chairman of the Seminary's Board of Trustees, said that after an intensive nationwide search, it became clear that Akin was the man God had chosen to lead Southeastern.

"This is a great day, a glorious day, a historic day," he said. "(Akin) is a man with a great passion for God. I thank the Lord for him and his family."

Profs sign statements of faith at opening convocation

Dr. David Jones, Assistant Professor of Christian Ethics, signed the Abstract of Principles and the Baptist Faith and Message 2000 at spring convocation.

By Evan Lenow

Despite snow and icy conditions, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary held its opening convocation service on January 27, 2004.

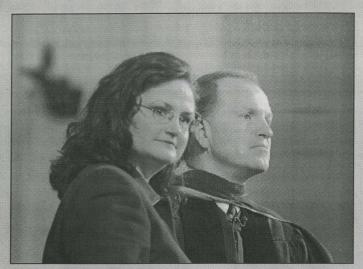

The opening convocation of each semester holds special significance as recently elected professors have the opportunity to sign the two statements of faith approved by the Trustees of Southeastern. The two statements of faith are the Abstract of Principles and the Baptist Faith and Message 2000.

According to Dr. Russ Bush, Academic Vice President and Dean of the Faculty, the two statements of faith are the oldest and newest statements to be recognized by Southern Baptist seminaries.

The Abstract of Principles was drafted by Basil Manly, Jr., in 1859, for the constitution of The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Every professor at Southern Seminary has been asked to sign this statement of faith since then.

Keesee scholarship

Applications for the Keesee scholarship are available in the Student Life Office. This scholarship is for Masters-level students who are residents of North Carolina and Virginia. The deadline for this scholarship is April 1.

Spring intramurals

The intramural department will be sponsoring several intramural sports during the spring semester. These will be basketball, volleyball, Frisbee golf, and other exciting events. Basketball sign-ups are now underway. Participants will be able to form their own teams again this year for basketball, so be thinking about who you want on your team. For more information, contact Seth Bible in the Student Life Office at 761-2309 or sbible@sebts.edu.

Make-up pictures

The Public Relations Office will be offering make-up pictures for those who missed matriculation. Students needing a picture for the Funnybook should go to the Public Relations Office on the third floor of Stealey Hall on Monday, February 2, 10:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m., or Tuesday, February 3, 1:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m.

Parents' night out

The Student Life Office is sponsoring a parents' night out for Southeastern students on Friday, February 13. Childcare will be provided for children ages 0-12 from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. The cost is $3 per child with a maximum of $9 per family. Anyone wanting childcare provided or wanting to assist with childcare may contact the Student Life Office at 761-2305.

Southeastern talent pool

Do you have a skill you would like to market while you are here at school? Perhaps you would like to prepare tax returns for people in the area for a fee; or you might be a skilled carpenter or painter who could take on some jobs to help pay your way through school; you might wish to be put on a list to be called by folks who need some yard work or miscellaneous odd jobs performed on a short-term basis; maybe you could tutor during the afternoons, or baby-sit, or do some sewing. If you have a talent for sale, the Employment Services Office can help! All you have to do is complete a form which is available in Employment Services Office in the Ledford Center. Your talent information will then be entered into a database. Whenever inquiries come in from someone on-campus or in town requesting the type of service for which you have a talent, Employment Services will provide your name and contact information, and the interested party will call you! Employment Services does charge for this student service. Your spouse and children may list their talents as well. You may notify Employment Services at any time you want to be inactivated or deleted from the talent pool. Employment Services will also update all the listings in the talent pool annually, asking you to let them know if you want to continue to be listed in the database.

Global Missions Day

Global Missions Day will be held on Thursday, February 26. Dr. Jerry Rankin, President of the International Mission Board, will be our guest speaker in chapel that day. We will host missionary families from 6 regions of the world. A number of IMB representatives will be on campus for the purpose of encouraging students to consider the international missions endeavor. The missionaries will man displays from the area of the world they are serving in the Ledford Center pit area. Refreshments will also be served in the Ledford Center following the chapel service. It promises to be an exciting time for students to interact with missionaries from all over the world.

Student email accounts

Southeastern now offers free email for all Seminary and College students currently enrolled in classes. You are provided with 5 MB of email space that you can securely access from any Internet browser. If you have not signed up for your email account, please do so today. Sign-up for your student email account on-line at http://webmail.sebts.edu. You can also contact the IT Email Help Desk at 761-2117 or email.support@sebts.edu.

Basketball referees needed

Theological Thoughts

God on Sex: God's manual for sex, love, intimacy, and marriage

By Dr. Daniel Akin

Why is it that so many—too many marriages end in divorce? Why is it that more and more persons are dissatisfied with their sex life both inside and outside of marriage? I believe the answer is simple: we have forgotten or ignored what God has to say about sex, love, intimacy, and marriage. We have failed to read and heed the Master's Manual for Marriage, and the price many have paid has been high indeed. It can be different if we will do things God's way.

God is so interested in and committed to the intimate, romantic, and sexual aspects of marriage that He gave us an entire book of the Bible dedicated to the subject. It is called the Song of Songs or the Song of Solomon.

When my wife Charlotte and I lived in Wake Forest, North Carolina, we were invited to participate in the Newlywed Game at a Valentine's banquet. Actually, all of the couple participating this particular evening had been married for some time. We had been married about fifteen years ourselves. I am delighted to tell you that we won the evening's event by an overwhelming margin. Two questions in particular were decisive in our victory.

First, Charlotte had been asked to name the last thing I had fixed at our home. Now, you need to understand, I had a "mechanical bypass" performed at birth! I struggle to change a lightbulb without burning my finger or shocking myself. I was absolutely blank in trying to come up with anything. Finally, out of time and in desperation, I said, "Can you say NOTH-ING!" The crowd exploded in applause as Charlotte held up a card that said "NOTHING!"

Second, the wives were asked, "What is your husband's favorite book of the Bible?" Well, all the other couples missed it. One wife said "John," but her husband said "Romans." Another wife said "Philippians," but her husband said "I John." When it came my turn, I must confess I was a bit haughty. I said, "Folks this isn't fair. I'm certain that on that card in my wife's lap is written 'The Song of Solomon!" This time the crowd went nuts as Charlotte held up the answer she had written: "The Song of Solomon."

Why do I love this book so much? What is its attraction? It is because this side of heaven, outside of having a personal relationship with Jesus Christ, the Son of God, I believe the best thing going is marriage and family. When we do marriage and family God's way, it is great. It is awesome. It is wonderful. The Song of Songs teaches us how to do it God's way, and it leaves nothing out. A beautiful song, it portrays the deep, genuine love that a man and woman should enjoy in marriage. It teaches us that a successful marriage reguires commitment and involves work, but that it is worth every investment we make. The book celebrates the joys of physical, intimate, sexual love. Sex is good; it is God's gift. It should be enjoyed and enjoyed often. This good gift of God will find its fullest expression realized when a man and woman give themselves completely to each other in the marriage relationship.

As we prepare to look at the Song of Songs, God's instruction manual for sex and marriage, let's be reminded that good sex and a good marriage involve two important things: commitment and hard work. Why? Part of the answer is that men and women are so radically different, and they are different in so many ways. The Song of Songs will help us see many of these, and perhaps we will even have a little fun as we discover them. I recently came across a rather comical analysis that identifies a few of the differences that exist between men and women. There is nothing scientific about it, but it sure hits close to home. It also hints (rather loudly!) that if we will just slow down and pay a little attention, we can with a smile acknowledge and enjoy the differences that can add some "heavenly spice" to our marriages.

Ten Observations That Highlight the Difference Between a Man and a Woman!

- A man will pay $10 for a $5 item he wants. A woman will pay $5 for a $10 item that she doesn't want (or need)
- 2. A woman worries about the future until she gets a husband. A man never worries about the future until he gets a wife.

- A successful man is one who makes more money than his wife can spend. A successful woman is one who can find such a man.
- To be happy with a man you must understand him a lot and love him a little. To be happy with a woman you must love her a lot and not try to understand her at all.
- Married men live longer than single men, but married men are a lot more willing to die.
- Any married man should forget his mistakes; there's no reason for two people to remember the same things.
- Men wake up as good-looking as they went to bed. Women somehow deteriorate during the night.
- A woman marries a man expecting he will change, but he doesn't. A man marries a woman expecting that she won't change, but she does.
- A woman has the last word in any argument. Anything a man says after that is the beginning of a new argument
- There are two times when a man doesn't understand a woman before and after marriage.

One final word: A successful and lasting marriage will always be a triangle. It will involve a man, a woman, and God. Given the challenges of our day and the differences that exist between men and women, we dare not move forward without God taking the lead. God wants our marriages to succeed. He gave us a book to guide us.

Akin

Akin was the pastor at 10 churches in Texas, Florida, Alabama, and Virginia in both interim and full-time capacities. Akin has also authored numerous articles and several books including Epistles of John appearing in the New American Commentary, Song of Solomon, appearing in the Holman Bible Commentary, and God on Sex.

Akin's past editorship positions include Associate Editor of the Criswell Theological Review; New Testament Editor for The Criswell Study Bible, renamed The Believers Study Bible; and Executive Editor of The Southern Baptist Theological Journal. Akin has conducted more than 250 Family Life Conferences as well as numerous other conferences and revivals for youth, college students, singles, and pastors. His missionary experience has taken him to Australia, Thailand and the Papago Indians of Sells, AZ.

Akin was born on January 2, 1957, in Atlanta, GA, and is married to the former Charlotte Bourne. The Akins have four children: twins Daniel and Jonathan, 22; Paul, 20; and Timothy, 18.

"Personally, Mrs. Neal and I are elated over this decision because we know Dr. Akin to be a true man of God, and a leader not only in our Convention but in his family as well," Neal said. "Mrs. Akin is a strong supporter of her husband, and their four boys are sincerely following God in their own lives."

Convocation

When the by-laws of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary were adopted on December 7, 1950, they established that every member of the faculty would be required to subscribe to the Abstract of Principles and publicly sign them at the opening session at which they enter upon their duties.

The Baptist Faith and Message was revised and accepted by the Southern Baptist Convention in 2000. Since that time, the faculty members of Southeastern have been asked to sign this new statement of faith committing to teach in accordance to the doctrines set forth in it.

Four faculty members signed the statements of faith during spring convocation:

Daniel L. Akin, President and Professor of Preaching and Theology; R. Alton James, Associate Professor of Missions; David W. Jones, Assistant Professor of Christian Ethics; and Lawrence W. Mayo, Associate Professor of Music.

Dr. Al James, Associate Professor of Missions, signed the statements of faith during spring convocation.

Ph.D. admissions cap lifted for fall 2004

By Andrew Streett

In February 2003, the Association of Theological Schools (ATS) granted ongoing approval of Southeastern's Doctor of Philosophy degree, following the receipt of extensive documentation regarding the available resources and current makeup of the program. ATS's approval resulted in the lifting of restrictions on the number of admissions the program could make each year. The application process for fall 2004 will be the first to feel the effects of this decision.

Dr. Andreas Köstenberger, Director of Ph.D. / Th.M. Studies and Professor of New Testament, said, "A record number of applicants sat for this year's entrance exams in January, and admissions for fall 2004 will likewise exceed previous levels. ATS's action indicates that Southeastern's Ph.D. program has sufficiently matured and is offering solid education at the highest academic level. This is a tribute to those who conceived of the program ten years ago and those who led it to its present stature, including our former president,

Dr. Andreas Köstenberger teaches a class of Ph.D. students in the History of Biblical Interpre-

Paige Patterson, Dean Bush, and the previous directors of the program."

According to the Southeastern catalog, "The purpose of the Doctor of Philosophy degree is to prepare God-called men and women for service in ministries of teaching and academic research. The program will also meet the needs of ministers who serve in settings that demand specialized academic training."

Applicants must choose one of the twelve concentrations offered in the program: New Testament, Old Testament, Biblical Theology, Hermeneutics, Systematic Theology, Church History, Philosophy, Ethics, Women's Studies, Missions, Evangelism, and Preaching.

Although the program is relatively young, Köstenberger notes that "already SEBTS's Ph.D. program is receiving validation from the work of our graduates, who serve in a variety of academic, denominational, and ecclesiastical leadership positions, as well as from the external read-evaluations of our students' dissertations, which are consistently high and affirming."

Geisler urges students to do 'pre-evangelism'

Dr. Norman Geisler addresses students from the Binkley Chapel pulpit on February 12.

Dr. Norman Geisler, President of Southern Evangelical Seminary in Charlotte, NC, spoke to Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary students in chapel on Thursday, February 12. Geisler is a recognized authority on Christian apologetics and philosophy and is the author of over fifty books, including Come Let Us Reason. Introduction to Philosophy, and Philosophy of Relig-

In his message, entitled "Evangelism in the Postmodern World," he challenged his listeners to practice 'preevangelism' when witnessing. Too often, he said, Christians jump straight to a gospel presentation without first establishing common ground with their audience. Before presenting the gospel, believers must convince their audience of theism and the correspondence view of truth, that is, that truth

Whenever inquiries come in from someone on-campus or in town requesting the type of service for which you have a talent, Employment Services will provide your name and contact information, and the interested party will call you. Employment Services does not charge for this student service. Your spouse and children may list their talents as well. You may notify Employment Services at any time you want to be inactivated or deleted from the talent pool. Employment Services will also update all the listings in the talent pool annually, asking you to let them know if you want to continue to be listed in the database.

Global Missions Day

Global Missions Day will be held on Thursday, February 26. Dr. Jerry Rankin, President of the International Mission Board, will be our guest speaker in chapel that day. We will host missionary families from 6 regions of the world. A number of IMB representatives will be on campus for the purpose of encouraging students to consider the international missions endeavor. The missionaries will man displays from the area of the world they are serving in the Ledford Center pit area. Refreshments will also be served in the Ledford Center following the chapel service

Theological Thoughts

Reforming the Morality of Usury

By Dr. David Jones

During the Protestant Reformation the Church experienced a dramatic shift in its thought regarding the morality of the practice of usury. Therefore, it is not surprising to find that the leaders of the three

theological streams in the continental Protestant Reformation (Lutheran, Calvinist, and Anabaptist) all worked to reform the Roman Catholic Church's moral teaching on the practice of lending money at interest

It is interesting to note, however, that while these three theological streams each addressed the same moral problem, at relatively the same time, all three responded differently. The purpose of this book is to look at how the leader or leaders of each major stream in the continental Protestant Reformation took a different approach to reforming moral teaching on the practice of usury and to posit a thesis to explain the differences between the reformers' ethics of usury

While this study into the variations in the ethics of usury among the major factions in the sixteenth century Protestant Reformation may seem esoteric, there are, in fact, several reasons why this project is relevant for the modern Church and contemporary Christian ethics. First, it ought to be noted that there have been few ethical issues in the history of the Church that were at one time nearly unanimously seen as immoral, yet now are accepted to such a degree that they no longer are even viewed by evangelical Christian scholars as other as issues for moral discussion. The practice of usury is one such ethical issue. During the Protestant Reformation the morality of the practice of usury was undergoing a nearly diametric moral shift. In light of this change, the study of how and why the various reformers grappled with the volatile topic of usury in their own day perhaps can aid the modern Church in the formulation of its morals, not only in regard to usury, but also in regard to other ethical issues that currently are undergoing challenge or transforma-

A second reason variations between the Protestant reformers' ethics of usury is a worthy and relevant subject for study is that the topic has largely been ignored by the contemporary academic community While some writers have briefly addressed the reformers' views on lending money at interest, very little scholarly work has focused on the topic of usury as an issue unto itself, let alone variations between the reformers' financial ethics. This is, perhaps, surprising in light of the many influential historic studies that have been done on the effects of the Reformation on the development of modern economic and political systems, including Ernst Troeltsch's The Social Teachings of the Christian Churches, Max Weber's The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism, and R. H. Tawney's Religion and the Rise of Capitalism.

A third reason this study is both relevant and important is the strategic place this issue holds within the larger field of material ethics—a field of study for which there is a continuing and growing need in the modern Church. To elaborate, while Christians in Western nations enjoy unparalleled wealth and Christians in other parts of the world are struggling for basic economic necessities, the topic of financial ethics has not received as much attention comparatively relevant areas of doctrine, such as gender roles, homosexuality, or even war. Although this work will address only a narrow subject within the broad field of material ethics, the relative luxury in which Western Christians live out their faith, coupled with the general neglect of the topic, makes this study a worthy project, indeed.

"The study of how and why the various reformers grappled with the volatile topic of usury in their own day perhaps can aid the modern Church in the formulation of its morals."

A fourth reason this project is a worthwhile undertaking is that the topic of this work (variations in the Protestant reformers' ethics of usury), coupled with the proposed thesis (differences between the Protestant reformers' views on Church/culture relations), provides the modern Church with a case study that highlights different models of how the Church may relate to culture—especially in regard to moral issues. While the study of the various models of Church/culture relations found in the writings of Martin Luther, John Calvin, and the leaders of the Anabaptist movement are limited in application to the practice of usury in this current project, the potential use of these three paradigms of Church/culture relations is far-ranging. Indeed, these models are especially relevant to the contemporary Church, for the question of how the Church ought to relate to society is an issue with which the modern Church is grappling in the post-Christian era.

A final reason variations between the Protestant reformers' ethics of usury is a relevant topic for the modern Church and contemporary Christian ethics is that this issue is a topic over which the three major branches of the Protestant Reformation all disagreed. This discrepancy is significant in light of the fact that all three theological streams were reacting to the same adversary (the Roman Catholic Church), at the same time (the sixteenth century), in the same location (Central and Western Europe), and with the same source of authority (the Bible). Despite these similarities, however, Martin Luther, John Calvin, and the leaders of the Anabaptist movement still reached differing conclusions. The study of how and why the Protestant reformers formulated their distinctive ethics of usury not only will help the modern Church better understand its forbears, but also better understand moral differences between the contemporary inheritors of the Reformation.

Ph.D.

Southeastern has been impacted with the talent of the program's graduates so as to warrant the hire of Bill Brown, Bruce Little, David Nelson, Peter Schemm, David Jones, and Steven Ladd as elected faculty members, and Scott Kellum, Bruce Ashford, and Derry Hodge as appointed faculty.

Not only have the program's graduates found success in placement but also in publishing. Köstenberger said, "Just recently some of our students have published their dissertation, or signed contracts to do so in the near future." Even with such past accomplishments, ATS's action makes the future still brighter since the program will be able to attract first-rate students.

According to Köstenberger, the program is one more way for Southeastern to fulfill its purpose: "Clearly, training pastors, missionaries, and other Christian workers continues to be at the heart of Southeastern's mission. Offering Ph.D.s as well enables us to also train those who would teach at the college or seminary level in Southern Baptist or other Christian institutions and thus extend Southeastern's influence and impact for God's kingdom yet further.'

Geisler

is what corresponds to reality. Pre-evangelism is simply doing the work of 2 Corinthians 10:5demolishing arguments and taking thoughts captive to Christ.

Geisler advocates pre-evangelizing for theism by using a form of the cosmological argument for the existence of God, which states that every effect has a cause, but the string of causes and effects cannot be infinite. Therefore, by the simple fact that the universe exists, it is evident that there must be a creator.

Pre-evangelizing for the correspondence view of truth involves exposing every alternative system of truth (e.g. relativism) as ultimately based on the belief that the views of that system correspond to what is real. As Geisler said, "Every system of unbelief has a self-defeating premise."

In sum, Geisler asserted that one cannot separate evangelism from apologetics. One must first convince people that God exists and that he has revealed truth in Scripture before expecting them to believe in and be changed by the gospel.

SEBTS celebrates ten-year IMB partnership

By Kyle Smith

At Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, "missions and evangelism is the air that we breathe," according to Senior Professor of Missions Keith Eitel. The seminary commemorated that spirit on February 26 with its annual Global Missions Day. The day was highlighted by a celebration of the tenyear anniversary of the idea of an innovative church planting partnership between Southeastern and the International Mission Board.

On campus to help the school celebrate was IMB President Jerry Rankin, who addressed the special chapel audience and expressed both his passion for seeing students involved in missions and his delight in working with the seminary to that end. "It has always been such a blessing and an encouragement to be here with you,"

Rankin said. "Nowhere do I go that I sense such a passion and fervor for our Great Commission task and partnership with the IMB, and one of the reasons for that is certainly the outstanding leadership of Dr. Keith Eitel. It's a joy to work in partnership with you and a blessing to be with you."

Rankin recently wrote a glowing review of the efforts of Southeastern and the IMB. "The partnership between Southeastern and the IMB over the past ten years has been one of the most positive and encouraging aspects of my ten years as IMB president," Rankin wrote. "Southeastern is the foremost seminary for training missionaries and modeling practical involvement in cross-cultural missions as part of the campus ethos and the practical equipping of seminary students."

Rankin was referring to Southeastern's Masters of Divinity in International Church Planting degree, commonly called the "2+2" program. It sends students onto the mission field for either two or three years to complete the remainder of their degree after two years of training at the seminary's main campus in Wake Forest. The program has been a great success in its ten-year history, so much so that other seminaries have adopted the program as well.

Students in the program benefit from the opportunity to experience missions in a cross-cultural context, aided by financial support from the IMB and spiritual support given by their Southeastern family and an IMB mentor on the field. The program was Eitel's brainchild, but the missions professor also credited Rankin's leadership with helping make the vision a reality.

"We are very agreeable and commend you," Eitel told Rankin, "for having the innovative spirit that ten years and one month ago, when we first had the conversation about a novel idea that has now blossomed into what is affectionately known as our '2+2' program and '2+3' program."

This kind of partnership is one that can, and will, make a difference in a lost world as it hears the power of the gospel message, Rankin said in his sermon, taken from 1 Thessalonians 1:5-9. "There is something of the power of God that indwells the gospel," Rankin said.

Merritt makes appeal for faithful leaders

By Kyle Smith

Southern Baptist churches are in need of men who remain focused, faithful, and firm in their leadership, according to Georgia pastor and former Southern Baptist Convention president James Merritt.

Merritt, who pastors Cross Pointe Church in Duluth, GA, was on the campus of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary on February 18 to deliver a chapel message and took the opportunity to remind the students and other guests of the importance of strong leadership. Preaching from the Old Testament Book of Nehemiah, he reminded students that Christian leadership involves pressure and does not come without a price as the devil will work especially hard to attack those in leadership positions within the church.

However, he said, pointing to chapter 6 of Nehemiah, there are three lessons a leader can learn from Nehemiah's experience of rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem, lessons that will serve him well in his ministry. "First," Merritt said, "when some try to sidetrack you, stay focused. God wants you focused. The devil wants you finished. That's why pastors have affairs and lose their marriages—they can't stay focused."

The way to avoid the pitfall of becoming sidetracked, he said, is for leaders to remind themselves that they are doing

Theological Thoughts

Peter on "The Passion of the Christ": A commendation and caution

By Dr. David Nelson

There is at once consternation and criticism, along with much anticipation and excitement regarding Mel Gibson's retelling of the crucifixion of Christ in the movie "The Passion of the Christ." Criticism abounds from different quarters, including those who reject the veracity of the four Gospels and those who attribute anti-Semitism to Gibson and anyone else who dares to affirm the culpability of the Jewish figures involved in the crucifixion of Christ as attested by those same Gos-

There is also a pitched excitement, even fervor, among many who view the release of the movie as a unique opportunity to present the message of the crucified Christ to the world for which Jesus died. I want to address the latter group who express such excitement about the movie and the opportunities 'The Passion of the Christ' presents for evangelism. I have both a commendation and a concern with respect to the flurry of testimonials, endorsements and strategies to use the movie for such a

I begin with a commendation: As several leaders have suggested, Christians ought to make the most of the opportunity that the release of "The Passion of the Christ"

presents. With all the publicity, news stories, debate, and the release of the movie itself, people have the death of Jesus Christ on their minds. Evangelicals should see this as an open door to share the Good News of eternal life by grace alone through faith alone in the crucified and resurrected Lord Jesus Christ. As Morris Chapman, president of the Southern Baptist Executive Committee, said, "We must be ready with an answer of why Jesus did what He did."

But I must also offer a word of caution. I am troubled by the way in which some people are speaking about the movie as it relates to the revelation of God in the Bible, the written Word of God. One viewer of the movie observed that some were crying out, "Have mercy on me God, I didn't know, I didn't know," after watching the movie. Another viewer reported, "I've read the Gospels thousands of times throughout my life, but this was the first time I'd actually stepped into them.

Such statements are inconsistent with the claims of the Bible about itself. Could we really not know about the crucifixion and its implications for our lives before Gibson made this movie? Do we really gain something from the movie that is missing in the sacred text of the Bible? It is as if we are suggesting that the Bible alone, with the illuminating power of the Holy Spirit who inspired it, is simply not sufficient. Do we now need cinematic assistance to make the "living and active" Word (Hebrews 4:12) come to life?

The Passion of the Christ" does include significant biblical quotations, and as much as it brings the Scriptures to the audience, it does indeed expose them to the Word of God. But the movie is also shaped by extrabiblical sources such as the visions of the mystic Anne Catherine

Emmerich, an 18th-century German nun. It seems that some people are confusing the emotional and visceral responses they have to the graphic imagery of the movie

"As amazing as the movie may be, the reading, hearing, meditation upon, and preaching of the Scriptures is superior in every way to watching Gibson's movie."

with the Word of God itself. It sounds as though some think we actually possess an advantage over the generations of Christians who had no opportunity to view such a movie. It's almost as if to say, "Those poor people only had the Scriptures.'

This is where the Apostle Peter has some very good advice for us. In 2 Peter 1:16-18, the apostle recounts his experience at the transfiguration of Jesus Christ. This was, no doubt, an amazing experience. Peter then informs the church that. as amazing as that experience was, "We have a prophetic word made more sure." More sure than what? For the reader of Scripture, more sure than Peter's eyewitness experience of the transfiguration, at which time Peter even heard the voice of What is this "word made more sure?" It is nothing less than the Scripture, written by "holy men of God moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Peter 1:21). Peter, who did hear God's voice audibly at the transfiguration, understood that most others would not share such an experience. He also understood that God had spoken a sure word in the text of the Bible, which would bring God's revelation to all who would hear.

This is a startling claim, and we should not miss its significance for our understanding of a phenomenon like this movie. You see, "The Passion of the Christ" is simply a movie. It is, by many accounts, a marvelous work of art. But the images in the film that evoke such emotional responses should not be confused with God's own Word about the crucifixion of the Son of God. Let's not confuse our experience of the silver screen image of Jim Caviezel with the worship of the crucified Christ according to the Word of

That's right. As amazing as the movie may be, the reading, hearing, meditation upon, and preaching of the Scriptures is superior in every way to watching Gibson's movie. If you think otherwise, then I have some serious questions about your understanding of the power and sufficiency of the God-breathed Scriptures "which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith which is in Jesus Christ" (2 Timothy 3:15).

So, I hope we'll heed Peter's advice about "The Passion of the Christ" and exercise a bit of caution in the way we think about the movie. At the same time, I hope we'll make the most of the opportunity afforded us by the movie to commend to this dying world the amazing love of Jesus Christ and eternal life which is found only in Him.

"It is the power of God unto salvation that changes lives, and it results in an expansion that cannot be deterred."

Rankin said that 500,000 new believers were baptized and 6,000 new churches were established around the world in 2003. He quickly added that it is the power of God alone that can accomplish such a tremendous work. "It's because of the power of the gospel," he said. "There is no religious opposition that can quench it. There is no government institution that can stop it and no geographical boundary that can contain the life-giving power of our Lord Jesus Christ. The power of that message is changing lives all over the Rankin closed by reminding students of their call to live out the gospel before a lost world, wherever they may be "People are living in darkness and superstition and despair," he said. "Confront them with the good news of the lifechanging power of Jesus Christ. The missionary call, and your call to minister, is to plant your lives among people, to identify your life with them, so that they can see the reality of the gospel . . . so that victory in Jesus Christ can be seen as a living reality.

His plea did not go unheeded as hundreds of students stood with Rankin at the end of the service, signaling their intention to consider a call of God to the overseas mission field.

"Second," Merritt noted, "when some try to slander you, stay faithful." Slander and false criticism are an unfortunate part of a pastor's ministry, he said. A pastor would do well to evaluate prayerfully all of his criticism and take it to God rather than believing it at

"If you don't have a thick skin, get

"Finally," Merritt said, pointing to Nehemiah's example in verses 10-14, "when some try to seduce you, stay firm. Leaders don't cut and run when the trouble gets high. Nothing will ever kill leadership quicker than compro-

Good leadership can mean the difference between a church living and a church dying, Merritt said in closing. "I encourage you today, keep your eye on God's glory, His Word and His Son, and you will live a life of victory."

Southeastern team goes to Central Asia

By Seth Bible

The fall of the USSR in 1991 ended years of Communist rule and Christian oppression in the vast empire controlled by the Soviet Union. Since that revolutionary year, Christians from all over the world have traveled to the former Soviet Union in an attempt to spread the good news of Jesus Christ. From February 26 to March 6, a group from Southeastern had a most unusual opportunity to take the message of the gospel to one of the formerly Soviet controlled countries located in Central Asia.

In the spring of 2003, a small group of athletically minded Southeastern students had a vision of forming a basketball team that could enter a restricted or closed country in an attempt to build relationships with former Communists and strengthen the local body of believers through teaching, encouragement, and edification. This dream became a reality when contact was made in November with an IMB strategy coordinator in a former Soviet Republic who was on furlough at Southeastern completing the requirements for his Master's degree in international church planting.

Immediately, plans began to be made to take twelve students to this Central Asian country to play against the local and national teams and to run youth basketball clinics for the local middle school and high school children. Original team members Justin Arbuckle, Seth Bible, Blue Bryan, Mike Crisp, David Follrod, Dustin Gillespie, Jason Johnson, Rusty Massey, Zach Nelson, Rob Satterfield, Mike Shelton, and Travis Williams began meeting on a

LifeWay Spring Conference

By Andrew Streett

Representatives from Life-Way Christian resources were on Southeastern's campus March 16-18 for the annual Spring Conference. LifeWay is the education, church program, and publishing agency of the Southern Baptist Convention.

According to David Hassell, Corporate Events Specialists, "The purpose of the Spring Conference is to connect with the students and to let them know that LifeWay is there to assist them in their ministries." LifeWay representatives, accompanied by displays in the Ledford Student Center, were on campus to talk with students, distribute free resources, and make over thirty classroom presentations. LifeWay also offered free health screenings for students while on campus.

A large part of the Spring Conference was the special chapel services featuring Dr. James T. Draper, Jr., President and CEO of LifeWay, and Dr. Gene Mims, Vice President of LifeWay Church Resources.

Draper said, "My challenge to you is . . . Do you know God, or do you know about Him? Get to know Him!"—an exhortation fittingly similar to LifeWay's vision to "help people and churches know Jesus Christ and seek his Kingdom."

Faculty Spotlight: Pete Schemm

Family: Vicki Lynn, married 11 years; Charis, 9; Colby, 7; Jacob, 4; Zachary, 3; Parker, 1

Seminary/College position: Associate Professor of Theology

Hometown: Abington, PA

How you became a Christian: On Valentine's weekend in February of 1986, as a result of the ministry Prince Avenue Baptist Church, Athens, GA, and the personal witness of Jim Winton (college roommate) and Doug Nix (College Pastor at Prince Avenue), I bowed my knees in my dorm room and trusted Christ as my Lord and Savior.

Current church: Wake Cross Roads Baptist Church

Current local church ministry: Interim Pastor, North Roxboro Baptist Church, Roxboro, NC

Most influential person in your life: My father and mother

Something surprising about you: I like a hot plate of huevos rancheros and, in an entirely unrelated matter, my left eye is actually a prosthesis.

Education: B.B.A., University of Georgia; M.Div., Ph.D., Systematic Theology, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary

Classes currently teaching: Systematic Theology, Biblical Interpretation for Women, Christian Doctrine (college)

Favorite class ever taught: Systematic Theology

Recent or upcoming publications: "Taxis or Praxis? Why Trinitarians Don't Make Good Feminists" in Concordia Theological Quarterly, forthcoming; "Angels and Demons" in A Theology for the Church, eds. Daniel L. Akin and David S. Dockery (Broadman and Holman: forthcoming)

Favorite author: A toss up between Lucretius and J. I. Packer

Favorite musician: David Nelson and the Mercy Drops Hobbies: Anything outside that involves motorized machinery or ambushing other forms of life

What influenced you to come to Southeastern: The Holy Spirit of the triune Godhead so moved my heart that I was drawn like a moth to the flame—once you make the decision that you are going to a seminary, it seems to me that you have decided to come to SEBTS! Are there other options for theological training? I am not aware of them.

A word of wisdom for the readers: Stop amusing yourself to death by multi-media and begin to engage in the spiritual disciplines of the life of Christ—which may include more time in the Word than you perhaps thought at first.

General Scholarship

Applications are now available in the Student Life Office for the General Scholarship. This application is for the 2004-2005 school year. All current students who will be full time (9 hours in Master's program, 12 hours in College, or actively enrolled in Ph.D., Th.M., or D.Min.) in the fall are eligible to apply. The deadline for submitting an application to the Student Life Office is April 15.

Pitts Memorial Scholarship

Southeastern talent pool

Do you have a skill you would like to market while you are here at school? Perhaps you would like to prepare tax returns for people in the area for a fee. You might be a skilled carpenter or painter who could take on some jobs to help pay your way through school. You might wish to be put on a list to be called by folks who need some yard work or miscellaneous odd jobs performed on a short-term basis. Maybe you could tutor during the afternoons, or baby-sit, or do some sewing. You must complete a form which is available in Employment Services Office in the Ledford Center. Your talent information will then be entered into a database. Whenever inquiries come in from someone on-campus or in town requesting the type of service for which you have a talent, Employment Services will provide your name and contact information, and the interested party will call you. Employment Services does not charge for student service. Your spouse and may list their talents as well. You notify Employment Services at any time you want to be inactivated or deleted from the talent pool. Employment Services will also update all the listings in the talent pool annually, asking you to let them know if you want to continue to be listed in the database.

Fruit and vegetable market

Every Saturday from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. fresh produce will be sold at wholesale cost: apples, oranges, bananas, grapes, carrots, lettuce, potatoes, tomatoes, onions, and much more. The market is available to all seminary students, faculty, and staff. It will be held at 246 North Wingate Street, in front of the Sunshine Seniors Food Pantry. This a ministry of the Sunshine Seniors.

Responding to Islam: A question concerning the name and nature of God

Islam began as a reaction to the Christian God, either as understood or as misconceived. Disagreements over the name and nature of God are central to the conflict between Islam and Christianity. The pluralist argues that Islam and Christianity are both monotheistic religions that claim spiritual descendency from Abraham, so the same God is worshiped by either. Such an easygoing ecumenism is a distortion. We simply do not share the most essential understandings of God and to claim otherwise shows disrespect. It fails to take seriously what a religion claims about truth.

Is the God of Muhammed the Father of Jesus?

Related to the question of the origins of Islam is a raging controversy that we have been called to address repeatedly. The basic question frequently is stated: "Christians claim to know the one true God. Muslims claim to know the one true God. Are you not talking about the same God? Are you not both historically monotheistic religions?"

We like the manner in which Timothy George framed the issue in the February 2002 issue of Christianity Today: "Is the God of Muhammad the Father of Jesus?" Dr. George suggests that Christianity and Islam share a number of suppositions. Both are monotheistic, historical, textual, and moral systems, and speak of the one God in terms of holiness and justice. He answers the question:

Is the Father of Jesus the God of Muhammad? The answer is surely Yes and No. Yes, in the sense that the Father of Jesus is the only God there is. He is the Creator and Sovereign Lord of Muhammad. Buddha. Confucius, of every person who has ever lived. He is the one before whom all shall one day bow (Phil. 2:5-11). Christians and Muslims can together affirm many important truths about this great God-his oneness, eternity, power, majesty. As the Qur'an puts it, he is "the Living, the Everlasting, the All-High, the All-Glorious" (2:256). But the answer is also No. for Muslim theology rejects the divinity of Christ and the personhood of the Holy Spirit-both essential components of the Christian understanding of God. No devout Muslim can call the God of Muhammad "Father," for this, to their mind, would compromise divine transcendence. But no faithful Christian can refuse to confess, with joy and confidence, "I believe in God the Father . . . Almighty!" Apart from the Incarnation and the Trinity, it is possible to know that God is, but not who God is.

The article goes on to explain how Islam and Christianity differ in the fundamental descriptions and attributes of God, and how such a distortion can have eternally deleterious effects. However, others have taken the position that, since Muslims worship a monotheistic, just, righteous God of creation, then that God—under whatever name—is the same God. Some missiologists, even purported evangelical Christians, argue that we must simply tell Muslims that the "Allah" to which they are praying sent Jesus, for them.

The God of Muhammed is not the Father of Jesus. We are not speaking of an etymological issue, for the Arabic term Allah certainly means "God." But different religions by their nature pour distinctive meanings into terms that can be translated by the English word God. Do Muslims mean the same God when they faithfully face Mecca five times a day as Christians do when they bow before the Father? No, they do not. Islam repudiates the Christian concepts of God as triune and personal, as it repudiates Christianity itself.

Throughout the Qur'an, statements contradict the biblical revelation and make impossible any cohesion between honest disciples of the two religions. The Qur'an teaches that Christians are going to hell because we elevate the status of a prophet to that of a deity. The Bible teaches that no one comes to the Father except through Christ. Islam says that Christianity has abandoned any truth they held of Allah. One need only read Surah 5:72 to see that "They do blaspheme who say 'Allah is

Christ the son of Mary.' But Christ said,
'O Children of Israel! Worship Allah, my Lord and your Lord.' Whoever joins other gods with Allah—Allah will forbid him
the Garden, and the Fire will be his abode.
There will for the wrongdoers be no one to heln."

This is not a mere modification of the biblical record; it is a complete and utter distortion. History is filled with men and women who, upon reading the biblical record, decided to take the central ideas of the Bible and create a new god, more to their liking. Many of these movements even chose to maintain biblical names and titles. Others have kept Jesus in their religions but molded their view of Him to fit their schematics. One cult calls Jesus the half brother of Lucifer. Another group believes that Christ was a failed Messiah, whose crucifixion left the work of redemption undone. Are we all speaking of the same Christ?

In our estimation, this is the philosophical equivalent of the Tower of Babel (cf. Genesis 11). Sounds may seem similar, but the ideas hurled about with reckless abandon cannot communicate the same concepts. The God of Islam is no more the Father of Jesus than the Mormon Jesus is the authentic Jesus of biblical revelation.

Although they took a severe beating at the hands of the national team on their first day, the Stars were able to strike up friendships with several of the opposing players, some of whom were born Muslim and Russian Orthodox but were very open to the truth of the gospel. The daily schedule for the remainder of the week included basketball clinics in two different locations, "friendship" basketball games with local universities, evening meals with anyone willing to come, and special teaching times with cell groups and families in the host homes before retiring to bed each night. In addition, Dr. Owens taught local influential church leaders during the day while the clinics were taking

God works in mysterious ways, none of which could be stranger than using a basketball and a bunch of gym rats to take the news of His Son to the "uttermost ends of the earth." Although, the Stars did not witness any professions of faith, the gospel was clearly spoken to a dead and dying land without compromising the work or integrity of the IMB or the local believers. The team learned a valuable lesson about the true meaning of the church and what it means to build the body of believers. It was a true sports evangelism trip that will forever be etched in the hearts and minds of those involved

This was a great time for the Women's Studies students to update each other on the progress of their mentoring relationships. Each Women's Studies student who wishes to participate in the mentoring program is paired with another woman, usually the wife of a faculty or staff member. Joy White, the Women's Studies Program Coordinator, also took this time to share about the purpose of the Women's Studies program with those who were not familiar with it.

Following the time of sharing, the women participated in a time of praise. Lori Calloway and Christina Middleton led the women in song, accompanied by Jaime Crouse on the piano. Christina also shared some Scripture with the women throughout the singing. It was a terrific time of worship that rounded out an enjoyable evening of fellowship.

Joy White plans to sponsor similar events in the future. She believes that such events are good for promoting relationships among the women of Southeastern's campus.

Southeastern and Olford Ministries form partnership in D. Min. program

By Jerry Higgins

Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary and Olford Ministries International of Memphis, TN announced the formation of a partnership in the Doctor of Ministry in Expository Preaching program. Southeastern Seminary President Daniel Akin will teach a seminar titled "Essentials of Expository Preaching" at the Olford campus on June 7-10, 2004 and Jan. 10-13, 2005. Students will have access to the resources at the Stephen Olford Center for Biblical Preaching.

"This is a natural partnership. Southeastern Seminary and the Olford Institute have a common commitment and conviction concerning the necessity of expository preaching for building great churches," Akin said. "No one has set the pace in this area more than (Olford Ministries founder) Stephen Olford. My own approach to preaching was greatly shaped by the ministry of Dr. Olford, so when he invited us to partner with him in offering the D.Min. in Expository Preaching I immediately said yes."

The Stephen Olford Institute for Biblical Preaching was founded in 1980 to promote biblical preaching and practical training for pastors, evangelists, and lay leaders. Since 1985, more than 2,000 pastors and Christian leaders have attended training institutes at the center.

Dr. Olford said he is looking forward to working with Southeastern. "I am excited about the new partnership between Southeastern Seminary and Olford Ministries International because God has given us a common vision to teach pastors to rightly divide the Word of Truth and live Spiritfilled lives," Dr. Olford said. "May God be with us as we minister together and may He receive all glory and honor."

Dr. Stephen F. Olford, founder of Olford Ministries International, preaches from the Binkley Chapel pulpit.

The June semester will have outstanding teachers of the Word of God. Along with Akin and Dr. Olford, other instructors will be David Olford, the president of Olford Ministries International; Hershael York, the > Associate Dean of Ministry and Proclamation in the School of Theology at The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, KY; and world renowned Bible teacher and author John Phillips.

"It is truly an honor and a privilege to be partners in ministry with Dr. Akin and the entire staff of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary," David Olford said. "It is my prayer that our relationship is a blessing for all involved and be fruitful for God's Kingdom as we train pastors in the accurate, authoritative, and anointed proclamation of God's Word.

Akin said he would like to have other Southeastern Seminary professors teach the seminars at Olford Institute as well. However, students taking the D.Min. in Expository Preaching will learn under such well-known Southeastern experts as L. Russ

Falwell urges students to be visionary leaders

By Kyle Smith

Ministers today must have the kind of God-given vision for their ministries which motivates them to step out in faith and, with a prophetic voice, call their culture back to Christ, said pastor and prominent evangelical leader Jerry Faltist Theological Seminary, to build the 24,000-member Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, VA, and found the world's largest Christian university, Liberty University. Falwell, who has been in Christian ministry for fifty-two years, is known nationwide as a leading voice among conservative evangelicals.

Described as "a real hero of the faith" by Southeastern President Daniel Akin, Falwell has also founded the Old Time Gospel Hour, Inc., Liberty Home Bible Institute, Moral Majority, who spoke March 23 at Southeastern Bap- Inc., Elim Home for Alcoholics, and the Liberty Broadcasting Network.

In his message at Southeastern, Falwell underlined the indispensability of vision in a Christian's ministry and the need to communicate that to those he leads.

"You've got to be willing to go where He sends, do what He says and stay as long as He wants," Falwell said. "We get (vision) from God, and we translate it to the people so they will run with what He's put in our hearts.

Falwell is a particular authority on vision casting in ministry. He started Thomas Road Baptist Church with only thirty-five charter members in 1956 and built it into the mega church it is today. He started Liberty University in the 1970s, and the school now boasts more than 7,000 students on its campus.

Theological Thoughts

The biblical Jesus and the nature of the virgin birth

By Dr. Daniel Akin

The virgin birth is critical to our understanding of the union of the deity and humanity of Jesus. It teaches that God became man, the Word became flesh, as the Holy Spirit and Mary participated in the event.

Attacks against the virgin birth began

early in the second century when, in the Talmud, a Jewish writing, the story was told that Jesus was actually the illegitimate son of a Roman soldier by the name of Pandira. This story, concocted by Jewish persons, was used by a pagan philosopher named Celsus to attack Christianity. The French infidel Voltaire propagated the same story. Right down to our present age there have been influential scholars like Brunner, Bultmann, Tillich, Ferre, Baillie and Pannenberg who openly deny the virgin birth.

Disbelief in the virgin birth arises for some in what they see as the historical difficulties associated with the biblical accounts found in Matthew and Luke. Wolfhart Pannenburg denies the virgin birth because he contends that the virgin birth conflicts with the pre-existent divinity of Jesus. He says that "in its content, the legend of Jesus' virgin birth stands in an irreconcilable contradiction to the Christology of the incarnation of the pre-existent Son of God found in [the writings of] Paul and John." However, there is no reason to view the two doctrines as mutually exclusive rather than complementary.

Christ's preexistence relates to his divinity whereas the virgin birth relates to his humanity. At a finite point in time, the Second Person of the Trinity assumed humanity and was born as Jesus. Erickson correctly notes that there is "no reason why the preexistence [of God's Son] and the virgin birth should be in conflict if one believes that there was a genuine incarnation at the beginning of Jesus' earthly life." For those who affirm the witness of the Bible, the virgin birth is "simply the means by which God brought about the incarnation of his Son."

Others who reject the virgin birth claim that it is cast in a mythological and legendary framework. The idea of the Son of God assuming a human nature in the womb of a virgin too closely parallels ancient myths and legends. Robert Stein contends that, "probably the most frequent argument raised against the virginal conception is that too many other parallels exist in ancient literature to allow [one] to take the Christian account seriously."

According to this argument the story of the virgin birth arose out of Greek mythology and its many miraculous birth stories. However, a careful reading of the Gospel accounts reveals no Greek mythological origin. Luke's virgin birth account is the most Jewish part of his whole gospel. Many of us are familiar with stories of how Zeus fathered Hercules, Perseus, and Alexander, and of Apollo's fatherhood to Ion, Asclepius, Pythagoras, Plato, and Augustus. However, when we examine these stories we discover that "all the alleged parallels turn out to be quite different from the New Testament accounts. Almost all the pagan accounts involve a sexual encounter." These myths "are nothing more than the stories about fornication between divine and human beings, which is something radically different from the biblical accounts of the virgin birth." Jesus was not the result of sexual intercourse between God and Mary. However, such views seem to never go away.

Not surprisingly at all, the Jesus Seminar, a group of liberal scholars who have taken it upon themselves to decide what Jesus really did say and do, voted down the biblical account that Jesus was born of a virgin. Jesus "is just another of the pagan stories of gods and demigods, involving as they do sordid liaisons between Olympian deities and mortal women." To the Jesus Seminar the virgin birth simply represents "theological fiction." However, we should not allow ourselves to be troubled as if the Seminar fellows have suddenly hit upon something new. Back in the 1970's the forerunners of the Seminar were already peddling this type of teaching.

In The Myth of God Incarnate, John Hick, a liberal theologian, and his colleagues, were already arguing that the doctrine of Christ's pre-existence and incarnation represent ancient myths that carry only religious meaning for its hearers. According to Hick,

The stories (for example) of the six day creation of the world and the fall of Adam and Eve after their temptation by the serpent in the Garden of Eden are now seen as profound religious myths, illuminating our human situation, so the story of the Son of God coming down from heaven and being born as a baby will be seen as a mythological expression of the immense significance of our encounter with one in whose presence we have found ourselves to be at the same time in the presence of God.

Therefore modern persons must abandon the incarnation (and the virgin birth) as a genuine reality, but we can retain it as a religious claim. The virgin birth acts, then, as a symbol of the truth that Jesus' was special and that He was God's gift to humanity, without any necessary reference to the mechanism of his birth. For these liberal scholars, "The very possibility of such a conception and birth is excluded as a logical consequence of the elimination of the supernatural from history [for] if miracles cannot happen, then by definition there cannot be a virginal conception." However, in redemptive history, the miraculous accompanies God's actions as He acts in salvation

Evangelicals affirm that God exists outside the world and intervenes periodically within the natural processes through miracles. Anyone who affirms the impossibility of the virgin birth is just confessing his or her unbelief in the omnipotent God of the Bible. The virgin birth is no more miraculous than any of the other miracles in the Bible. If miracles are rejected, then nothing important to Christianity really remains.

"There are seminaries that allow you to go out to the Olford Institute and go through that seminar and count it as one of your D.Min, seminars. The neat thing about ours is we have a formal partnership with them and that I'm one of the teachers each time they have this seminar. I'm scheduled to be with them in the first full week of June and the second full week of January (each year) until Jesus comes back.

"Together, I believe we have an awesome opportunity to train up a generation of faithful expositors who will make a tremendous contribution to the body of Christ in the 21st century. ### Falwell

The truly successful ministers, Falwell said, are not the ones who attempt to do everything themselves but, rather, those who will communicate their God-given vision to others in such a way that they will follow it and join in its efforts.

Ministers today find themselves in a very critical and unique juncture, he said, as they are called to proclaim the gospel to a culture that rejects it and to a world that is in desperate need of it.

"America must have revival soon, or only a memory of what we once were will remain," Falwell said, encouraging students to pray diligently for their land. "You are part of the solution because as go the pulpits, so go the churches." Falwell said the minister has a responsibility to seek and implement vision in more than just his local church. God has given him his family, and he must attend to it

"Parents need a vision for their children," he said. "It's a great thing to build up a godly family, but you're not going to do it by accident. My family is ahead of my church. My family is ahead of Liberty University. You shouldn't be so busy in this busy 21st century that your family is not first in your life, under Jesus only."

Falwell closed by encouraging students to live lives radical for the gospel of Christ and to make use of their time in seminary to resolve and prepare themselves to that end.

"You've got to decide who you are," he said. "Between now and the time the Lord calls you home, be a dreamer. Be a revolutionary."

NC students to receive college tuition grant

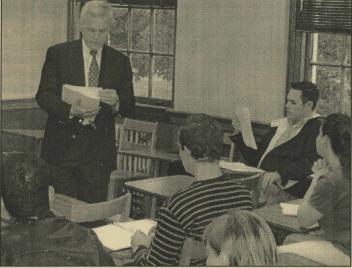

By Evan Lenow

In July, North Carolina students at Southeastern College will receive checks from the state for as much as $1,800 if they apply for the new college tuition grant. The applications for the grant are available in the Student Life Office and must be returned by the end of April.

On August 19, 2003, House Bill 150 passed the North Carolina legislature adding Southeastern College at Wake Forest to the list of private institutions where students can receive money through the Legislative

Tuition Grant. Since that time, the Student Life Office and Stephen Prescott have been working with the North Carolina State Education Assistance Authority to work out the details of how the grant will be administered

The grant for Southeastern students, officially called Grants to Students Attending Certain Private Education Institutions (CPEI), is available for all college students who are residents of North Carolina and have maintained full-time status for the

The residency requirements follow those established by the University of North Carolina's Board of Governors. The general principle for residency is that one must have been a resident of the state for at least one year prior to the beginning of the school year for which one is applying for the grant. In order to establish residency, the state requires that an individual change his driver's license, voter registration, and/or vehicle registration. Therefore, the minimum requirement is that these items should have been changed by August 2002 in order to apply for the 2003-2004 school year.

There are also special regulations concerning dependents. If a student is listed as a dependent on his parents' income taxes, then his residency is tied to that of his parents. Therefore, even though a student may have changed his residency to North Carolina, he would still be considered an out-of-state resident if his parents reside in another state.

Another requirement that affects recipients of the grant is that the student must not have received or qualified for a bachelor's degree prior to this May. This means that a student may not be working on a second bachelor's degree and apply to receive the funds. In addition, if the student qualified to graduate in December but chose not to graduate in order to take more elective courses, he would not be eligible for the grant.

While the qualifications for receiving the grant are established by the state, the determination of whether or not a student meets

Youth ministry: You are not neutral

By Dr. Alvin Reid

As a youth leader you will never be neutral. You are either leading people to know Jesus better, or you are nudging them away from Him. And because the passion that youth bring to witnessing can affect a whole church, the stakes are simply too high for us to be indifferent toward teaching them evangelism.

Greg Stier writes, "A handful of students in one dead church can remind the adults of what this Christianity thing is all about." I've personally seen this happen on a number of occasions. "Passionate evangelism," writes Stier, "burning in the hearts of on-fire teens can set a whole congregation ablaze."

Sounds exciting, doesn't it? And youth love excitement. Barna notes that youth "crave unique and fun experiences," and this craving is a great advantage for the church, if we'd just wake up. We don't have to teach teenagers how to have fun, but we can coach them, show them how to redefine fun. On the numerous occasions when I've taken teenagers out to share their faith, their hearts race and their knees knock. They're terrified. But over and over again after these students have gone out to share their faith, they've come back with an adrenaline rush, in such excitement, giving each other high fives, hugging each other, not wanting to stop, excited about the next time they'll get an opportunity to do that.

In Wisconsin, I heard about a group of teenagers who were taught one year about sharing their faith. When the classes were over they asked, "Now that we've learned this, why don't we go out and practice it?" The youth encouraged the adults who led them, and they went out to share the gospel. They had an incredible time.

No, we don't need to teach young people how to have fun; we need to teach them how living for Jesus is the greatest ride you can ever take. We need to show them that whenever you step out of your comfort zone into new, exciting, and even frightening situations—situations in which you have to depend upon the Lord—the level of fun is not of this world.

If you haven't noticed, young people love to talk about spiritual things. Saved youth do. Lost youth do. You don't have to be a slick salesman to get into a gospel conversation. You don't have to be clever. Just be real.

If you're a youth leader who hasn't led your students in witnessing because you are afraid or feel unprepared, here's some advice:

- 1. Be honest. Tell your students you're learning. They want a real person, not superman.
- 2. Be a learner. Learn to share your faith. For starters, check out Greg Stier's book Outbreak.

"As a youth leader, you will never be neutral. You are either leading people to know Jesus better, or you are nudging them away from Him."

3. Be a grower. Let them see you're willing to grow and be changed.

While you're learning and growing, share the gospel in your youth meetings. Teach the Word, but include the gospel in your teaching. Why? Over 80 percent of professions of faith occur before age twenty. And Barna found that about half of the youth who call themselves Christians and participate in youth groups in a typical month are not actually believers. That means around seven million unsaved youth are in church regularly.

Charles Haddon Spurgeon, the prince of preachers, said to exegete the text, expound the Scriptures, and plow a furrow to the cross. How sad would it be for a student to bring a lost friend to the youth meeting, and then the speaker doesn't offer the gospel.

Teach your youth not only to invite their lost friends but to be patient with them. A tremendous need is evident in youth groups, for example to teach young ladies biblical modesty in their dress. But a lost young lady need not be singled out for her attire if she doesn't know any better. Note: Christian young ladies should! Teach guys to behave like gentlemen, but exercise gentleness if an unruly student shows up who has no idea how to act in church.

Douglas Hyde notes how Communists appealed to the idealism of youth: "The Communists' appeal to idealism is direct and audacious. They say that if you make mean little demands upon people, you will get a mean little response which is all you deserve, but if you make big demands on them, you will get a heroic response."

Grant

those requirements is established by the institution. For that reason, the Student Life Office will be evaluating every application in detail and may require further information from some students.

Much of the credit for getting this piece of legislation passed should be given to Stephen Prescott, Instructor of Church History in the College. His dedication to meeting with state legislators and serving as a liaison between the College and the State proved to be extremely helpful in ensuring that the bill was passed.

In contrast to other private institutions that receive money through the Legislative Tuition Grant, the money for Southeastern students is actually a reimbursement. Students receive the money during the summer after the academic year for which they apply. Also, the checks are written directly to the students rather than to the institution.

According to the schedule set by the North Carolina State Education Assistance Authority, the checks should be cut and mailed to the students on July 1. However, if the state legislature delays in finalizing the budget for this upcoming fiscal year, the checks may also be delayed. If that does take place, there is nothing that the school or students can do to remedy the situation. Therefore, students should be patient in waiting for their checks from the government.

If students have questions regarding eligibility or applications for the grant, they should contact the Student Life Office at (919) 761-2305.

years and whose television broadcast
"Real Faith with Dr. Jerry Sutton" airs nationally, is also author of the highly acclaimed book *The Baptist Reforma-*tion, which chronicles the conservative resurgence within Southern Baptist life over the past 25 years.

In his April 15 message to Southeastern students, Sutton advised students that criticism of their ministries will indeed come, even if they are serving faithfully in the place to which God has called them.

"You can be at the center of God's will and still get attacked," Sutton said. "As a matter of fact, just count on it. Most people being used by God have a bull's eye on their back."

Along with the warning, Sutton also offered students advice on how to respond to the unwarranted criticism that will come.

"No matter what you do, you can't do enough to please some people," Sutton said. "Live your life for an audience of One. As long as I please God, that's all I'm concerned about."

Sutton also offered encouragement to the struggling pastor discouraged by waves of criticism.

"Never doubt that God is actively involved in your ministry," he said. "If He called you, and your heart is clean before Him, you can expect Him to be at work.

"Expect criticism, and expect God to give you the grace to deal with it," he told students in conclusion.

Trustees meeting brings many changes

By Staff

Members of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary's Board of Trustees met on campus April 19-20. The meetings produced many changes that will take effect in the Fall 2004 semester.

The most significant changes involve modification of the existing Master's and Doctoral programs.

The required credit hours for many Master of Divinity concentrations were reduced from the previously required 96 hours. The M.Div. Pastoral Track, M.Div. with North American Church Planting, M.Div. with Women's Studies, and M.Div. with International Church Planting will all require just 90 hours. The M.Div. with Counseling will require 93 hours, and the M.Div. with Christian Education, 95. The M.Div. with Advanced Biblical Studies will remain at 96 hours. Any student who may benefit from these changes should contact the Registrar's Office to transfer to the new requirements.

The trustees also voted to add several new concentrations in the M.Div., including Christian Apologetics, requiring 92 hours; Evangelism, requiring 90 hours; and Worship Leadership, requiring 95 hours.

In addition, all concentrations now include 15 hours of elective credit. L. Russ Bush, Academic Vice President and Dean of the Faculty, approved of this change, saying, "It allows the students to cross over and gives all students no matter the program the chance to take classes preparing them for specific ministries." Another notable change is the adjustment of language requirements to 15 hours. Students will take and receive credit for the first two semesters of both Hebrew and Greek, followed by a third semester of either.

The trustees also approved a non-thesis Master of Theology degree, a concentration in Expository Preaching for the Doctor of Ministry program, and concentrations in Biblical Theology and Hermeneutics for the Doctor of Philosophy program.

Also, there will be a new opportunity for college students to earn up to 15 hours of advanced standing in the seminary. This means that a Southeastern College graduate who has taken classes similar to the seminary classes and received an "A" or "B" can graduate with a 75 hour M.Div.

With regard to financial matters, the trustees voted to keep student rent at its current level. Tuition rates, however, will rise from $127 to $133 per hour in the seminary and from $145 to $175 per hour in the college. Bush noted, "These tuition rates remain well below the national averages, and the increase in the Seminary is to some extent offset by the reduction in required hours."

Southeastern officials also announced that Danny Akin will be inaugurated as the school's sixth president on October 27. The trustees then voted to move their fall meeting to October 25-26 to coincide with the celebration. That is two weeks later than the meeting was originally scheduled.

"We are excited to be able to set aside these dates to honor our Lord Jesus Christ, who has sent us His man to lead Southeastern into the future," said Bart Neal, Southeastern's Vice President for Institutional

Intramural championships

By Andrew Streett

The men's and women's intramural basketball championship games were played Thursday, April 22. In the men's tournament the Huliganai prevailed over defending champions Barney's Playhouse, 81-40, while on the women's side Holly's Hobbits defeated Amber's Anteaters, 34-25.

Participation this season was the highest in recent history, with six women's teams and twelve men's teams playing during the regular season. Because of the increased participation, the men's tournament was able to be played in a double elimination format.

"The season was a great success, and I am looking forward to football and volleyball in the fall," said Facility and Fitness Manager Seth Bible.

Theological Thoughts

Diversity in worship reflects the nature of the church

By Dr. David Nelson

I want to focus here on the concept of the church as a fellowship or community of the Holy Spirit. Identification of the church with the Holy

David P. Nelson, Associate Professor of Systematic Theology, Southeastern Baptist Theological

Spirit is a recurring New Testament theme. The church owes its existence to the ministry of the Spirit (Acts 2; 1 Cor. 12:13), is gifted for ministry by the Spirit (1 Corinthians 12), grows and matures by the ministry of the Spirit (Eph. 2:21-22), has fellowship with the Spirit (2 Cor. 13: 13 [14]), and enjoys the unity of the Spirit (Eph. 4:3).

To point out that the church exists as a community is to point out what should be obvious. Yet, in the church it is too often the case that the idea of genuine Christian community is secondary to a variety of competing individual tastes and preferences. Such an environment, which neglects the reality of the church as community, is fertile soil for controversy over musical style.

As the community of the Spirit, the church should exhibit a healthy unity with diversity. In Acts 2 the work of the Holy Spirit includes drawing diverse peoples into the church. The ethnic diversity of the crowd is recounted in vv. 5-11. The implication of Acts 2:45 is that these were people from diverse economic strata. These diverse peoples are found worshiping together following the Spirit's work at Pentecost. In 1 Corinthians we note similar themes. Paul corrects the Corinthians concerning their failure to recognize their unity in the Spirit, even though the one body (the church) is made up of many members (1 Cor. 12:13). The diversity of the congregation is heralded by Paul. They possess varieties of gifts, ministries, and engage in diverse activities, but they do so by the power of the one triune God (1 Cor. 12:4-6). And this is so for the common good of the body of Christ as determined by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:7).

There are two important conclusions I would like to draw at this point. First, the church should be the one place in the world where ethnic, sociological, class, and generational diversity exists in unity. Second, if such diversity properly belongs within the church, and since God's creation exhibits such wonderful diversity, then it seems logical to conclude that the music of the church's worship would reflect diversity as well. The extent of that diversity is a matter that cannot be explored adequately within the current essay. But I hope that we can admit that diversity should in fact exist.

"A commitment to diverse musical styles should protect the church from becoming 'time bound' in its worship."

This is, to me, the reason that we should answer the question about musical styles by asking congregations to consider the possibility of a diversity of musical styles, rather than settling on one style or another. This approach offers at least two advan-

ment to diverse musical styles should protect the church from becoming "time bound" in its worship. When a congregation adopts a single musical style, which is inevitably associated with a certain period in history and culture, it may become unduly bound to that musical style. Then, when certain groups within the congregation seek to introduce different musical styles, there is often tension. A commitment to a diversity of styles tages to the church. First, a commit-that is not bound to the music of a single era may avoid, or at least lessen, such tensions. Then, when changes begin to occur in a congregation, transitions are less difficult and the church is better poised to minister to diverse peoples.

A conversation with Rev. Julian Motley

By Andrew Streett

Rev. Julian Motley is Adjunct Professor of Pastoral Ministry and Director of Ministry Referral and Denominational Relations. The purpose of this interview is to glean from the wisdom he has gained from his many years in the pastorate.

AS: Let's begin by talking about the state of the church. What do you think is the biggest issue that students going into the pastorate must address?

JM: I really feel the greatest need is to take the way of the cross and to learn to relate to each other in the way of agape love. That will take care of the other problems, if that fundamental need is met. I look at it from the perspective of young pastors going into new ministries and relating to people. We can have a burning passionate vision and sense of mission, but if we don't build relationships with people.

My philosophy of the pastoral ministry is that a minister should love his people—to love them enough for them to find out he loves them as they are, to love them enough to not let them stay as they are. He should be a visionary leader who walks close enough to God to find which way he wants him to go in that ministry, and then prayerfully endeavor to lead in that directioncareful to remember that no matter what God leads him to do, he cannot do it if he does not take the people with him. To me

Rev. Julian Motley, Director of Ministry Referral and Denominational Relations and Adjunct Professor of Pastoral Ministry

this is the fundamental issue in relating to people and getting the work of God done. Jesus did it that way; we have to do it the same way

And it's not just starting out; it goes all the way. I mentioned in the recent address in chapel that in the first two years of my thirty year ministry I died in every deacons meeting. I had to let people get to know me and learn to trust me, then they gave me the freedom to be their pastor, to be their leader, for thirty years.

AS: What advice do you give to students who are going into interviews with pastoral search committees? What do they need to know about the church at JM: There are a variety of issues that I cover, but there again I focus on the relationships that they sense even at the outset. For example, if it's a staff minister being interviewed by a staff committee, if the pastor is not there, I encourage him to raise a red flag in his own mind. Not that he asks why he isn't there, but that he concern himself with where the pastor is in this matter, because it is absolutely necessary that he relate to the pastor. That's the number one relationship any staff minister must build.

The pastoral candidateobviously, in the first meeting he is there to get acquainted with the people, with the committee, and they with him. From the outset it's a matter of getting to know each other. That is where you start building relationships. I think it is very important from that first meeting, if he turns out to be the person God is calling to that church—you know, first impressions are very important—now we're not there to make impressions, but impressions are important—the impression they get of who we are in reality is going to be a very important impression for a long

College / A.Div. Preaching Day

By Andrew Streett

May 4 marked Southeastern's Annual College / A.Div. Preaching Day in Binkley Chapel. Chris Fowler, a senior at Southeastern College at Wake Forest, preached from Philippians 3, exhorting students to live only for Christ, counting all else

He said, "My prayer for us today is to have burning, restless hearts that will not be satisfied with the ordinary any longer, that will not be satisfied in what the flesh will accomplish, that will not be satisfied in our attainments, that will not be satisfied with anything short of intimacy with almighty God.

Fowler, who was a real estate agent prior to coming to Southeastern, will pursue an M.Div. in the seminary following the completion of his undergraduate work

Motley

AS: As a senior pastor, how did you take part in the deacons meetings and interact with other committees throughout your pastorate?

JM: I certainly participated in the important meetings of committees and the meetings of the major committees—the nominating committee and others. It is the only way that I know to know what is going on. It is not just a matter of having input; it is a matter of being there to observe and to have a feel for what is developing and why decisions are made as they

Of course, I think the pastor definitely works intimately with the deacons. I believe they were originally planned by Christ and his church as associates to the pastor. I used to think of my deacons as associate ministers. We did use the deacon ministry. We grew to the point where the meetings began to be so involved with sharing about visitation and ministry to the families that they began on their own to suggest that certain committees take on things they were doing because this was more important to them.

I'll say one thing about committee work. There was many an occasion when I could have picked up the phone and taken care of something in five minutes, but I let a committee take one to two months to handle. I used to, if I had any suggestions, give that to the chairman in writing in advance. But it was in a diplomatic manner. It was never handed down as a mandate, as something I was telling them to do. I was giving them input and information that would be beneficial to them in their meetings. I think that is very important. The pastor is the person who is overseeing the whole thing, and the information he supplies to committees and their work is very important.

AS: What would you say was your main strength in your ministry? Was it the developing the personal relationships that you have stressed?

JM: I definitely think respecting the people, respecting the leadership. Obviously, you have times with difficult relationships. It takes a lot of patience, but I like to remember how Jesus dealt with Judas, what little we know about it. He was respectful toward him. So no matter how cantankerous a person gets, in leadership retaliation is always off limits at the cross. You can have ten good years at a church. You lose your temper one time at a deacons meeting and forfeit the rest of your ministry at the church. It is unfortunate that it is that way, but forgiveness doesn't run that deep, particularly toward the man who is supposed to set the example or

AS: What were some of the most difficult situations you encountered in the pastorate?

JM: First let me say that one of the things that encourages me most about the way God works with us is that I almost totally have forgotten all of the unpleasant things in my ministry, and I am grateful for that. I would have to ponder a moment.

Well, I spent thirty years in my final pastorate. I suppose the most difficult time we faced was when we started a school. We had a grade school, and kindergarten, and daycare. We had people who were advocates of the public school system and so forth. They thought we were competing, or were being negative toward the school system. So it was difficult, but we took our time and did a lot of praying. God did lead, and this church now has a school through eighth grade. That was one of the most difficult things I had to lead the church into.

AS: Do many students that you have connected with churches come back to you for advice after being terminated?

JM: I don't remember the percentage right now, but virtually half of my counseling is with graduates, by phone or in the office. I tell them to call if they need anything, and they

AS: What have you found to be the main cause of those terminations?

JM: Well, at one time I thought it

Theological Thoughts

Teaching children the Christian faith

By Dr. Edward Buchanan

Current research on learning clearly indicates that there are things that can be done to help children develop healthy attitudes, espouse Christian values, and live out these values in appropriate Christian behavior. To help the child grow in faith, the child needs a solid knowledge base. Perhaps the foremost principle of learning is that a person needs a solid knowledge base of prior learning. If one is to become a Christian and live life in accordance with Christian principles, it is imperative that one develops a full understanding of Christian faith.

It has been estimated that about half of the young people from one of our major denominations lose their faith when they go off to college. Perhaps one of the reasons is that they never had a solid foundation for their faith. They were ill equipped to face the temptations of college life and the onslaught of a college culture that ridiculed their faith and belief.

A second principle for effective learning requires that the learning be presented in a meaningful and structured format. Our learning needs to be organized. For example, if you were studying the Gospel of Mark, it would be helpful to have a chart of the way in which the Gospel is structured. Such a chart would provide some pegs on them that if they hit the ground at which to hang the individual parts of the text. For the Bible, a timeline can help us better retain and recall the information that was gained from the study. Such devices will be included in this study to assist your child to better learn the material.

A third principle of learning that is critical is modeling. This means that we learn by observation. Parents provide the child with the most important role models. As a result of the amount of time the child spends with parents, the child will learn attitudes, values, beliefs, and behaviors from the parent.

Long before these became principles of learning in today's educational context, the Bible described parents teaching children in Deuteronomy 6:7: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." (KJV) Note that the parent was expected to provide instruction in the precepts of God that would lead to godly behavior. That has not changed. God is love, but He has set the moral requirements for us to follow and expects obedience.

Unless we know what God expects with His moral precepts, we cannot live our lives in accordance with them. Children need to learn God's expectations and follow them. These expectations are not given to limit our behavior unnecessarily. On the contrary, they are provided to help us live lives that are free from guilt and anxiety.

Basic Christian Learning

To help with the process of understanding Christian faith each person needs some basic knowledge of the Bible, persons, events, terms, symbols, and phrases that may included under sixty-five miles an hour because of excitement and zeal in their first min-

the term Christian. We have chosen to call this Basic Christian Learning. Basic Christian Learning begins with study of the Scripture. Scripture is foundational to everything that we believe. Since the Bible is God's message to us, every Christian needs to be thoroughly grounded in the Bible. This study will begin by providing a solid foundation in Scripture.

But Basic Christian Learning includes more than Bible study. Here are some examples of the kinds of items that are included under the rubric of Basic Christian Learning. What does a Christian believe? If you are Presbyterian, how did Presbyterianism develop? If you are Baptist, how did you become Baptist? As much as we might wish that each of our denominations came from the New Testament church, there was a historical process that brought about the development of each of the denomination.

Some of the cultures of the past have been much more Christian than our present culture. Children, youth, and adults need to understand past Christian cultures. Christianity has not always been ridiculed as it often is today. Some of the greatest work in art, music, and literature has been inspired by the Christian faith. Consider Michelangelo's magnificent ceiling in the Sistine Chapel in Rome. Or consider the inspiration that led to Georg Handel's great masterpiece, The Messiah. Isaac Watts was a hardened and profane slave trader, but his conversion to Christ led to reformation in his life and inspired him to write the great hymn, Amazing Grace. John Bunyan was not educated, but was inspired by his faith in Christ to write one of the masterpieces of English literature, Pilgrim's Progress. Basic Christian Learning includes all of these and many other related topics. It is intended to provide a basic understanding of our Christian faith and stir the imagination of our children to live their Christian faith in the midst of a world that needs the Good News of the Gospel.

With a background in Basic Christian Learning, a child and young person is prepared to face some of the issues of defining, defending, and living their Christian faith inside and outside the church. Teaching in Sunday school and preaching in the church become more meaningful, set against a background of an understanding that Basic Christian Learning can provide. Common understanding can foster deeper relationships between parents and their children, as they share a common bond of understanding of their Christian faith.

Witnessing to Christian belief is no longer an onerous task, but a joyous privilege. Christian faith is not only to be believed; it is to be practiced. With basic knowledge of Christian behavior, a Christian can respond to the moral and ethical issues of a non-Christian world that one confronts each day. As the missionary William Carey once observed, "Expect great things of God; attempt great things for God!"

Gospel of reconciliation is what lost world needs, Akin says

By Kyle Smith

In a convocation message to a Binkley Chapel audience that included a record number of new students. Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary President Daniel Akin reminded listeners that a war-torn, violencesaturated world needs a peace that can only be found in the reconciling work of Jesus Christ.

Citing the millions have occurred from such atrocities as abortion and genocide in the past century, Akin said the world in which young ministers of the Gospel find themselves is one that has lost its moral conscience.

"Today our world and our nation are fractured and broken," Akin said in his Aug. 24 message. "How did we get where we are today? Men have forgot-of human deaths that Dr. Daniel Akin, SEBTS President, welcomes and challenges over 500 new seminary and college students during convocation.

ten God. That's how all of this happened."

Akin's chapel message was the first of the new school year at Southeastern, which celebrated a new crop of more than 500 new college and seminary students.

Akin preached from 2 Corinthians

5:14-21 that God's Word offers hope to those dead in their sins.

"While some would say that our hope is found on Capitol Hill, I am convinced more than ever that our hope is in Calvary's hill," Akin said. "What we need is testified to by an empty tomb and a risen Savior, God's Son, Jesus Christ. There will never be any lasting peace until there's peace between man and God through the reconciling work of His Son, Jesus."

Akin detailed several characteristics of one who has become a new creation in Christ, having been reconciled to God through Him.

Theological Thoughts

Annie Armstrong, WMU, and the pursuit to "rescue the perishing"

By Dr. Keith Harper

It is scarcely possible to imagine modern Southern Baptist life without the Woman's Missionary Union, Auxiliary to the Southern Baptist

Dr. Keith Harper, Associate Professor of Church History, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary

Convention, or, simply WMU. Since its inception in 1888, WMU has challenged Southern Baptists to give their hearts and resources to missionary projects in the United States and throughout the entire world.

Their far-reaching ministries and vision are in part a legacy of WMU's first corresponding secretary, Annie Walker Armstrong. Between 1888 and 1906 Armstrong almost single-handedly created a denominational consciousness among Southern Baptists by her innovative plans for promoting mission work at home and abroad, not to mention the torrent of letters that poured from her office. On the one hand, Armstrong created a unique "connectedness," a network of sorts, between dozens of missionaries and rank-in-file Southern Baptists through WMU. On the other hand, she helped connect the Home and Foreign Mission Boards with the Sunday School Board in the interest of missions.

Annie Armstrong understood her duties as corresponding secretary of WMU in broad terms. That is, as Auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, she believed that WMU had a mandate to advance mission work in whatever manner she deemed best as the letters in chapter 2 "line upon line, precept upon precept," indicate.

At the most basic level, Armstrong masterfully built consensus between denominational leaders by using them as sounding boards and confidantes. She corresponded with men like I. T. Tichenor, R. J. Willingham, and J. M. Frost, corresponding secretaries for the Home Mission Board, the Foreign Mission Board, and the Sunday School Board, respectively. She also corresponded with various denominational workers, WMU leaders, and newspaper editors. She told them about every facet of her work and occasionally admitted that she probably wrote too many letters. Even so, her persistence allowed her to create a network between the various Southern Baptist boards as well as other denominational entities.

Armstrong had many talents but she may have been at her best when she came to innovative ways to promote missions. She insisted that WMU create and distribute top quality literature. She advocated such things as mission fairs, mite boxes, star cards, and "box work," a sort of dry goods package that WMU sent to needy missionaries on the frontier. And, Annie Armstrong was among the first to see that Sunday School was an opportunity to promote mission work.

Armstrong advocated strong denominational ties among Southern Baptist churches. She drew sharp distinctions between "Northern work" and "Southern work." She also bristled when Gospel Missionism challenged the Foreign Mission Board's authority to manage the work in

On 20 December 1938, Annie Walker Armstrong, reconciled to her beloved WMU, left this world for her eternal reward. Her pastor, W. Clyde Atkins, eulogized her as a "dreamer in action," and so she was. These letters are a testimony to a remarkably energetic woman whose heart beat with a missionary pulse and whose soul continually searched for new ways to "rescue the perishing."

Convocation

"Knowing that Jesus Christ loves me changes the way I live my life," he said. "He's not going to be the vice president or runner-up in my life. Christ is now everything, and everything else pales in comparison to what Christ means in my life."

Akin also said that a significant charge has been given to those who have been made new in Christ, that of serving as ministers of reconciliation and ambassadors for Christ.

Because of that, believers should go out into a lost world with passion and fervency, taking the Good News of Jesus to sinners desperately in need of His reconciling work on their behalf.

Southeastern also welcomed four new elected faculty members who signed the Abstract of Principles and the Baptist Faith and Message 2000, formalizing a covenant between themselves and the seminary that they will teach according to the core doctrines of the Christian faith and traditional Baptist principles.

Those professors signing the two documents were: Bruce R. Ashford, assistant professor of philosophy and history of ideas; L. Scott Kellum, assistant professor of New Testament and Greek; Russell S. Woodbridge, assistant professor of theology and church history; and Bradley D. Reynolds, assistant professor of Christian education.

Shepherding

The Purpose of the Sharing Shop

The Sharing Shop is a free ministry sponsored by the Southeastern Women's Fellowship providing a respite to those who are training for His service. The facility is available to SEBTS students, staff, faculty, and their immediate families. It is located at 224 North Wingate Street.

Goods that are usually available include clothing (infant through adult), small appliances, kitchen/bath items, linens, decorative items, books, electronics

A current Southeastern I.D. or parking pass is required to shop.

The Sharing Shop is made possible by donations and volunteers. Shoppers are requested to volunteer at least 2 hours per semester.

Hours of operation are: Tuesdays, a.m.-12:00 p.m.

Help is needed in the following areas: front door, signing in shoppers during open hours; workroom, sorting/stocking (at least one volunteer is needed each day except Sunday); cleaning and straightening rooms

We would ask that ONLY new or gently used items be donated. About half of the donations we currently receive are unusable. Please be mindful of the fact that this is a Christian ministry and only donate items that present a good witness.

Sharing Shop does NOT accept furniture, mattresses, Halloween related items, or items in poor condition.

Clothing must be bagged, boxed, or placed on hangers when donated. It is preferable that the boxes or bags be closed to avoid spillage. Please do not block the Sharing Shop entrances. Place all donations in the drop-box located at the rear of the building.

Contact Charlotte Shue (Sharing Shop Coordinator) at (919) 570-9233 for more information or to volunteer.

Southeastern suspends classes for Hunt's pastor's conference

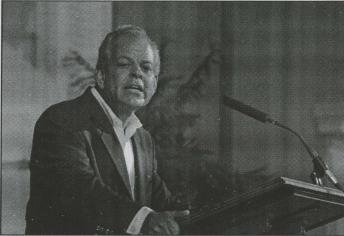

By Kyle Smith

WAKE FOREST, N.C. – As part of a oneday leadership conference on pastoral ministry at Southeastern, pastor Johnny Hunt challenged more than 1,000 students to be committed, passionate and pure pastors to shepherd the flock of God.

Hunt, a graduate of Southeastern and current pastor of First Baptist Church Woodstock, Ga., delivered a series of messages Sept. 9 entitled

"The Shepherd and His Sheep," encouraging pastors to invest and pour themselves into the lives of their flock with practical advice based on biblical principles.

Hunt's seminar, based on more than 28 years of ministerial experience, conveyed to students an invaluable wealth of wisdom that will serve them well in the future, Southeastern president Daniel Akin said.

Dr. Johnny Hunt preaches in chapel during the Shepherding Conference on September 9.

"The Shepherding Conference with Johnny Hunt was a tremendous blessing to the students of Southeastern," Akin said. "Johnny Hunt is a pastor's pastor, and no one understands the role of shepherding a congregation better than he. His years of pastoring, wedded to his pastor's heart, uniquely qualify him to instruct young men preparing for ministry. Dr. Hunt's passion for the ministry of the pastorate is contagious, and it is my hope and prayer that every one of our students will catch that virus."

The all-day conference was held in place of a regular class schedule, but Akin said that an opportunity for students such as this one was simply too profitable to pass up.

"In a single day ministers of the gospel received years of godly wisdom and counsel," he said. "With 1,000 students in attendance, it was

Despite rain, campus cookout a success

By Andy Lewis

Despite two unforeseen tropical storms, the annual fall campus cookout was still a success.

The campus cookout was originally planned for Monday, August 30, but Tropical Storm Gaston forced the post-ponement until Tuesday, September 7. However, the remnants of Hurricane Frances that caused a day of rain in Wake Forest, caused the cookout to be moved from the intramural field to the Ledford Center.

The main lobby of the Ledford Center was cleared out, and serving tables were set up in the place of the couches and foosball tables.

Several hundred hotdogs and hamburgers were served to members of the campus community, including students, faculty, staff, and all of their families.

According to Dr. John Tarwater, Director of Student Life, approximately 700 people attended the cookout.

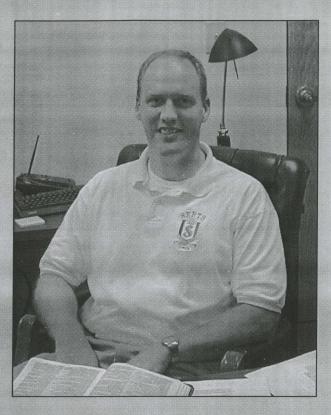

Tuesday's rain forced the Student Life staff to scramble in order to get everything in place to have the cookout inside the Ledford Center.

Students fill the Ledford Center after rain pushes the campus cookout indoors.

Remembering our Christian jihad

By Drs. Emir and Ergun Caner Edited by Andy Lewis

Before we jump too quickly to criticize Islamic doctrine, we must first face our own history. We too have killed in the name of our God.

Dr. Emir Caner, Assistant Professor of Church History and Anabaptist Studies, SEBTS (left), and Dr. Ergun Caner, Professor of Theology and Church History, Liberty University (right).

The Crusades. The Inquisitions. These are just two of the more notorious examples of dark moments in our collective history when people identifying themselves with the Christian faith abandoned the teachings of Jesus to love our enemies and attempted zealous in the service of God as I had to convert by the sword.

Faith is never coerced, and salvation does not come at the end of a bayonet. We must remember our history because it calls us to humility. We must remember our history because it forces us to evaluate our future. We must remember our history . . . because the Muslims do.

Difficult as it may be to fathom, there was a time when Christians butchered Muslims and Jews in the name of Jesus Christ and declared our own version of jihad. Christian jihad.

Editor's note: To explore the past and relate it to the present, authors

Ergun and Emir Caner compare the speeches, "Call to Crusade," of two religious leaders: Pope Urban II (1095) and Usamah bin Ladin (1998).

Benediction: (Urban II)-Most beloved brethren: Urged by necessity, I, Urban, by the permission of God chief bishop and prelate over the whole world, have come into these parts as an ambassador with divine admonition to you, the servants of God."

(Bin Ladin)—"Praise be to Allah, who revealed the Book, controls the clouds, defeats factionalism,"

Statement of Desire: (Urban II)—I hoped to find you as faithful and as supposed you to be. But if there is in you any deformity or crookedness contrary to God's law, with divine help I will do my best to remove it."

(Bin Ladin)—"and says in his Book: 'But when the forbidden months are past, then fight and slay the pagans wherever ye find them, seize them, beleaguer them, and lie in wait for them in every stratagem [of

Muhammad Bin Abdallah, who said: I have been sent with the sword between my hands to ensure that no one but Allah is worshipped, Allah who put my livelihood under the shadow of my spear and who inflicts humiliation and scorn on those who disobey my orders.'

Threat of the Pagan Enemy to a Land They Consider Holy: (Urban II)—"For your brethren who live in the east are in urgent need of your help, and you must hasten to give them the aid which has often been promised them. For, as the most of you have heard, the Turks and Arabs have attacked them and have conquered the territory of Romania [the Greek empire] . . . They have killed and captured many, and have destroyed the churches and devastated the empire.

(Bin Ladin)—"The Arabian Peninsula has never . . . been stormed by any forces like the crusader armies spreading in it like locusts, eating its riches and wiping out its plantations."

Forgiveness of Sin for the War-

war]'; and peace be upon our Prophet, rior (Jihad): (Urban II)—"Let those who have been accustomed unjustly to wage private warfare against the faithful now go against the infidels and end with victory this war which should have been begun long ago. Let those who for a long time have been robbers, now become knights. Let those who have been fighting against their brothers and relatives now fight in a proper way against the barbarians. Let those who have been serving as mercenaries for small pay now obtain the eternal reward. Let those who have been wearing themselves out in both body and soul now work for a double honor. Behold! . . . let them eagerly set out on the way with God as their guide.'

> (Bin Ladin)—"Almighty Allah said: 'O ye who believe, give your response to Allah and His Apostle, when He calleth you to that which will give you life. And know that Allah cometh between a man and his heart, and that it is He to whom ye shall be gathered."

Excerpted from Christian Jihad. Ergun Caner and Emir Caner. Grand Rapids, MI: Kregel Publications, 2004.

Hunt

well worth our doing something unusual for a seminary and canceling classes for the day."

Hunt also saw the value in conducting a leadership conference of this nature for future Southern Baptist pastors.

"This is the generation of pastors that we have before us," Hunt said in an interview with Southeastern Seminary, "and so we have an opportunity to make an investment in them. I am grateful to take from my 28 years of ministry experience and outline the biblical model of leadership.'

That model includes, among other things, the necessity of the shepherd to spend time with his sheep. Hunt said this task is often neglected by those who view their pastoral role more like a CEO than a shepherd.

"At the end of the day, the shepherd smells like sheep," he told students. "In the biblical model, you will always find the shepherd with his sheep. Many pastors want to function as shepherds without knowing the sheep. The number one question that (churches) are asking about pastors is not, 'Can they preach?' but, 'Are they genuine? Are they real?

A pastor must also feed his flock from the Word of God if they are to be truly healthy, Hunt said, adding that people who are not being fed by their shepherd will quit showing up. He exhorted students to preach the Word rather than attempting to cater to the demands of culture.

"I'm not smart enough to change every three or four years to reach the next generation," Hunt said, "so I just preach the Word. You also must preach the Word. It's OK to be geared to the times if we can be established on the Rock.'

In addition, shepherds must safeguard their passion for God and for their ministries by staying free from the snares pastors face today and spending daily time with the Lord in prayer and Bible study, he said.

"People ask me how I get my passion," Hunt said. "It's my passion for Christ, for His Word, for His people and for His calling. All your talent, energy and spiritual giftedness will be for naught if you don't have God's passion."

Cookout

Tables had to be set up in the Ledford Lobby and much of the furniture had to be cleared out. Additionally, several, large blow-up games that had been intended for use on the intramural field were quickly moved to the gym on the top floor of the Ledford Center.

"Despite postponing the Cookout and then having to move it inside, it was still a great event for the Southeastern community. Maybe in the spring hurricane season will be over and we can have the spring cookout at its usual spot on the intramural field," said Evan Lenow, Assistant to the Director of Student Life.

Southeastern hopes center visit encourages Christians to vote

By Kyle Smith

Although evangelicals are one of the most outspoken groups in the United States when it comes to moral issues, research indicates that it's hard to recognize it by observing them at the voting booth.

That's because in large part, they are not there.

On Sept. 17, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary and the Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention teamed up to try to put a stop to that trend as the seminary hosted the iVoteValues.com Mobile Voter Registration Event Center.

The Center is a 65-foot-long tractor trailer loaded with digital capabilities including computerized voter registration, plasma multimedia screens, kids' games and non-partisan voter information on values-based voting. Developed by the ERLC, the Center began touring on June 9 and has traveled extensively around the country to hold rallies promoting voter awareness and education and to encourage voter registration.

According to a statistic on Focus on the Family's Web site, of the 60 million evangelical Christians in America, three out of four failed to vote in the last national election.

Southeastern President Daniel Akin welcomed the Center's arrival, adding that the kind of work that it does is indispensable in encouraging Christians to fulfill their God-given duty to vote their biblical values.

"As Christians, it is our responsibility to be salt and light in this world," Akin said. "One way we do that is to be involved in the political process working to elect persons who promote righteousness and justice, mercy and compassion, truth and wisdom. Casting our ballot for these kinds of persons is our Christian duty and moral obligation."

For Southeastern students on Thursday, one such opportunity rolled into town on 18 wheels. Center operators Sid and Jill Yochim, spent the better part of the day answering students' questions about the voting process, helping them register to vote and reminding them to vote their values.

God is the model parent, Akin says

By Stephanie Carter

A Christian parent's model for raising children is found not in a psychology textbook or a self-help manual, but in the Word of God, according to Southeastern Seminary President Daniel Akin.

"Knowing that your mom and dad are there for you and care sometimes can be the difference between life and death for a child," said Akin, a noted lecturer and conference speaker on family and marriage relationships.

Akin delivered his message to the crowd gathered at Southeastern's Women's Fellowship Day, held yearly in honor of Southeastern's female students and student wives.

The family-focused message was based on Ephesians 6:1-4, which Akin said emphasizes God as our perfect parent and gives an example of how believers should model love to their children.

Parents who do not look to God for guidance have "failed to love how they ought," Akin said, because the guide on how to truly show parental love is "found in the Word of God."

Through God's Word,
Akin pointed out important lessons and rules that an effective, loving parent must follow. He said that one key lesson was for parents to get down on their children's level of understanding, as God did for humanity
through Jesus Christ.

"We know that God loves us because He got down on our level," Akin said.

Akin reminded the audience that a parent's main focus should be to discipline and interact with their children in such a way as to lead them towards a saving knowledge of Christ.

"Within every soul is a deep hole that can only be filled by a relationship with our perfect parent—God," he said.

Staff Spotlight: Jerry L. Yandell

Family: My wife Carol of 21 years, and children: Patrick, 20; Wrenn, 17; and Ryan, 11

Seminary/College position: Director of Admissions

Hometown: Tucson, AZ

How you became a Christian: At the age of 7 in an evening service with my mother by my side listening to Rev. Don Loving, I realized that I was a sinner and in need of a savior.

Current church: Bayleaf Baptist Church North Campus

Most influential person in your life: My father, Glenn Yandell, who for years I rebelled against, but in the end I realized how smart he is!

Something surprising about you: In years past I was involved in competitive sculling. You know, the long narrow boat with four men rowing and one little guy yelling. At one point in time our team finished 7th in the nation and then I walked away. I have also been blessed to participate in 4 archaeological digs through which the land and the history of the Bible has come into a brighter focus in my head and in my heart.

Education: BABS from Southeastern College at Wake Forest in 1998; MDiv from Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in 2001.

Campus Role: I feel blessed to be able to introduce people to SEBTS. Prospective students come to the Admissions Office as their first point of contact with our institution. Some are nervous, some are scared, but most are very excited about visiting and applying to the school. The staff of the Admissions Department works very diligently on welcoming and processing prospective students with a genuine Christian family point of view.

Favorite Author: Nathaniel Philbrick; In the Heart of the Sea, The Tragedy of the Whaleship Essex.

Favorite Musician: I enjoy several different types of music. Hobbies: Husband and father, and after that, trout fishing.

What influenced you to come to Southeastern: It was a 100% God thing that brought me to Southeastern. I was blind to this school when I took my first steps on this campus. But a student reached out to me and told me what the school was all about and the rest is history. I wanted to be a part!

the school was all about and the rest is history. I wanted to be a part!

A word of wisdom for the readers: As a wise professor once told his class, these words sunk deep into my heart: "Sow an act, reap a habit; sow a habit, reap a character; sow a character, reap a destiny."

Sandy Creek Week

Southeastern's annual Sandy Creek Week revival will take place Sept. 28-30 in Binkley Chapel. Services will be at 10 a.m. Tues. Thurs. and 7 p.m. Tues. & Thurs. # Egalitarianism and Homosexuality: Connected?

By Dr. David Jones

Evangelical Christian organizations that hold to a complementarian view of gender roles, such as the Council on Biblical Manhood and Womanhood (CBMW), have expressed concern over a possible connection between an egalitarian view of male/ female gender roles and homosexuality. For example, in the list of central concerns stated in Recovering Biblical Manhood and Womanhoodperhaps the most thorough defense of complementarianism—the authors declare, "We are concerned not merely with the behavior roles of men and women, but also with the underlying nature of manhood and womanhood themselves. Biblical truth and clarity in this matter are important because errors and confusion over sexual identity leads to . . . homosexual tendencies and increasing attempts to justify homosexual alliances." Furthermore, later in this same list of central concerns, the editors of this book note, "We believe that the feminist minimization of sexual role differentiation contributes to the confusion of sexual identity that, especially in the second and third generations, gives rise to more homosexuality in society. . . . It is increasingly and painfully clear that Biblical feminism is an unwitting partner in unraveling the fabric of complementary manhood and womanhood that provides the foundation not only for Biblical marriage and Biblical church order, but also for heterosexuality itself."

Dr. David Jones, Assistant Professor of Christian Ethics, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary

Evangelical feminists, however, have asserted that the notion of a possible connection between egalitarianism and homosexuality is both an unwarranted concern and an unfair allegation. For example, the group Christians for Biblical Equality (CBE), arguably the leading evangelical egalitarian advocacy organization, has repeatedly noted that they do not affirm homosexuality, and the CBE Statement of Faith clearly states, "We believe in the family, celibate singleness, and faithful heterosexual marriage as the patterns God designed for us." Additionally, several prominent evangelical egalitarians have written works that report their opposition to homosexuality. Indeed, the fact that egalitarian organizations such as CBE Evangelical Lutheran Church in

do not directly affirm homosexuality has been recognized by a number of complementarian authors; yet, a concern that evangelical feminism ultimately leads to the embrace of homosexuality still persists among those who champion a more traditional model of gender roles.

"Once biblical feminism is embraced, it is but a small and logical step to accepting homosexuality."

My essay addressed two main questions; first, Is there sufficient historical evidence to support complementarians' concern over a possible connection between egalitarianism and homosexuality?; and second, What is the nature of the link between these two ostensibly unrelated ideologies? Regarding the first question, which was the focus of this essay, this work surveyed historical evidence from four different groups—the Evangelical Women's Caucus, the Presbyterian Church (USA), the

America, and the United Methodist Church—and concluded that, indeed, there is sufficient evidence to support complementarians' concern regarding a connection between egalitarianism and homosexuality. In fact, the slide from the acceptance of feminist-type arguments to the endorsement of homosexuality currently occurring in some Christian denominations follows a paradigm that is demonstrable in secular culture, as well. In light of the historical record, then, it seems that to deny the presence of this progression would be both irresponsible and irrational.

Regarding the second question . . . pinpointing the exact nature of the connection between egalitarianism and homosexuality is not an easy task. Indeed, defining the link between these two ideologies is a difficult endeavor because not all who endorse biblical feminism have or will embrace homosexuality. In light of this fact, then, it was suggested that the primary connection between egalitarianism and homosexuality is a non-requisite logical connection. Once biblical feminism is embraced, it is but a small logical step to accept homosexuality.

Eschatology not secondary in importance, professor says

By Kyle Smith

Believers with a misguided understanding of the Bible's teaching on the end times will misunderstand their present hope in Christ, according to well-known Southern Baptist theologian Craig Blaising.

Blaising, a leader among Southern Baptist theologians, delivered the school's annual Page Lectures, named for Mr. and Mrs. George A. Page of Plainfield, Ind. The lectures are designed to bring outstanding theologians to Southeastern to speak on a subject of concern to the Christian com-theology that concentrates on the Bible's teaching about the end of time. Blaising said the subject has fallen out of focus in the preaching and teaching of many evangelicals because of ignorance and the perception that it is irrelevant.

Blaising addressed concerns about the place of eschatology in evangelicalism today, reminding students that they are called to preach the whole counsel of God's Word. He also added that it is essential that a Christian have an understanding drawn from the whole of Scripture about the gift of eternal life, of which the Holy Spirit serves as a deposit. "Can we just focus on the present and leave the future to itself?" Blaising asked students. "I'm going to argue that you can't. The present is an installment on the future gift. If you don't understand the future gift, you don't understand the meaning of the present installment."

By studying eschatology, Blaising added, a Christian can have a solid understanding of the hope God has given him and a confident knowledge of the way in which the events of the end times will take place. The fullness of this hope is often forfeited by believers when their view of eschatology "does not progress beyond making the most in death," Blaising said.

"Heaven in their mind is basically equated to what happens to us at death," Blaising said. "Most people don't understand the hope of the resurrection. The meaning of His return is lost. What is missing is vital, live, eschatological hope, which one finds in canonical Scripture."

Merritt preaches Sandy Creek Revival

By Kyle Smith

It might seem strange to locate a series of oldfashioned revival meetings on an evangelical seminary campus in the middle of the Bible Belt, but leading people to Christ is the focus of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary academically and otherwise.

The event, which took place Sept. 28-30, featured pastor and Southern Baptist leader James Merritt, who delivered a series of messages to students and faculty and saw seven teenagers come to Christ.

Sandy Creek Week takes place each year to commemorate one of the greatest revival movements in history. That 18th century revival began at nearby Sandy Creek Baptist Church, where the passion and vision of a pastor named Shubal Stearns sparked a movement of God that touched much of the southeastern United States and birthed many of the Southern Baptist churches in that area today.

Southeastern president Daniel Akin

quality of preaching by Merritt and the blessings of God on the Tuesday night youth service, when the local teenagers were saved.

"We saw people saved and our seminary family was challenged and strengthened by the powerful biblical messages of Dr. James Merritt," Akin said. "Every year we see lives changed as a result of this week. In many ways it captures the heart of what Southeastern is all about as we seek to make Jesus preeminent in all that we do."

Merritt, a former president of the Southern Baptist Convention from 2001-2002 and pastor of Cross Pointe Church in Duluth, Ga., began the week by admonishing ministers to beware of false prophets, false professions and false preaching.

False prophets, Merritt warned, can be found throughout American culture today in various media, many times accompanied by great success. However, he noted from Matthew 7:15-23, they can be expressed his excitement over both the discerned by the fruit their lives bear and by evaluating their message by the Word of God.

"Don't ever assume that just because someone is a so-called 'theological scholar' that he is a true Christian," Merritt said. "There are people who enter the ministry for the wrong reasons. . . . They use our vocabulary, but they don't use our dictionary. What they mean by 'salvation,' by 'righteousness,' by the 'Word of God' and by the name 'Jesus' is not what we mean by them."

Evangelical Homiletics Society at Southeastern

By Kyle Smith

Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary students with an interest in biblical preaching will have the opportunity to learn from some of the leading evangelical homiletics professors in the nation when the seminary hosts the annual meeting of the Evangelical Homiletics Society Oct. 14-

Southeastern president Daniel Akin said that the seminary welcomes the arrival of an organization like the EHS, which stands upon the same bedrock principles as itself.

"Persons committed to the inerrancy of Scripture and expository preaching is one of the great needs of our churches today," Akin said. "Engaging exposition must be a battle cry for this generation, and I am grateful for ciation of Evangelicals. what the EHS is contributing However, membership is to this movement."

The organization, which was founded as an academic society for the exchange of ideas related to the instruction of biblical preaching, is committed to the promotion of a biblical-theological approach to preaching and comprised primarily of homiletics professors from North American seminaries and Bible Colleges who affirm the doctrinal statement of the National Assoalso open to anyone interested in the purposes of the organization.

Wayne McDill, senior professor of preaching at Southeastern and charter member of EHS, said that he is grateful for the opportunity the conference will provide for students to learn more on the subject of biblical preaching.

Single-elder-led church government: Biblical?

By Dr. Daniel Akin Edited by Andy Lewis

Single-pastor Congregationalism is often a sight to behold. It is not necessarily a pretty one. A some-what paranoid autocrat as pastor, monthly business meetings dedicated to senseless issues that only eat up time, a committee structure that looks like the Department of Education and is about as efficient, and a deacon board that functions like a carnal corporate board. My fellow contributors will be quick on the draw and point out how unbiblical such a model is. They are 100 percent right! It is unbiblical, but this is not what the Bible teaches about Congregational church government. What we discover in God's Word is altogether different.

A study of Scripture provides a number of snapshots of the early church doing church. A number of ecclesial patters emerge, and specific commands appear periodically as well. Still, the New Testament does not provide a precise manual on how the structure of church government should be organized. Some would even agree with the skeptical judgment of Eduard Schweizer, who said, "There is no such thing as the New Testament church order." I understand why some persons draw this conclusion, but I believe it to be unwarranted and unnecessary. While there is no precise manual on church government and polity, a survey and analysis of the biblical material reveals definite patterns and discernable guidelines on how the churches in the New Testament functioned.

In broad terms there are five forms of church government or polity; Episcopal (Roman Catholics, Anglicans/ Episcopalians, Methodists), Presbyterian, Congregational (Baptists, Congregationalists, and some Lutherans) Erastian (national state churches), and minimalist or nongovernmental (Ouakers, Plymouth Brethren). Each of these systems would seem to have positive and even commendable features. Each seeks to highlight particular features found in Scripture. It is likely that in the early stages of the church's history, church government and polity were not highly developed. Local congregations were loosely knit groups. It is extremely probable that there were a variety of church governmental arrangements. Each church would have organized itself, taking into consideration its own unique context and situation.

For instance, the apostles had the church in Jerusalem assist them in selecting candidates to serve the widows (Acts 6:3), whereas different circumstances required Paul to have Titus appoint elders on Crete (Titus 1:5). However, as we examine the Scriptures, the evidence leads us to the following positions: New Testament churches were basically congregational in their government and polity. The exact nature of this Congregationalists may have varied, but at its most basic and fundamental level churches were local bodies of baptized believers who operated within the parameters of Congregationalism. Further, there were two and only two offices within each congregation: pastors (elders or bishops) and deacons (Phil. 1:1; 1 Tim 3:1-13). The Scriptures never specify the required or precise number of either. I am convinced, based on the evidence, that the number of elders or deacons is not the issue but that persons meeting scriptural qualifications is hat is crucial. In the context of elders, who is giving leadership and direction to the church is far more important than how many are involved in this assignment.

It is my contention that the New Testament allows flexibility on this point. Both a single elder and a plurality of elders within a Congregational structure fit the pattern of church government and polity that emerges from a study of the New Testament.

The argument for a plurality of elders, pastors, overseers, leaders is easier to make based upon the biblical evidence. For example, every time the word elder (presbuteros) appears in the context of church leaders, it is always in the plural. So, is the case for a single elder biblically indefensible? It is my contention that the answer to that question is no. I believe a case for the single-elder position, as a scripturally acceptable option can be made on biblical, theological, and practical grounds. Scripture allows flexibility at this point and therefore, so should we.

Revival

Merritt's next message dealt with an important doctrinal topic, the sovereignty of God.

"A sovereign God possesses supreme power and authority over everyone and everything," Merritt said, defining the term. "He is in complete control and can accomplish whatever He pleases, whenever He pleases, wherever He pleases. Everything comes about because God either causes or permits it to happen."

A proper conception of this truth will radically affect the way a person views both suffering and blessing, Merritt said, serving as an anchor when the storms of life assail a believer

"If God is in control, there is no such thing as luck," he said. "Nothing happens by chance. Anything that happens to you, either good or bad, has to pass through His sovereign fingers first.

"No matter what problem comes into your life today or tomorrow, it will not be so big that He can't handle it. Tomorrow is not in the hands of chance, or of luck, or of blind faith. Tomorrow is in the hands of a sovereign God who loves you and has the best for you."

On Thursday Merritt exhorted Christians to seek out the lost, like the shepherd who goes after a lost sheep.

Student Handbook reminder

Student Services would like to remind Southeastern students and staff of a few continuing policies in the Student Handbook and to make everyone aware of some changes for this year. Students and their families are expected to dress in modest attire. The seminary's position is that immodest clothing damages one's Christian testimony, so clothes such as short skirts, shorts. and tank tops are discouraged. Hats, caps, and short shorts are not allowed in class or in chapel. Facial or ear jewelry is prohibited for men. If you have any questions concerning these policies, please contact the Student Life Office or the Dean of Students Office.

George urges students to remember God's nearness in life's trials

By Kyle Smith

By remembering God's covenant faithfulness and the grace He has poured out in their lives, believers can find an anchor of comfort during the struggles of life, historian and theologian Timothy George told students during a chapel message Oct. 14.

George, founding dean of the Beeson Divinity School of Samford University and an executive editor of Christianity Today, spoke from Psalm 77, detailing the spiritual journey of a psalmist whose doubt turned to faith as he meditated on the faithful character of God.

Similarly, George said by way of application, believers today who find themselves questioning God's near-themselves questioning God's nearness in a time of trial should recall God's steadfast and loyal love.

"The Bible is God's covenant love story for His people throughout all centuries and ages of time," George spiritual journey of a psalmiet whose doubt turned to Today, preaches on God's faithfulness.

said. "We read and we remember. We come back to reality because we know who God is and His unfailing love that will never perish.

"The surest way to reconnect when you're in the depths is to remember. Remember how good God has been to you. Where would we be if it hadn't been for the Lord on our side?"

George told his listeners that because of Christ's suffering on their behalf, He can identify with every struggle and every grief that they might encounter in life. "There is no depth to which you could sink that Jesus Christ has not been there before vou," he said. There is no pathway to Easter Sunday that does not lead through Good Friday.'

George concluded by leaving listeners with a thought of hope when life seems dark.

"The Good News of the gospel," he said, "is that whether we can see Him in the dark or not, He can see us in the dark."

Southeastern moves to more paperless campus

By Andy Lewis

In the next few months, Southeastern will move to a more paperless campus, according to Dr. Waylan Owens, Vice President for Institutional Effectiveness and Assessment, and Mr. Tim Shidal, Director of Information Technology.

"Every piece of electronic communication that is legal, we're moving there," said Dr. Owens. "The school intends by late in this semester to have most departments electronically, and the long range plan is to conduct registration online along with handling grades, scholarships, and alumni contact. This also means that the use communicating by e-mail."

The housing department has already begun to alert students about payments via email, and soon the Business Office and Library will also begin to alert students of unpaid bills and overdue books. In the coming months, more announcements will be communicated electronically, and the long range plan is to conduct registration online along with handling grades, scholarships, and alumni contact.

of student boxes in the Ledford Center to communicate announcements will dwindle.

"We are hoping to cut down on our paper copies and move more into the electronic age," said Mr. Shidal, "We also want to be a good steward of resources."

In order to prepare for this change, students need to sign up for and activate their Southeastern email accounts. If students are having trouble with this, help is available at the website webmail.sebts.edu, or they can call the IT Email Help Desk at (919) 761-2117. The website also gives students the option to forward their Southeastern email to other personal accounts.

Dr. Owens and Mr. Shidal also urge students to begin checking their accounts regularly. The last few weeks of the semester will serve as the transition period, with more and morethings being sent to students

Southeastern Spotlight: Board of Trustees

Campus Role: The Board of Trustees' chief function is to establish policy concerning the operation of the Seminary and approve the academic programs offered by the school. The are elected by the Southern Baptist Convention and charged with the control and governance of SEBTS.

Board members only come to campus twice a year, but they are personally involved in Seminary life all year round. Working out of their love for the Seminary, Trustees selflessly serve as recruiters, fund raisers, and prayer warriors for the benefit of Southeastern Seminary and the Kingdom of God.

Upcoming Events

Dr. Akin's Inauguration Event Schedule

By Andy Lewis

This week, Southeastern will be celebrating the inauguration of Dr. Daniel Akin as President of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

This is going to be a wonderful time of celebration, and with the inauguration there will be multiple events for students, faculty, and staff to attend.

Tuesday, October 26 at 10:00 a.m. will be the first Inaugural Chapel Celebration in Binkley Chapel, which will feature Dr. James Merritt as the speaker.

The main inaugural events will be on Wednesday, October 27. The official Inaugural Ceremony will be conducted at 10:00 a.m. in Binkley Chapel, featuring Dr. Paige Patterson, President of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, as the speaker.

Southeastern's Health Initiative

By Seth Bible

Believing that God has called all Christians to be good stewards of their bodies, the Student Life Office is pressing forward with the Southeastern Fitness Initiative.

Period one which finished up October 3 was a huge success as we recorded 1049 workouts by the 105 + students and faculty who are currently signed up with over 25 people becoming eligible for the 1st level prize.

Even if you are not a "traditional student" with regular access to our facility, you can still be involved. Simply exercise wherever it is most convenient to you and stop by the fitness center to record your results. Please come by the Student Life

Office if you have any questions concerning the Southeastern Fitness Initiative or any of our other fitness programs including the women's aerobic classes which are currently underway.

There are three fitness periods this semester. Period two is currently underway and ends November 7. Period three runs from November 8 to December 12. There will also be three fitness periods during the spring semester.

The goal of the Fitness Initiative is to motivate students to develop a lifestyle of fitness that they can carry with them after they leave Southeastern.

Southeastern inaugurates sixth president

By Kyle Smith

Less than a week before the nation elected its next president, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary inaugurated one of its own.

Surrounded by his family, friends and students, Daniel Akin officially stepped into his role as president on

Oct. 27 in an inauguration ceremony "devoted to the Lord Jesus

More than a thousand people packed Binkley Chapel, in the center of the school's historic campus, to witness the inauguration of only the sixth president in the school's 53-year his-

"On behalf of 42,000 churches and 16 million Southern Baptists," SBC President and Chief Executive Officer Morris Chapman said in his greeting, "I congratulate Dr. Akin on this momentous day from which Southeastern will go forward for the glory of God. This institution will continue to be a lighthouse for the glory of God all around the world. I thank God, as do

The chapel ceremony was the culmination of a weeklong celebration at Southeastern, where many Southern Baptist leaders gathered to honor Akin for his character and dedication but reserved the glory for Jesus Christ.

"All that matters in life is that you please Jesus," Akin said. "My sole passion in life is to live under his lord-

Speakers at inauguration events during the week included Akin's personal friends James Merritt, pastor of Cross Pointe Church in Duluth, Ga., and Albert Mohler, president of The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

A common refrain from those who know Akin best was that behind the aura of leadership, Akin is a genuine man of God.

"Daniel Akin is a man of 100 percent integrity absolute integrity," Merritt said.

Delivering the charge to

Akin was Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary President Paige Patterson, Akin's immediate predecessor at Southeastern and a man Akin calls his "father in ministry."

Patterson praised Akin as a "matchless communicator, fabulous preacher, fine theologian and exegete of the Scriptures and man of God."

The friendship between the two began long ago when Patterson served as Akin's preaching professor at Criswell College, preached Akin's ordination and hired him to his first teaching position.

Patterson's charge to his former student and successor was simple and heartfelt.

Southeastern trustees hear audit report, approve new growth

By Jason Hall & Kyle Smith

Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary trustees, meeting in conjunction with the inauguration of the school's sixth president, heard a positive report from an independent auditing firm about the "high degree of integrity" with which Southeastern handles its budget and finances.

President Daniel Akin told trustees he is pleased with the results of the recent audit by independent accounting firm McGladrey and Pullen, LLP, of Raleigh, N.C. The audit included an exhaustive they heard of the growth look at Southeastern's financial practices that Akin said is necessary in America's post-Enron corporate cul-

"Our simple goal was to make sure that this institution has a reputation for doing what it does with the highest degree of integrity," Akin told the board.

During their meeting, trustees also approved a revision of Southeastern's master plan for campus expansion and renovation, and taking place in all of the school's degree programs. Ryan Hutchinson, Vice President for Administration, presented a creative plan to the board that will overhaul much of the seminary's historic campus for $15-20 million over the next few years.

Akin said the revised master plan, which is the seminary's long-range strategy for campus growth, will now include an extensive renovation to the existing library, rather than the construction of a new one. Whereas a new library building - called for under the old master plan would cost the seminary $15-20 million, the new plan estimates that the seminary can complete seven projects for just under $21 million.

The result, Akin said, will be good financial stewardship and campus facilities

Southeastern Spotlight: Mr. Tim Shidal

Family: My wife Jennifer of 10 years, and two daughters, Glorianna (4) and Joyanna (1). We also have a baby due in April 2005.

Seminary/College position: Director of Information Technologies Hometown: Monroe, NC

How you became a Christian: I was saved during a Sunday evening service in June of 1977. I became convicted of my sins after listening to an elderly gentleman, Bill Steele, speak about how sinners cannot escape hell and how Jesus Christ is the only one who has the authority to break the chains of sin.

Current church: Wake Cross Roads Baptist

Most influential person in your life: My father, Jerry Shidal, for numerous reasons but also because he taught me the value of completing a project no matter how difficult the task.

Something surprising about you: I served in the U.S. Air Force for 6 years reaching the rank of Captain.

Education: BS in Computer Science from UNC Charlotte; MS in Computer Information Systems from Phoenix University.

Campus role: I am responsible for overseeing all of the voice and data communications on campus including computers, telephones, email, websites, etc.

Classes currently teaching: None, but I'm hoping to begin teaching some computer classes here at the college when the opportunity becomes available

Favorite author: Jack R. Taylor and Shelby Foote

Hobbies: Spending time with my wife and my children, video editing, and playing my guitar.

Favorite musician: Counting Crows

What influenced you to come to Southeastern: My wife and I spent several years searching for how God wanted to use our lives. I really had a burning desire to use my technical skills for the kingdom when God opened the doors for us to move to Wake Forest.

A word of wisdom for the readers: Install a virus scanner on your computer, and make a backup copy of your important files often.

Scholarship Applications

General Scholarship applications are now available online at www.sebts.edu in the "Quick Links" section. The General Scholarship is available to anyone who will be a full-time student in the spring. Application deadline is November 15. For more information, please contact the Student Life Office at 761-2305.

What you need to know since you could not get the flu shot!

Common symptoms of the flu are high fever with severe body aches, then sore throat and cough. Complications of the flu can be pneumonia which often occurs after the flu symptoms are beginning to resolve. The flu is a viral illness and treated symptomatically with fluids and Tylenol or Advil. There are some antiviral flu medications, but they must be started within 2-3 days of the illness to be effective. Pneumonia or other flu complications may require additional treatment and antibiotics. One of the most important things you can do to prevent the flu is washing your hands often. If soap and water are not available, then use anti-bacterial gel sanitizer. Keep it with you at all times in your pocket or in your purse. Other ways to prevent the flu include: avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth; avoid close contact with people who are sick; cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing; and stay home when you are sick. Help yourself and those around you stay healthy!

Trustee Meeting

Audit Finds Integrity

By Jason Hall and Kyle Smith

In reporting to the board about the audit's findings, trustee Philip Mercer, an investment consultant from Columbia, Md., and chairman of the board's audit and investment committee, pointed to several reasons why an extensive audit was necessary for Southeastern.

One was the much stronger accounting standards that have become the norm in corporate America in the wake of major scandals involving Fortune 500 companies like Enron and MCI-Worldcom.

Now, instead of pointing out fraud when they find it, auditors may now assume the existence of fraud until they find evidence otherwise. In Southeastern's case, the auditors found no evidence, Mercer said.

"This is an unqualified opinion, the highest you can receive," he said. "They absolutely said there is a high degree of integrity in what is happening here."

Southeastern also saw the need for extending the scope of its annual audit because a new president has come on board, and the growth in the number of students and staff raised the need for more efficient accounting corrected them," Akin said. "We procedures. asked the auditors to review our a

During the audit process, Akin noted, questions were raised about a car that was transferred to a former staff member more than a year ago, and the taxable status of such a transaction. Because he wanted to make sure all the seminary's dealings were open and honest, Akin directed the officials from McGladrey and Pullen, including senior partner C. Colby Daughtry, to extend their audit as far as necessary to reach the truth behind these questions.

"The auditors were offered documentation of alleged wrongdoing from a former employee," Akin said. "I asked them to accept that offer, which they did, and to thoroughly review the business practices from my administration, the previous administration and during the interim. And they did."

In a draft letter from the firm summarizing the results of the audit, the auditors noted that they made some "constructive suggestions" to the seminary for improving procedures but found nothing that suggested impropriety by administrators.

"We made some mistakes and we corrected them," Akin said. "We asked the auditors to review our actions, and they found no concerns. We have instituted some new procedures to guard against making the same mistakes again."

Mercer agreed. "There were some issues in procedures but there was no criminality whatsoever," he said. "There were no signs of anything fraudulent or illegal. Our procedures need to be tightened up and we need to be more thorough. We have to do a better job of tracking acquisition of fixed assets, like a car."

David Armstrong, the seminary's comptroller, said he felt confident in the thoroughness of the audit and the administration's attitude toward making procedural changes.

"I really appreciate Dr. Akin's willingness to approach this head-on," Armstrong said. "I have complete confidence in the integrity of Southeastern and in the integrity of its administration."

Though charges of fraud and mismanagement have been directed at seminary administrators because of the gift of the car, trustee chairman Tim Lewis said he hopes this audit report can put such notions to rest. "It is our conviction that this independent report, in its clear and unequivocal language, will expose these unfounded accusations for exactly what they are," Lewis said.

Members of the trustee board said that after reviewing the audit, they are firmly convinced that Southeastern officials have acted with complete discretion.

"Everything was out in the open," said trustee Terrence Collier of Pound, Va. "We had good discussions on the matter. Everything was transparent. Southeastern took all the right steps in this matter. I have complete confidence in President Akin and the seminary that they have done nothing wrong in this matter."

James Goldston III of Raleigh, a member of the board's executive committee, said he has no concerns about how the seminary has, or will, conduct its business affairs.

"Everything has been under a totally exhaustive audit," Goldston said. "We spent a lot of extra time and money to have this done correctly. Everything is in the proper order. I am totally satisfied by the results of the audit."

that can accommodate the burgeoning construction of a new facilities manstudent population. construction of a new facilities management building, which will contain

"From where I sit, I'm very excited about this," Akin said. "I think it's a wise plan, and I think it's a responsible plan. I believe renovating this library is a much wiser interim step than building an entirely new one. What's remarkable to me is that for the same amount of money, we can accomplish almost all of our goals. I'm very pleased about this, and it has my very enthusiastic support."

Much of Southeastern's planning has been influenced by the record increases it has experienced in student enrollment, with 2,407 students this fall. Akin mentioned that the school's number of new students is at an all-time high, including record highs in enrollment in both its D.Min. and Ph.D. programs.

The first step of the master plan is construction of a new facilities management building, which will contain Southeastern's facilities management and housing departments, a shop area for storage and work space and a place to house the Sunshine Seniors volunteer food ministry, which gave almost a half million dollars in food to students last year.

Trustees also voted in the meeting to promote the following professors: Ken Coley, from associate professor of Christian education to professor of Christian education; Greg Lawson, from associate professor of Christian education to professor of Christian education; and Ned Matthews, from associate professor of pastoral ministries to professor of pastoral ministries.

Inauguration

"Lead God's people with the integrity of your heart," he said. "Like Enoch, walk with Him so closely that it seems you're closer to His house than your own. . . . The same God who gives you life and strength will sustain you in heavy responsibility. May God bless you every day, sweet son, as you serve the Lord."

In the end, many of those in attendance expressed their gratitude for God's work in bringing Akin to Southeastern.

"This is a glorious day in the life of this institution, a day for which we have prayed, planned and sought the Lord's will," said Tim Lewis, chairman of the school's board of trustees.

"Dr. Akin is a man of commitment to the Lord Jesus Christ and to good thinking about theology based on a firm faith in the inerrancy of God's Word. He is a man of proven character, with a contagious passion for life, living and people. I know of no other man more adequately prepared to be president of Southeastern than Dr. Akin."

Akin was visibly moved by the outpouring of love and support, and he concluded the ceremony by pledging to lead Southeastern in training ministers to take the Word of God to a world in need of Him.

"I pledge to build an institution that will continue to stand on the infallible and inerrant Word of God," Akin said. "Southeastern Seminary will continue to stand for personal evangelism, world missions and the exclusivity of the Gospel. We believe heaven and hell are real and the only difference is Jesus Christ."

Suffering prepares believers for glory, Tripp says

By Stephanie Carter

A Christian's life should reflect an appreciation for the "sweet theology of uncomfortable grace," God's refining work in a believer through suffering, Paul Tripp said in his November 9 chapel message to Southeastern students.

Tripp, a well known author, speaker and the director of Changing Lives International, based his message on 1 Peter 1:3-9, which is called "one of the Bible's most stunning story summaries...(that) captures everything walking with the Lord is about.

"God will take you where you did not plan to go in order to produce in you what you could not achieve on your own," Tripp said. "Very often the moment we're crying out, 'Where is the grace of God?' we're getting it. But it's uncomfortable grace."

Dr. Paul Tripp, Director of Changing Lives International, speaks at chapel November 9.

The passage demonstrates the "then past, then future, and now construction in Scripture," Tripp said. This axiom summarizes that a Christian's past, future in eternity, and present circumstances should be understood as a whole. He conceded that most churches do well with the discussion of past and future, but "tend to get lost in the details of now."

Tripp said that Christians often focus on circumstances rather than having "God's view of what in the world is happening now.

"We tend to be so oriented to comfort and oriented to ease," Tripp said.

This causes Christians to view life's struggles as a sign of God's inattention rather than God's refining grace.

Tripp relayed a similar message in his "Instruments in the Redeemer's Hands" conference, held at Southeastern on November 8. The conference was geared toward those pursuing an education in biblical counseling, Tripp's main area of expertise.

Annual Chili Cook-off a success

By Andy Lewis

On Thursday, November 9, over 200 students, faculty, staff, and families gathered in the Ledford Center for Southeastern's annual Chili Cook-off.

The chili cook-off was a great family event, that not only featured chili, but also hot dogs, desserts, and live music.

In all, 22 pots of chili were cooked, 18 of which were officially entered into the cooking competition. The kinds of chili ranged from many beans to beanless, spicy hot to mildly sweet, beef to chicken, and traditional to chocolate. The variety of types of chili was almost overwhelming, and the aroma of chili permeated the Ledford Center.

In the end, a panel of four judges was given the task of determining a winner. Dr. Allan Moseley, Mr. Sheldon Alexander, Mr. Doug Nalley and Dr. Gerald Cowen, were the official judges of the chili.

The judges deliberate at the annual Chili Cook-off.

Southeastern Spotlight: Mr. Sheldon Alexander

Family: My wife Carolyn of 28 years, Jason (26), daughter-in-law Dinara (25) and Emil (25), and two wonderful grandchildren: Sarah (15 months) and Samuel (2 weeks).

Seminary/College position: Registrar/Assistant to the Dean.

Hometown: Hereford, TX.

How you became a Christian: My banker invited me to a Christian Businessmen's meeting when a man from Jews for Jesus was speaking. He invited me to a Passover Seder the next day—I went and was miraculously saved.

Current church: First Baptist Youngsville.

Current church ministry: Deacon and Sunday School Teacher.

Most influential person in your life: Grandfather Gaston Emil Baer (1899-1994).

Something surprising about you: I was going to be the third generation in our family's retail business and sold shoes through seminary.

Education: BA in Business Administration from West Texas A&M and MDiv from Southwestern Seminary.

Campus role: We count students, work on class schedules, and keep up with the records.

Favorite author: F. F. Bruce.

Hobbies: Racquetball and keeping up with the grandchildren.

Favorite musician: The Gaithers.

What influenced you to come to Southeastern: In 1989 when I graduated from SWBTS, Dean Bush had several openings in administration. He figured being a registrar was something I could do and invited me to come.

A word of wisdom for the readers: Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding, in all your ways acknowledge Him and He will direct your paths (Prov. 3:5-6).

What you need to know since you could not get the flu shot!

Common symptoms of the flu are high fever with severe body aches, then sore throat and cough. Complications of the flu can be pneumonia which often occurs after the flu symptoms are beginning to resolve. The flu is a viral illness and treated symptomatically with fluids and Tylenol or Advil. There are some antiviral flu medications, but they must be started within 2-3 days of the illness to be effective. Pneumonia or other flu complications may require additional treatment and antibiotics. One of the most important things you can do to prevent the flu is washing your hands often. If soap and water are not available, then use anti-bacterial gel sanitizer. Keep it with you at all times in your pocket or in your purse. Other ways to prevent the flu include: avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth; avoid close contact with people who are sick; cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing; and stay home when you are sick. Help yourself and those around you stay healthy!

The 19th Pastor's School and Bible Conference at FBC Jacksonville, FL, will be from Feb. 18-22. Students can receive credit for 4925 Adv. Practicum in Church Growth, taught by Dr. Greg Lawson. There are 40 free scholarships available, along with the possibility of free housing. Contact Dr. Lawson or Mrs. Cash directly by Dec. 15. Syllabus is available in Registrar's Office, and students must register with Registrar by Dec. 15 to receive class credit.

Southern Baptist History

Prominent sermons of SBC Presidents

By Drs. Emir and Ergun Caner Edited by Andy Lewis

At each annual session of the Southern Baptist Convention, the messengers gather for the purpose of reports, votes, meetings, fellowship, and dinners. We gather from every state in the union, every corner of the globe, and every institution that operates within our sphere of ministry. Thousands of loyal Southern Baptists travel the country, check into hotels, eat restaurant food, and collaborate with our friends, many of whom we only see at this one meeting a year.

Admittedly, much of the Convention proceedings can be somewhat dry. Reports and statistics drone on in a parade of accountability. Messengers flow in and out of the meeting halls as interest in the particular presentations ebb and flow. Certain speakers garner much interest, and often the floor is packed when a vote on an officer or resolution is called.

One moment, however, suspends time: the presidential address. For many years, the standing president of the SBC has risen to the platform and addressed the messengers. These presidential addresses. . .are snapshots of our history. It is incumbent upon each president to speak to the larger problems and concerns of the day, specifically as they relate to Southern Baptists. In the address the president is given the burden of calling Southern Baptists to the task at hand, often in a rousing and impassioned plea.

"These addresses pulse with the lifeblood of our Leaders."

These addresses are portraits of history precisely due to their nature. Each president addressed the crisis of the hour and the pressing need. The generational moments in time are reflected by their sermons and serve as a panorama of American history. President Johnson addressed an embryonic denomination, taking its first steps toward denominational effectiveness. Presidents R. B. C. Howell and Richard Fuller faced a denomination on the precipice of Civil War, even as the churches the messengers served were losing their members to the call of the militia. J. B. Gambrell dealt with the devastating effects and the incredible opportunities afforded by the First World War, just as Pat Neff and W. W. Hamilton would do in the Second World War. E. Y. Mullins faced a Convention forced to formulate its first "Baptist Faith and Message" in light of the expanding teachings and philosophy of the evolutionary hypothesis. Herschel H. Hobbs addressed his generation's drift toward neoorthodoxy and the need for Southern Baptists to delineate their beliefs afresh, just as James Merritt and Paige Patterson had to do a generation later.

Wars, controversies, famine, pestilence, and sword were all broached by the presidents in their annual addresses. Theological conflict, denominational disputes, and spiritual apathy were all within their "line of fire." These addresses are no dry and pedantic restatements of statistics; these are impassioned trumpet calls to service!

We cannot overstate the case for the significance of these sermons to the church historian or the Baptist reader. These addresses pulse with the lifeblood of our leaders and often betray their most impassioned convictions. One may not always agree with their conclusions or hermeneutics. Moderate or conservative, Unionist or Confederate, academic or ministerial, particular or general atonement—they are all herein included! May the reader enjoy the journey through the history of our nation and our cause through the mouths of the men God raised up to lead us through them.

Tripp

The conference and Tripp's speaking engagements are the result of his quest to keep church counseling from reducing the Bible to a book of directions.

"Christianity is not a restorative technology,"

Tripp said in a Southeastern class lecture. He urged students to instead view Christianity as life, not applied science.

He concluded his chapel message by calling Christians to "celebrate the refining mercy of a powerful and loving Redeemer.

"Do you want a Messiah who will deliver to you your own personal definition of purpose and pleasure and leave you in your own condition?" Tripp asked. "Or do you want a Messiah that says, 'I mined you so you will reach that glorious state of beauty I intended for you?"

Cook-off

They had to judge each pot of chili on the basis of aroma, appearance, taste, texture, and spice.

In the end, the judges proclaimed Ann Marie Donaldson the winner of the annual Chili Cook-off. As the winner, she received a $25 cash prize and a gift certificate for a free lunch buffet at Milton's restaurant.

Ann Marie calls her chili "Fire and Torment." She said, "My secret is that I cook it one day and let it sit overnight with habanero and green chile peppers. I also use chocolate as the final secret ingredient."

Chip Baggett and John Hung, together prepared the second place chili. They received a $20 gift certificate to the Olde English Tea Room.

Katie Kissinger finished in third place with her "See you in the morning" chili. She received a free lunch buffet to Milton's.

Seth Bible presents Ann Marie Donaldson her prize for being the winner of the annual Chili Cook-off.

All in all, the chili cook-off was a great success. It was a nice event for the whole family with a spicy kick.
