

FEB 13 1981

The seminary was host for more than 300 guests from Wake Forest and surrounding communities for a New Year's Day luncheon featuring black-eyed peas, hog jowl, turnips, and cornbread. The food was served by members of the faculty and staff.

NEW YEAR
CELEBRATION

The members of the seminary Executive Council attended their mid-year workshop, January 4-6. Numerous agenda items were discussed and all institutional objectives were reviewed and evaluated at the half-way point of the academic/fiscal year.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL WORKSHOP

The seminary was host for 30 Directors of Missions in a conference planned especially by and for them January 14-16. Jerry Niswonger reports that the conference content was very beneficially shared by the persons who attended. Another conference is planned for January, 1982.

DIRECTORS OF MISSIONS
CONFERENCE

Dr. Ben Fisher is well into his consultation for the seminary as a part of a program to develop materials and procedures for the orientation of new seminary trustees. The plan is to devise an orientation system which can be adapted by other seminaries as well as Southeastern. The consultation has been made possible through a competitive grant by the Lilly Endowment.

TRUSTEE EDUCATION

Spring Convocation was held in Binkley Chapel, January 20. Dr. Robert Richardson, Jr. spoke on the occasion. Enrollment for the spring semester, while not yet complete, is 1149. This includes 98 students who are entering classes for the first time this semester.

SPRING
CONVOCATION

Gene Williams, class of '59, presented the keys to the plant services addition given to the seminary by his company, Central Builders. He also announced the completion of the 26-lot seminary subdivision - "Heritage Woods."

Reece House, a completely furnished guest apartment for seminary visitors, was dedicated January 20. Almost fifty invited guests from four states braved a freak winter snow storm to attend the ceremonies.

REECE HOUSE

The apartment is named for James Thaddeus Reece and Nina Davis Reece, parents of Augusta Hockaday whose husband, Dennis, was a member of Southeastern's first graduating class.
