We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

OUR beloved sister, Mary E. Lenon, was born in Knox Co., Ill., Oct. 30th, 1852, and with her parents crossed the plains in 1853, who settled in Clackamas Co., Ore., where she lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sawtell, until she married brother Wm. H. Lenon, of Marion Co., Ore., on March 14th, 1880. She was baptized in the fellowship of the Siloam Church of Regular Primitive Baptists by our beloved brother, Elder Abner Shanks, on the third Sunday in June, 1887, and died March 14th, 1894, aged 41 years, 4 months and 15 days.

Her disease was consumption, and she bore her affliction very patiently. The writer of this went to see her a few days before she died, and talked with her on the subject of death. It was hard for her to leave her husband and three little children, the eldest one a little more than twelve years old. She wanted to be submissive to the will of her Master. She was an orderly member of the church, always filling her seat, and delighted in hearing the gospel preached. Her hope of salvation rested in free and unmerited grace alone. She will be sadly missed by the church, but more so by the husband and little children. But O, dear ones, do not grieve for her; she is safely housed in that glory world where death never will come. May God bless the bereaved ones, and, if it is his will, prepare them to meet her where there will be no sorrow, but all will be joy and peace and love.

By request of brother Lenon I expect to try to preach a discourse to her memory on the third Sunday in June next, if the Lord will.

Your brother in hope,

W. S. MATTHEWS.

LINCOLN, Oregon, May 21, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES the obituary notice of Miss E. L. Jackson, of this place, daughter of J. B. and N. J. Jackson.

The deceased was born Feb. 7th, 1872, and died May 15th, 1894. She was sick some six months, and bore her affliction with christian fortitude, never murmuring nor complaining. She leaves a father, mother, four sisters, two brothers, and other relatives and a host of friends, to mourn their loss, which we hope is her eternal gain. She was a good and kind girl, never giving her parents a short word, but always meeting them and her friends with a loving smile. She was a firm believer in salvation by grace, and grace alone; and I feel satisfied that she was one of the elect ones of the redeemed, and that she has gone to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the redeemed of the Lord that have gone before, and is now enjoying the smiles of her Redeemer. She is done with this world of sin and sorrow, no more to be buffeted with sin and the turmoils of this sin-cursed earth. She has gone to occupy one of those mansions that Jesus told his disciples he was going to prepare for them. He said, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." What a blessed thought to the child of God, to know and believe that our departed ones are gone to that blissful home where moth doth not corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal.

"Sister, thou wert mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze;
Pleasant as the air of evening
When it floats among the trees.

"Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord.

Your brother in the Spirit,

J. J. WATERFILL.

TYRONE, Ky., May 23, 1894.

CAPTAIN B. F. Jones departed this life at the residence of Elder J. G. Sawin, in the village of Loxa, Coles Co., Ill., on Monday, May 21st, at 11:30 a. m., at the ripe age of 89 years, lacking 5 months.

He was born in Harrison Co., Ky., Oct. 30th, 1805, and moved to the immediate neighborhood in which he died in the year 1836, where he has lived an upright, conscientious man until his death. He had never married, but lived for many years with his niece and her husband and family, sister J. G. Sawin. He never had publicly put on Christ by being baptized, but had since early life given evidence that he was of the Lord's chosen people. It was the writer's privilege to have known him more than half a century, and I can testify to his honest daily walk among men. I also can say that he had many times through life given evidence that his hope of felicity beyond death was alone in Christ Jesus. Some four or five years ago, while in conversation with him on the subject of duty in spiritual matters, he expressed regret that he had not in his younger days come to the church and asked membership. We visited him a few days before his death; and in the conversation then had, though he could scarcely articulate words, he still gave every assurance of his unceasing faith in God, and of a hope in Christ. Our sister Sawin, his niece, sat by his bed with us, and told us what he would say. She being accustomed to his talk, could understand him.

He had some years ago intimated to his niece that I should speak to the friends at his funeral, which I did on Wednesday, May 23d, in the Presbyterian meeting-house, where a very large concourse of his friends and neighbors assembled. After speaking from the words which he had a few days before his death quoted from the language of David, "And now, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee," found in Psalm xxxix. 7, his body was followed to the tomb and laid away, a multitude witnessing all the service, Elders E. P. Ashbrook and J. G. Sawin being present.

JAMES M. TRUE.

KANSAS, Ill., May 25, 1894.

BROTHER Ethan Ashbrook was born in Pickaway Co., Ohio, Nov. 26th, 1820, and died in the city of Charleston, Ill., May 19th, 1894, aged a little more than 73 years.

On June 6th, 1841, he was united in marriage with Permelia Coonrod, of the county and state of his birth. Nine children were the fruits of this union, only four of whom now survive, two sons and two daughters. The companion and mother also passed from earth into that rest which remains for the people of God in 1882. Brother A. moved to Shelby Co., Ill., in 1841, where he lived fourteen years. He then came to Coles County, where he lived an honored life, beloved and respected by all who knew him.

He long cherished a hope that Christ was his Savior, and that when his earthly pilgrimage was ended he would hear the voice of his loving King say, "Come up higher;" but such was his sense of personal unworthiness that many years elapsed before he united with the church. Some nine years since, however, he came to Little Bethel Church, the home of the unworthy writer, and meekly submitted his case, and was received and baptized on the following day. A profession was never more highly honored by an orderly walk and godly conversation than was his. His profession was supplemented by every evidence of a sanctified heart, and a sincere desire to honor the cause he loved so well. He died in the full and complete triumph of that faith which gave him such sweet solace in life, and of which he so oft and so touchingly spoke during his last illness. May the Lord bless the sorrowing members of the afflicted family, and grant them grace that they may live and die as did the sainted father, whose example is well worthy of constant imitation. He will be greatly missed, but by none more than the writer, with the church where he loved to worship.

One by one the fathers are being gathered home. Our little church has lost two of its most estimable members since April 1st.

Yours in sorrow,

J. G. SAWIN.

LOXA, Ill., May 26, 1894.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

OUR yearly meeting at the New Hope Church, in Greenbush, Warren Co., Ill., will be held, if the Lord will, on the third Sunday in June, commencing on Friday afternoon at five o'clock.

The friends of Jesus, the only hope of lost sinners, are invited to meet with us. We have the promise of some able brethren in the ministry to be with us.

I. N. VANMETER, Pastor.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Chemung Old School Baptist Association will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Cammal, Lycoming Co., Pa., to begin on Wednesday before the third Sunday in June (13th), 1894, and continue three days.

Those coming from west of Corning will change cars at Corning and take the Fall Brook & Pine Creek R. R. to Cammal. Those coming from east of Scranton will change at Scranton and take the Bloomsburg Division of the D., L. & W. R. R. to Northumberland, P. & E. to Williamsport, and Pine Creek to Cammal. Those coming to Elmira will take the State Line R. R. to Lawrenceville, change to Pine Creek R. R. to Cammal. Those coming from Baltimore will come to Williamsport, and change to Pine Creek R. R. to Cammal.

The meeting-house is about two minutes' walk from the Cammal depot. All who desire to attend will be welcome, ministers included.

D. M. VAIL.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

THERE will be a three days meeting held at the Davis school-house, beginning on Friday before the fourth Sunday in July, 1894.

We would like to see as many Baptists as feel like visiting us come and join with us in singing and offering prayer and supplication to the Lord of lords and King of kings.

This meeting will be held fifteen miles east of Purcell, Ind. Ter., and nine miles south of Burnett, near the head of Pan Creek, in Cleveland Co., Oklahoma.

A. J. GILBREATH.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has attained its wide national circulation we have been importuned by our subscribers, as well as by those who have had no special interest in sustaining the publication, to open our columns to advertisements; but never having had any experience in that line of business we have hesitated to make the venture. Since the commencement of this volume, however, there has been a combination of circumstances that has encouraged us to make the experiment, and we therefore make the following announcement, viz.:

We will receive for the last page of the paper suitable and reliable advertisements at the following net rates, viz.:

Inches	1 week	4 weeks	13 weeks	26 weeks	52 weeks
2 1/2	$.95	$ 3.60	$ 8.50	$ 12.00	$ 22.50
2	1.90	7.20	17.00	24.00	45.00
1 1/2	3.80	13.50	34.00	48.00	75.00
1	5.70	20.00	51.00	72.00	108.00
3/4	7.60	26.50	68.00	96.00	144.00

No advertisements will be received for this paper unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strengthening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

FRASHER'S SAFETY HOLDBACK ATTACHMENTS are what every body needs on the shafts of their vehicles. Consists of slotted plates to be fastened to shafts, having detachable rotary loops for attaching breech straps. Afford utmost facility in Gearing and Ungearing. Safety and Convenience in Emergencies. Ease of loosening a fallen horse from vehicle. Automatic detachment in case of breaking of traces or Singletree, if horse moves out of shafts. Fits underneath the shafts—Nothing in the way. Neat, practical. No rattling. Sold on Guarantee. AGENTS WANTED. Sample pair by mail. Black Japaned 50c. Nickel Plated 75c. Circulars free. F. O. FRASHER, Box 3298, Philadelphia, Pa. Please mention this paper.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary	St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33. M. Is. 53. 3. n. ver. 31.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore " because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand. CHAPTER XX. 1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master. 17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God. 18 " Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges 4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15 1/2.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

DIETZ DRIVING LAMP.

In it you get the results of much experiment and outlay, also of much REFLECTION.

From it you get an astonishing flood of clear white penetrating LIGHT.

On it we shed still more LIGHT in a little book, for a copy of which address,

R. E. DIETZ CO.,
60 LAIGHT ST., NEW YORK.

POULTRYMEN.

Get our circular, prizes won, etc., on GREEN BONE CUTTER. Cut bones doubles egg yield.
WEBSTER & HANNUM, Cazenovia, N. Y.

GET THE BEST! THE STAR COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT AND ANTI-RATTLER. SELLS AT SIGHT!
Fast selling; always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price $1.50. State rights for sale.
THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

FARMING CORPORATIONS.

A System of Business-like Co-operative Farming. Send for circulars to W. ALDRICH & Co., 120 Broadway, N. Y.

WEDDING & VISITING

CARDS, Monograms, Crests and Coat of Arms.

Badges, Menus, Souvenirs.

ROBERT SNEIDER, 145 FULTON ST., N. Y.

YOU CAN PUT IN A
HAY CARRIER
now, and have next harvest to test it.
J. A. CROSS, Fultonville, N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.
400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$.05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1894.

NO. 24.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"GOD LEFT HIM."

"AND Hezekiah prospered in all his works. Howbeit, in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart."—2 Chron. xxxii. 30, 31.

What a gracious and sacred reality is the possession of the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ! It far transcends all religions that are the productions of the flesh. True religion has no kinship or agreement with any mere creature religion. They are contrary the one to the other. True religion is of God, and will endure to the praise of its Author and Finisher. Other religions, no matter what they may seem to be, are vain, and will perish, and will prove to be the shame of their deluded professors. Where one religion prospers, the other withers. They are nourished by different food, grow and flourish in different soil, and what is life to one is death to the other. Fleshly religion has its standing in the wisdom and works of men; while true religion has its origin and standing in the eternal power of God, and is fed and nourished and flourishes by the abounding grace of the everlasting God. "His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue."—2 Peter i. 3.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, was one of the highly favored ones of God. By the sovereign grace of the Almighty, which wrought effectually in him, he turned away from the idolatries of his father; and not long after he ascended the throne of David he purged the land of its idols, and re-established the worship of the Lord God of Israel in his holy temple. God was with him, and prospered him in his kingdom, and magnified him in the sight of all nations. "Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honor: and he made himself treasures for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels; store-houses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks. Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance: for God had given him substance very much. This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." But with all this exaltation, and the unmistakable evidences that he was blessed with the favor of Jehovah unto himself and to his people Israel, yet he was a sinner, and this Jehovah purposed that he should learn. God left him, and then his heart was lifted up with pride.

The Israel of God are a people brought into peculiar nearness to the Lord. "He also exalteth the horn of his people, the praise of all his saints; even of the children of Israel, a people near unto him. Praise ye the Lord."—Psalm cxlviii. 14. "What nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon him for?"—Deut. iv. 7. God is with us, dear children of God. He is with us in bonds and ties, in his oath and covenant, in his shalls and wills. In all the relations, characters and offices which the Father, the Word and the Holy Ghost fill, Jehovah is with his people, and by precious faith we are enabled to view the glorious mystery of the incarnation of the Son of God; for "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." He is called Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us. The Lord is with his church in the bonds of everlasting wedlock. He says in the new covenant, "I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies: I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness; and thou shalt know the Lord." Nothing shall by any means separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord. The Lord for our everlasting consolation says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." By a living faith, which is of the operation of God, we are made experimentally to know that God is with us. That hymn beginning with the words,

"How tedious and tasteless the hours
When Jesus no longer I see,"

in some measure tells the story of the soul's experience when by faith we realize the nearness of the Lord. Then in an especial manner we can sing, "If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"

When God is felt to be with us we shall be found walking humbly with him. As Jesus walked, so shall we in the Spirit walk. The grace of the felt presence of our God shall so rest upon us that in lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, being kind to all the members of Christ's body, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake has forgiven us, we shall be found followers of God as dear children. The sweet and heavenly communion with the Lord, which we are blessed with when God manifests himself unto us as he does not unto the world, will cause us to feel that the world is crucified unto us, and we unto the world. When God is felt to be nigh, then we triumph over our enemies, over temptations, and can endure afflictions, suffer reproaches and revilings; and though men prove unfaithful, and forsake us, and creatures all fail, nevertheless the Lord standing by us we fear no evil. Saith the sweet psalmist of Israel, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Let our thoughts be turned again more particularly to our text. "Hezekiah prospered in all his works. Howbeit, in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart." We have already seen, beloved of God, in what sense the everlasting God never will leave his elect; but let us contemplate together examples given us in the Scriptures in which it may be said of a child of God that "God left him, to try him." Of the typical people of God we may read, "The pride of Israel doth testify to his face: therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity; Judah also shall fall with them. They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the Lord; but they shall not find him; he hath withdrawn himself from them."—Hosea v. 5, 6. Again, we may read, "The daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city."—Isaiah i. 8. Contemplate also the language of the bride in the Song, "I opened to my beloved; but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone: my soul failed when he spake: I sought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no answer."—Song v. 6. "Thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer," O child of God, "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer."—Isa. liv. 7, 8. These and other passages of the Scriptures, such as Judges xvi. 20, Numbers xiv. 42, Hosea v. 15, set forth in various aspects how the presence of God may be said to be withdrawn from his people; all of which is to discipline, chasten and teach them, and to bring them in meekness and lowliness, depending upon the Lord their God, that our glorious and blessed God may be our hope, our salvation, our all.

"God left him." If we can enter somewhat into the depths of the soul's experience of David when he cried, "Hide not thy face far from me; put not thy servant away in anger: thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation" (Psalm xxvii. 9), we may understand in what sense concerning king Hezekiah it is written, "God left him, to try him." While the Holy Ghost is with us, nourishing our hearts with the abounding grace of God, and cherishing us with sweet revelations of the things of Christ, thus comforted with Jehovah's mercy and truth we may well hold on our way. The smiles of Jesus, Emmanuel, cheer us by the way; and in our conscious weakness as poor sinners we lean upon the arm of our Beloved. The arm of his salvation supports us in our ascent from the wilderness of sin, temptations and trials; but if left, if our beloved Savior withdraw himself from us, ah, then we wander, then we go astray, we are turned aside, and veiled from our Savior and his saved ones. In the waste howling wilderness, desolate and alone, like a lost sheep, ever going astray, tried and chastened and humbled, in these regions of destitution and destruction our anguished hearts cry out, "Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon: for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?"—Song i. 7.

In the case of Peter, when he denied with oaths and curses, saying that he knew not the dear Redeemer, it may be said, "God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart." When David committed adultery with Bathsheba, and caused Uriah, the husband of Bathsheba, to be killed, it was that "God left him." If God withdraw from you, dear child of God, you will be just as vile. Why did not Joseph fall into adultery with Potiphar's wife? It is written, "God was with Joseph."—Exodus xxxix. 2. He exclaimed, "How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?" God is so pure, so good, and is thus cherished in our hearts when he is feelingly near. His presence forbids us to sin against him. O! forsake me not utterly; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation. Are we saying, I would never commit such wickedness as many have been guilty of? Rather let us say, with Paul, "God forbid" (Rom. vi. 2); and with Jabez, "O that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me" (1 Chron. iv. 10); or with David, "Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not."—Psalm xvii. 5. God left Hezekiah, to try him. What then? Why, his heart was lifted up with pride.—2 Chron. xxxii. 25. He rendered not unto God according to all the gracious blessings and abounding riches that the Lord had bestowed upon him; but in his forgetfulness of God's benefits he became a captive to the pride of his heart, and showed the Babylonians "all the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armor, and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not."—2 Kings xx. 13. It is only when upheld by the reigning grace of God that we, his people, walk uprightly before him, and before our fellow-creatures. It is written, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain."—Psalm lxxvi. 10. Our God in his unsearchable sovereignty is pleased to withdraw his restraining hand at times, and to leave us to the weakness of our flesh. When in the blissful enjoyment of the communion of the Holy Ghost, who takes of the things of Jesus and shows them unto us, we are hardly conscious of our weakness, and of the infirmities and vileness of our flesh; but let that communion be withdrawn, and then, like Abraham, we return to our own place.—Gen. xviii. 33. "God left him." Ah, when the husbandman leaves the vineyard soon everything has a neglected appearance. The weeds grow in the absence of the gardener. When the hills are not digged briers and thorns spring up.—Isaiah vii. 23-25. The hidden corruptions of our hearts are discovered to us. Our foes that retreated (when the Captain of our salvation was nigh in our hearts by faith) come forth from their hiding places again. Jesus is our Sun; but if he withdraw his countenance it is night, wherein all the beasts of the forest creep forth from their dens. When the Lord Jesus said unto Peter, "The cock shall not crow this day before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me," Peter no doubt could not think he would act so basely. Dear children of God, I have been very unwilling to believe that there was such abominable meanness in me as I thought I had seen exhibited in others; but O! when I have been left, the very things that I abominated in others have been discovered to be in myself, and in my heart I have felt to be equally guilty; and to the praise of God I feel I can say that I have loathed myself for all the vileness that dwells in my flesh. O the goodness and grace of the God of our salvation, that he has not utterly forsaken a worm like me, and given me over as a prey to my lusts; but in his great mercy he has brought me low at his footstool, with a humble and contrite heart. "The lusts of the flesh" are powerful and ensnaring; and the child of God will learn that only God's grace can restrain, subdue, and break the snares of sin. "God left him, to try him." O! is there anything more trying to a subject of God's grace than to be left a prey to his own heart's lust?—Psalm lxxxi. 12. The wicked, the hypocrite, may be well-satisfied in indulging in his lusts; but a child of God when taken captive will find though his flesh is gratified, yet unhappiness and grief are mingled with it all. God gave Israel their request, but sent leanness into their soul.—Psalm cvi. 15. When left to our own strength how defenseless we are. There are uprisings from within, and the enemy makes inroads from without. Fiery temptations assail us, and cruel and base insinuations against God plague our hearts. "All the day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning." Sometimes I think it cannot be that there are any of the dear family of God who are so beset and harassed by the powers of indwelling evil, and with such terrible temptations from Satan. I have been tempted to believe that all religion was a myth, the church of Christ a delusion, and that there was neither Christ nor church nor God; that all was a dream and a mischievous delusion. These dreadful thoughts like burning arrows have pierced my soul. Once when I felt that I was an outcast from God and from his people, a God-forsaken wretch, in the midst of my torments these words, "God hath forsaken him; persecute and take him; for there is none to deliver him," were darted into my mind with (as I felt) such venom that I cried out aloud. My tongue nor pen can never tell the miseries of my tortured soul during the hours of that night; but as the dawn of the literal day was ushered in the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, drew back the curtains of my spiritual night, and the God of my mercy in rays of his everlasting love shone in my heart, so that I said in my soul, "By this I know that thou favorest me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me." "He restoreth my soul."

The design of Jehovah in leaving us, to prove our own weakness, is that we may learn also to know all that is in our hearts; and thereby he will humble us, and bring us as suppliants at his feet, and in grateful confidence to depend alone upon the mercy and grace and salvation that is in Jesus our Lord. When the time came that the Lord declared unto king Hezekiah the pride and naughtiness of his heart, under the chastening hand of his God grace was ministered unto him, so that he was humbled and brought low. "Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee."—Jer. ii. 19. Our own iniquities become chastening rods in the hand of our heavenly Father. Our God by his discipline will stain the pride of all fleshly glory; for "those that walk in pride he is able to abase." It is our flesh that entices us to imagine that we can live spiritually and hold our conversation in heaven in some other than the divine way. "Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him; but the just shall live by his faith."—Hab. ii. 4. All the resources of our flesh are of no avail to extricate us from temptations and snares into which we so soon fall when God hath left us to try us. Much of the iniquity of our hearts is much of the time hidden from us, and seems to lie dormant within us; but when we are left to know the plague of our hearts, then passions and lusts little dreamed of awake and come forth from their lurking places, and spread devastation and misery over all our goodly land of hope and comfort in Emmanuel. But God will not always chide, neither will he keep his anger forever. His own pity for us as his dear children shall abase us, and bring us in contrition before him, to taste again his pardoning love. Ah, in times of tranquility we are apt to forget the fountain from whence all our mercies flow. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

May the gracious Lord keep us ever humble, looking unto him alone as our only confidence.

FRED. W. KEENE.

NORTH BERWICK, Maine.

"I THANK my God upon every remembrance of you."—Phil. i. 3.

The dear apostle in writing unto the different churches seems to send them a message suited to their condition; for daily, he said, the care of the churches came upon him. For some he had reproof, for some he had encouragement, and for this one which he so much commends we see much instruction and admonition; yet from the first to the last of his knowledge of and acquaintance with this church at Philippi he tells of the joy and comfort they have been to him, how they so freely ministered unto him, how they were his joy and crown, and how dear and precious they were unto him, so that he could so freely say, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you." He freely also tells of those who caused him sorrow by their departures and their walk, which was a grief to him. And he instructs his brethren at Philippi to "Be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample. For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is destruction," &c. In no place does the faithful Paul fail to give the so much needed admonition, even when addressing the church of which he seemed most approved; and how earnestly he exhorts them to a continuance in all things that are approved, that they might be "sincere and without offense till the day of Christ." He assures them of how much confidence he has in them, and of what a great joy and comfort is their fellowship and love to him. Amidst all his many trials this was one source of thankfulness to him; and in some measure has this been the experience of many a tried one. The confidence, the fellowship, the love of the dear household of faith, is it not the sweetest, the holiest, the purest of joys, concerning companionship, we have ever known? How often have I thought of how careful we should be not to destroy this confidence and fellowship, feeling that the tender feelings of the little ones of the household are more to be regarded than the pleasing of ourselves and the pandering to and carefulness of the feelings of the ungodly and profane. Yet when we look back over the years we have suffered through the one long line of pain and affliction, how often the mind is illuminated to again see, as by returning light being thrown upon them, the places where we can thank God for every remembrance of how sweet, how sacred, are the many precious things locked away in the chambers of memory; things that perhaps we did not duly prize when they were first given us; and we enjoyed them in a measure then, but still kept looking onward for more in the future, expecting our joys to grow and continually increase, little realizing how many things could arise before us, clouding our way, obstructing our faith, until seeing nothing to look forward to we turn back in mind, open the closets of memory, and bring forth the jewels of other days. How we wish we could have more appreciated their worth when the friends of former days were with us. We now have them only in memory, and how they have grown in endearment to us since their faces were changed and they were sent away; not changed from joyous faces to sad ones, but from sad to joyous ones; and so we forget all that was sad about them, and every remembrance of them is with thankfulness, because of the grace of God which was given unto them, which kept them and sustained them through life, and failed them not in death. We thought to find other companions along the way; and so we have; but we never again, only in remembrance, can have father and mother, and others who were so dear, who were with us too long to ever be forgotten or replaced. Even the plain old Bible that they read, the songs that were sung, the papers they loved, all come back in the mind, like as there was a glory over all, enhanced and brightened by their absence; and O how sweet is now every remembrance of them. We remember them in the sanctuary, remember how they loved the same things we love, how we first went with them to the place where we heard the things we before had some experience of, and how precious still is that first remembrance of the people of God, of how long we have been favored with the hearing of the word of truth, of the years we have had a place among the afflicted of our God, of how much acquaintance, fellowship and love by correspondence with the dear ones scattered abroad. What cheering, what solemn and sacred joys are these to have in remembrance; and all is of the Lord. I thank my God for every one of them. How lonely my life, how sad my state, without these great blessings. Let the mind go back over the solemn assemblies of the saints, when and where we have set together in heavenly places; all children of God, fitted by him as lively stones, prepared and placed in the building, which is a spiritual house, and offering spiritual sacrifices to God; and I was there; I, the least of all; I, wishing and enjoying the lowest place; I, willing, if required, to wipe the dust off the feet of the least one there. I would rather have this mind than to have all this world; and I have had it in times past, and I thank my God for every remembrance of it. Sometimes the heart grows cold and hard, grows resentful, and sees every slight, feels every offense, and thinks hard of its lot and place in life; but the sweetest place is where there is great peace, and nothing can offend us, loving the law of the Lord. Let us go over in mind the dear ones whom the Lord has given us as companions, as pilgrim brothers by the way. How we remember their pleasant visits to us, and ours to them, the treasured thoughts they left with us. Their faces come back before us, and again we thank our God for every remembrance of them; thank him that he does not let us forget; that he brings back to our minds the blessings he so graciously provided for us; and if there have been unpleasant things, we are so glad to forget them. When the mercy and love of God return to us in manifestation, we do forget, and only hold in remembrance the things bestowed by the grace of God; forgetting the things which are behind, the earthly things, the things that sadden, and remembering the things to which we press, the heavenly things. We have seen the heavenly graces upon those we love, and we are thankful to God for every remembrance of them; and we know that when the full perfection is come they will be all glorious then. We have caught a glimpse of it in those who have gone before. We only remember them as glorified ones. They will not come back to us in any other manner. And in our gloom and sadness, why are they so much our companions in mind? Why seem so much nearer to us each day? Why come so often in our dreams like as a presence or as a visitor from the better world, bringing its glory with them? Or is it that I am drawing nearer to where they are? Others may think me full of idle fancy; but I thank my God for every remembrance of his saints, and they never seem so precious as when I remember them in the full presence of the Master, who died and rose again for them, and I also, having the same precious hope of everlasting rest. I know the apostle more particularly thanked God for the remembrance of the lovely and commendable walk of his brethren at Philippi; yet when the words came to me I was led back in mind to things of too much sweetness to express in words. An aged sister, now four score years old, also spoke of these things to me, saying that from a child she had been privileged to attend the preaching of the word. Although greatly afflicted, and possessing but little of the things of this world, yet she has always had this one great favor, and now, she said, was the best of all. That which was now provided for her she most prized of all she had enjoyed in all that long lifetime. Is not this a most precious remembrance? How she thanked God for these things! Truly I would be mindful to thank him for all the enjoyments of his divine will and favor.

KATE SWARTOUT.

WOODSTOCK, Mich.

LEOTA, Scott Co., Ind.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed you will find two dollars for the renewal of my subscription to the SIGNS for 1894. I will venture to express a few thoughts on Paul's letter to Titus, second chapter and fourteenth verse, which reads as follows: "Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." We should always notice who is the speaker of a declaration, and who is addressed, as well as the subject under consideration. Paul is here speaking to Titus of the plan of salvation through Christ Jesus as the Redeemer. He tells Titus to teach his brethren to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. As it was the duty of believers in Paul's day to live godly, so it is in our day; "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us." This, we understand, includes God's people from the beginning of the world to the end of the same. It might be well to ask, Who are this people? We believe they are children of Adam, who sinned, and sinners only need redemption; for Paul says, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." When Adam took of the fruit from the hand of his wife, and did eat it, then sin and iniquity began to reign, and it reigned over all his posterity. By the act of the one man, Adam, death reigned over all the people of God, Adam being their head in their natural state. Paul says, "It is sown a natural body." Owing to the oneness of Adam and those who were created in him, they are all defiled, and under the power of iniquity. This is the cause of death, and the cause of the suffering that the people of God have to endure in this life. This is the people that needed redemption. Owing to the oneness and relationship that exists between Christ and his people, he could redeem them from all iniquity. And to show that this oneness does exist, the prophet Isaiah says, "For thy Maker is thine husband; the Lord of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; the God of the whole earth shall he be called."—Isa. liv. 5. And Paul says, "The husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and he is the Savior of the body."—Eph. v. 23. In another place, speaking of the church, he says, "We are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." It is because of this that Christ loved the church, and laid aside his glory, and was made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem his church from under the law. And when through the eternal Spirit he offered himself without spot to God, he canceled all the sins of his bride. Now, through the operation of the Holy Ghost, he quickens the dead sinner, and implants eternal life in them. "For we ourselves also were sometime foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful and hating one another. But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior."—Titus iii. 3-6. It is in this way we understand that Christ Jesus purifies his people, and leads them by his Spirit, and makes them a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

When born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever, they are then prepared by grace to do good works. "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. ii. 8-10. Surely then redemption is the work of grace, devised of God, ordained of God through Christ Jesus, and is complete in him. He imparts life to the dead, and does not ask the dead if they will live. He justifies the unjust, the justly condemned, and does not ask them for justification. Through redemption the wilderness is made glad, and the desert is made to rejoice and blossom as the rose. It says to the fearful heart, Be strong. Behold, your God will come and save you. Through it the eyes of the blind are opened, and the ears of the deaf are unstopped. The parched ground becomes a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water. It is the highway of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it. No lion nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; but the redeemed shall walk there. Through redemption the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.

T. J. MOUNT.

ELGIN, Union Co., Oregon.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The inclosed letter from sister M. E. Carter to her sister, Mrs. E. H. Ackles, we think would be of interest to the household of faith, and so send it to you for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if it meets your approval. The experience of God's afflicted and poor people who now live in the world is like that of those gone before, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; and when we are enabled to see in those gone before our own trials and conflicts, doubts and fears, are we not encouraged and built up? The sword of affliction pierced the hearts of the saints of old, and by it now we believe the thoughts of many hearts are revealed. We are enabled to see that those things which were written aforetime were written for our learning. Our own case, though we may for a time think it isolated and alone, and feel that surely there never was even one poor child of God like we are, yet when we turn to our guide-book we see that that which is now hath already been, and there is nothing in the experience of God's people that is new under the sun. How different would be our way if we had our own choice. Never would we choose the way of the wilderness; yet we know that the way of the wilderness is the only way for God to get the glory. He

(Continued on page 191.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 13, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE GOD OF PEACE.

BRETHREN G. BEEBE'S SONS:—If not too much trouble, please give your views through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES on the text Heb. xiii. 20, and oblige a friend. I heard it preached from by a Baptist minister, and I thought he gave a very strange explanation.

A. B.

REPLY.

"Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen."—Heb. xiii. 20, 21.

As our correspondent does not specify any particular point in this text which is in need of explanation we may fail to touch upon the branch of the subject most desired. The fact that "a very strange explanation" was given by a "Baptist minister" is not a particularly explicit statement of the difficulty in the understanding of the inspired record, to which our attention is called. From some who are called Baptist ministers no consistent explanation of revealed truth could be expected, since they do not claim to have any principle as a guide in their expositions but the knowledge which can be taught in the schools of men. We can give only such thoughts on the subject as may be shown to us; and in so doing it is our earnest desire that our friend may find something less strange than the preaching referred to. If the Lord will, may we ever be kept from presenting on any passage of Scripture an explanation which shall be strange to the subjects of divine guidance! Nothing can be profitable to the saints unless it is shown to them by the Comforter, who takes of the things of Jesus and reveals them in their own experience, thus leading them into all truth. Only that preaching is profitable to them which finds its witness in the feelings and personal knowledge of those who hear it. All else must produce the unfruitful works of darkness in the confusion of the minds of those who hear such perversions of the truth. Jesus says, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."—John vii. 17.

It will be observed that the blessing implored in the text under consideration is sought from that God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus. Among the idols of the heathen there was a god called the god of peace; but it was one of those described by Jeremiah, "For the customs of the people are vain; for one cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the ax. They deck it with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not. They are upright as the palm tree, but speak not; they must needs be borne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; for they cannot do evil; neither also is it in them to do good." That is not "the God of peace" from whom the writer implores the great blessing upon his brethren for which he asks in this wonderful benediction. The power of the God of peace who could bring again from the dead our Lord Jesus, was the only power capable of granting the blessing for which the love of God moved the writer to pray. Those who have heard the voice of this God commanding peace to their own troubled souls, know how exclusively this name belongs to him who has all power in heaven and in earth. When all is trouble and confusion where the perishing sinner looks for rest, then this God gives perfect peace. The law pours ceaseless thunders of condemnation; and conscience tells the guilty soul that all its denunciation is just. He realizes the truth that "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked."—Isa. lvii. 20, 21. The Lord Jesus who was thus brought again from the dead is none other but "that great Shepherd of the sheep." Without sheep there could be no shepherd; so that the very name of Shepherd, as applied to our Lord Jesus, necessarily implies the existence of the sheep of his fold. Not one of his sheep can suffer so long as he is able to protect his flock.

To make the description of this God of peace still more definite, it is specified that this marvelous display of omnipotence was "through the blood of the everlasting covenant." None of those idols which are worshiped by the natural world, as described by their votaries, even claim to have established any covenant. They are alike in seeking to make a covenant with sinners, which is substantially the same as taught by the work-mongers who profess to be Christians, and as defined in the creeds of the most benighted heathen. All agree that their gods would like to reward their votaries with heavenly bliss in compensation for their devotion in this temporal life. In presenting this theory it is always asserted that salvation is offered to every sinner on condition that he shall comply with the terms, which are supposed to be more or less easy according to the fancy of the teachers. But there can be no room in the true doctrine of the everlasting covenant for the salvation of the sinner to depend upon the exercise of his own depraved choice. Therefore none of those who hold that the sinner is left to determine whether he will accept offers of salvation, can be worshipers of that God to whom this prayer is so exclusively addressed. Our God saves his people from their sins upon the principle of that everlasting covenant which is sealed with the blood of the Son of God. Of this David bears witness in his last words, saying, "Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure: for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make it not to grow."—2 Sam. xxiii. 5. In this immutable covenant the life of every subject of electing grace was secured in Christ Jesus before the worlds were made. Not all the powers of sin and Satan can defeat that purpose of divine love and mercy which is established in this everlasting covenant. Being sealed with the precious blood of the Son of God, it cannot be changed while divine power is able to sustain its integrity and truth. Since death could not forbid the victorious resurrection of the Shepherd by whom the sheep were ransomed, it is evident that it has no power to resist the purpose of his grace for which he laid down his life. So Paul says, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us; much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life."—Rom. v. 8-10. All this is secured "through the blood of the everlasting covenant." Then well may the saints regard that blood as the most sacred medium through which every blessing of God is bestowed upon them. Unto that God who has thus attested his love to them, the saints may well look with the assurance of living faith for all that perfection for which they most earnestly long and cry.

The peace of which our God is the source and giver is not to be mistaken for the peace of the world. The fact that the saints are troubled so that they cannot speak, does not in the least disturb the perfect peace in which the Lord keeps every one whose trust is in him. When they are brought into the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ, and every earthly refuge has failed them; when surrounded by foes, and cut off from all hope of deliverance by any efforts of their own; then the God of peace gives rest in the midst of trouble. Then they find indeed that their peace is as a river, whose mighty current cannot be stayed by all the powers of iniquity. Only when the peace of God which passeth all understanding keeps their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus, can the saints know that God is their peace. Then their whole heart ascribes glory forever unto him. This is not in the sense of rendering a tribute due to their mighty Savior; it is the high privilege to which they aspire as all of heaven which they can receive. There is no joy to them who have the Spirit of Christ which can be compared with the ecstasy of ascribing thanksgiving and glory through Jesus Christ unto the God of their salvation.

It is to this God of peace that the Spirit of Christ moves his people to pray for grace to help in every time of need. He is able to make them perfect in every good work to do his will. There is infinite difference between being made perfect to do the will of this God of peace, and attaining to perfection by doing the will of their own mind. This prayer in our text is for the conformity of the saints to the will of God. None but the living children of God ever know what it is to desire to do his will. They are troubled because they cannot do the good which they desire to do; this prayer is for the power of God to work in them that which is well pleasing in his sight. The natural mind asks that God would work for them that which is well pleasing in their own sight. They seek this through their own diligence and zeal. In this way it is consistent that they should expect large rewards for their devoted service to the gods they worship.

In marked contrast with the claims of those who find perfection in themselves, this prayer in our text seeks for that perfection which is only received "through Jesus Christ." Of course there could be no claim to glory and honor to the sinner from that perfection which is entirely received from the grace of God. Hence, they who have been made perfect according to this prayer must ascribe all the glory forever and ever unto him through whom they have received the blessing invoked. All such must ever say, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake!" The salvation of every sinner is a perpetual expression of this thankful prayer. All who are saved by grace must ascribe glory forever and ever unto Jesus Christ, through whom alone they who are redeemed from death by his blood are made perfect in every good work to do the will of God. Certainly this can be done only as God works in them both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Therefore all glory is due to our Lord Jesus forever and ever. The solemn response of the Spirit of Christ in every saint is embodied in the "Amen!" with which this text is closed. This is the prayer of true conformity to the will of God. It is in substance just what Jesus instructed his disciples to say in their prayer, "Thy will be done!" May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ lead every one of his saints to unite without ceasing in this fervent prayer!

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Baltimore Old School Baptist Association, convened with the Harford Church, Harford Co., Md., May 16th, 17th and 18th, 1894, to the several churches of which she is composed, sends christian greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Another year with its mingled hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, has now passed from the future to the past, and we desire to send you another annual letter of love and fellowship, in which we would stir you up to the remembrance and practice of some things which are revealed in the gospel, in relation to our time salvation which we have to do with. The eternal salvation was already complete in Christ Jesus before we were born; but as for this time salvation, "Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."—Heb. iv. 1. The apostle Peter addresses his second epistle "to them that have obtained like precious faith with us," and then adds, "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord." Grace and peace are here said to be multiplied through the knowledge of our Lord; not through ignorance of the teaching of God by the prophets and apostles, and by Jesus Christ, the chief teacher, or corner stone of knowledge of the things of God. Our remarks will be upon the fruits which must be added to "precious faith." "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these [promises] ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And besides this [something more], giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge," &c. Go on to know the Lord in his appointed way. "Add to your faith." Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made you free; for now you are soldiers of the cross. Do not parley with untruth, with the lo heres and lo theres. You need fortitude to withstand the fiery temptations of the wicked one and of the flesh. Let us not sleep, as do others, but wear the living dress, and go to Jesus for everything, since he has given us all the hope we have, and instructed us in all things, from the waters of Marah in the wilderness, to the sea of glass, having the harps of God. Give testimony, saying, "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul." That will be preaching Christ, not offering him. Add to this "like precious faith" knowledge. The apostle says, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."—Rom. xv. 4. Again, he says to Timothy, "And that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Tim. iii. 15. As Christianity is witnessed by the law and the prophets, Timothy was able to compare its doctrine with all that had been typified and predicted, and thus was made wise in the things of the kingdom. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." The Scriptures are the record of the love divine. "The commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life."—Prov. vi. 22. It shall go with us, and speak to us when off our guard, and be our companion in our bed, to give instruction; yes, to talk with us by day and by night; and when the Spirit shines upon the words, they are living words. Then seek to be acquainted with this friend. Seek ye the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Christ set up his kingdom on the earth. His government, his laws, his instructions, are that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Therefore be diligent to add to your faith knowledge of the things of the kingdom; for you have been delivered from the power of darkness, and are translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Jesus said, "Learn of me." That is, do as he did, take his yoke, walk as he walked, put on Christ, and make no provision for the flesh; for if you do, Satan will partake with you of that provided. "Evil communications corrupt good manners." The evil one will help you make excuses for staying away from your meetings with your brethren, and also excuse any and all departures, such as the reading of trash, rather than the word of truth, and talking of doctrine that causes divisions, rather than that which makes for peace. We have corruptions still; therefore let us treat them as enemies. Let us cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armor of light. Put on the living dress. Look into the wardrobe.—Col. iii. 12-17. "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." This is how the sons of God are dressed, especially the diligent, who do his will, and thus know of the doctrine, or his teaching. Add to virtue and knowledge, love; that is, manifest your love by meeting your brethren at their stated meetings, and speak to each other in psalms and hymns, making melody. Speak of the things you have seen and heard of the kingdom. You will love those who manifest by their walk and conversation that they have been with Jesus and learned of him. For if the things here enumerated be added to your faith, they make you that ye shall not be barren or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. "But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and has forgotten that he was purged from his old sins." This is said of one of like precious faith who through negligence and lukewarmness has forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. He has forgotten his experience through his indifference. We find his brother in the parable of the one talent, and in that of the foolish virgins. There was nothing added to the one talent, or faith. The result was that his hope was not increased, and he was left in darkness, having no converse or communion with the saints. He had not worn the garments, nor cared for the things of the kingdom. The foolish virgins were citizens of this kingdom equally with the wise; for our Lord said that the kingdom of heaven was likened unto ten virgins; and who shall say that the foolish virgins were not citizens of his kingdom, and also the man with one talent? Our Lord never hinted that either of them were not, but that they were, and were lazy, not using due diligence to add to their faith the things directed. He said, "Learn of me." They had not known of the things of the kingdom. This knowledge is likened to oil in their vessels. This is a figure, and we may see it in the church to-day. They cannot profit by the things of the kingdom when they have neglected them. They cannot speak of the things they do not know, nor can they relate even the things they have known. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" Here is chastening for the one talent brother, for the foolish virgins, for the blind, and, we will add, like members of the church of Laodicea, they will be spewed out of his mouth. There will be no word for them. They will be left alone. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. vi. 7, 8. Therefore, brethren, "give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Here we see the necessity of diligence in adding to our faith the things named, and to find out whether our hope is founded on the word of God, and whether our experience agrees with that of the brethren. Search the record, and inquire if this experience is the work of the Spirit, and thus find out if we are numbered among the chosen. Do we love the children of the King? Do we love his laws? Do we come into his courts to see those of like precious faith? So our election is assured unto us. By attending to these things an abundant entrance is ministered unto us. Remember the word "so." It includes all the things to be added to faith. "So an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom," and thus be enabled to sit together with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, reckoned with them in the Lord's dealings and promises; also with Moses, David, Isaiah, and all the prophets, and with the apostles, having seen the same things that they saw, and enabled to behold Christ, and read your title clear, and know that yours is "like precious faith," and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone. The apostle says, "Put off the old man," "put on the new man." Shun philosophy, and contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints. Blessed and holy are they that do the commandments of Jesus, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

WM. GRAFTON, Mod.

F. A. CHICK, Clerk.

The Delaware Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Rock Springs Church, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 23d, 24th and 25th, 1894, to the several churches of which it is composed, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—In writing to you this our annual epistle we deem it a pleasant duty, inasmuch as the Lord has continued us the privilege of again meeting together. The continuance of these meetings from year to year, with the cheering report of existing harmony and peace in each of the several churches within our bounds, is an evidence that the Lord, who in the setting up of the gospel church on the day of Pentecost guided the minds of his people Israel, and directed all events leading to that memorable time, has also to the present day guided and directed us in the spirit of love, to our souls' comfort, and to the well being of his spiritual kingdom; and this calls to mind the long-forgiveness and tender mercy of God to usward. Not only since the setting up of the gospel church has the Lord manifested love and forgiveness to his people. In every generation hath he preserved a people unto himself, that they should call upon his name in the day of their trouble. In each generation they have proved themselves to be a gainsaying and a rebellious people. They have sought the consummation of their desires in the lusts of their flesh; but each time they have wandered out of the way the Lord has caused them to return. So one of the old prophets, in confessing the Lord's goodness to this people, said, "Yet many years didst thou forbear them, and testifiedst against them by thy Spirit in thy prophets; yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands. Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God."—Neh. ix. 30, 31. The Lord's people to-day are nothing different in their gainsaying and rebellious Adamic nature than were they in the days of the patriarchs and prophets. They are just as prone to disregard the earnest of their inheritance, wasting their substance in a strange land, among strange people, worshiping strange gods. To this people God said, "Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son. These things hast thou done, and I kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such a one as thyself: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes."—Psalm l. 20, 21. We need only look back over the deviating pathway of our past experience to see how the Lord has again and again reprov'd us and set us in order when we departed from the old paths and set up idols of our own making, forgetting the God of our salvation. Just so long as we remain in an atmosphere of our own carnal reasoning we can only look upon God as such an one as ourself, and in such condition it is impossible to ascribe unto God the glory due unto his holy name; but when the faith of our God is in lively exercise within our mortal bodies we are lifted above the polluted atmosphere of a broken and violated law into the region of an immaculate conception of the holy attributes of the mighty God, who is above and beyond all law, to a realizing sense of the great work of salvation, in which Jesus should come in the flesh, wherein he should have suffered, yea, and died the just for the unjust. In that knowledge obtained by the light of faith we are enabled to verify the solemn Scripture, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" Then, brethren, if by reason of an abundance of grace vouchsafed unto us, with the rich mercy and tender forgiveness of our God, we continue firm in the doctrine of God our Savior, swerving not, neither faltering, but walking in the light of the truth, upon the foundation of the prophets and apostles, of which Christ Jesus is the chief corner stone, we have nothing whereof to boast, because the God of all truth has set us in order. As the apple of his eye he has kept us from falling; our feet hath he directed in the path of the just; therefore are we able to stand upon the walls of our beloved Zion. Therefore do we "cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion; for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee." Through being set in order many times, a growth in grace is made manifest; and this growth goes on until it ripens into maturity. It has been said that "It is not upon the maple and nut trees only that the autumn lays its splendor, but upon the tree of human life as well. It is the ripeness of the leaf, not the frost, that tints them so gloriously." The knowledge of the sweet mercy and tender forgiveness of God comes to us in most cases as a glad surprise. Only as the Lord reveals the secrets of the work of grace in the heart can we understand how the uprisings of the lusts of our flesh (which we so deeply deplore) work good in us. When by reason of transgression sin entered into the world, and death by sin, God said unto Adam, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field." The natural field that is blighted with the rapid growth of weeds, with thorns and with thistles, when they are cut off with the scythe, and the husbandman with his plow turns the soil over them, at the same time tearing up the roots, and they all being buried enrich the soil, that the grain which is sown upon the prepared ground yields more abundantly because of them. So the thorns in our flesh, which are the lusts thereof, and which so easily beset us, do cause a blight and mildew over the beauty of the field of our christian experience, and bring about death in us to the comforts and consolation of the spiritual kingdom; for "when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Now, when by the operation of the Spirit of grace in the heart these have all been cut off with the scythe of faith, and have been uprooted and buried with the plow of a good hope through grace, the peaceable fruits of righteousness are yielded more abundantly because of them; showing how all things, even the sins of the lusts of the flesh, work together for good to them who are exercised thereby, and who are the called according to God's wise purpose. Let us remember, then, always that God continually spreads about us the mantle of his tender forgiveness and love, in and through every vicissitude through which he calls us to pass. His chastisements are always in love, because he loves us; and because we need them and deserve them, they always result in our well-being, procuring for us an abundant entrance into the kingdom of his dear Son. Let us also remember, "When once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water." The covenant which he made with Noah remains to this day unbroken; and hath he not saved us, who are his witnesses, and who stand upon the earth unto this day, testifying to the glory of the grace of God, wherein Jesus "by one offering hath perfected forever them that are sanctified?" Hath he not borne with us all these years? and his power over us is love. Therefore he restraineth that tendency in us which arises from the infirmities of the flesh. We are tried as gold is tried, and refined as silver is refined, and we murmur at his chastening rod; still his love abatheth not, neither groweth his arm shorter, that he cannot save. Inasmuch then as the Lord has shown merciful forgiveness toward us, let us, as becometh the sons of God, in the patience of Jesus, "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

A. B. FRANCIS, Mod.

P. M. SHERWOOD, Clerk.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Baltimore Old School Baptist Association, convened with the Harford Church, Harford Co., Md., May 16th, 17th and 18, 1894, to the several associations with which we correspond, sends loving greetings.

BELOVED IN THE LORD JESUS CHRIST:—According to long established custom we send you another annual letter, that you may know how we do. It is with a deep sense of love and gratitude that we are once more permitted to address you, and thank the Lord of heaven and earth that he has permitted us once more to meet together in an associate capacity. We truly feel that it has been a setting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, and that our meeting has been for the comforting and upbuilding of the Zion of our God composing this association, and for the lifting of Jesus on high. Truly do we feel that our preaching brethren have come to us with messages from the high court of heaven. They have come from different parts of the country, but they have all had the same story to tell, Jesus, the Savior of sinners of Adam's fallen race; the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. Not a discordant sound has been heard. Truly do we feel to say, The Lord gave the word, and great has been the company that published it.

We have appointed our next session to be held with Ebenezer Church, in Baltimore City, Md., where we hope again to meet you with your messengers and messages of love.

WM. GRAFTON, Mod.

F. A. CHICK, Clerk.

The Delaware Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Rock Springs, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 23d, 24th and 25th, 1894, to the several associations with whom we correspond, sendeth greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The mercy and undeserved favor of God our Savior have been manifested again in causing us to meet once more in pleasant and loving association with each other; and we feel to thank God for his loving-kindness to usward in sending so many of his ministering servants with the word of comfort and assurance to our needy souls. The subject unanimously dwelt upon by all our ministering brethren has been salvation by grace, much to our comfort and edification. We desire a continuance of your correspondence by messengers and Minutes, for it delights us to receive them in confidence of mutual love and fellowship.

Our next session will be held, the Lord willing, with the church at Cow Marsh, Kent Co., Del., at a time to be hereafter appointed by that church.

Now, brethren, we commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.

A. B. FRANCIS, Mod.

P. M. SHERWOOD, Clerk.

(Continued from page 187.)

must supply all our need. We must draw from no earthly treasure; and the more destitute we feel, the better we are prepared to give honor to the hand that supplies. A feeling of destitution is an evident mark of eternal life. Are these feelings mine?

In gospel bonds your brother, I hope,

G. E. MAYFIELD.

STUCK, King Co., Washington.

DEAR SISTER:—It is not storming here to-day, and I am hoping that it is not with you, and that Elder Mayfield will get up; and I hope you may be comforted with his coming, and with the message he brings; that Satan may leave you for a season, and angels may minister unto you. You distrust all your motives. Well, it is written, "If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged." Every one who hears your piteous plaint will feel sure that you are not the child that enters the birth in the family record. We would doubt the sanity of a child that would contend that it had never been born because it could not tell the exact date of its birth. When a child is brought forth in nature, all who are in attendance, the mother as well, know that it is a living child when they hear it cry. Now, the Bible is the standard in experience, as in all else. Let us examine it. Job, Isaiah and others tell of their self-loathing when they had seen God. The eunuch said to Philip, "See, here is water: what doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip answered him, "If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." The eunuch replied, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." And Philip baptized him. He did not say, When did you begin to believe that Jesus is the Christ? Give the day and date; tell some of the circumstances of your awakening, under whose sermon, or what passage of Scripture was impressed on your mind; give your views of doctrine, &c. The eunuch had witnessed a good confession, and Philip baptized him. There was a great awakening on that pentecostal day. God had unstopped the deaf ears, and opened the blind eyes, and said to those like Lazarus, "Come forth." They were pricked in the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Men, brethren, what shall we do?" And Peter answered them; and then they that gladly received his word were baptized. Does not every one of the afflicted and poor people gladly receive his word? He has taught us all our wilderness journey, here a little a there a little; that in us, that is, in our flesh, there dwells no good thing; that the depth of depravity in our heart, which is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, is known in its entirety only by the God that commanded the light to shine out of darkness, and to us in such measure as it pleased him. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings." He suffered for sin. And when his glory shall be revealed, ye shall be glad with exceeding joy. Like you, dear sister, I was troubled from a child. At times an accusing conscience told me that I was a sinner. But there was a time when he manifested unto us that the whole head was sick, and the whole heart faint; that from the sole of the foot even unto the head we were wounds and bruises and putrefying sores. The leprosy has covered us all over, and we are clean; for God says so. Who shall disannul his judgment? Did he not take us up out of a horrible pit, and out of the miry clay, and put a new song in our mouth, even praise to his name? Is not his name music to our ravished ears when we hear Christ preached, the way, the truth and the life? Is it not a joyful sound to us? And is it not written, "Blessed are the people that know the joyful sound?" May we with humble hope join with the beloved disciple and say, "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life." He did not come to the twelve to give them an understanding till after his resurrection; as it is written, "Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures."

M. E. CARTER.

GHENT, Ky., Jan. 6, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed I send to you a letter from brother Eldon Bartlett, in which he gives his experience, and tells of the wonderful manner in which the Lord has led him, and of his oft repeated rebellion against a holy God. Israel in the wilderness was surely a type of the travels of God's dear people when they are led from under the dominion of the law into the glorious light and liberty of the gospel. The Lord says by the prophet, "I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight: these things will I do unto them, and not forsake them."

H. COX.

HAMMACK, Ky., Jan. 2, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER COX:—After reading your letter to me, which I see published in the SIGNS of Nov. 22d, 1893, I feel like trying to write to you once more. I will, the Lord enabling me, try to tell you what I hope have been the Lord's dealings with me. I was born in Robertson County, Kentucky, and after I became grown circumstances placed me in Garrard County, where I found my wife, and where I now live. Until I came to this county I knew nothing of heartfelt religion. In the year 1866, while attending a Presbyterian protracted meeting, I did by some persuasion join them. I was sprinkled and received into that church; but some time after that I began to study about what I had done, and it came to me with force, You have committed the unpardonable sin. You have received a baptism you did not believe in, and you are lost. Well, I thought, this is all nonsense, and I will not think about it; but I could not throw it off. The more I thought about it the more I got into trouble about it, until it seemed to me that I was bound for hell. Something seemed to say to me, You are doomed to hell. I was planting corn, and left my horse and went to a stump that stood in the field, and there tried to pray; but I could not find anything to say. My prayer seemed to reach no higher than my head. I got up feeling much worse than ever. I tried all I could think of, but it did not avail. I was afraid that some one would see me and know what was the matter with me. I went on in that way for some days. One day I was off by myself and thinking of my condition, when all at once my burden was gone and I felt light and happy, and began to praise God. But just as I felt my burden gone, and the sweet stream of God's love in my heart, something seemed to say to me, "Go, preach the gospel." But I felt so happy that I did not think much about it. I did not tell my experience to any one, but kept it to myself; and instead of obeying what was commanded me, I went back into sin and rebellion against God, and continued so for three or four years. But all the while I knew I was not doing my duty, and felt that God would punish me for it. While in this way I was taken sick and sent for the doctor. After I began to get better, one night I thought like this, What if I had died? Would I have gone to rest? Such feelings came over me as I am not able to describe. I got up out of bed and tried to wear them off, but could not. I grew worse and worse. I went on in this way until one day I disclosed my feelings to my wife; but she could not comfort me any. We got into a buggy and went up to my father-in-law's, Jacob Newland, who is an Old School Baptist. I told him about my condition, but he could not comfort me any. I took to my bed, and it seemed to me that my soul was on fire of guilt and sin; but one day while I was laying there a sweet stream of love flowed into my soul, and I felt my sins were forgiven. I called all to my bedside, and shouted praises to God. I got up, and after a few days went home, thinking that probably my trouble was all over; but after about two months I was taken sick again; and O! my brother, my pen falters when I try to describe the agony that I underwent. I told all who came to see me that I was going to die, and would go to hell. It seemed to me that I was impressed to promise the Lord that if I got well I would go forth and try to preach; but I did not see how God could call such a wicked one as me to preach his own everlasting gospel. Finally I got so I could go to work, but was not well. I continued in this state of darkness for about seven months, when one night I was reading, and it seemed that I felt a sense of fiery guilt. My soul seemed to be on fire, and I did not sleep any that night. The next morning I got up and made a fire, and while sitting there I felt the love of God in my heart once more. My brother, that was the happiest day I ever experienced in all my life. Since then I have had many ups and downs in this mortal life, but the dear Lord has delivered me out of them all.

Dear brother, this is a sketch of my experience. Do with it as you think best. Yours in hope of eternal life beyond the grave,

ELDON BARTLETT.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

On our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At his late residence in Dover, Del., April 28th, 1894, James Frazier, in the 75th year of his age.

He had been failing for several months, but about a week before his death he had a stroke of paralysis, and was not conscious any more. Brother Frazier was baptized July 24th, 1859, and remained a faithful and useful member of the Cow Marsh Church until called away by death. He was not known abroad as much as some, his business confining him very much at home. He was certainly one that believed with all his heart, and one of the few names that could live in Sardis without defiling their garments. I would have been glad if his experience could have been written out and published, as not every one is blessed with such satisfactory evidences for themselves, nor can they always show so plainly to others that they have been with Jesus. I have enjoyed acquaintance with brother Frazier during the whole time (nearly thirty-five years) of his connection with the church, and know of no fault to be laid to his charge. A widow and six children survive him, who have the sympathies of the entire community, as well as of the church.

There is much in such a life that is imperishable, but lives on to mingle with the testimony of the great cloud of witnesses who have gone before.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

STATE ROAD, Del., May 31, 1894.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Abbie Coddington, Neb., 1, Franklin Terry, Pa., 1, O. F. Ballard, N. Y., 1.—Total, $3.00.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Clovesville Old School Baptist Church, of the Lexington Association, on the first Saturday and Sunday in July, 1894.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, and especially brethren in the ministry. Trains will be met at Fleischmanns station.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

THERE will be a three days meeting held at the Davis school-house, beginning on Friday before the fourth Sunday in July, 1894.

We would like to see as many Baptists as feel like visiting us come and join with us in singing and offering prayer and supplication to the Lord of lords and King of kings.

This meeting will be held fifteen miles east of Purcell, Ind. Ter., and nine miles south of Burnett, near the head of Pan Creek, in Cleveland Co., Oklahoma.

A. J. GILBREATH.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has attained its wide national circulation we have been importuned by our subscribers, as well as by those who have had no special interest in sustaining the publication, to open our columns to advertisements; but never having had any experience in that line of business we have hesitated to make the venture. Since the commencement of this volume, however, there has been a combination of circumstances that has encouraged us to make the experiment, and we therefore make the following announcement, viz.:

We will receive for the last page of the paper suitable and reliable advertisements at the following net rates, viz.:

Inches	1 week	4 weeks	13 weeks	26 weeks	52 weeks
2 1/2	$.95	$ 3.60	$ 8.50	$ 12.00	$ 22.50
2	1.90	7.20	17.00	24.00	45.00
1 1/2	3.80	13.50	34.00	48.00	75.00
1	5.70	22.50	51.00	72.00	109.13
3/4	7.60	30.00	68.00	96.00	131.25

No advertisements will be received for this paper unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strengthening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

FRASHER'S SAFETY HOLDBACK ATTACHMENTS are what everybody needs on the shafts of their vehicles. Consists of slotted plates to be fastened to shafts, having detachable rotary loops for attaching breech straps to. Afford utmost facility in gearing and un-gearing. Safety and Convenience in Emergencies. Ease of loosening a fallen horse from vehicle. Automatic detachment in case of breaking of traces or Singletree, if horse moves out of shafts. Fits underneath the shafts. Nothing in the way. Neat, practical. No rattling. Sold on Guarantee. AGENTS WANTED. Sample pair by mail. Black Japaned 50c. Nickel Plated 75c. Circulars free. F. O. FRASHER, Box 3299, Philadelphia, Pa. Please mention this paper.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		ST. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore "because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.	6 Ps. 22. 22.
n ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told	Matt. 28. 10.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession, of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.		Rom. 8. 29.
			Heb. 2. 11.
			1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10 CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges.....	$1 95
" 11 AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges.....	2 65
" 13 AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges.....	2 75
" 14 ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges, 3 35
" 16 TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges 4 40
" 17 SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges.....	5 10
" 18 BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00. Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10. Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11. Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12. Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13. Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14. Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15. Contains an illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15 1/2. Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40. Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

SPECIAL OFFER NO. 79.

"DIETZ" TUBULAR DRIVING LAMP

IT is the only practicable and perfect driving lamp ever made.
IT will not blow out.
IT gives a clear white light.
IT looks like a locomotive head light.
IT throws all the light straight ahead from 200 to 300 feet.
IT burns kerosene.
Send for Book.
R. E. DIETZ CO.,
60 Lighthouse Street, N. Y.

Buy a pair of our Driving Lamps at the regular price, and we will have sent to you free of charge for one year any one of the periodicals named below.

Out this and send it to us for full particulars.
Cosmopolitan, Current Literature, Demorest's, Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, Godfrey's Lippincott's, Mansey's, Outing, Review of Reviews, Scientific American, Scribner's, St. Nicholas, Youth's Companion.

THE STAR COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT AND ANTI-RATTLER.

Fast selling; always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price, $1.50. State rights for sale.

THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

FARMING CORPORATIONS.

A System of Business-like Co-operative Farming. Send for circulars to W. ALDRICH & Co., 120 Broadway, N. Y.

YOU CAN PUT IN A
HAY CARRIER
now, and have next harvest to test it.
J. A. CROSS, Fultonville, N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.
400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$.05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1894.

NO. 25.

D. L. Blackwell June 94

CORRESPONDENCE.

DEATH IN ADAM—LIFE IN CHRIST.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—A brother Parker, in Indiana, wrote me some time ago for my views upon the text, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. xv. 22. I neglected complying with his request until now. I send a discourse delivered upon that subject in the Old School Baptist chapel in Lebanon, Ohio, on the second Sunday in May, 1894, which you may publish in the SIGNS if you think proper.

My mind seems to rest this morning upon this portion of the inspired record; and I shall endeavor, as God may give me ability, to speak words of comfort to the broken-hearted, a word in season to him that is weary, and point out springs of water to them that are thirsty, and rivers of milk and honey to them that are hungry. May the children all have ears this morning to hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

This passage of the written word has been relied upon by false teachers to prove their vain imaginings and unholy speculations concerning the salvation of men. The Arminian ignorantly resorts to this quotation to hide the grossness of his scheme and give some face to his free-will absurdities; but when his Universalist brother puts in his claim for it to bolster up his plan, the Arminian is forced to yield the ground to his more logical claimant, who, as the strong man armed, keeps his goods in peace until a stronger than he comes. This occurs when one who is skilled in the word of righteousness, whose understanding has been opened to understand the Scriptures, takes it in the light of the testimony of the Spirit, and presents it in its true relation to all other Scripture, to the faith, experience and knowledge of those who have been taught of God. It is then clearly seen that it is stolen goods in the hands of all those teaching a conditional system of salvation, and will not fit their scheme.

"As in Adam all die." I shall first briefly discuss the word "all," for upon this word mainly rests the perversion of this text, as well as that of many other portions of the Scriptures. This little word has been made to shoulder very weighty responsibilities. Many an elaborate discourse, many a zealous sermon, many a stirring exhortation, has been delivered solely at its expense.

We have all often heard men who have more zeal than knowledge, whose fanaticism outweighs their thoughts, and with whom logic is at a discount, and airy conclusions at a premium, in their bursts of enthusiasm and blind rage against the truth assert in the most self-conceited triumph that a-l-l never spells part. They consider this a knock-down argument against unconditional, personal election, that fundamental principle of all Bible truth. They deem this foolish, meaningless assertion sufficient proof against the doctrine of particular redemption, special calling and final preservation, and hold it as an elenchus of the doctrine of offered mercy, offered love and offered salvation; but such puerile, empty, sweeping assertions can never be taken as argument by a mind that is accustomed in the least to think on these things. A-l-l does frequently and almost without exception spell part. All men in Ohio are but a part of the men in the United States; all the men in the United States are but a part of the population of the American continent; all christians are only a part of the people of the world. It is clearly seen that while this word always means all of something, it invariably means at the same time a part of something. I have thus briefly spoken of the word "all" in a general way; let us now make the application to it in this text.

"As in Adam all die." In regard to the all that die in Adam, there are but two positions possible: first, that all the human family die in him; and second, that all the saints of God die in him. So far as the fact of dying in Adam is concerned, the first proposition is true—all the human family die in him; and if the first be true, then the second is necessarily true, for the saints are a part of the family of Adam, and what is true of the whole is true of every part of the whole. Now, to arrive at the truth of what is taught here it remains only to determine which of these positions is embraced in the text. The apostle has under consideration here the resurrection of the just, and their final deliverance from this bondage of death. He is treating of the resurrection of the saints in their order. He modifies his expression, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," in the next sentence by saying, "Every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Here he stops short; not a word said about any one except Christ and them that are his. This clearly sets a limit to the word "all." As all that are Christ's die in Adam, so all that are Christ's shall be made alive in him. But suppose that all does mean all the human family, which is true as a fact, but not necessarily true from this text, this argues nothing for the Arminian or Universalist, as there is none made alive in Christ but them that are his. As in Adam all that are in Adam die, even so in Christ shall all who are in him be made alive. Even then if the first "all" does mean the whole human family, there is nothing in the wording of the text which teaches that the same "all" who die in Adam are made alive in Christ. This must be proved, if it can be, from some other source.

The death of the saints in Adam is their inheritance from him. By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so death hath passed upon all men, for all have sinned. The dissolution of this mortality is only the consummation of that death which hath already passed upon us. We are not simply under the sentence of death, waiting the execution, but death itself hath already passed upon us in reality. There is no power of will, no moral reform, no religious conjuring, no medical skill, that can deliver us from this death. Death reigns absolute, so far as his subjects are concerned, and his dominion is a broad one. The whole human family, the lower animal and vegetable kingdoms, are territories where none dispute his sway or disturb his reign. There is no one so noble as to escape the common lot, none so ignoble as to be slighted, none so rich as to buy a reprieve, none so poor as not to be worth the taking; but all are swept away struggling, shuddering, resisting, pleading, by the merciless hand of death.

"The glories of our mortal state
Are shadows, not substantial things.
There is no armor against Death;
He lays his icy hands on kings.
Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made
With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

"Some men with swords may reap the field,
And plant fresh laurels where they kill;
But their strong nerves at length must yield—
They tame but one another still.
Early or late
They stoop to fate,
And must give up their murmuring breath
When they, pale captives, creep to death.

"The garlands wither on your brow;
Then boast no more your mighty deeds.
Upon Death's purple altar now
See how the victor-victim bleeds!
All heads must come
To the cold tomb:
Only the actions of Christ the just Smell sweet and blossom from the dust."

Death seems to be a necessity both in nature and in grace. Not that God was under necessity to so arrange, but that it seemed good in his sight to have it so. Its all-pervading, irresistible, irrepressible reign throughout all countries, all ages and all departments of nature is enough to start the question in the thoughtful mind, Does not death serve some great economy in God's universe? Is it a mere interloper that God would not have here? Is it not a provision of his own wisdom for carrying out his own design in creation?

Death is a necessity in the vegetable kingdom; for "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."—John xii. 24. This is a specific statement, setting forth the principle of reproduction in the vegetable world. Everything that lives is an evidence that something died. The giant oak, adorning the majestic forest, is a living monument that marks an acorn's grave; and the inscription read in every leaf and written in every bough is, "An acorn died." Each spear of grass that gems the lawn, every flower that brightens and perfumes the garden, every crimson-laden tree of the orchard, proclaims that something died. The holy apostle, in treating upon the resurrection of the dead, brought to his argument this universal fact in nature, "That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." The Savior, in speaking of the necessity of his own death, and the glory that should follow, used the same fact as an illustration in the words, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." Death precedes quickening in the vegetable kingdom, and is essential to it. This same mysterious principle in a deeper and more hidden manner extends into the animal kingdom, and even reaches the kingdom of grace. The Savior opened the door and gave us a glimpse of this mysterious chamber when he said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone."—John xii. 24. He applied the universal principle of reproduction in the vegetable kingdom to himself. He here gives us to understand that the process of reproduction exemplified in plant life was in some way wrapped up in him; and the principles of his death and our redemption by his blood are in some way illustrated by the death and quickening of a grain of wheat. Now, this same saying may with propriety and truthfulness be transferred to Adam, for he is the figure of Christ. Except Adam had died he would have abided alone, and the world would never have been peopled through him. Adam begat no children until death passed upon him in the sentence, "Dying thou shalt die." This is strange indeed; but what is not strange when properly thought upon? Its being strange is no evidence against its truthfulness. Truth is always stranger than fiction sure enough. The process cannot be explained, the reasons cannot be given, yet it is true. We are warranted in carrying this fact into the animal kingdom by a strictly scientific basis. The principle of reproduction, growth and repair is found alone in vegetable life; it does not belong to the order of animal life. The difference between the tree and the animal is not that the animal does not possess vegetable life, but that the tree does not possess animal life. The order of vegetable life endows the animal with the power of reproduction. When a bone is broken, it is the power of vegetable life that causes it to knit together again; and the same principle heals the wound that is made in the flesh or muscles of the body, and causes the hair to grow again when cut or plucked out, and the finger nails to grow again when trimmed. Animal life endows its possessor with the power of locomotion and instinct; but without vegetable life there would be no reproduction, growth and repair. Then, so far as the reproduction of his kind is concerned, it is found alone in the order of vegetable life, which is mysteriously combined with animal life, to make up an animal organism, or a human personality. Hence the same principle of death and quickening which is essential to plant reproduction lies deeply hidden in the fact and process of all animal procreation; hence it was necessary that Adam should die. It should be noticed again that death is not simply the dissolution of this mortality, but that this dissolution is but the consummation of that death which has been at work in our members from the time of our birth.

Now, the saints of God in their mortal state, in their natural personality, were created in the earthy Adam; and when death passed upon him it passed upon them. They are the production of a body of death; consequently they must die. This death, with all its attendant circumstances, its prodigious economy in all nature, cannot possibly be the accident of a day, the result of the mistake of free-will, or anything of that kind. This would be the blindest fatalism, the sternest doctrine of chance. Death plays too stupendous a part in all the affairs of this world, both in the physical and moral spheres, and shines too bright in the everlasting covenant, to be a mere interloper in God's universe. Faith looks upon it as a provision of infinite wisdom, a gracious providence, ordained by the Creator to fulfill his own eternal purpose, both in creation and in grace. The whole process of christian experience is a struggle between life and death, sin and holiness, corruption and incorruption; and the whole summing up of christian hope is that we shall one day be delivered from this bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

"Even so in Christ shall all be made alive." The "all" referred to here are clearly they that are Christ's, the whole election of grace. The resurrection of the saints as here brought to view is in Christ. This resurrection is but the triumphant consummation of something long gone before. It is the harvest of grace, sown in Christ before the foundation of the world. It is "the divine far-off event to which the whole creation moves." Death in Adam and life in Christ is the fundamental idea of the New Testament Scriptures, the golden text of the gospel of grace, the master-key to all christian experience. In treating upon the same theme the same inspired writer has recorded, "As by the disobedience of one man, many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Men are made righteous by the obedience of Christ, upon exactly the same conditions upon which they were made sinners by the disobedience of Adam. Adam's sin and disobedience reached us by virtue of our vital relationship to him. Upon no other condition could we possibly have been made sinners by his disobedience. If we had not been in him, virtually in him, of the same life with him, then his disobedience would not, could not, have reached us at all. Upon exactly the same condition the obedience of Jesus reaches his people and makes them righteous. When the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, he took upon himself the seed of Abraham, the election of grace. They were made members of his body, of his flesh and of his bones in his incarnation, by virtue of the grace and life that were given them in him, according as they were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before God in love. He was the ark of God's covenant; and when he struggled with temptations, when he suffered for sin, when he died upon the cross, when he descended into hell, they were safely housed in him, and brought safely through it all. They paid tithes in him, became dead to the law by his body, reconciled to God by him, and shall be saved from wrath as one with him. By virtue of this oneness of life, this vital relation to him, his perfect obedience, his suffering of death and triumphant resurrection are all accounted unto them, and reaches them most effectually, and shall make them all righteous.

As to the certainty of the saints all being made alive in Christ at the last day, there can be no reason for doubt. Their being made alive is just as certain as their death in Adam. Who can question the certainty of death? Is it not this certainty that strikes terror to the heart of all living? Are there any conditions between us and death upon which death can be brought or stayed? There is no way of escape. According to the inspired record of eternal truth there is no reason to doubt the certainty of life in Christ. Inasmuch as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. The one is just as certain as the other. Jesus himself said, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." It is not the will of our heavenly Father that any of these little ones who fall asleep in Christ shall perish. All our sins have been put away by him, and he has redeemed us unto God by his blood. By the one offering he hath perfected us forever. We are dead, and our life is hid with Christ in God; and when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory. He hath loved us with an everlasting love; he hath chosen us to salvation; he hath appointed us to glory; he hath ordained us to eternal life; he hath predestinated us to be conformed to the image of his Son; he hath laid down his life for us; we are reconciled to God by his blood; we are washed, sanctified, justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God. Our destiny is indissolubly linked with the destiny of Jesus. How can this incomprehensible work of grace fail? Faith embraces it all, and rests in this finished work of our Redeemer, and looks forward with joy and gladness to the final consummation of it all. The resurrection of the dead is the crowning result of the work of Christ and God's purpose of salvation. Then shall be brought to pass the saying, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" "I will redeem them from death, I will ransom them from the power of the grave." Death will be swallowed up of victory. May God give us grace to trust him, and to walk humbly before him, and in patience and hope await the great day of our final, eternal deliverance.

H. M. CURRY.

LEBANON, Ohio.

Ghent, Ky., May 8, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed please find a letter that I wrote recently to sister Johnson, of Baltimore, Md., and mailed to her, but which was returned to me by the postmaster, indorsed, "Returned to the writer. No such person could be found." Supposing that you might know her address, I mail it to you, with the request that you mail it to her, supposing that you will be unwilling to give it a place in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Truly yours,

H. COX.

Ghent, Ky., April 27, 1894.

DEAR SISTER E. S. JOHNSON:—You will please pardon one who is an entire stranger to you for thus addressing you and claiming that endearing relationship to you. The cause of my thus calling you sister is found in your truly interesting letter addressed to Elder Keene and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES of the 25th instant. In that letter you use this language, "Many a time have I laid myself on my bed at night, disgusted and despising myself for the sins I have committed." This has been my sad and sorrowing experience for many years; and step by step as I approach the shades of the tomb more and more vividly do my sins and iniquities rise up before me. Darkness and gloom are daily my companions, and they rise up and point the finger of reproach at me; reproach because that after I have had a name among God's dear people more than sixty-two years, I should still remain a follower after the vanities of a sin-cursed world, instead of following the footprints of our glorious Lord. Surely my sad experience is, "In me, that is, in my flesh, there dwells no good thing." Sometimes I meditate on the language of the bride in the Canticles, "By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth; I sought him, but I found him not." In those meditations this mournful thought rises before me, Have I ever sought the Lord? Have I ever loved him and desired to give unto his name the glory due unto it? I know if I look to the crooked pathway that I have trod through all those long years the answer to those questions would be in the negative. But alas! how often have I found myself resting on the bed of carnal security, and feeding on the husks that the swine do eat. The poor prodigal could not live on the husks, nor can the children of the kingdom find comfort in the vanities of earth. Their comfort, their rejoicing, their consolation, are all found in that sweet and precious name Jesus. To them the bed of carnal security is filled with thorns and thistles, and from that bed they arise to escape, and are made to say, "I will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways will I seek him whom my soul loveth." To them there is a charm in that precious name that causes them to hasten.

Their language is, "I will rise now." I will quickly get away from this thorny bed, and seek him whom my soul loveth. Yes, I will go about the city, the church. Yes, I will walk about Zion, and go round about her. I will mark well her bulwarks and consider her palaces. That Zion is the city of the living God, and there the poor mourning ones seek and fondly hope and trust that they will find him who is to them the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. They behold the wondrous display of his power, love and mercy in building that great city in which dwelleth righteousness. They seek him there. They take comfort in hearing that precious name chanted forth in the sweet songs of Zion as they are sung by the dear saints with voices attuned by redeeming love. But still they go about the streets and broad ways of that great city. In one of them they see in emblem his broken body and spilt blood. It is then they soar away to Calvary's rugged cross, and behold him in agony, and hear him in dying accents say, "It is finished." But O what sorrowful thoughts are theirs when they are made to feel that their sins, their cruel sins, erected that cross and drove those nails into his precious hands and feet. But in walking about that great city they find water street, and there behold in emblem the burial and resurrection of their dear Redeemer. It is then their faith is strengthened, their hope renewed, and they press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Those emblems only point to Jesus, to his suffering and his glorious and triumphant resurrection. But in them the watchmen that go about that great city are seen, and thus to the watchman they say, "Saw ye him whom my soul loveth?" But having thus seen the watchman, and having beheld the wondrous beauty symbolized in those two ordinances in God's house, the dear saints approach closely to their Lord; for then they can say with the bride, "It was but a little that I passed from them [the watchmen], but I found him whom my soul loveth. I held him, and would not let him go, until I had brought him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me." Ah, dear sister, when the saints have been for days, weeks, and perhaps months, in darkness and gloom, and mourning the absence of their dear Lord, it is night to them, and they are like the dear disciples upon the stormy sea, laboring by their own natural powers to cross that sea amid the storm and gloom, not clothed with power to still the rolling waves nor hush the mighty tempest. When Jesus appeared to them and said; "It is I, be not afraid," the winds were hushed into silence, the waves were stilled, and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went. You and I, dear sister, are on the stormy sea of life, and it is often night with us, and we by our own natural powers are found laboring to dispel the gloom and sorrow that overshadow us; but all is vain till that dear One appears on the scene and says, "It is I, be not afraid." O what a heavenly transition from those scenes of sorrow, mourning and gloom, to a land in which the healing rays of the Sun of righteousness dispel the clouds and heal the wounds that sin hath made. I once heard a venerable man in the pulpit whose ideas were clothed in language perhaps a little fanciful; but he was dwelling on the subject of the death of the righteous, and said, "They rise on the azure wings of hope, tipped with gold, to heaven's hallowed battlements, and there behold with seraphic delight the beauty, glory and grandeur of their future and eternal home." He has long since laid aside the habiliments of mortality, and, I fondly trust, is in the sweet enjoyment of that blessed home on which he loved to meditate while here below; that blessed land of rest in which you and I, dear sister, if we are the children of God, will soon meet to part no more. In your letter you speak of the deaths of your dear father, mother and brother. That touched a tender chord in my poor and sorrowing heart. My father, mother, nine brothers and sisters have all been called to their final resting places. But the deepest sorrow was still in reserve for me. Our only children, two lovely daughters, have both been called to cross the dark river. It is thus we are left to complete our few remaining days on earth in sorrow and sadness. But it was all in accord with the divine purpose of our God, and we realize and know that he doeth all things well, and that we should be reconciled to pass under his chastening rod, knowing that he hath said to us, "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." He hath also said for the comfort of those who are chastened, "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Then, dear sister, our sincere prayer should be for grace to help in every time of trouble, knowing that he hath said to us, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

But you will please excuse me for troubling you with this long letter, which evidently is too feeble to pay you for the trouble of reading it. May grace, mercy and peace be and abide with you and your household during the remainder of your earthly pilgrimage, is the sincere prayer of this poor and afflicted one, now about eighty-two years old. I would request you to write me when you have leisure, if it were not that I fear a correspondence with me would afford you no reward for your trouble.

With love to all the dear saints in Baltimore, I subscribe myself yours in the bonds of christian love,

H. COX.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., May 23, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The following letter from Elder W. J. May is so clear an expression of the scriptural teaching on an important point of doctrine that I send it to you for publication in the SIGNS, if you think best.

Your brother in hope,
SILAS H. DURAND.

PINSONFORK, Ky., Feb. 15, 1894.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND—ESTEEMED BROTHER IN CHRIST JESUS:—I see from your precious letter of recent date that you are expecting another letter from me soon; and as I am shut in doors to-day by constant snow, I will comply with your request the best I can. I should have written sooner, but I have to labor hard to support myself and family; hence I am necessarily compelled to redeem all the time I can.

I own a rough mountain farm, which I cultivate the best I can. I have the care of two churches; and beside attending them, I travel elsewhere to preach Jesus the best I can. I have written these things in order to give you some idea of how I am living; for I am aware that ere this you have seen that my writing is badly disconnected, as also this will be; and I am oftentimes so crushed down with a deepening, heartfelt sense of my weakness and unworthiness that I conclude to write no more; yet it is so pleasant and interesting to me to correspond with the Lord's loved ones that I cannot content myself without writing them; and I am often made to say, Lord, if it be so, why am I thus?

From what has been said between us in our last writings, I imagine that you are looking for me to write on the eternal unity or oneness of Christ and his people; or in other words, the sense in which God's people existed in Christ before the world was. I do not have the least idea that we at all differ in our sentiments on this important subject; but I do have fears that I cannot express my thoughts so as to be understood; therefore I must ask your kind forbearance in this, as in the past.

Then, in order to avoid extending my letter to an immoderate length, I will say that I understand that the Lord's people have two standings, one in Christ and one in Adam; and in the order of existence their standing in Christ was first, was from everlasting, or ever the earth was, or even before Adam's dust was fashioned to man; but in the order of development their standing in Adam was first, was earthly; and in this sense they had a creation, formation and beginning, hence are creatures, and time beings, entirely destitute in this standing of immortality or eternal life, until quickened by that pre-existing life which they had in Christ when he (Christ) dwelt in the bosom of the eternal Father; or in other words, until God communicates eternal life to them experimentally.

This life was eternally in Christ, and as absolutely theirs as it is when they are born again, or when they will be safely landed on the shores of eternal felicity; for Christ is himself their life; but they are creatures, men and women, who are chosen out from among other men and women; and this choice was anterior to time. "Chosen us in him [Christ] before the foundation of the world," &c.—Eph. i. 4. And we were not only chosen in Christ before the world was, but grace was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. When God communicates eternal life to these elect vessels of mercy, calls them by his grace, to reveal his Son in them, this is only manifesting them, or drawing the visible lines of eternal election around them. So, by this you will see that I do not believe that God's children existed in him in their individuality, but their eternal life was there, "Hid with Christ in God."—Col. iii. 3. And "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." This fourth verse gives us the idea plainly that our life (Christ) appears to us before we appear with him in glory. This seems to me to be upon the principle of the vine and the branches; for the life of the vine develops the branch; and although there may be countless millions of branches in the vine, yet there is but the one life. The life of the vine is the identical life of each and every branch, and each and every branch had life in the vine ever since it was a vine, even when it was a seed, or germ bud; and it is by virtue of that pre-existing life that each and every branch is manifested and appears with the life in glory. Having been predestinated unto this adoption by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of his glory, &c. And though a vine have countless branches, when we speak of it we just call it a vine, meaning the vine and all its branches. So, also, I understand Paul to mean when he says, "Christ is all." He is both head, body and members in this sense.—Col. iii. 11. Christ is taken for the mystical body of Christ, both himself the head, and the church his members, which make but one body.—1 Cor. xii. 12. "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, so also is Christ." The clause, "So also," means in the same manner, or same like manner. I do not know of any one but what believes that Christ was chosen and set apart by God the Father from eternity, the elect Head of his people, and Mediator of the covenant of eternal redemption.—Heb. viii. 6. And if we admit this choice and eternal arrangement, I cannot for one moment see so much as one obstacle in the way of believing that all the members were thus chosen, set apart, and ordained to

(Continued on page 199.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 20, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE BLESSED POOR.

IN the record of the preaching of our Lord Jesus, as written by Matthew, the subjects of his first consideration are defined as "the poor in spirit." Upon them he pronounces his benediction, assigning as the embodiment of that blessing, "For theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Such is the covetousness of the natural heart that it would gladly assume the character designated if thereby it might secure the blessing contained in this declaration of our Lord. From the days of Cain there has ever been some form in which this selfish desire has found expression in the voluntary religious efforts of carnal men. In all such works there has been one invariable characteristic in which they all retain the mark of their prototype; all originate in the will of the sinner, and are alike gratifying to the pride of the worshipers who trust in them. The more zealously they render service under these devices of their own hearts, the more fully are they satisfied that they have merited the favor of God, and that their services entitle them to a reward, which they expect to receive in the heaven of eternal glory. Without entering into an argument on this subject, it is only needful now to remark that those who have the confidence that they are more righteous than others, and whose hope is built upon that foundation, cannot be included in this benediction of our Lord Jesus. Instead of being poor in spirit, such characters are trusting in themselves that they are righteous, and despising others. This blessing does not include such meritorious ones in its application. Only such as mourn their destitution of every claim upon the favor of divine justice, who have nothing to plead in their own justification, can be "poor in spirit." So long as they can find one indication that they are acceptable to God they are not poor in spirit. That poverty involves utter destitution. For the comfort of such it is written, "When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory. He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer."—Psalm cii. 16, 17. In vain may the inspired word be searched to find any such promise as this to any others but the destitute. These are the poor in spirit, on whom the gracious Lord has commanded his blessing.

While it is manifest that this blessed poor character cannot make himself worthy to receive that favor which is bestowed upon him, there is a constant mourning in his heart because he can produce no good works in confirmation of his hope in the salvation of God. This is one form in which his poverty is exposed. He has to complain that he cannot do the things which he would do in obedience to the prompting of the Spirit of Christ. If he could perform that which is good, then he would not be so poor as to be destitute. He would have just that much to glory of. But when divine light shines in his heart he must confess that "In me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." This proves his poverty to the extent of being destitute. No deeper poverty than this can oppress any sinner. It is not possible that such poverty should be voluntarily chosen by any created being. Real poverty can only be felt by those who are unwillingly subjected to it. So, none can be poor in spirit but those who have no power to deliver themselves from the bondage of corruption. Necessarily these must groan under the burden of sin, and in their trouble they cry unto the Lord. They do not need to be exhorted thus to pray when driven to confess their poverty. The starving beggar does not ask for aid as a mere duty to be performed. He is compelled by destitution to seek relief. He cannot claim it as his due, but must appeal to those who have pity for his case. So, the conscious sinner can only confess the justice of his condemnation, while he cannot suppress his cry for mercy and grace to deliver him from sin and its consequent death.

So far is this peculiar mark of the blessing of God from presenting any attraction to the carnal covetousness, that even those upon whom the Lord has set this seal of his grace, when looking at the things which are seen by the natural mind, continually mourn because they cannot be relieved of its heavy burden. Even in earthly things it is impossible for selfishness to choose poverty and destitution. Fanatics have endeavored to gain divine favor by giving up their temporal possessions and abstaining from palatable food; but such characters have not succeeded in making themselves poor. On the contrary, their pride was fed upon the very intensity of their self-inflicted privations and sufferings. They were rich in their supposed poverty. None can be poor in spirit so long as they find in themselves anything to commend them to the favor of God. Only when realizing that all their own righteousnesses are as filthy rags can the saints themselves be experimentally partakers of this blessedness which belongs to the poor in spirit. Yet they always mourn when made to feel the very poverty which conclusively establishes the fact that the blessing of the Lord abides upon them. It is not strange that this people is described as a peculiar people. They wish above all things to bear the evidences of unity with the saints and with their Redeemer; yet they see occasion for unbelief in those very marks which prove that unity. They earnestly long for deliverance from confidence in themselves; yet they are sorely distressed when they find in themselves no confirmation of their hope in the salvation of God. This experience is confined to the subjects of that grace of God which brings salvation. Nothing but the light of life can show the sinner his utter destitution and poverty. In this felt poverty God has set the assurance of his blessing. Then it is of the utmost moment to the saints to know if they are afflicted with that poverty which is in spirit.

One manifestation of this poverty is shown in mourning under the sense of sinfulness. The blessed of the Lord are so poor that if their everlasting happiness depended upon their offering one good prayer, or thinking one good thought, they would sink in despair. No conditional provision of mercy could avail them, since they are too poor to bring the very least meritorious action in atonement for their iniquity. Even after they have been delivered from their mountains of sin, and the mercy of the Lord has caused them to hope in that salvation which is in Jesus, they are still so poor that they cannot walk as children of the light. They must be kept by the power of God, and their righteousness must yet be found in Jesus. If by grace their past sins were remitted, and they were placed in primitive innocency, as was Adam when he was placed in the garden of Eden, they are so poor that it would avail them nothing. They must not only be saved from sin through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, but that salvation must come to them in their rebellion against God, and deliver them from the power of sin. They are still so very poor that they must have the faith of the operation of God to work in them both to will and to do of his own good pleasure. Nor can they bring so much as a holy desire from their own evil heart in commendation of their plea for the favor of God. No such deep and helpless poverty can be found in all the thoughts of the heart of man as this wretched misery which oppresses the quickened sinner when he sees himself lost and already condemned. The most that man can grasp of his guilt is that he is in danger of being condemned; but now the truth that he is condemned already reveals his utterly hopeless condition and he is inconceivably poor and destitute.

So far as is seen by the natural mind, the guilty criminal is beyond the reach of mercy; but the unspeakable riches of grace shining in the face of Jesus Christ reveals the glorious blessedness of this poor sinner. Poor and needy as he is, that grace shows him that the Lord thinketh on him; and he is made to rejoice in the truth that "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow therewith." Again, the poor pilgrim would fain find rest in some pleasant abode for which his weary heart seeks diligently as he wanders through this wilderness world; many alluring places invite his visits, and it seems that he might sojourn quietly in such agreeable resorts; but the voice of his God is heard commanding, "Arise, ye, and depart; for this is not your rest; because it is polluted, it shall destroy you, even with a sore destruction." There is no place in all this cursed earth where the saints can find a safe dwelling. The love of God has given them the same portion here which was ordained for the Captain of their salvation. As he was even among his kindred Jews a stranger and an alien, so it is the privilege of his chosen disciples to be as he was, despised and rejected of men. Poor as they are in all that the world accounts as valuable, and despised as is their confidence in the God of their salvation, the most distressing poverty which they suffer is entirely unknown to any but to them who are afflicted by it. The world can see that destitution of earthly resources which is common among the saints, and this is what is understood even by their own natural mind as the poverty of the disciples of Jesus. But they must endure more bitter poverty than this as they follow him who was rich, yet for their sakes he became poor, that they through his poverty might be rich. Destitution of natural food, and having no place where he might lay his head, while representing the depth of temporal poverty, were little in comparison with the poverty to which he was reduced when he was made a curse for us. It is not wonderful that darkness reigned at noonday when he who was holy and sinless, was made sin for the redemption of his people from guilt. Even in suffering poverty it pleased the Father that he should have the pre-eminence. There is heavenly glory in the fellowship of that suffering, as it is given to those who are favored to follow him.

There is another experience of poverty in spirit, to which it is important that the saints give attention. It is the homesick longing of those who would be conformed to the perfection of Jesus, and yet are constantly made to mourn their own vileness. Their malicious adversary is ever ready to accuse them of departure from the path of righteousness, and never tires of urging their daily conduct as evidence of the falsehood of their profession of hope in the salvation of God. How bitterly they feel the pangs of this poverty none can know but those who are taught it by constant suffering. They would not feel pained under this trial if they could know that it was indeed the blessed poverty of the subjects of divine grace. Indeed, it would not then be poverty at all to them. While seeing Jesus as their present Savior the saints can know no poverty. All the riches of heaven are secured to them in that divine knowledge. It is given them in the behalf of Christ not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake. That they may thus be partakers of his sufferings their Lord hides his face for a little moment. But his Spirit is faithful to take and show unto them in their hour of need this blessed consolation, that his presence is with them in every trial, and he will never leave nor forsake them. The heirs of this great grace have the witness of their interest in this rich assurance in the very poverty which causes them to mourn their wretched destitution of everything which should characterize a believer in Jesus. All such poor ones are blessed in Jesus with abundant supply of that bread which came down from heaven, of which if a man eat he shall never die.

HEALTH IMPROVED.

HAVING received a number of inquiries as to our physical condition since the late operation, we will say for the benefit of those who have expressed such kind interest in our case, that while we can hardly expect to ever again be well, it has pleased the Lord to so far restore us, that we are again able to be out, and seem to be daily gaining in strength. Thanking the brethren and friends for their expressions of sympathy, we ask that if the Lord in his wisdom shall see fit to remove us from these shores of time, that they pray for us, that our faith fail not.

B. L. BEEBE.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

WITH our first number for March we discontinued the notice headed "Until March," with a view to withdrawing our extraordinary offer to old subscribers as an inducement for them to procure new subscribers: but we have received a number of letters from very efficient brethren complaining that the time has been so short, and the weather so inclement, that they have not had an opportunity to get out among the brethren and friends as they would like to do, and requesting us for an extension of the time. We will therefore, until further notice, continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Elders and Messengers of the Churches composing the Delaware River Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Southampton Church, at Southampton, Bucks County, Pa., May 30th, 31st, and June 1st, 1894, to the Churches whose messengers we are, sends Christian salutation.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Through the mercy and loving-kindness of our God, we present to you our annual letter, and for your comfort and instruction offer some general remarks touching upon many things closely connected with our profession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and our walk and conversation as we journey through this wilderness world to the blest mansions of eternal rest.

We live in a peculiar age of the world, and far removed from the simplicity of the life of our fathers. Education, Arts and Science have developed the resources of this fruitful land in which our lot is cast, and as a nation and people we have grown rich, and the great effort of the mass of mankind is to live in luxury and pleasure, and like nations that have lived and died before us, become forgetful of the Sovereign Ruler, from whom all blessings flow. As citizens in common with others, we have much to do in our relations with the busy scenes of life, and the rapidity with which steam and electricity hasten us from one enterprise to another causes us to say, "We have not time." We have not time to attend the appointments of the church. We neglect our pastor, our brethren, and miss the sweet intercourse that binds us together in the love of the gospel and belief of the truth, which produces coldness, indifference and barrenness of mind in spiritual things; so much so that we are pained to hear the question asked, how far those who profess to love the Lord can indulge in worldly amusements, and the many pleasures and follies that the thoughtless world delights in.

The apostle Paul in writing to his Corinthian brethren has clearly shown that in our calling from nature to grace, the relations and obligations of life are not changed, but the subjects of divine grace will be able to serve their masters better, or fill the places in the business departments of life, that in the providence of God has been intrusted to them. And in all the relations of life, those who have in their experience passed through the dark night of sorrow, when they cried unto God for deliverance from the weight and burden of sin, and when all the treasures that self-righteous zeal had stored in good works, and so-called services of the Lord, vanished before the wrath and anger of the just and holy God, like chaff before the wind, and they were without God and without hope in the world; and when they remember the anguish of soul, and the dark night of condemnation and death, and the moment when the Sun of righteousness arose with healing in his wings, dispelling the darkness, and revealing himself their Savior, the joy of that moment and the continued love and kindness of God, should cause them to pause and consider their relation to the dear Redeemer. "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as a lamb without blemish, and without spot: who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you; who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God."—1 Peter i. 18-21. And remember the record the Scripture contains of his life while incarnate. His resting place was not the sumptuous palace of to-day. He said of himself, "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." He was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief, a mourner all his days. He gave his back to the smiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair. He hid not his face from shame and spitting. He obeyed the law in all its precepts. His whole life was an example of meekness, love and kindness, even to his enemies. If we are called to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, ought we not to feel that the time past should have sufficed to have wrought the will of the flesh, and that henceforth we should desire to live unto God, and not unto ourselves? "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. ii. 8-10. Our Savior when seated with his disciples, in that memorable sermon on the mount, said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." "Ye are the light of the world." "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Can we let our light so shine if we divide our talent between the church, secret societies and beneficiary organizations, called moral or religious, and accept invitations to mingle with the gay pleasure seekers, to give character to the party, and ease the conscience of those who feel condemnation in their own hearts, although connected with popular organizations, whose liberal creeds and doctrines permit many things that they themselves know are unbecoming professors, if it brings them numbers and money that they so much need to enable them to promulgate their doctrines and assist them in their efforts to evangelize the world? But God has separated his people from all confederations of men and worldly sanctuaries by revelation of his Son Jesus Christ, the hope of glory, and made a covenant with them, that he would put his law in their minds, and write it in their hearts, and he would be unto them a God, and they should be his people. "I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and iniquities I will remember no more." He also says, "I will visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes: nevertheless my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail." The Lord's people find, by painful experience, that the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak; and when left to ourselves, and led captive by the devil at his will, and we turn aside in forbidden paths, to wander on the dark mountains of sin, sad and painful indeed is that state; for the Scriptures declare, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." Our Savior while under the law wept over Jerusalem, and said, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." So, under the gospel, the church weeps over those who go astray, knowing that God will visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."—Romans xii. 1, 2. All religious organizations that teach the doctrine of free moral agency, and believe in man's will and power to repent, obey God, and save himself from eternal death, if reports are true from Conventions and Assemblies, have received great encouragement in the discovery that all denominations are laboring for the good of souls; and if they do not accord in belief, there is some good in all, and all are striving for the same thing, to reach heaven—the heaven of their imagination. If we are observant of the things transpiring around us, and the lesson presented at the great Columbian Exposition, where nearly all nationalities were assembled, giving us an opportunity to learn something of their character, manners, customs and religion, we find the world's Congress of religion then assembled presenting the same sentiment, that there is some good in all, and that all should labor for the prosperity of each other, and that mankind are the children of God, which is but a consummation of the idea of evangelizing the world. Do not thees transpiring events remind us of the Jewish nation when our incarnate Savior made his advent to earth, and of his thirty-three years sojourn in that eastern land, and the many wonderful events of his life, from the time the shepherds of Israel announced his birth, until his death on the cross? The priests and Roman officers, with their self-righteous followers, in their hatred and blind zeal, assisted by the rabble, their tools, cried, "Crucify him!" and they led away the dear Lamb of God, the Savior of sinners, and nailed him upon the cross. All worldly religious organizations assume to enthrone themselves in Moses' seat; and do we not see a disposition manifested to dictate to those who differ from them? and how readily they can all unite to enforce their doctrines and commandments; for there is no radical difference in them. They all teach the same thing, man's ability to believe, repent, obey God, and escape eternal punishment. The Scriptures inform us that the time will come when none will be allowed to buy or sell unless they have the mark of the beast in their foreheads. A writer some months since stated that about one-fifth of the entire population of the earth visited and mingled with the other four-fifths, and that soon race distinction would be unknown, and sectarianism done away. If that is accomplished, will not the persecuting spirit of all anti-christian organizations, in their mad zeal and hatred to those who contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, the eternal and unconditional salvation of all the heirs of immortal glory, through the blood and righteousness of Christ, unite to arrest and punish nonconformists in prison, at the stake, and unto death? The apostle James, in writing to his brethren, says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, exhorted his brethren to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, and to continue in their most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keeping themselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. The dear Redeemer came to John the Baptist, his harbinger, when he was baptizing in Jordan, and was baptized. The opening heavens, the descending Spirit, and a voice saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," gave evidence that he was the Christ.

The river Jordan is the gate through which God's believing children enter into gospel rest, the privileges of the church, and fellowship of their brethren, having put on Christ by open profession, through death and resurrection to newness of life. Also, when the approaching hour of his agony in the garden, and death on the cross drew near, he instituted the supper, and chose the bread and wine, emblems of his broken body and shed blood, which were to prefigure his death till he comes, saying, "As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me." He knew our weakness and frailty, and that in the multiplicity of care we might forget the Savior that gave his body to ransom us from the grave, and shed his blood for the remission of our sins. May these reminders ever be present with us, keeping us near the cross, and teaching us the vanity of all earthly things, and to so number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Dear brethren, let us exhort each other to love and obedience, and to live as strangers and pilgrims in this ungodly world, to be separate from sinners, unspotted from the world, and as much as lieth in us live peaceably with all men. Be perfect, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you, and make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

SILAS H. DURAND, Mod.
CYRUS RISLER, Clerk.

The Warwick Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., June 6th, 7th and 8th, 1894, to the several churches of which she is composed, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED:—The apostle Peter, addressing the scattered saints, says, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." As Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, we need not think it strange if afflictions and trials are appointed for us. The Lord has said, "Behold, I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction." The Lord's fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem. He sits as a refiner's fire, and shall thoroughly purge his people; yet they shall not suffer real loss, as nothing but the dross shall be consumed by the fire. The apostle James tells the saints to count it all joy when they fall into divers trials, because the trial of their faith worketh patience; and this patience they have need of, that after they have done the will of God they may receive the promise. The psalmist David speaks of the great benefit he had experienced under affliction, saying, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word." "It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes." Peter tells us to arm ourselves with the same mind that was in Christ when he suffered for us in the flesh. What an example of meekness and long-suffering we have in Jesus, who is our pattern. While here in the flesh we are engaged in a warfare, and therefore are told to arm ourselves, and fight the good fight of faith. "Put on," says Paul, "the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." With such an armor on, not all the powers of darkness combined shall be able to harm us. As good soldiers we must endure hardness, and so follow our Captain, who endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. "For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds."

"Jesus, the great, the mighty God,
A man of grief became;
In paths of meekness here he trod,
And bore the sinner's shame.

Humility, how bright it shined
In every act he wrought;
What lowliness of heart and mind
Appeared in all he taught.

His love to men of sinful race
Glowed in his tender breast;
For man he yielded to disgrace,
Forsaken and distressed.

Led as a lamb to meet the sword,
He bowed beneath the stroke;
Not one revengeful angry word
The dear Redeemer spoke.

O may his meekness be our guide,
The pattern we pursue;
How can we bear revenge or pride
With Jesus in our view?"

O may we all, as his professed disciples, lay aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocricies, and envies, and all evil speakings, and be followers of God as dear children.

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine.

Thus shall we best proclaim abroad
The honors of our Savior God,
When the salvation reigns within,
And grace subdues the power of sin."

WM. L. BEEBE, Mod.
BENTON JENKINS, Clerk.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Warwick Old School Baptist Association, convened with our sister church at Warwick, N. Y., June 6th, 7th and 8th, 1894, to the several associations and churches with whom we correspond, sends love in the Lord.

DEARLY BELOVED:—In the infinite mercy and abounding goodness of our ever faithful God we have been favored with the privilege of meeting once more in our accustomed annual assembly, and of hearing from our brethren scattered abroad through the length and breadth of our extended country. While they have with us to record the favor of the Lord in sustaining them in the midst of afflictions and tribulations, they bear testimony to the truth that tribulation in their earthly experience has but verified the promise of our gracious Redeemer to his disciples for their earthly heritage; this is the earnest of that infinite bliss which they shall receive when they have suffered the will of God in this state of subjection to the vanity of an unceasing warfare against the powers of iniquity which here beset the path of their pilgrimage.

Your messengers and communications of love and fellowship have been joyfully received, with others who are not included in our formal correspondence, but who give the unmistakable Shibboleth of speaking in that heavenly language which identifies the true sons of that Zion which is above the bondage of legal servitude, and is free to render delightful obedience to the perfect law of liberty. Fraternal love and unrestricted fellowship have been the element in which we have mingled one with another, and we have proved that "Perfect love casteth out fear." The preaching has proclaimed the truth of salvation by grace, in which no discordant note has croaked the excellence of human merit. It has been indeed unto us as one of the days of the Son of man, as we have set together in heavenly love, and rejoiced with that perfect joy which is unknown to the heart of man. Only as God is in his saints is such divine bliss revealed in them to whom he has given the blessed inheritance of light and life.

Your ministers have been blessed to come to us in the rich fullness of the excellent grace and glory of our Lord Jesus Christ, and their speech and preaching has exalted the Lamb of God while it has presented the truth of the utter unworthiness and just condemnation of sinners in the vanity of their best estate. May it please the King of glory to long sustain those who thus proclaim the praise of our adorable Redeemer, and may those earthen vessels in whom he has placed the rich treasure of the testimony of Jesus, be strengthened with the power of God for the great work whereunto he has called them!

The next session of our association is to be held, if the Lord will, with our sister church at New Vernon, N. Y., on Wednesday before the second Sunday in June, 1895, when we hope again to be favored with your correspondence. Especially do we hope for the presence of your messengers, since in their coming we realize the assertion of divine wisdom, "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

May the grace of our Lord Jesus be manifestly shed upon you and us in the future as in the past, and may he conform us unto his holy will in all things, and save unto his glorious coming! For this we longingly wait, and watch unto continual prayer. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you forever. Amen.

WM. L. BEEBE, Mod.

BENTON JENKINS, Clerk.

The Delaware River Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Southampton, May 30th and 31st, and June 1st, 1894, to the associations and churches with which we correspond, sendeth greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Our meeting has been a pleasant one, in that we have met in the fellowship of the gospel, and have experienced, we believe, the blessing of being made to sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, while listening to the joyful sound of the gospel, uniting in the singing of spiritual songs, and speaking with each other of the things of the kingdom of God. The business of the association has been done with unanimity, and our churches are reported as enjoying peace.

Your messengers and ministers have been received with gladness. The preaching has been as the voice of one man, and has been with peculiar power.

Our next session is to be held with the First Hopewell Church, beginning on Wednesday after the last Sunday in May, 1895, where we hope to greet your messengers, and receive your messages of love.

SILAS H. DURAND, Mod.

CYRUS RISLER, Clerk.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 195.)

eternal life through Christ their Head and dear Redeemer. The choice of one was the choice of all. Hence the apostle could say, "He hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world." Brother Durand, I cannot see how Christ could be set apart and exist in his Mediatorial person without his mystical body. The one necessarily implies the other. Neither can I see any more impediment or mystery in believing that the church was set up from everlasting, the mystical body and espoused bride, in the Mediatorial person of Christ, than that Christ was chosen and set apart and existed in this capacity. If one is true the other is also true; if one is not, the other is not.

Lest I tax your patience I will close. Write when you can. Yours in hope of eternal life through Christ,

W. J. MAY.

CHURCH LETTERS.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., May 21, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—When the inclosed letter was read before the church at Black Rock, there was a unanimous desire expressed that it should be forwarded to the SIGNS for publication, because it contains some things which we believe will prove of general interest and profit; I therefore now send it to you as requested. Our association has been, I think, a pleasant and profitable session to many. We were sad at missing so many old faces, but again were glad to welcome so many that were new. I trust that some good may result from it, and that God has been glorified in all that was done.

I remain your brother in hope,

F. A. CHICK.

The Black Rock Old School Baptist Church, to the Baltimore Baptist Association, to be held by appointment with the sister church at Harford, Harford Co., Md., on the 16th, 17th and 18th days of May, 1894, sends this her annual letter of love and fellowship.

DEAR BRETHREN:—In speaking or writing upon the things pertaining to this world, we can always find something new to speak or write about, some improvements that men claim they are making for the betterment of the world of mankind.

The christian world, so-called, claim that they are making rapid strides toward the evangelizing or christianizing of the world, and can count up with mathematical precision the progress they have made or can make with a certain amount of means, and have always on hand something new to supercede the old, to the end they may the more expeditiously accomplished their work. But we, brethren, have nothing in common with them. We can only repeat the old, old story of Jesus and his love; love that knows neither beginning nor ending; love which is of God; love which brought the King of glory down to this lower world to bleed and suffer and die, that his people might live. And this love, the apostle John says, the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

Dear brethren, how do we stand in the estimation of the world in a religious point of view? Are we not looked upon as being too small and insignificant to be counted among the nations religiously? and, like our beloved Leader, are we not hated and rejected of men? Having, as we fondly trust, received some comforting assurance that we are of that poor, world-rejected and hated people, we dearly love to associate and correspond with a people who bear the marks of the people of God; marks which have characterized them in all ages of the world as a people distinct and separate from all other people; and if these marks or characteristics are not found with Old School or Primitive Baptists, then where in all this wide world shall we find them?

Dear brethren, let us appreciate our privileges while we may. We have the privilege at present of associating ourselves together for the purpose of the worship of God in a public manner, without legal restraint. How long will it be so? Our God knows, and the God of the whole earth will do right. Our times are in his hand.

Great efforts are being put forth by men to put the name of God (their god) in the constitution of our government, in order to make this a "christian nation." Then, that accomplished, their next step will be to prescribe times and modes when and how all shall be commanded to fall down and worship the god that they have set up.

We speak not of these things lightly, brethren, for we firmly believe from what we daily see and hear of the doings of men that this is their ultimate design.

In view of this, how important that we watch and be sober, and appreciate our privileges while we may. How important, too, that we should strive to live in peace and union with those who bear the mark of the children of the kingdom, none striving to be greatest in the kingdom, but in all meekness and humility, each esteeming others better than themselves, so fulfilling the law of Christ. Here we know but in part, and should not fall out with our brethren who may be led more deeply into the knowledge of divine things than ourselves. When we meet with one who can say, "This one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see," we have fellowship for such an one; for the blind see not. And when love for the brethren is manifested in any, we know that such have passed from death unto life; for the dead cannot love. Dear brethren, a few here at Black Rock are still content to be accounted (as the people of God have always been) as the off-scouring of all things, and it is our desire to endure hardness as good soldiers of the cross, looking for and desiring a better, higher and more enduring state of perfect felicity in the immediate presence of our God, and see our Lord as he is, and be like him.

During the year that is passed we have been called to mourn the loss of some of our loved ones, of whom we feel to make special mention. Our aged sister, Rachel Ensor, who no doubt many of you will remember, has passed away, having finished her course and kept the faith. Our dear sister was in the constitution of the church here sixty-six years ago, and was the last surviving member of the little band organized here at that time; and she was in all probability the last survivor of those who were in attendance at the memorable Black Rock Convention held here in 1832. No one ever belonging to our church was better or more favorably known than our dear departed sister. Another dear sister, Louisa Benson, equally dear unto us who were intimately acquainted with her and knew her worth, has also passed away. Although coming into the church later in life, and may not have been so widely known as the one just mentioned, but to us equally dear and sadly missed.

The writers of the inspired Scriptures thought it meet to make mention of many of their noble women by name, and we have felt to do likewise.

We still are favored with the labors of our dear brother, Elder F. A. Chick, among us, and think we can see evidences and hope that he may have the comforting assurance that his labor is not in vain in the Lord.

We have had some evidences that the Lord has not forgotten us, inasmuch as he has been graciously pleased to bring some of the dear lambs into the fold. As the aged soldiers are year by year being called to lay their armor by and dwell in the immediate presence of the Captain of their salvation, others are called into the ranks to battle for a while in the service of their King. Dear brethren, we hope your meeting will be a pleasant one, that the saints may be comforted and built up, and God's name glorified and exalted, and to his name be all the praise.

Our regular days of meeting for public worship are the first and third Sundays in each month, and on the Saturday before the first Sunday for business and conference.

Read and approved in church meeting on Saturday before the first Sunday in May.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Clowesville Old School Baptist Church, of the Lexington Association, on the first Saturday and Sunday in July, 1894.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, and especially brethren in the ministry. Trains will be met at Fleischmanns station.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

THERE will be a three days meeting held at the Davis school-house, beginning on Friday before the fourth Sunday in July, 1894.

We would like to see as many Baptists as feel like visiting us come and join with us in singing and offering prayer and supplication to the Lord of lords and King of kings.

This meeting will be held fifteen miles east of Purcell, Ind. Ter., and nine miles south of Burnett, near the head of Pan Creek, in Cleveland Co., Oklahoma.

A. J. GILBREATH.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has attained its wide national circulation we have been importuned by our subscribers, as well as by those who have had no special interest in sustaining the publication, to open our columns to advertisements; but never having had any experience in that line of business we have hesitated to make the venture. Since the commencement of this volume, however, there has been a combination of circumstances that has encouraged us to make the experiment, and we therefore make the following announcement, viz.:

We will receive for the last page of the paper suitable and reliable advertisements at the following net rates, viz.:

Inches	1 week	4 weeks	13 weeks	26 weeks	52 weeks
1	$ 85	$ 3 60	$ 8 50	$12 00	$ 22 50
2	1 90	7 20	17 00	24 00	45 00
3	3 80	13 50	34 00	48 00	75 00
4	5 70	18 00	42 50	60 00	103 13
5	7 60	22 50	51 00	72 00	131 25

No advertisements will be received for this paper unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strengthening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

WE have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore "because of the Jews' preparation day: for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9. n ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.	& Ps. 22. 22. Matt. 28. 10. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING.

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"DIETZ" TUBULAR DRIVING LAMP.
It is the only practicable and perfect Driving Lamp ever made.
It will not blow out.
It gives a clear white light.
It looks like a locomotive head light.
It throws all the light straight ahead, from 300 to 300 feet.
It burns kerosene.
Send for book.
R. E. DIETZ CO.,
70 Laight St., New York.

FARMING CORPORATIONS.
A System of Business-like Co-operative Farming. Send for circulars to W. ALDRICH & Co., 120 Broadway, N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF
MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,
G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1894.

NO. 26.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BATAVIA, N. Y., June, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—As I believe I walk in the fear of God, I hasten to do his will when it becomes evident to me what it is. All things that are taught me or brought to my remembrance I write; because I have found to my sorrow there is no resisting. I feel certain that you all know, as well as I, that it is God working in me both to will and to do of his good pleasure; and because of that I take courage, and believe you will be slow to think evil, and will bear with me. This has been the most severe trial of my life, and I have suffered much; but as it is written, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." How I did pray to be released from this obligation, even after all that our Lord and Savior had done for me. But it was not to be; and as it was his good pleasure that I (poor, weak and unqualified as I am of myself) should be an instrument in his hands for good, I do hope I am humble and grateful. Out of the mouths of babes God has ordained strength and perfected praise. How true it is that "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen; yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence."—1 Cor. i. 27-30. No one could be more foolish, weak and base regarding these things than I; but if, in consequence of this, God makes any of his great power and glory visible to his people, I am thankful it is so. Paul writes in Phil. ii. 14, "Do all things without murmurings and disputings." If it is God's will that I serve him in any way, I hope I wait upon him willingly, in fear and trembling, "For the Lord is great, and greatly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods."—Psalm xcvi. 4. I have been brought from the height of my pride and self-sufficiency to the lowest depths. I have no words to express my gratitude for the goodness and mercy that God has shown me; yet I do feel keenly my utter unworthiness. "Who is like unto the Lord our God, who dwelleth on high?"—Psalm cxiii. 5. One of my greatest comforts now is the knowledge I possess of the wondrous power and majesty of God. What a comfort it is to think that nothing shall come to pass without his foreknowledge, and that all things are in his hands both now and forever. Let us take courage; for "if God be for us, who can be against us?"

"Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved; for he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth."—Romans ix. 27, 28. "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"—2 Peter iii. 8-12.

A short time before Titus and his army began the last siege of Jerusalem, Cestius, another Roman general, and his soldiers, came intending to besiege the city; and after frightening the people well, he left, as Josephus says, "without any just occasion in the world," and suffered great calamities from the Jews in this retreat. One of the foot-notes reads thus: "There may another very important and very providential reason be here assigned for this strange and foolish retreat of Cestius; which, if Josephus had been now a christian, he might probably have taken notice of also; and that is, the affording the Jewish christians in the city an opportunity of calling to mind the prediction and caution given them by Christ about thirty-three years and a half before, that when they should see the abomination of desolation [the idolatrous Roman armies, with the images of their idols in their ensigns, ready to lay Jerusalem desolate] stand where it ought not, or in the holy place, or when they should see Jerusalem encompassed with armies, they should then flee to the mountains. By complying with which, those Jewish christians fled to the mountains of Perea, and escaped this destruction.

—See Lit. Accompl. of Proph., pages 69, 70. Nor was there, perhaps, any one instance of a more unpolitic, but more providential conduct, than this retreat of Cestius, visible during this whole siege of Jerusalem; which yet was providentially such a great tribulation, as had not been from the beginning of the world to that time; no, nor ever should be.—Ibid., pages 70, 71." Josephus writes of it in this way: "After this calamity had befallen Cestius many of the most eminent of the Jews swam away from the city, as from a ship when it was going to sink." Christ said, "Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains." "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert: go not forth; behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together. Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. xxiv. These words have been brought to my mind often, so I will write them, "Let whatever is done be done quickly."

We are ordered to watch always. "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye, therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."—Mark xiii. 32, to end of chapter. "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Jesus Christ, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you."—1 Peter v. 6-11. Satan knows that his time is short, as is very evident; and if he can persuade any of us to believe the reverse, it will be his delight to do so. "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."—Luke xxii. 31, 32. During Christ's agony in the garden he said, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me. And he went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt. And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and said unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour? Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy. And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me."—Matt. xxvi. 38-47. In the New York Times of May 23d there is a long article headed, "A. P. A. Reaches New York. With a cartoon it attacks the Roman Catholic Church." It may be well to quote two or three paragraphs. "One of the planks in its Declaration of Principles pledged the members not to buy from Roman Catholic merchants, and to boycott the communicants of the Catholic Church in every way." "At present the association confines its warfare to the Roman Catholics. When the members of this church shall have been disposed of as the Americans desire, it has been suggested, the fight will be turned against the Jews, and then against the free-thinking Germans, and so on down the list, unless the movement be stopped by the sound sense of the people." "Rome has so scared the American people with the shout of 'bigotry' that they have allowed her to fill the offices with thieves and thugs, loot the Public Treasury, attack the schools, subsidize the press, muzzle the preachers, and run everything, from the White House to the penitentiary, to suit the Pope." "And they that understand among the people shall instruct many: yet they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days."—Daniel xi. 33. God has evidently stayed the siege in our own time, so that what remain of his dear ones, out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, will be saved. If it be a part of God's great plan that such a wicked, rebellious creature as I (even the worst of all) should be helped to safely reach the mountains, then how much courage must those who read this take, who yet remain in the doomed city, and to whom Christ will give a realizing sense of their own lost condition and the seriousness of the times. What a fearful day it will be for this earth when the last one is brought safely in. "And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads."—Rev. vii. 2, 3. I have been shown how careful we must be not to call anything common or unclean that God has cleansed; and God is able to make this very impressive and significant to you, even as he has to me. "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in."—Rom. xi. 25.

When Christ was sending out his twelve apostles (Matt. x.), telling them what things they might expect, and comforting them, he said, "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." This looks like a hard saying to us, poor, weak creatures; but if God be with us all things are possible. However, we have been promised strength in our day of need. "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever."—Psalm cxxv. 2. "I will go in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only."—Psalm lxxi. 16. "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be."—Deut. xxxiii. 25. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them."—Psalm xxxiv. 7. Noah went on and built the ark, and no doubt had to bear the ridicule and persecution of an ungodly world; but the ark was finished, and all that God would have saved were saved. "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. xxiv. 37-40. These things "shall be proclaimed upon the housetops;" for the days are evil and the time is short. We have many privileges now, so let us redeem the time, for we know not what a day may bring forth. Paul wrote, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. x. 12. In Rev. iii. 10 we read, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."—Romans viii. 18.

To wait will be one of the hardest things we shall have to endure as time goes on; and we shall only be reconciled as we see the dear objects of God's care leaving the city behind them, and coming on with haste and anxious faces to join us on our high ground. Our Savior knew it would be so, for he said, "In your patience possess ye your souls." There seems to be some great good in this verse, "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."—Daniel xii. 12. Since the time is at hand for these things to be unsealed, the dark things will be made light to us.

"Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places."—Deut. xxxiii. 29. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Luke xii. 32. "To the only wise God our Savior be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and forever."

Yours in hope of eternal life,

ELLA M. HAMILTON.

LOVE.

THIS word, so expressive of thought, and so often used in conversation to convey the sentiment of the heart in natural and spiritual things, has come up in my mind with special inquiry. What is love, the effect of its power, and the influence it exercises over the mind of man, so as to control his action, his belief, his life and destiny here on earth? In thinking over this deep and mysterious subject, which seems almost undefinable in character, I thought I would write such views as present themselves to my mind at this time. The word "love" presents itself to my mind in two peculiar characters: the one natural, pertaining to things in this life; the other spiritual, pertaining to heavenly things. It may seem strange that I have made this distinction in defining the word "love" in two characters; yet to my mind experimental evidence proves the assertion which I have made, which I wish to show as I proceed with the subject; for it seems to me on these characters hangs the destiny of every subject of grace and every subject of wrath in this world and the world to come. Love in the abstract, proceeding from the mind of man, is natural, and subject to changes, as acted on by the various attractions presenting themselves before the carnal mind, and in substance is selfish, suspicious, jealous. If the attraction be a desire of the flesh, for self-gratification or worldly glory, or if it be religious zeal, the attraction is the same, selfish in character, although the intent of the heart may be pure according to human understanding. In substance we may liken natural love unto a hidden fire in the soul of man that burns unseen by mortal eye, invisible to natural vision, not having any tangible form; yet I understand it to be like unto a substance that speaks in signs, shadows and symbols by a language of its own, working through the creation of man. I may go farther and include the beasts of the field and fowls of the air; for wherever we find natural life wrapped in flesh and blood, we see the workings of that power called love. It may not be proper in this connection to apply the word love to the animal creation; the word instinct would seem more appropriate; yet in the animal creation their affection for their young, and their mating together as companions, show plainly they are moved by a power called love. For Scripture illustration, Jesus used the affectionate hen in a figure to show natural love, saying (Matt. xxiii. 37), "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." This illustration of the hen gathering her chickens under her wings to protect them from harm shows the affection of the fowls of the air. I have also noticed the birds of the forest, and the peculiar affection they have for their young, especially when disturbed by some venomous bird, or the rude hand of man. Their wailings are descriptive of the affection of a human being. More particularly have I noticed the faithful dog, his peculiar watchfulness for his master, and the love he seemed to manifest toward him, especially when separated from him; all the anxiety of a human being has seemed manifested by the dog, and nothing would seem to satisfy him but his master's presence. Many other instances of animal love could be cited to show their affection, and the wisdom of God in the creation of all things, controlled by a power the natural mind cannot comprehend. It is written, "God is love."—John iv. 8.

Upon this declaration of Scripture I wish to use in contrast the difference between natural love and spiritual love, or that love which passeth understanding, which is God manifest in the flesh. First, I will take up natural love, and give such views as present themselves to my mind as I understand them. Natural love I understand in substance to be like a fire hidden in the soul of man. I use this figure because it seems to represent in nature the qualities of natural love. In fire we have an element made up of material which our wise men have tried to explain; but to me it seems as much a mystery to define as love. We see it burning, and satisfying its appetite on the fuel within its reach. We feel the heat thereof, and that is about all we know, only it is fire, an element God has made for the use of man. In like figure love burns within the soul of man, desiring to satisfy the carnal appetite on the object of that love. To say that natural love is not selfish is not true. We know this by experience; and I might say that love is selfishness itself, and will never be satisfied until it fills the soul with the desires it longs for, satisfying the lusts of the flesh, basking in the smiles of its own gratification. I will now use a figure based upon the purest motives of natural love; for there is nothing in comparison more pure and more noble in man than the love he has for the virgin of his choice. This affection, to my mind, is the nearest to heavenly love for a man to possess on earth; for to my mind it was this love, when Eve transgressed in the garden of Eden the commandment of God, that drew

Adam into the transgression, preferring death rather than the separation from his bride. In this act of Adam we have a lively type of Christ and his bride, the church, in which is shown to my mind the shadow of spiritual love, reflected from the real substance, which is Christ, or God manifest in the flesh. Adam as an image could only reflect from the substance; for it is written that in the image of God he created man; therefore an image is only the shadow of the substance. The law as given by Moses was a shadow of good things to come, and by itself was a ministration of death, because man as an image could not fulfill the demands of the lawgiver. It required God manifest in the flesh to fulfill all its righteous requirements. Therefore Jesus, being the substance, could meet all of its fiery demands. Leaving the substance, I wish to notice natural or (I may say) national religion. The Jews as a nation represented national religion. Their rites and ceremonies were fixed by law, and were under tutors and governors, kings and priests, the same as all natural religion is to-day. Take the most populous organizations on the earth, and we have kings, emperors, popes and priests, laity and clergy, who make laws to govern religious devotion; and their subjects are required to obey and love the laws they have set up. There is no Christ or Jesus set up as the attraction to love; only the shadow of a Jesus is presented as the way of salvation; his name as written on paper, a picture or likeness having no life or substance; therefore the jealousies and divisions that arise, the hatred and envy they manifest one toward another. Like national Israel, their love for humanity's sake, as they profess, is shown by their zeal in persecuting and putting to death every rival that comes between them and their religion. No better example can be given than the life of Saul of Tarsus, who manifested that love, filled with zeal that was selfish, like all natural love, claiming to be very zealous for God, even as the world profess to be in this day in which we live; and I am sorry to say that even amongst Old Baptists, who profess to be followers of Jesus, the same kind of natural love, full of jealousies and selfishness, is manifest, that actuated Saul of Tarsus to persecute the followers of Jesus. They are great sticklers for the doctrine and order of the church, and profess that they love you; but the next day, if you differ with them on some point of doctrine that you may not see in the same light they do, the love they so much boasted of is turned into hatred and jealousy, and they become your bitter enemy. I understand all this is nothing more or less than natural love, as I have tried to show in this article; and to my mind that is the only kind of love that rules the religious world at the present time; the same love that Cain manifested when God had not respect to his offering. It is selfish, suspicious, jealous.

I now wish to speak of that love which has no selfishness nor hatred; that love which saves poor sinful man; that love of which the apostle speaks under the name of charity, in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away," &c.

In contemplating this love, which the apostle John describes as God (for God is love), our hearts become overwhelmed in wonder and admiration, and natural love passes out of sight, as a tale that is told. The atmosphere around that scene, the paradise of God, illuminates the heavens by the reflecting rays that shine forth in effulgent glory from the throne of God, bearing upon their wings the messages of love to the poor, lost, ruined sinners, speaking unto them with the lips of charity that God is love. What a change in the thoughts of the poor sinner! Before this he looked upon God with fear and trembling, expecting the vengeance of his wrath, which he so justly deserved; but now the scene is changed. Charity with all its lovely characters is presented to his view, and he begins to realize that God is love; that in his lovely character he is represented in Jesus, God manifest in the flesh, the perfection of charity. What a picture to behold! his long-suffering, his tender mercies and forbearance with the children of men. When he was reviled, he reviled not again; but in his pity and his love he redeemed them. No envy, no vaunting himself, no puffing up, not behaving himself unseemly, seeking not his own, not easily provoked, thinking no evil, rejoicing not in iniquity, but rejoicing in the truth. Was this that love that passeth understanding? Truly the poor sinner can say, Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Then God is love, the perfection of beauty. Around him hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men; the shield of love, that meets all the fiery darts of the enemy. In every time of trouble Jesus is the sinner's friend, his hope, his life, his joy, his song through the day, his comfort in the night, his sabbath day or rest.

Having sketched the beauties of spiritual love in contrast with natural love, each in its respective character, I now wish to notice each in an experimental way, as we experience them in this life. First, I have shown that natural love is selfish, suspicious, jealous. Second, I understand spiritual love to be just the reverse, amiable, lovable, pure and undefiled, like Jesus, the perfection of love, charity in all its fullness. Let us test this by personal experience. We all know what natural love is in the flesh, selfish, jealous, and easily excited if a rival comes between us and the object we love in the flesh, especially in the marriage relation. No explanation by mortal man is necessary to define the workings of that love. How different is spiritual love. We see one coming to the church, professing love for Jesus and the brethren and sisters. It may be a wife, a husband, the young and the old in every station of life. Does any jealousy arise in the hearts of all the lovers of Jesus because this one claims his love? No; they love this poor one because he loves Jesus. Such an one may be the wife of another man, or the husband of another woman, married or single, old or young. The station in life makes no difference. Not one thought of jealousy arises in the many hearts that love Jesus; but they love this one the more because he loves Jesus. All nature bows in humble submission to this love, and hearts swell with joy. How sweet the thought that in the realms of bliss all fleshly relations cease. No selfishness, no jealousy, no hatred, can dwell within that celestial abode. All there is love; and they worship the God of love.

I leave these thoughts with my brethren and sisters. The subject is one that will never be exhausted in this world or the world to come, for God is love. I witnessed a season of this love at the Baltimore Association, where I met brethren and sisters in the bonds of love. I hope as long as I live on this earth that brotherly love may continue, and that I may die in the fellowship of those that love Jesus, the Savior of sinners.

Brethren Beebe, after writing these thoughts I send them to you for inspection. If you see any food for lovers of God in what I have written you are at liberty to publish them; and if not, lay them aside.

Affectionately yours,

JOSEPH BRODERS.

ALEXANDRIA, Va.

WHITE CHURCH, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I have asked brother B. F. Coulter to let me copy his very precious letter and send it to our dear family paper to be printed; for to me it was grand and good, and there were others who wanted it printed. He has given his consent, and I am very glad, for there are some very precious thoughts contained in it. I do believe that all who have a true understanding of these things will agree with me.

I am too poor, ignorant and sinful to have my name put into that precious medium of correspondence, but I dearly love to see the names of my Father's children in that paper.

Yours in hope of life beyond this vale of tears,

MRS. W. M. HART.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 20, 1893.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER HART:—Since our delightful visit with you last summer I have desired to write to you; not with any assurance that I may edify or even comfort you, for you are both like Mary of the olden time, who did sit at the feet of Jesus and learn of him; but I want to write to you because I have a hope that away down in your hearts you have a spark of love for me, undeserving as I am of such. And also, I feel to hope that perhaps once in a while about your work your thoughts travel down this way; and whenever they do I am benefited by them. I am a firm believer in the communion of souls. What I mean is this: if the Lord directs the mind of one of the saints to flow out in love to a certain brother or sister, that one to whom the love goes out is softened and refreshed, without knowing the cause or source of such a change in his feelings. I believe, too, that all of the individual members of Christ's body are in a secret and mysterious way connected together, as an endless chain, and God's love is continually flowing through all the links; and so each one is imbued with the same precious love as all the rest. Then, as we travel along the pathway of this christian journey, one here and one there enters into our lives, and becomes identified with it in a sweet and mysterious way; just as you both entered into our lives last summer, and we in yours, and our lives were made the brighter for it. The meeting of brethren one with another is not a small matter, but it is a working together of all things for good. Some may want to tell us that the day of miracles is past; but to my mind the greatest miracle that has ever been performed by our gracious Redeemer is the one that brought me up out of the darkness and terrible depths of sin into his marvelous light, and gave me a precious hope that God had vouchsafed mercy unto me, a vile and wretched sinner. I think of the time when (like Jacob) I was lost in a waste howling wilderness, a companion of owls and of bats, with no hope, and without God in the world, a curse and a blight in the fair creation of God's handiwork; and then, while there, in my stained and sinful garments, in my sins,

(Continued on page 206.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JUNE 27, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

EVIL DETERMINED.

WHILE the pride of man claims to understand the purpose of God in appointing the existence of such productions of the earth as can be made subservient to the support and comfort of the human family, and under that delusion many suppose they are truly grateful for such temporal supplies, there are many of the products of the soil which are regarded by the wisdom of men as utterly useless, and even directly opposed to the welfare of mankind. As the consequence of the entrance of sin into our world, it is recorded that the Lord God said to Adam, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This is the first account of the existence of thorns. Nothing is recorded intimating that there ever would have been any such things in the world but for the transgression of the commandment which the Lord gave to his creature, the man whom he "formed of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." It is no part of the simplicity that is in Christ, when carnal ambition moves the saints to devise theories by which to reconcile to the judgment of reason the account of the works of God as given by divine authority. Such inventions may indeed have a "show of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh." But there is no true, spiritual advantage to the saints in anything which is attained through the efforts of the natural mind. Surely in those things which are taught in the schools of men the wise and prudent must have superior advantages over uneducated babes. Our Redeemer did not give thanks to his Father upon such a system. He rejoiced in consideration of the pleasure of God to reveal to babes the things which he had hid from the wise and prudent. In that revelation they are made to rejoice in the same will of God in every appointment of infinite wisdom, just as their

Lord has given the example. In the limited sight of reason it would have been much better that the ground should have produced nothing but those herbs and plants which yield nourishment for animal life. Consequently the production of thorns and thistles, even in the estimation of the natural mind of the saints, is regarded as something very deplorable. Of course, the effect of this view of the things which are seen is to cause regret, instead of thanksgiving to God. The Spirit of Christ alone can rejoice in the execution of the will of God, and it is only when led by that Spirit that the subjects of divine grace are able in truth to pray, as Jesus taught his disciples to do, saying, "Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." When governed by this real desire that the purpose of God shall stand, and that our will shall be conformed to what his hand and counsel has before determined to be done, then nothing can disturb the peace of God which dwells in our hearts. Knowing that our God works all things after the counsel of his own will, we may rest in perfect assurance that nothing can defeat his gracious design. It is not requisite for the enjoyment of this rest that those to whom it is given should be able to comprehend the purpose of God in the appointment either of what we call good, or what in our view is evil. When the Spirit of Christ leads us in meekness to confess his righteousness it is sufficient ground for thanksgiving to know that the will of God is done.

No grace is requisite to cause the natural heart to glow with carnal exultation when the desires of the flesh are gratified by the abundant fruits of the ground. Neither is there any thanksgiving to God when only the covetousness of self is satisfied. It is not an uncommon mistake for believers to suppose they are thankful to God, when their heart is only filled with selfish gladness. When led by the gracious Spirit of truth the saints do in reality "in everything give thanks." Even though they mourn the rebellion of their own hearts against their tribulations, and feel that they are utterly destitute of that spirit of thankfulness by which they desire to be governed, in that very mourning their God sees the thankfulness of perfect reconciliation to all his holy will. Indeed, no developments of time are needed for the guidance of the judgment of infinite wisdom; it is only for the manifestation of the graces of his Spirit in his saints that they are tried in the furnace of affliction. This trial of the faith of the followers of Jesus is but to show them their sure defense in his righteousness and unchanging faithfulness. So long as they feed beside the still waters in the full assurance of hope in Christ they have no personal knowledge of his power to command the stormy tempest, and deliver them out of the depths of tribulation. But when they have been brought low, so that refuge failed them, then they are qualified to bear personal testimony to the salvation of God. They might have been satisfied from the evidence of others that God is "a very present help in trouble;" but it is only "through much tribulation" that they "must enter into the kingdom of God," so as to be competent witnesses of this heavenly truth. In this tribulation they have need of the thorns and thistles which are brought forth by the cursed ground. In the bliss of feeding upon the pleasant fruit of love and confidence, there is no room for them to witness the goodness of the Lord to them that are in trouble. Only as they are beset by those severe sufferings which are well denominated "thorns and thistles," which result from the entrance of sin into the world, can they personally learn that new song which John heard in vision, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. v. 9, 10. The fact that the sovereign purpose of God appoints the very service which shall be rendered by every thorn encountered by his chosen people, affords them consolation in every distress through which they are called to pass in their weary pilgrimage of time. Were it not for this confidence in that God who cursed the ground for the sake of the sinner, how could the afflicted and poor people have hope in his salvation? But since there is not a thorn but that our God has created for the display of his own glory, it is certain that there shall not be a single pain or sorrow inflicted by one of these piercing thorns, but that it is for the praise of the glory of that grace which is treasured in Christ for the benefit of his chosen people. Not until he hath tried them shall they come forth as gold. But there is no trial without feeling the hiding of the face of our omnipotent Redeemer. So long as he is pleased to show his presence with them, his saints can encounter every trial without feeling it as a thorn; but when left to walk in darkness, every step is among such terrible thorns as seem to forbid the hope of deliverance. Reason can never understand how those who are thus tried can still have hope in the favor of that God who has chosen his saints in the furnace of affliction, and who has commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him. Yet those who receive the testimony of the Scriptures must confess that no power of iniquity can exist without the will of our God who "is in the heavens; he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased." Not even the cruel thorns have come into existence without the pleasure of our infinitely holy and gracious Creator.

When they are established in this vitally important principle of the doctrine of God, the saints are prepared to rest in the assurance that the combined wrath of men and devils can do nothing against the truth, but that all their rage must contribute to the accomplishment of the good which the Lord hath spoken concerning Israel. This very essential confirmation of the hope of the saints they could never receive in any other way but as the Lord causes the wrath of man to praise him, and restrains the remainder of wrath. Unbelief assails the faith of the tried saint with the suggestion that while the Lord has indeed given every herb and fruit of the ground for the food of man, the introduction of thorns and thistles has in some unaccountable manner placed an obstruction in the way of the blessing that was originally designed by the Lord for his creatures, and now there is no certainty of the enjoyment of divine favor unless the merit of the creature can overcome the evils which produce thorns, and cause better fruits to spring from the corrupt ground of their earthly nature. Under this delusion it is often the case that the bewildered saint is ready to sink in despair because he can perform no works of righteousness upon which to build a claim for acceptance in the sight of God. The cunning adversary deceives those who look away from the perfect righteousness of Christ Jesus, and causes them to forget that the curse of God forbids the production of anything but thorns and thistles from any earthly source. While from the ground God has ordained that in the sweat of his face man shall eat bread, in that very decree is positively included the sentence of death. It was not a mistake when death was associated with the violation of that law which was given to man in the garden. No interval of time separated the entrance of sin from the death which was justly incurred in the first transgression. That death is more than the mere return of the body to the ground from which it was taken. It includes the loss of all that constituted man a good creature in the sight of God; and from that entrance of sin into the world the wrath of God abideth on all who sinned in that transgression of Adam. For the sake of his people, who were chosen in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, the ground was cursed so that it might be suitable for the abode of man as a sinner. It is not to be supposed that the Creator was betrayed into a burst of ill temper by the disobedience of man, and in his rage pronounced the curse upon the ground. It is expressly declared that the curse was for the sake of the sinner, Adam. Without that curse there is no authority for the assumption that the material universe could have continued in existence. But the purpose of God must be accomplished in the salvation of the cho-en vessels of mercy. From the beginning God had determined that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. They were secure in the righteousness of Christ Jesus before they were lost in the sin of their earthly head. He did not come to keep them from being lost; but to save that which was already lost when he came to save his people from their sins. This work he finished.

In his last words of consolation to his disciples, Jesus gave them positive assurance that in the world they should have tribulation. For the fulfillment of this declaration they must encounter the thorns appointed for their affliction. This is not recorded as a deplorable and unavoidable necessity from which the love of God could not deliver them, but it is the gift of that love which chose them in Christ in the beginning. "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake."

When the sovereign will of God is recognized in the working of all things and in the accomplishment of his immutable purpose, there is sweet comfort to those who trust in his grace in the very privilege of suffering affliction with the people of God. Surely they may find cause for rejoicing that they are counted worthy to be partakers of the fellowship of the sufferings of their victorious Redeemer. There is divine glory in the significance of that crown of thorns which was worn by our suffering Lord. In its piercing tortures are included all the sore distresses of his chosen ones in their whole pilgrimage through this sin-cursed world. It can never be understood by finite intelligence why he must suffer such humiliation and shame; but the word of his grace clearly declares that it was by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God that he was subjected to death. The cruel thorns which crowned his brow were fit symbols of the sins of his people which were laid on him. But while they are dreadful as accursed thorns to pierce his sacred head, they constitute that crown of matchless victory with which he is glorified by the omnipotence of his triumph over death and sin. Well may his people look on him whom they have pierced, and mourn for him, and be in bitterness for him. But instead of deserved wrath and divine vengeance, they receive from his agonizing death groans the unspeakable gift of everlasting salvation as he prays, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do!" Thus did our dying Lord exceed all the wonders of his own miraculous works in the days of his flesh, as he made the crown of thorns infinitely more glorious than all the diadems which ever crowned the monarchs of this world, and caused its radiance to exceed the dazzling brilliance of created suns. Every pang inflicted upon him by the sinful thorns of our iniquities bears the fragrance of rapturous joy to those whose sins he bore. Then well may Paul entreat the saints to reconciliation under the trials of their earthly conflicts, saying, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."—2 Cor. v. 20, 21.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

WITH our first number for March we discontinued the notice headed "Until March," with a view to withdrawing our extraordinary offer to old subscribers as an inducement for them to procure new subscribers: but we have received a number of letters from very efficient brethren complaining that the time has been so short, and the weather so inclement, that they have not had an opportunity to get out among the brethren and friends as they would like to do, and requesting us for an extension of the time. We will therefore, until further notice, continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Chemung Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Cammal, Lycoming Co., Pa., June 13th, 14th and 15th, 1894, sendeth christian salutation and fellowship to the churches of which she is composed.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Through the tender mercies of our God and King we are preserved another year to meet and greet each other as that peculiar people of his, who are sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Jesus Christ, and called. We will call your attention in this our Circular Letter to that portion of the Scriptures recorded in 1 Cor. xv. 58. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

This expression is inseparably connected with the verse preceding it, as well as with the whole epistle. In verse fifty-seven the apostle gives thanks to God for the victory of the saints through our Lord Jesus Christ; and as there is no other victory for the saints anywhere recorded in all the Scriptures, he thus admonishes them to steadfastness, &c. And as it is as evidently true to-day as at any other period of time that the saints are being led astray from the simplicity of the gospel of Christ to another gospel, we feel this admonition to be just as binding on us as it was upon the saints when spoken by the apostle. Any departure from the rule given by the great Head of the church to govern them as the flock bought with his precious blood, is condemned by him as their King. The only safety of literal Israel and their prosperity consisted in their walking according to the law of the Lord. Nothing can be substituted in any way devised by man, however harmless and fair it may appear to men, that will be approved by the King that reigns in righteousness. Truly that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God. Therefore let us beware of departing from the Lord, the fountain of living waters, either in doctrine or practice, but be steadfast, unmovable, abounding in the work of the Lord. To be steadfast in the faith and practice of the gospel is not the fruit of carnal resolutions on the part of the child of God, but the fruit of the working in them of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead; in other words, the fruit of the Spirit. Indeed there is a suffering awhile before any such steadfastness can be found. Creature efforts or legal services have never produced it. It cannot be found or taught in the schools of men, but is entirely produced by grace freely given them as heirs of the grace of life.

"Unmovable." Not carried about by every wind of doctrine; not fearful to declare the pure doctrine of the gospel; and because it is unpopular in the world, let us never be ashamed or fearful to cry, as did the prophet, that all flesh and all fleshly systems are as the grass, perishable. Neither let us be found attempting to build human bulwarks to shield the character of Almighty God lest he be proved the author of sin, &c. We will in short say that we have rest in no other system or doctrine but the unlimited and immutable predestination of God, who declares that he has made all things for himself, and that without him was not anything made that was made. We would not, we dare not, limit the holy One in any of his works; and if the being unmovable regarding this doctrine of God our Savior shall reduce our number down to the standard of Gideon's army, even so let it be; for God is not mocked or deceived by his creatures.

Dear brethren, be unmovable. Be not conformed to the worldly doctrines of men, though your names be cast out as evil for the Son of man's sake; and having done all, stand fast.

"Always abounding in the work of the Lord." Not abound in the work of the Lord this day, and tomorrow abound in your own works; for of your works you are ashamed. But "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord, and thy saints shall bless thee." Truly all the works of the Lord are righteous altogether. There can be nothing added to them; there can be nothing taken from them. The believing on his name is the work of God, and not of the creature; for true belief is the product and working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead. So, dear brethren, may it be our lot by grace to thus abound in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our labor is not in vain in him. The great distinguishing mark of difference with the Lord's people and carnal professors is this, that the latter claim salvation for their work, while the former humbly believe that their works flow from salvation already received. The poor ministers of Christ who labor in word and doctrine among the saints are not to make their eternal salvation more secure, but by their labor to confirm the souls of Christ's disciples, comforting them with the same comfort wherewith they themselves are comforted of God.

May the Lord ever give grace to us that we may labor to warn the unruly, comfort the feeble minded, support the weak, and thus strengthen the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees; and may peace, love, holy concord and fellowship abound among us, for his name's sake. Amen.

D. M. VAIL, Mod.
J. C. BEARD, JR., Clerk.

(Continued from page 203.)

Jesus found me, and by the shedding of his precious life-blood removed mine iniquity far from me, to be remembered no more against me forever, clothing me with the robe of his perfect righteousness, and at the same time giving me "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness;" and, most wonderful of all, he did all those things because he loved me. Where I deserved his wrath, he gave me his love, and his just indignation was spent upon my adversaries. He has conquered all my enemies, and set me free. I love to meet brethren as I met you both last summer, standing, as you both do, on the broad and firm foundation of the Rock, Christ Jesus, and him crucified, turning neither to the right nor to the left, manifesting the beauty of holiness, loving and caring for God's people, and resting sweetly in the love of the Father. Brother and sister Bogardus are now with us, and we have had a very precious visit from and with them, although our visit has been marred by the death of our beloved brother, Edward Walton. Inscrutable indeed are the ways of providence, and truly we can say with the apostle, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out." When we pass through deep waters, and all seems dark and discouraging about us, we dare not ask the reason why; for,

"Deep in unfathomable mines
Of never-failing skill
He treasures up his bright designs,
And works his sovereign will."

If we can read in a past experience that all the way he has led us has been the right way, ought we not fully and implicitly trust him for all the future?

But O how full of doubts and fears am I! How I long to be assured of my acceptance in the Beloved! I love the church, and I love the brethren. "There my best friends, my kindred, dwell."

But how mean I feel, and how unworthy I know I am in the holy city. To be there is alone my heart's sincere desire.

We will be glad to read a letter from your hand. Your brother in a precious hope,

B. F. COULTER.

STATE ROAD, Del., June, 1894.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—I do not think I would willingly present sentiments that are unsound or unscriptural, or that would not be worth reading and considering; but it sometimes occurs that my understanding of some paragraph of Scripture is not in accord with the generally accepted interpretation. I presume no one would willingly indulge an error, and if in the wrong would willingly be set right.

I will offer your readers such views as I have at command on a paragraph in the prophecy of Zechariah. It runs mainly through the third chapter, but the more prominent points are embraced in the first and second verses. I have heard this alluded to sometimes, and occasionally used as a text, "And he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him." It is quite natural and proper for gospel preachers to find a type of Christ wherever they can, and find some of the beauties of his character portrayed in the missions that sometimes have been committed to men. The original Joshua has been, I think, uniformly considered a striking type of the Redeemer. It does not follow that this Joshua was such a type. It seems to have been a common name among the Jews, but only one Joshua led Israel into Canaan. This Joshua was the high priest of the Jews at this time, and the captive Jews had very recently returned from their long captivity among idolaters to their own native Palestine; but they were not yet cleansed from their defilement. Prophets were sent among them to instruct, to warn and admonish them, because it now became them to cleanse themselves from all the defilement that they had contracted among the heathen. The angel or Spirit of the Lord, showing to the prophet the defiled condition of Israel, is called by the apostle Jude the Archangel, and gives him the name of Michael, the signification of which is, "Who is like God." The prophet Daniel is informed that he is the great Prince that standeth for the children of his people. It seems to me that his name and the various things that are said of him will apply to none other than Christ himself, or that Spirit of the Lord God that was upon Christ. The Jewish high priest was their representative, and his costly and magnificent garments were emblematic of his holy and sacred office. He must be undefiled himself, and the people must be ceremonially clean and pure, else he had no right to officiate, or even to wear the priestly garments. He bore their names, and of course would be responsible for their defilements. So the prophet was instructed to show them how the garments of their high priest were defiled and polluted, and thus admonish them, in a forcible illustration, of the necessity of a thorough cleansing from all idolatrous practices. It will not do to understand Christ spoken of as being clothed with filthy garments. Even in his incarnation he is seen with raiment as white as the light. Although he was made an offering for sin, yet he was declared to be holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners, and, in regard to his purity and holiness, higher than the heavens. The things set forth in this chapter will all apply to spiritual Israel in gospel times, as almost everything else did appertain-ing to that typical people. The people of Israel were addressed and admonished in the person of their high priest. With a mighty hand the Lord had ended their captivity. The resistance of Satan is that which men have encountered from the earliest times when called upon to come out from the world and be separate. He is that spirit which works in the children of disobedience, and is the cause and instigator of all neglect of duty and disobedience on the part of the Lord's people. We need not expect Satan to give much heed to the rebuke, "The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan; even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?" The rightful claim which the Lord had upon them, having redeemed them, we need not expect Satan to heed or regard; but they will hear it and heed it; and with the sense of obligation and the spirit of obedience in their hearts they will rise above all the temptations, and clothed with the garments of salvation, Satan will be rebuked and bruised under their feet.

The people of Israel had been delivered from a cruel oppression and long captivity as from a burning and consuming fire; and so the spiritual people of God are delivered from bondage under the law, where they are held fast in a lawful captivity, and where they would have been consumed; but the Lord has entered into the fire himself, and plucked them as brands from the burning, and now he claims them as his own. He has found a ransom. It will be seen readily enough that it is Israel, and not Christ, that has been plucked out of the fire. It is Israel, and not Christ, that must be clothed with change of raiment. This angel or Spirit of the Lord says unto Joshua, "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." Joshua stood before or in the presence of this angel of the covenant, and is the subject of these instructions and admonitions. There are others besides Joshua receiving instructions. Like in the case of the prodigal, the Father has servants. Joshua is not directed to either take off the defiled garments or put on the change. He is admonished in regard to it, the temptations and accusations of the enemy silenced, and the servants directed to clothe him with change of raiment. The Jewish priests were never required to put the priestly robes upon themselves. They were put upon them by those having authority so to act. All these things were done by divine direction. The priestly robes never made a priest, neither did they impart any qualifications. The man must be a priest before, and receive and wear the sacred garments as representing the high and sacred office, and the qualifications that he at least ought to possess. Israel must all be clothed with linen clean and white, but it was not to make them Israel; and Israel did not differ from other nations, only as the subjects of what the Lord had done for them. If they had been cleansed from their idolatrous practices, and purified in the furnace of trial, and God was now known to them as the object of worship, their garments should henceforth be clean and white.

"And the angel of the Lord protested unto Joshua, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts; If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou shalt also judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts," &c. This is of the character of the messages to the seven churches in Asia: the promises connected with keeping the word of his patience, and also warnings in regard to tolerating disorders, or giving countenance to those false teachers who, like Balaam or Jezebel, would corrupt their worship; and, if not checked, would ultimately destroy their standing. The Spirit of the Lord still has those that stand before him, ministers of his that do his pleasure, and hearken to the voice of his word, who are directed and instructed, as in the case of Lazarus, to loose him from the fetters and defilement of grave-clothes, and clothe him with change of raiment. These returned captives might be too feeble to withstand all the fiery darts and temptations of the enemy; hence servants are provided to set the fair mitre upon their heads, and clothe them with such garments as become their salvation. This angel or Spirit of the Lord has never left his post; and these things, though written aforetime, were written for our learning. From the first call to a ravenous bird from the east country to let go the Lord's captives, till Israel is found in the holy mount at Jerusalem, the angel of the Lord stands by.

In gospel bonds,
E. RITTENHOUSE.

INQUIRIES AFTER TRUTH.

WILL brother H. M. Curry please give his views on the ten virgins? What do the five foolish represent? Oblige one who desires to know the truth.

E. I. NEEDHAM.

ORDINATIONS.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By request of the church I send you the following for publication:

We have had our regular yearly meeting. The church at her last meeting called for a council for the purpose of ordaining two of our brethren to the ministry of the gospel, namely, JOSEPH SMITH and LAFAYETTE CHADDOCK.

Elder W. A. Thompson, of Sandy Creek Church, Putnam Co., Ill., Elder Thomas Davy, of Providence Church, Stephenson Co., Ill., and Elder Benjamin Sallee, our pastor, proceeded to the ordination of the above named brethren according to the usual manner of the Primitive Baptists.

Chose Elder Thomas Davy Moderator, and Elder Benjamin Sallee Clerk. Prayer by Elder Davy, with laying on of hands; after which the council and church gave the brethren the right hand of fellowship.

Much good feeling was manifest. The charge to the brethren was delivered by Elder Thompson.

Peace, love and union seemed to prevail during our entire meeting.

WARREN, Ill., June 18, 1894.

MARRIAGES.

At the residence of the bride's parents, on June 13th, 1894, by Elder G. N. Tusing. Mr. Calvin M. May and Miss Etha F. Newton, all of Pickaway Co., Ohio.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Frances Aurora Brome, daughter of Captain Thomas Denton and Elizabeth Canfield, was born in the town of Wallkill, Orange Co., N. Y., June 19th, 1830. Shortly afterward her parents moved near Wurtsboro, Sullivan Co., N. Y., where she grew to womanhood. She taught school for several terms in that locality, and then entered the State Normal School at Albany, N. Y., and was graduated therefrom July 14th, 1853. After graduation she received an appointment as teacher in the Eighty-Fourth Street Grammar School, New York, and enjoyed a highly successful experience in the duties of her position for several years. She was married to Thomas M. Brome, by Elder Gilbert Beebe, Sept. 21st, 1859, and since her marriage has resided in various places in Orange Co., for the past fifteen years near Denton. Her death occurred suddenly on May 31st, 1894, from heart disease. The funeral was held June 4th, 1894, with interment at New Vernon. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins. She leaves a husband, one son and two daughters, also a brother, Abram C. Denton, and a sister, Mrs. Mary J. Dorman.

A woman of gentle qualities, she won and held the respect and esteem of all in the neighborhood where she lived, and in the circles in which she moved. In the home this sudden blow of death is felt especially severe. A loving wife, a kind and indulgent mother, has gone. Her memory is entwined round our hearts to stay always.

DENTON E. BROME.

DIED—In Woburn, Mass., April 7th, 1894, Rebecca P. Flagg, wife of brother B. F. Flagg.

She had been one of the Board of Managers of the Home for Aged Women since its formation, and the Chairman of the Purchasing Committee until a few weeks ago, when she was chosen to fill the place on the Executive Board of one who had recently died. The interests of the Home were very dear to her heart. She formed a strong attachment to the old ladies, which was warmly reciprocated on their part; and it was her delight to visit them, and take to them some of the products of the farm or other luxuries, and her team was always ready to take her to the Home with some of these. She was suddenly stricken with apoplexy, and in two hours she had gone to be with him who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." She was conscious only about twenty minutes, and her last intelligible words were, "Savior, dear Savior, take me home to thee." When only seventeen years old she became a member of the Baptist Church, and continued faithful to it to the end of life. She lived the life of a humble child of God from day to day. She felt her unworthiness to be called a child of God, and her evidence of her adoption into his family was not as clear and bright as many have and as she desired; still her love to God was manifested in her love to his cause, his people, and his kingdom. In writing to her most intimate friend some years ago she said, "I know that if I have a little light given me by the Savior it will never go out, but will light me through the darkest path that I have to travel, though it be the valley of the shadow of death;" and the words she then uttered have proved true. Few will be missed as much as she. Her life was one of tireless industry for others. The poor and needy in her found a warm hearted friend; the sick and afflicted a sympathizer and helper. She was one who followed the injunction, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

"None knew her but to love her, None named her but to praise."

She was a devoted and loving wife, a kind and indulgent mother, and a dear, true, life-long friend. Words cannot express the loss we feel; but we know that our loss is her eternal gain, and that she is now among that blessed company who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, and with them is singing the song of Moses and the Lamb around the throne of God in heaven.

MARY C. STEARNS.

My dear husband, Dickson Weaver, fell asleep in Jesus, as I hope, on Jan. 16th, 1894.

He was born in Shelby Co., Tenn., near Shelbyville, in the year 1813, and was 81 years of age, lacking 1 month and 4 days. He was the son of Wm. Weaver. His mother's maiden name was Austin. He was married to Miss Eleanor Deason in 1835. To this union were born thirteen children, of whom there are but three living, together with myself, the church, and many other relatives and friends, to mourn the loss of a husband, father and brother in the church militant; but we mourn not as those without hope, for we believe that our loss is his eternal gain. He was a very consistent member of the Old School Baptists, believing in the predestination of all things and salvation by grace. He was always ready to help bear church expenses, and always willing to help those who were needy.

I write this that his friends and relatives in the old states may know that he has passed away. His disease was of the heart, and paralysis of the throat and lungs. He became so that he could not speak above a whisper. All was done for him that the doctor, myself, our children and kind neighbors could do.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me, that I may be reconciled to God's will, knowing that he doeth all things well.
PALESTINE WEAVER.

CORBET, Texas, June 13, 1894.

OUR beloved sister, Eveline Atterberry, wife of Deacon G. R. P. Atterberry, was born in Callaway Co., Mo., August 7th, 1834, and departed this life May 21st, 1894.

She was the daughter of Isaac and Cordelia Agee, and with her parents moved into De Kalb Co., Mo., in 1838. She was married to G. R. P. Atterberry in 1851, and in the year following with her parents and husband emigrated to Oregon. She professed a hope in the finished work of Jesus, and united with the Regular Predestinarian Baptist Church called Oak Creek, in Douglas Co., Oregon, in 1866, and was baptized by Elder W. S. Matthews. She was a bright and comforting light in the church, and if possible was more beautiful in her immediate home and family circle. The image of Jesus was truly manifested in her life, and in her long and protracted illness. I visited her several times during her long and patient suffering of more than eighteen months with consumption, and as the body grew weaker her faith grew stronger. It was a comfort to be in her presence, for we could see the bright manifestations of God with her, and the unbidden tears would fill our eyes in sympathy with her in her suffering. We could rejoice with her, and feel that we were in the presence of God. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" The sting of death is sin; but the law of the Spirit of life had made her free from the law of sin and death. This was her hope; not only by profession, but it was in her and did abound, so that she was neither barren nor unfruitful. All that could be done by kind and loving daughters and her husband and kind friends was done for her to ease her sufferings and to save her to them; but the skill of physicians, with the best and kindest nursing, could not prolong her life, for the dear sister had lived out her appointed time. She sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, and after proper time was laid in her grave in the Oak Creek grave-yard, after the writer had spoken words of comfort to the sorrowing relatives and the many kind friends who contributed their presence at the grave. The dear sister leaves a sorrowing husband, three daughters, four sons, with many brethren, sisters and friends, who mourn their loss; but they mourn not as those without hope.

J. P. ALLISON.

LOOKING GLASS, Ore., June 10, 1894.

SISTER Mary A. Gedney departed this life May 28th, 1894, in the 73d year of her age.

She was a faithful and loved member of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, in the city of New York, becoming identified with that church in the year 1858, at the time that it and the Mount Zion Church consolidated. Sister Gedney was one in whom the precious fruit of the Spirit, gentleness and love, manifested itself most clearly, contributing to the comfort of her kindred in Christ. She was baptized by Elder James C. Goble, in March, 1854. Shortly before her death, on being asked as to the condition of her mind, she replied, "At times I am in the dark; but the Lord has appeared, and his grace will sustain me if it is his will to call me hence." This God-given assurance was fully realized later on, and her last moments were most peaceful. She fell asleep with the word "Come" upon her lips.

Funeral services were held at her late residence in the city of Brooklyn on the evening of May 30th.

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne."

Mary E. Davis, daughter of Absalom and Catherine Peters, was born in Prairie Township, Franklin Co., Ohio, August 24th, 1853, and died Feb. 17th, 1894, aged 41 years, 6 months and 7 days.

She was united in marriage to Jesse V. Davis, April 2d, 1871, and the sacredness of that union is beautifully exemplified to us all in the sweet characteristics which have been instilled in the children, who so sadly mourn to-day. If in the judgment of some she seemed to err, it was only from an affliction that might come upon the strongest of us. With this she suffered and battled many weary years, and amid it all love lived on. We saw her during the months when God gave her hope that the hand of affliction, which had been so heavily laid upon her, might be finally removed, shedding forth that sweet and gentle influence, for the good of her own loved ones, and for the betterment of the condition of those around her.

She was baptized in the faith of the Predestinarian Baptist Church on April 22d, 1883, when she witnessed a good confession; and during the ten years of her christian life with that church she found great joy in the promises of God to those who believe, and often spoke of her sad affliction as being a wise dispensation of divine wisdom. She prayed daily for strength to make her a patient sufferer, so that she carried with her the evidence that the apostle expressed when he said, "It is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." She took great comfort in the divine lessons which teach us that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us.

ALSO,

Rebecca Sherrick died May 20th, 1894, aged 87 years, 2 months and 25 days.

She was the mother of eight children, six of whom are living, three daughters and three sons. She had twenty-five grandchildren, nineteen of whom are living; and twenty-eight great-grandchildren, twenty-three of whom are living. She united with the Sugar Creek Church, Putnam Co., Ohio, by letter from Rocky Fork Church, Marion Co., Ohio.

J. G. FORD.

RUSHMORE, Ohio.

DIED—Of diphtheria, Lida H. Richardson, at our home near Parsonsburg, Md., May 6th, 1894, in the 21st year of her age.

Her death was sudden, being sick only four days. She was not a member of the Old School Baptists, but was at the last meeting at Forest Grove, just four weeks before her death. Her suffering was as great as a mortal could bear. She would often say, "I have got to die, but I am not afraid to die."

Dr. G. W. Truitt, our family doctor, attended her, and did all he could, but she grew worse. Dr. Slemmons, of Salisbury, was sent for, but too late, she being dead before he reached here. Her last words were, "Mother, I am choking to death. Lord, have mercy."

She was buried in our family lot at Forest Grove on Monday, the 7th, beside her father and brother. She leaves a mother and step-father, three sisters and a half-brother, besides a number of other relatives and friends, to mourn their loss; but we believe our loss to be her eternal gain. May the Lord comfort those who mourn.

"Dearest Lida, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

Your unworthy brother,

D. J. PERDUE.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days meeting at Hughesville, Va., will commence on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

We invite all who feel an interest to attend, especially our brethren, and more especially our ministers. Get tickets in Washington or Alexandria for Hamilton, on the Washington & Ohio R. R. The p. m. train on Thursday and the a. m. train on Friday will be met at Hamilton.

E. V. WHITE.

THERE will be a three days meeting held at the Davis school-house, beginning on Friday before the fourth Sunday in July, 1894.

We would like to see as many Baptists as feel like visiting us come and join with us in singing and offering prayer and supplication to the Lord of lords and King of kings.

This meeting will be held fifteen miles east of Purcell, Ind. Ter., and nine miles south of Burnett, near the head of Pan Creek, in Cleveland Co., Oklahoma.

A. J. GILBREATH.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Clovesville Old School Baptist Church, of the Lexington Association, on the first Saturday and Sunday in July, 1894.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth, and especially brethren in the ministry. Trains will be met at Fleischmanns station.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has attained its wide national circulation we have been importuned by our subscribers, as well as by those who have had no special interest in sustaining the publication, to open our columns to advertisements; but never having had any experience in that line of business we have hesitated to make the venture. Since the commencement of this volume, however, there has been a combination of circumstances that has encouraged us to make the experiment, and we therefore make the following announcement, viz.:

We will receive for the last page of the paper suitable and reliable advertisements at the following net rates, viz.:

Inches	1 week	4 weeks	13 weeks	26 weeks	52 weeks
1	$.95	$ 3.60	$ 8.50	$ 13.00	$ 22.50
2	1.90	7.20	17.00	24.00	45.00
3	2.85	10.80	24.00	36.00	67.50
4	3.80	14.40	31.00	48.00	90.00
5	4.75	18.00	38.00	56.00	105.00
6	5.70	21.60	45.00	64.00	120.00
7	6.65	25.20	52.00	72.00	135.00
8	7.60	28.80	59.00	80.00	150.00

No advertisements will be received for this paper unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM. 7. POULTRY.
2. BEE KEEPING. 8. MEDICINAL.
3. THE HORSE. 9. HOUSEHOLD.
4. CATTLE. 10. DOMESTIC PETS.
5. SHEEP. 11. LEGAL POINTS.
6. SWINE. 12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid. G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, N. Y.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strengthening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plates $

t-paid.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits, of distinguished men, views of our principle cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid. G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume, ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

DRIVING LAMPS—A NUISANCE.
Smoke, smell and go out USUALLY, BUT—NOT IF YOU BUY THE "DIETZ."
SEND FOR BOOK (FREE).
R. E. Dietz Company, New York.

THE STAR
COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT
AND ANTI-RATTLER.
Fast selling; always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price, $1.50. State rights for sale.
THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

FARMING CORPORATIONS.
A System of Business-like Co-operative Farming. Send for circulars to W. ALDRICH & Co., 120 Broadway, N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$.05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1.00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON
SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,
Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send
A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 4, 1894.

NO. 27.

POETRY.

TRUST IN GOD.

O THOU eternal Sun, let grace divine
Shine in this dark, benighted heart of mine;
Order my footsteps by thy holy word,
Till I go hence and be with thee, my God.
The world, the flesh and Satan all unite
To rend my soul from thee, my chief delight;
But thy good word of promise is my stay,
Thy grace sufficient in the trying day.
Then let the mystic floods to mountains rise;
Jehovah rides upon the stormy skies
To quell their rage, and calm the rising fears
Of pilgrims passing through this vale of tears.
O let this be my comfort, let me know
That God will do his pleasure here below;
All things together working for their good
Who are the called according to his word.
Then let my soul in Zion safely dwell,
Nor fear the raging power of earth and hell;
Jehovah's arm is strong, he will defend
His children, whom he loves unto the end.

MY VESPER SONG.

FILL'D with weariness and pain,
Scarcely strong enough to pray,
In this twilight hour I sit,
Sit and sing my doubt away.
O'er my broken purposes,
Ere the coming shadows roll,
Let me build a bridge of song,
"Jesus, lover of my soul."
"Let me to thy bosom fly"—
How the words my thoughts repeat!
To thy bosom, Lord, I come,
Though unfit to kiss thy feet.
Once I gathered sheaves for thee,
Dreaming I could hold them fast;
Now I can but idly sing,
"O receive my soul at last!"
I am weary of my fears,
Like a child when night comes on;
In the shadow, Lord, I sing,
"Leave, O leave me not alone!"
Through the tears I still must shed,
Through the evil yet to be,
Though I falter while I sing,
"Still support and comfort me."
"All my trust on thee is stayed"
Does the rhythm of the song,
Softly falling on my heart,
Make its pulses firm and strong?
Or is this thy perfect peace,
Now descending while I sing,
That my soul may sleep to-night
"Neath the shadow of thy wing?"
"Thou of life the fountain art"—
If I slumber on thy breast,
If I sing myself to sleep,
Sleep and death alike are rest!
Through the shadows overpast,
Through the shadows yet to be,
Let the ladder of my song
"Rise to all eternity."
Note by note its silver bars
May my soul in love ascend,
Till I reach the highest round
In thy kingdom without end.
Not impatiently I sing,
Though I lift my hands and cry,
"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly!"

CORRESPONDENCE.

CLOSE COMMUNION.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—By way of a letter from sister Ella Raymond I learn that brother John Curtis, of Maine, desires that I should write upon the above named subject for the SIGNS. He is not troubled in his own mind with regard to it, but hopes that it may prove of satisfaction to others. I feel willing to do my best to comply with our aged brother's request, and all the more so because I know that this theme has been a cause of perplexity to many of the Lord's dear children. I have myself often been called upon to give a reason for my faith and practice in this matter, by those who really desired to know and do the truth. I will try in this letter to present the matter as it appears to me, and has appeared to me for a long time.

1st. I wish to say that I object to the term "close communion."

My objection is that the outward rite of the supper is not the communion, but only the symbolical expression of it. The communion must be within, in the heart. The root of the original Welsh word signifies oneness, identity. Only they who are one, therefore, can really commune. In this view of the word and act of communion there can be no open communion. It must of necessity be restricted to those who are one. Believers are one in Christ, and they commune together because they are one; and into this communion no unbeliever can by any possibility enter. Christians themselves cannot bridge over this gulf. Only the grace of God, which has power to quicken the dead, can put aliens among the children, and so introduce them into this true, heartfelt, spiritual communion with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity; and so I object to applying the term "communion" to the outward form of the supper, to which even a totally graceless man might gain admittance. But passing this by, and taking the term "close communion" as men mean by it, let us consider why any restrictions are thrown around this ordinance, and why any one should be excluded from it.

2d. If the supper be the outward sign of the real communion, then it certainly seems manifest that the sign should not extend beyond the reality. In other words, where there is no oneness in faith, in hope, in love, it would be mockery to sit down together at the supper. Thus the words "close" or "open" should not be used of the supper, any more than they should of that of which the supper is the sign, viz., the true, heartfelt communion. The bread and wine represent to those who partake the body and blood of Jesus. Only those, therefore, who have by faith eaten his body and drank his blood have any right to the bread and wine. For others to partake of the bread and wine is to act a lie; and for christians to ask others to partake with them is to participate in that falsehood.

3d. But leaving these general thoughts, the question returns, "Why do you, as Old School Baptists, not invite christians of other denominations to the supper when you partake of it? Why do you practice what we call close communion?" "It seems," they say to us, "selfish and bigoted. You say by it that you are holier than we." These and other things are often said about our practice in this matter; and in many instances these objections are the honest expressions of what seems true to those who utter them. I reply that if we are but following the rule of our divine Master no one has any right to call us selfish and bigoted; and I know that if our own feelings and inclinations were to guide us we should only be too glad to gain the good will of every one by holding out the hand of fellowship to all. This would only be human nature. Naturally we desire the good will and applause of our fellow-men as much as any others. Our rule is not to strive to win human applause on the one hand, nor to be selfish or bigoted on the other hand, but to seek to know and do the will of God; and the charge of selfishness and bigotry comes with a bad grace from religionists of any sect. I do not know of a sect of religionists on earth but what practices close communion. No one allows men to come to the Lord's supper indiscriminately. All denominations of professed christians throw some restrictions around the Lord's supper. Most of them require what they call baptism as a prerequisite to coming to the table of the Lord. Why then condemn us for walking according to their own rule? If we are to be condemned because we insist that the supper is not for all men indiscriminately, the same rule would be equally to the condemnation of most other sects or denominations.

4th. But I am aware that this is not answering the question why we do not invite all professed followers of Christ to the supper. This that has been said I design only to clear the road by showing that others have no right to hurl anathemas at us, since they are guilty of the same thing (if guilt indeed there be). Leaving all others out, the question is, Why do we practice close communion? I will say in answer, first, that if anything be plain in the Bible, it is plain that none but the baptized believer ever was bidden to the Lord's table. In the original institution of this ordinance only the disciples of Jesus were present, or were invited to be present. It is not recorded that any proclamation went out from either the Savior or his apostles bidding all who would like to be christians, or who would like to go to heaven when they should die, to be present at the first. It seems not to have entered the mind of the Savior nor the minds of his disciples that anything else but the closes and ~~close~~ communion was to be practiced upon that solemn occasion, which was the first and the pattern for all that should follow; and the injunction of the blessed Lord, "As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me," contains no intimation that any but his own people had any right to this ordinance or any part in the matter. Also, all that is said in the Acts and in the epistles about it contains not the slightest intimation that it was ever to be administered outside of the churches. It is manifest, if this be true, that persons not in the church were not bidden to partake with the church. It seems hardly needful to pause long here. That it is an ordinance which Jesus gave to his church and for his church, seems to be so near a self-evident fact that argument is well-nigh useless. If God has given to his church on earth any privilege whatever peculiar to themselves, if he has imposed any obligation whatever upon his people more than upon any other people, it is surely true that the supper is such a privilege and such an obligation.

5th. Baptism is the recognized door of entrance into the visible, militant, organized church here on earth. This I will not pause to argue, for this is admitted by all; and I might sum the argument all up right here and say that in requiring all who come to the Lord's supper to be baptized, we are requiring only what all admit to be necessary, or at least nearly all. I do not know of any religious denomination, that pretends to pay any attention whatever to good order and consistency, but what regards baptism as a prerequisite to any right to partake of the supper. Baptism is one of the things which we also regard as requisite to the other ordinance. Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, and all who sprinkle or pour for baptism, have not been baptized, and are therefore barred out from the supper. If it be admitted at all that baptism must precede the supper, then we are only insisting upon the same thing; and others therefore have no right to call us selfish, uncharitable, and other hard names, on account of it.

6th. But while I might rest the matter here with showing that no one who makes baptism at all a prerequisite to the supper has any right to censure us for doing likewise, yet I feel like briefly stating the reason why it seems to us that in all cases baptism should precede the right to come to the supper. Briefly stated it is this. Life must precede action. Life must precede eating and growing, which are actions. This I need only state for it to be seen and admitted. So spiritual life must precede the eating of the bread of the kingdom. In baptism one of the things set forth is the fact that we have become dead to the former state, and are now raised to a new life unto God. Baptism properly sets this forth. It represents symbolically the body and blood of Jesus, which we hunger for, and by which we grow and thrive. Therefore as the new life must precede the power to eat the true bread of heaven, so the symbol of baptism must precede the symbol of eating. Does not this seem plain and clear? Surely if there is to be any harmony between the order of the symbols and the order of the things which are symbolized, baptism must always come before the supper.

7th. But the failure to come in by the ordinance of baptism is not the only thing which would forbid every one from coming to the supper. If the supper be anything more than a mockery, an empty form to those who come to the table of the Lord, there must be a oneness of heart and mind, of experience and doctrine. I will state the matter in this way. If a brother, a member of one of our churches, should become an Arminian in his sentiments, and should persist in them, and also persist in publishing them, we should of necessity be driven, after proper labor to reclaim him, to exclude him from our fellowship, and from all the rights and privileges which he formerly held in the church. He must be dealt with as it is commanded us in the Scriptures to deal with a heretic. Now, as there might be absolutely nothing against his moral character, and his manner of life among all men be beyond reproach, he could at once go to a Methodist or any other Arminian church, and there would be absolutely no reason why he should not be received among them. Such an one does go to them, and is received by them, having been excluded first from our midst. Now, a month or so later comes on the stated time for the supper to be administered in the church from which the brother had been excluded. He and other members of the church with which he has since become identified are present. If now we open the door to all church members, of all orders or churches, what would happen? Why, just this: we should receive right back to our communion the very man from whom a month previous we had withdrawn, saying that we could no longer hold him in our fellowship. Could absurdity itself go to greater lengths than this? How can we, without acting a falsehood, invite to the table of the Lord those for whom we have just said that we have no fellowship? Surely this must be plain to all who will take the pains to look carefully at the matter. Is it not pertinent here to ask, "How can two walk together unless they be agreed?" Fellowship is essential to rightly partaking of the supper with the Lord's people. Oneness in faith, oneness in obedience, and oneness in sympathy and purpose, are essential to rightly eating and drinking the chosen emblems of the body and blood of the Lord. How can we who believe in salvation by grace through the merit of Jesus Christ, and who at the table of the Lord seek to declare this, invite those to eat and drink with us who do not ascribe their salvation to him, but to their works or their choice?

8th. It is said, "Are we not all traveling the same road? Are we not all striving for heaven?" I want to frankly say that I am not striving for the same heaven, nor walking the same road, with the man who trusts in himself in the smallest degree, and to that extent, therefore, is not trusting in Christ, nor relying upon his imputed righteousness. He denies Christ just as absolutely who adds the least human merit or work to his finished work, as does he who says that salvation is all of our merit, and not of grace at all. Therefore he who trusts alone in the finished work of Christ can have no fellowship with the man who asserts that we have the least thing to do by which to be justified before God. I do not say he will not have, but in the very nature of things he cannot have; and I want to frankly say that I have no desire to go to the heaven of the believer in human merit. I see no heaven in any condition or place where there are high seats or low seats; where one has a thousand stars in his crown, and his next neighbor hangs his head in shame because he has none. Such a heaven I must say possesses no attractions for me. I should not desire to be either the man with a thousand stars occupying the highest seat, nor the man with no stars occupying the lowest seat; though if the real heaven be anything like what makes the child of God happy here, the lowest seat will be the happiest place. No; we are not walking the same road, nor striving for the same heaven. Therefore this argument for what is called open communion falls to the ground.

9th. But it is said the table is not ours, but the Lord's; therefore it should be open to all. I answer, Truly the table is not ours, but the Lord's; and therefore the servants who serve there have no right to say to anybody, "Come in, and eat and drink," except those whom the Lord has bidden. If the table were mine it would be my right to invite all whom I pleased; and my servants could not lawfully bid any one else come in. It would be presumptuous in them to do so. If it can be shown from the word of God that he has bidden all men come to the supper, regardless of baptism, heresy, immorality, and all things else, then indeed are we his servants wrong when we practice what is called close communion; but if we find in the word of the Scriptures no record of any besides baptized believers being bidden to the supper, then not only is our practice of close communion right, but to practice open communion would be a sin against God. May we always, therefore, remember that it is the Lord's table, and free and open only to baptized believers in our Lord Jesus Christ. If the Lord shuts the door, who has the right to open it? At the supper I desire to invite all those whom the Lord has bidden, and no others. As an obedient servant I can do nothing but this. If I am reproached for this, the reproach does not fall on me, but on my Master, behind whose authority I am standing. Brethren, let us be reproached for obeying God, rather than for disobeying him; and let those who cast this reproach against us beware lest they be found heaping reproach upon the Master.

10th. I want to add to this what may seem a digression from the theme. I want to say that we ought to be consistent in our practice also all along the line. I will illustrate what I mean by telling an incident which took place in Baltimore perhaps twenty years ago, at the house of our brother John Thorne. At that time there was living in his family a lady with whom very many of our brethren were well acquainted, and whom every one who knew admired and respected. Although a member of the Presbyterian Church, Old School Baptists had no warmer friend. When I say that I allude to Miss Sarah Firth, hundreds of Baptists will remember her. But to the incident to which I refer, which I had from her own lips. A New School preacher, then pastor of a church near Baltimore, came there one morning, and as he met Miss Sarah said, in his pompous way, "We have been having a grand meeting this past week out at my church. We have held meetings all the week, and have had a number of different ministers to assist us, and two of your good brethren have also preached for us." "Yes," said Miss Sarah, with ready response, "you will let our ministers work for you, but you won't let them eat with you." It is needless to say that the minister could find no answer to this sharp attack. I am glad to be able to say of most Old School Baptists that they are consistent in this matter. If we will not have them eat with us, we at least do not have them work for us.

11th. Returning from this digression, I wish to add a few words of encouragement for those who at times, although baptized believers, feel that they are all unworthy, and have no right to come to the Lord's table. What was the supper instituted for? Jesus said, "This do in remembrance of me." Paul said that by it we do show forth the Lord's death until he come. To eat the bread and drink the wine, then, does not declare in any way whatever our goodness or merit or righteousness, but simply the death of Jesus. Who are they that are best prepared to see the meaning of his death and to show it forth? Is it not the man who feels his sins most, or who feels most unworthy? As we decrease, does not Jesus increase? As our sin abounds, does not his grace much more abound? My brother and sister, it follows, then, that the more unworthy and vile and sinful you feel to be, the better prepared you are to exalt the worthy name of Jesus; and this you do when you sit down at the Lord's table and partake of the bread and wine. A deep, heartfelt sense of sin is the best preparation that any one can have for coming to the Lord's table. This is my encouragement, and has been for many years. I could never come to the Lord's supper at all, could I not come as a vile sinner saved by divine grace, showing forth not my goodness, but the Lord's death for me, a sinner.

I trust these thoughts, put down at odd moments during the past two weeks, may prove to be of some satisfaction to brother Curtis and to others. I am sure that brother Curtis in his old age knows all these things better than I can pen them.

I remain your brother in gospel hope,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., June 15, 1894.

FRAGMENTS.

I believe that I can truthfully say, with the prophet, "I know, O Lord, that the way of man is not in himself. It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." Yet I still find myself very often trying to direct my steps, and am greatly disheartened and gloomy, at times, because I do not succeed. It is not with reference to temporal things and circumstances that I am so anxious to find a satisfactory way in myself, and direct my steps in that way. I have been wonderfully favored with a good degree of contentment with my condition in providence, though far different from what I once confidently purposed for myself, and have been far quieter and more restful under adversities than I would once have thought possible for so restless a disposition as mine; and have sometimes thought I had in some measure, though not fully, "learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." In regard to home and social relations the pleasantness of them has made this an easy thing to learn; but in sicknesses and bereavements whatever contentment I have experienced has been by the experience of a power great enough to overcome and hush the persistent cries of the natural heart.

But it is in regard to spiritual assurances and comforts and contentment that I find myself utterly at a loss when destitute, unable to direct my steps in the least degree. I cannot find the way to where "the Lord is unto his people a place of broad rivers and streams," and I cannot rest short of it. I cannot find the way into the Lord's store house, and when he takes me in and shows me the immensity of his provisions, and gives me a little taste, I cannot be content with what he has given me only as he makes me so. How often I try to walk by the still waters of his sweet, refreshing truth, and lie down in the green pastures of his love and grace, but turn which way I will I see only a dry desert, or a waste, howling wilderness. When I am under a heavy sense of my vileness and transgressions I try to do something that will open the way again into his manifest favor and love, but how vain are all my efforts. The gate is so strait and the way so narrow that I never have been able to find them at any time except by the express direction of the Holy Spirit at the very time. It is always with me as it was in my first experience of a hope. I had sought in vain to find the way of salvation in myself. I seemed to get farther and farther away from the Lord, and from any possible hope of salvation, until I came to the end of the earth, to the end of all earthly strength and wisdom and righteousness, and there I was forced to stand still, a guilty sinner, with no reason to expect deliverance, though still looking and seeking and hoping that in some way mercy and help might come to me. And come they did, but not in the way I looked for them. To my surprise the dear Savior was revealed to me as the way, and gladness, unknown before, filled my soul. I was made to feel that Jesus died for me. These were the words by which he told me the sweet and glorious truth: "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

From that day to this every effort of mine to come into the presence and favor of God, to remove coldness and darkness from my heart, and bring light and comfort, has only resulted in showing me that the way of man is not in himself. How thankful I ought to be, and sometimes am, that Jesus is the way, and that he leadeth me, sometimes, in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

AFTER we have experienced any heavenly blessing we cannot but be more interested in hearing about that blessing, and learning concerning its character and the purpose of God in it. The love of God to his people can never be a subject of special interest to any one until he has felt that love shed abroad in his own heart. When that sweetest and most wonderful of all experiences beneath the sun is first ours, we may be as ignorant of its real nature, and its meaning to us, as the babe is concerning the mysterious principle of natural love which causes its eyes to seek those of its mother, and its little form to nestle in her bosom, as it receives its nourishment from her breast. But from the first experience of the love of God in the heart it is ever after a subject we love to meditate upon, and to which we cannot be inattentive. Our especial interest in it at any time is greater or less according to the measure of its power felt in our hearts.

It is an increasing wonder to the one who is growing in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to find how much the love of God is talked about in the Bible. Indeed it now becomes the central and attractive element in every scriptural subject to the spiritual mind. From the beginning to the end of the Scriptures the love of God is the ruling theme; and more and more do we see its wonderful character displayed and illustrated in various ways, its holy nature unfolded, the sacred measurement of its "breadth and length, and depth and height," given, the power of God declared and made known, by which he causes his dear children to become "rooted and grounded in love," which is the soil in which they grow and the rock on which they rest, and by what wonderful ways they are brought to "know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that they may be filled with all the fullness of God." All the time, in every book, in every chapter, in every subject, they are called to behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the children of God.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., June 1, 1894.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes.

SELECTED.

DIVINE LEADING AND TEACHING.

BY J. MC KENZIE.

"THEREFORE they shall come and sing in the height of Zion; and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock, and of the herd; and their soul shall be as a watered garden, and they shall not sorrow any more at all."—Jer. xxxi. 12.

We possess as much true spiritual religion as we have experienced the power of it in our heart; and, as it is with natural things, so it is also with spiritual things. We have eyes to see, hands to feel, ears to hear, and feet to walk with; so, in the same way, the faculties and powers of the renewed soul are spiritually exercised, and just in the same proportion as they are brought into exercise will be the true amount of our spirituality. That which is supernatural cannot be understood by anything natural. Spirituality must be created in the soul by the operation of the blessed Spirit; and, with such a religion as he gives, it will support a man through all his trials and afflictions in the wilderness, be a source of comfort to him in life, a divine support to him in the hour of death, and an everlasting spring of happiness to him when mortality shall be swallowed up of life. It is not mere moral duty, but an internal spiritual principle, a hungering and thirsting after the bread of life and the waters of salvation, which induces him to follow hard after spiritual things. Whoever is thus possessed of true and spiritual religion will become singular and different from men in general; he sees and feels that the solemn truths of religion are divine and eternal realities.

The chapter from whence our text is taken relates literally to the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. It is a promise of deliverance therefrom, and shows the Lord's great love and care for them as a people. In viewing the subject in its spiritual sense we shall observe three things:

I. The characters or persons spoken of: "They shall come."

II. The manner and way in which they come: "With weeping and supplication."

III. The place to which they come: "The height of Zion."

I. The characters or persons spoken of. Every soul that has the light and teaching of God in his heart will want to know whether he has the evidences that are here set forth as belonging to the people of God. In the context it is said, "The Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he." So that it appears the characters spoken of are those whom the Lord Jesus Christ has ransomed from the curse of the law, from guilt and dominion of sin, from the tyranny of Satan, and from the power of death and the grave; those whom he has saved with an everlasting salvation; his elect people, who were chosen, set apart, and sanctified in him before the foundation of the world.

In the 8th verse of the chapter there are three particulars spoken of as descriptive of the persons referred to in the text: "Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child together; a great company shall return thither." Now, have you any of these marks and evidences in your soul? For, depend upon it, if you are entire strangers to these tokens, you have never yet come to Zion. The "blind" here do not mean those who have lost the sight of their eyes, neither do the "lame" mean those who are lame in their body naturally. It is the blind spiritually, the lame spiritually, and the pregnant spiritually; and these shall be brought to sing in "the height of Zion."

The first mark of the characters recorded in the text is that of being blind. By nature all mankind are born into the world in a state of blindness; that is, all are blind to the knowledge of themselves as lost and ruined sinners, and blind to any spiritual knowledge of God. They cannot see their own vile, depraved and corrupt nature, nor their sensual and deceitful hearts, and how it is they are in love with Satan and his ways and estranged from God and heavenly things.

But the Lord is speaking here of his redeemed and quickened people after they are called by grace. They have eyes given them to see some things, but not others. This is a paradox which every believer is made to feel and know. Their eyes are opened to see a holy God upon his throne, and to cry out with Isaiah, "Woe is me, for I am undone!"—vi. 5; and like Job, "Behold, I am vile!"—xl. 4; and with Habakkuk, "Rottenness hath entered into my bones."—iii. 16. Their eyes are opened to see blackness and darkness flaming around Sinai's mount; to see God's anger against sin, and to feel their souls quake at his majesty and glory. They have eyes to see these things; and therefore they behold the holiness of God, who reveals justice and judgment to them as the basis of his throne. But their eyes are not as yet enlightened to see the riches of his grace, mercy and compassion; they have not eyes to see their pardon, nor their names enrolled in the Lamb's book of life; they have not eyes to see their sins cast behind Jehovah's back, nor their way to glory opened up. They are not blind to the doctrine of the mercy of God in Christ Jesus and of salvation of grace; but they are blind as to their special interest therein and of the acceptance of their persons in the Beloved. But the testimony of God is given, that "The blind shall see out of obscurity."

Again. The Lord says, "I will

(Continued on page 213.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 4, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

STRANGERS AND PILGRIMS.

"THESE all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."—Heb. xi. 13.

Under the direction of the Spirit of truth the writer of this letter to the saints among the nation of Israel has given incontrovertible demonstration that all the dealings of God with the children of Jacob, but presented the shadow of the more wonderful display of his grace in the salvation of his chosen people from their sins. Even in the awful revelation of that law which was given from flaming Sinai, holy, just and good as it was, there was only brought to light the justice of that sentence under which all men are concluded together in sin. None of those natural descendants of the chosen patriarchs were able to render such service to the precepts enjoined upon them as should entitle them to claim acceptance in the sight of God. "For by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." And speaking of that legal dispensation, Paul says, "But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident; for, The just shall live by faith. And the law is not of faith; but, The man that doeth them shall live by them."—Gal. ii. 16; iii. 11, 12. Failing to receive this essential principle, the religious world can never understand that salvation is brought to those who are lost under the condemnation of the law of sin and death. It is not for the instruction of those who are dead in sin that this epistle is written. The saints who have been delivered from the bondage of the law, are often beguiled by the devices of the adversary so that they still seek to be justified by obedience to the demands of that inexorable taskmaster. It is for their instruction and comfort that the way of life is presented in marked contrast with the slavish system of legal death. That righteousness which was written in the law could only bring the justification of an obedient servant to those who should fulfill its every precept. No length of years of sinless compliance with its demands could be accounted as atoning for a single failure to keep one commandment. As the fiery cloud covered the trembling Sinai when that law was given by the hand of Moses, inspiring terror in them who heard the voice of words and the sound of a trumpet, so every sinner who hears the thunder of the law requiring truth in the inward parts, is cut off from trust in his own works for justification. To all such hopeless ones the law can bring nothing but condemnation and despair. For their comfort the faith of the saints is demonstrated to be the ground of acceptance with God. Since there can be no other source from which faith can come but as the gift of God, it is evident that it is only by grace that it is bestowed; and in the chapter from which our text is taken many examples are presented of the works wrought by this faith. No room is left for the claim of merit on the part of those who have received this spiritual gift. It is exclusively the fruit of the Spirit, and its recipients in every case must first be in possession of the life of Christ before they can have this grace which is the product of that Spirit dwelling in them. None who believe the testimony of the Scriptures can suppose that the dead sinner has any power to secure divine life by efforts of his own will. Not only is this beyond the power of the sinner, but it is impossible that he should even desire to be conformed to the perfection of God. As a natural man he has no mind but the natural, or carnal mind; and that mind is enmity against God. Certainly enmity cannot desire to love that which it hates. Consequently it is written, "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God."—Rom. viii. 8. The conclusion is unavoidable that every one who desires to love God must be led by the Spirit of God; and all such are the sons of God.

In all the record given of the saints under the patriarchal and legal dispensations it is evident that they were led by the living and omnipotent power of God which dwelt in them. No attainment of natural intelligence could have directed Abel in offering unto God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain. Indeed, reason would decide that there was more virtue in the offering for which Cain had labored, than there could be in the sacrifice of the firstlings of Abel's flock and the fat thereof. To the limited view of man the toil of Cain in producing the fruit of the ground which he offered in sacrifice, attested the sincerity of his devotion. The same principle is manifest in the popular religion of our own times. While the wonderful works and sacrifices rendered by will-worshippers are thought to entitle them to divine favor, the poor sinner who can claim no such works to commend him, is despised by those who trust in themselves that they are righteous. In the connection of our text the principle is declared by which this mystery of godliness is shown to be according to the good pleasure of the will of God. Faith is that wonderful principle. It is essential that the inspired definition of faith should be observed; for the natural mind can no more be correct in defining this fruit of the Spirit than it can in grasping the things of God, for which Jesus gave thanks that his Father had hid them from the wise and prudent, and had revealed them unto babes. The natural mind understands faith to be merely the consent of the will of man that the record given in the Scriptures is true. Even in this erroneous idea popular religious teachers are not consistent, since they represent that man has power to determine whether he will believe. While every sane man knows that this is not true in regard to natural things, so completely blinded are the eyes of sinners that they readily accept the idea that it is true in the infinitely more important things which pertain to the revelation of salvation by grace. That the real significance of our text be seen it must be observed that the faith of which this whole connection is a record, and whose marvelous power wrought the miracles specified, is the very same faith which is defined in the first verse of this chapter. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Surely this is not a correct definition of belief. It is only applicable to that living principle which is the fruit of the Spirit in those who are born of God. With this understanding there is divine assurance in the testimony written in our text.

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off." While the same faith by which Abel obtained witness that he was righteous, is the only medium by which the saints in the gospel day are justified through the grace of God, yet there is a sense in which God has provided some better thing for those who believe in the finished work of our Redeemer now, than that promise of his coming upon the assurance of which the faith of the old saints was sustained. The faith of ancient saints was the fruit of the Spirit of Christ which was in them testifying "beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." By that same Spirit the saints now are comforted in all their afflictions by the manifestation of the finished work of Jesus and the glorious victory which he has already accomplished. We are now favored to see Jesus as the exalted Savior, whose victory over sin and death is completely secured, and who has ascended the throne of his glory. To them this revelation was in such a mystery that they "inquired and searched diligently" both as to what and what manner of time the Spirit of Christ did signify. To those who now believe in Jesus this revelation is shown by the Spirit of Christ as forever perfected by his one offering of himself without spot to God. In this wonderful work the testimony of faith was manifestly fulfilled, and the salvation of God was revealed. So old Simeon said, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."—Luke ii. 29-32. That faith which had looked forward for the coming of the Savior, had now received the manifestation of its fulfillment in the revelation of the Christ of God. That which he had seen afar off, was now given to his present experience. This was the end of that which was seen by faith in the hope of every saint who had waited for the grace of God of which they had received the assurance of faith.

"And were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." By no natural evidence could those strangers and pilgrims have been persuaded of the promises which they had only seen afar off. Even if they had received them, it would have been impossible for them to embrace and be persuaded of them without evidence upon which their confidence could rest. The fact that they did so embrace the promises which they had not received, was exclusively the result of the power of faith. Only by that spiritual grace were those severely tried servants of God enabled to confess that "they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." In the pride of selfish confidence the natural man claims that he has power to make this confession; and all the efforts of will-worshippers are directed to persuade their fellow men to join them in professing that they are such strangers and pilgrims. This is conclusive evidence that they are utterly destitute of the faith of Christ, in which the patriarchs died. The first effect of this faith is experienced in the revelation that it makes of its recipient an entire stranger, so that he cannot find a resting place in any earthly abode. Whether his natural position be upon a throne or in the depth of poverty, he is equally a stranger and pilgrim in this experimental sense. Let it not be forgotten that the effect of being persuaded of the promises of God, and embracing them, is in every case to produce the confession that the subject of faith is a stranger and a pilgrim on the earth. The converse of this statement is also true. If one has learned that he is a stranger and pilgrim on the earth, there can be no mistake in the conclusion that he is embraced in the exceeding great and precious promises which were seen afar off by the saints before the coming of Christ Jesus in the flesh, and which are now made clearly manifest in the finished work of the Redeemer. To such characters John says, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God! Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." Herein is the confession that we are strangers and pilgrims on the earth. If the world could recognize the saints they would not be strangers. This is too manifest for argument. But there is a more wonderful sense in which this expression applies to the afflicted and poor people of God. Not only are they unknown to their fellow men, but they are such total strangers that they cannot recognize in themselves the unmistakable marks which identify them as the children of God. This peculiarity cannot even be imitated by the idolatrous devotees of this world's religion. With all their devices for counterfeiting the marks of a work of grace, the workers of iniquity have never been able to feel themselves justly condemned and lost sinners. They cannot so much as desire to be conscious of their own sinfulness and wretched poverty in the sight of God. But none ever saw the promises of God, and were persuaded of them, but that they were made to confess themselves such "strangers and pilgrims on the earth." In the world they shall have tribulation; here they have no continuing city; and consequently they realize that this is not their rest. Thus they are strangers and pilgrims, not having any home in this land of enemies and snares. It is true of them, as it was of the typical Israel, that "They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in; hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them. Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses; and he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation." Certainly in all this journey they are strangers and pilgrims. Not even in their own natural understanding can they find a resting place. Their own judgment is perhaps more ready to condemn them than are their fellow mortals. Certainly their own hearts continually bring against them the consciousness of their sin, which is ever before them. This is true of none but these subjects of faith, who thus confess that they are strangers and pilgrims on the earth. The same faith by which those old saints were supported in all their afflictions, is the refuge and strength of those who now rest in the grace and truth of God. It is the pleasure of God that they must be strangers and pilgrims here; but the consoling truth is written for their comfort, "For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." "For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come. By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name." This is consistent with the character of strangers and pilgrims, who as captive exiles hasten that they may be loosed, and that they may not die in the pit, nor that their bread should fail. In longing for deliverance from the bondage of corruption, the saints confess that they are strangers and pilgrims on the earth. Evidently this confession is not made in the spirit of boasting, as if they had chosen to be thus separated from those whom they despised. They are thus set apart as a peculiar people, because they have been made conscious of their pollution and sinfulness, and they are the only people in all the earth who are under the necessity of trusting in the Lord alone for righteousness and strength, being convinced that in themselves they have neither merit nor power to plead before the throne of that God who requireth truth in the inward parts. Strangers and pilgrims, they are unknown even to themselves as creatures of time and dwelling on the earth. But they who can confess themselves such must be guided by the faith which was in the ancient saints.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The messengers composing the Chemung Old School Baptist Association, to the associations and churches with whom she corresponds, send brotherly love and christian salutation.

BELOVED OF THE MOST HIGH GOD:—Once more we have been permitted to meet together on the shores of time, according to our custom in the past, to listen to the solemn admonitions and glorious promises of the holy One, through the mouths of the chosen vessels of the Lord; and we feel that we have been comforted, and made to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, while listening to the glorious doctrine of salvation by grace, which is vouchsafed to us poor mortals, fallen sons of Adam, who have no soundness in us, but depend entirely upon the mercy and grace of him who is all and in all, and who gave his only begotten Son as a ransom for our souls, that we might escape the just punishment for our transgressions, and acknowledge Jesus as the author and finisher of our faith, and as the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

The next session of our association is appointed to be held with the church at Caroline, Tompkins Co., N. Y., beginning on Wednesday before the third Sunday in June, 1895.

D. M. VAIL, Mod.

J. C. BEARD, JR., Clerk.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 211.)

lead the blind by a way that they know not." Every man, therefore, who is under the guidance of the Lord is at first in the dark as to his leadings and teachings. When the Lord is pleased to lay upon his soul trial, affliction and sorrow, and when he feels his fatherly chastenings and discovers his own wretchedness and barrenness, he does not see that this is the path of life and arises from a possession of true spiritual religion, and is the right way to heaven.

Another mark of the redeemed and ransomed people of God is, that they are exercised with lameness. This I believe to be the totterings and staggerings of weak faith in the heart. It is those who feel they are so paralyzed that they are not able to walk or run in God's ways. Paul indeed says, "We walk by faith, not by sight;" but there are times and seasons with the Lord's people when they appear to themselves not to be able to walk at all. Those who cannot walk straight may be said to limp; but God says, "The lame shall take the prey;" that is, those whose faith is exercised, tried and put to the test; who have been so tempest-tossed that they cannot believe when, where or how they like.

I believe the man who can always have faith when he please, who never has any doubts or misgivings about his state, and who is never troubled with the workings of sin nor fears of any kind, the faith which he possesses is not the gift of God; for, wherever the Lord works a saving, spiritual faith, Satan will come and sift every grain of it. He will ply him with temptations so closely that he will find it hard work at times to stand his ground; he will be frequently full of fears and faintings, and will continually need divine strength to uphold him. Faith, then, of the operation of God, can never be destroyed. It is something like a small piece of gold; it may be lost for a time in a bushel of dirt, and you may not be able with all your searching to find it; but place it in the crucible, put it on the fire, clear off the dross, and it will be discovered that not one grain of it is lost. Just so it is with faith in the heart. Whenever by the grace of God it makes its appearance, Satan will soon begin to assault it, and try to bring in guilt, and throw a damp on the soul; but when the furnace has done its work, faith will appear. These painful seasons will make them feel they cannot get on quite so fast nor so easy as they once did. This will teach them humbling lessons, and give them to know that the Lord must work every good thing in them. And thus it is they learn that all the opposition from without and within, the staggerings and faintings from the weakness of their faith, with the temptations and assaults of Satan, shall all work together for the good of the Lord's people.

But there is another feature of the ransomed people which we must notice, and that is, "the woman with child." This pregnancy represents a soul who is weary and heavy laden, and refers to the burden on the mind arising from convictions of sin and the pressure of the law on the conscience. It also sets forth the weariness which the soul feels after long winter and dreary paths of experience. Therefore, in the preceding chapter, speaking of a soul in trouble, the Lord says, "Wherefore do I see every man with his hand on his loins, as a woman in travail?"—xxx. 6. And also, in John xvi. 21, sorrow of soul is compared to that of a woman in labor. Therefore the man who feels burdened in his soul is full of grief and misery; but still his heart is after Jesus, and he will be found waiting at the posts of wisdom's door; he cannot give it up, though he is not delivered into gospel liberty. But Jesus said in his Word, and he will make it good in experience, "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you." Neither men, devils, sin, nor any evil work, shall take it away. You mourn now because of the absence of Jesus; but when, in his mercy and grace, he is manifested to your soul, you will have to bless and adore him for all that he has done in and for you.

Now, do you know anything experimentally of what we have been describing? Do you know what it is to be blind and unable to see or exercise faith when you please? Have you been unable to walk spiritually, and felt crippled in a way of experience? And do you ever feel weary, heavy laden, and sorrowful, because of the paths you are being led into? If you have any of these marks and evidences there is good hope you are the ransomed of the Lord, and shall come and sing in "the height of Zion."

II. We will now pass on, in the second place, to the manner and way in which they come to Zion. In the 9th verse it is said, "They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them." And now, if we were to talk all night upon this point, we could not explain it more suitably than in these two words, "weeping" and "supplication." Jesus saith, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." It is only when the drawings of God are felt that the soul can come aright to him. Every one, therefore, who hath heard and learned of the Father is attracted to Jesus Christ; and I believe that these leadings, teachings and drawings are from God, the Spirit. The revelation to the soul of the spirituality of the law, the heinous nature of sin, and the glories of the salvation of Jesus, are all from him; and all the teaching of "terrible things in righteousness," which they are sometimes called to pass through, are all of his sovereign operations, and bring with them "weeping and supplication."

But the words "weeping" and "supplication" contain matter enough for two sermons, so that I can only make a few remarks concerning their nature and significance.

As it respects weeping. If we look at the period when the Jews were taken captives to Babylon we shall see something like true weeping. When they looked around and saw their wives and children taken away from them, it is said, "They raised their voices, and wept aloud." They were rooted out of their habitations, taken away from all their comforts, and dragged like slaves to a foreign land; their grief caused them to weep excessively; and, beside all this, they had lost the ark of God, which was their glory and their praise, they were deprived of their princes and their king, and they were obliged to submit to all these and other indignities. They went down to the river of Babylon, and there they wept; and when they thought of God and the temple, they hung their harps upon the willows and indulged themselves in their grief. While overwhelmed with these feelings, their enemies would come and taunt them, and say, "Sing us one of the songs of Zion!" But they mournfully answered and said, "How can we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" The cruel sneers of their enemies wounded their heart and cut them to pieces; therefore, with their harps unstrung at the river side, they wept aloud for excessive grief and anguish of spirit.

These captives were typical of God's people; for when they are brought down from a state of prosperity and delivered into the hands of their enemies, when Satan is hunting and pursuing them in the terrors of a broken law, and conscience is accusing them from within, when they are under a cloud, mourning the absence of Jesus to their souls, and feeling their wretchedness and confusion, at such a time as this it is impossible for them to sing; their harps are on the willows, and they are in a state of confusion and in a weeping spirit.

Have you experienced anything like this? Have you ever been taken captive in a strange land, and unable to sing the glorious song of redemption? Have you ever been brought into the dust of self-abasement, your harp on the willows, and sinking in dismay in the feelings of your soul? If you have, you know what it is to be brought into a state of weeping; and while in this state of captivity you will mourn over your sorrowful condition.

There is another time of "weeping" mentioned among the Jews, and that was when the old people saw the building of the second temple; but perceiving how much inferior it was to the glory and splendor of the first, it is said, "They lifted up their voices, and wept aloud." Just so it is with the Lord's people now. Every time they are led into fresh troubles and sorrows, and new difficulties overtake them, it is a time of weeping with them; and it will remain so until the Lord dries up their tears, cheers them, and speaks comfortably to them again.

But the Lord not only leads them with weeping; he guides them with supplication also. This is the bridle by which they are led and enabled to walk; almost every spiritual motion they have is connected with supplication, and this proceeds from the Spirit of God. I do not say it is always with tears from the eye; but there is a contrition and melting felt in the heart, with weeping and supplication before the Lord. This is one of "the footsteps of the flock." And when the heart feels this sorrow, there is a supplication going up to God; it will plead and intercede with him for what he has promised, and earnestly longs for an answer of peace. True, genuine, spiritual prayer is the outflowing of the heart to God; and that only is acceptable to him which he puts into the heart, which is the inditing of his blessed Spirit, and which comes from the inmost recesses of the soul. Generally speaking, if you look through the Scriptures, you will find the prayers recorded therein would not occupy more than five minutes in the delivery, and often do not consist of more than from three to thirty words. Gifts are not grace; and therefore the poor, broken-hearted, tried and sorrowful people of God want to feel the power of grace in their souls, and not to hear those who are merely displaying their gifts. So you will always find those prayers the most touching that are the simplest, and which come evidently from the heart. For myself, I do not mind what a man says in his prayer, so long as he is honest and gives expression to what he feels in his soul. I am more and more satisfied, wherever God reveals himself, he will make a man's conscience tender; he will be exercised and led to examine both himself and his prayers too. And therefore, whether he is in the pulpit or in the closet, he cannot do as many will in their shops, act deceitfully and try to palm off their goods under false pretences. No. He is made to be upright before God, and to examine every part of his motives and actions; so that, if a man has a purged conscience he will be made truly honest and upright; and when he is in distress and sorrow he will come and supplicate with the Lord, and present his case at the footstool of heaven in such a way as no deceitful man can. So that where there is genuine heart work, supplication will force itself out before the Lord; and he will hear the petition, and in his own time and way answer the request. Supplication, therefore, is an earnest prayer, a powerful suit, a pleading with the Lord. It is a thing that cannot be given up.

Look, again, at another case, that of the Syrophenician woman. See how she was repulsed and rebuffed at every turn; yet she could not give it over. She could not give up her suit; she had a faith's hold of Jesus. Therefore he replies, "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." So that, wherever God puts a necessitous case, there will be importunity; and wherever he gives a man a deep feeling of his own sinfulness, and a deep sight of God's holiness, such a man will have a case which will make him cry and supplicate at the footstool of mercy in honesty and sincerity. In this way, in the path of "weeping" and "supplication," the soul will be led on, till it is brought to sing in "the height of Zion."

III. But, lastly, we will now attend to the third point, and speak briefly of the place to which they come: "They shall come and sing in the height of Zion," &c.

When Lot was driven out of Sodom he first took refuge in Zoar; but when he beheld all the cities of the plain in flames, he was afraid to stop there any longer, and therefore he besought the angel to let him flee to the hills and hide himself in a cave there; which request he granted. All this, I believe, is typical of the soul flying to "the height of Zion;" for, when the Lord opens the eyes of a sensible sinner to discover the city from whence he has been driven, he beholds it enveloped in the flames of divine wrath and under the curse of the law; he never can find rest in it any more. Therefore he will flee to "the height of Zion" for refuge; nor will he ever feel satisfied until he finds rest in Jesus and can hide himself in the clefts of the rock. Thus the Lord's people "come and sing in the height of Zion, and flow together," &c.

The first particular they are said to "flow to the goodness of the Lord" for is wheat. Jesus says, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."—John vi. 35, 51. And as bread naturally satisfies the cravings and hungerings of the body, so Jesus Christ is that "Bread of Life," which satisfies the desires of our heart, and by faith we live upon and receive nourishment and strength from him. But though we may be satisfied of this in our judgment, it is of no use to us until the Spirit of truth applies it; and when he is pleased to give us faith to "eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood," then he becomes the Staff of Life to our souls. We feel him to be the Head from whence we receive every supply, and that he has an overflowing fullness to satisfy every want. We see that Jesus has taken our sin and guilt away; that it was placed to his account; that he suffered the wrath of God and endured the torment due to sin for us; that he wrought out and brought in an everlasting righteousness, which is imputed unto us, and in which we are ever beheld spotless before the throne of his glory.

But, blessed as all this is to a believing soul, he has gone beyond it all. Christ becomes the daily food of our souls; and therefore he says, "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life," &c.—John vi. 54. Thus we have eternal life in him, and he will raise us up to everlasting glory and happiness at his right hand when time shall be no more. Jesus, therefore, not only redeems us from sin, death and hell, and brings us near to God, but he becomes the incarnate "Bread of Life" to our souls, of which "if a man eat thereof he shall live forever."

But this "Bread of Life" comes to our souls in a sovereign way. It is like the manna that came down from heaven in the wilderness, and which was also typical of it. We can only eat this spiritual manna as we have faith given us to receive it. But we often want to act with it as the children of Israel did in the desert; they were anxious to gather up a stock, that they might put some by and save it to live upon for some days. But God will not have it so; you must receive the allotted portion daily. It is, "Give us this day our daily bread." Jesus is a sovereign gift from heaven; and, if you have been experimentally taught the truth, you will find that you cannot have a spiritual enjoyment of Christ in your heart just when you please. No, indeed, you cannot; for there are times and seasons when your faith will be so weak that you will have to say, "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." You may indeed say, "Lord, I believe that thou art the Christ of God," and be satisfied there is no other name under heaven whereby you can be saved.

But you will want something more than this to satisfy the craving desires of your soul. You will want to feed on Jesus as "the bread of life," "the paschal lamb," and "the fatted calf;" you will want to be satisfied with his goodness, to be filled with his fullness, and for every power of your soul to be consecrated to him, and to live continually a life of faith upon him. Therefore you will say, "Do, Lord, let me know that thou art mine, and that I am thine indeed, and that I have eternal life in thee; and do enable me to live more on thee as the Bread of Life, and as the manna which came down from heaven."

But, if the Lord is pleased to keep you in the place of waiting, and delays to satisfy your wants, your soul will become sorrowful, and you will be weary, heavy laden and desponding. And then the blessed Spirit will revive you again, and you will cry out with David, "As the hart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God; when shall I come and appear before God?" But the Lord will come again and satisfy the wants and desires of his people, and make them happy in himself; and then, sometimes, after they have had a feasting and refreshing by the way, they will be like those who were miraculously sustained by the manna in the wilderness day by day. Carnal unbelief will always lead the soul wrong. We are full of unbelief and rebellion; and none but the everlasting God, the God of long-suffering, compassion and mercy could bear with us. And therefore we discover we are not one whit better than the Israelites. If we have not felt murmurings in the wilderness of Arabia, as they did, we have it equally as much in our unbelieving hearts. He who has been made sensible of this will be brought to cry out earnestly to be delivered from the power of this God-dishonoring sin. He will not only feel his murmuring and rebellion, but he will have sorrow and distress on account of it, and be greatly humbled thereby.

After the children of Israel had received the manna, they were directed to gather a double portion on the sixth day, as none would fall around their tents on the seventh day; but there were some who would go out to see whether it was so. Here we perceive the heart of man will always go the wrong way; and therefore God will chasten and reprove his people, but he never forsakes them. He has loved them with an everlasting love, and that is the reason why he bears with them and why their souls do not perish; for he "rests in his love."

But, again. They are to flow together to the goodness of the Lord, not only for wheat, but also for wine. Solomon says, "Give wine to them that are heavy in heart, and strong drink to them that are ready to perish." What is the reason of this? "That they may forget their poverty, and remember their misery no more."—Prov. xxxi. 6, 7. Here, then, the poor disconsolate and desponding soul is to receive the rich covenant doctrine of God's everlasting love and eternal mercy, and the unalterable purpose of his free and sovereign grace; all flowing from his loving heart, "without money and without price." It is all provided and laid up for broken-hearted, sorrowful souls, and is as free to them as the air they breathe. They are to drink large draughts of it to raise and animate their drooping spirits, that they may forget their poverty for a time and rejoice in the unsearchable riches they have in the Lord Jesus Christ. This "strong drink" is to be powerful, to recover them from fainting, and restore their life and animation. There is nothing more calculated to raise up the soul than the everlasting purposes of electing love and covenant mercy of God in Christ Jesus from before the foundation of the world, when these truths are applied home to the heart in the power and demonstration of the Spirit.

Then, again, we are to give "wine" to them that are weary and heavy-laden with sin; who are cast down under a feeling sense of their sin and sinfulness; who are in the prison-house, and sinking in doubts and fears. To these we are to give the heart's blood of the Son of God to drink. It will cheer and warm them up; and they are to drink it to the full. They are to be told of the efficacy of his precious blood, how it "cleanses from all sin," and takes out every stain; and though their sins are red like scarlet, and deeply dyed like crimson, it will make them whiter than snow or wool; that nothing can stand against its power wherever it is applied; and that it will bring sweet peace and serenity into the soul. But, alas! oftentimes when the Spirit is pleased to give us this "wine" and "strong drink," we are such fools, and so enfeebled by unbelief and fears, that he must both open our mouth and fill it; for we have no help in us to take this free cup of salvation. Therefore he must work all our works in us, and not only reveal it, but apply it also. So that he will be the Comforter to our souls; he will water us every moment; he will apply the salvation of Jesus to us, and pour in this sacred cordial and heavenly balm into our hearts.

Now, very few persons like the doctrine of the application of spiritual truth in this way; they do not like it brought home to their own experience. They do not mind hearing about the doctrine of election and of redemption; but if you enter into the peculiar feelings of it, and contend for a living experience, they oppose it. But what does the Lord say? "Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more."—Prov. xxxi. 6, 7.

There is another thing which they "flow together to the goodness of the Lord" for, and that is for oil. This signifies the rich, gracious anointings of the blessed Spirit. But as the time is gone, we must pass by this, as well as the remaining part of the text, and leave it to some future time.

ELDER WM. J. PURINGTON.

We are pained to learn that our dear brother, Elder Wm. J. Purington, who has been failing in health for many months, is gradually growing weaker, with little prospect of recovery. He has been confined to his house for more than a month. He is resigned to his sickness, and is as tender and gentle as a child. He is tenderly nursed by his devoted companion and niece, who, with a host of loving brethren and friends, far and near, hope he may be spared to them yet awhile.

MARRIAGES.

At his residence in Hopewell Borough, N. J., by Elder Wm. J. Purington, Mr. Cornelius Cortelym and Miss Sarah F. Bennett, both of Middlebush, N. J.

By the same, at his residence in Hopewell Borough, N. J., June 27th, 1894, Mr. Harry Leshar and Miss Anna Fenton, both of Philadelphia, Pa.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At her home in Boyd Co., Ky., March 5th, 1894, Levicy Hatfield, aged 58 years, 11 months and 8 days.

She was the wife of brother Ransom Hatfield. They were both worthy and consistent members of the Old, Regular Baptist Church. Sister Levicy was baptized in the fellowship of the Old Pond Creek Church many years ago (I have not the date), where she remained a worthy member until death released her from all that is mortal. In the last month of her sickness she talked very much of the many past years in which she had been serving God the best she could, and said she did not fear to die, but would be at rest. During her sickness she prayed for her children, that they might be enabled to serve God, and meet her in the world of eternal glory. Her mind was good until the last moment. She bade us all farewell about five minutes before she passed into the eternal world. She told us how well she loved her brethren and sisters of the Old Baptist Church, with whom she had so often met and enjoyed herself at her meetings, and with what great pleasure she entertained them when they visited her. She was an industrious, kind and agreeable sister, a loving and faithful companion, a tender mother, a good neighbor, and respected by all who knew her. She will be sadly missed by the church, but more so by the bereaved husband and children, who have the sympathy of the entire community, as well as the church.

May the Lord bless the sorrowing members of the afflicted family, and grant them grace that they may live and die as did their dear mother, who fell asleep in the arms of her dear Redeemer. What a blessed thought, when our loved ones are called away from us, that we have the evidence that our great loss is their eternal gain!

Yours in sorrow, mingled with joy,
W. J. MAY.

PINSONFORK, Ky.

DIED—At the family residence in Felton, Del., on Tuesday morning, June 19th, 1894, Mrs. Susan Gooden, aged 58 years, 1 month and 14 days.

Mrs. Gooden was the daughter of Deacon John Gruwell, who was for many years a member and officer of the Cow Marsh Baptist Church. From her early youth, first in her father's house, and latterly in the house of her husband, she has been among the most zealous and active supporters of the church. Many who have been visitors to the church in time past will remember the hospitality of this Baptist home. The church has suffered a serious loss, as well as the family and the community around. Those who are least to spare are oftentimes the first to be taken. For some twelve years past she had been more or less afflicted, and for the last two years a constant sufferer. A complication of diseases had undermined and wasted one of the strongest constitutions, until she was quite helpless, requiring great care and attention. Mrs. Gooden had without doubt long been a subject of grace, and enjoyed through all her affliction that hope which anchors within the veil.

Mr. John Gooden, the surviving but now bereaved husband, is left in his declining years in loneliness and sorrow, and three sons mourn the loss of one of the best of mothers. We have none of us here any continuing city, and so one after another we are being called to our final home.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.

LEXINGTON, Neb., June 16, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I feel like writing a few lines for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and giving the proceedings of a meeting held on the first Saturday and Sunday in this month, near a post-office called Tallin, in Custer Co., Neb. A council of ordained authority was called.

From Fox River Church, Davis Co., Iowa, came Elder Isaac Sawin and Deacon W. H. Bybee.

From New Hope, Butler Co., Neb., came Elder Isaiah Wagner.

The council chose Elder Wagner as Moderator, and Elder Sawin as Clerk.

The services were opened with singing and prayer.

An able discourse was delivered by Elder Wagner.

Invited brethren and sisters of the Primitive Baptist faith, holding letters from sister churches, to come forward with their letters.

In response to this came brother M. D. Pile, sisters M. A. Pile and Minerva Bybee, who presented their letters to the council, which were examined and read aloud, and pronounced genuine.

Called for their Articles of Faith, which were read and received by the council, as also their Rules of Decorum.

By motion and second, the council pronounced them a church of Jesus Christ in full fellowship.

The name of the church is LOOP RIVER.

The church then chose Elder Wagner as Moderator pro tem., and Elder Sawin Clerk pro tem.

An opportunity was then given any one to unite with them by letter, relation, experience and baptism.

While the congregation sang a hymn brother C. A. Worrell and his wife, M. J. Worrell, came forward and told what they hoped the Lord had done for them; that their hope was entirely dependent upon the Lord; that they had no confidence in the flesh; that they would like to have a home with these people, although they felt too unworthy.

They were gladly received, and the right hand of fellowship given them as candidates for baptism, which was to be administered on Monday following.

There were visiting brethren and sisters present, namely, sisters Bybee and Lucy A. Coons, of Fox River Church, Davis Co., Iowa, sister J. W. Henry, of Clear Creek Church, Custer Co., Neb., brother R. B. Rowland, of Cedar Creek Church, Wapello Co., Iowa, and brother F. O. Long and Annie M. Long, of Round Prairie Church, Jefferson Co., Iowa.

This meeting was more like an association than any meeting I was ever at. All seemed to be love, joy and peace. I will say in behalf of this little church that if any of our ministering brethren can visit them and talk to them of the goodness and mercy of God to poor sinners, and how Jesus Christ came into the world, that through his death and resurrection he might perfect our salvation, they will be welcomed. When it pleases him who works all things after the counsel of his own will to reveal Jesus to us, the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely, then we lose all confidence in self, and are made to rejoice in the Lord.

I will close, feeling myself to be the least and most downcast of all God's dear children, if one at all.

F. O. LONG.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days meeting at Hughesville, Va., will commence on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

We invite all who feel an interest to attend, especially our brethren, and more especially our ministers. Get tickets in Washington or Alexandria for Hamilton, on the Washington & Ohio R. R. The p. m. train on Thursday and the a. m. train on Friday will be met at Hamilton.

E. V. WHITE.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

EVER since the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has attained its wide national circulation we have been importuned by our subscribers, as well as by those who have had no special interest in sustaining the publication, to open our columns to advertisements; but never having had any experience in that line of business we have hesitated to make the venture. Since the commencement of this volume, however, there has been a combination of circumstances that has encouraged us to make the experiment, and we therefore make the following announcement, viz.:

We will receive for the last page of the paper suitable and reliable advertisements at the following net rates, viz.:

Inches	1 week	4 weeks	13 weeks	26 weeks	52 weeks
3 1/2	$.95	$ 3.60	$ 8.50	$12.00	$ 22.50
1	1.80	7.20	17.00	24.00	45.00
3 1/2	3.80	15.20	34.00	48.00	75.00
4	5.70	22.80	51.00	72.00	108.13
4	7.60	30.40	68.00	96.00	131.25

No advertisements will be received for this paper unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, N. Y.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day: for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'	& Ps. 22. 22.
n ver. 31.	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 29 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told	Matt. 28. 10.
			Rom. 8. 29.
			Heb. 2. 11.
			1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15 1/2.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Sons, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THIS ONE, WHICH IS FOR DRIVING

WILL BORE A HOLE
Two hundred feet deep into the darkest night you ever saw—
A HOLE LARGE ENOUGH to let your horse and buggy through. More light on this lamp in a little book from
R. E. DIETZ CO.,
60 Laight Street, NEW YORK.

THE STAR
COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT
AND ANTI-RATTLER.
Fast selling: always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price, $1.50. State rights for sale.
THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$.05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,
G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,
Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send
A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1894.

NO. 28.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CHRISTIAN WALK.

"He that saith he abideth in him [Christ] ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."—1 John ii. 6. "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savor."—Eph. v. 1, 2. "Only let your conversation be as cometh the gospel of Christ."—Phil. i. 27.

What a pure and holy and sweet-smelling atmosphere is that in which the christian's walk is placed by the apostles in all their commands, exhortations and admonitions. Is it an easy thing to obey these instructions? Is there no cross, no warfare, no struggle, for those who would be "followers of God, as dear children?" Does our carnal nature fall pleasantly in with the injunctions to put away "all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, with all malice?" Does the christian find no rebellious lusts, no lurking jealousy, no bold-faced pride, no covetousness, which is idolatry, to contend against? Does he never feel a disposition to "filthiness nor foolish talking, nor jesting?" Truly there is necessity for daily self-denial in a follower of Jesus. How easy it is to give way to these "lusts which war against the soul." How readily our nature will catch at any intimation that it is mere hypocrisy to try to wear a sober face and use gravity of speech, when there is a desire to jest, tell a frivolous story, and indulge in levity and laughter. The assertion that this repressing of our carnal desires is hypocrisy is from the devil, even though a minister of Christ should utter it. The pure and wholesome admonitions and instructions of the apostles mean nothing if there is not an opposition in our carnal nature to be met and overcome. There is a necessary "mortifying of our members which are upon the earth," a crucifying of the flesh. When one once begins to yield and give way to that which is from the flesh, how easily a vile habit is formed. There have been those who have formed the terribly corrupt habit of indulging in levity in the pulpit, so that their preaching has come to be without any power or savor to the spiritual hearer. A defense of such a course is sometimes attempted, but it has no ground in the Scriptures, and no place in the spiritual mind. It is a hard enough struggle for the poor soul, whether preacher or not, to try to "put off the old man, which is corrupt," without having the flesh supported by the charge that it is mere hypocrisy to try to crucify its affections and lusts. Timothy and Titus were charged to teach the young men to be sober-minded and grave, and were themselves to be a pattern of good works. This is no long-faced hypocrisy, but the working out of the salvation which God has wrought within. The true sobriety and gravity which becomes a christian is as far from the overbearing sternness of the Pharisee as it is from the foolish levity of the clown. It springs from a spirit that is full of exalted and holy cheerfulness.

"Walk in wisdom toward them that are without; redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer everyone."—Col. iv. 5, 6. It is a comfort to even try to obey such holy exhortations. It is an unspeakable comfort to be enabled to do so; for it is the real outworking of the life of Jesus in the soul. This life is the source of all our real joy; and the atmosphere in which it inclines us to walk is pure, and fragrant with the fragrance of the dear Savior's name. There is no boasting in the feeling of comfort which we have when walking in the truth, and keeping the body in subjection, but a tender thankfulness and holy fear.

I will mention two incidents which show the evil of indulging in vain and foolish conversation. One who had been deeply exercised about spiritual things felt constrained to go to the house of the pastor of the church where she attended, to talk with him. She was timid and trembling. There was company at the house, and the conversation was gay and frivolous (at least to her); and she found no opportunity to speak of that which had such a solemn hold of her mind. On the contrary she was chilled by the worldly and vain conversation, and thrown into the dark. It was many years before she found strength to confess her hope and ask baptism at the hands of the church.

A dear sister was riding in a car, returning from an association. She had enjoyed the preaching, and felt comforted and strengthened. In the car was one of the ministers who had preached, and whose preaching she had enjoyed, although it had been somewhat marred for her by some lightness. He was now telling funny stories, and jesting, and keeping the group around him in a roar of laughter, in which he heartily joined. She was for the first time in her life ashamed of the name of Old Baptist, because of the way in which this representative of that name acted. He undoubtedly became "a castaway" from his usefulness as a preacher, so far as she was concerned, for it appeared to her as though she could never hear him again. Can it be possible that one who has the Spirit of Christ can continue in the indulgence of a spirit so opposite to that holy Spirit, day after day, and defend such a course? Do we not indeed have need to watch and pray, that we may walk as he walked; that we may walk in love; that our brethren may be as near to us as we all are to him, and that we may treat them as faithfully and lovingly, whether present or absent, as he treats us all; that we may walk in honesty and purity and gentleness; that "our yea may be yea, and our nay nay; for whatsoever is more than this cometh of evil." When we are spiritually minded, should we say anything merely to cause laughter and amusement, it will make our hearts ache with grief. But continuing such a habit will, as will any habit of wrong, sear the conscience, and bring us into an atmosphere of coldness and death. A loss of spiritual freshness and purity and joy is a great loss to a child of God. He who sells his birthright will have great distress. He will not be able to enjoy the carnal things which he gets in exchange, and the birthright blessings are gone for the time. How good it is that the birthright to the name of a son of God cannot be parted with, though its privileges may be lost for a time. When all the instruction which the pain, and darkness, and loneliness, and the manifested wickedness of our hearts, are intended to give us, has been received, then the poor prodigal who has wandered far from the right way of holiness will be brought again from the land of darkness and desolation, and with an humble and contrite heart will enter again into the joy of the Lord. All of the Lord's people have their temptations and trials, causing struggles and griefs, but all are not tried in the same way. That which besets one sorely, causing a terrible struggle for the victory, may be no temptation at all to another. One is so naturally inclined to pleasantry and humor that he must watch closely to keep from the jesting and levity that his nature likes, but which his spiritual mind loathes because it is so unbecoming the gospel, and so contrary to the character of the dear Savior; while another has no care for vanity of this particular kind, but is easily tempted in some other equally vile and dangerous way; perhaps with pharisaic pride, an uncharitable, unforbearing spirit, a hasty disposition to anger, or the like. One has an inherited or acquired taste for intoxicating drinks, which causes him constant watchfulness, unceasing struggles, and much inward grief and groaning before the Lord, of which another knows nothing; while the other has constantly to guard against a spirit of covetousness, which is idolatry, which the first has never felt, because he is naturally of a free and generous disposition. There is, therefore, no limit to the forbearance and sympathy which each of the dear family of God should extend toward every other in their peculiar weaknesses, temptations and besetting sins, while at the same time there should be no weak excusing of the sin, nor any attempt to heal the wounded conscience by making the offense appear less vile and enormous. The conscience which has been made tender in the fear of the Lord cannot respond to this kind of treatment, and will not be comforted by it, because the conscience finds no excuse for sin in the word of God; nor does it seek excuse, though the natural mind does. There is, therefore, no healing oil in the flattering attempts of weak brethren to palliate the offense, nothing that can make the bones which God has broken to rejoice. The fervent charity which covers the multitude of sins (1 Peter iv. 8), is the same love which follows the brother who has erred from the truth, with faithful admonition and reproof, endeavoring to convert the sinner from the error of his ways, and so save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins.—James v. 19, 20. The sins which fervent charity covers from the cold, harsh scrutiny of the world, and from the unsympathizing judgment of our own carnal minds, are securely hidden in the land of forgetfulness, by that mercy which rejoices against judgment, through the precious blood of Christ, never to afflict the conscience any more, when the converted, repentant sinner has been restored to his birthright privileges in the house of God. While, therefore, we ought to be kind one to another, tender-hearted, forbearing one another, forgiving one another, even as Christ forgave us (Eph. iv. 32; Col. iii. 13), we ought not to neglect exhorting one another daily; for true love and tenderness for each other will lead to this faithful care. We ought also to attend to the ministering of reproofs and righteous smitings, when it is clearly our lot, and not shrink from that duty because it appears painful to attend to; for therein is the excellent oil which does not break the head, but soothes and heals the sore which sin has made in a radical manner, so that the work is proved to be a kindness.—Psa. cxli. 5. Such a holy work can only be done in all meekness and charitableness.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., June 22, 1894.

EPHESIANS III. 10.

"To THE intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God."

By request of our esteemed brother, Elder H. M. Curry, of Lebanon, Ohio, I tremblingly take up my pen to write upon the above Scripture. In the trembling (I dare to hope), the fear of God is within me, the precious name of Jesus is my Counsellor, and the fervent prayer of my heart is that I may not darken counsel by words without knowledge.

"The manifold wisdom of God" is revealed only to the saints of God; therefore none can attain unto it save they to whom (by revelation) come the precious truths of the manifold wisdom of God by the Spirit of truth in Christ Jesus. This world's wisdom is confined to the things of this world, to things that are visible, and subject to human investigation; but the highest attainment of human wisdom has never passed beyond the confines of time and time things. The deep and unsearchable truth presented to the brethren by the apostle in his letter to the Ephesians, preceding the declaration above quoted, is the presentation of weighty matters of Christ's kingdom, leading directly to the statement of this important Scripture. In the first chapter of the epistle "the manifold wisdom of God" is set forth in a rich cluster of the attributes of the merciful God in the salvation of fallen man. The choice (or election) of God's people in Christ Jesus is fully set forth by inspiration, declaring, "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." His wisdom in predestination is also made known in endearing and unmistakable terms. "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved." Redemption and forgiveness of sins are also found in this rich cluster from the vineyard of infinite love. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." To our enraptured soul is also set forth the seal of God's promise, which cannot be broken even by all the combined powers and principalities that be. "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." As we leave the bounteously spread table of the choicest viands upon which we have feasted in this mansion of our Father's house, as presented in the first chapter, we now enter into another well-filled apartment in the temple, as our guide takes us through the second chapter. In this we have the specific declaration, pointing out to us the avenue of knowledge which it hath pleased the Father that we should enter. The first sweet and welcome sound that we hear is as follows, "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." This is the true source of all the knowledge of the mystery of godliness, the quickening into the life from above, being born of an incorruptible seed, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. This new and divine life brings with it the true knowledge of how we were dead in trespasses and sins; how we were "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Being dead, we could not (neither did we desire to) save ourselves, having no love for the God of heaven, neither knowledge of a gracious Redeemer; but by the quickening power of God's love we now realize how that "by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." As aliens and strangers, being dead, we know not anything of the great love wherewith God did love us; but now, as we enter the treasure-house of God's wisdom and love, we receive with gladdened hearts those precious words, good tidings indeed, "But now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." By precept upon precept, and line upon line, we learn all the fittings of the temple, being "no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." We see the foundation and the superstructure of all the building of God, "Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone." In the third chapter, wherein is the Scripture under consideration, the apostle presents to the minds of the Ephesian brethren his own peculiar relationship to them as an apostle to the Gentiles, and how a special dispensation of the grace of God was given him for their sakes. He declares himself to be the least of all the saints; yet the revelation of the mystery of godliness was made known to him, that through him the Gentiles might understand his knowledge in the mystery of Christ. "And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ." When the revelation of the mystery of godliness is made known, with the same revelation cometh the knowledge of the mystery of Babylon, the mother of harlots, the mystery of iniquity; and these two great opposing mysteries are that which go to make up the child of Jehovah, the saint of God. Now, the apostle was given this knowledge that he might impart it to the election of grace, and in our subject we are given the reason for dissecting the wisdom of God into its manifold subdivisions; for the necessities of the apostle's case were to lead him to this very place; all the declaration of the manifestation of God's love, power and mercy, with the fact of his being made a minister of the New Testament to declare these things.

"To the intent." Each stone and each piece of timber, with all the paraphernalia necessary to the building of God's temple in the hearts of his people, is placed in its own particular place, and is fitted for that place alone. "To the intent that now," at this present time. The things which the apostle presents now to the faithful in Christ Jesus could not have been presented before. Each particular leaf in the pages of the way and plan of salvation is unfolded when the fullness of time does come.

"Unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places." The preposition "unto" has a peculiar significance in this Scripture, as in other passages of the Bible. The subject to which it refers, and which it introduces, is embraced within certain limits; and while the "principalities and powers" are to be found in "heavenly places," like all the powers that be, they have their bounds, and cannot go beyond them. I will try to make clear my meaning by referring to other passages of Scripture. In Numbers xxxv. 25 we read, "And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil." Thus his abiding in the city of his refuge was embraced within certain limits of time, viz., during the life of the high priest. So shall principalities and powers remain in heavenly places during the natural lifetime of the saints. Again, in Isaiah xxvii. 12, "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel." The river of Egypt is emblematic of the river of death; and when in the saint's experience the channel of that dread river is beaten off from by the Lord unto the stream thereof, then shall every enemy (principalities and powers) be destroyed, and the children of spiritual Israel shall be gathered one by one out of the snares of death, to be with our great High Priest, in whose presence are pleasures forevermore. We are not apt to look for principalities and powers in heavenly places, and without searching they come appallingly to our view. The life of the saint all the way through is as the company of two armies; the one holding the insignia of the power of death, while the other waves the bright banner of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. If by the will of the Master we are favored from time to time to abide in the heavenly places, we are made sensible of the presence of the principalities and powers in the depravity of our carnal mind and the lusts of our flesh. I can readily call to mind when in my most solemn moments, perhaps in attempting to speak in prayer, the vilest thoughts have passed through my mind. We remember in the days of Job, "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them." Thus it is in this our day and time, as we meet together in the assembly of the saints, and sit together in heavenly places, we are made to realize that Satan comes also among us; for does he not hate the assembly of the saints? Does he not use his cunning and craftiness to poison and contaminate our pure minds, insinuating the base and foolish things of the world, offering us the pleasures of the principalities and kingdoms of this world, with unlimited power, if we only bow down to him? Now, it seems especially this that "unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God." The apostle evidently felt the great weight of the burden of his apostleship, that all things pertaining thereunto must be clearly set forth, that the manifold wisdom of God might be known by the church. This now from henceforth is the great aim and object of his life work. In the two dispensations preceding this (the gospel dispensation) the faith of many was counted unto them for righteousness; but now we must learn by an everyday experience of the work of grace by faith that Jesus has come in our flesh, and that "we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." The apostle must point out to the faithful in Christ Jesus how that principalities and powers work their baneful influence in the heavenly places, and that this is the cause of tribulation. He must point out to them also, from the rich store of his own experience, and from the special revelation of God's manifold wisdom to him for their sakes, how that "tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope," &c. Among the many difficult problems that torment and harass the saints from time to time is how principalities and powers in heavenly places work together to the ultimate good and well being of the saints. When Paul as an apostle to the Gentiles has laid a broad foundation, displaying on all its surface here, there and everywhere the manifold wisdom of God, and we can witness to it all by a living experience of a work of grace in the heart, we are ready to assert that sin (as manifested in the works of the flesh, in principalities and powers, &c.) is not simply a side issue, which the wisdom of God did not foresee when before time he predestinated and foreordained the wondrous plan of salvation, and being here, he permits its reign as the power of darkness; but we are "persuaded that [as] neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord;" yet we do know they are all embraced in, and necessary to, the accomplishment of God's wise purpose, and just as needful in the working out of God's salvation as those "parts of his ways" which the carnal mind of man calls good things. Now, I think we can see the importance of the word "manifold," which the apostle in this Scripture places before the wisdom of God; and how the manifold phases of the christian experience, especially the principalities and powers in heavenly places, must be known by the church, ere the church can be said to walk in gospel order. Surely there is no child of heavenly birth that can discern the body of Christ, or view his Redeemer as the Christ, the Son of the living God, until he has also been made aware that principalities and powers in the reign of sin have wrought death in him. To know Christ is to know all things; for God hath appointed him heir of all things, and by him all things consist. To the intent, therefore, that all things pertaining to the kingdom of Christ might be shown to the heirs of promise, Jesus said unto Peter, and to all the disciples, "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Thus the apostle's doctrine is the groundwork of our faith and practice; and except all the way and plan of salvation, even the maneuvers of both armies in the warfare, are known by the church, it could not travel circumspectly. So I say in conclusion, the manifold wisdom of God is known by the church in all its bearings, and that principalities and powers are a part of that manifold wisdom, that they shall endure in heavenly places during the visibility of the church on earth; or in other words, during the earthly sojourn of each individual saint.

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 26, 1894.

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark., March 1, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed find a letter written to me by W. G. Matheny. It was very interesting to me, and also all of Salem Church that have heard it. I think it would be interesting to the readers of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which comes to me regularly, laden with good news from a far country. Wishing you success in your labor for the truth's sake, I remain your brother in hope of eternal life,

J. R. ARNN.

MAXVILLE, Ark., Feb. 6, 1894.

MR. JAMES ARNN—DEAR BROTHER:—I have felt a desire for some time to write you, but have not undertaken it till now, as I have gotten too old to write with ease. I do not know that I could write you any general news that would interest you, so I will offer some views upon the doctrine of the Bible, as I think there is no subject of more importance, nor any that should more engross the feelings of those who claim to love and appreciate true and undefiled religion. I am a very bungling talker, and do not know that I can make myself interesting on any subject; and if I fail, bear with me.

The subject of life and death is one that engages the thoughts of all thinking people, so I will write on that, and for a text will quote the twenty-second verse of the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." In talking upon the Scriptures I want to remember at all times that it is written, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." I do not want to guess at what is revealed in the Scriptures of truth, nor speculate upon its teaching. If I fail to give correct ideas, just charge it to my ignorance. The apostle admonished Timothy to "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Life and death are words or phrases that are used in reference to earthy, temporal things, to both the vegetable and animal creation. When the leaves in our orchards and forests turn brown before the regular season, we say the trees are dying, or are dead. We have annual manifestations of this in all vegetation which we denominate death, when the frosts of winter kill the vegetation of summer, and we say that all vegetation seems shrouded in death. When our loved ones fall victims to the grim monster, we say the ruthless hand of death has invaded our family and bereft us of our dear ones. And in other ways and circumstances we use these phrases, or apply them to the constantly recurring vicissitudes of all temporal things. We have all received knowledge of these things from observation, and frequently to our sorrow. But what I desire to investigate is the death and life referred to in this text, as well as in other places where these words occur in the Scriptures. These, like all other words, must be considered according to the sense in which they are used in the Scriptures, whether temporal or eternal things, earthly things or heavenly things, visible things or invisible things, are referred to.

We have two men presented in the text. "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." We are told that the first man was formed of the dust of the ground, and was made an image, a likeness, a figure, of the second man; second in manifestation, as I understand. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." "Male and female created he them. And God blessed them."—Gen. i. 26-28. As there could not be an image or likeness of a thing that did not exist, I conclude that the first man, with his bride created in him, is clearly a figure of the second man, the Lord from heaven, with his bride existing in him. Let us endeavor to fully understand the import of the teaching embraced in the scriptural narration of the creation of the first man. Genesis v. 1 reads, "This is the book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him. Male and female created he them, and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created." Now notice, the whole of the generations of Adam were created in that day; which we must understand to mean the whole list of Adam's generations; and their name was called Adam. Paul, who spoke by inspiration long after the creation, spoke of Adam as still remaining the figure of the Savior who was to come. He said, "Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come."

Now, that we may arrive at a correct understanding of what is the true Scriptural import of the words die, dead and death, let us begin at the first. And God said, "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." This is a positive declaration of God, and we are taught that God is truth. The Scriptures tell us, "Let God be true, and every man a liar." So we dare not say that the work of death was not accomplished through that transgression, in the day that the transgression occurred.

But the question is, What is implied by this death? God in reckoning with the earthly man put no curse or condemnation upon him, but said, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake: in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life: thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." No intimation is here that this Adam was to encounter death, because the forbidden fruit had been eaten; but information was given that in sorrow he was to eat of the herb of the field all the days of his life, and that he was to return to the ground, because he was taken out of it. In this respect this Adam has no pre-eminence above the beasts, whose life is also sustained by eating the herb of the field; for the wise man says, "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above the beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."—Eccl. iii. 19, 20. And as the male and female, in the book of their generations, were called Adam, we could testify in any court that, according to our best information and observation, this Adam is still living, and in sorrow eating the herb of the field, and is still the figure of him that was to come. And, as I understand, this earthly Adam constitutes what in Scripture is termed the world. Now let us endeavor to learn the meaning of the word death as presented in the text, and in other Scripture quoted. The apostle says, "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." We are taught that sin is a transgression of the law; and reference has already been made to the transgression by which death entered into the world. "That old serpent, which is the devil and Satan," is the one that was cursed on account of that transgression. "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle," &c. "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman," &c. This is the woman that is figured by the earthly woman, as you will doubtless conclude if you read the twelfth chapter of the book of Revelation. We are told that the man was not deceived; but the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression. This by a figure teaches us how the church, the body of Christ, became involved in sin and death. We learn from the inspired Scriptures that the heavenly man, like the earthly man, has a generation; for the prophet says, "He is brought as a lamb to the

(Continued on page 221.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 11, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE HOUSE OF PRAYER.

WHEN our Lord Jesus cast out from the temple in Jerusalem the money changers and merchants, he explained that action by reference to that which was written by the inspired prophet seven hundred years before. No sudden impulse moved the sinless servant of God when he literally removed those covetous traders from the sacred house which they had desecrated. He was filled with the same Spirit which guided the pen of Isaiah when he recorded the things which the Spirit signified, "When it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." While as a subject under the law of Moses he was righteously zealous for the cleansing of the typical temple, even that holy exhibition of devotion to the glory of God was itself the divine type of his infinitely greater work in cleansing his people, who are the antitypical temple, from all the sin by which in themselves they were polluted. Of that temple which was built by mortal hands there could be no glory but that which was destined to pass away. It was no unforeseen accident by which those traders had taken possession of that house for the accommodation of their profitable business. Their sacrilegious action was a needful incident in bringing to pass the word of the Lord which was written, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."—Psalm lxxix. 9; John ii. 17. While the wickedness of those greedy speculators was not thereby excused, it pleased the Lord to make it subservient to the manifestation of his own righteousness, thus compelling the very wrath of man to declare his praise, and restraining the remainder of wrath. In both the wickedness which is developed, and that which is restrained, the praise of our God is made to appear. Thus John was moved to record that "The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth forever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created."—Rev. iv. 10, 11. This confession leaves no room for the notion that by far the greater portion of the things which exist are only "permitted," without the pleasure of the holy Lord God Almighty. The literal temple in Jerusalem, with all that appertained to that natural Israel, as left in the Scriptures for our learning, is but the shadow of the reality revealed in the gospel heaven, which is the church in the liberty of this true sabbath day of freedom from legal bondage. That glory which was seen in the old Sinai covenant as ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator, is utterly lost in the divine radiance of the everlasting covenant of grace which is revealed in the face of Jesus Christ.

Under that dispensation which was ordained in ceremonial observances, everything most sacred was embodied in the holy temple wherein was the awful secret place of the Most High, into which only the high priests might enter. This was the house where the Lord directed Israel to bring his offerings, and in which he would accept their worship. It was to them the house of prayer.—See 1 Kings viii. 22-61. But when the Messenger of the covenant came to that temple he found it defiled by carnal covetousness, as by the abomination of desolation, so that it was perverted from its high design, and transformed into a den of thieves. It is not to be understood that this den was the resort of such thieves as steal money and earthly treasures. On the contrary, one of them who had been delivered from that vile company, declared that as touching the righteousness which was in the law he was blameless. This could not be claimed if they had been such thieves as rob their fellow-men of natural wealth. Yet they certainly were the thieves by whom that temple was desecrated. The charge was recorded against them by the last of the prophets whom God sent to reprove them, "Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation."—Mal. iii. 9. It was in their departure from the path of obedience to the law enjoined upon them that they were guilty of this robbery. When God gave them his covenant as the nation whom he had chosen, definite precepts were included in that law by which they were required to confess their dependence upon divine favor; and in rendering implicit obedience to the commandments of their God they were assured of every earthly blessing. In forsaking the directions therein given them they practically asserted their defiance of the Lord, and robbed him of the tribute of praise and adoration which was justly due to him as their Creator and the giver of every favor by which they were exalted above the nations among whom they dwelt. By such rebellion the temple, which represented the way of access to the divine favor, was made the resort of their assemblies of unhallowed robbery. When thus defiled it was indeed "a den of thieves." From such a house the holiness of God could accept no offering. Even in that earthly sense in which the blessing of God had been upon Israel, their peculiar privileges were now about to be withdrawn. Jesus declared the dreadful woe to which that literal temple and that fleshly Israel were appointed, in his lamentation over Jerusalem. In saying that their house was left unto them desolate, he signified the removal of every living principle from the dead body of that dispensation. Their beautiful temple could no longer continue as the house of prayer; for they must witness its utter destruction, and their goodly land must be given to the Gentiles. These things were literally accomplished upon that nation at the very moment designated by our Lord. Then that world of types and shadows passed away, and the temple worship ceased.

Under the gospel heaven a new and entirely different order is established. "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands."—Acts xvii. 24. The antitype of that wonderful Jewish temple is found in the church of Christ as established in gospel liberty, and in that holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High prayer is unceasingly made before God for the salvation of all the subjects of his electing love. Continual experience of destitution and poverty indites the effectual fervent prayer of faith in each one of those who are led by the Spirit of God. That prayer must ever come before the throne of God in the name of Jesus Christ. Even though they may not have rendered literal obedience to the word and example of the Lord in formally uniting with the organized church, every one who prays acceptably to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Such prayer necessarily confesses that Jesus is the Christ; and that confession includes the whole doctrine of God our Savior in practical obedience as well as in its revealed principles. It cannot be consistent for any one to pray without having the desire for that which is asked for. When in words we pray for that which is not our real desire, our words are false. But there can be no falsehood in the cry for deliverance from the burden of sin, which is wrung from the heart of the mourning sinner. No created power can teach such prayer as this. They who know themselves as lost and justly condemned rebels against God, and they only, can thus cry out of the depth unto the Lord. Whether they utter words in this extremity of helplessness, or their agony is shut up in their own secret thoughts, they are in the house of prayer, where only that God who sees in secret can hear their cry. In every such case they do receive openly the reward of the answer of their prayer.

In the sense in which the Jewish temple was the typical house of prayer for all the tribes of Israel, its antitype is found only in the name of Jesus Christ. Whether uttered by the voice of the most gifted ministers of the gospel of Christ, or by patriarchs or prophets, no desire is acceptable in the sight of God unless it originates in this holy place. The name of the Lord is not only the strong tower into which the righteous run for safety from their enemies, but it is their storehouse of unfailing supply for all their needs in every time of trial. Jesus says, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."—John xiv. 13, 14. The tempter often assails the afflicted and poor people of God by perverting this precious word of the Lord. Taking advantage of their strong desire for some natural wish to be gratified, he will propose that they pray for its accomplishment; and when they find their pray unavailing he is sure to taunt them with this failure as conclusive evidence that they are not entitled to hope in the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. If this deceitful artifice were applied to the perversion of an earthly promise, the saints could not be entangled by it. If a rich man should order his banker to give a pauper everything for which he should apply in the name of his benefactor, there would be nothing in that order to authorize the banker to pay one dollar on the demand of the pauper without the rich man's name. With that name the pauper might command all that the rich man could control. In his own name the pauper could receive nothing. The saints can never ask in the name of Jesus for anything but what is directed by the Spirit of Christ. Asking at the dictation of their own carnal mind, and claiming the name of Jesus as authority for such petition, is merely seeking to obtain by forgery what God has not authorized them to ask. Such deceit can never be successfully practiced at the throne of divine grace. The name of Jesus commands all the glories of heaven and all created things. No power can resist its authority. But when it is presumptuously used by those who have not received his commandment for their warrant, there is no more power in it than when those vagabond Jews attempted to imitate the miracles wrought by Paul at Ephesus.—Acts xix. 13-17. The evil spirits readily recognized the fraud, and the seven sons of Sceva may well be a warning to all in every age who would thus presume to take the name of Jesus in vain. When anything is asked in the name of Jesus it must be in accordance with the will of God; and there never was an instance in which such a prayer failed of receiving a favorable answer. When even the saints ask anything which is not granted them, it is because they were not led by the Spirit of Christ in that prayer. In other words, that petition did not ascend to God from that spiritual temple which is the true house of prayer. When led by the Spirit to ask anything, they ask in the name of Jesus, and the truth of God is pledged for the accomplishment of such prayer. It is only in this spiritual temple, "the name of the Lord," that real prayer is presented before our God. All other prayers are but a hollow mockery of the solemn privilege which God has bestowed upon the favored subjects of his electing love and grace.

So wonderfully is this holy tabernacle of our God adapted to the need of his tried and helpless saints, that they are neither required to journey to Jerusalem, nor to the mountain of Samaria, in the worship of their God. While he dwells in the high and holy place, he is ever present "with him that is of a contrite and humble spirit to revive the spirit of the humble, and revive the heart of the contrite ones." Where our God is pleased to dwell, there is the holy temple in which he will hear and answer the prayer of every afflicted and destitute one who mourns on account of his conscious guilt. Whether the suppliant cries from the ends of the earth, or from the bottom of the mountains, or standing afar off and fearing to lift his eyes to heaven, smites upon his breast, saying, God, be merciful to me, a sinner! where this light of divine truth shines to the revelation of the sinner's lost condition, there is the house of prayer. No religious education could ever teach a sinner how to pray; neither can all the doctrines and commandments of men guide one into this secret place of our God. But when it is the pleasure of God to bring a sinner from the unconscious death under which all the children of Adam are by nature, and give him to see his lost condition, then he is at once in this sacred house of prayer. This is the first place in which life is manifest. It is a holy place by reason of the presence of God. Here the sinner is first made to abhor himself as justly condemned before God. This gives the knowledge of the need of divine grace for his deliverance. He now sees the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and groans beneath the hopeless bondage of corruption. This is the house of prayer. He feels to have added sin to sin in ever daring to ask for divine favor. His every breath is prayer. That is not an experience of divine grace in which the sinner never knows anything of this utter desolation where prayer welled up from his heart continually, and he felt that his very cry for mercy was in need of divine grace to forgive its sin. The house of prayer is exclusively for the benefit of those who have despaired of being able to render any service to divine justice in compensation for the pardon of their sins. To all such this house is the one place where they would dwell all the days of their life "to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple."

CHURCH LETTERS.

The Middletown & Wallkill Old School or Primitive Baptist Church, to the Warwick Association that convenes June 6th, 7th and 8th, 1894, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN:—We feel grateful to the all-wise God for his providence that has again permitted us to send our epistle of love and fellowship, and bow in humble submission to his will with whom we have to do, realizing that without him we can do nothing.

It seems our greatest pleasure, when we are clothed in our right mind, to walk before God, and to commune with him. This great and adorable God, who is the delight of his people, is daily spoken lightly of, and blasphemed by the world that lieth in iniquity. That which is joy and peace to the spiritual minded, would be a great discomfort to the ungodly. For we know that everything that God has created is only happy in its own element. The fishes of the sea are content with their element, as also the birds of the air with theirs: likewise the people of God who walk after the Spirit that is in them enjoy "the fruit of the Spirit," which "is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," and "against such there is no law."

But while we hold firmly to the old landmarks, and rejoice in God's salvation by grace alone, and believe him to be the only supreme Ruler over all events, there are those who pretend to preach him, but who deny his power.

Perhaps there has at no time been a greater effort made to convert the world, as they call it, than at the present. It is claimed that as there is progress in everything, so it is necessary to be up and doing, in order to keep pace with it all.

But thanks be unto God who has given us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. A greater blessing has never been bestowed upon mortal man than eternal life through God our Savior.

We rejoice that it is "not of works, lest any man should boast," but of the free and sovereign love of the all-wise God, who has all power in heaven above, and upon earth his footstool. In this the people of God can rest. Well may the apostle say, "For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his."

We, as a church, are in peace, and fellowship with others better than themselves. We have the gospel preached unto us in its purity by our dear pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, who shuns not to declare unto us the truth of God, in giving unto us out of the abundance of the revelation that God has given him, of that rich treasure which is the inheritance of the saints, and is "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away; reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

Our church meetings, as well as our Wednesday evening conference meetings, are generally well attended, and we are glad to state that not only those who have bowed their necks to the yoke, and have entered into the visibly organized church, but many others who are yet without the fold, are, we think, eating and drinking of the rich and delicious food that God gives unto his people. We pray that God may in his own good time bring them to his banqueting house, where his banner over them is love.

G. A. EMORY, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

WITH our first number for March we discontinued the notice headed "Until March," with a view to withdrawing our extraordinary offer to old subscribers as an inducement for them to procure new subscribers: but we have received a number of letters from very efficient brethren complaining that the time has been so short, and the weather so inclement, that they have not had an opportunity to get out among the brethren and friends as they would like to do, and requesting us for an extension of the time. We will therefore, until further notice, continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 219.)

slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living." And the psalmist says, "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation." This seed is brought to view in a parable, in explanation of which the Savior says, "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man. The field is the world. The good seed are the children of the kingdom." In another place he says, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth alone." And the apostle says, in reference to sowing seed, "That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." Now, as we have found that the earthly Adam constitutes the world, and that is where the Son of man soweth the good seed, and that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die, may we not read and correctly understand the text? "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." May we not feel assured that the all who die in Adam and the all who are made alive in Christ are the good seed that the Son of man soweth in the field, which he says is the world, the earthly Adam? All through the Scriptures there is a unity and close relationship brought to view between this Son of man and the seed that he soweth; for it is said that they are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Again, "For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me. Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and deliver them, who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Now we find that by being sowed in the field, the earthly Adam, partaking of flesh and blood, these children fell under the power of death, which is the power of the devil, and came into bondage to that power; became dead in trespasses and sins. But it is written, "There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer." And he has come, and by taking flesh and blood, and going down under the same power that held the children under bondage, he has destroyed him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and delivered them. We are told "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." Those that believe God, and trust him for the fulfillment of his promises to his children, have strong consolation given them throughout the Scriptures, when they can feel to claim those promises. The Savior says, "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." And again, "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down my life for the sheep: no man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father." Again, "These things I command you, that ye love one another. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Again, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." He says to his Father, "I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory that I had with thee before the world was." To his brethren he said, "For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world. Again, I leave the world, and go to the Father." These declarations show the origin of the heavenly man and his bride, who is bone of his bones, and flesh of his flesh, who came into bondage under the law of sin and death; and he came to die, that she might live. In view of this deliverance the apostle could say, "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." And the prophet Isaiah, viewing this glorious redemption and deliverance, by faith could say, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins."

I might fill many sheets in pointing out this glorious salvation and the blessed promises of the Father through the Lord Jesus Christ; but I have continued this scribble too far, I fear, for your comfort. If so, pardon me. Give my love to the brethren, and to your family and friends.

Your brother and friend as ever,
W. G. MATHENY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 14, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Many brethren in the east asked me to write for the SIGNS, expressing their appreciation of my former letters, and in weakness, fear and much trembling I again write you a few lines. For the first time I have been permitted to visit some of the eastern associations, for which I feel thankful to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift. I know the account of tours is generally sectional, and it is difficult to write out such trips so as to be of general interest to all the readers of the SIGNS, and often such personal allusions are made that letters partake of a personal character. But to express in as few words as possible, I wish to say that I have more than enjoyed my visit among the dear brethren of the east, who have been so hospitable and kind to me that I shall not forget them.

The preaching, so far as I was able to judge, was sound and in harmony with the teaching of the Scriptures. There was also a heavy correspondence at each association, Elders from different states all sitting together in heavenly places in Christ, speaking and hearing of the things of the kingdom of our God. Many faces did I see which I had longed to see, and to shake hands with those whom I had never met in the flesh; but we had communed together in the reading and writing in the SIGNS. Now, dear brethren, that I have met you, my love for you seems stronger. In the gospel of our salvation we could see face to face, and could say amen. Glory to God in the highest, salvation is by grace, through faith, and that not of ourselves, but is the gift of God. While I am delighted with the able counsel and the glorious preaching of Christ, I always have to go off and mourn over my own follies. But I do feel that I can praise the gracious Redeemer, who saves such sinners as I feel myself to be. I can glory in the fact that Jesus is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens. He, I hope, is my righteousness, sanctification, redemption and wisdom. I shall not forget the dear brethren at Rock Springs, Welsh Tract, Philadelphia, Southampton, Warwick, Hopewell and Middletown.

"Your company's sweet, your union dear, Your words delightful to mine ear."

I wish to say to the dear brethren with whom I stopped that I shall not forget you and your ministrations to make me feel comfortable. I wish I were able to entertain you at my own board as you have so kindly entertained me; and, moreover, may God forbid that I should sin against him in ceasing to pray for you. Allow me, brethren Beebe, to refer to one thing. I was once a citizen of Brooklyn and New York, and I was desirous of visiting the old homestead, which I did from the home of our sister, Mrs. D. S. Slawson, 355 Lexington avenue, New York. I left there last Tuesday morning, went to Hamilton ferry, crossed over into Brooklyn, and there on Summit street, I found the old street that I could recognize. These words came to my mind,

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,
When fond recollection presents them to view."

What a chain of thoughts came to my mind, and tears came up, when I remembered where I used to walk with my mother and father, and brother and sister. When I had surveyed our old home, then I went back and could have mingled my tears with the waters of the East River. Returning to the city of New York, I then went to 145 Duane street, the old store of my father. From there I went to No. 7 Hubert street, went through the old house, and saw where my mother once lay a corpse. All those things came fresh to my mind. I sat on the old door step, and how many things came before me. The house is the same. Thirty-four years ago I took the steamer for Savannah, Ga., when I was but eleven years old. O how many changes! St. John's Park, where I used to roll my sister in her little carriage, is now covered with a freight depot, and the park is not there as it used to be.

Brethren Beebe, please excuse this. It was in my heart and mind, and I have written it down. I have already taken too much space. Excuse me. I will write again. I am at brother Coulter's to-day in Philadelphia. I will get home, I hope, about the last of June. Good bye. God bless you all, dear brethren.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

LEESBURGH, Va., April 16, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I inclose you a letter to publish in the SIGNS if in your judgment it is worthy. I cannot hope that it will be of the same interest to the general reader of the SIGNS as it is for me, and others who know the little sister; still I think all will see something in it to admire. She is fourteen or fifteen years old, but much younger in the ways of the world than many her juniors by several years. She writes with power, and yet in weakness, telling her story, or tries to tell it, with sweet simplicity and earnestness of mind and spirit.

Your brother, I hope,

E. V. WHITE.

RIVEN OAK, March 26, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER WHITE:—You remarked when you were here last week that it did you so much good to hear the members tell their experience, and I remember I told you nothing of mine, poor as it is; but without hearing it I was received by you all in fellowship and love. When papa was baptized it made much impression on me. I went up to the school-house, and that was really the first sermon I heard you preach. From that time I was interested in the preaching, but kept it to myself as much as possible; yet each time I would see the people looking at me. You remember the sermon you preached at brother Jenkins' house. I thought about that sermon all the way home, and when I went to bed could not sleep, but kept repeating parts of your words, and without my knowing it. My thoughts returned to my past and present life, and I then for the first time realized what a sinner I was, and I could not restrain the tears of repentance. Brother White, you may think it weak in me, and perhaps it was, but I wept for a long time before I could go to sleep. Those thoughts were continually on my mind. I started to school, but often could not study. The scholars noticed a change in me, and would ask me why I was so quiet. I would tell them nothing was the matter, for of course I could not tell them when I did not know myself. I would go to hear preaching whenever I could, and, as you know, would sit and weep all the time. I would try so hard to keep back my tears, but could not. It seemed that every word was meant for me. At the preaching at brother Titus's I wanted so much to come before the church; but when you gave the invitation for those who wanted to come, I felt chained to my seat, powerless to move. Only tears could move. I wondered had God made me to feel as I did; but no sooner was the question asked than answered. How would I have known that I was a sinner if God had not revealed it to me? No one had ever told me. I was afraid I was too young, and afraid of deceiving the members; and how could I stand it to deceive the people I loved and believed worshiped God according to the Bible, and, as I think, are the children of God? After that time it was told by somebody that I had gone before the church. O how I wished I had. I prayed night and day that if God had started the work in me he would give me strength to go and tell my thoughts and feelings before the church. How often your words occurred to me, "If God begins a good work he will finish it." I was looking forward to the next preaching day, which would be at sister Furr's. I thought if God gave me strength I would go and ask a place among you, unworthy as I was, and as I yet am. As you spoke the last word, I wanted to go, and felt then for the first time strength; but see how little I trusted God. I wanted to go for fear my strength would leave me; but God stayed by me and gave me strength to go to you, if not to talk; and since then I have indeed felt as is said. I have walked in newness of life, and have felt a joy I never knew before. I have found, too, that joy is not always to be my lot, for I have met with sorrow since, as well as before I joined the church. I feel so unworthy to be in the church, yet would not be out again; and when I feel the warm pressure of the sisters' and brethren's hands, I wonder, Do they know how vile a sinner I am, and how weak and easily lead astray? Do they know this, or does my deceitful heart deceive them? I hope not.

I will stop here, for I feel almost as far now as before from telling my feelings, and do feel that I am the hindmost one, if one at all.

Hoping all mistakes will be excused, I am your unworthy little sister in hope,

SUSIE BALL.

PINSONFORK, Ky., June 14, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST JESUS:—If you will allow me a little space in our medium of correspondence, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I will give a brief account of my preaching tour in Kentucky, as the brethren and friends whom I visited requested me to do so, or at least some of them did. I had thought to write at length, but seeing it would occupy too much space in the SIGNS, I have concluded to condense the particulars and only write in a general way.

I left home on the 8th day of May, 1894, and arrived at Turners, Henry Co., Ky., where my first appointment was. I was met by brethren and friends who were awaiting my arrival, and among them was brother Joseph Turner, who is ninety-two years old, and is a faithful and consistent member of the Old School Baptist Church, and has been for sixty-two years.

I was blessed to attend all the appointments which were made for me, which extended from May 11th until June 4th, and also several additional appointments evenings and nights.

The churches I visited were in the Mt. Pleasant and Licking Associations. Stauchers, firmer and sounder Baptists I never met, nor ever shall in this life. Also, they are as kind and generous hearted brethren, sisters and friends as live, I believe. Their kindness and love manifested to me I shall never forget while memory lasts, and while thus writing my heart dilates with joy. My closing appointment was at Mt. Sterling, on the evening of the 4th of June; and on the 5th, at 1 o'clock a. m., I boarded the train for home. I arrived home on Wednesday, June 6th, and found all well, for which I desire to praise God, our dear Redeemer.

I thought best to write in a concise way, but hope my brethren, sisters and friends with whom I enjoyed myself so well, will excuse me for not writing more at length.

If God in his providence so orders it I shall sometime in the future come and see you again; for I long to be with you, and hear you talk of the goodness of God, and tell of his power, and of his wonderful works to the children of men. But if I never see you again in this world of toils and tears, I have an humble hope that through Christ I shall meet you in the glorious realm of eternal day, where we will never know a sorrow nor ever shed a tear.

I subscribe myself your least and most unworthy brother, but in hope of eternal life through Christ.

"An interest in your prayers I crave,
That we may meet beyond the grave."
W. J. MAY.

EXTRACTS.

From the Minutes of the Delaware River Association.

On motion, brethren J. M. Willard, Elijah Leigh and Cyrus Risler were appointed a committee to draft Resolutions expressive of our regret at the absence from our meeting of our dear brother, Elder Wm. J. Purington, on account of illness.

On motion the following Resolution was adopted:

ELDER WM. J. PURINGTON, HOPEWELL, N. J.—DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER IN THE LORD:—Some time ago we were informed that the condition of your health might prevent your attending the Association, but later on our hearts were made glad at the announcement that you might be present. To-day, for the first time in many years, your familiar face is missed in our meeting. While to your numerous friends and brethren here your absence is a great disappointment, and occasions profound sorrow, yet we realize that to you also this privation is a sore trial. You have been enabled to preach to others with a power and sweetness vouchsafed to few of God's ministers. Waiting congregations have felt the force and truth of your utterances, and have been impressed with the solemnity and sublimity of your exposition of the divine word. While we most humbly and fervently desire that you may be spared many years to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, we would at the same time reverently ask that he send the Holy Comforter to abide with you, till faith and hope give way to sight and eternal fruition.

Yours in christian love,
SILAS H. DURAND, Mod.
CYRUS RISLER, Clerk.

ELDER WM. J. PURINGTON.

UNDER date of July 6th, Deacon Elijah Leigh writes us that our beloved brother Purington is still sinking quite rapidly, and that it is difficult to place him in any position that he can rest for more than a few moments. He said to brother Leigh, "I know what was in the poet's mind when he wrote the hymn, 'O land of rest! for the I sigh.' I long to be at home with my Savior."—ED.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

A THREE days meeting at Hughesville, Va., will commence on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

We invite all who feel an interest to attend, especially our brethren, and more especially our ministers. Get tickets in Washington or Alexandria for Hamilton, on the Washington & Ohio R. R. The p. m. train on Thursday and the a. m. train on Friday will be met at Hamilton. E. V. WHITE.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

G. C. Jordan, Ill., 1, Newton Peters, Ind., 1, Paul Sohner, Iowa, 1, Mrs. T. Butcher, N. Y., 1.—Total, $4.00.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEPARTED this life April 21st, 1894, at the residence of her grandson, in Ulster Co., N. Y., sister Terwiliger, widow of brother Levi Terwiliger, upwards of 70 years old.

Sister Terwiliger had been gradually failing in health for a number of years, and finally through much suffering was called to rest, having felt desirous to depart and be with Christ, in whom she had professed a living faith for many years. She was a very estimable and worthy member of the Olive & Hurley Old School Baptist Church at the time of her death, and the large collection of friends at the funeral bespoke for the surviving her sterling worth. In her demise children and grandchildren, the church and society, experience a loss, yet we trust to her it is gain; for she had realized something of what it is to come up through tribulation and wash her robes in the blood of her Redeemer, on whom she leaned for victory.

Her funeral was largely attended at the Methodist meeting-house near where she died, and her mortal remains were laid beside her husband to await the last trump, when Jesus shall descend.

ALSO,

DEPARTED this life quite suddenly, at his home in Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., Mr. Jason Burly, aged about 70 years.

Mr. Burly was not a professor of religion, but an industrious and honest-hearted citizen, feeling a peace on earth and good will to his fellow-men. He was working in the field within three days of his death. Heart trouble was supposed to cause his death. In this sudden bereavement our sister Burly, who is a member of the Olive & Hurley Old School Baptist Church, is plunged into grief, with her two grown sons, yet stayed on the strong arm of the Lord Almighty.

His funeral was well attended at the Old School Baptist meeting-house. May the Lord fulfill his pledge to the widow and fatherless.

ALSO,

DEPARTED this life June 4th, 1894, in Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., at the residence of her son, brother Alvah Bogart, sister Betsy Bogart, in the 93d year of her age.

She was the aged widow of Deacon Henry Bogart. In her demise she proved the words of the poet,

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne."

While on earthly topics her mental faculties were impaired by reason of age, her spiritual faculties were retentive, so that in conversation with her two weeks before her death she told something of her pilgrimage of seventy years as a believer and professor of a living faith in Jesus Christ her living Lord, and of his protecting care over her; also of being baptized in the fellowship of the Olive & Hurley Old School Baptist Church, of which she was a member at the time of her death, by Elder Wm. Warren, who was not only a prisoner of Jesus Christ, but one who had hazarded his life for the sake of the Lord Jesus, having such great interest in the welfare of God's afflicted and poor people; so proving the prophecy that God's people shall bring forth fruit in old age, &c. For one of her age she was remarkably active, although a continual charge to our dear brother and sister Bogart. She could ascend and descend a flight of stairs to her room most of the time alone, as she chose to have her room above and alone, where she could sit or lie down, read and meditate; and all the friends know, who have visited at the house, how much she loved to hear the gospel preached, and the name of God glorified, and to hear the saints talk of Jesus and his love to poor sinners of Adam's lost and ruined race, according as they were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. Her last sickness was short (except gradual declining and more need of attention), being but three days, and fell asleep in Jesus, "blessed sleep! from which none ever wake to weep;" for God giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ.

Her funeral was largely attended at the house where she died, by her children, grandchildren, sisters and neighbors, who with the church mourn the loss of a loved one.

ALSO,

DEPARTED this life June 25th, 1894, after a few weeks' illness of blood-poisoning, following childbirth, at Bloomville, Delaware Co., N. Y., Mrs. Fanny E. Kiff, wife of Wm. L. Kiff, and only daughter of brother and sister Noah D. Vermilyea, aged 27 years.

This occurrence is one among many of the mysterious ways in which God moves with his creatures. A young husband is bereft of his tender and loving wife, the tender babe of its mother, the fond parents of their cherished daughter, and brothers and their wives made sad; yet in all this the righteous Judge doeth righteously, having given all power into the hand of his Son, who has conquered death and hell, and spoiled the grave; so that the inspired apostle could say, "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." So the comfort in a time of deep sorrow comes to the afflicted ones, that the loved one left evidence of her acceptance in the beloved Jesus, by which the sting of death is taken away, the grave robbed of its power, and a believer is passed from death unto life, and cannot come into condemnation, but lives forever; because Jesus, the good Shepherd, gave his life for the sheep, and has given eternal life to the one that feels the preciousness of his name.

As the mind of the dear one was fastened upon her loving Lord, and separated from natural ties, and dwelt upon her desire to be baptized in honor of his name, as she could sing of Jesus as lover of her soul, desiring to fly to his bosom, it was calculated to ease in a measure the terrible strain of the mind of all interested.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep."

"Asleep in Jesus! Far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be;
But there is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

May we humbly believe in Jesus, our dear Lord; and if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus God will bring with him. This is our hope and comfort in this vale of tears.

Her funeral was largely attended at her home by relatives and sympathizing friends. May the Lord sanctify afflictions to the good of all afflicted ones, for Jesus' sake.

J. D. HUBBELL.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y.

I AM not in possession of all the particulars connected with the departure of our sister, Jane Middleditch, who was well-known and loved by us all as a member of the Harford Church. She was called home during the month of April last, in the 74th year of her age, I think. She was one of the three lingering ones of the membership of that church when I was called to the pastoral charge of it, thirty-five years ago, two still remaining, and, I believe, baptized by the late Elder Samuel Trott in early life. Her name has occasionally appeared in the SIGNS; and the body of her letters, and also her conversation, seemed always to indicate a low-down state of mind, struggling with unbelief, and a deep sense of unworthiness and hardness of heart. It seemed her lot to pass through much trouble in her pilgrimage, but she maintained a firm and decided stand in favor of truth, by which she was made free from bondage in early life. Salvation by grace was the doctrine that suited her case, and the only doctrine adapted to the condition of a sensibly lost sinner. She seemed not to dread the hour of full discharge that sets the prisoner free. She began to fail some years previous to her death, as was very apparent to us all, being eased down the steep of age. Burdened with infirmities, all ties to earth seemed to be severed, hoping to the end, and desiring to be delivered from this body. She fell asleep, leaving a husband, son and daughter. May the Lord prepare us all to live by faith on his name, and at last die in the triumphs of the same.

WM. GRAFTON.

FOREST HILL, Md., June 22, 1894.

APPOINTMENTS.

THE Lord permitting, Elder John Trent will fill appointments as follows:

May's Lick, Mason Co., Ky., July 10th and 11th; Elk Lick, 14th and 15th; Salt River, 18th and 19th; Little Flock, 20th; Beech Creek, 21st; Bethel, 22d; Pleasureville, 23d; Sulphur Fork, 24th; Turners, 25th and 26th.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM. 7. POULTRY.
2. BEE KEEPING. 8. MEDICINAL.
3. THE HORSE. 9. HOUSEHOLD.
4. CATTLE. 10. DOMESTIC PETS.
5. SHEEP. 11. LEGAL POINTS.
6. SWINE. 12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS.

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

THIS work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits, of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$.05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON SUFFERING FROM DROPSY, Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strengthening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1894.

NO. 29.

POETRY.

SPIRIT OF THE FATHERS.

SPIRIT from whose operation
Faith and holiness proceed,
Source of heavenly conversation,
Strength in weakness, help in need;
Spirit by whose inspiration
Prophets and apostles spake,
Martyrs bled, and tribulation
Saints endured for Jesus' sake!

Lord, endue us with thy blessing,
That, though babes we be in grace,
Faith and love and zeal possessing
For thy house and holy place,
We may stake our dearest treasures,
All the good things of this life,
Honor, wealth and darling pleasures,
In the great and holy strife.

Give us Abram's faith unshaken
That the promise must be true,
And what God hath undertaken
He assuredly will do;
Which not only could unmoved
Trust the covenant of grace,
But the thing that he most loved
At the Lord's disposal place.

Give us Joseph's chaste behavior
When the world with crafty wiles
Seeks to draw us from the Savior
To herself with frowns or smiles.
Give us grace and strength for shunning
This ensnaring Potiphar;
Wisdom to elude her cunning,
Strength her open hate to bear.

Give us Moses' intercession
When he pleaded, wept and prayed
That the people's sore transgression
Might not to their charge be laid.
Let us not with selfish coldness
See a brother go astray;
But with Moses' holy boldness,
Plead and wrestle, weep and pray.

Give us David's bold defiance
Of the Lord's and Israel's foes;
And in trouble his reliance
Which on God his rock he shows:
His right princely disposition,
Friendship, constancy and truth;
But still more his deep contrition
For the errors of his youth.

Arm us with the stern decision
Of Elijah in these days,
When men led by superstition
To false gods new altars raise.
Let us shun the mere profession
Common in our day and land,
Witnessing a good confession,
Even if alone we stand.

Give us the apostles' daring,
And their bold, undaunted mood;
Threats and fierce reproaches bearing,
To proclaim a Savior's blood.
Let us to the truth bear witness,
Which alone can make us free;
Nor leave off until its sweetness
All shall know and taste through thee.

Give us Stephen's look collected,
And his calm and cheerful mind,
When we meet with unexpected
Trials of the sharpest kind.
In the midst of shouts and crying
Let us with composure stand;
Open heaven to us when dying,
Show us Christ at God's right hand.

Spirit by whose operation
Faith and love and might are given,
Source of holy conversation,
Bearing seed and fruit for heaven:
Spirit by whose inspiration
Prophets and apostles spake,
Visit us with thy salvation,
Dwell with us for Jesus' sake.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BURDETT, N. Y., May 9, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETH-REN:—I had thought till this afternoon that I should not attempt to write again for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, thinking myself too old.
But the Spirit seems to move me to reply to your correspondent who writes from Hutchinson, Kansas, on the subject of "Hell." It is not for the purpose of controversy that I reply to his arguments, but to say that they are the same as I heard from Universalists more than fifty years ago, when I lived in a nest of those professing that faith. In spite of my age (I am in my ninetieth year), I will seek unto the Lord for help to enable me to tell what I know about hell, and not what my speculations about it are.

First, then, I will state that I have never written my experience for publication, though I have often been asked to do it, but refused on the ground of its unprofitableness to the tender lambs, lest they should fear they had no experience at all, in contrast with one who had been brought up from the grave, though he never quit breathing; and one who had been rescued from hell, who had never been absent from the body. But in writing my experience I shall only take a bird's eye view of it, without going much into detail; and when I have finished my statement, if I find time and space, and God will help me, I will try to show that there is no incongruity with the idea of a "future punishment" being brought into a realization of woe in this mortal body, before the body and soul have been rent asunder. At any rate, all reasoning is vain that attempts to belittle the power and the majesty of God in the fulfillment of all things that are declared in the sacred oracles, that pertain to the children of the kingdom, or to the children of the evil one. Though I tremble and greatly fear my inability to do the subject justice, my fervent prayer to God is, that he will give me light, and will bear me in his arms while I flit hastily over his dealings with me, from early boy-hood down to the present time.
While I shall strive to be very brief,
I hope to omit nothing that will render any part of the subject obscure, any further than a lack of the experience of the same things must in some degree cloud the understanding, without disputing the credibility of the statement made.—See 2 Cor.

xii. 1-5.

I might write many things about my thoughts of God, before I ever had any fear of him; but I had not to wait long before a fear as "terrible as hell" came over me, on the occasion of the death of a brother who was in his twentieth year, while I was in my ninth year. I had seen no death in my father's family till then, and the horror of it, and the sense of fear that permeated my whole soul, seemed as one would feel on the brink of a precipice overhanging a fathomless gulf, where no helping hand can rescue the one that falls from it, unless, as it were, by being swung in a hammock anchored above, which I painted as similar to the power of the invisible God, that would bear me up and save me by his power, if I were only his friend.
If I were not, I felt as though the death of my body would leave my soul thus to fall, and fall forever and ever. As to sin, and the law, and salvation by the obedience of Jesus and death for the sins of his people, or that there could be no salvation without the shedding of blood for the remission of sins, I seemed to be quite ignorant. I was certainly impressed that I was an alien from God, and by reason of that alienation was unfit to appear before him;
but I did not, at that time, seem to have such a sense of the greatness of my sins as I have had since, nor of the need of a Savior to atone for our sins, and to be made our righteousness through his obedience, and the imputation of it to us when we were without strength. These things have seemed to grow in me, as it has pleased God to give me a growth in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.
But at that time I seemed to be terribly swayed by fear, without much knowledge of Jesus, only that I believed with Nicodemus, that he was a man sent from God, and was as pure as the Father, wonderfully beautiful in character, and was needful for salvation; but how, or why it was so, I could not understand.
I believed God to be so sovereign and so independent that he could save whom he pleased, and damn whom he pleased without incurring any just censure from anybody; because he made all things, and owned all things, and could make one share his Spirit that he pleased, and through that oneness could receive them to himself in a glorified state.
Thus I passed along for nearly two years in a state of fear that was terrible, only seeming now and then to be melted with love, when my fear would all depart, and a seeming welling up of unspeakable joy swelled my whole soul into a kind of ravishing wonder, that made me soar above the earth, and caused me to feel wholly absorbed in a glorious foretaste of heaven. But these periods were short and far between;

and when they were gone, I reverted to a terrible state of fear, again to grind in my prison house of woe.
But I thought none of this to be the genuine operation of the grace of God, to bring me to a knowledge of the truth. My great lack seemed to be that I did not truly appreciate the need of Christ to die for my sins, as I heard others declare; and to find it out, I sought the assemblies of God's people everywhere. I went to church meeting in the time of a "revival," without a thought of offering myself to the church for membership; but I was questioned about my feelings, and gave answers as honestly as I could. Then I was asked to absent myself, which I did, and was told when I returned that if I desired to be baptized the church would receive me. This was on the last day of August, 1815; and I did not decide to accept what had been offered to me unasked, till the next day. In the interval I reasoned thus: "I know I am unfit to be a member of the church; but the sin of intruding into company where I do not rightly belong is theirs who invite me; and may it not be lawful for me to avail myself of the advantage of the society I love, without being counted an intruder? Besides this, I am young, and it may become a kind of guard against the vanities of the world, so alluring to a youth as I am. I think I will risk the performance of the act, and tell them I will be baptized." Accordingly I was baptized on the first day of September, 1815, when I was ten and a half years old.

By this time I can see that I shall not be able to compress my narrative into a reasonable space, and shall be obliged to lop off a great deal that I thought would be useful to write when I began. But I must ignore every incident of my life from the time I was baptized till I was in my twenty-eighth year, in October, 1832. Then the Lord led me into temptation, to the end that he might profit me by "converting" me from it, as he did Peter. I fell into the society of a young man who was a infidel, and he scoffed at my weakness in believing in the tenets of the Bible and vital religion. Said he, "You are a man of sense enough to reject such folly, if you would only read; but you will not. If I should offer you books, you would not read them; and you would remain what you are, because you will not read." Well, I thought it safe to tell him I would, because I thought I had experienced so much that I could not be moved. I thought I could read his books, and then be able to say to him that I was stronger than ever, and that it was a phantom to inveigh against godliness, since all nature declared the glory of God, and the whole universe bespoke his handiwork. But no sooner had I told him that I would read his books, than he thrust two of them into my hands. These were Paine's "Age of Reason," and Baron Holbach's "Common Sense." No sooner did I begin to read than I felt the upheaval of my whole foundation, and a horror seized me, greater than I had ever felt before, but not so great as befell me many years afterwards, as the sequel will show, if God will help me to reach it. While I felt my own faith fail, my faith in the truth increased. While I wrote myself down a Pharisee, I saw more clearly than ever before how truthful was every word that proceeded out of the mouth of Jesus. Paine declared that Jesus gave the world a better code of morals than it otherwise knew, and yet said that he was a deceiver in declaring himself the Son of God. I knew he could not be, at the same time, both a good man and a bad; therefore Paine was a liar, and Jesus was true; for pure water could not flow from a corrupt fountain. Yet, in spite of my steadfastness of belief, Satan hurled at me the most terrible blasphemies, and made me tremble as an aspen leaf. I wandered in the woods and strolled in the streets, unable to pray, because I thought it blasphemy to ask a petition when it was so certain that my doom was sealed. So terrible was my distress that now and then the sweat would burst upon my brow, which gave me the thought that it was pressed out, and it gave me the first sympathetic thought of the "fellowship of the sufferings of Christ" that I had ever had. Strangely, I had no immediate fear of death; but it seemed likely that I should drag out a miserable existence on earth for years, and then "die accursed." Yet the unity of Christ with his people seemed so plain to me that I felt sure none of them could be lost, as I saw it to be a union of spirit, so they all worshiped the Father in spirit and in truth. The Spirit of God, I saw, only took of his own things, and shed them abroad in the hearts of his people; and when it flowed from their hearts back to him, it only passed to its source, and was never turned away empty. But I could see no evidence in myself of ever having had a better knowledge of God than Baalam had, who saw a great glory surrounding the tents of Israel, and desired that his last end might be like his; but he was anxious to curse God's people for hire, and to mock God with sacrifices offered to him, that he might gain permission to curse them. In this base deed I could see no semblance of my character to Baalam's; yet I thought myself worse than he, in that I had trodden under foot the light that had seemed to illumine me, from which I saw the beauty of holiness.

But I am widening out so much in this that I must stop short here, and only name the incident that occurred the evening before my release from that terrible bondage. It was about a week after I received the stroke, that my father's brother (a deacon of the Baptist Church) called to see me. The next morning I walked out with him, and laid bare my whole case to him. He pleaded that I had no reason to despair, while I reasoned to him out of the Scriptures to prove the certainty of my everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord. But he went home, and left me without comfort. Not long after he left, the sweet smelling breath of the Spirit softly flowed into my heart; and it was not new to me, for I had felt it before. But my response to it was, I cannot trust it. I have had it before, and it was not equal to the task of keeping me from falling. I need the equivalent of words spoken unto me from the mouth of Jesus, saying to me, "I am thy great salvation." But sweeter and sweeter swelled the love of God in me, till the words of Isaiah shut my mouth, declaring, "I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." Then my mouth was stopped, and mentally I exclaimed with Thomas, "My Lord and my God!" It is enough. Thou hast brought me this darkness, in order to show me the exceeding brightness of the light in contrast with it. It is both a light seen, and a light felt. And I trusted that it would never be dim again, so that I would not be able to look through the darkness, and see it; but the sequel will show that I was mistaken.

I begin to see it is impossible to bring before the readers of the SIGNS a continued narrative of my experience, for it would more than absorb the whole of its pages. I must therefore be content to speak of only a few incidents here and there, without any especial regard to their connection.

Suffice it to say that for several years I could most always look through the darkness and see the light shed upon me in October, 1832. But the time came when God would show me more and deeper things than he had shown me before. To this end I believe that he again led me into temptation; and again I must give my reason for thinking so. Jesus was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. And was he not "led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil?" Then why not his people also? Did he not teach us to pray, "Lead us not into temptation?" And what did he so teach for if it cannot happen to us? The truth is, the devil leads the world into temptation; but God, when it is needful to accomplish a purpose for his glory, sometimes leads his people into temptation. This I have experienced, and so I believe it. It gives me comfort to believe that God has led me into temptation, in order that a legitimate chastisement might fall on a legitimate son, to enable me to respond to the literal truth of some things recorded in the sacred oracles, that many of God's children are slow of heart to believe. In this way it was that God taught me that hell is no myth of men's fancy, that can be moulded into the shape men please; but it is a verity of the same character that the Bible gives it, and will not be accommodated to any man's whim. If I may be told I imagine "wildly," and was insane when I felt it, I can only say then, that the damned in hell will have the same delusion when they lift up their eyes in torment.

As to the preceding incidents of my terrible calamity, I must say something, but I cannot say all. The nature of my second distress was the same as the first; and the preceding incidents were of the same character, but were more aggravated in degree. So also it was needful that the chastisement must be correspondingly greater in the second than in the first, even as I had trampled on more light in the second than I did in the first; for all the light shed on me in my former deliverance was wholly ignored. Indeed, I became a kind of mental philosopher in the study of phrenology; and at one time I lost the spirit of prayer for, I think, about three months, and only believed in God as one afar off, and not a God at hand. How else could God do with me but chastise me according to my deserts? In doing so, he owned me as his legitimate child; but he did not do it till he had first drawn me back to him by the tender cords of his love. Even for years after, he led me along without anything more than losses and sickness, and such sorrows as are common, and which strokes I kissed as the needful means to lead me back to the recognition of God's holy hand in all the events of time. Without it, all the universe would collapse, and fall into a wild chaos more terrible than the power above could inflict with his justice.

But the exact incident that cast me down, and that brought me to feel myself a castaway, is not proper to be named here. It would take too long to explain it. I will therefore only say, that it was attended with a bolt of wrath that was unlike any earthly pang. It came harnessed in a livery of hell, and told its origin to be unearthly, and declared by its sense that "our God is a consuming fire." I have sometimes reasoned about hell, before this, but I have never done so since. This happened in April, 1856; and before the Lord brought me again to see the least light, it was the fourth day of February, 1859. At times I saw lights above the brightness of the sun, that gleamed with a wrath so fierce that none but God could display. I also felt bolts that pierced me as lightning, that which none fiercer (I believe) ever shot through the souls of those in the nethermost hell. I was taken to the asylum for lunatics, in Utica, N. Y., and there God shut me in for five and a half years, and my deliverance was on the fourth day of February, three years to a day before the doors were opened to let me out. When I went into the asylum (of my own consent), my physical condition was weak, and I was a mere skeleton; but with all my pangs and woe, God so wrought upon me with his hand that I ate food and gained flesh. To make the wonder more, in proving his boundless power, I walked the halls in silence, while inwardly I groaned with unutterable woe! Often my hands and arms, as far as my elbows, would feel as if in ice water, giving intolerable pain; besides, unearthly feelings, which have no semblance to earthly senses, would follow me all day; but when I went to bed I would feel a sense of something like an opiate soothing me, and warming me into a gentle sleep. But as soon as I awoke in the morning, I awoke again to my horror; and day after day, and month after month, into years even, this was my daily round; and like unto the fiend described by Milton, I "Reasoned of God, of providence, of will and fate;

Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute,
And found no end, in wand'ring mazes lost."

But as "free will" was not in my vocabulary before, I did not give place to it then. O how I admired the most perfect virtue then, and saw Jesus in all his loveliness of character, submitting to the Father's sword of justice, bathed in his bosom, while, as it were, great drops of bloody sweat fell to the ground. I desired a virtue equal to that; but instead of it, Satan worked me with horrible temptations to blaspheme God, because he had "fitted me to destruction." I found no place to do good, and only waited for the "drop," as the culprit on the gallows. I not only denied the power of free will in myself, but was as "hasty" as David was, to say, "All men are liars!" Mind you, he said this in the same connection of his declaration that the pangs of hell got hold of him, and the snares of death did prevent him; that is, came before he died. I said not that all men were liars, for I saw the remnant according to the election of grace, saved in Christ; but out of him all are liars, I said. No matter what the zeal may be in teaching false ways (see Psa. cxvi.), I never doubted David's experience of the pangs of hell, and that it was needful that he should, to personate the Lord Jesus, feeling the same in the garden. But why it should be necessary for me to feel the same, I do not know, unless to make me a witness to the truth that that is the hell felt by David and by Jesus which is the real hell that is reserved for the wicked in the world to come. That is, where the real sheol of the Hebrew is translated hell; but hades, critical writers tell us, sometimes means the grave.

When I began this article I did not perceive the magnitude of the task before me, but supposed that I should be able to say more about the pangs of hell in me that I felt, and give more of a detailed account of my experience, without taking so much space that I could not also refer to nearly every passage cited by your correspondent, to prove that those passages did not refer to the punishment of the wicked in a future state, and make reply that I did so believe, and would find room to tell why I believed it. I must not write more, however, as it is asking too much space for any one article, unless it be better than I am able to write. Even this I have no demands on you to publish; but if you do publish it your readers will be aware that the lack of connection is well known to me. It is so disconnected, from the necessities of the case.

With brotherly love,

W. B. SLAWSON.

DOUBTS AND FEARS OF THE CHILDREN OF GOD.

How often it is that we hear the doubting ones in Israel saying, "I see all the promises for the Lord's people in the Scriptures cited to them, or in a gospel sermon to which they have listened, but there is nothing in it for me; nothing but condemnation; nothing except that which pronounces my own doom;" and they groan within themselves, and often aloud, saying, "Truly I am not included in that number for whom Christ died, or I would not feel thus. His pardoning blood was never shed for me, or I would have some evidence of it in the midst of all the promises that I behold for God's elect. All are not blessed alike, nor can any extricate themselves from the gloom of despair; but sometimes it does seem that we should be willing for our brethren to make some applications of the promises contained in the Scriptures to our case. We seem to forget entirely that the same Scripture that condemns us contains also a promise to us, either directly or indirectly. Is this thoroughly understood? Probably not; but we believe that the teachings of God our Savior, as well as the experience of his people, will bear us out in this belief. We refer to those who are members of the church, who in the midst of doubts and fears from various sources (and yet which are all from the same source) say, "My walk is not that of a Christian. It is so far short of the standard which Christ laid down that I cannot claim the least of his promises;" and they many times quote this Scripture, claiming that it shuts them out, "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die." Death is certainly the greatest condemnation that can be passed upon us; and yet this Scripture contains a promise to the characters to whom it applies; because the word "death," as here used, presupposes life; and "we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." When born into this world we are ushered into a world of sin, sorrow and death. We are naturally in a state of death in sin, and we must be born again in order to enter the kingdom of heaven; we must be born of the Spirit and of water; all of which surely must be preceded by life. Then if we shall be given over to the lusts of our flesh, the Scripture, "If ye live after the flesh," &c., is applicable to us. It certainly cannot apply to those who are already dead, but to those who are alive, and have had the restraining hand of God withdrawn from them; who, as Elder Keene said in a letter to the SIGNS, have been left to themselves to try them; who have not hearkened unto the voice of the Lord; who have worshiped strange gods, and now are living after the flesh, which we always do when left alone; and when we do this we shall die. How? Does it mean eternally? No; because it only applies to the Lord's people, and none of them can be lost. We think it means to die to the enjoyment of the glorious presence of the Spirit of God; dying to that heavenly joy which his presence always affords. God's Spirit is life, and if we be his it is our life eternally; but when he withdraws his presence from us he withdraws our life, and it is then that we die, for death is the absence of life. It is opposite to life; and it is impossible for us to be alive spiritually without the Spirit of God, or to be dead with his Spirit. It seems that here is brought to view the apostle's experience when he said, "I die daily." It is a constant repetition of this same experience that we pass through from time to time. We die to spiritual enjoyment when left to ourselves; but says the Savior, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Neither do we get so low down that the everlasting arms are not underneath us. He ever watches over his people, and has said to the enemy, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther." He has not left nor forsaken us in the sense that we feel while groping in the darkness, but has simply withdrawn his presence from our view; but he will not suffer his faithfulness to fail. The promises of God in Christ are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God by us; but where does the promise come in from the Scripture quoted? Perhaps it is indirect; but it comes from the very fact that to no one else but God's people is it applicable. If any one can read the Scripture, "If ye live after the flesh," &c., and can say from the depths of the heart, "That is me," it is an evidence that the Lord is indeed dealing with that individual; and wherever God has begun a good work in the heart he will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. This Scripture does not cease to be applicable to a case that has been received into the church, but is applicable to every one of the elect until they shall soar away to that eternal home of bliss, where all shall join in songs of praise to our gracious Redeemer. The very fact that the Scripture of our subject condemns one, reverts our mind back to the certainty that following this feeling of condemnation is a hungering and thirsting after righteousness; and for all such we hear the following words of comfort and consolation, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." In God's own time, though to us it be a long and weary waiting, will he again reveal his precious face to us, to light up our way, and make us to feel and exclaim, as did Jonah, "Salvation is of the Lord."

In reply to this, and much more that has often been spoken and written for the benefit of these doubting, trembling ones, we again hear them answer, "Yes, I know all this is true of and for the children of God, but it does not reach one that is left to go his own way, in response to the lusts of the flesh." No sinner was ever left to the lusts of the flesh until he had been visited by the Spirit of God; for it is only the power of God that ever raises us above the things of nature. Let us hear what Paul says in Romans vii. 4, 5: "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For when we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death." Please mark the difference of the fruit spoken of in these two verses. The one is bringing forth fruit unto God; the other is bringing forth fruit unto death. This last, however, is while we were yet in the flesh. "But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." Following this, in the seventh verse, the apostle says, "I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet. But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead." Thus, according to the above, it is positively necessary that to know sin we must first know what it is to lust. We read from natural books of instruction what lust is, and in the same way from the Bible what sin is; but this Scripture plainly teaches us, as does our experience, that in order to know lust, and thereby know and feel the awful power of sin, we must know what the law says to the heart. It must have been written in our heart and imprinted in our mind; and not until then can we know that the law hath said, "Thou shalt not covet." Then it is that we realize the truth of the words, "But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead." The word "wrought" means to work, to effect; and it does not mean that sin is doing any more in us now than it did before, except to work out in our mind or to show to us all manner of concupiscence that sin has worked all the time in us; but it has been lying dead, dormant, inactive, so far as our realization of it is concerned, as a subject of God's mercy. It has had no power over us until the present, for without the law it was dead, and nothing dead has any power; and notwithstanding this, we were dead in sin. "For I was alive without the law once; but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died." Being dead in sin, we were alive without the law, that is, alive to the love of sin; but when the commandment came, sin, which was dead, revived, and we died to the love of sin.

We have thus referred to a few points of experience from the time that the law is written in the heart until the subject of the same has been received into the church. They are Israelites, brought up out of the land of Egypt; and while on their way we see them at the Red Sea. The enemy behind them, a great sea before them, hedged in upon the right and upon the left, the children of Israel cried out in their anguish of mind. "Stand still, and see the salvation of God," was the command; and it comes to every sin-sick soul that is brought to the Red Sea. But we are now out of the land of Egypt. We are freed from the bondage of the Egyptians, freed from the law; but, alas! we are not freed from that law which we see in our members, warring against the law of our minds, and bringing us into captivity to the law of sin which is in our members. When we are brought into captivity to this law of sin our gracious Lord has withdrawn his smiling face from our view, and the lusts of our flesh assert their power.

(Continued on page 229.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 18, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

DEATH OF ELDER WILLIAM. J. PURINGTON.

As we are about to go to press we are informed by a telegram of the death of our dearly beloved brother, Elder Wm. J. Purington, which occurred on Friday morning, July 13th. A suitable obituary will doubtless be prepared for our next issue.—ED.

JESUS THE END OF PROPHECY.

WHEN the cry, "It is finished!" was uttered by the dying Lord of life and glory, that declaration included all that was written in the law and in the inspired testimony of the prophets, and proclaimed the fulfillment of the eternal counsel of God in which he was chosen to be the Savior of his people from their sins. There was no further need that he should be manifest in the flesh as the perfect Servant whom God upheld by his own omnipotence. He had honored every demand of the holy law, and infinite justice could ask no more. It is important that the saints should ever remember that there is no revelation given in the Scriptures for any other purpose but to testify of Jesus. While there is incidental reference to the affairs of time, as the setting up of empires and their overthrow, it is only as such incidents are used in showing the glory of our Lord in his control of all events for the manifestation of his eternal purpose in the preservation of his elect, spiritual people unto that great salvation to which they were ordained in Christ before the worlds were made. To those carnal Jews who disputed his doctrine he said, "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and THEY ARE THEY WHICH TESTIFY OF ME."—John v. 39. So, when John would have worshiped the angel by whom he was shown the things of Jesus, the angel said unto him, "See thou do it not; I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus; worship God; for THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS IS THE SPIRIT OF PROPHECY."—Rev. xix. 10. While believers are settled in this truth there is little occasion for them to be troubled by the devices of the adversary, who is ever ready to rob them of their rest in the assurance of faith by ingeniously wresting the words of inspiration. The natural mind esteems the strife of nations as of far more importance than the mourning of a conscious sinner; but in the judgment of God there is not an unuttered groan but that is gathered in the golden vials wherein are preserved before his throne the prayers of all saints.—Rev. v. 8; viii. 3. He sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers. He brings princes to nothing, and makes the judges of the earth as vanity. He turns man to destruction, and says, Return, ye children of men. Thus, those things which are highly esteemed among men are accounted nought by our God; and those whom men consider the offscouring of all things are precious in the sight of the Lord, even as his peculiar treasure, and as the jewels of a crown unto him. As he gave the wealth, honor and power of Egypt for the ransom of national Israel, so he has accounted all that is valued among men as vanity in comparison with that grace which he has bestowed upon his spiritual Israel. Not even the natural reason of the saints can comprehend this divine mystery of electing love. Constantly they seek in themselves some attraction by which this choice of God was drawn to embrace them; and their wily adversary finds an easy way to annoy them by referring to their conscious destitution of merit as evidence of their delusion in hoping in the grace of God for deliverance from the bondage of corruption. They can never overcome this temptation by reason. In this contest, as in all their experience, they must always confess that it is alone by grace that they are saved. Boasting is excluded by the grace of God which is revealed only through that faith which is the fruit of the Spirit freely given to them by the same eternal love which chose them in Christ before the foundation of the world. By that divine choice it was determined that they should be holy and without blame before God in love. If they were in themselves blameless before the holy law of God there would be nothing more than simple justice in this appointment. They could ascribe no praise to the riches of grace for that which would thus be their just judgment. But the glorious mystery of this divine appointment consists in the fact that it pleased the Lord to choose guilty and condemned sinners in whom was no merit, that they by the blood of Jesus should be cleansed from all sin, and that they should be holy and without blame before him in love. It must not be forgotten that this complete justification of the justly condemned sinners thus chosen, is infinitely more than the pardon of their sins. By this inconceivable grace the demand of justice is not less fully satisfied than the mercy and love of God. Not only are the subjects of this election freed from the penalty of their sins, they are also fully delivered from the sins by which they were polluted. Now, no more guilt can be found in them than in their sinless Redeemer. In view of this great grace which is revealed in Christ Jesus it is not difficult to understand that he is the first cause and embodiment of all the revelation which God has given in the Scriptures, as well as the Beginning of the creation of God, and the center and object for which all things are and were created.

From the consideration of the infinite character of this salvation which is in Christ, it is not strange that in all the law and the prophets Jesus is the sum of what is recorded. Because it pleased God to hide these things from the wise and prudent, the efforts of men to find out God by searching have always proved vain. Many very learned and elaborate theories have been devised, in which human wisdom has sought to find the fulfillment of prophecy in events which men consider important among the nations of this world; but it is not for the instruction of men in natural things that God has given the guidance of his Spirit to prophets and apostles. Not only the written words of prophecy but all the history of the dealing of God with his people under the patriarchal and Mosaic dispensations, must be seen as the testimony of Jesus, or their essential significance is not understood. Hence, all those labored dissertations in which men have claimed to find by study the interpretation of Scripture prophecy, however consistent they may seem to reason, have only served to expose the folly of those who have devised them. It is a common result of these scientific devices to find the whole significance of the prophecies which they study fulfilled in the natural history of the children of Abraham. It is almost universally taught by them that there is yet to be a restoration of the Jews to the land of Palestine, and they are to be established there in the observance of those privileges and ordinances which were given them by Moses. Without attempting to discuss this conclusion, it is sufficient for those who look to Jesus for salvation to consider that this exposition directly controverts the declarations of the Lord himself and his inspired apostle. Jesus says, "For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John."—Matt. xi. 13. Peter says, "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins."—Acts x. 43. Hence, if all that was witnessed by the legal and prophetic dispensations was in Jesus fulfilled, it is evident that the establishing of those prophetic observances again would signify that another Messiah must come in their fulfillment. This is certainly a denial that Jesus is the end of the law, and that the salvation which he wrought is perfected in his obedience and offering of himself once for all. Certainly none who trust in the grace which was revealed in Jesus can look for another Mediator to come from God. Unless that righteousness of God which dwelt in Jesus is sufficient for the justification of those for whom he laid down his life, there can be no hope for any sinner. But the same failure by which his people were forbidden to hope, would also hold the Captain of our salvation under the condemnation of divine justice. Surely this blasphemous suggestion cannot for a moment deceive the tempted believer.

Since man became a transgressor of the holy commandment of his Creator, the enemy of righteousness has ever sought to pervert the truth which God declared in the law as given to man in his primitive innocence. To this end proud reason is directed to search the heights and depths of human wisdom for some understanding of the things which are made, which is different from that given by divine inspiration. Carnal enmity against God is ever ready to bow down to any idol in which it finds the sinner exalted as holding his destiny in his own power, and in which there is nothing of the humiliating doctrine of salvation exclusively by the grace of God. Man does not object to rendering adoration to such gods as are found in his own imagination; but he has never devised an idol superior to himself. The pride of his heart is flattered by the imagination that his god is altogether such a being as himself, and in worshiping that god he is only ascribing honor and glory to himself. Thus self is the ultimate object of all natural worship, whether it be called, Heathenism, or Catholic, or Protestant Christianity. Man is prone to worship some object, and his pride forbids that he should yield his own conception of that object so long as he is guided by his natural mind. Hence, every thought of God even in the imagination of an enlightened sinner, is entirely out of the way. None can know him but as he is revealed in the heart by his own holy Spirit. Certainly those from whom it has pleased God to hide this knowledge can never attain to it by their own researches.

Since rational men commonly accept the truth that they are practically sinners, and confess that they must be changed in order to be made holy, they are not disposed to reject any doctrine which represents them as having power to avail themselves of the chance to secure that change at their own will. Thus, in the recent gathering of teachers of all the religions of the world at Chicago, when they compared their doctrines, they found that there was no essential difference between Pagan idolatry and the popular christianity of America. All agreed that the good works of the creature were the essential price to be rendered in securing the favor of God. The professed teachers of christianity were as far as the avowed heathen from understanding that sinners are saved by the blood of Jesus from all sin. Yet they could not perceive the folly of seeking to convert those from whose heathen religion they confessed their inability to discover that their own doctrines materially differed. Even sound natural reason should suffice to detect such absurdity.

In the light of the testimony of inspiration, all the teachings which are consistent with the perverted notions of the depraved mind of man are thereby manifested as utterly false. There could be no occasion for the gift of inspiration to teach that which is within the power of the mind of creatures to attain by study. Not even by the most diligent examination of the inspired Scriptures can man acquire the ability to know that there is salvation in the name of Jesus. Paul says, "Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led; wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."—1 Cor. xii. 2, 3. In calling upon him for deliverance from sin every believer does say that Jesus is the Lord. In this confession the witness is given that the Spirit of truth dwells in the helpless suppliant. "For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Thus, it is conclusive assurance that a sinner is led by the Spirit of God when he knows that there is salvation nowhere else but in the gracious name of Jesus. His very prayer ascribes omnipotent sovereignty to Jesus as the one Lord of life and glory.

When the pride of man prompts him to seek for knowledge of future events in the record which is given in the Scriptures, there is likely to be more anxiety for selfish honors and the praise of men than desire to see Jesus exalted as the glorious One to whom all the prophets give witness. There have doubtless been cases since John was on the isle that is called Patmos, when the saints have manifested a disposition to worship the messengers by whom they have received the testimony of Jesus. And when walking according to their natural minds the ministers of Christ are not offended by receiving such worship. Certainly their transgression will in every such case bring upon them the rod of sore chastening; yet the fleshly ambition of men constantly aspires to have the highest place in the estimation of their fellows. When the saints are governed by this carnal mind they cannot see that Jesus is the Sun in the gospel heaven, from whom the whole light of revelation shines in the illumination of prophets and apostles, and he is the great embodiment of all revealed truth, as he is "Alpha and Omega, the first and the last." There is no liability of the saints looking for any other fulfillment of any prophecy when they see Jesus. All earthly considerations are forgotten in his heavenly glory, as the light of a dim candle is lost in the full blaze of the noonday sunshine. Jesus is then revealed in his own divine radiance, and from his face the created earth and heaven are fled away; and there is found no place for them. As "He is before all things, and by him all things consist," so he is the one source of all assurance and comfort to his ransomed people. The saints can never be deprived of the spiritual blessings which are treasured in him so long as they can see Jesus in whom all fullness dwells.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

OWING to the depressed condition of the times financially we have delayed for a long time calling the attention of our delinquents to the fact that their subscriptions were in arrears; consequently we now have on our list several hundred whose subscriptions are a year or more behind. We earnestly request all to look at the date next to their name, pasted either on the margin of their paper or on the wrapper in which their paper comes. This date shows when their time expired; and all who find their subscription in arrears will please make a remittance for the same. We have bills now over due, and need the money to meet our obligations.

Brethren and friends, please give this matter your early attention, and you will greatly oblige us.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

WITH our first number for March we discontinued the notice headed "Until March," with a view to withdrawing our extraordinary offer to old subscribers as an inducement for them to procure new subscribers: but we have received a number of letters from very efficient brethren complaining that the time has been so short, and the weather so inclement, that they have not had an opportunity to get out among the brethren and friends as they would like to do, and requesting us for an extension of the time. We will therefore, until further notice, continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes

(Continued from page 227.)

In Psalm lxxxi. 7-12 we read, "Thou calledst in trouble, and I delivered thee; I answered thee in the secret place of thunder: I proved thee at the waters of Meribah. Selah. Hear, O my people, and I will testify unto thee: O Israel, if thou wilt hearken unto me; there shall no strange god be in thee; neither shalt thou worship any strange god. I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. But my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me. So I gave them up unto their own hearts' lust: and they walked in their own counsels." Just so it is in this our day, when the Lord's people worship strange gods, when we do not hearken to the voice of God, and have set up idols in our hearts; we are given up to our hearts' lust, and walk in our own counsels. It is at this stage of our experience that we live after the flesh, and die in consequence, but not for all time to come while in the flesh; for after a weary groping in the darkness, after mourning the absence of the smiling face of our dear Redeemer, until we are brought low at his feet, and can once again ascribe all honor, praise and glory to his blessed name for the riches of his grace, in God's own time, and according to his good pleasure, he restores to us the joy of his salvation.

Again we hear the doubting one say, "I know all this is true, but I have never been brought out of the land of Egypt; I have no evidence whatever that the Lord is having any dealings with me, except as he deals with the wicked of the earth, those who shall be forever banished from the presence of God in that great beyond." Yes, we even hear them declaring that they are hypocrites, and black with sin in the sight of God. Those to whom Christ spoke of their hypocrisy did not know it until he told them, and even then they did not see how that could possibly be, nor can any ever know it as long as they are such characters; but the moment that we hear one say, "I am a hypocrite," it is evidence that he or she speaks from a knowledge or feeling of unworthiness to have a name in the church. Do we hear those of the world, who are dead in trespasses and in sins, say, "I am black in the sight of God?" No. "The dead know not anything," and do not think themselves black; but if it is one who makes pretensions of religion, he thinks he should be spoken of as "my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled." The world does not know that this is spoken about the church, presented by Christ to the Father as spotless and without blame before him in love. But we are dealing with one who feels to be the chief of sinners, awfully black in the sight of God; and we know that this is impossible with one who has not been remembered by God in covenant with Christ before the foundation of the world.

If there is a word of truth written in this piece it has not been learned in the strength of man; neither have any of God's people ever known the first whit of spiritual things except they have been taught by the Spirit of God. As the young child must be taught the first letter of the alphabet, and so on to the last, as a foundation for natural knowledge, so must God's children be taught by the Spirit from the beginning in the spiritual school; and if any man, woman or child ever gives expression from the heart of feeling to be a hypocrite or a sinner, or of knowing where Christ's church is, or who are the people of God, and what constitutes of a truth a promise to his afflicted, or if they can see and understand a single expression within the lids of the Bible as expressive of the truth as it is in Jesus, that individual is one to whom the love and mercy of God are commended through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Now a few more words about the indwelling sin that is manifested every day of our life. There seems to be an idea with some that we should live above reproach, comparatively speaking, in order to be entitled to membership in the church; and sometimes we know of some who express at least a doubt of one being a subject of grace when he does not live above reproach. The Savior said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." After reading such a declaration can we even hope to live above the world and its natural element, sin, and consequently the tribulations that attend this life, except as it pleases God to give us strength to live above it? We know that not one of his people is enabled to live above the world at all times. Again, referring to the eighty-first Psalm, God speaks of his people thus, "But my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me. So I gave them up unto their own hearts' lust: and they walked in their own counsels." Here seems to be a sufficient explanation of the fact that we do not live above reproach, and that we do live after the flesh at times. When the serpent tempted Eve in the garden it said, concerning the eating of the forbidden fruit, "Ye shall not surely die," but "ye shall be as gods." So Eve partook of the fruit; and this is the first instance where God's voice was not hearkened to. This was the first manifestation of the strange gods that are in Israel. These gods are idols in our hearts, and when we worship them we cannot hearken to the voice of God. Then he gives us over to our hearts' lust, and we walk in our own counsels, just as Eve did. The Lord withdraws his presence from us, just as he drove Adam and Eve out of his presence after the transgression; and we now live after the flesh, and not after the teachings of God's Spirit, since we cannot live above the flesh except his Spirit enables us to. We are left to the consequences of this natural life, which is in reality a state of death to everything spiritual; and when the natural element of our nature asserts itself at such times we are said to die. After the foregoing remarks it seems plain why the apostle spoke as he did concerning the doing of things that he would not, and not doing the things that he would. Then he said, "It is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Although we know that God's people are sometimes accused of quoting this Scripture as a sort of cloak for their sins, it is truly the deduction of the inspired writer's understanding of the sentiment expressed in the whole of Romans vii. We have no cloak save the righteousness of Christ, which is sufficient. The teaching of the above Scripture, as well as the eighty-first Psalm, already quoted, is that God is all-powerful, and can do all things, and that we are weak, dependent creatures, and can do nothing in and of ourselves that is acceptable to God. It teaches us also where our strength comes from, that he is indeed the true and living God, and besides him there is no Savior. But O! how often we have to learn this lesson. But after all that has been pointed out as evidence for the doubting and trembling ones in Israel, we realize that all must be done according to the will of God; and in conclusion I feel to quote the apostle's words in Romans x. 1, "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved."

May the love and mercy of God be continued with his elect according to the needs of his dear children.

S. T. CUBBAGE.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., May 14, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send you for publication a letter from brother Theodore Hogeland, a young member of this church, who is now living in Montana. The incident he relates is most interesting, especially to those who know how sweet is the fellowship that exists between the people of God, and which is felt by them whenever they meet in the Spirit.

SILAS H. DURAND.

DEERFIELD, Montana, March 8, 1894.

MY DEAR FATHER AND MOTHER:—A week ago to-night I went over to Wolf Creek, a distance of twenty miles, to see a man by the name of Harry Wareham. When I got there he told me that they thought his father was dying (a man seventy-two years old, who has been an invalid for three years), and asked me to put up my team and stay until morning. I went with him to see his father, whom they all thought could not live an hour. He was unconscious at the time, sleeping very heavy. I stayed with him until after supper, and when I returned after supper I found his pulse and breathing both stronger and more regular, but it was impossible to rouse him until nearly ten o'clock. After waking he became quite rational. He recognized me among other strangers who had come in while he was unconscious, and at that time there were over thirty in the house with the family. After talking a while he said, "I am glad to see you all. I suppose you have come to see life pass from this mortal body. O that it were the Savior's will that I might go and be at rest with him for evermore, though I should not murmur, for he has been more than gracious to such a one as I. I feel better than I have for quite a while, but I feel as though I would like to say farewell to you all, for I may never have another chance." We had been singing for him. When he spoke, one of his nephews (who is a Presbyterian, and who had tried to console him at times), Mrs. Wareham and Henry, and myself, who had been standing near the bed, all went up to him, and he kissed each one, and his mild admonishments to the family and friends would melt a heart of stone. O what a glorious hour it was with my soul, and how often since have I thanked God for guiding me there that day. Just after he had kissed all of us, I was near the bed when he motioned for me to come to him, and as I went to his bedside he raised himself on his elbow and said, "Are you not a believer?" I told him I was. He drew me to his bosom and wept like a child. He said, "Something told me so when I first saw you to-night. O God, I thank thee for sending me one to comfort me in my last days." He did not ask me my belief or tell me his, though his faith in the Savior that died to save sinners, suited me. I had heard that he was a Baptist, and had thought him to be a New School; and knowing that it was no time for controversy, I had said what I could to assure him that the God who had buoyed him up through such long suffering surely would not forsake him now. We sang for him again, and on account of so much exertion and his constant suffering he fell asleep. We tried to rouse him every hour, but could not bring him to consciousness. After I had gone to breakfast he roused up and was rational again; but when I was ready to come home he had just fallen asleep, and I hated to have him awakened, and so I told them to tell him how it was that I had gone without seeing him. He sent word over on Saturday that he wished to see me, but the coach was behind and I did not get home until Monday at two o'clock, when I received the note and went on over that afternoon. When I went in he was asleep and much worse. He had been unconscious, and the family had sent off for a preacher the day before, who was still there. A few minutes after I arrived he roused up and they told him I was there. His mind was not right clear, though he knew me. He raised both hands and said, "I am afraid you come too late. I wanted to see you so bad." I went and sat down on the edge of the bed, and as soon as he roused up a little he kissed me and told me how glad he was that I had come. After I had talked with him for a while he told me not to inquire as to his faith; "For," said he, "there has been the most fearful sawings at me that you ever saw." I took from his last sentence that his nephew and the minister were of different denominations, and had both been advancing doctrines different from his. I told him that I was satisfied with his faith, and that my only prayer was that my faith might be as firm as his. I was sitting beside him holding his hand, talking, when he spoke of the religious workers of the world; and I knew and told him that he was the first Old Baptist that I had met in the west. He looked up with tears in his eyes and said, "Then you are really an Old Baptist? I was really afraid to ask you, for your talk suited me; and if you were not, I never wanted to find it out, for you are the only one that has been able to understand me for a number of years. O my God, I thank thee for this revelation." You can imagine the joy and union of that moment, though the union had really taken place before. O how I praised the Lord for his continued loving-kindness and tender mercy to such an unworthy one as I. What a consolation it was to meet one so firm in the faith, and how it strengthened my hope. Oft times have I thought that I surely must give up in despair. My walk has always been so far from what that of a child of God should be that it often makes me cry out, "God, remember me, a poor, vile sinner that I am." O that my walk was more like those that I have been able to see so much perfection in, and on whose countenances the peace of God was stamped.

THEODORE HOGELAND.

PORTLAND, Ind., June 16, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—As it has pleased the Lord to reveal certain things to a weak worm of the dust which seem incredible to the majority of mankind, it has long been impressed upon my mind that I must write some of the things that have been revealed to me. I have been an occasional reader of the SIGNS for forty years. It is now over fifty-six years since the Lord first appeared to me, and in a night vision. I seemed to be in a place I well knew, and was led up an ascent. The sun appeared to be about an hour high in the west, and it was morning. I could look upon the sun as well as I could upon the moon, yet it was very bright. As it was about one hour high, and there are sixty minutes in an hour, what would it amount to? Sixty years more or less. The Lord knoweth. I also saw some other things that transpired soon after, which helped to establish this vision in my mind as being of great importance. As I had made a public profession of religion, and was not satisfied with it, I was not able to comprehend what was before me at that time; and I yet know not what the Lord has in store for me; but I do not need to know, as he doeth all things well, be it ever so dark.

In the spring of 1845 it seemed that a dreadful affliction was awaiting me. I felt that I was undeserving the favor of God, but I had a faint hope that seemed without foundation that God would yet be merciful to me. I felt I could endure all this if only Jesus would or could be with me. Then there came to me a voice like one speaking, and saying, "Jesus has been with you, and he still is with you, and he says he will go with you to the end." No tongue can tell the joy that filled my soul. I could see that Jesus died, that such a sinner as me might live. I then thought that my time must be spent in the service of God, and I was ready to live to his glory; but I soon felt my inability to do so, and that I was yet in the flesh. I thought I must join with those who did worship God, and look alone to him to help me. As the Protestant Methodists lived all around me, and were so very zealous, I thought they were the ones to go with for the present. I could not believe in sprinkling for baptism; but as I had been immersed when I was eleven years old, I thought that would answer; so I went to them for a home, as I had heard my father say when I was only seven years old that there were christians in all denominations, and I thought it must be true. Now, for the first time, I began to search the Scriptures to see if they were the church of God. By turning to the epistle to the Ephesians and reading I soon found them called adulterers and adulteresses, making friends with the world; and how many kinds of children they have, their husband not pretending to own near all of them. Well, I could not stay with them, and felt I must tell them so at the first opportunity. As they were to have a meeting at our house on Sunday night, I thought I must tell them then that I could not go with them, as they were not the church of God. It brought me at once into trouble; for who dared to say that they were not the church of God? Well, their preacher came along again after two weeks, and came to me at once, to try to convince me that I was wrong. He said he had met a Universalist while he was gone, and had told him that if he really believed as he said he did, it would be well with him. Now I was more than ever confirmed in what I had done, and felt that the whole world was going in the same channel; that they were all linked together, from the Universalists to the Baptists. My father was a Baptist before I could remember. If we give worldly religionists encouragement, we are partakers of their sins.

Then it was said to me, "Set thine house in order; for thou shalt surely die and not live." I found this was said to king Hezekiah, and that the Lord added fifteen years to his life. So he was to take warning only. Again, it was said unto me, "Cast thy bread upon the waters, and thou shalt receive it after many days." I knew these words were in the Bible, but could not tell where. I then thought I must be baptized, as the first I was not satisfied with. As I was cast among the Free Will Baptists, and they did not sprinkle, I thought I must go with them; so I was baptized by them; but I soon found them in full fellowship with the others, so I was no better satisfied. But the Lord had a purpose in it all, as was made plain. They were all antichrist. Surely the "Reformers," as they are called, are the second beast, with two horns like a lamb; but they speak as a dragon. Their societies are a fair sample of the old mother church. As to what are their lamb-like horns, judge ye, and beware.

Then the word of God was my only study. The prophecy of Daniel and the Revelation made to John point to the success and the final overthrow of antichrist. The beast with two horns like a lamb should both speak and cause all to receive a mark in their right hand or in their foreheads. This they are doing by means of those miracles which they have power to do in sight of the beast, or by flattery. There are many children of God among them; but if God gives them true repentance they will be ready to leave all their Babylonish garments behind them, and will hate the very garments spotted with the flesh. "And I heard a voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

I was led to the thirty-third chapter of the prophecy of Ezekiel, and then to tell the people when I saw the sword coming. O solemn thought! for surely it was then plainly to be seen. I thought, Why could not some abler speaker do it? The Lord said they would not hear me, yet I was to speak unto them, whether they would hear or whether they would forbear; for they are a rebellious people. I do know my own inability to speak or write what I would be glad to say; but it is all of God. As he hath said, a word to the wise is sufficient.

I have written with the ability which God giveth. I am of a stammering tongue, and cannot wield the pen of a ready writer; but surely what I have written has been done in the fear of God. Others may feel that it is presumptuous in me thus to speak or write; but the Lord will soon make his arm known in the destruction of antichrist.

Now, dear friends, brethren and sisters, if you will allow me thus to call you, although I do feel that I lack words to make myself understood, yet go to the record and see if these things are not so; for all these long years it has appeared to me that the sword was coming upon the church in our day, as you know that in the last days perilous times shall come; and surely we are in the last days. If fifty-six years ago the sun was only an hour high, more or less, certainly it must be at our door now. Are not all giving antichrist encouragement to-day? Nearly all are honoring her Sunday, which is antichrist's. They are honoring her with her tens of thousands of pictures and images. Please read the eighth chapter of Ezekiel, and see what the Lord hath spoken. No wonder they can give each other comfort, and swear by the sin of Samaria, saying, Thy God, O Dan, liveth; and The manner of Beersheba liveth.

Well, it looks like this is not worth sending for publication; but it is written to relieve a heavy heart; yet the half has not been said. I will trust the good Lord to open the eyes of his dear ones to search the Scriptures, asking him to lead them into all truth, and help you also to instruct others who may be inquiring after the whole truth; for it appears like a dark day to me, as "he that departeth from iniquity maketh himself a prey." But the Lord will soon come for our deliverance; so comfort one another with these words. Fare ye well.

SARAH MOORE.

THOUGHTS ON PSALM CXLI.

"LORD, I cry unto thee: make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee."

All the needs of all the people of God, during all their journey in this mortal state, were felt by their dear Savior while in the days of his flesh, and will be found expressed by inspiration of his Spirit somewhere in the Scriptures of truth. His holy soul felt the terrible pressure and pain of all their sins, transgressions, sicknesses, griefs, infirmities, temptations, foolishness, weakness and afflictions of every kind; and all the cries, supplications, groanings and prayers which any of them shall ever want to utter on account of this awful sense of sin and its terrible effects have been felt and uttered by him. All that the prophets and holy men of old have expressed concerning their sense of sins and vileness was by the inspiration of the Spirit of Christ, testifying in this way beforehand of the sufferings of Christ while bearing our sins, and the glory that should follow. No one before nor since the coming of Christ could describe any of the pains and afflictions of sin and corruption which he had not felt; and none can feel pain and self-loathing on account of sin except as the Spirit of Christ makes them alive to it; and the Spirit only causes those sins to be felt in this way which Jesus bore in his own body on the tree. All who mourn on account of sin are blessed, for they mourn for "him whom they have pierced." All the sins which load the poor soul with sorrow and mourning while in this mortal state are those which pierced the dear Savior's soul with such exceeding sorrow, even unto death. So all the cries and prayers and exclamations of grief of godly men recorded in the Bible are those of Jesus, who felt all the pains and griefs and needs of all his people which each of them feels in measure. So Job and David and Jeremiah and Daniel and others speak each a measure, as moved by the Holy Ghost to tell his own feelings, of what Jesus felt without measure; and how often we find in the New Testament their language used as applying directly to Christ, and also find that their language lets us know the depth and character of our own feelings as we did not know them before.

The prayers and supplications we find thus in the Bible express all our weakness, unworthiness, sinfulness and infirmities, which makes them come so close into our poor, sinful, grieving hearts, telling all our wants and needs, which cannot but be soothing and comforting to us; but they also have a tone of certainty and confidence, which is of wonderful power. The very coming into our minds of the prayers and longings of God's people, expressed in the Scriptures, brings hopefulness and quietude; for the Savior, who felt the need before we did, and uttered the prayer in his sorrow on account of our sin, has gone into heaven, and has all fullness of joy. So those who follow him in the suffering shall be partakers of his joy. We do not know this in a natural way, for that would make us self-confident and boastful, and carnally secure; but the knowledge is by faith, and we feel it, while we still go tremblingly and softly before the Lord, wondering at the peace and trust which keeps our hearts and minds.

It was for us that the dear Savior's prayers were made, for us his sufferings were endured, for us his supplications were offered up, "with strong crying and tears;" and he knew absolutely that every request of his, every desire of his holy soul, would be fully answered. "I know that thou hearest me always; but because of those that stand by I said it." The same certainty is in our souls when his prayers and supplications are ours; but it is the certainty of the measure of faith which we have, not to be intruded upon and boasted over by the carnal mind, but to be tenderly and tremblingly cherished and prized in the secret depths of the soul.

These thoughts I have had as I read the precious words in the first verse of this Psalm, and the most wonderfully sweet and powerful expression in the second verse, that so well suits our own desires in the purest moments we have ever had. "Let my prayer be set forth before thee as incense; and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice." A prayer is not a form of words, but the expression of a desire. The desire is holy. The very first work of the Lord in the hearts of his people is to put within them the fear of the Lord, which is to hate evil, and which therefore "is a fountain of life to depart from the snares of death." This fear of the Lord is clean (Psalm xix. 9); but all the evil of our flesh, in which dwells no good thing, interposes an apparently impassable barrier between the holy desires which this fear raises up in our souls and their fulfillment. The Savior broke these bars of the earth asunder; and so we are given the blessing of faith to pray in his name, believing that we shall receive what we ask for.

"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: keep the door of my lips." The desires of the quickened soul are pure; the desires of the flesh are evil. There is no mingling, no compromise, no half-and-half in this; no desires that are part good and part bad. The Spirit, with all its promptings, all its fruit, is pure; the flesh, with all its works, is evil. The desire of the quickened soul, the mind of the Spirit, which maketh intercession for the people of God, is expressed in this prayer of the dear Savior by the psalmist. While in the likeness of sinful flesh he desired he might not be overcome by any of the temptations he met, and he was not; he desired that he might do no sin, and he did not; he desired that no guile might be found in his mouth, but that his words might be right and acceptable words; and the prayer of his heart was answered, and all his "words were upright, even words of truth." This is the desire of his Spirit within the heart of every one of his children, while the desires of the flesh and of the mind are contrary to it. This causes a conflict between the flesh and the Spirit in the Lord's people, in which the flesh would certainly be victorious if Jesus had not fought the battle and gained the victory for them. No one knows of this conflict but those who have the Spirit of Christ; and these all shall find the strife unequal; shall struggle often in vain; shall find shame and confusion of face often before the Lord because of their slips and falls; but shall finally be brought off conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him that hath loved them. They shall never get so grossly far away from spiritual purity and power but that there will be an inward cry to the Lord to set a watch before their mouth, and keep the door of their lips, that their words and works "may be as becometh the gospel of Christ."

(To be continued.)

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., June 29, 1894.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Jacob Wright, who was a resident for many years of Jefferson Co., Iowa, died at his home near Wooster, June 23d, 1894.

The deceased was born in Lincoln Co., Ky., May 29th, 1803, where he continued to live for some years, afterward moving to Cumberland Co., in the same state. He was married in 1828 to Miss Rebecca Groce, who died in 1876. In 1829 they moved to the state of Illinois, locating in Morgan Co., remaining there eighteen years. From there they moved in 1847 to the home where he continued to live until his death. Ten children were born unto them, eight of whom are still living, and six attending his funeral. Those living are Isom and William, of Fairfield, Iowa; John and Alfred, living on the old homestead near Wooster; Elijah, near Eldon, Iowa; Peter, in Scott Co., Ill.; Isaac, in Audubon Co., Iowa; Thomas, in Dade Co., Mo. He had forty-one grandchildren and twenty-six great-grandchildren.

Brother Wright first united with the Old School Predestinarian Baptist Church called Spring Creek, and was baptized by Elder Crow, in the state of Kentucky, in 1820. During the time he lived in the state of Illinois he held a letter, not finding those keeping house (the church) as he felt the Master required. After his removal to this state (Iowa) he united by letter with the Primitive Baptist Church called Round Prairie, in 1852, continuing a very exemplary and worthy member until death. The very large concourse of people that attended his burial, a procession more than three-quarters of a mile long, showed the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. His dear pastor, Elder Robert Spiers, an old veteran of the Master, was sent for, but for some reason did not get there. The writer was wired, but was away on ministerial duties, and failed. So the funeral was postponed one week, until Sunday, July 1st, at four o'clock p. m., at the old homestead. It was the writer's privilege to try to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing relatives and friends assembled, using as a text Job xiv. 14. The members of the Round Prairie Church have met at brother Wright's house for worship more than forty years. He professed a hope in Christ at the age of seventeen years, and was a Baptist more than seventy years, being ninety-one years old at the time of his death. Let me say to the mourning friends that we sorrow not as others who have no hope, fully realizing that our loss is his eternal gain.

ISAAC SAWIN.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth. Stamped in Gold. Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid. G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m. Is. 53. 9. n. ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.	Ps. 22. 22. Matt. 28. 10. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING.

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges, 3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges 4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15 1/2.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON SUFFERING FROM DROPSY, Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1894.

NO. 30.

POETRY.

MORTALITY.

BY WM. KNOX.

O WHY should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift-flying meteor, a fast-flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
He passes from life to his rest in the grave!

The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade,
Be scattered around, and together be laid;
And the young and the old, and the low and the high,
Shall molder in dust, and together shall lie.

The child whom a mother attended and loved,
The mother that infant's affection who proved,
The husband, that mother, and infant who bless'd,
Each, all are away in their dwelling of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye,
Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by;
And the memory of those who loved her and praised
Is alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the king who the sceptre hath borne,
The brow of the priest who the mitre hath worn,
The eye of the sage, and the heart of the brave,
Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.

The peasant whose lot was to sow and to reap,
The herdsman who climbed with his goats to the steep,
The beggar who wandered in search of his bread,
Have faded away like the grass that we tread.

The saints who enjoyed the communion of heaven,
The sinner who lived to remain unforgiven,
The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just,
Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flower and the weed—
They wither away to let others succeed;
So the multitude comes, even those we behold,
To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we're the same thing that our fathers have been,
We see the same sights that our fathers have seen;
We drink the same stream, and we feel the same sun,
And we run the same course that our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think,
From the death we are shrinking they too would shrink;
To the life we are clinging they too would cling,
But it speeds from the earth like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but their story we cannot unfold;
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumber may come;
They joyed, but the voice of their gladness is dumb.

They died, aye, they died; and we, things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwellings a transient abode,
Meet the changes they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yes, hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
Are mingled together in sunshine and rain;
And the smile and the tear, and the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other like surge after surge.

'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud!
O why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

CORRESPONDENCE.

Scio, Oregon, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—In compliance with a request of some of my brethren I will offer a few thoughts on Romans vi. 22: "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."

The trouble with some seems to be in the first clause, "But now being made free from sin." If we would gather the true meaning of the Scripture we must read the connection. Some have concluded that it must be the new man that is made free from sin, because they see so much sin and corruption in themselves that they think there is no other way to reconcile the Scripture with their own experience; but the new man was never in bondage to sin. Then how could it be made free from that which it was never in bondage to? John says, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God."—1 John iii. 9. This text from 1 John is quoted to prove that it must be the new man. If we will read the sixth chapter of Romans we will find that the characters whom the apostle was addressing, as having been made free from sin, had been the servants of sin; for he says, "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." This same apostle says that "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Then it was the apostle Paul that was made free from sin and death. Yet, considered in himself, he would say, "I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."—Rom. vii. 23. How is it then that we are made free from sin, when we see so much sin in ourselves? No Arminian could ever answer that question. That is the reason that they claim "sanctification." We must consider the children of God as being embraced in the covenant of grace, and through the atonement that they are made free from sin. The apostle asks the question, "How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." This quotation shows that we may expect to be pestered with sin as long as we live; but being killed to it, it has lost its dominion over us, and we are made free from sin by our sins being covered. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin."—Rom. iv. 7, 8. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."—Isaiah liii. 6. "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed."—1 Peter ii. 24. Then, in view of all these Scriptures, and more that might be introduced, may we not say that the children of God, who have been quickened by the holy Spirit of God, have been made free from sin? Yes, indeed. The things which they once loved they now hate; and the things which they once cared nothing for they now love. "We love God because he first loved us." "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." When we view ourselves as we were by nature, enemies to God by wicked works, aliens from God, and strangers from the covenants of promise, being without hope and without God in the world, ten thousand talents in debt, with not a farthing to pay, no wonder that the new-born babe in Christ feels the power of that new commandment, "That ye love one another." Now he tells us, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "If a man love me, he will keep my words." The fruit now is quite different from what it was before. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Yes, "The wages of sin is death." The fruits of sin make a long, black catalogue; but Arminians differ from us in regard to what the fruit of the Spirit is. They boast of what they are doing for the Lord. Those who are able to contribute the most money to help save sinners and evangelize the world, they think, are bearing the most fruit. If asked, What is the work of the Lord? very few of them could answer the question. Our Savior said, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." That is the fruit of the Spirit. Love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith, are all fruits.

In proceeding to consider the service of God, and the fruits, I think it best not to consider them separately. I shall have to contend that it was the same persons that had become servants to God that had been servants of sin, but had been made free from sin. Now, if we had doubted our sonship because in taking a view of ourselves we still saw sin lurking in our mortal body, how will it be when we examine ourselves for fruit? We know that in us, that is, in our flesh, dwelleth no good thing; and while looking to the flesh to find some fruit or evidence that we are serving God, we will be as badly disappointed as we were when looking to see if we had been made free from sin. There is a vast difference between the service of a son and the service of a hired servant. The hired servant is only working for his wages; and that is just what the Arminians are doing. They are working on the plan of piece-work: the more they do the more wages they will get; the more souls they save the more stars will be in their crown, and the higher their seat will be in heaven. The son has no such promptings. He does not expect a higher seat than some other brother. He feels like the prodigal son, no more worthy to be called a son. He serves because he loves; and he loves God because God has done so much for him when he was not able to help himself. He feels like there is very little, if anything, that he could do for or in return for such great favors; and this is the reason the Canaanites are still in the land, to keep us mindful of our dependence on him who did so much for us. I hold that Israel under the law dispensation was a type of spiritual Israel; and when they served God according to the commandments they had lots of fruit, and everything that heart could wish; but when they forsook the Lord, and disregarded his commandments and statutes, their fruit failed them. Now, when I turn to myself and ask the question, How can I serve the Lord, or what service can I render? I hardly know what to say. I have been such a stiff-necked and rebellious one, and I find so much sin and corruption in my nature, it looks like presumption in me to think of trying to serve a God that cannot look upon sin. What service can I render him? He needeth not the additional worship of men or angels to make him any happier. Why, Satan tells me sometimes that I know I am not fit to belong to the Old Baptists, that I have known it all the time, and that I knew it when I first joined them; and sometimes he worries me so that I lose sight of the little hope that is as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and entereth into that within the veil, whither our forerunner hath for us entered, even Jesus. Then I think I feel about as Cain did when he had killed his brother Abel, "I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth," and "my punishment is greater than I can bear." Then I can adopt the language of poor old Job, and desire that the Lord would grant me my request, and give me the thing that I desire; that he would reach forth his hand and slay me, cut me off out of the land of the living; for then would I rest with kings and counsellors, and all the mighty men of the earth. I look by faith and see poor old Jonah sitting just outside of the city, upon a little knoll, under his dried-up gourd-vine, and the sun pouring down on his head, and groaning, desiring to die. Then I say, I am thy companion in tribulation. I feel sure then that I shall go to hell finally; but the thought occurs to me that I have comforted some of God's little ones in my weakness in trying to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ, and I think that I will go on and try to comfort them as long as I live. While in this state of mind this Scripture comes to my relief, "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby." Then I get my book to see what farther is said on the subject, and I find, "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."—Heb. xii. Why, yes; it is sons that are chastened, even those whom the Lord loveth. Now I begin to gather up that little hope again, and it seems brighter now than ever.

I would like to know if my brethren ever have to pass through such sore trials as these. I sometimes doubt it. I started to tell something about the service of God and the fruits of the christian; but I have utterly failed, and have been telling how destitute I am of either fruit or the service of God. Our Savior said to his disciples while he was here on earth, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith. Against such there is no law. When these are in exercise the christian can serve God in spirit and in truth; for God is a Spirit, and seeketh such to worship him as do worship in spirit and in truth. We are commanded to present our bodies a living sacrifice to God, which is our reasonable service. To serve God acceptably we must follow in the footsteps of our Master. He has said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "If a man love me he will keep my words." If I feed the sheep and lambs of my Master's fold I am serving him; for he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." But I am only dealing out the provisions of my Master; and if the sheep and lambs are enabled to eat of the rich provisions of the Master's table they should not give me the glory, for if they do they are not serving God. They must give God all the glory in order to serve him acceptably; for he will not have his glory given to another, nor his praise to graven images. Sometimes I start to my appointment feeling like I should not have any food for the sheep and lambs when I get there. I begin to wish I had not made the appointment, or hope there will not be anybody there; but when I get there, and see a goodly number of brethren and sisters, then my heart begins to flutter, and O how I wish the good Lord had sent some one else. I begin to look up something to feed them on, and it looks like the five barley loaves and two small fishes; but when my Lord takes it in hand and blesses it there is enough and to spare.

"And the end everlasting life." When we contemplate the joys of that eternal life, when these vile bodies of ours shall be changed, and fashioned like the body of our glorious Lord, and we shall be among that innumerable company that John saw, and sing the song of Moses the servant of God and the Lamb, saying, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty! just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints! for thou hast redeemed us by thy blood out of every kindred, tongue and people under heaven, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests," then, and not until then, shall we be able to serve God in perfection, and to know what is the length and depth and height of the love of our God. We will then have free access to the tree of life, and the river of the water of life, and eat of that hidden manna, and no more look through a glass darkly, but see our glorious Lord face to face, and be like him. "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

D. W. BRIDGES.

SANDYHOOK, Ky., Feb. 18, 1894.

MISS MARY FLOYD—DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—For some reason, I know not what, I have been for some time thinking of writing to you; but all the time this thought has prevailed, that if I were to write I could say nothing that would interest you. But the glorious gospel of the grace of God is like the garments of the children of Israel; it never wears out or waxes old. And the less I think of and about myself, the more my mind rests on the power, wisdom, grace and love of God in the gift of his dear Son, of whom it is written, "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." That offering was his sinless and holy body, that body which was prepared him. "Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: in burnt offerings and sacrifices thou hast had no pleasure." Offerings were continually being made in the temple service, but they did not make the comers there unto perfect, but pointed to that body which was prepared him. Those offerings, as well as other things pertaining to the service in the temple, were for Israel, the chosen or elect people of God, who were of the Jewish nation; but you and I are Gentiles; and if salvation is of the works of the law, we have no interest in it; for the Gentiles did not have the law given to them. "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin." That is the law of sin and death; but the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus is a more glorious law. "For," says the apostle, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." All the family of the first Adam, by reason of their unity in and with him, were dead in trespasses and in sins. Theirs was a state of death. Not only the Jews, but the Gentiles also; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Then how silly it is for any of Adam's race to talk about going to heaven on their good works; for man in his natural, unregenerate state, without the love of God shed abroad in his heart, is but carnal, sold under sin, and cannot please God. But God, by the work of the Spirit, by the manifestation of his love, is able to call them out of darkness into his marvelous light, working in them both to will and to do of his good pleasure. "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

But, dear sister, in order to redeem any of those who by reason of their unity with and in the first Adam were dead in sins, a ransom must be found equal to that undertaking; and none who pertained to earth could be accepted as a ransom, for the earth was cursed for man's sake. All the offerings under the law were of the earth. In all the world of created beings there was not a body to be found equal to the great undertaking of redeeming man from the state of death in which he was involved by reason of the violation of that holy law of God. The apostle says, "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good. But I am carnal, sold under sin." The law that Adam violated was holy, for it emanated from God, from infinite holiness and purity; and nothing could have satisfied its demands but the holy body of the immaculate Son of God; that body that was prepared him, by the offering of which he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." He said, "I am the good Shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." He must suffer the full penalty of sin, which was death. And when he cried, "It is finished," all the demands of the law of sin and death were met and fully canceled; and he says of those whose sins he bore, "I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." The prophet says, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "For he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken. And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth." His pure and holy character is thus described by the prophet, as well as the great and wonderful things accomplished by his humiliation and death. The eternal purpose of God in the suffering of his dear Son was declared by the inspired prophet of the Lord long before it was accomplished on Calvary. He further says, "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities." Their justification is because he bore their iniquities; and when he suffered in his own body for the iniquity of his people, it was then he by one offering forever perfected them that are sanctified. They were "sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called." They are called with an holy calling. The apostle says, God "hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." In him they were chosen, and to him they were given in the covenant of grace before the world began; and when brought from darkness to light they are enabled to behold the beauty and glory of the great purpose of God in the salvation of his people, accomplished by the humiliation, suffering, death, resurrection and ascension to the right hand of the Father, to make intercession for those whose iniquities he bore, when he offered up himself without spot unto God, having obtained eternal redemption for them.

But alas! dear sister, as this poor sinner journeys toward the tomb, he is made to realize day by day that in and of himself he has no offering to bring into the courts of our Lord, and that holy place where saints do congregate seems too sacred for my sin-polluted feet. But to him alone, who worketh in his saints both to will and to do of his good pleasure, can we look for that grace which fits us for the holy hill of Zion, which is the true church of our Lord Jesus Christ, the pillar and ground of the truth. It is then we remember that he hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee." Afflictions and sorrows bestrew the pathway of all his dear saints while in their earthly pilgrimage; but he says, "In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old."

Dear sister, he who has all power in heaven and in earth, who has in his love and in his pity redeemed them, will never leave them nor forsake them, but will bring them off more than conquerors through him that loved them and gave himself for them, that he might redeem them from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

Please pardon me for writing so much that may not interest you; but if I am saved, it will be through the mercies of God, a poor sinner saved by grace.

Your unworthy brother,
J. E. THORNBERRY.

LOOKING GLASS, Oregon, Jan. 5, 1894.

MR. JOHN MCCONNELL—DEAR BROTHER IN THE FAITH OF GOD'S ELECT:—Many miles separate us; rugged mountains and bleak, cold deserts lay between us. You are near the Atlantic coast, and we are in the far West, near the Pacific ocean; yet, dear brother, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES greets us even in this far off land, in which our dear brethren and sisters come to us in their contributions to its columns, and make glad our poor hearts in speaking in and to our hearts comforting words of salvation through the finished work of our adorable Redeemer. Bless God for such a precious medium of correspondence. Dear brother, I am a poor, old, ignorant sinner, and do not feel worthy to address you by the endearing name of brother; yet I want to say to you that the rugged mountains and bleak, cold deserts that lay between us have no effect, thank God, upon the love of God in the soul. I have been reading the SIGNS of Jan. 3, 1894, this evening, and my heart goes out in love to the dear brethren and sisters, so we have had a feast. It is so good and enjoyable to have so many of God's dearly beloved servants visit us by our humble fireside and talk with us of the goodness of God. First in this last SIGNS comes dear brother C. W. Bond, giving us a relation of his hope in Christ, and telling how the Lord led him out of Babylon—led him out of self to Jesus. He said so many things about Jesus that I could not resist the desire to take him into my confidence and commune with him. Next comes a letter from brother Supplee. He sends dear brother Beebe a letter that he believed was worthy a place in the SIGNS; and truly it was, if I am any judge, "a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined." I assure you that both of those letters did our souls good. I mean my wife and self. I have shed many a tear while reading brother Coulter's writings. No child of God can resist the love that wells up in his articles in the SIGNS. He will just take hold of your heart and lead you right along into rich fields. Next comes your, to me, very precious letter, which letter, or the sweet spiritual essence of it that dropped into our hearts, is the apology I offer for writing you this poor, weak letter; for, dear brother, with all my ignorance I do know, if I know anything, that we have the same trials and conflicts, the same doubts and fears. When you say, there was a time when for a long season you felt no doubt that it was all well with you, but now if there ever is such assurance it is but for a moment at a time, you speak just what even I feel. Further on you say that though you may not be comfortably resting in the assurance of a good hope through grace, yet there is some comfort in believing that you are not offended in Christ. In this experience, dear brother, we are traveling together. I cannot express in words my own experience as well as you have told it all along in the second column of your letter to brother Supplee. But it did me so much good to meet with a dear brother in these sore trials, it encouraged me so much, to feel that I had the same experience as one of God's highly favored and gifted servants. Though so ignorant that I am ashamed to write to such an one, yet, though I cannot express myself as I would like, I believe I love the dear children of God with as great fervor as though I had the pen of a ready writer. I do hope I love God and his truth; and the blessed truth as it is in Jesus was so ably and sweetly set forth in your letter to brother Supplee, we felt truly that "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea I have a goodly heritage." For, "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. In thy name shall they rejoice all the day, and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted. For the Lord is our defense, and the Holy One of Israel is our King." He reigns in and rules over his subjects; so, though the righteousness of our Lord exalts its subjects, they are humbled and take the lowest seats and seek wisdom from God only; and how sweet the promise is to them, knowing their own weakness, to hear the Savior say, "If his children forsake my law [I understand "his children" to mean those that God gave to Jesus. "Behold I and the children which God hath given me"], and walk not in my judgments [which he surely knew they would not]; if they break my statutes [which they did do all along], and keep not my commandments [which they did not], then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail."—Psa. lxxxix. 30-33. O no! the Father would not utterly take from our dear suffering Savior his loving-kindness, although he could not let that awful cup of sufferings pass; for the rod of God's righteous law must be visited on the back of our dear Redeemer. "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Nothing is left for us to do on that score, dear brother. How precious to the poor soul to realize that the promise "was not yea and nay, but in him was yea. For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him, amen, unto the glory of God by us." Now, dear brother, if I know anything at all about belief, I believe all the promises of God in Christ Jesus, and have no other hope of salvation, save in the finished work of Jesus; consequently I find food for my poor soul in your letter in the SIGNS; in fact, the SIGNS is brim full of good things of the kingdom all the time. You speak of those dear men of God, Elders Beebe, Jenkins, Vail, Bundy and Rittenhouse. These are all precious brethren to me, as I have been a reader of the SIGNS over thirty years, and have often been comforted in reading after them; and you might add a score more of able and gifted brethren that write for the SIGNS. Elder Durand is a sweet preacher and an able writer; and there are Elders Chick, Purington and Lively, and brother Coulter, and many others who are my regular visitors through our medium of correspondence.

Please excuse me for writing such a letter to you as this, and write to us if deemed worthy. Farewell.

J. P. ALLISON.

ELKHART, Wis., Feb. 3, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Inclosed please find a letter from my dear pastor, Elder T. J. Wyman. I take the liberty to send it to you for publication, as it was such a comfort to me, thinking perhaps it might be a help to some other poor sinner like myself.

Yours with love,

MRS. A. B. ROOD.

SUNDAY, Jan. 28, 1894.

DEAR SISTER ROOD, AND ALL THE FAITHFUL IN CHRIST JESUS AT ELKHART:—Praise the Lord because of his loving-kindness and tender mercy, and the rich manifestations of his mercy made known unto you; for when I was with you I felt that I was with a people that loved and delighted to crown him Lord of all, and could adopt the language of the psalmist David, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name," because of the manifestation of his loving-kindness to a poor soul who feels that he is the chief of sinners; yea, if I am a saint at all, I am the least of all; so weak, so feeble, poor and blind; so slow to learn all that the prophets have spoken concerning our blessed Lord and Master. He came into this world to redeem his chosen people; he came under the law to redeem them that were under the law. Now, my Father's children, the best evidence that a poor sinner can possibly have that he is born of God, and is no more under the law but under grace, and that the law has no more dominion over him, is that they rejoice in the glorious appearing of their dear Lord; they rejoice

(Continued on page 237.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., JULY 25, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SONS.

THE PATH OF LIFE.

In the sixteenth psalm David was inspired to testify of the assurance by which the Captain of our salvation triumphed over the assaults of the adversary, and gained the victory by his own arm in that terrible conflict where justice demanded his life. Nothing less than the omnipotence of God could thus sustain him; but all that power was in him. He was able to lay down his life in satisfying the demand of divine justice, which was against him, as bearing the iniquities of his body, which includes every subject of electing love. This is the sanctified church chosen in him before the world was made. Only in this living and real unity with Christ can there be any salvation from sin. And as he was made perfect through suffering, so it is given unto his members to take their appointed part in the fellowship of that suffering. This is the sealing of the Spirit unto the day of redemption. Only through much tribulation can the saints be followers of him who learned obedience by the things which he suffered. This is the very reverse of the way which seems right to the understanding of reason. So, the first step in coming after Jesus must invariably be the denial of self. This can never be learned in any other way but by the teaching of the Spirit of truth in the personal experience of every one who is led by the Spirit of God. Not even the inspired apostles could communicate this knowledge, though guided by the light of revealed truth themselves.

Since the Lord brings the blind by a way that they knew not, his followers to-day can no more understand his guidance than could the first subject of salvation unto whom it was the pleasure of God to reveal his infinite grace. So far as it concerns their salvation from death in sins, the saints are very ready to admit this truth; but it does seem plausible that they might be able by constant watchfulness to direct their daily conduct in the way of obedience. Their cunning adversary never ceases to present this theory in confirmation of his cruel accusations against the tried disciples. Consequently they are in perpetual need of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ for deliverance out of the gloomy prison of doubts and unbelief. Nor can those who are thus tempted in their early experience find comfort in the prospect of greater strength when they shall have grown older. The assurance of divine truth to them is only that strength shall be as their day. When they shall be stronger to endure trials, then they must encounter such trials as shall require the strength which they have then received. They must ever feel their utter weakness, that they may be qualified to rejoice in the infinite power of God. There is no promise of grace to sustain the strong. The words of consolation recorded in the sacred Scriptures are all spoken to the poor and afflicted. It was when Paul was suffering under the cruel assaults of the messenger of Satan which buffeted him, that he received the answer of the Lord to his thrice uttered prayer. Surely reason would never have sought that infinite strength in the perfect weakness which extorted his cry to the Lord. That same comforting word has brought the victory to untold thousands of the helpless ones since it came to Paul. Not only did it please the Lord to deliver him with the assurance of strength for that occasion, but he gave with that deliverance the word which meets the need of every saint to the end of time. When the Comforter takes and shows this precious answer to the fainting one he has the victory at once. It is exactly suited to the case of the one who is without strength. The omnipotence of God is presented as the salvation of the weak. Let those who feel their need of deliverance never forget the answer which was given to Paul. "My grace is sufficient for thee; FOR MY STRENGTH IS MADE PERFECT IN WEAKNESS." If there had been any strength needful to secure the benefit of this grace, it would not have suited the case of them that were ready to perish. There is no room for creature strength in addition to the grace of God by which he saves his people from their sins, and leads them in the way everlasting. Salvation by grace alone through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, is the only hope of those who know themselves justly condemned; and they dare not trust to their own works for any part of that salvation. But it is contrary to every idea of reason that the very weakness of the subjects of grace is the manifestation of the perfect strength of the Lord as revealed for their deliverance. Therefore the way that seems right to the natural mind is always that whose end is in the ways of death. The saints can never find the comfort of life in their most careful conformity to the requirements of outward duties. On the contrary, such works always result in that sense of utter failure which is death to their spiritual comfort.

The path of life which is shown to them who are led by the Spirit of Christ, cannot signify the eternal life which must animate every one who has felt the desire to follow Jesus. None can long for the light of life until that principle is produced in them by the Spirit of life already shed abroad in their heart. The invariable effect of this operation of God is to produce the most earnest longing for conformity to the holiness of God which is the element in which that Spirit finds rest. Only in the satisfying of this longing can the saint experience that comfort which is called life; while all else is to him the painful realization of death to his desire of holiness.

None ever have need of that trust in God for the manifestation of the path of life to them until they have seen an end of all perfection in their own works. Under the direction of their natural mind it is the universal confidence of sinners that they can walk in the path of life whenever they choose to seek that path. Indeed, to the reason of the saints this seems to be true. Upon this ground their adversary is ever ready to accuse them, and they are unable to refute his charges. They suffer continual reproach in their own hearts because they so much of their time wander in the broad road of sin. While they know that it is their will to do good, they find evil is present with them. In vain do they seek for the path of life by the light of reason and by creature merit. The light of every fire which they kindle surely brings them to lie down in sorrow. But they are taught by the Spirit of truth that the way of man is not in himself; and that way which is cast up for the chosen people of God to walk in has never been seen by the eye of that unclean vulture which represents carnal reason. The only characters who find this path of life are they who are led by the Spirit of God.

So very carefully is this way concealed by the wisdom of God that it is never found but as it is wrought in the saints by the Spirit of truth. They are as dependent upon divine grace for the will as for the power to walk in this heavenly path. There can be no desire to see this path of life but as it is the fruit of the Spirit of life. Consequently it is conclusive evidence that any sinner is led by the Spirit of God if that desire is in his heart. Carnal selfishness may covet the bliss of heaven at last, but only faith can cause any one to choose to suffer affliction with the people of God. This is the path of life, for it is in this way only that one can be a follower of Jesus. He is the Way and the Truth and the Life. Whenever a subject of divine grace is betrayed into a departure from the commandments and example of Jesus, the immediate result of such departure is the death of all spiritual comfort. So Paul admonishes the saints, "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."—Rom. viii. 13. Evidently this cannot signify that there is a possibility of the saints losing that eternal life which is hid with Christ in God. As they did not receive that life in consideration of their own works, so they have no power to forfeit it by any transgression or folly. It is the unconditional gift of God. The sense in which the saints are said to live in obedience, and to die in disobedience to the commandments of our Lord, must be confined to their experience of the answer of a good conscience toward God, which is found in keeping his law, and in the sense of condemnation which is felt in conscious departure from the statutes which are established in the Zion of gospel rest.

When Jesus says to the quickened sinner, "Follow me!" that one commandment embraces all that is lawful for those who love him. In obedience to his precepts there is life and liberty. In disobedience no lover of God and truth ever failed to experience that just condemnation which is experimentally death. None can know anything either of life or of death unless they have life and consciousness. "The dead know not anything." It is to the living children of God that the path of life is desirable; and to them alone is it the pleasure of God to show that path. So wonderfully has it pleased God to hide this way which no fowl knoweth, that "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."—1 Cor. ii. 14. It is impossible that any desire to know this path should originate in the carnal mind which is enmity itself against God. Therefore, there is assurance that every one who has the wish to see this path is led by the Spirit of God. To all such it is the abiding witness that they are the children of God. By his Spirit the Lord shows the path of life to every needy and poor one who hungers and thirsts after righteousness. It is in this way that these are filled.

Under the typical dispensation Moses declared that it was the life of the natural Israelites to obey the law of that carnal commandment. It was in the same sense death to them to disobey. In both cases they are typical of the spiritual Israel under the gospel dispensation. The obedient Israelite was no nearer related to Abraham than was the disobedient. That vital unity was manifested by the natural birth of each one in his appointed time and order. But the approval or condemnation of each one of those born under that fleshly covenant did depend upon his own acts of obedience or of disobedience. In this sense it was their life. So, in the spiritual kingdom of our Lord Jesus, the anti-type of this truth is shown. The path of life is only found in keeping all the precepts of our Lord. In disregarding them the saints are following the way of transgressors; and they must invariably find its end in the ways of death. In the covenant of divine grace no more assurance is given of the supporting staff than of the chastising rod. So, the test is left on record, "If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? but if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."—Heb. xii. 6, 7. It is clear from the inspired testimony that there is no evidence of any life in a path which is free from tribulation. The way of suffering is the path of life. The crown of rejoicing can only be worn by those who have come up through much tribulation, and who have endured the afflictions of the gospel of Christ. Reason can never find this hidden way of everlasting joy and victory. Only through the faith of the Son of God is it revealed to the saints in their suffering that their God has given them the valley of trouble for a door of hope; and their songs of victory ascend out of the very depths of oppression and distress. Thus death is made to them the gate of infinite joy as the end of their mortal conflicts and the revelation of their eternal bliss in perfect conformity to the likeness of their glorified Redeemer. This is the perfect manifestation of the path of life.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 235.)

in the assurance that he has redeemed them from under the curse of the law; yea, he that is under grace rejoices in the doctrine of God our Savior; he loves the fathers and mothers in Israel and the little children, and is now ready to adopt the language of the apostle John to the little children of God, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." In spite of our many misgivings, these words are a comfort to us; at least they are to me. I have been thinking, of late, of the request of the disciples to their Master, "Lord, teach us how to pray." Dear sister, I have been very fearful for a long time that I do not know how to pray as I ought. Did I ever pray in the spirit? I do feel so poor, so weak at times, that my very feelings are, "O Lord, teach me how to pray." Our very breathings, dear children, are, "Lord, give us this day our daily bread. O feed our souls with that bread that cometh down from heaven, whereof if a man eat he shall never die. Teach us, dear Lord, that thy broken body is that bread, and that it was bruised and broken for poor sinners; and give us to drink of thy blood, which was shed for many." "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed." Dear sister, none eat of this flesh or drink of this blood save those "which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." And they are partakers of his divine nature; they are flesh of his flesh, and bone of his bones; they are heirs of God, and joint heirs with their Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. They are embraced in that vital union with their head, and they have fellowship in his sufferings. This man, the man Christ Jesus, was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. He bore all our sorrows and afflictions. Now, if we suffer because of doubts and fears, and many times conclude that we know nothing about grace in the heart, dear children, this is the very evidence that you are a partaker of his divine nature. For "if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." But you are now ready to say, "Yes, all this is true, and will apply to all the heirs of mercy, but will it apply to my case? Why, I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do." Well, dear sister, that is Paul's experience, and it is the experience of all the family of our Lord Jesus. This is the evidence of all that have been born of God, whose eyes have been opened to see their vile and wicked nature.

These distressing doubts and fears, sorrows and afflictions, are characteristic of him whose heart, eyes and ears have been circumcised to hear, see and understand the glorious doctrine of salvation by grace, to joy and rejoice in the doctrine of God our Savior.

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear!
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fears."

May the dear Lord teach us how to behave ourselves in the house of the Lord, to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, esteeming our dear brethren and sisters better than ourselves. O that love among the children of God might be without dissimulation; that it might be that unfeigned love that our blessed Lord richly reveals unto his sons and daughters. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."

Now, dear sister, I have not written what I intended to when I began, but have followed the leading of my mind. I do not know that I can do any better, for I am a poor scribe and a poor sinner.

T. J. WYMAN.

RUNYAN, Ky., Feb. 25, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed find a letter from sister S. E. Bolt, which I send to you for publication, if in your better judgment you deem it worthy of space in your paper. I have had great comfort in reading it, for it so admonishes us to our duty, and it seems that I have been in the same channel she talks about. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. He filleth all in all. He is the head over all things to the church, which is his body. Whithersoever the head goes the body goeth also. He is the head; and the food that feeds the body comes through and by the head, which is Christ. God has exalted him to be a Prince and a Savior to his redeemed family, and to him be given honor and praise.

Yours as ever,

JEFFERSON FARLEY.

CANADA, Ky., July 7, 1893.

JEFFERSON FARLEY—MY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I will try in my weakness to pen you a few thoughts on John xi. 10, trusting that the dear Lord will guide my mind and direct my pen.

"But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him." When we walk in the day we can see where we are going. When we are in obedience we are in the day; but when we are in disobedience we are in the night, and then we stumble because of darkness. Do not understand me to mean natural darkness. I am talking about spiritual darkness. "He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness;" for when we are in the light, that is, when we are following Jesus, we love the brethren. Jesus says, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." "Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light." Now, if we give the glory to man, and not to God, our feet stumble in the dark, and we are blind. "And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch" of error. I believe these are the people of God; if not, how could they fall? The children of the devil have never been up where they could fall. My dear brother, if we follow Christ we are in the path of obedience. He leadeth in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment. He goes before us, for he is our light; and if we walk in him we are in the light, and therefore cannot stumble, for there is no darkness in him. But if we turn away from him we are in darkness; then we stumble, because we cannot see where we are going. When Christ was here upon the earth there were some who would not follow him; so we need not be surprised when some turn away, if they love the praise of men more than the praise of God. Some put man in the place of the Lord, and give man the praise; but all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing by God, who doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, nor say unto him, What doest thou?

JULY 20.

DEAR BROTHER:—I will try, if the Lord will, to finish my little article this evening, although I feel but little inclination to write at this time. We are arranging to go to the union meeting, and I heartily wish you could come and go with us. We would enjoy your company so much, for there is nothing that gives me any more comfort than to be with my brethren and sisters, and to talk about Jesus and what he has done for the children of God; for he has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and the forgiveness of sins." "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

Dear young brother, I am glad we have a Surety; for if we did not have we would fall short of that glorious home that was prepared by God the Father before the foundation of the earth. If we had to work to get to that home we would fall so far short that we would not get started. I believe we are as helpless as new-born babes in going to that eternal home. I am glad we do not have to go, but we are carried there with a stronger arm than man's. Sometimes I am troubled with fears that I will never reach that home, and if I do not it will be just; and I desire, as much as in me lies, to be reconciled to God's will, and to put my trust in him, who is able to help in time of need. I believe if we put our trust in God he will comfort us.

"What a friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and griefs to bear;
What a privilege to carry Everything to God in prayer."

If we walk in the day we have to fall humbly at the feet of Jesus; but if we turn away we will stumble, because we are out of the way, which is Christ; for he says, "I am the door: by me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

Dear brother, for fear of wearying you with a long scribble I will close, feeling that I have not written anything that will benefit you. I have written more than I had any idea of doing when I began. Pray for me, that I may grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord, and earnestly contend for the faith that was once delivered to the saints. When you read this cast it into the fire, or do with it as you please.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,
SARAH E. BOLT.

STATE ROAD, Del., July, 1894.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—The spring associations are now passed. A partial attendance at one of them was all that fell to my lot. I have traveled much in my time, but not much in that way. It has seemed to me that my way has been rather hedged up about going journeys far away from home. Some reflections that have weighed on my mind during these sessions from which I have been absent I will make the subject of the present letter.

In my young days preachers, or those claiming to be preachers, coming among us, I think invariably brought what were called credentials with them. I speak now of the times before the division. They generally, when arriving in the neighborhood, would come first to my father's house. Unless they came indorsed by some church or minister that we knew and had confidence in they would not be recognized as preachers. After the division the sifting did not leave much unsound material, and there was not much to attract impostors to the small, despised and persecuted sect of Primitive Baptists. I have hardly known of an instance of credentials being called for at any time or place since the separation. While the subject has sometimes been mentioned, I do not recall an instance of a traveling preacher being provided with anything amounting to credentials. We certainly have had very little to complain of, but there has been enough to make our people somewhat weary.

Still we have occasionally suffered spots in our feasts of charity. It has not been always that impostors have succeeded in obtaining recognition; but there have been instances that I call to mind that men have obtained recognition, and were so named in our association Minutes as to serve them as an indorsement by us, when I became satisfied afterward that they should not have been recognized in any way by us. A few years ago a man presented himself among the company gathering to attend the Delaware Association, and introduced himself, saying that he had been invited or advised to come by Elder Chick. The name was a strange name that none of us had ever heard of, and neither Elder Chick nor any one else of the preachers knew anything at all of the man. We knew Elder Chick well enough to know that he does not do that kind of work, inviting strangers, or even those he has some favorable knowledge of, to attend other associations than his own. If the man wrote to Elder Chick, making inquiries, he might procure from him an answer to his letter; but he failed to impose on us, further than to share in the hospitality of our people. We never heard any more of him. I do not now think it necessary or advisable to mention any names. I know of no names against which the brethren need warning; but I have known different cases of men being excluded from churches here in the east, and then would go out west and represent themselves as Old School Baptist ministers in standing, and thus impose on the churches and associations out there for years. This certainly ought not to have been possible. Any minister who is in good standing can very readily obtain the testimony needed to satisfy the brethren. No minister whose record is clean will object to giving all the satisfaction required. I have felt to wonder at those who know that the churches are admonished to vigilance, that they will arrange journeys where they are entirely unknown, and expect to be received upon their own mere say so. I know that some of our very best and most devoted preachers have done so; but is it exactly the proper course to pursue?

It is my meaning to suggest that hereafter ministers of our order traveling or expecting to travel where they are not known take testimonials with them to show their standing; and that churches and associations decline to receive as ministers those of whom they know nothing, and who have not satisfactory testimonials with them. If this is regarded as an innovation, or the introduction of a new rule, I will say that it ought to be an old rule, and ought always to have been observed and maintained. Brethren would feel somewhat mortified and ashamed if they should find that somebody had obtained their confidence with feigned words, and had been making merchandise of them. If we had known in what way or at what time the impostor would come we would have watched. As long as we do not know it will be well to obey the admonition which is to all and for all time, to "Watch."

The traveling season is probably now pretty much over until fall. I write these suggestions for publication in the SIGNS, where the brethren in all sections will have a chance to see and consider them. I would not throw a stumbling-block in the way of any, but rather endeavor to avoid all occasions of stumbling.

The above is submitted.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

MARY PARKER.

It will astonish the friends of this dear sister to learn that she is now at the University Hospital in Philadelphia. She was placed there this morning; and I left her there about seven o'clock, more comfortable than any one could have thought possible after a journey of six hundred miles. The possibility of this, and its accomplishment, were brought about by the self-sacrificing, loving, intelligent and persistent work of sister Rounsavell, of Warwick, N. Y., who went to her when her sufferings became aggravated by a malignant tumor, which seems to have made rapid growth, and who has remained with her seven weeks. This dear sister has visited her twice before; and during this last visit she has carried to a successful result a plan that had occurred to her as very desirable on a former visit. By heroic and determined efforts, which the physicians and all of the friends insisted would be in vain, and likely fatal, and which, as may well be supposed, were resisted by the suffering sister herself, she has completely discontinued the use of morphia, and broken the habit. By careful nursing she has healed all the terrible ulcerous sores, so that there is not one upon the person. Her weight is reduced considerably, being now 208 pounds. It seemed very necessary that she should have the care and skillful treatment which could be provided for her only in a first-class hospital. Sister Rounsavell could not find arrangements and circumstances to suit her at Columbus; and acting upon a suggestion from us, she promptly telegraphed to arrange for her in some hospital in Philadelphia, and they would start eastward Tuesday morning. The time seemed short, and circumstances at first discouraging to us. But Dr. Coulter soon had the difficulty settled; and this morning about five o'clock the train moved into Broad Street station, where brother and sister Coulter, sister Walton and myself were waiting. She was soon removed from the sleeper and placed in the ambulance by strong and careful hands. She had slept some during the night; but the dear sister who had so devotedly taken upon herself such a great responsibility had not slept, but is nearly worn out. They were glad to see our faces, though they had seen only mine before. I think we all felt in some measure a prayer of thanksgiving to God for his preserving care, and for the wonderful manifestations of his love and grace.

I have been thus particular because I know that all will be very much interested in knowing the circumstances of such a wonderful change. Sister Rounsavell, who is now at our house, will be with her for two or three days, till it is known what can be done. I saw sister Mary placed in a comfortable ward bed, where she will have good care and the best surgical skill. The cost of this will be seven dollars a week. It may be thought best to change her to a room, which will make the cost more than double that. Dr. Coulter will often see her. The friends can visit her from three to four o'clock on week days. Her correspondents will address her at the "University Hospital, West Philadelphia, Pa."

It is hoped that she will be greatly benefited by the treatment, though she cannot be cured, I suppose, nor be enabled to walk. It is wonderful that she can lie down, which she has not been able to do for fifteen years. The expense of this will have to be made up by the brethren and friends. I have signed the admittance paper, and the bills will be sent to me. Those wishing to help in this will please send their liberality to me, or to Dr. B. F. Coulter, 1910 North Twenty-Second St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa.

TO OUR DELINQUENTS.

OWING to the depressed condition of the times financially we have delayed for a long time calling the attention of our delinquents to the fact that their subscriptions were in arrears; consequently we now have on our list several hundred whose subscriptions are a year or more behind. We earnestly request all to look at the date next to their name, pasted either on the margin of their paper or on the wrapper in which their paper comes. This date shows when their time expired; and all who find their subscription in arrears will please make a remittance for the same. We have bills now over due, and need the money to meet our obligations.

Brethren and friends, please give this matter your early attention, and you will greatly oblige us.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last number will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

ELDER WILLIAM J. PURINGTON.

WITH deep sorrow we announced in our last issue the fact that the church in this earthly house of our tabernacle had been called to part with the highly esteemed and very widely known minister of the gospel, whose name is here recorded. Throughout the circulation of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES his writings had endeared him to lovers of the truth in which salvation is ascribed exclusively to the infinite grace of God. Perhaps within the last half-century no other pen has been more clear than his in defense of the simplicity of the gospel of Christ. Certainly no other voice has been louder and more unwavering in proclaiming that sweet message of redeeming grace, in which alone was all his own hope of eternal blessedness. No subject of grace could be more constant in ascribing glory to the electing love of God in Christ Jesus, by which he was sustained in hope of that life and immortality which only God can give. In his walk and actions, more than in his able ministration from the pulpit, he was blessed with strength to glorify the sufficiency of that grace which was his only and exclusive trust. In his departure we may well feel to cry with David, "Help, Lord; for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men." While ever confessing himself the chief of sinners, by the grace of God in Christ Jesus he was enabled to manifest the omnipotence of that divine love by which he was led to deny his own sinful heart, and to walk in newness of life. None could more rejoice than he did in the able presentation of the truth in preaching; and few were blessed with the ability to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ so clearly as it pleased God to enable him to speak the truth in love to the comfort of the afflicted and poor people whom God has caused to hope in his salvation. May the Lord supply the place in the ministry of the word, which is made vacant by the silencing of the strong and much loved voice which in this dispensation has been translated from contending earnestly for the faith into the triumphant anthem of eternal victory! And may those who still suffer in the flesh be encouraged in the view of the glorious discharge of our late loved companion and bright example!

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes

OBITUARY NOTICES.

THE First and Second Hopewell Churches desire to unite in the preparation of an obituary for our dear brother and pastor, Elder Wm. J. Purington, to be printed in our family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Elder Wm. J. Purington departed this life at his home in Hopewell, N. J., on Friday a. m., July 13th, 1894, in the 72d year of his age, after twelve weeks of almost continued suffering.

He had been in failing health for two years past from an attack of "La Grippe," but had continued to fill his pulpit and attend to all the duties devolving upon him until within about one month of his decease. After this he continued to decline, until death released him from his sufferings.

Our beloved brother was born in the town of Bowdoinham, Maine. When a young man he moved to the town of North Anson, in that state, where, in April, 1846, he was baptized by Elder John A. Badger, in the fellowship of the North Anson Church. His mind was from the first led deeply into the Scriptures, as we are informed, the types of the Old Testament engaging much of his attention then, and during all his life. He felt called to the ministry of the word, and now began to converse with his brethren upon the things revealed to him in the Scriptures. Finally, on the first Sunday in September, 1849, he read a text for the first time. It was the key-note to all his ministry: "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." This has been his theme ever since. Jesus and his salvation, Jesus Christ and him crucified—these were the words he loved to dwell upon all his life afterward. He continued to preach for the church in North Anson and elsewhere for several years, and always to the joy and comfort of his brethren. In 1857 he removed with his family to Washington, D. C., where he continued to reside for about twelve years. During this time he continued to preach for the churches in Washington, Alexandria, Baltimore and Black Rock. About the year 1867 he removed to Southampton, Pa., where he remained for twelve years. Then, the Lord having removed by death our former pastor, Elder Philander Hartwell, we extended a call to Elder Purington, which he finally accepted; and in the year 1879 he moved with his family among us. What he was to the churches in Maine, in Washington and vicinity, and at Southampton, we leave to the loving testimony of his brethren there; but we desire to speak of what our dear pastor has been to us.

We know that thousands of the Lord's people all over our land, where our dear brother has traveled and preached the word, and where his writings were as familiar as household words, will feel to mingle their grief with ours as they recall the comfort his words have given them, and think that they shall see his face and hear his voice no more. One of our comforts in this hour of bereavement is that there is among the true, tried and faithful followers of our God a near fellowship and a firmer cementing of our hearts in this fellowship, brought about by our common afflictions, than can be known in any other way; and we know there is comfort in the thought that the tears of many others will fall in unison with ours when they hear that Elder Purington is dead. He was our pastor, and some of us had never known any other; so the heaviest burden must be ours.

Elder Purington was first and best of all a good man, and a lover of good men. There was no guile in him. He was a Nathaniel indeed. He had a warm and generous disposition; there was no policy nor shadow of subterfuge in him. Even those in our midst who did not receive and believe the truth which he preached respected his transparent honesty, his plain, clear words, and his open, honorable life among us. We say this because it is the truth; and by such a life the grace of God is magnified, and no occasion of reproach falls upon the cause of God. He possessed what the apostle required of a bishop, that he should have a good report of them who are without. If he had weaknesses (and who has them not?), they were such as made him all the more dear to our hearts. No one ever came to him in trouble without finding the response of a kindly and sympathetic heart. He loved his brethren, and was devoted to them; with how many sorrowing families in our midst his tears have mingled. All who knew him know that Elder Purington had clear, strong views of the truth, and that he did not shun to declare it. In the pulpit and in the defense of that truth he feared not the face of man. He contended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, and listening thousands have testified to the same. During the fifteen eventful years which he has lived among us his life and all his ministry have made him dearer to our hearts. Many have said, "How can we give him up? What can we do without him?" Yet we know it is the Lord who has called him home. The under-shepherd is removed; the chief Shepherd remains. He is ours to keep and guide us. He is our King, who holds the seven stars of the churches in his hand. But why should we multiply words? They cannot express our loss, nor can we make known our sorrow. We look to God, who alone can comfort us.

Brother Purington was married to Mary, daughter of Deacon Wm. Quint, and Aner his wife, forty six years ago this month. During this long period the blessing of the Lord attended them. She was indeed a helpmeet for him, appreciating the high calling of her beloved husband, and entering with him into all the trials and joys incident to his ministerial life. Our sympathy goes out and our prayers arise for her and for her sister, who has been her constant companion during their lives. From his record book we copy the following: He had attended about seven hundred funerals, solemnized about three hundred marriages, and baptized nearly three hundred professed followers of the blessed Master.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday, the 17th inst., consisting at the house of the deceased of reading Scripture by Elder Benton Jenkins, of New York, and prayer by Elder E. V. White, of Virginia. A vast concourse of people assembled at the old brick meeting-house. Elder Wm. L. Beebe, of New York, a life-long friend, preached a short and impressive sermon. Prayer was offered by Elder S. H. Durand, of Southampton, Pa., who also spoke most feelingly of the personal traits of the deceased pastor. Elder A. B. Francis, of Virginia, briefly referred to reminiscences of his personal acquaintance of thirty years with him. Other ministers present were Elder F. A. Chick, of Maryland, a nephew of the deceased, and F. S. Brink, of New York.

The sad countenances and falling tears of hundreds who passed by to view for the last time the encoffined remains of their beloved pastor and friend spoke of the love and esteem with which he was regarded in the community in which he lived. How could it be otherwise? With many of them he had rejoiced at the marriage altar, and wept with them beside the graves of loved ones. Could they restrain their tears when they realized that they would see his face and hear his voice no more on earth? No.

His remains were laid in the adjoining cemetery, among former loved pastors and brethren who had preceded him to their everlasting rest.

ELIJAH LEIGH,

Clerk of First Hopewell Church.

Meriba F. Butler, our darling and only baby girl, was taken from us on Sunday morning, April 23d, 1894, after a protracted illness of three months' duration, caused by "La Grippe," which finally developed into consumption.

She was born March 27th, 1893, being at the time of her death 1 year and 26 days old. She was lovely, patient and affectionate far beyond her days; and while it is hard to give her up without murmuring, we know that she is better off. No trials nor troubles for her to endure in this sin-cursed world; and the most skeptical could not, it seems to me, look on her lovely face, cold in death, without seeing the impress of the heavenly smile, which was the result of the welcome plaudit, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Thompson, N. D., beside her dear mother, who preceded her last October. Funeral services were held at the residence. Mr. Teichman (pastor of the German Lutheran Church) delivered a very comforting discourse from the words, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." May the Lord reconcile us to each and every dispensation of his providence, and make us to be still, and know that he is God.

B. F. BUTLER.

HOLMES, N. D., July 8, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—At the request of brother W. G. H. Morgan I now attempt to write an obituary notice of his beloved wife, Mary Ann Morgan, who departed this life near Magnolia, Ark., on June 15th, 1894, after a long and severe illness of more than three months, at the advanced age of 64 years, less 8 days.

She was the daughter of Johnson and Eleana Freeman, and at the time of her birth, June 23d, 1830, lived near Greenville, Ga., where she was raised, and lived until her marriage with brother Morgan, August 12th, 1847. She, together with her husband and family, in 1854 moved to Columbia Co., Ark., and settled near Magnolia, where they continued to live until her death. Sister Morgan joined the Primitive Baptist Church at Fellowship by experience Sept. 4th, 1857, and was baptized by Elder T. J. Foster; and afterward, on Saturday before the first Sunday in March, 1862, she joined Bodcaw Church by letter, where she continued to live a consistent, faithful, much beloved and highly esteemed member until called to join the faithful in Christ Jesus who have gone before. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom survive her.

Sister Morgan was taken sick on or about the 6th of March with typhoid fever, and lay for about two months; and as the fever gave way it settled in her right hip, which is supposed to have caused her death. She bore her suffering from first to last with a degree of patience and fortitude that bespoke for her an unshaken confidence and faith in the promised blessings of the God she so faithfully and consistently served during life. She was never heard to murmur or complain at the hand that had stricken her with disease and pain, but believed it for her good and God's glory; that he doeth all things well. She died quietly and easy, and among her last audible expressions she was heard to call upon her poor soul to bless the Lord. The life and character of sister Morgan was such that all who knew her could but love and respect her. She enjoyed a reputation and commanded a respect that all might do well to emulate. She was not only loved and respected in the church and among her associates, but all, even the colored people who knew her, loved and respected her as a true, honest and faithful christian, having all love for and confidence in "Miss Polle," as she was familiarly called by them. The unworthy writer has been personally well acquainted with sister Morgan from his early recollection.

I attended her funeral, and at the request of the bereaved husband tried to speak to the comfort and consolation of the bereaved family and friends from the words of our Savior as recorded in John xiv. 1, 2: "In my Father's house are many mansions," &c. After which her mortal remains were committed to their mother earth, there to rest in peace and await the resurrection morning, when, as I believe, her new birth will be completed.

To the bereaved husband, children, relatives and friends I desire to say, Weep not. Sorrow not as those who have no hope; for we have the confidence and hope that our sister died in a triumphant faith, and consequently sleeps in Jesus, and that our God has promised at his second coming to bring with him all them that sleep in Jesus. She is taken from us for a short time, that she may be forever with her Redeemer and the redeemed of our God, where we all hope some day to meet with them, and join them in shouting praise to the only wise, eternal God throughout eternity.

Yours in sorrow and weakness,

J. H. DANIELL.

THREE DAYS MEETINGS.

THERE will be a fifth Sunday meeting held with the Old School Baptist Church called Lime Creek, at Nora Springs, Floyd Co., Iowa, commencing on Friday evening, July 27th, and continuing the two following days.

All lovers of the doctrine of salvation by free and reigning grace alone are requested to be with us as far as possible, and especially preaching brethren.

Come, brethren; and may the Spirit and example of our Master come with you, that love and harmony may abound.

GARRETT MURPHY, Pastor.

A THREE days meeting at Hughesville, Va., will commence on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

We invite all who feel an interest to attend, especially our brethren, and more especially our ministers. Get tickets in Washington or Alexandria for Hamilton, on the Washington & Ohio R. R. The p. m. train on Thursday and the a. m. train on Friday will be met at Hamilton.

E. V. WHITE.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

- | | |
|-----------------|--------------------|
| 1. THE FARM. | 7. POULTRY. |
| 2. BEE KEEPING. | 8. MEDICINAL. |
| 3. THE HORSE. | 9. HOUSEHOLD. |
| 4. CATTLE. | 10. DOMESTIC PETS. |
| 5. SHEEP. | 11. LEGAL POINTS. |
| 6. SWINE. | 12. USEFUL TABLES. |

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold. Silver and Ink. 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SONS, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

WM. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits, of distinguished men, views of our principle cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SONS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address GILBERT BEEBE'S SONS,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SONS,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY, Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1894.

NO. 31.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SANCTIFICATION.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Sister F. P. Patterson, of Willowdale, W. Va., some time since requested me to write upon the above subject through the SIGNS. I have been busily engaged, and have not had time to write sooner. To-day I will try to suggest a few things that have long seemed clear in my mind with regard to this theme. Our sister did not, I think, speak of any particular question that was in her mind. I have not her letter by me now. I shall not stop to make apologies, for they are oftener than otherwise a cloak for pride; and it is needless for me to say that in the limits of an ordinary letter only a glance can be given at the theme. It is not needful, either, to say that only the spiritual, as they are led of the Spirit, can see or understand spiritual things, for this is too plainly declared in the Scriptures to be denied.

Sanctification is a Bible theme and a Bible word. Like nearly all Bible themes, its meaning has often been sadly perverted. Because the minds of the Lord's own dear people may be perplexed and distressed about it, it seems needful to write or speak about it. To rightly understand the word, and to have it applied by the Spirit of truth, is always a comfort to the people of God. There is really nothing in all the Scriptures to bring a pang of fear or doubt to any one who knows that he is a sinner, and whose whole trust is in the merit of Jesus for justification and salvation. Yet the enemy of souls has taken this soul-comforting doctrine of sanctification, and so misrepresented it to the minds of many of the Lord's people that they have been distressed by it, and have been almost ready to cast away both their confidence and their hope. In this letter I only desire to clear away some of the mists and fogs, if I can, and present the clear light of the truth shining forth in this glorious principle of doctrine for the strengthening of any who may be disturbed by it.

I find the word "sanctify," and its equivalent "consecrate," and their various forms, used in the Scriptures about fifty times. The words are applied to various things, but always have the same intrinsic meaning. I do not purpose, of course, treating of the subject outside of its application to the people of God. This at least is what concerns us the most.

What then is meant when the word is applied to the Lord's people?

First, it does not mean the same thing as election, although it is inseparably connected with election. Election is the choice of anything for a certain purpose; while sanctification or consecration is the work of preparation by which that thing is fitted to its use. For instance, a man chooses a stick of timber for a beam; then he prepares it for its intended place. The work of preparation follows the choice. Under the old covenant the priests, the instruments, and all the vessels for use in the sanctuary, were consecrated to the special service of the sanctuary. The choice of the priesthood, and of all these instruments and vessels, was one thing; their consecration was quite another. At the command of God out from among the multiplied thousands of vessels of earth or of gold and silver some were chosen for the use of the sanctuary; but though chosen, they could not be so used until they were consecrated according to the prescribed rule, by the sprinkling of blood and the washing of water. So likewise out from the multiplied millions of mankind God chose his vessels of mercy for service in his sanctuary—chose them before the foundation of the world; but before they can enter and serve him in his sanctuary they also must be consecrated or sanctified by the application of the blood of Christ to their guilty consciences, and by the washing of water with the word. Thus the election is one thing; the sanctification of the elected ones is another. But let it never be forgotten that the election is unto sanctification, and that the same God who has chosen his people is he also who sanctifies them, or prepares them for his service.

Now, second, I want to say that to sanctify does not mean to change the intrinsic nature of the thing sanctified. It does not mean that the sanctified man has ceased to bear about with him a carnal, sinful nature. It does not mean to change a man from a state of unholiness to a state of holiness; I mean so far as his sinful nature is concerned.

Returning to the illustration which I have just before used of the priests and the vessels of the sanctuary. The sprinkling of the blood and the washing of the water consecrated or sanctified them, but their essential nature remained the same. The earthen vessel was an earthen vessel still. The priest was the same man that he was before to all intents and purposes. The one difference was that they were now consecrated to the service of God in the sanctuary. This all applies to the vessels of mercy in the kingdom of God.

Still further, if to sanctify means to make intrinsically holy that which was formerly vile and unholy, then some horrible conclusions will follow. Let us see what they are. In his wonderful prayer to his Father, recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, Jesus prayed for the sanctification of his people. He said, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." Then he said, "For their sakes I sanctify myself," &c. Again, he said in another place, "Say ye of him whom the Father hath sanctified," &c. The unanswerable conclusion is this: Jesus was sanctified of his Father and sent into the world; and realizing this work of his Father, he also sanctified himself. If to sanctify means to make holy what was before unholy, then the blasphemous conclusion follows that our blessed Lord was once sinful. But we know that he always possessed immaculate holiness; that the word "sanctify" could not mean that he was made holy, or made himself holy.

Again, holy men of old, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, none of them ever once claimed to possess either a sinless nature or a sinless life. Surely we, none of us, would dare claim for ourselves what prophets and apostles laid no claim to. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob never once claimed to be free from sin, or to be perfect. It is not our privilege to say more for them than they claimed for themselves. David, whose psalms are as a polished mirror, in which are reflected all the varied experiences of his life, and all the revelation of God in him, never once ceases to confess his sins. In the midst of his most sublime joys how often does he mingle a note of confession for his own follies and sins. Never once does he claim perfection for himself. Job testifies clearly in this matter. God said of him that he was a just man, and one who feared God and eschewed evil. Surely no higher praise could be spoken of any man. But Job said, "Behold, I am vile." Again, he said, "If I should say I were perfect, it also would prove me perverse." Only a perverse heart, puffed up with pride and vanity, could lead any man to claim perfection in holiness, or in anything else. How awfully are they deceived then who say, "I am perfect." Instead of being perfect, the very claim to be so proves that they are not. If there were a perfect man on earth, he would be the last man to think so; and he could not make professions of it before his fellow-men, because the very spirit of holiness in man is also the spirit of humility. Did Paul ever have any idea of having arrived at perfection? He nowhere intimates such a thing. On the contrary, all his life long he was complaining that he could not do the good that he would; and the evil that he would not, that he did. Once he said, "I am the chief of sinners." He did not say, I was the chief, but I am. To the end this was a real vital experience with him. Did he ever say, I am perfected? In all Paul's letters to the churches he never intimates that either they or he are without sin. James says expressly to his brethren, "In many things we all offend." This is not only in the present tense, but the verb implies a continuation of the offending. It covers the future and past as well as the present. Jesus taught his disciples to pray, and among other things they were to say, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." This language would be a lie in the lips of those who had committed no trespasses. And those who commit trespass are surely not perfect. And Jesus did not intimate that there were any of his disciples who did not need this forgiveness. In the first chapter of the first epistle of John he says, "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him [God] a liar, and his word is not in us." If his word were in us it would so search us and illumine us that we should know that we have sinned. Now, some one may say, I once sinned, but that time is past, and I now sin no more. This John meets in this same chapter by saying, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." This is in the present tense. The force of both texts together is that we have sinned and we do sin. If we deny that we have sinned, we make God a liar, and his word is not in us; and if we say that we do not now sin, we deceive ourselves; and the truth is not in us. If the word or truth of God be in us, it will convince us of having sinned, and of sinning now. In the face of these Scriptures I feel like saying, What a mercy it is to escape the delusion of those who say that they have no sin.

Now, I think that it is clearly evident that to sanctify cannot mean, first, to elect, or to choose; and second, that it cannot mean to make sinless that which was before sinful. But still the question remains, What does the word sanctify mean when applied to the children of God? This I desire to speak about, as it has seemed to me. But first, in connection with what I have said negatively upon the subject, I desire to make a statement. I have met some, and known of a number, who claimed to have arrived at a state of perfection. While they made this claim for themselves, I have never known of one yet whose neighbors had the slightest idea of the state at which they had arrived, until they themselves announced it. For myself I would have more confidence in such professions if such an one's neighbors had made the discovery that he was doing just right. I wish to also add that I have never yet been able to secure a definite statement as to what those who make this claim mean by it. Some have said to me that it meant that they had no desire to sin any more. To this I have replied, that if any man should say to me that he desired to sin, I should say that he was not a child of God. The chief fear of any child of God is lest he should sin. If that is all that is meant, I can claim sanctification or sinlessness from my childhood. But the terrible truth is that I do what I desire not to do, and from what I hate I cannot refrain. This is not perfection; this is not sinlessness. The first man, I think, that I ever met who said that his conscience had not reproved him for anything for three years, stirred me up so that I had to say, "I am sorry for you. We read of a conscience seared with a hot iron. It has no feeling left in it. It cannot detect sin, nor reprove for it. I am sorry your conscience is so seared." And an hour or so afterwards I was told that this same old man had not spoken to his wife for months. If any who read this are deceived as was this old man, I trust they may be undeceived, and that speedily.

Sanctification is not the same thing as justification. I have heard the two things confounded, and therefore I say this. Justification means the payment of a debt, so that all legal penalties are removed. Sanctification means an actual personal experience of grace and of conformity to God's will. If the two words mean the same thing, there would be no need of both words. Sanctification means "separate from a common condition or use." Its primary meaning is that of separation. From this there came to be attached to it the secondary meaning of purity, holiness, cleanness. Thus the vessels of the sanctuary under the old covenant were said to be consecrated, or separated, or set apart; and the idea of ceremonial holiness and cleanness came to be attached to them. So God said to Moses at the burning bush, "The place where thou standest is holy ground." The presence of God made it to be so. It was set apart, consecrated to him for the special manifestation of his presence. So in the New Testament the word "holy," sometimes at least, is translated from the same Greek word as is the word "sanctify."

Now, like the vessels used in the service of the sanctuary, believers are said to be set apart, separated unto God, or holy. Upon them is written, "Holiness to the Lord," or set apart unto God. Not simply elected or chosen, but actually set apart to his service. The word "sanctify" means in substance this. Now let us inquire by what process these chosen vessels of mercy are set apart or sanctified to the Master's service. First, as was the case with the priests under the old covenant, who were consecrated, so now in this spiritual consecration the vessels of mercy receive all, and contribute nothing to this work themselves. Second, the choice is of God, and so also it is God alone who sanctifies. Third, as Jesus is our all, so he is also our sanctification; as Paul has testified, that he of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Sanctification is no more our work, nor the result of our work, than is any other part of the work of redemption. As under the old covenant, in the type, the appointed priest performed the work of consecration upon those consecrated, so our consecration or sanctification is the work of the great High Priest of the true sanctuary.

But what about the manner of the consecration? Still, if we go to the type, we shall find it will tell us the true answer. The substance of the process of consecration under the type was to sprinkle blood upon the person or thing to be consecrated, and then to wash that person or thing in pure water. By this process were the priests fitted to enter and serve in the sanctuary, and by this process were the various vessels prepared for use there. There were other ways in which men were consecrated to some special service, but it was by blood and water that this initial consecration was performed. This is a true type of the spiritual consecration or sanctification. In Hebrews x. 10 we read that by the will of God "we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." In Hebrews xiii. 12 we read that Jesus sanctified the people with his own blood. In Hebrews ix. 13, 14, we learn that as in the type the blood of bulls and goats and the ashes of a heifer sanctified to the purifying of the flesh, much more the blood of Christ shall purge or sanctify the conscience from dead works to serve God. Thus we have the answer to the shedding of blood in the type plainly set forth by the apostle.

There is also a response to the washing of water, as well as to the sprinkling of blood. In the prayer of Jesus, recorded in John xvii., occur these words, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." In verse nineteen the expression is used, "That they might be sanctified through the truth." It seems to me that the following Scriptures throw additional light upon this subject. In John xv. 3 Jesus said to his disciples, "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." In Ephesians v. 26 the apostle says that Christ gave himself for the church, "that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." In 1 Peter i. 22 the apostle speaks of the souls of his brethren being purified in obeying the truth through the Spirit. In John iii. Jesus speaks of being "born of water and of the Spirit." It has long seemed to me that these Scriptures all teach in substance the same truth, viz., that the word is compared to water; and that in the antitype the word and truth of God actually sanctify men through the power of the Spirit, just as water ceremonially sanctified men in the sanctuary. In the type the sprinkling of the blood must always precede the washing with water; so also in the true sanctification the sprinkling of the blood of Christ by faith upon the conscience must always precede the cleansing of the conscience by the word of truth. Both the sprinkling of the blood and the washing with water were necessary to the consecration of priests to their work under the type; so also are the application of the cleansing blood of Christ to the conscience, and the washing of water by the word, both needful to the setting apart and preparation of the Lord's true priests, the true vessels of mercy, to his spiritual service now. In all things the type is fulfilled in the antitype. He who has by faith seen his sins all washed away in the blood of Christ, and who has felt in his soul the power of this atoning blood to reconcile and to give him peace, and who by the power of the word applied to his soul has come to see some beginnings of light which make manifest the truth, and who has begun to see that Jesus is the truth, and that all that opposes him is a lie, even though it be such feeble discernment as to make men seem like trees walking, is sanctified or set apart to the service of God; and this having been once done, is done forever. But still continually must the truth be applied to the conscience; and there never will be a time on earth when we shall get beyond the need of this prayer of the Savior, "Sanctify them through the truth: thy word is truth."

I leave these thoughts. I trust they may afford some satisfaction to sister Patterson, and to others, if they shall be published.

I remain in gospel hope your brother,

F. A. CHICK.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., July 20, 1894.

Ghent, Ky., June 25, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The wise king of Israel said, "Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity."—Eccl. i. 2.

King Solomon was evidently a type of our Lord Jesus Christ. He built the great temple at Jerusalem, which was a type of the church, and that church was built by our glorious Lord. He said, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." To Solomon was revealed that church in all its superlative glory. That glory shone round about and upon it when John beheld it and said, "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." Great queens of earth have worn crowns made gaudy and beautiful by the rich and glittering jewels with which they were adorned; but they were all vanity. The wearers as well as the jewels were of the earth, earthy, and must fade and pass away. But the crown that adorned the brow of that woman whom John saw, was adorned with twelve stars, which were the brightest jewels that were ever seen by any that tread the green plains of earth. In their brilliancy they reflected the light of that Sun with which she was adorned, with which she was clothed. That Sun was the glorious Son of God, and in him is no darkness at all. But vanity is the companion of us all; because we are of the earth, earthy. None have risen above its corrupting atmosphere but those who have obtained the victory over the beast, and over his mark, and over the number of his name; none but those who have been created in Christ Jesus; and they stand upon a sea of glass, mingled with fire. While they stand upon the righteousness of our Lord Jesus Christ, the fire of God's holy law is burning up the vanity and corruptions of their earthly nature. But that will never be fully accomplished till the penalty of that law, which is death, reaches their mortal bodies, and they are disrobed of mortality. Then vanity will cease to be their companion. Having accomplished its work and filled its destiny with them, they will rest free from its alluring powers. In that great day when the angel will stand with one foot on the sea and the other on the land, and swear that time shall be no more, vanity will cease on earth, and not till then.

But the wise king said, "Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher." Who was that Preacher? is a pertinent inquiry. Solomon was inspired from on high, and it was Christ in him the hope of glory that made him wise. Then all his words of wisdom were given him by him who is wisdom. "Let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord," could be as appropriately said to that wise king as to any of us. Then surely the glorious Son of God was and is that Preacher. Solomon had no right to write or record for our learning anything that was not given him from on high. What he wrote was Scripture; and "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable." It is profitable because it comes from the highest source, from the great fountain of infinite wisdom. Our Lord said to his disciples, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." He gave them that authority, and closed it with a solemn amen. That authority was limited to teaching both Jew and Gentile "all things whatsoever I have commanded you." He who gave that command had gone down into Jordan and was baptized of John. Of John the prophet Malachi had said, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts." Our Lord was baptized by one who had authority, one who was prepared for that great work, and of him the angel said to Zacharias, "And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord." He was fulfilling that great mission when he was baptizing in Jordan, baptizing them unto repentance, to a turning away from the law. That law dispensation was about to be closed. The legal or old heaven was then about to be rolled up as a curtain, and the new or gospel heaven was about to be opened to the admiring gaze of the saints. Then vanity in its most horrid form began to make itself manifest. The Pharisees and Sadducees came to John's baptism, and seemed to claim it as a right to be baptized. But John said to them, "O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance; and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Adam." There he declared the sovereign power of that God in whom he trusted, when he said, "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." That vanity which caused them to ask baptism of John continued with them and culminated when they secured the release of Barabbas and the crucifixion of our Lord. They who secured the release of Barabbas and the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth were of the tribes of Israel, to whom the law and the prophets were given, which foretold the coming of our Lord, and the great and wonderful works he would do; and the law by types and shadows declared his sufferings and death; yet in their blindness and vanity they sought to and did secure the crucifixion of him of whose innocence Pilate bore testimony when he said, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person." That culmination of all vanity was declared in the words at the head of this article. "Vanity of vanities saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity." That Preacher was none other than the glorious Son of God who inspired his servant to record those words. Up to the crucifixion of our Lord the history of man on the earth presents one continued scene of vanity. After Adam's transgression he showed his vanity when he hid himself from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden. It surely was a vain thing for him to conclude that he could hide himself from the all-seeing eye of the great Jehovah. His vanity was never more manifest than when he had to be driven out of the garden where infinite purity resided. He had then violated the holy law of God and become corrupt, and could no longer remain in that pure house which had been his delight. As we have, all descended from that first man, vanity is characteristic of all our race. The descendants of Abraham were in their day the most favored nation upon the earth. They were delivered from oppression and bondage, the Red sea had divided, and they had passed over on dry ground, while Pharaoh and his hosts were all destroyed. Israel had sung, saying, "Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods? Who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?" Yet they at the foot of mount Sinai, which quaked to its very granite base, because of the presence of the great I Am, made a molten calf, and fell down and worshiped it, saying, "These be thy gods, O Israel which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." Space forbids that we should follow that people on to the coming of our Lord, a period of fourteen hundred and ninety years. Through that long period they were a stiff-necked and rebellious people, and their vanity was made most manifest when they rebelled against the judges whom the Lord had placed over them, and desired a king. They desired to be like the nations round about them. But the Lord in his anger gave them Saul, and in his wrath took him away. But all who are familiar with the history of that vain and corrupt people know that their vanity and wickedness culminated in the crucifixion of the Lord of light and glory. Of that most vain and wicked act, Peter said, "Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." Although this great and wonderful act of wickedness and vanity of those people was carried out, yet it was in strict accord with the eternal purpose and foreknowledge of God; for our Lord in the character of a Redeemer was as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world; and he said to the two mourning disciples as they journeyed from Jerusalem to Emmaus, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" His betrayal, his mock trial and his crucifixion, all of which were most vain and wicked on the part of the Jews, were yet all in accord with the eternal purpose of God, and as part and parcel of those purposes was the redemption of his elect, those who were chosen in Christ Jesus before the world began. It was all according to his foreknowledge and eternal purpose. Death was the penalty of the law his people had violated; and he being their head, in vital unity with them, that penalty could not be removed without the suffering and death of that head. Therefore it was appropriate for him to say, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" That glory could never have existed without the redemption of his body, and that body could never be complete in heaven without his resurrection, which secures the resurrection of the body. He suffered on Calvary according to the eternal purpose and foreknowledge of God, and redeemed his chosen people from under the curse of the law of sin and death; and in accordance with the same holy purpose he arose from the tomb, and by that resurrection he redeemed them from the power and dominion of the grave.

Perhaps it may be regarded as vanity in me to say anything further about natural Israel; but as they were a typical people, and in their vanity, rebellion and weakness typified the Adamic nature of all God's dear people while on earth, it may not be amiss for us to take a glance at their idolatry. Of them the prophet says, "For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and buildeth temples; and Judah hath multiplied fenced cities." They worshiped idols of gold, and forgot the Lord that had delivered their fathers from bondage, who had commanded them, saying, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them." It surely was vanity and rebellion on their part, after having received those commandments, to go into idolatry. Now, dear followers of Jesus, let us look within our own beings, our own carnal nature, and see if we do not find there all the marks, all the characteristics, peculiar to that people. Israel was delivered from Egyptian bondage; and if we are the children of God we have been delivered from the bondage of the law, and made free from its awful penalty; but how have we deported ourselves in that freedom? Ah, this poor little one is ready to lie down in the dust and cry, "Guilty, guilty." As we read the history of Israel, and their vanity, idolatry and rebellion, we see portrayed in letters of living light the characteristics of our own sinful, fleshly nature. We see pride, vanity and corruption within, and cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Israel when in Babylonish captivity hung their harps on the willows, and in deep sorrow said, "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" Still they were Israelites. Their captivity did not destroy their relationship to Abraham. But they were deprived the pleasure of roaming over the verdant fields of Palestine. They could no more recline under the green foliage of the cedars of Lebanon, nor inhale the sweet odors of the rich clusters of flowers along the borders of the sea of Galilee. And when you and I, dear saint, are in captivity to the corruptions of the flesh, the sweet songs of Zion have no charms for us. We are then far away in meditation and song from Lebanon and Galilee. Then the sweet odors of the glorious promises of the gospel have lost to us all their invigorating fragrance. It is then we hang our harps on the willows, and sit down in sorrow and gloom. But by the never-failing power of redeeming love this sweet and precious promise is brought to us, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." Israel was in captivity, but was delivered, and Babylon was destroyed; and that mighty One who delivered Israel from that gloomy captivity, will never cease to uphold you and lead you till you are called to lay your armor by and dwell with Christ at home.

H. COX.

THOUGHTS ON PSALM CXLI.

(Continued.)

"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: keep the door of my lips."

What a wonderful prayer this is! No natural man can feel what is here expressed, nor have any use for such words. They are the language of one who knows "the plague of his own heart;" who has seen its vileness, deceitfulness and evil; of one also who hates evil and loves holiness. He has been given eyes and light to see his own darkness. He has been given the Spirit of God by which to see his own depravity and wickedness, and to hate his own life. This Spirit has also shown him "the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." These things are redemption from sin and death,

(Continued on page 245.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 1, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

EPHRAIM AND MANASSEH.

"AND he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh; and he set Ephraim before Manasseh."—Gen. xlviii. 20.

Intensely interesting as is the historical record of the mercy of God toward the nation of Israel, and impressive as are the circumstances by which that mercy was displayed, if nothing is seen in it beyond the literal history the essential truth therein revealed has not been understood. From the earliest statement of the creation of the material universe, as given in the first of Genesis, to the closing benediction of the Revelation of Jesus Christ, all inspired Scripture testifies of Jesus as the life-giving Word of God. In this sense only is that record the infallible witness of truth. This wonderful exhibition of the hidden counsel of God is so mysteriously written by the pen of divine wisdom that no efforts of the wise and prudent of this world can even so much as desire to see its spiritual import. On the contrary, the literal statement of events satisfies the natural mind, and the proud masters of earthly science pity or despise those who are not satisfied with that mere husk of the letter. Every one who is led by the Spirit of God must feel that the letter is dead to him until the Comforter shows the testimony of Jesus in every word of that letter. Whether in what appears as mere narrative, or in the more sublime language and symbols of prophecy, when the Holy Spirit opens the essential significance to the understanding of the saint, the glorious fullness of every word is seen harmoniously bearing witness to the exalted Savior as identified with his people in all things. This is the sum of all the revelation which God has given in the whole volume of inspiration; and the same great truth is contained in every portion of that wonderful book of instruction.

Under the prophetic and legal dispensations it was the pleasure of God to reveal his favor to the chosen vessels of mercy in signs and in figures which were understood only by faith. So all the accounts concerning the manifestation of the goodness of God to the children of men under those ministrations, can only be rightly seen when they show the grace of God which is in Jesus Christ is given for the salvation of his people from their sins. Only divine wisdom could guide those who were moved by the Holy Ghost to record the prophetic declarations of the glory of God as it should be exhibited in the perfect salvation of his people by Jesus; just in the same manner and degree the saints are now dependent upon the Spirit of truth to take of that testimony and show it unto them. And as the whole Scripture is only the witness of the glory of Jesus in saving his people from their sins, so no portion of that Scripture can be rightly interpreted except as it presents the same truth. While the whole nation of Israel is set forth as typical of the spiritual Israel, it is also true that the simplest incidents and the most humble individuals are frequently used to signify the gracious purpose of God toward his chosen people. Thus, in the character and experience of the patriarch Joseph is illustrated the grace which should be revealed in Jesus as our antitypical Joseph. As he was subjected to shame and suffering for the wickedness of his brethren, so for the sins of his own brethren our Joseph was subjected to greater affliction. As in the type fraternal love outweighed all the wrongs to which Joseph was subjected, so in the antitype, Jesus loved his own even while he bore their sins on the tree of Calvary. In many respects the glory of Jesus is declared in the record of Joseph more clearly than in any other character among all the stars which illumine that night of legal shadows. But it is designed to examine more particularly in this article the typical character of these two sons of Joseph. They were signally distinguished as being the subjects of separate and peculiar blessings. This certainly has a special significance.

The first important consideration which is manifest in the case of these sons of Joseph is that they owed all their distinguishing characteristics to their birth. They certainly could claim no credit for being the sons of Joseph, since it is absurd to suppose they were consulted as to whose sons they would be. They were born as children of Joseph, and never had the opportunity to choose any other natural father. Surely no enemy of divine sovereignty will claim that they were entitled to glory in their wisdom in being born as children of Joseph rather than as of Egyptian parentage. With all the boasted powers of men, none can assume that he had power to choose other parents than those of whom he was born. By virtue of natural birth these were the sons of Joseph; and as his sons they were the inheritors of the blessing of Jacob. Nothing could entitle one to this blessing but the fact that he was born to it. Since it was not a reward of merit, it is evident that no action which they might perform could dissolve that relationship to their father under which they inherited the blessing. Let it not be forgotten that they were heirs of this blessing by reason of their birth as the sons of Joseph. Nothing of their own efforts or wishes had any influence in securing to them the tittle to this inheritance.

There is evidently divine purpose in the peculiar record given concerning these two sons of Joseph, since there is no account that any other tribe of Israel was divided. The fact that these two sons of Joseph were heads of half tribes indicates that they have a typical significance peculiar to themselves. This must be also included in the great end for which all Scripture is designed, to testify of Jesus. Certainly Joseph is a very bright type of our Redeemer as suffering for the sins of his father's house, and as being their sovereign preserver and temporal savior.

In his two sons is presented another view of the revelation of the grace by which salvation is given to the subjects of electing love. Under the legal covenant, which was first in manifestation, the chosen people of God could never come into the full liberty of the glorious gospel of that grace in which alone sinners are saved. While there was salvation revealed to those who were chosen of God, they were yet under the heavy bondage of the law of a carnal commandment, so that the vision was darkly shown even to those inspired servants of God who prophesied of the sufferings of Christ, and of the glory that should follow. This is signified in the blessing pronounced upon Manasseh in the immediately preceding context. Under the legal system as the first-born son he should have had the chief blessing; as the inspiration of God reversed this law in the case of these two sons of Joseph, so the purpose of God was fulfilled in the greater blessing reserved for the saints under the gospel dispensation. There was indeed a blessing bestowed upon the saints under the prophetic dispensation; but it was, in comparison with the greater grace revealed in this gospel day, only as the thousands of Manasseh in comparison with the ten thousands of Ephraim. This is one application in which this type shows the testimony of Jesus.

It is also true that in comparison with the fullness of the Gentiles who must be brought into the manifest liberty of the sons of God, the saints among the nation of Israel are but a very small remnant. In this application while the first-born son Manasseh represents the chosen people among the nation of Israel, the Gentile saints are represented as the ten thousands of Ephraim. This is intimated also by the visions as revealed to John, when he saw the one hundred and forty-four thousand of the twelve tribes, and "Lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues," who "stood before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb!"

In this sense it is manifest that the remnant of Israel is small in comparison with the great multitude of the redeemed out of all the earth. They may well be represented comparatively by the thousands of Manasseh and the ten thousands of Ephraim.

The blessing in our text forbids the thought that there should be a rivalry between these two companies. The blessing is not expressive of emulation of Ephraim nor of reproach upon Manasseh. It is "God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh!" The fact that the younger son was thus purposely given the precedence shows conclusively that the law of a carnal commandment does not regulate the order of this spiritual house of our God. Here Jesus is the supreme Ruler of Israel. The order of his kingdom is not borrowed from Moses, nor yet from the kingdoms of this world. The pride of nature must be abased, and all the traditions of carnal wisdom must be made foolishness in this heavenly kingdom. It was not by accident that the inspired blessing "set Ephraim before Manasseh." It was that the purpose of God according to election might stand, just as it was in the case of Jacob and Esau.

So long as the first covenant stood there could be no unity between that nation of Israel and the Gentiles from whom the Lord had separated them. In the type Manasseh, representing the legal covenant, could never recognize the Gentile saints, who are represented by Ephraim. But in the revelation of the gospel heaven the middle wall of partition is broken down, Christ having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace. Now is brought to pass the fulfillment of that which was prophesied by Isaiah, when the Root of Jesse should stand for an ensign of the people. "To it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious." Of that consummation of all prophecy it is declared that "He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth." Then "The envy [jealously] also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim."—Isa. xi. 10, 13. Under the legal covenant there was no possibility that peace should prevail between Judah, representing the covenant given by Moses, and Ephraim, representing the people of God among the Gentiles. Only when that first ministration had been by its fulfillment taken out of the way, could there be salvation granted to the Gentiles. So long as that old covenant remained it forbade the bringing in of any who were not included in the natural family of Abraham. Not only was that legal covenant given exclusively to the children of Abraham, but it was forbidden them to mingle with other nations. This enmity was put between them by the express limitation of that covenant. So, it must continue throughout their generations that Ephraim must envy Judah; and Judah must vex Ephraim. This was evidently the case when our Lord was in the form of a servant under that law.—See John iv. 9. But when he had satisfied every requirement of that legal covenant he blotted out all its demands, nailing it to his cross. Having thus spoiled all those legal principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it. So it is written, "He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will [covenant] we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once."—Heb. x. 9, 10. In this glorious reconciliation of Ephraim and Judah there is no room for either Jew or Gentile to boast. Neither can Judah find occasion to vex Ephraim, nor can Ephraim envy Judah. It is of infinite grace that the salvation of God is extended to both according to the good pleasure of God. Alike they must glory in the Lord exclusively. Moved by the Spirit of Christ, every saint must ever bless in accordance with the infinite mercy of God exhibited alike in both Ephraim and Manasseh, not according to creature merit, but by sovereign grace alone. This blessing is confined to the spiritual Israel. All others still continue to invoke the blessings of their idols according to their own ideas of what is due to them for services rendered.

Much more might be considered as legitimately included in our text; but we must leave the subject for the present. If any reader is impressed to discuss the text more fully, we shall be glad to hear from him.

DISCONTINUANCE OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

In No. 11 of the current volume will be found our first announcement that we would receive advertisements for the last page of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, no advertisement to be received unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented. Our object in making this venture, as stated in that notice, was with the hope that by devoting the last page to suitable and reliable advertisements we might be able to reduce the subscription price of the paper, and thereby give our subscribers the benefit of any profits there might arise from this branch of the business. It will also be seen by referring to the said notice that we then stated that we were inexperienced in the business, and considered it as a "venture." We have now made the experiment, and find that we are not able to obtain a sufficient number of advertisements of the nature that we would admit in the paper to enable us to make any material reduction in the subscription rates. We therefore have discontinued them altogether, with the exception of two small ones, whose time has not quite expired. It would be no trouble for us to fill the paper with cheap, unreliable advertisements; but such, of course, would not be admitted.

KINDLY REMEMBER US.

It is an unpleasant duty that we are obliged to perform to urge our brethren and friends to please make an effort to send us a remittance on their delinquent subscriptions. We expect within a few days to send notices to those whose subscription is considerably in arrears, and ask them to make a special effort to forward their remittance promptly. If not able to send the whole amount at present, remember that every little helps.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

PLEASE BE SURE

To give us the same name in which your paper is coming when you send a renewal of subscription. The best plan is to inclose in your letter one of the little pink slips containing your name, taken either from the margin of your paper or from the wrapper in which it comes repentance, forgiveness of sins, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, and all the fullness of salvation and eternal glory. Those who have been given this precious hope, and have received the Spirit which is of God, that they "might know the things that are freely given to us of God," are most afraid of the evil that is within them, the deceitfulness of their own hearts, and the vain imaginings and sinful rebellion of their own minds. While others are proud of their intellectual power, and rely with confidence upon their own judgment, and while even the Lord's people, when under the power of the flesh, will claim high regard for their own reasoning powers, and will confidently assert the value of their own conclusions and vain imaginings, and will glory in their shame, those who are experiencing the Spirit's power dread to be left to their own wisdom and judgment as to what they shall say; for they have been taught by sore experience that their wisdom is foolishness with God, and that their ways and thoughts are not his. They desire that they might say nothing that is contrary to the holy will of God. They want him to work in them "that which is well-pleasing in his sight." Their prayer is, "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." "Thy will be done in these poor hearts of ours." "Work in us, O Lord, both to will and to do of thy good pleasure."

(Continued from page 243.)

The dear Savior felt all the evil of our sinful flesh, yet there was no evil in him. He felt all its deceitfulness, though in his mouth was no guile. He had every trial that all his people have, and was tempted in all points like unto them, yet without sin. So he had need of such prayers as this, because they will need them for whose sins he suffered; and so he caused these prayers to be uttered by the inspiration of his Spirit. These are the prayers, as our further consideration of this Psalm will lead us more particularly to notice, which "shall be in the calamities" of his people; and these are some of the words which they shall hear "when their judges are overthrown in stony places," and which they shall find to be sweet.

He certainly must have seen but little in his own heart and mind to admire, and much to hate and fear, and must have no confidence in his own judgment, who feels constrained to ask the Lord to set a watch before his mouth, and keep the door of his lips. He knows what terrible things are liable to come out of that door—things that are foul, vile, wicked, shameful; things that are dangerous to our own peace and comfort, and to the peace and comfort of the church; things that defile the one who speaks them, bring disgrace upon himself and reproach upon his profession, and dishonor the name of God; and well may he beseech the Lord to keep that door, so that only words which are right and acceptable to him, for the good of his people and the glory of his name, shall come forth. He knows that these are enemies within the flesh of every child of God who are always ready and waiting to send forth terrible weapons of war and fearful elements of destruction through his mouth to fight against all that is good and true and holy; words that are spears and arrows, sharp swords and burning coals of fire, to "set on fire the course of nature" with the burning fury of hell. Well may he plead with the Lord to set a watch before his mouth, so that none of these fearful words shall come forth, but only words that are wise, and pure, and truthful, and gracious, and merciful, and loving, and compassionate, and that are always "seasoned with salt," so that they shall be edifying and comforting, and shall minister grace to the hearer.

O that this prayer might be more and more in our hearts and minds, and sincerely upon our lips before the Lord. How much it means to us. How often the watch does not seem to be on hand, and we all at once find all the horde of evil things that infest the heart rushing out through that door. Some brother offends us, and before we are aware we have said words that express our own evil temper, anger, jealousy, bitterness; words that we ought to be ashamed of, and will be soon, if not at once; words that we probably regret as soon as the gust of passion that sent them forth has passed by, but which our pride may keep us from confessing to be wrong until they have done great havoc and wrought fearful trouble, and we are finally humbled in the dust before the Lord and before our brethren on account of them, by his severe but loving chastisements.

O Lord, do keep that holy watch before my mouth. O keep the door of my lips, so that this vile nature of mine shall not be able to send out so many hurtful, vile and shameful words to wound thy dear children, and destroy my own peace and comfort. O that I may keep the dear Savior in mind when I am tempted to resent a fancied injury, and return evil for evil and railing for railing; how that when he was reviled he reviled not again, but asked forgiveness for the bitterest enemies that ever were upon earth, in the most terrible work that ever was done; and that I may think of Stephen, who desired that the terrible sin of his wicked murderers might not be laid to their charge, not thinking of himself.

O how hard, how impossible it is for us to keep the wrong words back, and to let only the right words come abroad. We cannot judge correctly. The wrong spirit deceives us so, by making us think it is the spirit of true wisdom, and holy zeal, and christian love, and proper self-defense, and the like, while in reality it is the spirit of unholy self, and has not one redeeming feature about it.

The wrong words, when clamoring for expression, will appear to us wise and noble, and smoother than butter and softer than oil; but when they come forth they are drawn swords. O! there is no one but the dear Lord can keep the door of our lips, and tell us at any time and under any circumstances what we ought to speak.

No, my dear brother; no, my dear sister; you do not know what you ought to say now, in that circumstance that is before you. You may just now think you are settled as to what is the exact language for you to use, but that confidence makes it all the more questionable whether you have yet taken counsel of anything but the flesh; but you may be right. You may have the right words on hand. If so, the Lord has given them to you, and there is no anger nor pride nor self behind them, but only the meek and lowly and kind and humble and loving and unselfish Spirit of the dear Savior. These are the words, and this the Spirit, to which the holy watcher and keeper opens the door of the lips freely; and how good and sweet those words are! They leave no bitter taste as they pass from the mouth, and they have no bitter effect as they go abroad; but they come forth as fragrant flowers and rich and luscious fruit from the garden of the Lord; and they carry heavenly perfume with them, and dispense sweet and healing odors wherever they go.

(To be continued.)

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., July 3, 1894.

LATHAM, Tenn.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—I will try to write you a few lines in regard to my experience in this low ground of sin and sorrow. I was brought to see myself a sinner when but a little girl, attending school. My teacher asked me if I ever prayed, and my answer was, "I fit to pray?" Though these thoughts passed away, to some extent, still the feeling of my unfitness to pray often came to me when I was enjoying the pleasures of the world; but I tried to throw such impressions aside and enjoy the pleasures of life; for I was young, and thought there was plenty of time for me to do better. But it was only a short time till one of my cousins was taken ill. We had been together a great deal, and I loved her very much, and her illness increased my sorrow, for I had no hope that she would ever get well. I went to see her one evening while she was lying very low; and as I entered the room where she was, she was telling her friends she was going home. O the darkness that was around me! She was going to be taken from this world, and I was not fit to meet her in heaven. I felt that I had not a friend on earth. I tried to pray, but it seemed that my prayers did not ascend higher than my head. I was alone. I would try to enjoy myself with my schoolmates, but there was no pleasure for me with them. I felt that I was the greatest sinner on earth, and that death would soon come to take me from the earth. I went to a protracted meeting, not far from my father's, and thought that I would ask them to pray for me; but when I got to the meeting I felt the people were too good to pray for such a sinner as I. I felt too sinful to even ask them to pray for me, so I returned home with a heavy heart. Not long after, when the Baptist meeting was held, I attended. It seemed that everybody knew how sinful I was. After the preaching, two sisters related their experience and united with the church. I felt that I would give this world, if it were mine to give, if I could be as good as they were; but I felt I was too great a sinner to ask them to pray for me, and my own prayers had failed. I thought heaven could not be my home, and that I was lost. It seemed that the sun did not shine on my pathway, and that even the trees of the forest drooped in mourning for me. My father went to hear old brother Morris preach, one day, and when he returned in the evening told us that the text was, "I lay down my life for the sheep." I thought, O that I were one of that number! I left the house, for I could not keep from weeping, and went over the hillside, where I had often gone, to offer my last prayer, as I thought death would be my portion before the morning sun would rise. I had done all that I could do, and all had failed me. I could not murmur at God's holy will, for I felt that it was just. The night passed, and the morning dawned for me again. As I was doing my work I started to go into one of the rooms where some of the family had slept the night before, and just as I opened the door a beautiful light that shone brighter than the noonday sun appeared. In surprise I stopped, and asked, "Lord, what is this?" And a voice, I cannot tell from where, said, "It is a hope for a better world." In joy I clasped my hands. My burden was gone, and I have never felt that burden since. But I often fear that I have been deceived. I know that there has been a change, but was it of grace? I have very many dark seasons while traveling through this low ground of sin and sorrow. After I received a hope there was another burden laid upon me, that of following my Savior in the watery grave, to be buried with him in baptism. O how could I do this? I was not worthy to live with so good a people as I viewed the Baptists to be. I had so many doubts and fears. How could they receive me? But by many chastisements I was made willing to go and offer myself to the church. I went to the water side, where a number of the brethren and sisters had assembled for baptism, and told them of my little hope, and to my surprise was received into the little church at Concord, and was baptized by Elder Little. I thought then that my troubles were finished; but not so. My daily experience is a mixture of joy and sorrow.

The old year has passed, and the new year is here. The last year has carried many blossoms from our garden here, and planted them in paradise to bloom, where they can never droop nor die. Why should we grieve for them? We will soon follow them to the grave, and so return to our mother earth. Dear saint, why should you fear the shadow of death? Jesus has conquered death and the grave for his people. So be of good cheer, for you will be permitted to sing that song of deliverance by and by.

Dear brethren, if you see fit to publish this, do so; and if not, all will be right. Remember me at the throne of grace, is the prayer of your little sister, if one at all,

ELLA SHANKLIN.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., June 12, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I inclose a letter from a dear sister in Iowa. Her membership and that of her husband is at North Berwick, Maine. They were baptized there eight years ago. I doubt not the spiritual travel expressed in her letter will prove a comfort to many. The church at North Berwick will be especially interested in it, I know. The letter has touched even my cold heart. May God bless it to others.

I remain your brother in Christ,
F. A. CHICK.

CRESCO, Iowa, May 24, 1894.

ELD. F. A. CHICK—DEAR BROTHER IN A PRECIOUS HOPE:—If one so worthless and sinful as I may be permitted to address you thus. It is a long time since I have written, but it has not been because of forgetfulness of thee, but because of my unworthiness and my inability to write anything of interest to you. Several times I have made up my mind to write; but if I got so far as to make the attempt it seemed so empty and worthless that it found a place in the stove.

We are still struggling on, but at times the way seems very dark, and I have to cry unto the Lord to lead me, for I know not whither to go. I sometimes feel that he hears my cry, and then how good it seems to rest in his love, caring not for earth and all its vanities. But O what a poor rambling life I live, taking it altogether. I fear that I never get very near the right path. If I do, it is only to cross it. In memory how often I live over again those precious seasons we enjoyed so much eight years ago this fall at Oak Woods. The peace and brotherly love that was manifest in each and every place we met to worship, the precious gospel sermons we listened to, and the dear old songs of Zion in which we joined in singing, are all precious to me. But amidst it all my unworthiness will rise up and fill my heart with fear that I was deceived, and had no right amid that group, for fear I had no father there. But though there seems no form or comeliness in me, not one thing for Jesus to love (and oftentimes I wonder if indeed he can love such a sinner as I), yet I find myself still hoping, hoping on, and resting in his promises to his children and followers. But I know that if I am a child (that seems too much for me to hope for), I am the very least of all, and of sinners the chief. But when this has been upon my mind, he has seemed to say to me, "My grace is sufficient for thee." There is where my hope must rest; for if I am saved it must be all of grace, free and unmerited grace. If it in the least depended upon my works there would surely be no hope for me, and my condemnation would be sure.

Many have been the sad changes in the church at Oak Woods since we were there, so many have been called home to their rest and reward since then. What a gloom seemed to hang over that loved spot after our dear aged pastor and family were all called away. But now Elder Keene has gone there, which has in a measure dispelled the gloom, and I find my wishes to once more join them here on earth again rising up in my heart, yet it is very doubtful about my ever meeting them again on earth. It will soon be time for the yearly meeting, and I hope it is the Lord's will that you may go there, for they will all enjoy having you there with them once more, and hearing you preach the unsearchable riches of our Lord. It would be a privilege far greater than I ever expect to enjoy in this pilgrimage if I could go and meet you there, with all the dear brethren and sisters who are left, and hear you preach once more; for well do I remember when you fed the multitude, and all were well fed, and there was enough for many more.

My husband is as well as usual and is still at work. Cora is well, but has met with a great loss in the death of her father a little over two years ago. I am still trying in my weakness to do as well as I can under my affliction. My eye is quite bad, and the doctor tells me there is no hope of a cure. If that is so I must be nearing my journey's end. I feel that the mistakes of my life have been many. The sins of my heart have been more. With footsteps that shrink and falter I am nearing the other shore.

Dear brother, I desire to be remembered by you at the throne of grace, that through it all I may be able to say, "Thy will, O Lord, be done." Pardon all errors in this, which I feel may be my last. If it is not asking too much I would like a letter from you very much, but not to the exclusion of better duties.

With much love and fellowship I remain your most unworthy sister in hope,

MRS. N. B. LIBBEY.

McCOYSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 8, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have delayed my remittance to the dear family paper, thinking that I could get at least one new subscriber; but I have failed. They are all Arminians around us, and I know our dear paper would not be appreciated among them, for they do not love Old Baptist doctrine. But Christ says, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Often I feel that at best I do not know anything at all. Yet I do know God is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and he knows those that put their trust in him. I know that goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life. I know that all the way the Lord my God has led me was the right way. I know that salvation is of God. Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name, be all the praise. I know I am a poor worm of the dust, not worthy of the least of all the mercies the Lord has shown me, and they are new every morning. It was written of the children of Israel in their wilderness journey, "And the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way;" and the Lord's poor and afflicted people often feel so now; but it is given them not only to believe in him, but also to suffer for his sake. If they are his followers, they must walk in the same way that he walked. "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." It is only recorded that he rejoiced once. "In that hour Jesus rejoiced in Spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight." We must needs mourn if he hides himself from us; for our life is hid with Christ in God; and when he is withdrawn, we grope mournfully in this body, dead because of sin, to find some evidence that we have passed from death unto life. But we see only vileness and pollution; the whole head sick, and the whole heart faint; and we mourn sore like doves, till some angel asks, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."

We had Elder A. B. Francis with us at Tuscarora on Dec. 23d. He is an able and comforting preacher for a poor and afflicted people who trust in the name of the Lord. They are a peculiar people, who never find anything good in themselves; therefore they rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in themselves. They have no strength, therefore they walk in the strength of the Lord.

Excuse me for taking up your valuable time with this poor scribble. I will close.

IDA M. HART.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Clemma Bogart, daughter of G. M. and Mary Bogart, was born July 17th, 1878, and died May 7th, 1894, aged 15 years, 10 months and 7 days.

The subject of this notice was a great sufferer from infancy. She never spoke a word nor walked a step in all her life. She suffered much in the last hours of her natural life. But we weep not as those who have no hope, believing that the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.

A. H. HAGANS.

RIVERSIDE CO., Cal., July 15, 1894.

DIED—At his home in Morehouse Parish, La., April 6th, 1894, Deacon Robert Russell Newman, aged 62 years, 8 months and 25 days.

He was born July 11th, 1831, at Warren, Pa., and in early childhood moved to Union Co., Ark. He was married to Mrs. Fannie Montgomery on March 19th, 1867. He joined the Primitive Baptist Church at Concord, Morehouse Parish, La., in 1873, and was baptized by Elder A. Tomlin; at which place he remained, and was a consistent member, always striving to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. While he loved peace, he would not compromise truth with any one. He was a firm believer in the principles advocated by the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I have often thought that he was possessed of more patience and humility than any other person I ever saw; yet I often heard him say, "If saved, I am a poor sinner saved by grace." A little while before he passed away he said, "If in this life only I had hope, of all men I would be most miserable; but I have a good hope through grace."

Everything was done that could be done by kind friends and physicians to check the disease; but the summons came, and it must be obeyed. He leaves many friends, his dear companion and four children, with the church, to mourn their loss; yet their loss is his eternal gain.

G. W. CALDWELL.

My wife, Huldah Potter, died July 5th, 1894, at the age of 75 years.

She was a daughter of George Westfall, of Sussex Co., N. J. Her mother died when she was twelve years old. She made her home with Jesse Shephard, of New Jersey, with whom she resided until her marriage, which took place at the age of fifteen years. She came to this state at the age of eighteen years. She was the mother of five children, of whom but one is living, Mrs. L. E. Loomis, with whom I make my home. She is the last of the family of six children. She was a loving mother and a dutiful wife, with whom I lived a happy life for fifty-six years. She made a profession of religion at the age of fourteen years, and united with the Presbyterians; but becoming dissatisfied, not only with the baptism, but also with their doctrine, which did not agree with the Bible, she left them. I think she came to the church of Columbia & Wells forty-three years ago, and was baptized by Elder Joseph Beeman. She was a constant reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, of which she was a subscriber forty years. Like all the rest of the members of the church, when we would meet on the occasion of the association, her first inquiry would be, "Has Elder Beebe come?"

ALSO,

DIED—Mrs. Olive Lament, aged 92 years.

She was born Jan. 27th, 1801, in Greene Co., N. Y. She was the oldest of the thirteen children of Elder Hezekiah Pettit, pastor of the Old School Baptist Church at Lexington, N. Y., for sixty-five years. She was married to John Lament, with whom she lived twenty-four years. She was left a widow fifty-two years ago, at the age of forty-one years. She was the mother of nine children, six of whom are yet living, with whom she made her home. She had sixty-eight living descendants at the time of her death. She with her children came to this state in 1842, and united with the church of Columbia & Wells by letter about the same time or soon afterward, and was a beloved sister and faithful member until her death, which took place on Oct. 21st, 1893.

NICHOLAS POTTER.

EAST TROY, Pa., July 20, 1894.

DIED—At the family residence, Petersburg, Kent Co., Del., on Saturday morning, July 14th, Peter Meredith, aged a few days more than 71 years.

Brother Meredith was about as extensively known as any private member in our country. He was baptized in the fellowship of the church at Bryn Zion in September, 1859, and was shortly afterward appointed Deacon, and ever since has been as a pillar in that church, now nearly thirty-five years filling the offices of Deacon, Clerk, Trustee and Treasurer with fidelity to every trust. As an energetic and successful business man in temporal matters, worldly business and worldly interests were always subordinate and secondary to the calls of the church. He lived much more in the church than in the world. His exalted worth as a man of grace had to be found in his family, in the church, and in his immediate neighborhood. Among the places of hospitality and entertainment in time of extra meetings brother Meredith's noble mansion was always at the head of the list. Hundreds of people have shared in the welcome and comfort of this Baptist home. He was not a man of many words, and he did not write; but no better gospel could be preached than that which shines forth in the life and death of such a man. The fruits of his life and labors of love will not die with him.

Brother Meredith was attacked with what was called dropsy of the heart about two years ago, from which he continued to suffer more or less until the final release came.

Elder Grafton was with me attending to the last rites. The funeral took place on the following Tuesday at the Cow Marsh meeting-house, where was gathered the largest concourse of people ever collected at any funeral at that place. The promised blessing of the inspired psalmist came to him, to see the good of Jerusalem all the days of his life, his wife as a fruitful vine by the sides of his house, and his children like olive plants round about his table. When the message announcing his death came to me the words of the poet impressed themselves upon my mind as appropriate utterances from the life of faith and hope now closed.

"O happy soul, that lives on high,
While men lie groveling here!
His hopes are fixed above the sky,
And faith forbids his fear."

"His conscience knows no secret stings,
While peace and joy combine
To form a life whose holy springs
Are hidden and divine."

"He waits in secret on his God,
His God in secret sees;
Let earth be all in arms abroad,
He dwells in heavenly peace."

"His pleasures rise from things unseen,
Beyond this world and time,
Where neither eyes nor ears have been,
Nor thoughts of sinners climb."

"He wants no pomp nor royal throne
To raise his figure here;
Content and pleased to live unknown
Till Christ his life appear."

"He looks to heaven's eternal hill
To meet that glorious day;
But patient waits his Savior's will
To fetch his soul away."

E. RITTENHOUSE.

ORDINATIONS.

On the third Saturday in June, 1894, the presbytery called by the New Providence Church of Old Regular Baptists of Jesus Christ, consisting of Elders L. O. Davis, John Montgomery, E. T. Sanders, A. J. Sanders, A. L. Allen and D. Wm. Montgomery, convened at the Providence Church, for the purpose of ordaining brother ANDREWSON KEMP to the office of Deacon.

The presbytery organized by choosing Elder L. O. Davis Moderator, and Elder A. L. Allen Clerk.

The church then delivered brother Kemp into the hands of the presbytery, and after examination he was ordained to the office of Deacon in the church of Jesus Christ by the laying on of hands and prayer.

Prayer by Elder E. T. Sanders.

Elder John Montgomery then gave the charge.

A hymn was then sung, and the right hand of fellowship was extended to brother and sister Kemp as Deacon and Deaconess of the New Providence Church of Jesus Christ.

L. O. DAVIS, Mod.

A. L. ALLEN, Clerk.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Des Moines River Association will convene with the Des Moines River Church, three miles north of Eldon, Wapello Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August, 1894, closing on Monday following.

Those coming by the Rock Island route will stop at Eldon, and those by the C., B. & Q. or by the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa routes will stop at Batavia, and they will be met at those stations.

A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers especially.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Association of Old School Baptists will meet, the Lord willing, with the church at Elk Lick, near Sadieville, Scott Co., Ky., on Friday before the fourth Saturday in August, and continue three days (24th, 25th and 26th). Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to meet with us.

Those coming by way of Cincinnati will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday at 4:05 p. m., or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by way of Lexington will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday evening at 2:40, or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by Louisville will change cars Thursday evening at Frankfort for Georgetown. At Georgetown take the Cincinnati Southern for Sadieville. Trains leave Frankfort Thursday at 1:00 and 4:20 p. m., and Friday at 7:00 a. m. Reduced rates will be arranged from points named.

J. P. FIELD, Clerk.

THE sixty-third meeting of the Spoon River Association of Regular Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on the premises of E. D. Varnes, one mile and a half south of Cramer, on the Iowa Central R. R., Peoria Co., Ill., on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Teams will be at Cramer on Thursday evening and Friday morning. Brethren will likely be met also at Farmington, on the Buda & Rushville Branch of the C., B. & Q. R. R., on Thursday evening. If not met there, change immediately for Cramer. Brother Varnes lives five miles southeast of Farmington. The saints are invited.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

The Old School Baptist Conference of Maine will be held, the Lord willing, with the Old School Baptist Church in North Berwick, York Co., Maine, commencing on Friday, August 31st, 1894, and continuing three days.

We shall gladly welcome all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and especially brethren in the ministry who feel it in their hearts to visit us. Those who come will be met at the North Berwick R. R. depot on Thursday before the time appointed for our yearly conference.

FRED. W. KEENE.

The Maine Association will meet, the Lord willing, at Bowdoinham, Maine, Sept. 7th, 1894, and continue three days.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited, especially ministering brethren who attend the Maine Conference. We propose to call for the ordination of Deacon Zacheus M. Beal. All who visit us will be cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

The Indian Creek Association will convene with the Dry Fork of Twin Church, near West Manchester, Preble Co., Ohio, beginning on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren and sisters coming from the east will take the Little Miami R. R. at Xenia, by way of Dayton, for Brown's Station. Those coming from the west will take the Little Miami R. R. at Richmond, Ind., to Manchester. Those coming from the south will take the C. J. & M. R. R. at Cincinnati to Manchester. Those coming from the north by way of Greenville will take the C. J. & M. R. R. to Manchester, where they will be met and conveyed from the two named stations to the meeting and to places of entertainment.

We extend a hearty welcome to all the brethren and sisters, and especially the brethren in the ministry do we hope to meet with us.

JOHN A. HOWELL.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SON, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day: for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m. Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.
m. ver. 31.		18 "Mary Magdalene came and told
CHAPTER XX.
1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.
		15 "Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING.

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1894.

NO. 32.

POETRY.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HERITAGE.

I HEAR of a land whose inhabitants never Of sickness or sorrow are known to complain;
Where health, perfect health, is triumphant forever,
And pleasures perpetual banish all pain.
Here sin, cursed sin, God's creation defileth,
And makes earth a desert, a valley of tears;
The land afar off with true happiness
smileth,
For O! it is sinless—it knoweth no fears.
I hear of a country where reigns the Eternal,
Through whose broad dominions Life's pure river flows;
Elysian pastures, unchangeably vernal,
And trees of God's planting their beauties disclose.
This country of ours, in dense shadows
bedraped,
Depresses the spirits and fills with deep gloom.
Heaven's portals once entered, these all are escaped;
A clime so delightful, for grief has no room.
These nether earth-cities are full of confusion,
Commotion and tumult here daily abound;
But Zion's blest city has no such intrusion:
There only are peace and true harmony found.
I hear that beyond this dark wilderness dreary
Are mansions of glory, which know not decay,
Provided by infinite love for the weary,
When death's welcome messenger calls them away.
O land of repose! O fair country inspiring!
Tranquility's city! Famed mansions confest!
Could I but thy glories be rightly desiring,
O then I should gain thee at length and
be blest.
I faint; I am weary; my comforts are dying;
I'm restless and troubled as waves of the sea!
My days and my nights are expended in sighing,
And peaceful repose is a stranger to me.
O Savior of sinners! O Friend of the friendless!
Look on my affliction in pity and love!
Thy mercies are free, thy compassions are endless;
Receive me at home in those mansions above.
Then waiting thy time, in due season ascending,
I'll join with the glorified songsters, and sing
That chorus ecstatic, united, unending,
To thee, O death's Conqueror, Victor and King!

R. E. HARDING.

BRIGHTON, 1878.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BURDETT, N. Y., July 22, 1894.

ELDER G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—After I had lost the expectation of seeing my letter touching the subject of hell published, it came to hand in the SIGNS of last week. I was not displeased with the delay; and if it had never been published, just that happening would be as God ordered it, and unto which I should not only be reconciled, but thank God for it, as is my duty "in everything [to] give thanks." Since you have published my letter I feel moved to add a little to it; but whether it will be to anybody's profit
God knoweth—not I.

When I wrote before the subject expanded in my mind so greatly that to save space I left out some things which may be misunderstood if I do not explain. One of these is my reference to 2 Corinthians xii. 1-5, without giving any clue to what I meant by it. When I saw it in print
I felt mortified with the neglect, and will say that I simply meant that revelations of things pertaining to the world to come are not inconsistent with our existence in the body.
Indeed, all the inspirations of men to fill up the canon of Scripture were done in the body, and no doubt with something of a sense of the glory of the words that the Holy Ghost inspired them to utter. This was chiefly on the side of the heavenly;
but in some instances it seemed needful to have the horrors of hell made clear to the understanding, in order to teach the contrast of the two.
Paul knew that salvation is of the Lord both ways; that is, he knew the power that struck him down in the display of a light above the brightness of the sun, and through the marvel of the scales that fell from his eyes when he received his sight.
Jonah knew that salvation is of the Lord when he cried out of the belly of hell, and was answered in a glorious deliverance from the power of death, to foreshadow the greater majesty of the bursting of the bars of death by him who is the same yesterday, to-day and forever, even as he himself declared before it was brought to pass. This grand deliverance from death and destruction is from the Lord; and it seems to me to be unprofitable to speculate about a thing so plainly set forth by the pen of inspiration. The only question is, Do we believe it? Or do we believe that we are able to reason out a better God, a better heaven, or a better hell than the Bible teaches?

This is the work of false religionists of every hue that have flourished in every age of the world. But do not Old Baptists understand that the world by wisdom knows not God, and that all the reasoning of all the world can never invalidate the teachings of holy writ about God or man or heaven or hell, diluted or undiluted, in the smallest degree? If they fail to know this, where shall they learn it but from God? Did they learn that they were aliens from God, and needed his grace to save them from wrath, from man? Or did the arrows of Jehovah pierce their souls, and give them a sense of present wrath, that told them from a little what a great deal meant?
They may not be able to answer this in the affirmative, as I was not, till I was brought to know the extremity of the wrath shed upon the ungodly, and also to sense the degrees of it from the highest to the lowest. In proof from the Bible that there are degrees of it I will cite the reader to Matthew xi. 22, xxiii. 14, Luke xii.
47, 48. Read these Scriptures carefully, and see whether you will not conclude with me that these passages do not invalidate the doctrine of salvation by grace, nor establish works to be the basis of our hope in the Lord, but are a proof of the strictness of God in meting out justice
according to desert.

Here I feel inclined to digress from the main subject, and write a few lines on an analysis of works, as I trust the Lord has taught me. What are good works, and what are they the proof of, and from whence do they proceed? No man, not having an unction from the Holy One, is able to judge of good works, nor can define what they are. So it happens that men are ever inquiring, "What shall I do to be saved?" Salvation being his chief concern, almost everybody finds at some time in his life a something that he is willing to trust with more or less confidence, and afterward feels serene in that confidence, in spite of his heartless departures from the true standard of righteousness, as is told to those who have an unction from the Holy One, that leads them into all truth, both as to their obligations to God and their duties to men. Yet I believe one may have "a good and honest heart" without doing his duty to either God or man. This, no doubt, was Paul's case, and is the case of every one who brings forth fruit from the reception of seed that is sown by the Son of man. Others gladly receive the word, to be choked out or withered by the love of money, or the lusts and vanities of the world.

While Paul was persecuting the saints he still had a good conscience toward God, but in ignorance of his true character. He did not know but that God had made him his vicegerent to regulate the affairs of the world; but was honest, no doubt, in his dealings with him. To say the least of him, when he received the word it was into a good and honest heart, and in him it brought fruit a hundredfold.

Forms are nothing, or they would be effective with the hearts far from God. If there were merit in the form, Saul, king of Israel, had been right in treading upon the command to spare nothing that pertained to Amalek; and the priests that Malachi denounced as robbers of God could not have been counted as robbers in offering the sick, the lame and the blind for sacrifice. If the form had had virtue in it David would not have gone to God with a broken heart and a contrite spirit instead of burnt offerings when the Lord showed him his iniquity in his transgression against Uriah. It would have been an easy thing for David to have burned a sin offering upon the altar; but that would not have been a good work. The good work was the contrite spirit that he sent back to God, from whom he received it. Hence we see all the prophets declaiming against the wickedness of them who robbed the laborer of his just reward, and took pledge from widows, and made the shekel large and the epha small, while they were zealous of the forms of worship, both in prayers and in burnt offerings. But all these things are only good when they are the outcome of a heart devoted to God, and are only practiced to make manifest their love to him through a willing obedience to the form that best bespeaks that love. When thus done it is a sweet savor of Christ unto God; and no deception can cheat him, nor hide from his view the smallest departure from his service in spirit and in truth. All is a mockery of God that is not rendered to him in spirit and truth. If any are able to make an offering in spirit and truth, that offering will be acceptable to God, and none other will be. Hence our great offering must be God's own beloved Son, taken from the bosom of the Father, even as he gives us faith to follow him, and to walk even as he walked. Though conscious of inability to do so in detail, if God help us to love him we shall be able to admire his gentleness and goodness, and to chide ourselves with every departure from him as the embodiment of all that is pure and lovely. If we have not a foretaste of that love on the shores of time, how shall we receive it in a future state? If we love not the good and eschew the evil here, how shall we be able to do it hereafter?

I have written the above, believing it will be more profitable than the details of the way in which I have been led in the course of a long life. It is enough that God gives me an abiding trust in him, which has never wavered since February 4th, 1859. Since then I have cared nothing for the gain of worldly things; yet as a duty I have at times labored with my hands, as God's providence called for it. At no time have I had the least worry about a living. I have trusted in God, and he has provided; and I have no doubt of his care of me. With these remarks I feel to quit, and leave the space that I might fill with the details of many wonderful things, but of very doubtful profit. If, like Paul, I could confirm the wonders with the power of miracles, it would do to enlarge in their detail; but without such a gift I can see no way that good can inure from an attempt to give prominence to things which do not instruct. Besides this, I fear to create a distrust of my integrity, and of being set down as a fabricator of lies, instead of being a sober and zealous laborer in the cause of truth, which is the base of the universe, and without which chaos would hurl world upon world, and darkness would again rest on the face of the deep.

W. B. SLAWSON.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 24, 1894.

EDITORS SIGNS OF THE TIMES:—The inclosed letter explains itself. I believe your readers will enjoy it as an important addendum to the former article of brother Chick on "Close Communion," and will agree that taken altogether it forms a valuable addition to the literature of the subject, and breathes the proper christian spirit throughout.

Fraternally yours,

J. M. LOWE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., July 21, 1894.

MR. J. M. LOWE—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I received yours of July 12th, and take this first opportunity of writing to you in response. I do so all the more gladly because of your strong expressions of belief in salvation by grace, without works of human merit. I doubt not also, with you, that very many are to be found in all the various religious denominations, and many in no sect at all, who have become convinced of salvation by grace by heartfelt experience. I doubt not also that many remain identified with those who do not believe or teach this glorious truth simply because they know not where else to go. I feel glad of your approval of my letter upon the subject of what is generally known as "close communion," and I am glad to try to respond to your further question upon which I did not touch in my article in the SIGNS. I trust that you will believe that I write with personal charity for all, and with ill-feeling toward none. Principles, not persons, are at stake, or at least ought to be.

In my letter in the SIGNS I tried to enforce my view by dwelling upon the subject of baptism, as being a prerequisite to any other church privilege or duty. Of course baptism stands only as one among many things which are tests of fellowship; but I instanced baptism because the argument from it seemed to me to be plain and easily understood.

The question which you have asked is not a new one to me. It did not, however, occur to me to dwell upon it in my article. I will state the matter now frankly as it appears to me. Your question is, as I understand, If a brother is a true believer, a man really born of God, and if he has been immersed, and is a Missionary Baptist, Congregationalist, or any other sect, should he be received or excluded from the supper? So far as Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists are concerned, I might answer by saying that he communes with those who have not been baptized; and if he came into our communion with of necessity desire to bring in also his unbaptized brethren, he could not consistently commune with us to day, and to-morrow commune with those for whom we could have no fellowship. Surely we could not permit any one to pursue such a contradictory course. We should be acting dishonestly to do so. Besides, how could he be willing to live in a church not one of the members of which has, according to his view, been baptized? If he continues to do so, would the church of God be right to encourage him in this course by admitting him all the same to their communion? Is not such a brother walking disorderly? We are bidden to withdraw ourselves from every brother who walketh disorderly. Besides, if such an one has come into these churches by dipping, in most instances those who have performed the ordinance have not been baptized themselves. How could they impart that which they had not received?

But the question occupies a somewhat different ground when we come to speak of the Disciples or Campbellites. Here is immersion by those who have themselves been immersed. Can we receive a Disciple to our communion? No; because we should be bound to exclude from our fellowship any one among us who should believe and advocate Campbellite sentiments, such as denying the new birth. Some one among them might personally believe in the new birth; but so far as our attitude toward him is concerned we must judge him by the company he keeps. I do not use this last expression with any offensive meaning.

But how about such a baptized believer who may be among the Missionary Baptists? This, I judge from your letter, my brother, is where you stand. Of course you will believe that I wish only to write plainly, but not offensively. Truth or right is all that can do either of us any good. Sixty or more years ago we, right or wrong, withdrew fellowship from the Missionary, or as we call them, New School Baptists. I believe we were right in doing so. Can we consistently invite them right back to our communion? We doubt not that many children of God are among that people. But it is manifest that we cannot go through the congregation, and out of many New School Baptists who may be present pick out one and say to him, "You are welcome to come to the supper, because we believe that you are a child of God; but the rest of your brethren cannot come." No; we could not admit even a true child of God so long as he stood connected with those for whom we could have no fellowship. The ordinances belong to the church of Christ, and must be authorized by and administered in the church of Christ. If we were right in the sight of God in withdrawing fellowship from New School Baptists, then they are not the church of Christ, and therefore cannot authorize any one to baptize in the name of the Lord. There are some among them whom I love and whom I pity, and whose case is hard as it seems; but we ought not to violate the law of God for them, however much we may love and pity them. Rather let us adhere to the truth with firm and patient consistency, and thus strive to win them. We shall most surely never win them to a consistent course by pursuing an inconsistent course ourselves. I desire to say, in closing, that three things are needful to gospel baptism. First, a believer; second, a proper administrator (that is, one acting under authority of the church of Christ); and third, immersion.

My brother, I leave these hasty thoughts with you. I hope I have answered your thought as well as the words of your question. If you think best you may forward it to the SIGNS; I do not request it. I should be glad to hear from you again.

I remain sincerely your brother,

F. A. CHICK.

NORA SPRINGS, Iowa, May 3, 1894.

BRETHREN BEEBE:—The third verse of the epistle of Jude has been on my mind, and I have concluded to write you on this text.

Jude says, "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

The word "contend" occurs only once in the New Testament. Certainly this is very important, else the saints would not be instructed to "earnestly contend" for it. Let us inquire what this faith is "which was once delivered unto the saints."

I know that it is commonly believed that faith is belief; and Webster, like most of Adam's race in a state of nature, entertains this view; but I have no doubt the apostle Paul was right when he defined it to be the substance of that glorious, spiritual immortality beyond, which is also the evidence of those things no mortal eye hath seen.—Heb. xi. 1.

"Once delivered unto the saints." Each one is given this evidence once, when born again, of incorruptible seed, by the word of God; and this serves as the foundation on which the hope is built. It is not something to get or lose at will, but is the very substance of those things for which we hope. It is the gift of God, and shall "overcome the world." There is no "evidence" without this blessed gift; and without it, "it is impossible to please God." This is the origin of fellowship among the people of God, being that from which and to which the "righteousness of God is revealed," begetting the love between those who love him that begetteth, and is the only basis of christian fellowship. I know this is very different from many descriptions of faith that we hear; and many seem to think that it is an opinion of some passage of Scripture, or belief in some point of doctrine; and in contentions where passions and deeds of the flesh were plainly manifest, we have heard this quoted.

"Contend earnestly for the faith."

Why? Because, says Jude, it pertains to "the common salvation," the welfare of the saints here in a church capacity; and if you do not, you will receive those who are not "taught of the Lord," who "have not faith," ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness (tickling their own carnal fancies), and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the consequence of receiving those who do not bring the evidence, or in other words, have not faith. Setting themselves up for infallible standards in doctrine and practice, they can quote (if in the majority), "How can two walk together, except they be agreed?" and attempt in this aggressive spirit to stifle every thought and strangle every idea that anyone else may advance, and make havoc among the Lord's humble poor. If Paul upbraids Peter to his face, or walked no more with Barnabas, or they thought Paul said many things hard to be understood, we do not read of any exclusions; and it seems, with the example of forbearance of Jesus and our early brethren, we might exercise some forbearance and long-suffering, of which we often speak in our public exercises, and not be so certain every one is wrong who may disagree with us upon some explanation of a text of Scripture, and learn that the faith once delivered unto the saints is the one important point for which to contend. Now, of course, some dear brother may take issue with me on the explanation of this text, and I must make some points to sustain it. I will say first, the past tense is often used for those things not yet completed, as regards time; because they are in God's counsel as if already accomplished; hence, delivered unto the saints;" many having already received it, and failure with God is impossible. "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." "He that hath the Son hath life." "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." When any of the little ones bring that evidence, manifesting that they believe with all their hearts, we make no other condition to baptism, like Philip. And shall we then, a week, a month or a year afterward exclude this child of our heavenly Father because he or she holds, or thinks it holds, some view which seems to us to be contrary to sound doctrinal teaching? "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Perhaps the idea for which the exclusion was made was held at the time of baptism, as has been the case to our knowledge. "It is impossible but that offenses will come." This seems indeed more grievous than joyous; but, dear brethren, this is a part of the "all things," which under the governing hand of Jehovah "work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." The trials which await us here can only hasten the day when, having served the purpose of our heavenly Master here, we shall fly away and be at rest. My earnest desire for our people is, that they may "follow the things that make for peace," and that the sweet fruit of the Spirit alone may abound among them.—Rom. xiv. 19; 1 Thess. v. 13; Gal. v. 22.

Yours in the bonds and afflictions of the gospel, according to the power of God, I hope,

GARRETT MURPHY.

ROMANS V. 10.

"For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life."

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—By your permission I will speak to the household of faith of some of the precious things contained in the above text of Scripture; and first, in order to a correct solution of any problem, there are three indispensable prerequisites. First, the person speaking; second, the person spoken to; and third, the person or thing spoken of. If these three points are properly considered, then all the obstacles to a correct solution of the problem are removed. But without this, the best conclusion to which we can possibly come is imaginary. Therefore let us now turn to the first chapter of the epistle from which the text standing at the head of this article is taken, in order to ascertain those facts that will serve as a light to guide us in the way of truth. "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle."—Verse 1. This is the person speaking. "To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints."—Verse 7. These are the persons addressed, the regenerated persons who are in Rome. And the subject of address is reconciliation and salvation. And first, we notice that the address of the apostle is limited to all the beloved of God; to all the saints of God who are in Rome. Now, we do not know how many there were in Rome that were not beloved, but we feel safe in saying that there were some; for the language employed by the apostle indicates very clearly that there were those in Rome of a different character, who were not included in the address. The persons to whom this whole epistle is addressed are clearly distinguished from others, by the discriminating terms, "beloved of God" and "called to be saints." And the specification of any one particular thing is at least equivalent to an absolute prohibition of every other thing. It is evident from the teaching of the Scriptures that those dearly beloved saints of God, whom Paul so tenderly and lovingly addresses, were once the avowed enemies of the faith that now is the only anchor of their souls. They became enemies by transgression in the person of their representative; for "by one man's disobedience many were made sinners." "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." And those saints at Rome are not excepted. They, by the transgression of law, became as great and wicked sinners as any of the sin-polluted family of Adam. They were by nature the children of wrath, even as others; but God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved them, even when they were dead in sins, quickened them together with Christ.—Eph. ii. 3-5. There is no difference between one man and another, considered as fallen sinners, until grace makes the difference. Grace is divine favor bestowed upon objects previously chosen. If we say that it was bestowed upon all, then we might be asked why it had not the same effect upon all. We are taught that grace is sufficient; and if it is bestowed upon all, then all have a sufficient means of salvation, if grace is sufficient for any. We know that the Scriptures teach that salvation is of grace; and if grace is sufficient to save Mary, casting seven devils out of her, and for the man among the tombs, casting out of him a legion of devils, and in a moment of time saved the thief upon the cross, pray tell us for whom grace is insufficient. Who is it that grace will not save, if for that purpose it is sent into the heart with divine power? All sinners are alike diseased. The malady of one is just the same of all. The remedy that will effect a cure for one will surely do as much for all, if for that purpose given to all; especially so when administered by the divine Physician, who has all power, and who is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind; upholding all things by the right hand of his power; who spake, and it was done; who commanded, and it stood fast. Man in his fallen state is in a state of irreconciliation to God, an enemy to God in the most extensive sense of the term, abandoned to the most wretched state of wickedness and crime, hateful to and hated of one another, guilty of infracting the just law of his Creator and benefactor. The law with all its curses is upon him. Poor, helpless vagrant, he is in debt ten thousand talents, and has nothing to pay; deprived of freedom, bound in chains, weighted down with the iron arm of the law, in the prison-house of death, there to remain until satisfaction is rendered to the divine law he so willfully insulted. The penalty of that law is death; and in tones sufficient to make creation totter from its center to its circumference, it demands restitution, a debt impossible for him to pay; but his inability to pay is no excuse at all. The debt is just, and the law in justice demands that payment be made. The justice of the law will not admit of the least addition to or reduction from the debt, but demands payment in full of all its claims; but the poor culprit is wholly unable to pay one mite of the debt, and therefore without the intervention of a power outside of and superior to his own, he is eternally doomed; for he is irreconciled, and without reconciliation there is no salvation or deliverance. The law can grant no pardon or forgiveness, but must take its course in punishing the offender, if his debt is not paid. And for anyone to undertake to effect a reconciliation, he must be perfectly free in every particular, to be a suitable person for the work. Hence none of Adam's posterity can answer the purpose, because of bondage, being legally bound to a just law. The law is holy, but they are carnal, sold under sin. Heaven and earth may be searched, and but one can be found, and he prepared by infinite wisdom and power. The Lion of the tribe of Judah hath prevailed, by giving himself a sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, for the release of his people. And when he cried, "It is finished!" the law was satisfied, reconciliation was effected; and even at that moment they were his enemies. Therefore, we who were enemies were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; and now we are no longer under the law, but under grace. We are now in debt to Christ all that we owed the law; but the difference from what it was is very great. The law under which we were could not omit one farthing of the debt; but Christ can and will forgive all the debt, remembering it against us no more forever. His death effected our reconciliation, and we are saved by his life. "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also," says Jesus. Reconciliation was effected by the death of Christ. Salvation is by his life. "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." By the term "reconciled" is meant satisfied, atoned. So the death of Christ perfectly satisfied all the claims of law and justice; and by this act of his, which was full, free and voluntary on his part, and without any merit, past, present or future, on the part of the guilty, he bought them, or redeemed them from bondage. But redemption makes no change in their condition, but is a preparatory act thereto. By this act of the Redeemer he gains the right to make a change. This change he makes upon or in the sinner while he is yet in bondage under the law, by sending his Spirit into their hearts, by which they are brought out of the prison-house and from the bondage of the law. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." "But now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."

W. M. LITTLE.

HARTLAND, Wash., July 18, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I will inclose you a letter from sister S. J. Walden, as I think it would be read with interest by many of the readers of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. She is extensively known in Oregon and Washington. I have been acquainted with her about forty years, and know that
(Continued on page 253.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 8, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

BOCHIM--WEEPERS.

"AND they called the name of that place Bochim; and they sacrificed there unto the Lord."—Judges ii. 5.

In this record the Spirit of prophecy has presented one of those wonderful types by which Christ was preached as the gospel of salvation in the dealings of God with that nation whom he chose in their father Abram when he called him alone out of Ur of the Chaldees. After he had led them by the hand of Moses through the wilderness, and brought them into the land of Canaan under the guidance of Joshua, they were now under allegiance to those judges whom the Lord in his pity raised up. These things are all typical of the dealing of God with his spiritual Israel under the gospel dispensation. The inspired judges of Israel fitly represent the apostles who sit upon the thrones of judgment in this antitypical kingdom of Israel. The rebellion and idolatry of that nation describe the carnality and heart wanderings of the saints. And all the history of that nation is written for the learning of the saints in the gospel day. No device of created intelligence has ever been able to imitate the peculiar mark by which the Spirit of truth has sealed the heirs of divine grace. Nor has this seal ever failed to designate the elect vessels of mercy. It is so effectually confined to those whom God has chosen unto salvation that no others can so much as have the desire to bear this heavenly mark. The infallible assurance that Christ dwells in any child of Adam is manifested in the fellowship of that suffering which ceased not during the earthly sojourn of the Captain of our salvation. Even while he was approved in the divine judgment as the Righteous Servant of infinite justice, he yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered. Those who follow him must be partakers of his sufferings. So, after speaking those wonderful words of comfort to his disciples when he was about to be taken away from them, he concluded his discourse by assuring them that in the world they should have tribulation. His decree for the government of the day and night is not more fixed and positive than this appointment of the portion of his children in their pilgrimage through this polluted land. The bondage of corruption to which they are subjected makes their whole sojourn here one continuous night. Sorrow must endure throughout this dark season; but there is comfort for them in the assurance that the night is far spent, and the day is at hand. The night has not triumphed over the day, though in our impatience we may often fretfully conclude that the Lord has forgotten to be gracious, and will be favorable no more. The tribulation is but the manifestation of our unity with Jesus in the inheritance of all things.—Rev. xxi. 7. While reason can never rest in this heritage, to faith it is revealed that in all these sufferings the assurance is given that we are joint-heirs with Christ. Certainly there could be no evidence of this unity if our earthly heritage were free from the afflictions which were his continual portion when he was personally manifest in the flesh. Only in the fellowship of his suffering can there be assurance of the victory which he gives to all them that love his appearing.

In all the inspired Scriptures the one unvarying mark by which the saints are identified is their affliction. "They that mourn" are they on whom the gracious voice of Jesus has pronounced the blessing. Not that they shall be blessed in consideration of their mourning; but because they are already blessed in Jesus, they are given the spirit of grace whereby they are identified with the mourning of their suffering Redeemer. No combination of the powers of iniquity can defeat this blessing; neither can all the care and watchfulness of the saints avoid their heritage of tribulation in the world. This seems strange to the reason even of the blessed ones themselves. Their cruel adversary takes advantage of it as affording support for his denial of the ground of their hope. Only when faith looks on things not seen by reason and nature, can the mystery of this divine decree be seen as attesting the reality of that word of divine truth wherein the faith of the afflicted and poor saint is caused to rest. Even in this assured confirmation of faith reason finds room for challenging the hope of the saint. The question arises in this form: "Since your sorrows and sufferings are the witnesses of the reality of your unity with Jesus, why do you mourn?" Unbelief tauntingly charges this weeping as a confession that your hope is vain. So, to the heart-broken mourner at the empty tomb of Jesus, the question, "Why weepest thou?" brought afresh the knowledge that she could not find the body of him whom she loved. Nothing but distress appeared to her bleeding heart in that dark hour. Not even the sad privilege remained to her to embalm the loved form of her murdered Lord. How cruel seemed the inquiry! The heart of Mary still yearned for the precious body which she had seen nailed to the cross. Surely there was sufficient occasion for weeping when she found the empty tomb. But she could not know that the dear one whom she sought was even then present with her. The very grief which produced her tears, the love which brought her to seek the dead body of Jesus, and the anguish which now rent her heart, all attested the fact that Jesus lived in her in most affection. But for his presence there she would have known no tears of heavenly love and grief. This is the living comfort of this record for the support of weeping ones to the end of time. Whenever the heart is drawn out in earnest longing after the presence of Jesus, it is certain that then and there Jesus is himself present, although he hides himself for the moment. It is thus practically verified in the experience of the distressed one who longs for the light of the presence of Jesus, that "Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."—Matt. vii. 8.

Every provision of divine mercy and grace is expressly for the benefit of the subjects of electing love; their tears of sorrow and pain are not less the gift of divine grace than are their moments of comfort and gladness. When led by the Spirit of Christ they glory in tribulations, and count it all joy when they fall into divers temptations.—Rom. v. 3; James i. 2. Nothing less than the power of grace can enable a sufferer thus to triumph over the selfishness of nature. Hence, there is no room for doubt in the case of one who has this evidence of the leading of the Spirit. Yet these are the only characters who are troubled by the assaults of unbelief. Their intense anxiety to be conformed to the perfection which they see in their Lord renders them easy victims to the suggestions of doubt and fear. It seems consistent that if they were indeed led by the holy principle which shines in the gracious Redeemer they would be holy as he is holy. When they find the law of sin still remaining in their members, it is conclusive testimony as seen by reason that their hope is a delusion. Thus they are made to weep under the hiding of the face of their Lord. But it is worthy of particular observation that none find this occasion for weeping but those who are already manifested as the sealed heirs of that promise which God has revealed unto them who love him. Thus, the very distress which is endured by those who are troubled with a sense of sin, is itself the unerring assurance that their hope in Christ is genuine. The hypocrite has no occasion for trouble from doubts. It is his desire to appear different from what he really is; therefore he cannot be troubled by the apprehension that he is not what he seems to be. The deceived character is not tried with doubts, since the adversary of the saints would not subject his own work to exposure by testing it with doubts. If his kingdom were thus divided against itself it could not stand. But it is needful that every follower of Jesus should be brought through this severe ordeal; for in this pathway the Captain of our salvation led the way to glorious victory. Only in the fellowship of sufferings can the saints be identified with their afflicted and triumphant Leader. It was not an unnecessary agony which wrung from him the strong crying and tears with which he offered up prayers and supplications unto him that was able to save him from death. He thus marked the path of life. In no other way can prayer ever be heard and answered by the omnipotent grace of God. This is the assurance with which Paul and Barnabas preached the gospel, "Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."—Acts xiv. 22. Weeping is the accompaniment of deep tribulation.

When Jesus is pleased to reveal his presence with his people they are not in a condition which calls for weeping. He answered the inquiry of the disciples of John, saying, "Can the children of the bridechamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast."—Matt. ix. 15. So, Israel did not come to this place of weeping until Joshua was taken away from them. It must be that the subjects of grace shall come to this place of weeping also; but it is not until they are made to feel that their spiritual Joshua is hidden from their view. The testimony of the inspired judges still remains, and they thus sit upon thrones of judgment until time shall cease; but while they are recognized as clothed with judicial authority, as typified by the elders who judged national Israel, it is always a place of weeping with the saints when they realize the hiding of the loved face of Jesus. This is taught in the record quoted at the beginning of this article. No clear proclamation of divine truth can soothe the weeping of the saints, even though it be uttered in the very words of inspiration, unless by his Spirit Jesus is pleased to reveal himself as our present Joshua. It is not intimated in the text, that the weeping Israelites refused to yield obedience to the judges who administered the law as ordained by Moses and confirmed by Joshua. Their weeping was the effect of that message which they had heard from the angel of the Lord, by which their rebellion against his law was brought home to their conscience. So, in the application to the experience of the saints in this dispensation. Their weeping results from their own conscious departure from the right way of the Lord. And this is made manifest by the Spirit of truth in the application of the righteous judgment of the inspired judges in Israel.

As in all the truth which God has revealed, there is precious comfort for the saints in this bitter weeping. In the type, there was a division shown in their weeping, by which every Israelite was separated from all those heathen nations which still dwelt in the land of Canaan. None but Israelites were found weeping on this occasion. If the other inhabitants of the land felt any emotion at all, it was a feeling of exultation at the affliction of Israel. Consequently, those weeping ones were indisputably shown to be not only Israelites by birth, but identified in heart and sympathy with that chosen people. So, in the application, every weeping one is certainly identified by birth and sympathy with the afflicted and poor people whose God is the Lord. Well may all such weepers adopt the language of the prayer,

"Lord, let me weep for naught but sin,
And after none but thee;
And then I would (O that I might!)
A constant weeper be!"

There is no place in which the Lord receives such tribute of sacrifice and full confession of entire dependence upon his infinite mercy and grace, as when out of a heart filled with penitence, and a contrite spirit, his saints cry unto him for deliverance from the evil which they find in themselves. It is when the conscious sinner cries, saying, "Lord, help me!" that God is worshiped in spirit and in truth. "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."—Psalm li. 17.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

KINDLY REMEMBER US.

It is an unpleasant duty that we are obliged to perform to urge our brethren and friends to please make an effort to send us a remittance on their delinquent subscriptions. We expect within a few days to send notices to those whose subscription is considerably in arrears, and ask them to make a special effort to forward their remittance promptly. If not able to send the whole amount at present, remember that every little helps.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

(Continued from page 251.)

she has passed through many trials, both temporal and spiritual; yet her faith in Christ is strong. Though Satan may rage and tempests may howl until our hope, which has been so bright, is almost blighted, and we tremble with horror of soul, yet when the Savior removes the dark cloud, and speaks peace to our troubled soul, we are then made to exclaim, "Glory to God in the highest," and realize what he has said in his holy word, that he will never leave us nor forsake us; for he sticketh closer than a brother.

I pray that God may sustain you, dear brethren, in your arduous and noble work of spreading the truth of the gospel far and near, that the children of God may be comforted.

As ever, your unworthy sister,
MRS. A. J. PITMAN.

WESTON, Ore., April 1, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER PITMAN:—This day my mind is stirred within me. I opened the Bible, as is my custom every idle moment, particularly on Sunday. I opened an old Bible that I have seen my grandmother (my father's mother) reading. The portion that came to my view was Proverbs xxx. 8, 9. "Remove far from me vanity and lies," &c. I so often need to entreat the God of all grace to remove far from me vanity. What is humanity more prone to give way to than vanity? In the days of our youth we seek after vain things. How proud we are of small things, and how vain our imaginations. Sometimes we are puffed up with pride, and see it not. O remove far from me vanity. The wise man also said, "Give me neither poverty nor riches," and then adds, "Feed me with food convenient for me. He would have neither poverty nor riches. He understood the vanity of the human heart. When I reflect on my past life, how vain and foolish have been my thoughts, I feel to say, "Remove far from me vanity." Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Dear brother and sister, not many weeks or months, or years at farthest, and the silver cord will be loosed for us. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." I ask myself, What evidence can I find within my heart that I am a child of grace, a child of the light? Has my life been as a candle set on a candlestick, or as one put under a bushel? Have my thoughts been self-righteous, or have they by faith been established? Sometimes I feel as if I have ever been learning, yet never coming to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ. I doubtless need much chastisement to prove my faith. In my younger days I, like Peter the apostle, thought, "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." Ah, it appears that Satan has been present very often, even dictating my thoughts, in so much that I have wondered if some of the newly founded theories might not be likened unto Zoar, only a little way off. I have wondered if some of the Lord's children might not be in Zoar, or even in Babylon. Is this charity, or is it human weakness? Yet our Savior wept when he said, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent, unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." We can only weep when we see those we dearly love going into Babylon. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and we hear the sound thereof, but we cannot tell from whence it cometh or whither it goeth. We know that thus it is, and we cannot hinder. Can we bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?

I again opened the Bible, to the thirteenth chapter of John, and read to the twenty-fourth verse. Never was my stubborn heart more moved, and never before had the words seemed so sublime, although often I had read them. They moved and melted this heart of mine. It is only when the Lord looks upon us that we can realize our weakness, and see the beauty of holiness, the beauty and love manifest toward such groveling mortals as we are. It is then that we can bow at the throne of grace and by faith entreat our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to give us a truly penitent and forgiving heart. Here is my warfare. I often mourn, yes, daily mourn my stubborn heart. In my younger days I forgave every one with all my heart; but now it is with a struggle; and why? It is evident that the adversary gets control. It is evident that I am not humble as I should be. I realize the truth of what our Lord said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you." "That ye love one another." "By this shall all know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." How often have I tried to search my stubborn heart to see if I could find any evidence that I have passed from death unto life. Was the seed sown in my heart like that sown in thorny places? Have the cares, anxieties and confusion of life choked all that is pure, sublime, charitable and Christlike? The saints were called Christians first at Antioch. Why? Because they were supposed to walk worthy of Christ, and to follow the example he set. Time would fail me to enumerate the examples of goodness; yea, tongue cannot express them. If they were all written the world could not contain the books. Surely I realize that every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Why should this weak, stammering tongue speak farther, lest I kill and not commit murder? We can slay, and yet not use a sword. O to be assured that I have not wounded or killed any of the little ones. If I were permitted to live among my brethren and sisters again, surely I could be more careful; nevertheless the apostle said, "They who seemed to be somewhat in conference, added nothing to me." It is the feeble of the flock that need our tender care. Do we think about the tender little lambs? There are some that cannot bear strong meat. O that we could see as we should, and be tender, yet firm, strong in the faith, yet tender and forgiving. We surely do know that the adversary, even the devil, is as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. When the sons of God presented themselves before the Lord, Satan came also among them. What was Satan's answer when the Lord said, "Whence comest thou? Satan is ever near. The old, Adamic nature is near by. Yet the body is the temple of the living God, the tabernacle of the Spirit, the abiding place of the Spirit, if so be that we are born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.

Dear brother and sister, it has been nearly a month since I began this poor, imperfect letter; yet I am here, and in reasonable health; and I sincerely hope this may find you the same. I cannot tell whether I shall be able to write you again, but I hope to receive a long letter from you, and hear of your spiritual welfare. The things of this vain world have never a charm for me, farther than to earn an honest support for this decaying body, which is an inevitable duty.

Your unworthy sister,
MRS. S. J. WALDEN.

LEXINGTON, Neb., Feb. 28, 1894.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE: I am in receipt of a very precious letter from brother Joseph Bruce, of Cheney, Neb., which I will send to you for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if you shall deem it worthy of a place there.

Yours in hope,

F. O. LONG.

CHENEY, Neb., Jan. 26, 1894.

F. O. LONG AND WIFE—VERY DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER:—Having just received your much esteemed letter, and perused its contents with interest, I desire to write a few lines to you for your consideration, hoping that God may direct my thoughts in a way that his name may be glorified and you may be comforted. In the first place I want to say that it is always a source of great comfort to me to hear or read the experiences of God's humble poor. I love to meditate upon the goodness and mercy of God, and the glorious plan of salvation by free and unmerited grace. Yes, when I read the travels of the children of God from nature to grace it strengthens my feeble hope, seeing that others have traveled the same road, and laid their hands, as it were, upon the same notable marks by the wayside, and sat down in the same lonesome and desolate places to pour out their prayers and tears to God, where no eye could see nor ear hear, but God alone. But what was the result? It seemed that our prayers all fell to the ground.

A beautiful figure strikes my mind here, and if I can I will explain it. It is written, "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." While I know that this has reference to our mortal bodies, which must moulder back to mother earth, yet it seems very appropriate to every child of grace while laboring under their load of sin, and while they are of the earth, earthy. Their good works and prayers originate from their flesh, the desires of their mind, and consequently return to their origin. We verily thought at that time that by our obedience to the commands of the law and by our prayers that we should be justified. But, dear brother and sister, how was it with us? Did we receive the evidence of our hope in all this? No; not in this way at all. It was not until the last ray of hope by our prayers and everything we could do was exhausted. Our hopes all perished, and we were made to see our just condemnation, and that it was only by the mercy of God we were permitted to live. Yes, I was made to feel that it was only of the mercy of God that the earth did not open and swallow me up from the presence of all living. When it pleased God to strip me of all my earthly hopes, and I felt that God was ready to cut me off and cast me where hope and mercy never come, I was made to be reconciled to his will. I saw his justice and my just condemnation. I could say with the poet,

"And if my soul were sent to hell,
Thy righteous law approves it well."

But while I was expecting to hear the sentence, "Depart from me," with my load of sin and condemnation, and I felt the justice of God in cutting me off, yet the very breathing of my heart was, Lord, if it can be possible, and thou canst yet remain just, have mercy on me, a sinner. Yes, when I least expected, that burden of sin was taken away and my sorrow was turned to joy. I was given the eye of faith to look from self to Jesus, who is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believes. My poor heart was filled with that joy which is unspeakable and full of glory. I was then enabled to see what I had never seen before, how Jesus had taken my sins upon himself, the just suffering for the unjust, clothing me with his righteousness, that he might make me the righteousness of God in him. O what condescension! O what love the Father hath for us, poor, lost and helpless sinners, that he should send his dearly beloved Son into this sin stained world, to suffer, bleed and die for our sins. Yes, he made him to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Now for the reason why God sent his dearly beloved Son into the world. "But when the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ."—Gal. iv. 4-7. So, dear brother and sister, poor and sinful as we are, we are heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, just as righteous as Christ, our elder Brother. How? By his imputed righteousness, which he freely bestows upon us. Was it when we turned to him and opened our hearts to let the Sun of righteousness in? O no; but when Jesus paid our debt; when he gave his life a ransom for our sins. And not only that, but on the third and appointed morning he arose again for our justification. No wonder that we are commanded to contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints, seeing that we are all born of the same Spirit, being heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. A house divided against itself cannot stand. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore."—Psa. cxxxiii. Then, dear brother and sister, what little time we have allotted to us here on earth let us strive to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith the Lord has called us, and, lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despised the shame, and is forever set down at the right hand of God, with all rule, power and authority in his hands, to give repentance and forgiveness of sins to all that the Father hath given him. Yes, and his assurance to his children is that where two or three are gathered together in his name there he is in the midst.

Now, dear brother and sister, these few scattering thoughts are from a poor old sinner, who was made to know that he was a lost and helpless sinner, more than thirty-six years ago, and who hopes that he was delivered from that load of sin and just condemnation, and who humbly hopes that God for Christ's sake pardoned his sins and gave him a hope in the merits of his dear Son, and who has often been made to rejoice in him as his Savior, but is often made to weep and mourn on account of sin that dwells in his mortal body, and often made to doubt whether he knows anything about the operation of the Spirit of Christ in his heart. Give to God all the glory; and if you can find it in your hearts to pray for poor unworthy me, in tender love I ask you to remember me in our petitions at the throne of grace. Give my love to all the brethren out there, and exhort them to follow their Lord and Master in the way he has marked out for them to go. My wife joins me in sending love to you. May the blessings of our God be with you, is the prayer of your unworthy brother,

JOSEPH BRUCE.

OPELIKA, Ala., July 12, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS.—Having reached home safely, and finding all well and doing well, again I was able to take courage and thank God; for truly I often feel to say, "His mercy endureth forever." For all that he has given me here I feel to be unworthy of the same. Surely I feel more like I deserve his wrath, rather than like I have claim on his bounty.

"Like one alone I seem to be;
O! is there any one like me?"

After I left Philadelphia, where I last wrote you, I filled appointments at Wilmington, Newark, Baltimore, Black Rock and Washington, and then visited Frying Pan and Mount Zion Churches, of which Elders E. V. White and J. N. Badger are pastors. I had quite a pleasant visit among these brethren, and was kindly received, which I trust I appreciate. Since I came home I have received several letters from the brethren and sisters. I hope I have been greatly benefited by my visit. I have seen and formed many acquaintances which I shall not forget. But, as I have said before, my own imperfections and shortcomings come up before me, and I mourn and grieve that I cannot attain unto that which I have so much desired, to be free from faults and sins. If I could be as free as some are, it seems to me I could be encouraged to hope that I might be a minister of Christ. It has always troubled me, ever since I have been trying to preach, that I cannot rebuke as I should. A sense of my own sin and imperfections has ever been in my way, and on account of that I have felt unfit to preach. I find a law in my members, that when I would do good evil is present with me. I can only look to Jesus, and see in him that boundless perfection, and feel that I will ever look unto him, who is the author and finisher of my faith. I know he is holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners. I know all others are weak and imperfect, vile and sinful. He is my hope, my life, my salvation, my all. How often we become thoughtless, and in a moment are astray. But, like Peter, after he had denied his Lord with an oath, he needed no man to rebuke him; but a gentle, loving look from Jesus broke his heart in contrition. So today the goodness of God leads us to repentance, a repentance that needs not to be repented of. Whenever we know or have reason to fear that we have in any sense, intentionally or unintentionally, offended one of God's little ones, how sad we feel, and would gladly say, Forgive me. May God help us and bless us to be ever on our guard, and to give no offense, but be helpers of each other's joy, is my sincere desire.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

GREENFIELD, Tenn., July, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—According to promise I will write a brief account of our trip in the east and north. We left our home on April 27th, and stopped at Maysville, Ky., to attend a union meeting at that place on the fifth Sunday in April and two days preceding. There we left our little daughter Pearl to stay with her relatives while we were gone. On Sunday night, in company with Elder J. H. Fisher, of Texas, my wife and I started for Campbellsburg, Ky., where we were met by Elder Eubanks, and began to fill appointments which had been made for me, in the bounds of the Mount Pleasant and Licking Associations. We met good Baptists in that country, and had a very good time. Here we met Elders P. W. Sawin, Smith Hawkins, and J. G. Eubanks, besides two young preachers, brethren Johnson and Bond. From there we went to Cincinnati, Ohio, in company with Elder Eubanks, where we met Elder H. M. Curry, and spent the day in the city. At seven o'clock p. m. we took the train for Baltimore and attended the Baltimore Association, where we met a goodly number of Baptists. We also attended the Delaware, Delaware River, Warwick and Chemung Associations, and visited a number of the churches of the same. From the Chemung Association we went to Niagara Falls. The Falls were well worth seeing. We continued our journey into Canada, and attended the meeting of the church at Ekfrid, of which Elder Wm. Polard is pastor. Here we had a splendid meeting. From this meeting we started for our home. We had a pleasant trip, and one long to be remembered. I feel that I have great reason to believe the Lord was in the journey, and that he abundantly blessed us on the way. I think I shall never again fear to start anywhere if I feel that the Lord has directed my mind there. We found our little daughter well, and all was right at home. This leaves us all well. My wife joins me in sending love to all the dear children of God among whom we traveled, and we hope the Lord may spare us to meet you again in this life, and finally to meet you where parting will be no more. Write to us, any of you, when you will, and remember us in your prayers.

Your brother,

W. I. CARNELL.

MANASSES, Va., March 17, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS:—It has been resting upon my mind for some time past to write a few words in regard to my experience, if I ever had one. I remember, forty-two years ago, when I was a very rough boy, it seemed as though I was checked, by some means, I know not what. The first time I was convinced of not having any power of my own, was when I went to a New School Baptist meeting, and the preacher said that everybody could be saved that wanted to; if anybody would ask the Lord to forgive their sins, he would do so, and save their souls from hell. And I thought that was true; so, as I wanted to go to heaven I tried to pray, the best I knew how. I could not see that I was growing any better, so I gave it up, and said, "I am one born to be lost." Still I was not satisfied.

I then went to the Old School Baptist meeting, and the preacher told my thoughts and feelings. He said that no one could pray or ask the Lord to forgive their sins unless the Lord placed the words in them. Thus I went on, and as time passed I said to myself, If I am one of the chosen ones the Lord will make it known to me in his own good time. I would often find myself trying to pray. It seemed that I had something to do that I had not done. I was in trouble, and did not know what my trouble was for, nor what it was about.

A year or so ago I was near the center of a fifty acre field, feeling as if my time in this world was not long. I cannot exactly describe my feeling now; but just at the time when I had given up all hope of being saved, it was as though I heard a voice saying, "The believer is anchored in Christ, the hope of glory, who was before the world began." At that time I felt lifted up, but it did not last long. Then I said to myself, "That was not for poor me, but it was for somebody else, and I caught the sound as it passed." The dear Lord has shown me that I am a sinner saved by grace, if saved at all. It was a comfort when these words came to me,

"My business lays at wisdom's gate,
Where needy sinners come;
And here I sue and here I wait
For mercy's falling crumbs."

If you have any space in your paper, publish this for me; if not, it is all right.

J. C. HAMES.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

DISCONTINUANCE OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

IN No. 11 of the current volume will be found our first announcement that we would receive advertisements for the last page of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, no advertisement to be received unless guaranteed to be strictly as represented. Our object in making this venture, as stated in that notice, was with the hope that by devoting the last page to suitable and reliable advertisements we might be able to reduce the subscription price of the paper, and thereby give our subscribers the benefit of any profits there might arise from this branch of the business. It will also be seen by referring to the said notice that we then stated that we were inexperienced in the business, and considered it as a "venture." We have now made the experiment, and find that we are not able to obtain a sufficient number of advertisements of the nature that we would admit in the paper to enable us to make any material reduction in the subscription rates. We therefore have discontinued them altogether, with the exception of two small ones, whose time has not quite expired. It would be no trouble for us to fill the paper with cheap, unreliable advertisements; but such, of course, would not be admitted.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—The following is a list of contributors to the fund for Mary Parker:

Margaret Craven, Pa., 5; Hattie J. Walton, Pa., 5; L. Hecker, N. Y., 5; Emma Nicoll, Pa., 50c; Eli Clegg, Pa., 1; J. G. Ford, Ohio, 5; Mrs. D. C. Clark, Ill., 5.—Total, $26.50.

B. F. COULTER.

1910 N. 22D ST., PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

My dear mother, Sarah B. Cox, was born in Loudoun Co., Va., March 7th, 1804, and died July 2d, 1894, in Prince William Co., Va.

She was baptized by Elder Samuel Trott in the fellowship of the Ebenezer Church, Loudoun Co., Va., on the third Sunday in September, 1844. She was one who never talked much, nor grumbled about anything. Her husband's mind became impaired about twenty-seven years before he died, and she cared for him with patience. She had one son killed in the late war, and also lost all her servants; but she seemed to think it was all right. She left her home after the war and went to live with her daughter, where she had the best of attention until she died. She was very frail and in poor health, but was nursed by her granddaughter like a babe until she passed away, without a struggle.

J. A. COX.

OUR beloved brother, Thomas J. Vancleave, was born in Shelby Co., Ky., Oct. 14th, 1818, and moved with his parents to Montgomery Co., Ind., in the year 1826. He was married to Miss Harriet Williams on April 24th, 1838. There were born to them thirteen children, three of whom died in infancy, and ten were raised to be grown. One son and one daughter died some years ago, leaving six sons and two daughters, with their aged mother, to mourn their loss. He and his wife were baptized in the fellowship of the Indian Creek Church of Regular Baptists in Montgomery Co., Ind., in the year 1852, by his brother, Elder Matthias Vancleave. They moved to Guthrie Co., Iowa, in the year 1856, crossed the plains with teams in 1866, and settled in Marion Co., Oregon, where he died April 9th, 1894, being 76 years, 5 months and 25 days old.

His disease was catarrh of the stomach. His sufferings were great, but he bore them patiently until he quietly passed away. I have been acquainted with him nearly fourteen years, and have often talked with him on the subject of religion. He was firm in the doctrine of salvation by grace. He was a good citizen, a kind father, a good and faithful husband, and a meek and humble christian.

The weather was so bad that they did not have preaching at the time of his burial, but the writer of this tried to preach a funeral discourse to his memory on the third Sunday in this month to a large audience of sorrowing friends, using for a text John xi. 25, 26, at the Siloam church-house, near where he was buried. May the Lord bless the aged sister in her sad and lonely hours, and if it be his will prepare the children to meet their parents in that heavenly world, where there will be no sickness, pain, sorrow nor death, is the sincere prayer of your unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,

W. S. MATTHEWS.

LINCOLN, Oregon, July 19, 1894.

SISTER Anna B. Hite died at her home near the village of Wyandot, Wyandot Co., Ohio, July 8th, 1894, aged 42 years, 1 month and 1 day.

She was the daughter of Henry and Lucinda Kagy, and was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Ambrose B. Hite on March 12th, 1882. To them were born five sons and one daughter, of whom one son preceded her to the grave. Besides her husband and children, her aged parents, three sisters and three brothers, as well as a host of relatives and friends, are left to mourn her death. She united with the Regular Baptist Church at Honey Creek, Seneca Co., Ohio, in October, 1877. She took her letter from that place and united with the Rocky Fork Regular Baptist Church soon after her marriage. The church has lost a consistent and faithful member, the husband a kind and affectionate wife, and the children a tender and loving mother. She very patiently performed the duties and cares that fell to her lot. Her enjoyment in life was in hearing God's servants proclaim the riches of God's grace through Jesus Christ.

Her funeral was preached July 10th, at the Rocky Fork church-house, by Elder Adam Shoemaker, assisted by Elder L. U. Sherwood.

I am safe at Jesus' hand,

A bright crown is on my brow;

I have joined the angels' band,

And I reign in glory now.

I have learned the songs they sing,

Those that Jesus hath set free;

And the walls of heaven ring

With my new-born melody.

SIMON HITE.

WYANDOT, Ohio, July 22, 1894.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will meet with the Second Church of Roxbury, Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. on Wednesday, September 5th, 1894, and continuing two days.

Our meeting-house is about two miles from Roxbury village, and six miles from Kelly's Corners, at which places the visiting friends will be cared for. We cordially invite those interested in the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord to come and partake with us, and a special invitation to those who labor in word and doctrine.

J. D. HUBBELL.

THE Des Moines River Association will convene with the Des Moines River Church, three miles north of Eldon, Wapello Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August, 1894, closing on Monday following.

Those coming by the Rock Island route will stop at Eldon, and those by the C., B. & Q. or by the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa routes will stop at Batavia, and they will be met at those stations.

A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers especially.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Association of Old School Baptists will meet, the Lord willing, with the church at Elk Lick, near Sadieville, Scott Co., Ky., on Friday before the fourth Saturday in August, and continue three days (24th, 25th and 26th). Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to meet with us.

Those coming by way of Cincinnati will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday at 4:05 p. m., or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by way of Lexington will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday evening at 2:40, or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by Louisville will change cars Thursday evening at Frankfort for Georgetown. At Georgetown take the Cincinnati Southern for Sadieville. Trains leave Frankfort Thursday at 1:00 and 4:20 p. m., and Friday at 7:00 a. m. Reduced rates will be arranged from points named.

J. P. FIELD, Clerk.

THE sixty-third meeting of the Spoon River Association of Regular Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on the premises of E. D. Varnes, one mile and a half south of Cramer, on the Iowa Central R. R., Peoria Co., Ill., on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Teams will be at Cramer on Thursday evening and Friday morning. Brethren will likely be met also at Farmington, on the Buda & Rushville Branch of the C., B. & Q. R. R., on Thursday evening. If not met there, change immediately for Cramer. Brother Varnes lives five miles southeast of Farmington. The saints are invited.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Old School Baptist Conference of Maine will be held, the Lord willing, with the Old School Baptist Church in North Berwick, York Co., Maine, commencing on Friday, August 31st, 1894, and continuing three days.

We shall gladly welcome all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and especially brethren in the ministry who feel it in their hearts to visit us. Those who come will be met at the North Berwick R. R. depot on Thursday before the time appointed for our yearly conference.

FRED. W. KEENE.

THE Maine Association will meet, the Lord willing, at Bowdoinham, Maine, Sept. 7th, 1894, and continue three days.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited, especially ministering brethren who attend the Maine Conference. We propose to call for the ordination of Deacon Zachaeus M. Beal. All who visit us will be cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE Indian Creek Association will convene with the Dry Fork of Twin Church, near West Manchester, Preble Co., Ohio, beginning on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren and sisters coming from the east will take the Little Miami R. R. at Xenia, by way of Dayton, for Brown's Station. Those coming from the west will take the Little Miami R. R. at Richmond, Ind., to Manchester. Those coming from the south will take the C. J. & M. R. R. at Cincinnati to Manchester. Those coming from the north by way of Greenville will take the C. J. & M. R. R. to Manchester, where they will be met and conveyed from the two named stations to the meeting and to places of entertainment.

We extend a hearty welcome to all the brethren and sisters, and especially the brethren in the ministry do we hope to meet with us.

JOHN A. HOWELL.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid. G. BEEBE'S SON, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

WE have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.	Pa. 22. 32.
n ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told	Matt. 28.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.		Rom. 8. 29.
			Heb. 2. 11.
			1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1894.

NO. 33.

SELECTED.

A DREAM-TOUR THROUGH THE ARMINIAN HEAVEN.

AFTER several hours conversation with an Arminian upon the subject of salvation and heaven, I fell into a deep musing, my fancy took possession of me and flew away, and ere I was aware I was set down within the golden gates of the "Land of the Blessed." No sooner did my imagination realize my whereabouts than I set about to explore the long sought country.

One of the first things that attracted my attention was a great throng of little children playing with the angels along the brink of a beautiful river. I immediately turned toward the happy company, and as I approached them they gathered about me in happy groups. I asked them from whence they came, and who brought them there. One of them, assuming the role of spokesman for the others, answered: "O, sir, we were all born in a world far below this, where all who are born must one day die. We were fortunate enough to die while we were yet in a state of innocent purity; before we grew up and became contaminated with sin. As soon as we were dead we were carried away by the holy angels to this bright, beautiful world. Here we shall never die, but shall live on and on forever. Do you not think, sir, that we were blessed, indeed, to die in infancy, and so escape all the evils of a wicked world and all the uncertain issues of a sinful life?" When the child had finished his story, I asked: "Is there not one here who is called Jesus, whom all those that enter here adore, and love, and praise?" "I have heard," responded the child, "that there is such a person somewhere here, but we have never seen him yet. You know we do not have to praise him, for he did not bring us here. I have heard that those who were sinners love and praise him, but we were not sinners, you know." These words began to fill me with strange forebodings; a feeling of dissatisfaction entered my heart. I turned and went away. I had not gone far when I saw a great procession in motion; the company was composed of half grown children and young people. They were all in a great glee, displaying banners, and singing to the clang of several different kinds of instruments. "The Sunday School Army is Marching." The procession was coming toward me, so I stepped aside to let them pass. I stood and gazed and wondered. At last I beckoned one who seemed to be of more than ordinary rank among them, and began to inquire concerning the passing crowd. "That," said he, in reply, "is the Sunday School army celebrating the triumphs of the Sunday School on earth. All those in the procession were saved through the Sunday School. They say that if there had never been a Sunday School on earth they would never have been in heaven. Their teachers there taught them to be good, so when they died God had to let them come here, because they had been good, you see." When the lad had ceased speaking, his eyes still sparkling with enthusiasm over the triumphs of the Sunday School, I asked, "Is there not a person called Jesus whom men praise for all the blessings of this place?" "O, yes sir," he answered, "there is such a person here somewhere, but he is not entitled to much praise from us; they say he did die once on earth, but that would never have saved us if we had not been good, and we would not have been good if we had not gone to Sunday School. So look at it as you may, sir, it was the Sunday School that saved us. So we do not praise him, we praise the bridge that carried us over." The procession had by this time passed far into the distance, the fluttering banners had almost disappeared from view, and the last echo of the words, "The Sunday School Army is Marching," was dying upon the breeze.

The feelings of dissatisfaction which came over me after my interview with the infants had increased continually, until now they were grown into an intolerable burden. I now turned to my right and ascended a little hill; upon reaching the summit, I discovered hidden away in a secluded place a curious little temple, such as the traveler is likely to come upon in the country districts of India. Within the temple a number of people were kneeling before two shrines, all kindled with the most ardent and self-sacrificing devotion. Upon inquiry I found that one of the shrines contained simply a small American coin, and the other a few leaflets of paper; these constituted the supreme object of the worshipers' praise. I stood for awhile in sore amazement; my heart wasted away under a deadening thrill of hopes blighted. Idolatry and idolaters in heaven! In my madness of despair I touched one of the company and asked him who they were, where they came from, and the meaning of their strange devotion. All this time the worshipers were kneeling around both shrines, some kissing the coin, others pressing the little leaves of paper to their bosoms, and all muttering vows and chanting their wild, wierd hymns of praise. In reply to my inquiry the man said, "We are Hindoos and have lately arrived from India. Some of us worship at the 'shrine of the coin,' because we are sure that if it had not been for American money we would never have been here. We have preserved here in this shrine the first coin ever contributed toward saving men from torment; the very identical penny, sir. Those whom you saw caressing the little bits of paper at the other altar were cherishing the instruments which brought them here. These bits of paper, held so sacred by them, are called by the English speaking people, tracts. They were furnished by the American Tract Society. Those who taught us in India told us that we would praise God through Christ when we should live here, but then they said that without the money and the bits of paper we never would have heard of this place, and consequently we never could have come here. Our motto in the world from whence we came, sir, was: 'Honor to whom honor is due,' and we have had no cause to change it since coming here, so we built a temple upon this hill, as it was our custom in India, and yield ourselves to the undivided honor and praise of the power that saved us."

I slowly descended the hill on the opposite side from where I had ascended. I at length found myself in the midst of a most charming, luxuriant valley. The place was filled with the music of flowing waters, the smell of ripening fruits and the fragrance of blooming flowers. My feelings were soothed and quited by the sweetness of the place. I unconsciously dropped into a reverie which was soon broken by coming suddenly upon a small, select group of men and women. They carried an air of culture and refinement, and seemed to be keeping aloof from the general throng of inhabitants. Their small appearance and aristocratic behavior awakened within me a curiosity to hear their story. I approached them very respectfully and after a polite apology for my intrusion I made bold to ask them who they were, and how they gained admission there. One of their company volunteered to unfold the following short but suggestive account of their good fortune: "Before we came here," said he "we lived in the world. There we belonged to the 'elite, to the upper four hundred.' We are about the first of our station in life that ever came here. For a long time all the preachers on earth were base, ignorant, illiterate men. Their clothes were coarse, their manners uncultured and rude, and their language awkward and unpolished, and indeed, sir, they were altogether such as were repulsive to well bred ladies and gentlemen. They could obtain no entrance into refined society; they could have no influence with the rich, the noble and the wise. In consequence of this fatal deficiency in the ministry very few people, if any at all, were saved from among the upper class. But by and by, some good men set about to remedy this lamentable defect, to remove this deplorable impediment, to roll away this disastrous stumbling-stone. They raised money and endowed colleges and theological seminaries wherein men might obtain a polite ministerial education, and thus be qualified to stand before cultured society. Through this means ministers soon gained abundant entrance into the most refined circles and began at once to wield an influence over the highest walks of life. In this way the door of good works was opened to us, so you plainly see that it was through the enterprise of these good, far-seeing men, that we were started on the way to this place." When he had finished speaking I said, "But what about the man Christ Jesus? pray tell me something about him. He is the object of my search here, but he appears to be but little known or altogether a stranger." "O yes, sir," he answered, "we heard of him before we came here, but we have not seen him since our arrival; indeed we have had no particular desire to see him, for he is of very little concern to us. We would much rather see some of the good men through whose instrumentality we were brought here, that we might express our sincere thanks and lasting obligations to them; for we are certain that to them belongs the honor of our salvation. The man Christ Jesus of whom you speak made nothing certain. He finished nothing He went away and left the whole matter in the hands of a few ignorant, base, despised people. His whole scheme would have proven a failure if others had not taken it up and made something of it." Here he closed his speech, and I, feeling no affinity for such company, wandered onward.

I next came upon a great company composed of people of all nations. They were full of zeal and enthusiasm. I at once recognized that it was the missionary harvest from the foreign fields. Foremost in the throngs were the Burmese, displaying banners with Judson's name emblazoned in flaming colors. After these came Hawaiians, Hindoos, Fijians, Persians, Japanees, with now and then a straggling Chinaman; none of the last named however had died in America. High over all floated a prodigious flag bearing the inscription, written in all languages, "LONG LIVE THE AMERICAN BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS." Upon inquiry I found that this company embraced all who had ever reached heaven from heathen lands, except the small number worshiping in the little temple on top of the hill, before referred to. I also found out from an old resident that their arrival there is of quite recent date, not a single arrival dating further back than the beginning of mission work. Before this human machinery was put in operation the countless number of men and women dying in heathen lands all sank down into irretrievable destruction. There was no remedy for them. No preacher, consequently no salvation; no priest, consequently no Christ. I once more inquired concerning Jesus the Savior of sinners. They only laughed and said he was entitled to no praise from them, for he had done no more for them than he had for their ancestors and brethren who were now perishing in the perdition of the ungodly. They protested that they owed their salvation alone to the mission work, in carrying salvation within their reach, and their own good judgment in appropriating it to their own advantage; they said that Christ alone had benefited them nothing.

After hearing this I stood for some time sick at heart. I was here a lonely wanderer. O how I longed to return to earth again. There I had the fellowship and communion of saints, here I was a wretched outcast, no fellow, no companions, none to join with me in ascribing praise to God; even the Savior himself could not be found there. Dante's inferno, even to the seventh circle, would have been more desirable to me. I once more endeavored to press forward, whither I knew not, and cared not, for I was now an aimless wanderer, a tramp in heaven; but I was soon confronted by another procession. The participants this time wore blue ribbons in their button holes and temperance badges upon the lapels of their coats. A tall man headed the procession carrying a large flag inscribed to the W. C. T. U., of America. I soon discovered that it was the ransomed of the temperance societies holding high carnival to their great benefactors. Temperance lectures, total abstinence societies and prohibitionist workers of every description were there with samples of their work, in the persons of reformed drunkards whom they had saved from destruction. I watched my opportunity, and seeking out one of the chief men, I asked, "Is Jesus of Nazareth in your procession?" The answer came prompt and decisive, "He is not here." I ventured a little further and asked again, "What think ye of him, if peradventure you know him?" The man responded, "He is not much respected by our societies. When he was in the world he was considered by our ancient brethren as a wine bibber and a glutton. He even went so far as to attend a wedding among the lower class of people, and when the wine was exhausted and the guests all drunk he made them a new supply of the vile stuff, right in the face of all respectable people who were laboring to suppress the manufacture, sale and use of the dreadful poison; and one of his chief apostles recommended the use of wine. So you see there is not much agreement between us and him, either in heaven or on earth, consequently we are found very seldom, if ever, in each other's company. Many whom you see here were saved by temperance workers from drunkards' graves and drunkards' hell which would have been their certain doom, had not the temperance cause superceded the work and teaching of him you inquire for."

I had now seen enough of the place to desire no more of it, and was ready to sink in utter despair. In my endeavor to escape one thing another would confront me; finally I came into an open court of the most elaborate and gorgeous fashion. This was called the "Court of Honor," or "Place of Degrees." Here men were ranked according to the amount of good done by them, or the character which they had built. Some were on high seats, and some were on low ones, and some had no seat of honor at all. Some wore crowns gemmed with stars, some wore crowns without stars, and some had no crowns at all. Those on the highest seats had the most, the largest and the brightest stars in their crowns, and wore long, rich robes, of which they were exceedingly proud. Those on high seats looked with scorn upon all those below them, and those less preferred looked in envy upon those above them. I forgot my own discontent for a short time to muse upon the discontent manifested in the scene before me. I wondered if contentment, such as heaven should bring, was even an occasional guest in their hearts. Everything appeared to be exactly after the fashion of earth, only upon a much more elaborate scale. The same love of glory and distinction, the same boasting over inferiors, the same envy against superiors, the same principle of self-aggrandizement, in fact everything that goes to make up the distinctions, strife and dissensions among men on earth, every principle that begets and nourishes religious fraud, dissembling and knavery, was ripe and luxuriant there. All the imperfections and base deceptions of earth had ripened in the skies. The whole place was as completely given to idolatry as Athens of old, which stirred the spirit within the holy apostle. Then came the dreadful thought of spending eternity there. It was more than I could bear, my agony of heart and last struggles of despair aroused me, and I once more rejoiced that it was only a dream, a dreadful illusion, but a true picture of the heaven that the religionists of this world are making.

H. M. CURRY.

LEBANON, Ohio.

—Exchange.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HOPEWELL, Pa., May 24, 1894.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND—MY DEAR BROTHER IN THE BLESSED LORD:—Your letter was received May 8th, and I was, as ever, glad to hear from you, as I always am to receive letters from those whom I love for the truth's sake. If it be but a few lines, just the same it makes my heart to rejoice. While I am still bowed down in pain and distress most of the time, yet the Lord speaks to my troubled mind; and O! the joy and peace that is within none can describe. Those who feel the same know what it is to feel the love of the Lord. When he speaks all is peace and joy. Are not the words of the Lord powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword? Could we receive them and be glad were it not for the love of God? He tells us, "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." But the world teaches and preaches that every one can receive of the Lord if they will only let him work in their hearts. I know this is not true. The Lord will perform his work, and none can hinder. During the revival here I was asked many times why I did not come, and many were the invitations extended to me to come; so one evening I went, not with a willing mind, for I knew that was not my place. The minister I introduced you to in the depot at Hopewell was yet on this charge. He took no text. He looked at me about five minutes, as I was up front; then he turned from me with a smile on his face, and said, "There are a people silly and simple enough to think that God will not save every person. Now, don't you believe that. If God were to come into this church to-night he wouldn't pass one of you if you would come to him." He said the air was full of devils, pouncing down on poor, helpless creatures, making them afraid to come to Christ; and now all we had to do was to keep them off, and we would conquer. One evening Mr. Boor went, and he repeated very nearly the same. But were I to try to tell you all he said it would fill many sheets of paper; but move me he could not. I only smiled and pitied his ignorance, if I may call it thus. Jesus' words are true, and not man's, that teach such a spurious doctrine. Jesus teaches us that "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you. These things I command you, that ye love one another." O how plain it is that it is not left to man to choose his path, or to go and demand salvation of the Lord just when he sees fit. Such as that have not the love of the Lord; neither can they love the brethren with a pure heart, as they who have received salvation of the Lord. I know how different it was in my own case; how after the Lord showed me that my sins were forgiven, this love, yes, a peculiar love, joy and peace, came to my heart, such as this world can neither give nor take away. None but Jesus can give it. We can profess to love them, but is it pure? Is it not an outward show to the world, and the world receives it? Some make a loud profession that their sins are forgiven, and tell how they trespassed against God, but now what wonderful works they performed to please God, and that he must accept them as good; but how different the Lord's works to those of man, as you wrote for the SIGNS. Many are the times I have read that piece; and O how true are its words, and what comfort it brought to my weary, tempest-tossed soul, as it had not been long since the dear Lord was pleased to break the bands that had me chained, yea, even to the earth. Look any way I might, the enemy was ready to devour me, and I saw no way of escape, but there must be bound until my life be past. But O, blessed thought and precious hope, Jesus came to my relief; and as the angel of the Lord came to Peter in the prison, so my blessed Lord came to me, and healed my aching heart (for it seemed to be rent in twain), and spoke peace, and to-day I feel like shouting praises unto the Lamb that was slain. His love, his peace, comes with such force that I am made to meditate how good is our God; and perhaps within an hour from now I will be out on life's stormy ocean, thinking each wave will swallow me up. But this, too, is the Lord's work. "Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God. Selah." Here I must stop. I cannot utter the heart's desires; but, bless God's holy name, how I have thought of his loving-kindness in the midst of this evil and wicked generation. As his name is above all, "so is his praise unto the ends of the earth: his right hand is full of righteousness." O what blessings he sends us! Yet sometimes we murmur against his holy will. Here I am brought to bow in solemn thought. How often have I murmured against my blessed Lord, and yet how good he has been to me all the days of my life. I have thought my path marked with thorns, thistles and briars; but as I now look back over my past life it has been one of great blessings instead of cursings. The Lord has afflicted me, this is true; but O how light compared with some, and easy to bear. I was blessed with good parents, who gave me their advice, and all was good; but I took it not. I thought I knew best, yet I did not know; but as it has pleased my Lord to show me I now see. It is past—I cannot live it over; and were I to it would be the same. Since I am married I have been blessed with a good husband, yet I have murmured at my lot. He says nothing to me of my way of salvation any more, but thinks it right in most things; yet I have been accustomed to complain occasionally, but I do not want to, for God has blessed me far above what I am worthy of. I am not worthy of the love of the Lord's children; yet he has given me a heart to love them, which is far better than riches of this world, and all the worldly amusements that go to make up this life. Could I feel God's holy love in my heart the rest of my life as it comes to-day, O how happy I would be. Look at what I may, all seems to breathe the blessings of God.

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My dear Redeemer's praise,
The glory of my God and King,
The triumphs of his grace!

"My gracious Master and my God,
Let saints thy love proclaim,
And spread through all the earth abroad
The honors of thy name.

"Jesus, the name that calms our fears,
That bids our sorrow cease;
'Tis music to our ravished ears,
'Tis life and health and peace.

"It breaks the power of reigning sin,
And sets the prisoner free;
Thy blood can cleanse the foulest stain,
And can avail for me."

I would like to attend the association at Southampton the coming month, but find it impossible to do so. Brother Corder talks some of going. I would like to see you all, and hope to ere long. If I am not strong enough to go over to see your folks this fall, perhaps in my distress you will remember me. I have fully decided to go to Philadelphia in the month of October to undergo another operation, unless something unforeseen occurs to prevent it. This then will be the fourth, and I trust the last; but it may be that my sufferings here will be over ere that time. This is known by him who doeth all things right, and none can stay his hand. My suffering seems to gradually grow worse. I have lost in flesh so that I would scarcely weigh eighty pounds. We have had very high waters, and a great deal of damage has been done; but it is right, for it is God who doeth it, and none can stay his hand. "For this God is our God forever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death."

With love to all, write me when you can. I shall always be glad. Your humble sister in the hope of a better world,

LIZZIE HIMES.

SMITHVILLE, Va., July 30, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Inclosed find extracts from two letters written by my son Fred, of Washington, D. C., which I send to you, if you think best, for the SIGNS. Perhaps they may be of some comfort to some poor, tried one of our Father's house. It seems to me they breathe the spirit of the daily experience of the tried ones, and those who are often ready to perish.

Dear brother, I often feel like adding my feeble testimony to the truth proclaimed by so many through the SIGNS; but as daily comes a feeling of my inability to write, it has thus far prevented. Were it not for the SIGNS my life would be lonely indeed, for I would be shut out entirely from all communication with any of the tried and afflicted ones who trust alone in the God of Israel. I long to meet with some of my Father's children, and listen once more to the proclamation of the gospel by the servants of our God. I hope, the Lord willing, to be able to meet you all in October at our Corresponding Meeting. Pray for me, my brother, that my faith fail not, and that God will give me daily grace for every trial.

Your tried sister in hope,
MARY J. COX.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18, 1894.

MY DEAR MOTHER:—Your letter touched my heart. I can but hope that I know something of the glorious truth of which you write, though I am so in the dark, so indifferent, so worldly, so sinful, though I see everything in myself, in my daily walk, to apparently contradict any idea that I am one of the chosen of Israel. The tempter is ever with me, ever in my heart, preaching to me the doctrine of works; telling me that if I had any interest in the righteousness of Christ I would show my faith by my works, and continually presenting to me the works of the flesh as the work of grace. I know what I should do, and what I should not do. I do feel that I can say, with Paul, "The good that I would I do not," &c. But I think I have also felt that it is not of works, but of God that showeth mercy. O these works! these works! What are they? "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him," &c. What is it to believe on God? To know in the depths of the heart that in him alone is help and grace and salvation; to realize daily in the bitterness of self-humiliation and loathing the utter sinfulness of the flesh, the complete, the full wickedness and destitution of man, and all that pertains to him; to feel shut up as in a prison-house, with bands and bars of steel, with all the corruption of death pressing one down; with the tongue failing for thirst; encompassed with the pangs of hell; with no strength to cry, hardly to groan; not daring to turn the eye even to the holy hill of Zion, whence all our help cometh. What a work is this! Not of man, nor of man's choice; but is it not the way in which God makes bare his arm for the salvation of his people? How else does he teach his power, his glory, his righteousness, his love and his mercy, but by showing to his chosen, not once, but daily and hourly, their weakness, their sinfulness, their complete and full dependence upon him? This is indeed God's work. In this is the abounding grace which fills all eternity with its immensity, made manifest to the salvation of the little ones. In this knowledge and heart-groaning under the burden of indwelling sin is the following of Christ, is the burning up of the hay, wood and stubble of the slightest reliance upon an earthly arm, and is the wonderful grace and mercy of the God of covenants made glorious and magnified. Here is the work of faith; the work which ascends to the Most High as a sweet-smelling savor. Here is God, and him only; and there is no place for creature works in the slightest degree. What does the flesh know of this work? Nothing. In and of the flesh there is misery, weakness, sin and death. The tempter comes to us and says, "If ye will do thus and so ye shall live." He is a liar from the beginning. There is no life in doing or not doing; we do because we are alive. What do we? I have tried feebly to say; but Paul says, and so emphatically, so truly, so sweetly, "We groan, being burdened." Groan! Is that doing anything? Must we not pray, and read, and do this, that or the other? Here comes the flesh, and would put us to work, to work out our own salvation; but is not the deep groaning of the sin-burdened soul the very work which God would have it to do, the work of faith, which he is working, leading it to him, and by shining upon it with the light of his own countenance, making manifest the corruption within, and causing the glory of his grace to stand out in unspeakable refulgence? Here is the glory, the sweetness, the matchless grandeur and beauty of the gospel. When applied by the Spirit to the burdened soul it leads it out from under the bondage of the law, which is our schoolmaster unto Christ, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. It points to Jesus and to his finished work. It leaves no place for anything but the adorable grandeur of a full, free, complete, finished salvation. But the Spirit must apply this glorious truth; we cannot of ourselves take the smallest (so-called) promise to our hearts. The children must ever and continually be taught where their life is hid, that their only salvation is in the dear Redeemer, and that to know him is to know the fellowship of his sufferings. This they learn through a more and more intimate knowledge of themselves—through the tribulation because of indwelling sin; for through tribulation they enter the kingdom.

When my mind is led to contemplate these things (as, alas! it is so seldom), I can see less and less place for what are so often called the "admonitions of the gospel." I do not mean to say that there is no such thing; for do not our own hearts continually admonish us? Would we not, if we could, indeed have all our members servants of righteousness? But many a poor soul whose outward walk looks very, very crooked, is more truly giving glory to God, is struggling harder with the powers of darkness within, and is perhaps following more closely in the footsteps of the Master, than those who condemn him. God knoweth the heart; the publican is more approved with him than the Pharisee. It is the lost who are saved; it is the sick who need the physician; it is the tempted, tried, sinning, stumbling one who is conscious of his weakness, and who has not strength enough even to cry aloud, to whom grace, God's grace, free, unmerited grace, abounds. O the abounding of that grace! No mind can conceive it, no words can tell it. It fills all eternity, it is the balm for every wound, and it can never be exhausted.

I think I have realized how sweet it is to have the heart stirred with the glorious truth of the gospel, though so often shut up in prison, so dark, so helpless; but when it pleases God, in whom is all my hope and trust, to bring me out into a broad place, not all the powers of earth or hell can hinder. May I ever be reconciled to his will, and stand still, knowing that he doeth it.

I have written hastily, stragglingly, here at the office, just as it came to my mind, and I fear it may be of but little interest to you.

Affectionately,

FRED.

JULY 25.

My mind seems drawn much to this channel. It does seem to me that no one who ever lived or ever will live has so much reason to know the awful depth of sin and complete depravity, of utter, complete, total helplessness of the flesh, as I. Daily, hourly, momentarily, I groan,
(Continued on page 260.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 15, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

WITHDRAWAL.

A COMBINATION of circumstances have led me to the conclusion that it is expedient, and for the good of the publication, that I should sever my connection with the editorial department of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. In taking leave of the patrons who have so generously borne with the weakness and deficiencies of my service during the past thirteen years it is beyond the power of words to express the gratitude due to them for their fraternal patience and forbearance. But infinitely beyond this debt is the unspeakable display of that grace of God by which their loving conduct has been prompted. To each one of those kind friends I return affectionate thanks, and pray that they may experience the reward which only the God of all grace can bestow.

It is due to my brother, Benton L. Beebe, the proprietor of the paper, and to Elder Benton Jenkins, so long intimately associated with the publication, that I speak especially of their unvarying kindness and affectionate consideration in all our intercourse. No discord has marred our sweet association throughout these years, and in our separation we are alike deeply pained. There is no alienation of fraternal love now that our long and pleasant association is broken. It is without the will of any of the parties. My most earnest desire is that the devoted support by which lovers of truth have encouraged the SIGNS OF THE TIMES in the past, may continue and abound in the future. Never, more than in the present time, has there been manifest need of the clear proclamation of gospel truth from the pulpit and the press. As opportunity may serve I shall still hope to write for the columns of our longest established Old School Baptist periodical. In earnest love of that doctrine to which it has been devoted from its first issue, and with the confidence of faith that God will maintain his own truth and cause, I commend you, one and all, to God and to the word of his grace. To every reader I would say, "Think on me when it shall be well with thee!" But above that desire is the wish to be partner in the afflictions of the gospel with every blessed mourner; and "That I may know him [Christ], and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

WM. L. BEEBE.

WARWICK, N. Y., July 30, 1894.

PAINFUL as it is for us to publish the above announcement of the withdrawal of our beloved brother from the editorial department of the paper, yet in the providence of God it seems to be unavoidable. For thirteen years we have been associated in business, and during all that time our united aim has been to so conduct the paper as to redound to the best good, comfort and edification of the saints, and to the glory and honor of God. We are well aware of our own fallibility, and doubtless have many times erred in our judgment. It would be folly and presumption for us to claim that we have made no mistakes.

During our long and happy business relations the greater part of the matter appearing under the editorial head has been written by our dear brother William L., and as far as we have been able to discern we have fully indorsed his able and gifted articles in defense of the truth, without a single exception. When, at the death of our dear father, the fearful responsibility of continuing the publication of the SIGNS was bequeathed to us, we felt that a giant's robe had fallen upon us. True, we had been all our life in the office, and for a number of years associated with our dear father in the management of the publication; yet when he was so suddenly removed, and we found ourself at the helm, it seemed that we could never assume the fearful responsibility of conducting the publication of the paper. But God rules; and after receiving assurance of the assistance of our beloved brethren, William L. and Benton Jenkins, we took courage, and thus far the Lord has, we trust, prospered our united labors.

In losing the assistance of brother William we feel that again we are brought to a place where we have to ask the forbearance of our brethren until God in his wisdom shall unfold his providence as to who shall assist us in the editorial department of the SIGNS. Brother William, owing to his enfeebled health, and on account of his being located some sixteen miles from the office, has been able of late years to assist but little beyond writing the most of the regular editorial expositions of Scripture; yet we have been highly favored in the able assistance of our dear pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, in selecting and revising copy, and occasionally contributing to the editorial columns; and were it not for the assurance of brother Jenkins that he will still continue to afford us such aid as the Lord may enable him to render, as well as the promise of brother William to still write occasionally, we should indeed be discouraged.

While we would not for a moment have the temerity to attempt to conduct the SIGNS for any great length of time alone in our own name, we beg our brethren and friends to bear with us a little while, until it may be made manifest to us what to do.

In grateful remembrance of the kind indulgence of our brethren in the past, we ask that they pray for us, that we may be shown our duty at the present time, that all may be done for the best good of the cause advocated and defended by the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for the last sixty-two years.

The only change in our address for the present will be G. Beebe's Son (instead of Sons.)

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

IN our last number will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

KINDLY REMEMBER US.

It is an unpleasant duty that we are obliged to perform to urge our brethren and friends to please make an effort to send us a remittance on their delinquent subscriptions. We expect within a few days to send notices to those whose subscription is considerably in arrears, and ask them to make a special effort to forward their remittance promptly. If not able to send the whole amount at present, remember that every little helps.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 259.)

being burdened by reason of indwelling sin; so weak, so helpless, so sinning. But it does seem to me that on the other hand I know where help and strength are, and where alone they are to be found; and without even strength to pray or cry I can only breathe, "O Lord, be merciful to me, a sinner;" and this not of myself, but because the breath is given me. O how I do long to be found walking, not with the world, but in the footsteps of him who is our perfect pattern, and to have the answer of a good conscience toward God. But I am of the earth, earthy. I am of unclean lips; and it does seem to me that I have no right to look for comfort. I am sin itself, the very embodiment of corruption. What promise, what blessing, what help, what comfort, can there be for me from him who is holy, undefiled, and separate from sinners? Yet deep down in the heart, almost covered up with the crust of self, almost, as it were, smothered with the filth of sin, there is a hope which I fain would believe is a spark of heavenly fire kindled by the God of heaven; that his grace, his mercy, his love, his righteousness, his sanctification, reach even to me. It has sometimes seemed to me that I have had a faint realization of the feelings of the children of Israel when they reached the Red Sea, with the swelling waters in front, and the blood-thirsty enemy behind; death and destruction on every hand, and they powerless! What must, what could they do? "Stand still, and see the salvation of God." Ah, it is easy to even stand still when one feels that presently God will make bare his arm in our defense; but how is it when faith dies, as it were, when our sins rise up to condemn us, when we know, so bitterly, truly know, that all we deserve is to be cut off forever? It is not Christ who condemns us: it is our own hearts, our own wicked lives, our sinful selves. Ah, then we realize indeed what Paul meant when he said, "In me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." If at this time, when we are in the belly of hell, with the weeds wrapped around our heads, some of Job's comforters tell us to gird up our loins, to live soberly and uprightly, to do, even to think, this or that, does not the burden crush us, even as Samson crushed his enemies by pulling the temple upon their heads? Would that we could. Our grief is that we cannot. What is the lost sheep, the wandering lamb upon the mountain-side, to do? Hunger and cold have stilled its voice; it cannot even cry. But the Shepherd comes. Through the cold and over the rugged way he searches for the lost wanderer, tenderly takes it in his arms, warms the almost frozen frame against his loving breast, and makes the almost stilled heart to pulsate with life immortal from himself. This, to me (I may be all deluded and mistaken), is the gospel, the message of glad tidings, the only help to the lost and fallen, the balm in Gilead, the salvation of sinners, the work which God works, and by which he builds up his temple without the sound of ax or hammer, and which makes his power, mercy and glory manifest. May it be his sovereign will that I may be one of those lively stones, and that he may keep me in his fear and ever at his feet.

With much love to all,

FRED.

* THOUGHTS ON PSALM CXLI.

(Continued.)

"INCLINE not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work iniquity: and let me not eat of their dainties."

This is David's prayer. It is the desire and prayer of all the Lord's people when moved by his Spirit. I will here repeat, in order to emphasize and keep in remembrance my leading thought in these meditations, that the dear Savior is here, as in most of the Psalms, if not all of them, speaking for his people, by his Spirit, through the psalmist. His holy Spirit caused him to feel, while in our flesh, all the pain and burden of sin, with its direful effects; and all the pure and holy desires of that holy Spirit for deliverance from its baneful power were felt and expressed by the psalmist, and other holy men of old, according as they were inspired by the Spirit of Christ. So what we read in these inspired words of prayer and longing is true and pure, not mixed with the sinful desires of the flesh, as the best desires of our poor, sinful hearts seem to be; and not only are the desires that we find here expressed absolutely pure and right and holy, but they will surely be fulfilled. So we are indeed blessed if we find these inspired words of prayer expressing our own longings. It is an evidence that he has put his law into our minds, and is writing it in our hearts; that he is working in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure, according to the prayer he has given us, "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

The first expression of this prayer tells what must invariably be felt by all who have the Spirit of Christ; and the strength and power of that feeling over their vile natures is according to the measure of that Spirit given them. The Spirit was given to Christ without measure.—John iii. 34. An absolute and perfect hatred of all evil is an essential and inseparable attribute of that Spirit, and is therefore the very beginning of an experience of grace. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." "I will put my fear in their hearts, and they shall not depart from me." "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil." What a blessing it is for one to feel a hatred of evil; not for fear of punishment, but for its own sake, merely because it is evil, even though he must therefore hate his own life.

"Incline not my heart to any evil thing." To the Lord only can the poor sinner look for power to resist the evil inclinations of our deceitful hearts. He soon learns that the way is not in himself; that he cannot direct his own steps away from evil; that the fear of the Lord is the only "fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death." Like a little child in the midst of wild beasts, he can look only to the Lord with a humble cry for help and direction and deliverance.

But the form of this prayer is peculiar. "Incline not my heart to any evil thing." Does it imply that the Lord does sometimes incline the heart to an evil way? "Lead us not into temptation." Does this imply that the Lord does lead some into temptation? The apostle James says, "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man: but every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed." The apostle goes on to show this to be the source from which sin and death are brought forth in the experience of a child of God. He is talking of that death which is experienced by a child of God when he lives after the flesh. He then shows God our Savior, who is the Father of lights, as the source, and only source, of "every good gift and every perfect gift," and points to the truth, as of special importance in this connection, that with him "is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." A man who should feel to lay the blame of any evil thing he had done upon the Lord, saying, "The Lord tempted me," or, "It was predestinated, and so I could not help it," would show that he had not yet known the true nature of sin, nor even himself as a vile sinner, nor known the Lord as the Holy One. If one should feel and talk that way who has been made alive with spiritual life, it would be a proof that he has now a seared conscience, and that he has walked after the flesh till he is now in the region of death.

But while the apostle is here showing God as the Father of lights, the source and giver of all that is good and pure and holy in his children, and is showing that the lusts of our flesh are the prolific source of all the evils that do us real harm, yet he does not contradict the teaching of the Scriptures concerning the eternal predestination of God, which applies to all things whatsoever come to pass, and his own ruling power and providence, working all things according to the counsel of his own will. The Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh that he should fulfill the purpose for which he raised him up; he turned the hearts of some "to hate his people, and to deal subtilly with his servants."—Psalm cv. 25. Being angry against Israel, he moved David against them to say, "Go, number Israel and Judah."—2 Sam. xxiv. 1. The provocation to do this came from Satan (1 Chron. xxi. 1), who can do nothing but that which shall work together with all things for the accomplishment of the Lord's eternal purpose, and for good to them who love God, who are the called according to his purpose. The prophet prays, "O Lord, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our heart from thy fear?"—Isaiah lxiii. 17. If we cannot see how these things which are declared in the Scriptures can be reconciled with each other, we can wait till the Lord shows us that both are true in our own experience, and not try to reconcile them by changing the form of sound words, or by denying what the Scriptures declare because we cannot understand it.

Our natural inclinations are to evil; and every child of God knows well that if left alone, as Ephraim was, to follow after his own way, he would soon destroy himself. He knows that the Lord alone can restrain and direct him; and if in his just anger he should turn our heart to the evil ways which our carnal nature loves, and leave us to follow after vanity, which keeps all true peace and joy away from us, we could have nothing to complain of. It is what we well deserve. But the prayer is that he will not do so. "Incline not my heart to any evil thing." "Keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me," said one of old; and so says every one who is led by the Spirit. What could be more fearful to one who has known the plague of his own heart than for the Lord to say, as he did of Ephraim, "Let him alone!" Into what terrible depths of danger and death would not the evil inclinations of our nature lead us, if the Lord should for a moment withdraw the controlling and directing power of his Spirit!

(To be continued.)

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 1, 1894.

OPELIKA, Ala., July 9, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—It is on my mind to write a few words to the readers of the SIGNS who seem to feel an interest in the Old School Baptists, and yet are standing aloof, and are not in a line of duty. We cannot help but ask the question as to why they tarry. As Ananias said to Saul, "Why tarriest thou?" What a searching question. Why is it so, when a soul has light, and enjoys the preached gospel, and loves the people of God, and the assemblies of the saints, and are saying in their heart, "Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon; for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions?" Well did Jesus say, "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger." I have been especially exercised in this line lately, and the Lord has enabled me to speak to such, I hope, with some effect. I hope I feel especially interested in these characters, and will take the liberty through this medium, the SIGNS, to speak to them. The important thing to be considered is, Has the Lord dealt with them? Have they an humble hope through grace? If they have, what is their duty? I have great faith in the accomplishment of God's purpose. The ministry are appointed of God as fishermen and hunters, to find and catch these characters, both in the lanes and streets of the city, and in the highways and hedges. They also, like Abraham's servant, are charged to not take a wife of the daughters of the Canaanites to be a bride for Isaac. So in their searchings they are to go to certain ones and deliver their messages; and in their journey when they find a lamb of the fold with an experience of grace they are much refreshed; and I have thought that God gives them a discerning spirit to find these characters, and to lead them along gently to the fold. The difficulty with some is that they feel they are too unworthy to go to the church; but that is only an evidence that they are fit. When Rebekah came in sight of Sarah's tent, and saw Isaac in the field meditating at eventide, she lighted off the camel and veiled her face. So do subjects of grace, as they come to the church, and in the presence of Jesus. There they feel that deep sense of unfitness. But the servant urges them on, and they come to the tent, and meet Isaac, and become married to him, and are comforted with Jesus. What blessed comfort! Who can describe the joy and peace they feel when baptized, and as they walk in gospel obedience?

"Tongue cannot express
The sweet comfort and peace
Of a soul in its earliest love.
That sweet comfort was mine
When the favor divine
I first found in the blood of the Lamb."

Here is experience, when brought to the banqueting-house, and the banner of love is over us. It is theirs to inherit, and they glory begin.

When Bethuel asked Rebekah if she would go with the man, what did she say? "I will go." But her brother and her mother said, "Let the damsel abide with us a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go." But the servant said, "Hinder me not, seeing the Lord hath prospered my way." God's ministers say yet, To day is the day of salvation. Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized. God's ministers know there is no good in delaying. It is high time to awake out of sleep. Jesus commands them to deny self, and take up their cross, and follow him. It is too important a matter to neglect, therefore it is "the acceptable time." "If ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." God's children need often to be urged. When the angel visited Lot in Sodom, he said, "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain." He was to look not back, but press forward. Some wait to get better, and after waiting for a number of years have to come with the same hope, and then see what they have suffered so much from, the neglect of their duty. Some have read long, bright experiences, and wonderful dreams, and say, "Well, I have never had such a dream, and I do not feel like they feel; therefore I cannot come." What is an experience? The blind man said, "Whereas I was once blind, now I see." We can never relate a better experience than that in fewer words. Have we experienced such a change as this? Do we now love the gospel and the people of God? Did we always love it as we now do? Do we love to go with God's people and hear them talk about these things? Were we once like the Gadarene, and has Jesus done that blessed work for us? Are we clothed and in our right mind, sitting at the feet of Jesus? If so the command of Jesus is upon us, "Go home to thy friends," the Old School Baptists, the church of Christ, your friends, and tell them what great things the Lord has done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee. It shall be well with thee. Are you like Nathaniel? Have you been under the thick leaves of the fig tree, praying? Jesus knows it, and says, "I saw thee when thou wast under the fig tree." I would admonish all such to give glory to Jesus. Come out and acknowledge him in all your ways, and he will direct your steps. He says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest to your souls; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." To such as have a hope, and are entangled in the meshes of Babylon, he says, as he said to me, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and I will receive you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins."

May God bless his word of truth to such characters, is my prayer for Jesus' sake.

Yours in hope,

W. LIVELY.

WAVERLY, Pa., March 28, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I send the inclosed letter of sister Anna Tarusett by her consent; not because my name is mentioned as it is, but because I believe it has that peculiar sound which is characteristic of heaven-born souls. Of course you are expected to use your judgment in the matter of publishing it.

Your brother in hope,

D. M. VAIL.

ONEONTA, N. Y., March 21, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER:—I have just read your encouraging letter in the SIGNS, and must say that I felt my heart leap for joy. You will ask, Why did it leap for joy? It was because I know I have passed through a small share of the same experience, coming out of darkness into light, some eleven years ago. I felt that I wanted to talk and let every one know of my desire to praise the dear Redeemer for showing me the difference between darkness and light; for it had seemed like dense darkness. He then revealed himself to me, and the light was so bright that I could not look upon it. I had never quite lost sight of nor forgotten the Savior's lovely smile. I watched him until I could only discern a spark, as a star for size. I seemed to be in a very narrow path, just wide enough for one to walk in. Of a truth of late I have been feeling that I have been a poor, lonely, miserable creature; that there is no one like me upon the whole earth, so unfeeling, ungrateful, for the goodness and mercies which I daily receive. I deserve to be banished from the presence of him from whom all goodness comes; for I am daily fighting and kicking if things do not go smoothly. I do like a smooth road; but the good book says that it is through much tribulation we must enter the kingdom of God; that the cross we must bear if we ever wear the crown. But the most of my time I do not like to bear the cross; yet I find it close to me every day, with such downcast feelings, such wretched inward feelings, as you say. I cannot tell the half, but I do know the terrible distress. Sometimes I think within myself that I would rather die than live; but then the thought comes to me, Where will you be found in the end? Then a feeling of trembling creeps over me, to think of being lost, forever lost. Can I bear such a fate? It is bad enough here, but there it would be worse. Sure I am that if I am not one of the dear Lord's redeemed ones that certainly will be my doom. Sometimes I say, If I were one of the Lord's I could pray. But I find that prayer is indited of the Lord alone, and that one can only pray when he is drawn to pray; and we must have something to pray for.

"A form of words, though e'er so sound,
Can never save a soul;
The Holy Ghost must give the wound,
And make the wounded whole."

If we have never been wounded we need no cure. The well need not a physician, but they that are sick. I hope I have been sick, and have had the good Physician's care, pouring in the oil and wine. What a terrible thing it is to be deceived. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for what a man soweth that shall he also reap." Poor reaping mine will be, because my sowing has been so poor. What if I should be deceived! But can it be so, while I do love to read such letters and experiences as are in the SIGNS and in good books? Such things I delight in above everything this earth affords. Now I have lost what I call my earthly all; one that I worshiped, but did not know it until he was taken from me. The Lord says, "From all your idols will I cleanse you." My idol is gone, even if I am not cleansed. Now I dare not make an idol of anything. I have learned that we must not worship idols. I have proven it by experience. I want only to worship the true and living God. May the Lord alone have all the praise. Amen.

ANNA TARUSETT.

WOODBURNE, Va., May 24, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I little thought the last time we met that it would be this long before we would see each other again, the Lord permitting us to live. Looking backward, we can see; but looking forward, O how little we know. But, my brother, I am not going to write you of things you know so much about, or talk to you of the holes in the road that you have traveled until you have grown familiar with all the rocks and stumbling places wherein I so easily fall. It is not pleasant for me to know that I did not meet you when I was so sure that I would. It is very unpleasant to have to write it. Sometimes when thinking of where I now am, and remembering where I once was, I am made to wonder, Is this God's way of dealing with his people, or is it his way of dealing with those that are not his people? My dear brother, I get so badly mixed up that I am like a man in the middle of a river that is frozen; and when he attempts to help himself off, he cracks the ice; and look which way he may, he only sees danger. If I think I will make a bold push, and slip smoothly out of this, I fear to make the attempt, lest I may fall and go straight to the bottom. So I can only stand still and cry, Who will deliver me from this bondage? And if I do not hear the voice of Jesus saying, "I am the way; fear not," I can see no deliverance. But sometimes he makes me to see and feel his power, and makes me know that I love the brethren. I feel this love for you at this moment, and would so love to be with you and hear you talk of the love and faith that God has been pleased to bless you with. You know that when I was quite a young man I joined the New School Baptists. In the year 1867 I was baptized in the Missouri River, at Miami, Saline Co., by A. P. Williams. Several years after that I was made to feel that I could not in my heart agree with the doctrine set forth by that people in all things. The question was always before me, and worked upon me to such an extent that I quit going about with them; yet I said nothing against them, for there were those among them that I felt to be much more worthy and devout, and in their hearts were honest in what they were doing, so that I could not say anything against them. Often the members would approach me on the subject; but I only quietly passed them by, and went plodding my way; yet I felt lost and unsettled. When and where the doctrine of salvation, as foreordained by God, dawned upon my mind, I know not; but I seemed to receive here a little and there a little, until under the grace given Elder White I was made able to go before the church, to the people of God; and I then felt, and do now, that had they known how unworthy I was they would not have received me, and would gladly be rid of me now; for to tell you the very truth, brother Beebe, I am ashamed to tell you how wicked and mean I am. I am ashamed to acknowledge it to myself. But when I felt that I had truly found a people that worshiped God through faith, that accorded with my own feelings, and I longed to go with them. O how I did wish that I could go with them. No one but myself will ever know what were my feelings about this for some time before God allowed me to go. Then I thought of those among the New School that I had so much faith in (my own faith, not God's). I wanted to take them along with me. Not that I said anything to a single one of them, although I had a father, mother, sister, and many more. I had been made to feel that God did his own work; that if I opened my mouth my tongue would talk for me, and not God. But I wanted to feel that they must be just, for they were honest, and not trying to deceive. Finally this very fact brought light on the subject. If man thinks he is right, he can be as zealous as if he were right, carnally speaking. So, feeling to know that they did not see God's ways as I saw them, and realizing that I saw the church of God in the Old School Baptists, I was made able to place all people outside of them on the same footing, knowing that God's law will stand, and those chosen from the beginning, blessed with the Spirit of Christ, cannot be lost, be they black or white, with all that man can do to the contrary.

Now, brother Beebe, I had no idea of bothering you with all this. I wanted my wife to write to you, but she insisted that I should do so. I close with our united love to you. May God bless you. Your fellow-traveler through this life's journey,

J. L. BALL.

RUNYAN, Ky., Dec. 19, 1893.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As I cannot afford to do without the dear old SIGNS, and the time for me to remit is due, I will send remittance for another year; and having been requested heretofore to write something for our medium of correspondence, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I will send what I had written, but declined to send until now. What I have here written is some of the things I have experienced, I hope, which may be of some comfort to some of the Lord's little ones. When I was very young I had a desire to be a christian. I knew from the Scriptures that I must be born again in order to worship God. When I was about fifteen years old I was much troubled about my condition. I was made to see that I was a sinner. I tried to pray to the Lord to forgive me my many sins. I went on in this way about ten years. At times I was troubled so that I thought I was bound to be lost. These words would come to my mind, "If it is the Lord's will to save you, you will be saved; but you cannot change his will." One night as I lay on my bed these words came to me, "You are bound to die, and go to heaven or hell. One you must go to, and there to dwell." This gave me great trouble. I then thought I would try to serve the Lord. I tried to pray all the time, yet my troubles got worse. My sins seemed like mountains before me. As I had no home I went to stay with my brothers and sisters. There I was taken sick, and the friends and neighbors thought I would die if something was not done for me. I thought if my sins were pardoned I would not be afraid to die. I kept on trying to pray, thinking I had something to do. I went on in this way for some time. Finally I went to the Old Big Creek Church, in August, 1889, where I heard Elder W. J. May preach on Saturday. He said it was not what we did that saved us. This gave me some satisfaction, for I could not see any good that I ever had done. On Sunday following I heard brother J. B. Weddington and brother W. J. May preach salvation by grace. I thought it was the best preaching I had ever heard. It was made plain to me that it was the true doctrine. I saw there was nothing good that I could do, and saw myself such a great sinner that I gave up all for lost. I thought I was bound to be lost. I continued in this way two or three months. I wanted to be alone, where no one could see me. I would go up stairs and fall on my knees and try to pray. One day when I was trying to pray I gave up for the Lord's will to be done, when it seemed to me that I heard a voice saying, "Jesus died to save sinners." Then my troubles left me, and I had a desire to go to the church; but I was not thoroughly satisfied. I went to meeting at the Old Big Creek Church, in May, 1890, and at the close of the meeting an old brother said to me, "Don't you want to go with us?" All at once a bright light shined around me, with peace to my soul, and it seemed to me that my Savior was standing by me. I turned my face to see if I could see him. I felt like the Lord had pardoned my many sins. The brethren and sisters looked so good, their faces seemed so bright. I then had a desire to offer myself to the church, but was afraid I would deceive them, and that I had nothing to tell them. I went home, and continued in this way, being troubled about going to the church; for it appeared to me that I was living out of my duty. After two months I again went to the Old Big Creek Church, and offered myself to them, and was received; yet I felt too unworthy to be with them. I was baptized on the third Sunday in July, 1890, by Elder W. J. May, and when I was baptized I was made to rejoice in the Lord.

Dear brethren and sisters, should we not praise him who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began? The reason we love him is because he first loved us; and he gave himself for us, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love. "The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his;" not that they can be his if they choose; but "them that are his." We need have no fears but that the Lord will save his people and take care of his cause. O how I love to read in the SIGNS the rich communications and bright experiences of the many brethren and sisters; and I hope they will pray for me, their weak sister, but in hope of eternal life through Christ our Redeemer.

M. E. RUNYAN.

FAIRBANKS, Ind., April 24, 1894.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—It is through the tender mercy of our God that I am permitted to write you once more. I wrote you about a year ago that there was no Old School Baptist nearer me than fifteen miles. Since that time the Lord has put it into the hearts of the brethren to build a house of worship in the town called Fairbanks, about three miles away. They finished the house in August last, and then organized a church, and called it Turmas Creek. There were only twelve members in the constitution. They called brother J. H. Oliphant to preach for them once a month, and he accepted the call. Since that time the Lord has added eleven more to their number, three by letter and eight by experience and baptism, and others are inquiring for the right way. We are surrounded by various denominations, so that we have a great deal of opposition. But we believe that if we are what we profess to be the Lord will give us grace sufficient for our day and trials. We have good congregations and good order, and from all appearances the Lord is at work in our midst. I believe that where he begins a good work he will finish it, in spite of all opposition. He can work, and none can stay his hand. There are many lo heres and lo theres in this section of the country, which keep the people confused. They have not had regular preaching of sound doctrine, and when they do hear the truth some of them will not receive it. Some of them act like lost sheep. They are not satisfied to stay where they are, and their friends are not willing for them to come to us; but if the Lord is at work with them they will have to obey at the appointed time. I cannot help but rejoice to see the work of the Lord going on. He takes one here and another there. The blessed Savior said, "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring." That was his errand into these low grounds of sin and sorrow, to seek and to save that which was lost. My christian friends, we were lost, but the Savior found us while we were wandering to and fro. He took away the stony heart, and gave us a heart of flesh. He unstopped our deaf ears, opened our blind eyes, opened our understanding, and while we stood wondering at what had been done, our doubts and fears gave way, faith sprang up within us, and we were enabled to claim him as our Savior. Then we could look over our past experience, and O how we were made to rejoice in hope of the glory of God, not according to our works, but through his grace and mercy. He loved his elect with an everlasting love, and that is why he saved them.

May the Lord bless you in your labor of love, Your sister in hope of eternal life,

ELIZA A. TRUBLOOD.

MARRIAGES.

On August 9th, 1894, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at the residence of Mrs. Prudence Horton, Middletown, N. Y., Mr. Stewart Cahill and Miss Lena B. Pellew, both of Warwick, N. Y.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At her home in Montgomery Co., Md., Mrs. Sarah E. White, beloved wife of Benjamin White, on June 24th, 1894, aged 53 years, 4 months and 8 days.

She was baptized on Sept. 20th, 1880, by Elders Furr and White. She was raised an Episcopalian, as her parents were before her. When she was brought to see the truth as it is in Jesus it caused her much trouble, as it condemned the belief of her parents, to whom she was very devoted. She was a loving wife and a devoted mother. She loved the Baptists, and was always ready to make any sacrifice for their comfort. She loved the people of God, and her only hope was what Jesus had done for her. She was always ready to attend her meetings, unless prevented by sickness, from which she was a sufferer all her married life. Her last hours were calm and peaceful, and we believe that she now rests in the bosom of her dear Redeemer, who loved her and gave himself for her, to free her from the sorrows and corruptions of this life, and give her a home eternal in the heavens.

The above was written and handed me by the husband of the deceased, our brother, Benjamin White, who wished that I should make any changes I thought best. I will only add that she was a lovely sister, and the Valley Church will greatly miss her sweet voice, her smiling face and her encouraging words. Many times has she comforted me. She has left us; we must go to her.

Your brother, I hope,

E. V. WHITE.

LEESBURGH, Va., Aug. 7, 1894.

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

CONTRIBUTIONS received by Silas H. Durand for Mary Parker, while in University Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. C. Fenton 1, R. Scates 1, M. E. Parsons 5, R. S. Yerkes 1, M. R. Lawshe 2, S. H. Holcomb 50c, R. Dalrymple 1, Mrs. Scarboro 2, Miss Kincaid 20, Eli Cartright 1, R. Alexander 1, E. Rounds 50c, W. D. Records 1, S. H. Bishop 1, H. Monroe 50c, E. F. Goff 3, Sallie Reddish 1, C. A. Spencer 2, J. A. Merryman 2, I. J. Heaton 5, M. A. Langfitt 2.—Total, $53.50.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Regular Baptists will meet with the Sandy Creek Church, at Hope, in La Salle Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1894.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the north will stop at Tonica, and those from the south will stop at Lostant. The household of faith and all lovers of the truth are invited.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will meet with the Second Church of Roxbury, Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. on Wednesday, September 5th, 1894, and continuing two days.

Our meeting-house is about two miles from Roxbury village, and six miles from Kelly's Corners, at which places the visiting friends will be cared for. We cordially invite those interested in the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord to come and partake with us, and a special invitation to those who labor in word and doctrine.

The Tuesday evening train on the Ulster & Delaware R. R. will be met at Kelly's Corners and Roxbury.

J. D. HUBBELL.

THE Des Moines River Association will convene with the Des Moines River Church, three miles north of Eldon, Wapello Co., Iowa, at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday before the third Sunday in August, 1894, closing on Monday following.

Those coming by the Rock Island route will stop at Eldon, and those by the C., B. & Q. or by the Ft. Madison & Ottumwa routes will stop at Batavia, and they will be met at those stations.

A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren, and ministers especially.

R. SPEIRS, Mod.

M. W. BYRAM, Clerk.

THE Licking Association of Old School Baptists will meet, the Lord willing, with the church at Elk Lick, near Sadieville, Scott Co., Ky., on Friday before the fourth Saturday in August, and continue three days (24th, 25th and 26th). Our brethren and friends are cordially invited to meet with us.

Those coming by way of Cincinnati will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday at 4:05 p. m., or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by way of Lexington will take the Cincinnati Southern on Thursday evening at 2:40, or Friday morning at 7:30, for Sadieville. Those coming by Louisville will change cars Thursday evening at Frankfort for Georgetown. At Georgetown take the Cincinnati Southern for Sadieville. Trains leave Frankfort Thursday at 1:00 and 4:20 p. m., and Friday at 7:00 a. m. Reduced rates will be arranged from points named.

J. P. FIELD, Clerk.

THE sixty-third meeting of the Spoon River Association of Regular Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on the premises of E. D. Varnes, one mile and a half south of Cramer, on the Iowa Central R. R., Peoria Co., Ill., on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Teams will be at Cramer on Thursday evening and Friday morning. Brethren will likely be met also at Farmington, on the Buda & Rushville Branch of the C., B. & Q. R. R., on Thursday evening. If not met there, change immediately for Cramer. Brother Varnes lives five miles southeast of Farmington. The saints are invited.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Old School Baptist Conference of Maine will be held, the Lord willing, with the Old School Baptist Church in North Berwick, York Co., Maine, commencing on Friday, August 31st, 1894, and continuing three days.

We shall gladly welcome all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and especially brethren in the ministry who feel it in their hearts to visit us. Those who come will be met at the North Berwick R. R. depot on Thursday before the time appointed for our yearly conference.

FRED. W. KEENE.

THE Maine Association will meet, the Lord willing, at Bowdoinham, Maine, Sept. 7th, 1894, and continue three days.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited, especially ministering brethren who attend the Maine Conference. We propose to call for the ordination of Deacon Zachens M. Beal. All who visit us will be cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE Indian Creek Association will convene with the Dry Fork of Twin Church, near West Manchester, Preble Co., Ohio, beginning on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren and sisters coming from the east will take the Little Miami R. R. at Xenia, by way of Dayton, for Brown's Station. Those coming from the west will take the Little Miami R. R. at Richmond, Ind., to Manchester. Those coming from the south will take the C. J. & M. R. R. at Circinnati to Manchester. Those coming from the north by way of Greenville will take the C. J. & M. R. R. to Manchester, where they will be met and conveyed from the two named stations to the meeting and to places of entertainment.

We extend a hearty welcome to all the brethren and sisters, and especially the brethren in the ministry do we hope to meet with us.

JOHN A. HOWELL.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SON, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

THIS work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits, of distinguished men, views of our principle cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$.05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON
SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,
Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send
A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

ALL APOTHECARIES sell that true and tried strength ening and Worm Medicine, Dr. D. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge. If a child is weak and wanting in appetite, a finer tonic and appetizer cannot be given it; while, if worms be present, their removal by the Vermifuge is safely effected.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1894.

NO. 34.

POETRY.

PRISONER OF HOPE.

DEDICATED TO MISS MARY PARKER.

You were longing for the freedom
Of an open sick-room door;
May I join you in the cadence
Which your troubled spirit bore?
For my soul is in a prison,
And I cannot soar away
From this dark and loathsome dungeon
To the light of open day.

You were sighing for the sweetness
Of the emerald-verdured spring,
And to ease your burdened spirit
See and hear the free birds sing;
But to me the trees look gloomy—
Only moss upon my walls,
And the music of the songsters
Echoes but my freedom-calls.

Into cobwebs of the spider
Seems transformed each ray of light,
Flitting through each narrow window,
Chilling like the dews of night;
Friendship's tears all seem forgotten,
Loving hearts no balm can bring,
Earthly treasures fleet as shadows,
Only caught while perishing.

Off my fellow-pris'ners 'round me
In their idle sports engage;
And I shudder at my laughter,
Which is soon transformed to rage.
O this vile heart! how it haunts me!
How I raise my earnest calls
Only to be liberated
From these damp and chilling walls.

Do not chide me for the burden
Which this weary bondage brings,
Nor the solace of the sadness
Which my soul in sorrow sings:
Though I own the righteous judgment
That hath bound me to my state,
I will murmur songs of sorrow
While in hopeful trust I wait.

I believe what God appointeth
Worketh everlasting good,
And though prison-bound I'll trust him
Till his ways are understood;
For I feel, in all my fetters
(When by faith I view the blood Jesus shed for my redemption),
Wondrous fellowship with God.

I am waiting for the Master
To unbolt these prison doors,
And my hope is growing brighter
As his promise 'round me pours;
Thankful that his love eternal
Thus hath shown itself to me,
Giving faith to love and trust him
Till from sin I shall be free.

O such love no mortal knoweth!
(Only heirs of heavenly thrones);
Though in prison-bars I languish,
Loved in Christ, whom heaven owns!
And his blood hath bought my freedom,
Though a rebel I am bound;
Now I linger, only waiting
Till my passport date is found.

"Hard to wait?" Yes, for my spirit
Longs to leave these hollow walls,
Whence new dangers oft affright me,
And some new temptation fal's.
May the Master, if he willeth,
But resign me to his trust,
And afford his holy presence
To revive me from this dust.

Wrapt in more than seraph's freedom,
Thence my free-born soul shall rise;
Join in full, ecstatic transport
The melodious surprise.
Songs of praise shall know no ceasing,
And their chords shall never break;
While expansive in their rapture,
All the strains of love shall wake.

I would scan the prospect over;
I would roam at large and view
All the landscape of the future,
With its scenes forever new.
I would fain rehearse the rapture,
I would join the choral band,
Even here in prison visions,
Just before the border land.

I would cheer the hours of waiting
With a faith-enchanted sight
Of the radiance of that morning
Just beyond the last dark night,
That shall settle o'er my senses
To intensify the ray
Of the brightest Sun of glory
In the endless realms of day.

A PRISONER OF HOPE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PETER THE APOSTLE.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—If there ever have been any bright spots in my life they have come when I thought at least that the Lord was fulfilling this passage to me, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna."—Rev. ii. 17. Did you ever awake to consciousness and find yourself in the dull routine and empty babble of this present world, with a memory that, for a little time at least, you had taveled in refreshing places, "Whence sound and sight had fled away, And all was sinless, breathing day?" If so, you knew there could be a joy which no earthly joy could tempt you to part with, one moment of which contained more than a thousand years; yet just as you reached out to clasp it your eager fingers only parted the heavy veil of time, where the iron furnace sent up its flame and curled in smoky vapors around your feet. Just such an experience I had over these words, opening the Bible and reading in the first chapter of John, "Thou art Simon, the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone." I had not any deeper desire than the ever present feeling of something wanting, an oasis in the desert, a rock in a weary land, an anchor while the waves tossed round; but just as noiselessly, as unexpectedly, as light floods some dark spot on which the eyes have vacantly fallen, and brings every minutiae into perfect detail, did I see meanings in this sentence that I had never before seen. A storehouse was opened, and I could sup on every table. How little I am able to hand out! yet what little I can, I would like to share, not as a teacher, but as a comforted pilgrim.

Are any as lonely as I?
Are any as weary at heart?
Forget for a moment to sigh,
Forget for a moment to start,
And find in each earnest of life in thy soul
God's covenant rainbow, his pledge of the whole."

As my soul-pictures of the series of truths clustering around this address of Jesus to Simon not only differ but are opposite to anything I have ever read or heard, let me frame the usual teaching in a few sentences. It is commonly held that the name Petros, or stone, bestowed on this disciple, was significant of his human, changeable, insignificant character, as compared with the Rock, Christ Jesus; that as a stone may be detached and roll about, so the failures of this disciple were in this name foreshadowed. Not so, however, did it appear to me in the glow of that unexpected morning in the night.

My first picture is the dawn of a great and continuous kingdom of light, where light and life abundantly are to awake, spring forth, grow and sing in every form. In this kingdom there is but one temple of truth, Jesus Christ himself; but the unfolding of this truth is figured forth in countless words, which bring to our spirits lovely natural images, as suggestive of their heavenly substance. It is this true paradise of delights, and the sharers therein, that the Jewish Messiah, or anointed Son of God, is gazing into, contrasted with the death sentence, just though it was, that shadowed all the natural holy land, and cut down even Moses when his eye was not dim nor his natural vigor abated. So as Andrew brings Simon his brother to the hope of Israel, Jesus beholds and bestows upon the wondering fisherman the new name, which was significant, not of his frail and sinful fleshly mind, but of the glorious position in the church on earth, which with all its complement of human sorrows and holy triumphs had been mapped out for this foremost apostle. In the book of Revelation this first picture is presented as no words of mine can do it. There, in the twenty-first chapter, we behold the holy Jerusalem coming down from heaven. In its twelve foundations are the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb; and to this honorable certainty Peter had been appointed, in the infinite wisdom and purpose of God, while he had no higher thought than that of fishing on the shores of Galilee. Thou art a foundation, said Jesus; and truly Peter was. But the spiritual lustre shining round this title was bought by the rending of all Simon's earth-born dreams of human success.

My next picture carries me back to Ezekiel, third chapter, especially the ninth verse, "As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead. Fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house." This adamant and fearless character of Ezekiel, a special gift for a special purpose, is clearly indicated in the name Peter. Adamant was a stone supposed to be impenetrable; and as the whole plan of salvation was on the principle that man is saved, not according to the course of his natural and depraved will, but by the love and power of a higher mind, so the messages of that salvation find in him more or less of opposition; hence the necessity that those who proclaim such unpalatable truth be furnished with a grace that neither fears nor favors in an injurious sense the subjects of sin, but for their good reproves, rebukes and entreats with all long-suffering.

Close on this picture rises the oft expounded verses in Matthew xvi. 13-21, which again does not appear to me as I have been taught it. Here we find Peter with the disciples receiving a lesson concerning the gospel kingdom or church; and the first indication of the prominent part Peter was to play in it is now put in verbal form. In giving Simon the name Stone only character had been recognized; but now his position is revealed. Our Lord's first words amount to an inquiry meeting as to the knowledge the disciples possessed of himself as the head of the new dispensation. Neither character nor place could suffice without an illuminated understanding that the great and living subject of their testimony stood before them, not as messenger nor prophet, but as the substantive sun of all the shadows that had gone before. The reply of Peter, who already voiced the thought of the embryo church, which was taught by one Father, shows how clear and unwavering this witness was to be, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." In response to this comes the Savior's "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Or, in other words, As thou hast by the revelation of the Father acknowledged me as the Christ, and thus the anointed Head and Savior of the body, so I by the same spirit of revelation tell thee that thou art a living witness, on whose unmovable testimony, as on a rock, my visible church shall be built.

Much pains has been taken to prove that when Jesus said, "this rock," he meant himself, and not Peter. I do not see it so, nor does the construction of the sentence warrant it. There was no jealousy between the servant and his Master. As the risen and triumphant Head he was not to remain on earth, and his visible glory to the world set in darkness and blood; so as a witness-bearer to the resurrection Peter was to become the undaunted spokesman of his fellow-witnesses. To separate the testimony from the man who bore it, is to make it a spirit without a body; therefore I hold that Peter was the honored rock of the early church, who all, as living stones, were built up a spiritual house, on the chief corner-stone, disallowed by the Jewish builders, but by these his servants acknowledged as the elect and precious one. But what will become of Peter, you say, if he is really put into so honorable a position as this? Well, this living stone of the living rock was shortly made to look to that Rock from whence he was hewn in a way he little expected. The same Jesus who said to him before all the disciples, "Upon this rock will I build my church," said also to him shortly after, "Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice."

We need not be much exercised concerning those whom the Lord has chosen to fill important places. There shall never be lacking a thorn in the flesh to buffet them, lest they should be exalted above measure.

The quiet streams that slip along,
Steal through the sunshine and the song;
Only the torrent, capped with foam,
Down craggy clefts must find its home.

The scene now before us is quite a different one; for this disciple must be experimentally taught that he is yet by nature Simon, the son of Jona, of whom Jesus should pathetically inquire three times, "Lovest thou me?" The circumstances of Peter's denial of Christ leave no doubt in my mind that it is a part in the chain of spiritual object lessons he was to receive, and as vitally connected with his forefront position in the kingdom of heaven as the two former. It was now "Simon Peter;" in other words, the sinner saved. But he must learn that his petra or rocky character was as wholly dependent on its divine bestower as the reservoir on the stream that fills it.

Turn to Luke xxii., from the 24th verse, and you will see the increasing foreshadows of the coming spiritual kingdom which was shortly to be set up, with the important and unique office of apostleship, which could never be repeated or delegated by them to any other. Consider the tendency of their natural hearts to be elated, and then see how fittingly by the purpose of God is Simon again brought into view, while as if his very thoughts concerning those promised thrones were set in the light of God's countenance. Jesus says to him, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." This temptation and denial was one of the descending steps of that throne on which Peter was to stand in the midst of the fiery darts of the adversary, and from thence proclaim to all his erring brethren till now, that the only power which kept him from being sifted out of the kingdom, like the morsel of chaff he was by nature, was the inclosing prayer of Jesus himself. He whose petition was made effectual by his perfect obedience. "I pray for them, I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me out of the world."

There is yet one other lift of the curtain to which I will turn before looking upon the kingdom itself. The last verse of the first chapter of John's gospel sets before the guileless Nathaniel the central object of this kingdom of faith, in the words, "Hereafter ye shall see heaven open [by that faith], and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." While this event was prefigured by Jacob's ladder, and its literal application partly dovetails into Christ's ascension from the tomb amidst the shining as well as earth-born witnesses who beheld it, its substance was and is that all true testimony to the churches by those messengers whom God maketh like unto a flame of fire, is concerning the great High Priest of our profession, the man Christ Jesus. This Lamb of God lays hold on heaven with his kingly hands, and plants his bleeding feet on earth, and in him alone dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. This was the kingdom and this the King which Peter and the other apostles were to inaugurate in the power of the Holy Ghost, and in every case, save one, seal their testimony with their blood.

"Then Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice and said unto them," &c.—Acts ii. 14. The scene of which this sentence tells us is one, probably, whose glory we seldom review, and but little appreciate. When we read of the Shekinah cloud of the ancient temple, because it appeals to our natural powers of imagination we are lost in awe. But here we have a feeble, insignificant and hated band of men, standing up in the midst of their enemies, filled with the Holy Ghost, bearing their unflinching testimony, in every known language of the time and place, to the wonderful fulfillment of Scripture prophecy in the crucifixion and resurrection of the Jewish holy One. Here Jesus is set before us in all his glorious character and office. Here the gates of the Jewish gospel church are raised by Peter first, with his fellow-apostles; and here the lovely company of the redeemed praise God, and eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart. When farther on in the fifth chapter the gates of hell attempt to mar its pristine purity by the introduction of the traitors, Ananias and Sapphira, that same Holy Spirit of discernment becomes a key of power in the hands of Peter, and the seal of death excludes these two, and puts a wall of fire around the little camp, that it may for a time flourish undisturbed by its insidious foes. Thus already Peter's position begins to be unveiled; and in him and his experience, as in a glass, we see the experience and office of the apostles set forth. The laying down of the foundation truths of the new covenant; the setting aside of Moses' earthly house; the destruction of the kingdom of death; the resurrection of the kingdom of life; to all this the prophets had borne witness; and in response, in the closing up days of Jewish national glory, these present prophets and witness-bearers were enabled also, by veritable and visible signs and wonders, to prove themselves the substance, and Christ the life. This opening and setting up of the heavenly kingdom was not to cease with the Jewish fold, but by the same chosen and honored standard-bearers the door of the Gentile flock was also to be unlocked. In his memorable prayer for his church, Jesus shortly before his death declared, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring." In the tenth chapter of Acts we have the wonderful vision of Cornelius, the Roman Centurion, followed by the correspondent one instructing Peter, resulting in the gathering of the first Gentile assembly as such; Peter's second great sermon, or testimony, not only to Jesus and his work for Israel, but to the truth so lately made known to himself, that God was no respecter of persons, but that in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him. To this his hitherto unthought of opening again of the spiritual gates of the spiritual kingdom, the Holy Ghost bore the same testimony, by falling on them which heard the word, even as it had before done on the day of Pentecost; and it was to this wonderful granting of repentance to the Gentiles that Peter refers in his first epistle to them, first chapter and tenth verse, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace which should come unto you."

Thus I have faintly glanced on the prominent Scripture pictures of this great apostle's prominent position as a visible head of the little band left on earth to preach, testify to, and write out their Master's life and purpose during his short stay in the world; all which testimony was ratified by the miraculous confirming power of the Spirit, and for that part is still attested by spiritual miracles to this present time. Perhaps we hardly realize how this apostle's career is woven into Scripture. I have already counted twenty-nine scenes in which he is the point around which experimental truth gathers; yet singularly enough he was not one of the two who desired through their mother the highest points of honor in the kingdom. These were James and John. Contrariwise we find him praying, "Depart from me, O Lord, for I am a sinful man."

Pardon this broken meditation; and if you print it, may some wavering ones be comforted.

MRS. J. STREET.

BRANTFORD, Ont., July 13, 1894.

PUTNAM, Texas, May 11, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I have had some thoughts of late on Galatians v. 17: "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." In this we see that the child of God cannot do the things that he would. If we cannot do the things that we would, what do we? Evidently the things that we would not; as the apostle says, "For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do." "For that which I do, I allow not." Then, if it be so with the apostle, we cannot expect better of the brethren. The same apostle said that in his flesh there dwelt no good thing. Then good cannot come out from where it does not dwell. But the vexing and perplexing question is, What are the evils that we are subject to, and to what extent are we subject to them? Let me refer you to Gal. v. 19-21. Here we find the works of the flesh. These are evils that know no bounds, except when restrained by law. Which of these should we be the most careful to avoid? We at once decide that we must leave off such acts as would bring us in contact with the civil law or the criminal law. So, if we are taken in adultery, it is not the act that makes us an adulterer, but the act makes manifest what we are. So I understand it is with all the catalogue of evils that the flesh is subject to. These are so inseparably connected that either may run to that extent that it will embody all the rest. Then, if we cannot do the things that we would, what is our hope? Must we do the things we would not, as did Paul? But, blessed thought, "If ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law." The Spirit produces different fruit, which is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Love to the brethren leads us from strife, and enables us to look over their faults and forgive their wrongs. Joy, borne by the Spirit, is always the result of love. These will always bring peace; and peace is followed by long-suffering, which cannot be present in confusion. Then we become gentle toward our erring brother, and our acts toward him accomplish good, because we are led by the Spirit. Then, seeing the result, works or fruit, we have before us the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, which is faith. Having this evidence in mind, we have a feeling of meekness, with which we cannot run to excess in anything; so the fruit, temperance, is produced. So we see that these exist, one because of another, and neither can exist unless the Spirit brings them forth. Is it not a grand thought that Christ promised to pray the Father that he would send the Comforter, which brings forth such precious fruit? As we cannot obtain one of these without all the rest, and none of them can be obtained except as produced in us by the Spirit, can anyone think of anything that would cause him to voluntarily labor for a thing that he did not love? So love is the grand moving cause. Not that we loved him, but that he loved us, and gave himself for us. We know that love begets love; but it must be made manifest before its image is seen in us. So when God sheds abroad his love in our hearts, seeing his love manifest we love him, because he first loved us. So the fruit of the Spirit being manifest, while under this frame of mind we are not under the law; we have nothing to fear; for perfect love casteth out all fear, and we are ready to say with the apostle, "If God be for us, who can be against us? He that loves us will care for us. He that has all power in heaven and earth can protect me. He that doeth whatsoever his soul desireth, will not destroy me. So we are dependent on the Spirit for all these good fruits. Having one, we have all the rest. When one is absent, all are absent. Then, in the absence of all these, what have we to make us desire to be obedient? We have present in the flesh adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, &c. Against all these there is law; so when guilty of any of these we are condemned by the law that governs it. Therefore it is no wonder we are often in sorrow on account of our sins and vanities. But again, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope." By his great creative power God created man a subject of vanity, and by his Spirit's power he subjects the same in hope. When we know that he works all things after the counsel of his own will, we can then see that there is wise counsel on record, which says, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee; the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain." So when David purposed an evil, he thought he would perform the act and get it covered so that no man would ever see it; and when he failed, his wrath was manifest; but it only served to praise God, while David was punished for his sin. While we would call David an adulterer and a murderer, we see that there was a grand purpose accomplished in it; and of Uriah's wife was born to David his son Solomon, who was to build a house for the Lord. We sometimes say that we are creatures subject to circumstances; but when we look back to Uriah we at once conclude that he was not governed by the circumstances that we in a similar place would have been subject to; so he must have been a subject of God's purpose. By his acts sin was uncovered; and not only by that, but the prophet told David where he had committed a sin which he himself said deserved death.

Dearly beloved brethren, may we all be led by the Spirit, that we may not be under the law that condemns to death.

Yours in great affliction,
W. B. JOHNSON.

KELLY'S CORNERS, N. Y., Aug. 13, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Having to write you on business, I will also say that in this dark hour of Idealism, while Gog and Magog are going forth to battle against the great day of God Almighty, as they vainly say, to win the victory and take heaven by storm, and escape hell by a hair's breadth, it is a matter of great consolation to my soul that Zion can tell the messengers of the nations that the Lord hath founded her, and it is still safe for her to dwell alone and not be reckoned among them. I also believe that the fire which surrounds the armies they gather together is still coming down from heaven in the form of gospel truth, destroying many of their bright prospects. The devil, who has deceived them, with the false prophet, is already surrounded with the fire, and in that wonderful lake must eventually reach the finale, and Zion will triumph in the triumph of her glorious Lord, who, as the Captain of her salvation, will bring her off conqueror, and more than conqueror; because he has loved her, and given himself for her. How timid and fearful the dear sheep and lambs of the fold of Jesus are when the wolves in sheep's clothing appear in their midst with great swelling words of vanity, deceiving and being deceived; and they would, if it were possible, deceive the very elect, the chosen witnesses for the truth's sake. Thus appears the fulfillment of the pouring out of the sixth vial by the angels having the seven last plagues, in which is filled up the wrath of God; while the great and marvelous sign in heaven is revealed, and the saints stand on a sea of glass mingled with fire, with their harps, and sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. All the opposition to truth, whether in the world or in the professed church, bearing not the seal of Jesus' triumph over death, shall be destroyed. The saints in all ages must pass through the crucial test, to give their God all the glory; and as they suffer together with their Lord, they also have an entrance into the joys of their Lord; for they are glorified together with him, as they have been quickened and raised up from the dominion and power of the just and holy law which they had transgressed. Nothing can be laid to their charge, because God himself has justified them. "Let the inhabitants of the Rock sing; let them shout from the top of the mountains."

A strong city have we: salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Truly God is good to Israel.

Yesterday it was my privilege to lead a dear sister into the watery grave, in obedience to the Savior's command. She had given satisfactory evidence of being dead to the law by the body of Christ. This is the sixth in our little association since our last session, one having been baptized by brother Keene, and five by the unworthy writer of this inferior article; for I see nothing in what I write or say as I would have it. I have such a proud, deceitful heart, and a wretched, wandering mind. But I always do, or desire to do, the best I can. Is it not therefore just as the Lord would have it? I think so; and the poorest will only be made worse by patching or excuses. I had no intention of writing a dozen lines when I commenced; but here I am. I will say, brethren editors, do with this as you please, and you will not displease me.

The time of our association will soon come. We truly hope our ministering brethren from abroad will remember us, and come and preach for us.

Affectionately your brother,
J. D. HUBBELL.

P. S.—I will inclose a short letter from a young sister, which speaks for itself. If you think proper, give it a place in the SIGNS. It was not intended for publication, but I believe it to contain the language of a heaven-born soul.

J. D. H.

ELDER J. D. HUBBELL—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I have thought that I would write a few of my thoughts, as I feel myself to be a poor, unworthy child of God, and can do nothing without the support of God's loving hand. He is all I care for; he is my comfort; he can comfort the broken-hearted, and without him I am but a sink of sin. I believe that every child of God has trials about themselves; but when grace reigns in their poor hearts it does away with all that feeling. The more God chastens his people and brings them down to his feet, the more they love his holy name. I do believe that it is my feeling, that it is good for me to know I am a poor sinner, and to feel the need of my Savior, and that I have been taught these things of God, not of myself. When I get cast down, and do not know what to do, all I can say is, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." And I sometimes feel that he raises my poor soul up, and appears as my comfort and support, to tell that his loving-kindness is all we need here. This is my assurance. None can undo what the Lord does, or change his purpose. He is God, and there is none else. His name is precious to all that believe he is a just God.

This is from a poor, unworthy child, if one at all.

GEORGIA VANSTEENBURG.

HURRICANE BRANCH, Tenn., Jan. 23, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I have just returned home from a ten day's visit among the churches of the Powell's Valley Association. The brethren and sisters seemed to be glad to hear the grace of God declared, which saves poor sinners without any creature works. I have just finished reading your editorial in the SIGNS of Jan 10th, 1894, on the atonement; and if I am not deceived I fully concur with what you have set forth; so it is not for the purpose of controverting what you have written that I attempt to write on the same subject, and let you and the readers of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES know what I believe as touching the atonement, if you see fit to publish what I write. But, dear brethren, I feel that I am a poor, insignificant creature to attempt to illucidate such a grand subject; yet if I can only say one word to the honor and glory of God and the good of his poor and afflicted children, my writing will not be in vain. I am one that believes in personal, eternal and unconditional election, and special atonement. Yes, I believe that Jesus Christ on the Roman cross made a full, complete and ample atonement for all the sins of all his people, past, present and to come. "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." The reason I believe in personal election is that it was persons that Paul was writing to when he said, "According as he hath chosen us;" having direct reference to himself and those he was writing to; and he was writing to the saints at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus. The reason

(Continued on page 269.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 22, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

EDITORIAL MATTER.

UNTIL the Lord shall make plain to us what course to pursue in regard to procuring a regular editorial article for each number, we feel that we can devote the space under the "Editorial Head" to no more profitable and interesting use than the republishing of selections from the articles of our dear father, the original editor and founder of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Since the first and second volumes of the book of "Editorials" were published we have received hundreds of requests to produce the third and sufficient other volumes to compile his whole writings up to the time of his discharge from his labors in the Master's vineyard. This we have not been able to do on account of the heavy expense of publishing them in book form. There are but very few of our present readers that have ever seen the original articles, and those who have read them we do not think will object to again seeing them in print. Publishing these editorials need not in the least interfere with original articles; and as it has not been the pleasure of God to bestow upon us the gift to expound the Scriptures, we are not able to fill the editorial space with expositions on portions of the word from our own pen, although we do humbly trust that we know the truth when we read or hear it proclaimed.

The withdrawal of brother William's editorial articles has been so sudden and unexpected that we are not prepared to announce what course will be pursued in regard to "editorials," as they are called, until the Lord in his providence may more fully show us what course to pursue. In selecting and preparing the general matter for the paper we still have the able assistance of our dear brother and pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, who of late years has done nearly all of this work; and therefore we feel confident in assuring our brethren, the Lord being our helper in the future as he has been in the past, that they need have no apprehensions of the tone or character of the SIGNS deteriorating or softening in its defense of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

We do not expect to copy all the editorials in their order as they appeared in the early volumes of the paper, as many of them were written in answer to communications, which would also have to be republished in order to have them properly understood. Others were written in regard to subjects of a temporal character, and would not be appropriate at the present time. We intend to make the selections in the order as to date in which they formerly appeared. The date-line of each article will show when and where the original was written.

THE TEMPLE OF GOD.

"If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—1 Cor. iii. 17.

These fearful words were spoken in admonition to the branch of the church of God recognized as the very temple of which the apostle speaks; and if applicable to the church at Corinth, is it not also to every branch of the church of God throughout all time? Both temples, the first and the second, were typical, and are in the New Testament used as being figurative of Christ, as that antitypical temple in which all the fullness of the Godhead and the complete fullness of all his church meet, and where God is worshiped in spirit and in truth. But the admonition of our text does not allude to the temple as directly figurative of Christ; because Christ, as the true temple, cannot be defiled. His church is also compared to a temple, in several instances in the New Testament; and in the present case the apostle leaves no room for doubting that he used the term to signify that temple which the saints are, namely, the church of the living God, the ground and pillar of the truth. Into this temple God collects all of his chosen, redeemed, quickened and justified people; and in this temple he meets with them, and communes with them from his mercy seat, and from between the cherubim. His train, or elect, fills this temple, and his presence makes the place of his feet glorious.

Holiness becometh this house of the Lord forever; for it is a holy temple in the Lord, and not to be defiled with impunity. Let us inquire, 1st. In what respects is the temple or church susceptible of defilement?

2d. By whom?

3d. In what sense shall they be destroyed?

First. The church cannot be defiled, in a legal sense; for by one offering Christ has established her perfection forever. She is redeemed from the dominion as well as from the curse of the law; and where there is no law there consequently can be no transgression. Hence the apostle triumphantly demanded, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" Her justification by the blood and righteousness of Christ cannot be tarnished, sullied or defaced. Heaven has graciously provided against such a catastrophe, and the blood of Christ has cleansed her from all sin and guilt, so that God will behold no spot or blemish in her. Yet, notwithstanding the immutability of that righteousness which God has put upon her, there is a sense in which she is susceptible of defilement; not in her Head, but in the deportment of her members, as we shall endeavor to show.

In regard to doctrine, every departure from the doctrine of Christ as set forth by the apostles is a defilement of the beauty of the church in her militant state. Contrast the appearance of the church in her primitive purity of doctrine with those professed branches of the church which have departed from the faith and given heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, and we shall see that Ichabod is written upon the deserters of the gospel simplicity, for the former glory has departed. If this view of the subject be correct, he that would introduce into the church of God any doctrine that is not clearly authorized by the authority of Christ, and warranted by the New Testament, is guilty of defiling the temple of God. As no human tool could touch the altar which God commanded to be built in the wilderness without polluting it, neither can the slightest touch of human improvement be applied to the doctrine of God our Savior without defilement to the church. "But though we," said an inspired apostle, "or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

In regard to the order of the house of God, the church or temple becomes defiled by us when we lay aside the laws of Christ and substitute in their stead such expedients as may seem good in our eyes. As nothing can appear more beautiful in the order of the church than a strict adherence to the divine rule, nothing can obscure her real glory more than a departure from that rule. The admonition of our text should warn us against all corruptions of, or innovations upon, the rules of order laid down by Christ and his apostles in the New Testament.

The general deportment of those who stand connected as members of the church of God, their walk and conversation in the church and before the world, has much to do with either adorning the doctrine of God our Savior, or defiling the temple of God. And it is evidently in reference to this that the admonition of our text was written, and upon this point more especially we felt impressed to offer a few remarks. The apostle alludes to the divisions in the Corinthian church arising from preferences expressed by the members for Paul, and Apollos, and others, as indicating a carnal state, calculated to defile; and also of an inclination to the wisdom of this world, by which members are liable to deceive themselves. This he shows to be inadmissible, because it is foolishness with God; and what God does not approve must have a defiling tendency. In the fifth chapter he speaks of corruptions of a more flagrant nature, such as fornication, covetousness, extortion, idolatry, railery, drunkenness, &c., which some that are called brethren may be guilty of; and he shows that to retain such in church fellowship, or to give them any countenance, even so much as to eat with them, is to defile the temple of God. And, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, he, with his apostolic authority, commands that when they be come together they shall deliver such to Satan, for the destruction of the flesh. From the solemn admonitions given, it appears that it is not enough that Christians shall themselves walk circumspectly, as individuals, while they wink at the disorderly deportment of those with whom they may stand ostensibly connected as brothers, or fellow-members of the temple or church of God. Our own skirts cannot be clear if we neglect the order of discipline which Christ by his apostles has established. It is worthy of notice that the apostles have classed covetousness and railing with fornication and drunkenness and heresy. To suffer any of these in the church is to defile the temple; and how awful is the responsibility! We can scarcely flatter ourselves that there are no defilements in regard to these things among the Old School Baptists. The church at Corinth was an Old School Baptist church, and she was infested with some whom Paul consigned to Satan. Indeed, we have thought much on this subject of late, and to us it seems that the severe trials through which our God is causing his people to pass at this time is, under his mighty hand, to sift them as wheat, and to purge and purify them as gold. In regard to the modern church and worldly societies, the Old School Baptists have taken a noble stand; they have generally come out boldly and clearly in defense of truth in regard to the doctrine of Christ; in this, however, there are exceptions. The temple is still soiled with the dirty doctrines of the "Two Seeds," so-called, of "Means," in quickening the dead, and a denial of the scriptural doctrine of the resurrection; still, as a general thing, there is a good degree of unanimity and harmony of sentiment among them.

Second. The purging process which our God has commenced will be carried on, and he will purge away all the filthiness of the daughters of Zion. But is it not equally as important that we should be circumspect in our walk and conduct, as that we should be sound in the doctrine of our faith? What will the one avail where the other cannot be found? Will a sound profession of doctrine atone for a licentious course of conduct, or a form of godliness in practice, where the faith of the gospel is denied? To admit either of these positions is to consent to a defiling of the Lord's temple. Yet, humiliating as it may be, have we not witnessed instances of defilement in both cases? Are there not those who are willing to be called Old School Baptists, and to walk very sanctimoniously in their external deportment, make long prayers, and go into the very tithing of mint, &c., if we will not question them too severely in regard to the doctrine of the gospel? And, on the other hand, are there not those who make a great noise about orthodoxy, can toe the mark, and subscribe to the most clear and emphatic declarations of truth for which the people of God have always been persecuted, and even preach these distinguishing and discriminating sentiments, with extravagant zeal, who, after all their bustle, show that the love of holiness has no governing influence over their walk and conversation? Are there none justly chargeable with covetousness, uncleanness, intemperance, extortion and railing, who talk much about the safety of the church, the covenant faithfulness of God, the sure mercies of David, and the certain preservation of all the saints in grace to eternal glory? By reason of such discrepance between profession and practice, the temple is and has been defiled, fellowship marred, peace interrupted, and the enemy led to charge that we hold that we should sin that grace may abound. The spirit of holiness in God's children will certainly cause them to feel and to mourn over the corruptions of their nature, and the defection which they find in all they do; but it can never lead them to indulge in sin because they are sure of the power of grace to deliver them. The very devil himself suggests such a course. If thou be the Son of God, or, if thou art a subject of grace, cast thyself down from the pinnacle; because God has promised to give his angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest thou dash thy foot, &c. Christians may be thus tempted, for their glorious Leader was thus tempted; but if the Spirit of Christ be in them, it will direct the same course that Christ pursued when he in like manner was tempted.

If in searching Jerusalem with lighted candles, these spots in our feasts of charity are found, what is the course pointed out for us in the "law and the testimony?" Shall we offset these abominations by saying that we are ourselves poor, imperfect creatures? Or shall we say in our practice, what we deny in our theory, that a sound and orthodox profession of faith is sufficient, without purity of life and deportment? Or shall we, as Old School Baptists, say that we have at great sacrifice taken our stand on the old apostolic doctrine, withdrawn our fellowship from the New School, protested against the new religious inventions of antichrist, and now we will not be as particular about practice as we have been in regard to doctrine? Brethren, can we take such ground, and not defile the temple?

"If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy." This is a fearful declaration, and it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Third. But how shall they be destroyed? We do not feel warranted to believe that they are to be annihilated, or that God's children are to cease to be his children; but the instruction intended may be understood by the many examples which now stare us in the face. Take, for example, those churches which once stood on the old apostolic platform in doctrine and order; we see them defiled with all the new religious inventions of the age, and as churches of Christ they are destroyed. Having departed from the doctrine and order, they can no longer be recognized as churches or temples of the Lord; and in many cases they have, like their type, become dens of thieves, places for merchandise, for changing of money, and stock jobbing in religious speculations. The same is true in regard to individuals who have departed from either the faith or order of the gospel. Examples are not few of those who have imbibed the popular heresies of the age; and, so far as relates to their connection with the temple or church of God, they are destroyed, have become "castaways," or, like the salt that has lost its savor, "good for nothing but to be cast out [of the fellowship of the people of God], and trampled under foot of men."

Others again who strenuously oppose all the new religious inventions of the times, zealously contend for a form of sound doctrine, but by looseness of deportment, licentiousness of their practice, carnal indulgence of the flesh, &c., are delivered up to Satan for the accomplishment of this destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.—1 Cor. v. 5.

It is indeed a comfortable reflection to the saints that all the trials to which the church of God is exposed are working for her good and his glory, and even the defiling of the temple shall be overruled by his mighty hand to the accomplishment of good. As when, in the vision of the prophet Ezekiel, the men with slaughter weapons were commanded to "Slay utterly old and young, both maids and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men, which were before the house. And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain."—Ezek. ix. 6, 7. Even so will God purge away the corruption of doctrine and practice from his spiritual sanctuary. He will cause the sinners in Zion to be afraid, and fearfulness to surprise the hypocrites. The exhibition of gospel doctrine shall disconcert all such as love not the truth, while the discipline of the kingdom shall search out such as possess not the love of holiness. If God has suffered heretics to infest his temple, it is that they may be exposed, detected and expelled after they have sufficiently tried the patience of his children; and if any have gained admittance by consenting to the truth while they love sin, they shall be made manifest in due time, and perhaps by the indulgence of their unhallowed propensities, and fall under the condemnation of the laws of Christ.

May the Lord grant us all that grace we need as Old School Baptists, and enable us to walk worthy of the high vocation wherewith we are called; and while we refuse to countenance the new, fashionable and humanly devised religious operations of new schoolism, let us see that we act consistently, by withdrawing ourselves also from every brother that walks disorderly. It can avail us nothing, either in promoting the honor of our Lord or in contributing to the peace of the saints, that we have withdrawn our fellowship from the new order, if we retain in our embrace and fellowship those who by their general walk show that they love the gratification of the flesh more than the course of holiness marked out by the Head of the church.

We are aware, dear brethren, that many of the weak and trembling lambs of the flock may feel ready to write bitter things against themselves, and ready to inquire, "Lord, is it I? Am I not one of those defilers whose end is destruction?" But such as feel the plague of their own nature, who groan being burdened, who sigh and mourn over their short coming, and for the abominations that are committed in Israel, are not the characters denounced. Weak, tried, tempted, harassed, perplexed and tempest-tossed as they may be, God has good things in store for them. The love of God, and consequently the love of holiness, dwells in them. They shall not be ashamed nor confounded in a world without end. God's promise and grace secures them. We have not designed to be personal in our allusions; but if there be any who find themselves portrayed, let them not be deceived; God will not be mocked.

We close our remarks on this subject with the words of admonition used by the apostle, Heb. xii. 12-19, "Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed. Follow peace with all, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled; lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright."

NEW VERNON, N. Y., April 1, 1847.

(Continued from page 267.)

I believe in eternal election is because the choice was made in Christ before the foundation of the world. And the reason I believe it is unconditional is because the Scriptures nowhere teach that it is conditional; but the persons thus chosen were chosen in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love; and there is not an if nor condition in the arrangement. The reason I believe the atonement is special is because it was made for none but the election of grace, the members of Christ's body, or the church; for it is written, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." So Christ, the great Head of the church and Savior of the body, manifesting his Father's name unto his brethren, does not depend on ifs and buts, nor works to be performed by them. I believe the work of christian making is the work of Jesus Christ exclusively; yes, that Jesus makes saints of poor, lost sinners, prepares them for heaven, and takes them there. Christ, when he made the atonement, met the law and paid its utmost demand; and I understand that the law demanded the life of the transgressor. Jesus was the life of his body, the church; so he yielded it up. So as the poet says,

"When they, the members, sinned,
Their head involved stood;
And thus, to put away their sin,
Must shed his precious blood."

He was made to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. It is said that in him we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. I believe it was the members of his body, the church, in her depraved condition, that crucified Jesus, their elder Brother, in the person of those Jews and Gentiles; and we hear Jesus say, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Again, Jesus thanked his Father because he always heard him. So, brethren and sisters in Christ, it surely was the church while in her sins that crucified Jesus; and it was the church for whom he made the atonement; and it was the church for whom he prayed. When my sins and iniquities rise up before me, and I feel and realize the exceeding sinfulness of sin, I think, Surely my sins wounded my Savior the deepest. It was great and wonderful love that caused him to bear them in his own body on the tree. Yes, dear little ones, he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed."

Brethren, as my sheet is full I must stop. Do with the above as you think best, and believe me yours in christian love and fellowship, in hope of blessed immortality through the atonement that Jesus made on the Roman cross.

JAMES C. WALTON.

P. S.—As brother L. C. Lay, of Bethpage, Mo., and sister Hattie J. Walton, of Philadelphia, Pa., both requested me to write for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if this letter is published the dear brother and sister will take it as an expression of my christian love and fellowship, and write me when they have a mind to. I am always glad to get a letter from any of the Old School Baptist faith; for they are the people that know the joyful sound of salvation by grace, and grace alone.

J. C. W.

GAYLORD, Kan., Feb. 10, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR SIR:—I will try to write you a few lines, in my stammering way, and tell you some of my troubles. I have thought for some time that I would like to write of some of my travels. It has not been long since I had thoughts of a future state. I had compared myself with the people around me, and thought I was as good as they were. But when I came to the conclusion that I was so good, in one day I fell, and it seemed as though I was a wretch undone, without the love of the dear Lord and Savior. It seemed as though all things I had ever done came up before me. I tried to pray, but could find no relief, and became afraid to try any more. I had always hated the Old School Baptist doctrine; but when I would hear them talk it seemed to me that they felt just as I did. I tried to read the Bible, but could get no good from it. Finally I was impressed with the thought that I must kill myself. Yet it seemed that I could not bear the thought, as I had just taken a companion. It seemed there was no one like me; but as I traveled on I felt a little better for a while. It sometimes seemed that I would lose my mind. One day it seemed to me that I was about to die; yet I did not feel any pain. About the time I thought I was to go, the thought came to me that I ought to pray. I wanted to do so, but it seemed that I could not, when these words came into my mind, "O Lord, if it is thy will, I would ask thee to take away my burden of sin." As soon as I uttered these words it seemed as though I heard these words, "Cheer up, for I am with you." It seemed to me I was the happiest man that ever had lived, for a day or so. One night a great storm arose, which awakened me; but I thought the dear Lord would take care of me and I again fell asleep. Finally an evil spirit said to me that I would be blown away; and I forgot my dear Lord, who directs all things, and we went into the cave. As soon as I got there it seemed as though the dear Lord spoke to me and said, "As soon as danger comes you will forsake me." It then seemed that I was worse than I was before. Ever since that time I have been doubting a great deal; but at times I feel that I am the happiest mortal that ever lived. I find that when I would do good, evil is present with me. The good that I would, I do not. "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" It seems that when the good Spirit withdraws from me I go astray so far. I find that the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Except we become as a little child we cannot enter into the kingdom of God. We read, "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." But Paul says, "It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy." So the will must come from God, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will. Jesus says, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." I have a hope that I would not exchange for worlds like this. Paul says, "Hope that is seen is not hope; but if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."

Please excuse me for taking so much of your time.

Yours in hope,

CHARLES AYDELOTT.

GAYLORD, Kan., Feb. 6, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—If such a sinner as I feel myself to be may thus address you. The SIGNS OF THE TIMES comes to me regularly, and is read with much interest. As far as I am able to judge, it gives forth no uncertain sound, but teaches, as do also the Scriptures, that salvation is of the Lord. A Methodist minister told the people at our school-house, a week ago last Sunday, "Man can do a greater work than God has ever done—he can save his own soul." I have been trying to live a better life, to cease to do evil, for about thirty years, and yet I find that when I would do good, evil is present with me. That which I would, I do not; and that which I would not, that I do. It seems to me that the brethren and sisters, many of them at least, have such bright evidence of a work of grace in the heart; that the night was very dark with them, and when the Sun of righteousness did arise they knew it so well. But if he has ever shined in my heart it was like the sun rising on a foggy, cloudy morning; and after it has arisen, it is visible only at intervals, if at all. I often feel like going to the church and telling them to erase my name from the church-book; but then the question arises, Where would I go, or what would I do? for it is my chief pleasure to meet with them in trying to worship the Lord of heaven and earth. So, if they will bear with me, I will try to stay with them, ever praying that God may keep me by his almighty power, and that I may never offend one of his little ones. It is our lot to hear very little preaching. The last we had here was at our regular meeting on the first Sunday in May last. Our meeting time is the first Sunday in each month, beginning with January, in Smith County, and February in Osborne County, twenty miles south of here, and so on alternately. We would be glad to have any of the brethren visit us, especially ministering brethren.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

W. S. AYDELOTT.

WADE'S MILL, Ky.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Another year has passed, and I am still spared, a monument of mercy. O that I may live to the praise of the Lord for all his mercy to me, a poor, sinful creature. I am so poor and sinful that I have not one good thing to boast of. I once thought I should grow better as I grew older; but instead of that I see the depravity of my heart, and feel that sin is mixed with all I do. I feel that if my salvation depended on anything good that I must do, I would be forever lost. But O what a mercy that poor and helpless sinners can approach a most holy God. How great that grace, how rich and full, that can save a rebellious sinner like me, a wanderer from the God I hope I love. I know I do want to love him, but sometimes fear the love of God cannot dwell in such a heart as mine, so cold and lifeless, so ignorant of spiritual things, that it looks like I have only the shadow for the substance. But I feel that my only hope is in Jesus, the sinner's friend. I have nowhere else to go. O what love he had for the sinner, to come in the flesh and die for them. He was indeed a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. I desire to know more and more of the Lord, and want my affections set on things above, and not on this poor, sinful world. But this wretched heart of mine will still backslide; and when I think of the deceit treasured there, I often exclaim with the apostle, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" I know who is able; but will he deliver such a poor, destitute, old sinner as I? Sometimes when I read of the precious promises he has left on record for the little ones, I hope I am included, though so unbelieving and doubtful I have often been during these long years, now nearly eighty-four. I love to read the editorials, and the communications from the dear brethren and sisters. Although strangers in the flesh, I feel that we are not so in the spirit. I am blessed more than I deserve; for I can still read our family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES (and its columns are filled with rich food for the hungry poor of the flock), the hymn-book and the Bible. I can still go to the meetings and hear our beloved Elder Eubanks preach. I have had the pleasure of reading the SIGNS OF THE TIMES almost from the first issue, and a great comfort it has been to me when cast down in gloom and darkness. My age admonishes me that my time must be short on earth. I hope the good Lord may long spare you to comfort the little ones of his kingdom.

Your unworthy sister, if one at all,
POLLY DUERSON.

WATERLOO, Iowa, May 16, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—For the benefit of your readers who have read the experience of sister Annie Smith, I will give an account of our May meeting. She and her companion came one hundred and fifty miles to meet with us. We were also favored with a visit from Elder Garrett Murphy, who is an able defender of the truth, who preached for us on Saturday of Jesus, our only Savior, who alone is able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him; after which the door of the church being open, sister Smith offered herself to the church, and was received as a candidate for baptism. Elders Murphy and Blake spoke in the evening with great liberty, and on Sunday morning Elder Murphy took the glorious command of our Savior as a foundation to speak from, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The subject was handled in an able manner. Then all repaired to the water, where the dear sister was buried in the liquid grave, in imitation of her dear Savior, by Elder Blake. We truly never saw a more delightful sight, for her countenance beamed with holy joy, and she came from the water singing.

The little church truly had a feast of fat things, of wine on the lees well refined; so refined that there was no dross of any kind to mar its peace. All was love, joy and harmony. The Spirit of our Master seemed to pervade the whole, and we feel a desire to thank the great Head of the church for once more being permitted to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, with the banner of his love peace, fully waving over us; and we felt to say,

"One day amid the place
Where my dear Lord has been,
Is sweeter than ten thousand days
In pleasure and in sin."

Our desire is that Zion may be still prospered, that those who are lingering around the fold may be given strength to go forward in the path of duty, trusting in Israel's God for strength.

Inclosed please find two dollars to pay for the SIGNS for Elder Thomas

Blake, as he has requested me to write; and he desired to send in his subscription money.

Your sister in hope of life eternal beyond this vale of tears,

SARAH A. GARRETT.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., July 12, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—With fear and trembling, but with much love, I attempt to write a few lines to the household of faith. I have derived so much comfort and satisfaction from your able communications that I often desire to add my testimony that the Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and I am glad he knows them that trust him. His cause is precious to my soul; yes, Jerusalem is my chief joy. He knows my weakness, and that I feel the very least of all. In my many lonely hours since the death of my kind husband, I cling to the merciful Father, and am made to say, "Not my will, but thine be done." He knows what is for my good, and guides my steps. He is merciful to my unrighteousness, and my sins and iniquities he will remember no more. I am glad we have such a precious Savior, and often ask myself,

"Could the Savior live and die
For such a worthless worm as I?"

"Yes, he is full of grace;
He never will permit
A soul that fain would see his face
To perish at his feet."

For so many years I was a wanderer, restless and wretched, but longing to be in the fold of Christ. The tempter would tell me, "You have no right to be numbered among the blood-washed throng. They are too good for you to live with."

"Like one alone I seem to be,
O is there any one like me?"

My husband was a faithful member of the church, and loved its service, and always wanted to attend the meetings. He often urged me to go with him, and sometimes I would go, and would love the preaching, and would feel how pleasant it was for the brethren and sisters to worship together in love. Then I would have rejoiced to have been numbered with them. At other times I would let trifles or poor excuses keep me from the house of God. Then my heart would ache, and be burdened with sin, so I would feel like crying, O wretched man that I am! who will deliver me? Thus tossed to and fro, often doubting, and sometimes hoping the blessed Savior had died for even poor me, I was finally "Gathered into the fold,

With believers enrolled,
With believers to live and to die."

When I talked to the church at Crawfordsville I felt like I failed entirely in saying anything of importance, and they surely took me in on my sighs and tears. I fear I have a name to live while I am yet dead. Words will not express the comfort I had in following the dear Master in the ordinance of baptism. What a privilege for such a worm! Dear followers of the blessed Master, write on for our family paper, and comfort many a lonely saint. I know of several that are too afflicted to go from home, yet the Lord remembers them and feeds them in this way. I am thinking of sister Mary Parker. How the dear Lord speaks comfort to us all through her patient, endearing words. May the Lord strengthen her in her declining years.

I remain ever one of the poor of the flock,

SARAH A. LONG.

LAURENS, Iowa, June 2, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Allow me through the SIGNS to express my Christian love and friendship to the dear brethren and sisters who have written to me in time of need; for I received many kind and sympathizing letters. It seems that my cry went up to God. I will give all the praise to him, and bless his holy name; for he has brought me in a way I knew not. He guided and instructed me, and kept me as the apple of his eye. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." He says, "I am the good Shepherd." "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." I feel this day to say, as did Peter, "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." I was invited to go home to my friends, and the Lord made me willing to go. He says, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." O how willingly we go when we realize his power and kindness. On the second Saturday and Sunday in May I went to the Otter Creek Church, Waterloo, Iowa, and was received, and baptized by Elder Blake. It seemed that when I heard the sound of Elder Murphy's voice I could not refrain from going. I feared that the church would think I had crept in unawares, and had deceived them; but, dear friends, to whom else could I go? I well knew that I could not deceive God. He says, "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord." O how glad I was to meet with those dear people whom I loved, but whom I had not before seen. How their faces seemed to shine with love and gladness toward God. If I could, I would often meet with the dear brethren and sisters, to hear them talk of that blessed Lord and Savior; but I am satisfied with my lot. It seems since I was baptized like all my troubles are gone; yet I am not satisfied with myself.

I write this as a token of love to the dear brethren and sisters who wrote to me in a time of need. O how I did long to see them face to face. O that you might know the joy and gladness I received from your kind letters. I would read them and weep, and thank God; for he put you in remembrance of me. I got a precious letter from a dear brother in North Dakota, by the name of Butler. I hope the Lord will send him here, for I believe we have need of him here, as I believe we have a remnant here yet. My love to all the church the world around. Pray for your unworthy sister, if one at all,

ANNIE E. SMITH.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

INFORMATION WANTED.

ANY information concerning one George Edwin Coleman Clement, who left home at Baldwin City, Kansas, in 1867, will be gladly received by his mother, Lucy Ann Paff Coleman, Lexington, Oklahoma Territory.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEPARTED this life on April 29th, 1894, our much beloved sister, Martha Chandler. She passed away very suddenly of heart failure. She had been a consistent member of the Old School Baptists for more than twenty years, her membership being with the Calvary Church at the time of her departure, which is a newly constituted church in the western portion of Chilton Co., Ala. Sister Chandler was very much esteemed by all who knew her; but while we mourn her departure from this life, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain. She remained unmarried, keeping house for one of her brothers. Her father was a minister of the gospel. Both father and mother have passed from this life years ago. Elder S. S. Chandler was a regular reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES in his day, and all the family hold it as their preference.

I write you this obituary notice for publication by request of the family. Her age is not given, but I suppose she was between forty and fifty years of age.

J. R. MISSILDINE.

KINCHEON, Ala.

BROTHER Barnett Hughes was born Jan. 17th, 1845, and died May 16th, 1894, aged 49 years, 3 months and 28 days.

He was a great sufferer for five or six years, but bore it with much patience, and often remarked that he was submissive to God's will. He professed a hope in Christ in the year 1869, and united with the Predestinarian Baptist Church called North Fork, on Saturday before the first Sunday in July, 1869, and was baptized on Sunday by Elder John Pierce. For the last two months of his life's journey he was deranged in mind, and was taken to the Insane Asylum at Anna, Ill. He was a good church member, and always filled his seat when not providentially hindered. His house was always a home for his brethren and sisters, which was within a mile of the church-house. His first wife was a daughter of brother Edward and sister Elisia Woods. His surviving widow was a daughter of brother Robert McGill.

Brother Hughes was laid away in the beautiful cemetery near Anna, Ill. I would say to the bereaved widow, sister Polly Hughes, Weep not as those who have no hope, for your loss and sorrow is his eternal gain. To the two surviving sons I would say, Live as becometh obedient sons, walk in the paths your father traveled, and the end will be comfort, joy and peace. The North Fork Church has lost one of her most worthy members. If our trust is centred in the Lord Jesus Christ, as we trust and believe his was, we shall meet him where there will be no more parting, but all will be joy, peace and happiness forever.

J. J. L. H.

BROUGHTON, Ill.

CHURCH NOTICES.

PLEASE give notice through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that the hour of our meeting at Otego, N. Y., is changed from 10:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., commencing with the first Sunday in September, 1894.

B. BUNDY.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Rock Springs Church, Lancaster Co., Pa., commencing on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming from Philadelphia will leave the Broad Street depot on Friday, by the P., W. & B. R. R., at 1:51 p. m., for Perryville. Those coming from Baltimore will leave the Union Depot about 2:00 p. m., on the same road, for Perryville. Change cars for Conowingo, where all will be met.

S. L. GREGG, Clerk.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Siloam Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon and Washington will be held with the Oak Creek Church, about ten miles northeast of Roseburg, Douglas Co., Oregon, commencing on Friday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1894, and continuing the two following days.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming by railroad will be met at Roseburg and conveyed to the place of meeting.

N. J. SHANKS, Clerk.

THE second annual session of the Peace Valley Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will be held with the Friendship Church, Acton, Hood Co., Texas, commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren coming by rail will be met with conveyance at Cresson, on the Ft. Worth & Rio Grande R. R., and at Granbury on the same road. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren of our faith and order.

PRESTON STAGGS, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Regular Baptists will meet with the Sandy Creek Church, at Hope, in La Salle Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1894.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the north will stop at Tonica, and those from the south will stop at Lostant. The household of faith and all lovers of the truth are invited.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will meet with the Second Church of Roxbury, Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. on Wednesday, September 5th, 1894, and continuing two days.

Our meeting-house is about two miles from Roxbury village, and six miles from Kelly's Corners, at which places the visiting friends will be cared for. We cordially invite those interested in the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord to come and partake with us, and a special invitation to those who labor in word and doctrine.

The Tuesday evening train on the Ulster & Delaware R. R. will be met at Kelly's Corners and Roxbury.

J. D. HUBBELL.

THE sixty-third meeting of the Spoon River Association of Regular Primitive Baptists will meet, if the Lord will, on the premises of E. D. Varnes, one mile and a half south of Cramer, on the Iowa Central R. R., Peoria Co., Ill., on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Teams will be at Cramer on Thursday evening and Friday morning. Brethren will likely be met also at Farmington, on the Buda & Rushville Branch of the C., B. & Q. R. R., on Thursday evening. If not met there, change immediately for Cramer. Brother Varnes lives five miles southeast of Farmington. The saints are invited.

I. N. VANMETER, Mod.

THE Old School Baptist Conference of Maine will be held, the Lord willing, with the Old School Baptist Church in North Berwick, York Co., Maine, commencing on Friday, August 31st, 1894, and continuing three days.

We shall gladly welcome all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and especially brethren in the ministry who feel it in their hearts to visit us. Those who come will be met at the North Berwick R. R. depot on Thursday before the time appointed for our yearly conference.

FRED. W. KEENE.

THE Maine Association will meet, the Lord willing, at Bowdoinham, Maine, Sept. 7th, 1894, and continue three days.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited, especially ministering brethren who attend the Maine Conference. We propose to call for the ordination of Deacon Zachus M. Beal. All who visit us will be cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

THE Indian Creek Association will convene with the Dry Fork of Twin Church, near West Manchester, Preble Co., Ohio, beginning on Friday before the first Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren and sisters coming from the east will take the Little Miami R. R. at Xenia, by way of Dayton, for Brown's Station. Those coming from the west will take the Little Miami R. R. at Richmond, Ind., to Manchester. Those coming from the south will take the C. J. & M. R. R. at Cincinnati to Manchester. Those coming from the north by way of Greenville will take the C. J. & M. R. R. to Manchester, where they will be met and conveyed from the two named stations to the meeting and to places of entertainment.

We extend a hearty welcome to all the brethren and sisters, and especially the brethren in the ministry do we hope to meet with us.

JOHN A. HOWELL.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SON, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

THIS work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principle cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz:—

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1894.

NO. 35.

SELECTED.

THE HIGHWAY CAST UP.

BY ELDER RUSSELL, OF ENGLAND.

"Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."—Isaiah lxii. 10.

The Lord has been pleased to employ a large variety of similitudes and to speak in highly figurative language in his holy word, and that to convey his mind unto his church and people; but in order to understand the spiritual import of figurative language we need what the apostle Paul is pleased to call an enlightened understanding, and what our Lord did for his disciples when journeying to Emmaus, when it is said, "Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures." Previous to that time the disciples had a very little insight into God's holy word; but when Jesus opened their understanding they could see the force of prophecy concerning Christ himself. When our Lord was here upon earth he likewise spoke parabolically and figuratively in many instances.

The similitudes employed in our text are those of gates, highway, stones in that highway, and of a standard. All this is figurative language. The Lord Jesus Christ spoke of two principal highways; one was the highway to destruction, and the other was the highway to eternal life. At the entrance of both these principal highways were gates; one was the wide gate, the other the strait or narrow gate. The gate at the entrance of the broad way was a wide one, and admitted many through it; and so the Lord said concerning it, "Wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." As it was the broad way then, and many travelers therein, so it is to this present time; still a wide gate, and still a broad way, and still many travelers therein. "Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." It was few then, it is few now; and notwithstanding the enlightenment of this nineteenth century there is still "a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen: the lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion passed by it." "The unclean shall not pass over it." "No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there."

"The wayfaring men [that is, those who are in it], though fools, shall not err therein." Whatever views you may have of yourselves as pertaining to your foolishness, or whatever views I might have of myself pertaining to my ignorance, this one thing we are grounded and settled in: if ever we get to heaven it must be by the narrow path, and Jesus Christ is the way; so that

"There's not a man that's born of God
But readily will say,
If ever my poor soul be saved
'Tis Christ must be the way."

Well, as there are these two principal ways and gates at the entrances, so there are many other gates spoken of in God's holy word which the saints of God are brought to be acquainted with. Hence there are those which are called the "gates of death;" and the sweet psalmist of Israel had an experience from his God relative to these gates, knowing what he had been delivered from, and how the mercy of God had been surrounding him. He offers this prayer of present distress, "Have mercy upon me, O Lord: consider my trouble which I suffer of them that hate me, thou that liftest me up from the gates of death." He had been down there, and the hand of God had reached him. The power of Jehovah had been displayed in lifting him up therefrom, and he could look back and ask for mercy from that same God. What did he want it particularly for? "That I may show forth all thy praise [not a part of it] in the gates of the daughter of Zion: I will rejoice in thy salvation." That is what he wanted mercy for, that God might again be glorified in his deliverance; that he might go and tell God's people; that he might go forth in the gates of the daughter of Zion, and tell what God had done in delivering him, and show forth his praise thereby.

In that chapter I read in your hearing (Rev. xxi.) this evening John was privileged to have a sight of the holy city; and he saw that that city had twelve gates, and in them the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. He saw also that that city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. Now, in the order of time, the twelve patriarchs had their existence about fifteen hundred years before the apostles' day, and yet their names are placed in the gates; whereas the apostles, who came so many years after, had their names reckoned in the foundations. Now, shall I ask the question, Why was that? If I answer it, I shall answer it like this: Those twelve tribes of Israel were typical of the whole church of the living God in their variety of exercises, experiences, conflicts, temptations, difficulties, triumphs and victories, through which they were brought by the power of their God; and further, they were typical of the various constitutions, temperaments and dispensations which are to be found in the family of Jehovah; so that there are some who display at times the spirit of anger, and others display the spirit of jealousy, and others the spirit of pride, and others display personal ambition. But though there are so many different temperaments in the church militant, there are no variations existing when they come into the church triumphant; for each tribe had their twelve thousand sealed and placed in equality on the gates of Zion. They had Moses as their leader and commander. Moses went to them in Egypt; Moses goes before them in the Red Sea; Moses is their leader and commander through the wilderness; Moses is at the head of them till they come to Jordan. But let me tell you this: God never designed to build up his church upon the law, or that Moses should be the foundation of that church; hence Moses leads them on till they come to Jordan, where Joshua is appointed to take Moses' place, beautifully typifying the Lord Jesus Christ, the anti-type of the law. Joshua leads them on to the promised land, set forth in a spiritual way and manner. Looking at this, and applying it in an experimental way and manner, we find how the law of Moses becomes our school-master (to bring us) unto Christ. Moses brought the people to Joshua; and then Moses had to leave them, and Joshua had to take command of them. Therefore God never designed to build up his church and people upon the law, but upon the faith of the everlasting gospel was his church to be built up; hence the apostles had their names written in the foundations. But let us go a little farther. These twelve gates denoted, in the first place, equality. They were all alike; exactly of the same dimensions, the same lengths and the same breadths, thus showing equality. In the next place it denoted uniformity. These gates were all alike, and made of the same material; for every gate was of one pearl, and thus uniformity and equality were readily observable. There is to be seen, further, that perfection of glory reigns there, inasmuch as the number twelve is the symbol of perfection with our God. Thus there were twelve tribes and twelve apostles: in the gates the names of the twelve tribes, and in the foundations the names of the twelve apostles. Again, we see in it the beauty of access from all quarters. "They shall come," says God, "from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God." Thus the city lieth four-square, with gates on each side, showing that there is admission from the four corners of the earth; and God shall have all his people there, and there shall not be one absent when God makes up his last account. No absent sons, no vacant thrones, shall be known when Christ appears.

With these remarks we will draw a little nearer to our text. I shall not attempt to divide this subject; but if the Lord shall be pleased to help we shall deal with it in the order in which it stands.

The whole of our subject, we may say, takes the form of a divine commission. There is a certain person or persons here spoken to by Jehovah himself; and that person or persons is or are commanded to be active. The context points very clearly to the person or persons here referred to; hence, in the sixth verse, Jehovah speaks like this, "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give him no rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." Now, God here claims himself to be the divine author of placing the watchmen upon the walls of Zion; and I will venture to go so far as this, that no person who is not divinely authorized by God to preach the gospel will preach that word with that authority as one who is authorized to preach it. The duty of watchmen in olden times was this, to stand on the walls of the city, and watch for the approach of enemies; and if they saw in the distance the approach of the enemy it was their duty to sound the alarm, and that alarm had not to be misleading or uncertain. To this the apostle Paul referred when he said, "If the trumpet [that is, the watchman's trumpet] give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?" They would not understand what was the matter if the trumpet gave an uncertain sound; but if it gave a certain sound they would understand that they must prepare for the conflict. God, so to speak, calls aloud to his watchmen, just as though he had said, "I have something else for you to do as well as to stand upon the walls and sound the note of alarm." You know there is this possibility, that a person may stand in a pulpit, and he may preach the truth as it is in Jesus, strictly in accordance with the word of God, so that the keenest critic should not be able to detect an error in his testimony; yet though he speak so clearly that the keenest critic could not discover an error in his testimony, his outward conduct in life might be very inconsistent, so that his preaching the truth, although ever so clear, would lose its effect upon the hearers. Therefore what we understand by the commission in the language of our text, "Go through, go through the gates," is as if Jehovah had said, "Be an example to the people; you profess to preach the gospel, or sound the sound of alarm. Do not be always upon the walls, but come down and go through the gates. Let the people in the city know the sort of character you are, and what kind of life you spend every day. Let them see something of the effects of that which you preach in your everyday life, just as if God had said it." Is not this important? I should say it is of the greatest importance; and the great importance of it is conveyed in the repetition of the thing. God did not design it to be passed by unnoticed; but God says, "Go through, go through." I will put it like this. Suppose that in Swindon, where I am well known and preach occasionally (and I hope I preach there in the same strain as I preach here, and that the same truths are delivered there as those I deliver here, and the same glorious gospel as I hope I deliver here, and the same Christ exalted as I hope and desire to exalt here), the congregation by whom I am known personally knew that I visited the public house occasionally, and spent my evenings with the company there, or if in my business transactions I tried to take advantage of my fellows by craftiness. They would say, "What is the use of taking notice of what that man says? What example is he to the people to whom he preaches?" Why, my preaching would lose all its influence, and be like the truth cast to the winds. But God says, "Go through, go through the gates." When he has anything important to impress upon the minds of his church and people he generally repeats the language like this to show its importance; and so we have in the fortieth chapter of Isaiah a passage like this, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." There we have the person commissioned; there we have the commission, and the people he was to go to; and there we have the blessed results of the blessing received—received double of the Lord's hand.

The first gate which we shall refer to will be that which is at the entrance of the narrow way, called the strait gate; and we hesitate not for one moment to set that gate as the gate of regeneration, or new birth. Whatever profession we might make in the Lord's name, and however high we might stand in the estimation of our fellow-creatures, if we have never passed through the gate of regeneration, nor had a new birth (spiritually speaking), we are no nearer heaven than when we were born; for we are still outside the narrow way until the strait gate is passed through. It is called in Scripture the passage from death unto life. For we "know [said John] that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." Our Lord insisted upon this very emphatically when he was here upon earth, and said in this wise, "Except a man be born again he cannot see [much less enter] the kingdom of God." "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." Here comes in the blessed work of the Holy Spirit: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." That person (man, woman or child) that is on the road to heaven through the strait gate, in the way to eternal life, such person will have to meet with conflicts, trials, oppositions, temptations and crosses in their journey, if they have passed that strait gate.

Let us look at another gate. There is the gate of faith; and when we deal with faith we must just draw the line of distinction between living faith and dead faith. I want you to judge upon this point, whether you have the living or dead faith. The dead faith is a negative faith; it is motionless; it performs no work; it has no hand to lay upon the head of Jesus, and so to confess sin there; it has no eye to see the beauty in his face; it has no mouth to taste that he is gracious; it has no ear to hear the sound of his voice; it has no mind to worship or serve him with delight and pleasure. Therefore, being dead, it is in every sense negative, as James said concerning it, "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

Now, what about the living faith? The living faith in Christ has a hand, and that hand is sometimes laid upon the head of the Lord Jesus Christ; and confession of sins is made out of the sinner's mouth to the Lord Jesus Christ. Hence Mr. Watts said,

"My faith would lay her hand
On that dear head of thine;
Whilst like a penitent I stand,
And there confess my sin."

As faith has received this hand, so likewise it has an eye, which beholds more beauty in the face of the Lord Jesus than in all the creatures of our God put together; hence he is viewed with the eye of faith by God's dear family as the chiefest among ten thousand, and altogether lovely. Then this faith has a mouth; and that mouth is favored at times to taste that the Lord is gracious. This living faith has also an ear, which hears sweet music in the name of Jesus, so that no other music is to be compared with it; as Mr. Watts says,

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear!
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear."

Moreover, faith has feet with which to walk in the ways of God; and a mind to serve God in the newness of life, and not in the oldness of the letter. "For whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Hence you see the beauty of having a living faith in Christ, and that as an active one, which goes out toward its author, Jesus Christ. "Looking," as the apostle Paul said, "unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." Do not think for one moment of knowing anything of the preciousness of him without faith. We have never seen him naturally. Do you think there is a possibility of having a real love to Christ without faith? It is utterly impossible. Therefore it is, "Whom having not seen, ye love." Having seen him, in a believing heart, "Ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory: receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." So you see what a living faith does for the children of God. Far, far better to have one grain of living faith, than to have this chapel full of faith that is dead. Combined with faith, there is hope and love, the apostle's sum-total. After speaking of a variety of things, he sets forth this as the total sum remaining. "Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

We will not dwell longer on this part of our subject, but will now notice the next sentence, "Prepare ye the way of the people." John the Baptist was called the forerunner of Christ, or one that prepared the way for him; and when he came to prepare the way for Christ he did it like this, "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." That is one way that he prepared for the Lord Jesus Christ; thus showing how Christ Jesus removed all difficulties and all obstructions in the way, and made an open, clear and plain path for the salvation of his church and people. By bringing down the mountains and exalting the valleys a level is made; by making the rough places plain and the crooked straight, a straight road is open, one that is pleasant to the feet; and this through what Jesus Christ has accomplished on behalf of his church and people. There was not a crook in the law through the weakness of the flesh but Jesus Christ made it straight; no rough places in the law but he made them smooth; not a mountain in that law but he has brought down, so to speak, and exalted his people from that valley of humiliation to the mountain of redeeming grace and dying love.

But there was another way that John prepared for the coming of Christ; that was, he came baptizing with water. But in preparing the way for Christ John never thought that a person would be saved upon the ground of being baptized; that was not how he prepared the way for Christ. I hope you have never had any one to preach for you from this pulpit that would teach that we are saved upon the ground of being baptized by water. I have never heard of a Particular Baptist preaching so, and I hope I never shall. John came in this way, preparing for Christ. "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance." Repentance there means amendment of life, reformation of conduct, separation from the world. That is what is meant by John's baptism by water unto repentance; but he further said, "There cometh one mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire: whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into his garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." See what a solemn disparity John saw between himself and Christ! He, as preparer of the way, was not worthy to bear the shoes of him who was to come. There is another point that I want to touch upon here. There was a multitude came to John who bore no fruits of repentance, no amendment of life, no separation from the world; and yet they desired to be baptized by John. What did he say? "O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." Now, what does that mean? It means this: we are not to say within ourselves, "We are the elect, we are of the seed of Abraham, and therefore may live as we like. It does not matter what our conduct in the world may be: if we are of the seed of Abraham, and of the elect, when we come to die we shall go to heaven upon the ground of that, and our conduct has nothing to do with it." He would not baptize them on that ground. That is Antinomianism to say thus to ourselves, "We have Abraham to be our father," or that "We are of the elect, and when we die shall go to heaven." I say, Away with such Antinomianism, and let us contend for an amendment of life and separation from the world. John said, "The ax is laid unto the root of the trees [whether he be elect or of the seed of Abraham]: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." That is John's version of the matter. "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Now then, the gate of baptism was opened by the Lord Jesus Christ himself as the way into the church set before us, and he opened that gate of baptism previous to opening the gate of the Lord's supper; hence we contend, according to the Scripture order of our God, that baptism precedes going to the table to communion, if we follow in the footsteps of the Lord Jesus Christ and have him as our example. You know I should be condemned in my conscience if I preached to you after this order if I had not been baptized myself, and if I did not believe it right and consistent as the right way into the church militant here; but I do believe it, and believe that we are following the Lord Jesus Christ in a consistent way and manner by baptizing in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, and thus going through that gate into the church militant here below. "Prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."

We have not half-done with the verse which we read for our text this evening; but the time is gone, and therefore we will not proceed further with our subject. God command his blessing upon his own truth, and lead you into the solemn consideration of its force and reality; and, if it be his gracious will, may you be led to practice his word, for Christ's sake. Amen.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THOUGHTS ON PSALM CXLI.

NUMBER FOUR.

"INCLINE not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work iniquity: and let me not eat of their dainties."

But while the Spirit of Christ in his people causes them to desire to be kept from wicked works of every kind, yet it is evident that the wicked works expressly referred to in this prayer are works of religion. The religion of the world, of whatever variety, is based upon falsehood, and is built up in opposition to the word of God. All its works, therefore, are works of iniquity. There are no good works but the works of Jesus. In him alone was the Father well pleased, and his works only are acceptable unto God. It is he who works in his people; and so all the works of any man that are acceptable unto God are those which his Spirit works in them, and enables them to work out. As it is said in the song they sing, "Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us: for thou also hast wrought all our works in us."—Isa. xxvi. All who do works of religion, except as thus moved by the Spirit of Christ, are spoken of in the Scriptures as "workers of iniquity." They deny the truth and word and sovereignty of God by all their works, and ascribe to man a power and merit which the Lord declares he does not possess. From this denial of God's word by the father of lies in the garden came all the sin and wretchedness of the world; and from the days of Cain the spirit that prompts a denial of God is manifest as a spirit of utmost hatred and cruelty against those who have the faith by which Abel obtained from the Lord witness that he was righteous, and who depend alone upon that testimony from the Lord to them that he has imputed unto them righteousness without works, even "the righteousness which is by faith in Jesus Christ."

To say that the salvation of a sinner depends upon some work of righteousness that he can do, is to deny what God has said in the sentence pronounced upon him, that he shall surely die. It is also a denial of what the Savior has said, that the man who does not believe in him is already condemned; and of the apostle's declaration that "death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," and that all are "by nature children of wrath," and are dead in trespasses and in sins. It is a denial of the necessity of the death of Christ, and of the efficacy of that work in the salvation of his people; as also of the declaration of the angel that "he shall save his people from their sins," and of his own declaration that he had finished the work which was given him to do. Those who teach the necessity, or even the possibility, of any good works on the part of the sinner in order to salvation, not only deny the declarations of the word already referred to concerning the condemned state of the sinner by the just sentence of the law, and the effectual work of Jesus in giving his life a ransom for his people, but also all the plain declarations and careful arguments of the apostles to the same end, that salvation is of grace, and not of works. "Not of works, lest any man should boast." "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us." "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." All the works that are according to this false teaching are works of iniquity; and the false teachers are the workers of iniquity, who have no knowledge, and who eat up the Lord's people as they eat bread, and call not upon the Lord.—Psalm xiv. 4; liii. That doctrine has in it the elements of destruction for the Lord's people; for all who have seen themselves as sinners must be in despair if they believe that their salvation depends upon some merit on their part, however little, because they are well taught that no meritorious work is possible on the part of one already justly condemned as a transgressor. In this way the workers of iniquity eat up the Lord's people as they eat bread; they rejoice in teaching that doctrine which would destroy them if it were true. They are those of whom Job speaks as raising up against the righteous the ways of their destruction; for the false doctrine they teach is the way that leads down to death and destruction.

But this false teaching is what suits the carnal mind. The flesh of the Lord's people, in which, the apostle says, dwells no good thing, is full of pride, and desires the exaltation of self, and is pleased with the flatteries of this worldly religion. Everything that indicates some merit in ourselves is pleasant and gratifying to our carnal natures. What a lifting up of our deceitful hearts there is in the thought that we have done some great thing. How the flesh swells with pride and exaltation when we are persuaded that we have done something good and praiseworthy. One will probably appear at such a time doubly humble, and may deceive himself with the assurance that he is so, even while he is secretly gloating over his success, and feeding sweetly upon his wonderful work, and the superior talent it evinces, and the praise which it will bring him. This is eating his own flesh. These are the dainties of the workers of iniquity. They live upon their own flesh, while the flesh of Jesus is the only thing which the child of God can truly live upon. "He that eateth me shall live by me."

The Spirit of Christ in the flesh of his people is ever set against these desires of the flesh and of the mind, and its constant tendency is contrary to them; therefore this prayer, which is here set down in the inspired Scriptures, is felt wherever that Spirit is exercising one. They desire to be kept from these evil ways and works; and the more they know by a sad experience of the deceitfulness of their hearts, and of the wiles of the devil, and of the eagerness with which their carnal minds reach out after those dainties, the more carefully and humbly will they feel like crying unto God to keep them from that delusive doctrine, and from all its delusive ways and works, which exalt and feed the flesh with pride, but in which there is no exaltation of God, as there is no knowledge of him in those who teach that doctrine.

There are many who profess the truth, and who talk of the sovereignty of God, and who contend for the doctrine of salvation by grace, and who profess great humility, and yet who are manifest to the spiritual mind, and especially to the very hungry souls who are looking to them for food, as almost wholly given over to the dainties of the world. If they ever had a divine calling it is now so obscured as to be hardly manifest. They have seemed to lose the spirit, and to be engaged only with the letter. If a defense of doctrine is their line of things, it seems to have become a mere argument and debate for victory over the advocates of the opposite doctrine. Instead of a humble and earnest looking unto the Lord, and waiting upon him, for a portion that will feed his dear people and exalt his name, there is in us at such a time a feeling of confidence in the weapons we have at hand to overcome the opposer, and an anxiety to find that opposer, and to find a large congregation that shall hear the contest and be witness of our victory. Not much thinking of the Lord's hungry poor at such a time. Cannot we all remember (with shame and self-abasement) with what an exultant thrill we knew of some preachers of a conditional doctrine, and others who are opposed to us, being present, and how we entered into that contest against what we knew they believed with a consciousness of power to utterly discomfit them? We may try to persuade ourselves that we feel humble, and that the good of the Lord's people and the glory of his name are all we want; but the exultant expression of face, and the triumphant gleam of the eye, would show to others, and the throb of gratified pride should show to ourselves, that our own exaltation in the sight of men is more to us just then than anything else. Let our mind become confused and our utterance fail, and then why do we shrink and become ashamed! It is because we have been working in the sight of men, and seeking great things for ourselves, while the Lord says, "Seek them not." This secret

(Continued on page 277.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., AUGUST 29, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

MINISTERIAL QUALIFICATIONS.

BROTHER BEEBE:—In the 7th number of the SIGNS you have given your readers an excellent discourse on "The Temple of God," which to one who has but seldom an opportunity of hearing a gospel sermon, is as cold water to a thirsty soul; for the great part of the sermons preached in these degenerate times by the popular clergy are like wells or clouds without water, having no living fountains in them to refresh the thirsty soul. They are corrupt springs, &c.; and as "a parable is in the mouth of fools," so are the Scriptures in the hands of these popular preachers. As you have informed us in your last number of what materials the temple of God consists, will you be so good as to give us in your next number a discourse on the subject of the kind of material those should possess who are to administer to the wants and necessities of those composing the temple of God? For that purpose I would suggest to you the following text of Scripture; "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter i. 21.

Yours in the gospel,

LEBBEUS L. VAIL.

GOSHEN, March 29, 1847.

Volumes might be written in reply to the inquiry and suggestion of brother Vail without exhausting the subject; and perhaps a subject of more interest or vital importance to the church of God, or more eminently calculated to "disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon," could hardly be suggested. Taking the inquiry in connection with the passage of Scripture proposed, we understand our brother to inquire concerning those who administer to the church of God in word and doctrine; what kind of qualifications are requisite and indispensable for the work of the gospel ministry. There are many standards by which professors of Christianity make their decisions in reference to the question involved. The most general opinion seems to be that although the prophecy of olden time came not by the will of man, old things have passed away, and now the will, wealth and liberality of men are to be consulted. The will of "pious, talented young men" must be inclined to take "holy orders," and to submit to a course of mental training to "prepare themselves" for the work; the will of men must also be taxed to provide colleges and divinity schools, teachers and books, and other things, to enable these apprentices to master their trade; or, to speak more politely, to acquire the science of divinity. When young men are thus provided, and provided for "by the will of men," they are to be consecrated to God, without consulting his will, by ordination; and the will of men must decide where shall be the field of their labor, sphere of their operation and reward of their service. If the people have it not in their will to afford stronger pecuniary inducements than are presented to these young men from other callings, the word will not come to them; but if the will of man be inclined to offer the rank and pay of "Major of Dragoons," the will of the ardently pious ministers will chime in admirably, and the word (if not of God) of men will come unto the people by the will of man; for learned men will speak as they are moved by desire for honorable stations and good pay. Many, we doubt not, of this description, say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie, and are of the synagogue of Satan, and have no vital connection with the temple of the living God.

Our Lord is of one mind, and none can turn him; his ways are everlasting. A sense of his wisdom and immutability forbids us to think that his communications to his church or temple have any more dependence on the will of man now than formerly; and as the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, so neither does it in modern time come but by the will of God.

If we consult the New Testament, we find that the will of man had nothing more to do with designating the men or preparing them for the work than it had in the case of the prophets. John the Baptist was a man sent of God, and sanctified, consecrated, or set apart for the work whereunto God had appointed him, at a period quite too early for the co operation of men. In calling the twelve apostles, our Lord did not so much as ask them if they were willing to accept the commission, or whether old father Zebedee, whom some of them had to leave in the boat, could spare them; but he bade them follow him, and they followed him; he spake the word, and it stood fast; he commanded, and it was done. Of the seventy also it is written that he called unto him whomsoever he would; and he sent them wheresoever he would. And after the resurrection of Christ from the dead, when he informed his disciples that he was about to ascend up into heaven, instead of telling them to shift for themselves, that while he had been with them he had directed them, but now in his absence they must qualify themselves, and induce others to prepare themselves for the ministry, his last command to them was, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high" (Luke xxiv. 49); thus plainly indicating where the qualifications of his ministers should come from after his ascension to heaven; for as he had shown to them that all power in heaven was in his hands, consequently his ascension to heaven could be no impediment to his charge over his ministers; and lo, he is with them, (not in incarnation, but by his Spirit) alway, even unto the end of the world. They were not therefore to expect a successor to his government of them, for his dominion has no end. The calling and qualification of God's ministers are exclusively of him. Flesh and blood had not revealed these things to Peter; and when it pleased God, who separated Paul from his mother's womb, to reveal his Son in him, that he should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, straightway he conferred not with flesh and blood; neither did he go up to Jerusalem to them that were apostles before him. But we must notice some of the marks by which the church of God is authorized to know those whom God has called to the ministry; and,

First, as we have already shown, they will not enter the work by the will of man, but they will be manifestly called to it as was Aaron to the priesthood. In this they differ from all the ministers of antichrist. Not one of all the self-consecrated and humanly qualified ministers upon earth was ever called of God to the work of the gospel ministry.

Second. They shall be known to the people of God by the message which they bring. "If I, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel," &c., "let him be accursed." All that are called of God will preach the same gospel that the apostles preached eighteen hundred years ago; but this will not be the case with any whom God has not so called.

Third. Their ministry shall feed the flock of God, which he has purchased with his own blood; and their preaching shall be unto them that are called, Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God, and the saints shall receive it as the sincere milk of the word, and grow thereby.

Fourth. Their ministry shall be, as it has always been, unto the work-mongrel Jew, a stumbling block; and to the learned Greeks, the polished, erudite and sagacious religionists of the schools of this world, foolishness. There being no change either in human nature or in the gospel of Christ, the faithful preaching of the word will meet with the same violent opposition throughout all time that it encountered in the apostolic age.

Fifth. The ministers of Christ cannot preach when they please, and quit when they can make more money at the bar, or in some other vocation, raise a shout in the camp, and make revivals of religion when they may choose; but they are dependent on God; and when he withholds from them the life and power of the gospel, they cannot supply the deficiency.

In character and deportment they must possess the following indispensable traits; "A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house," &c. "Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover, he must have a good report of them which are without, lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil."—1 Tim. iii. 2-7; also Titus i. 6-9. Here we have sixteen indispensable requisites, ten of which are positive, and show what the minister of Christ must be; and six are negative, and show what he must not be. The church and the world may be supplied with ministers in abundance, from the schools of men, in whom these traits do not appear; but they are not the ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ; neither can the church receive them into the house of God, or bid them God speed, without consenting to a defilement of the temple of God.

In addition to the above, Paul enjoins (Titus i. 9) that they must hold fast the faithful word as they have been taught (for none possess the qualifications above described unless he has been taught of God), that they may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince gainsayers. The notion which some entertain that a man may hold sound doctrine while he entertains some unscriptural views, is not sustained by the apostle. A man could not be called sound, physically, with a broken tooth, or a foot out of joint, or an arm withered. Our fruit is not sound when specked with rottenness; neither is a man sound in the faith while he holds some errors; nor is that doctrine sound which mingles truth and falsehood, however great may be the proportion which the former may bear to the latter. The standard by which the soundness of doctrine is to be tested is the Scriptures, and they are always in perfect harmony with the teaching of the Holy Ghost in the experience of all the saints of God; for "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. On each of those things which the apostle says that the ministers of Jesus must be, and of those which he must not be, we might dwell at large, but our space is too limited. While God has called his ministers to speak, he has commanded his church to judge of the character of the preacher as a man, as a christian, and as a minister, and of the doctrine preached; for the saints shall judge angels, or ministers. There was a peculiar solemnity in the admonition which our Lord gave to his disciples on this subject. "Beware of men who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them." And the Holy Ghost through the apostle has given unusual emphasis to a like admonition. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy," &c.; and the New Testament abounds with solemn warning to the people of God, "Try the spirits;" for many antichrists are abroad in the world.

In subsequent numbers, we propose to notice more fully some of the qualifications for the gospel ministry marked by the apostle in the quotations in this article, from his epistles to Timothy and Titus; and may the Lord grant unto his people the spirit of discernment, that they may detect and rebuke such as may infest the ranks of the Lord's host, who bear not the marks of the high calling of God; and may the ministers of Jesus see and feel, that they may not, while preaching to others, themselves become castaways.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., May 1, 1847.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

IN number thirty-two will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 275.)

boasting cannot live in the sight of God; and well may we cry unto him to save us from the deceitful desires of our own hearts, and to keep us from the evil ways of men who work iniquity, and not to let us eat of their dainties.

In how many ways, in what attractive varieties, these dainties are presented to our fleshly appetites. The applause of others and the approbation of our own vain hearts is the gratification which these dainties promise, and which our carnal natures seek. Many things which in themselves are good and useful may become snares to the Lord's people, and especially to his ministering servants, through this constant intrusion of the self-seeking flesh into the sacred and holy business of the soul in spiritual things. A high order of intellect; a clear mind to see the truth and order of things; a special aptness to teach, and to arrange and present arguments in a convincing way; an uncommon power in speaking to hold the attention, enlighten and convince the judgment, and move the feelings of multitudes; a great amount of learning, extensive knowledge of books, and varied scientific attainments; all these things may be of value, each in its place and within the limits assigned it by the Lord, and yet may become most dangerous to our souls, and may greatly lessen our usefulness in the church, by being regarded with perverted judgment, and themselves perverted to the uses of the flesh, to supply us with those very dainties which the psalmist here prays that he may not eat.

Whenever any of these temporal advantages are regarded as essential to the good order, prosperity, peace and welfare of the church of God, and as of advantage to the Lord in carrying on his work, then they are looked upon with a wrong judgment; and one who should claim a special appointment from the Lord for any particular work on account of any such advantage, or that the Lord had prepared him for an especial work by furnishing him with some advantage of this kind, would thus be only turning things upside down. Such a claim cannot be supported by the Scriptures of truth; and whenever it has been made there has been a prominence given to the advantage, and an importance insisted upon for it, that showed the pride of the flesh in that advantage, notwithstanding all appearances of humility. But when the Lord controls the one who is thus endowed with eloquence, learning or intellectual power, he then shows (not merely says) that he counts it all but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord. He then shows that he has been crucified to the world, and the world to him; and he is made in true humility to speak and do whatever the Lord directs him to speak and do, without inviting attention to his superior qualifications for the work, but would be hidden behind the cross of Christ.

When the flesh is all corrupt, and all of the flesh, with all its thoughts and passions and emotions, lusts against the Spirit, and is contrary to the Spirit, how impossible it is for us to say, only as the Spirit enables us, "Let me not eat of their dainties."

The grosser kinds of food which the workers of iniquity relish would not easily tempt and deceive one who has ever tasted of heavenly food. One who has had any measure of the Spirit's teaching could hardly be persuaded that either his own eternal salvation or that of any other could depend upon any work that he could do; and there could be no gratification to him in the suggestion that he has been or may be instrumental in the work of salvation, or that he can be in any sense a helper of the Lord. There is too gross and palpable a falsehood in any such suggestion for him even to give it consideration. He revolts at such food. Even the natural mind of one who has been under the controlling power of the Spirit of truth appears to have acquired enough delicacy of taste and perception to reject such gross and abominable flatteries. But there are dainty meats, delicate flatteries, suggestions pleasing to the flesh, yet gilded with appearance of truth, with which the devil tempts living souls, and often lures them away from the living bread, which alone can nourish their souls and afford them true delight. What terrible experiences are caused in the exercised soul through the deceivings of the devil, and the constant efforts of the flesh to make us follow after its deceitful lusts, and feed upon its lying vanities. It is perhaps suggested to us that our gift is somewhat special, making us of rather unusual importance and value in the church. We would hate and spurn such a thought if it should be presented in its naked hideousness; but it comes in company with a suggestion of our great unworthiness, and our ignorance of divine things, and persuades us that we are truly meek and lowly in heart; and we admit the modest appearing, flattering little lie into our hearts, where it does great injury, wasting our strength, lessening our usefulness, and causing pain and anguish before God, until he by his grace expels it again for a season. There may be a vain gratification in the study of the Scriptures, and a fleshly pride in an extensive and critical knowledge of them. This is a good thing, and a duty, as well as a privilege, when one is able to study the inspired Scriptures; but how frequently the truly exercised soul is brought to the throne of grace, to lie low in the dust of humiliation, pleading to be delivered from this terrible pride and vanity of the flesh, and not be left to feed upon the dainties which the flesh loves. How bewildered the poor soul of the true servant of God will become as he sees and feels the liftings up of his deceitful heart in a vain and wicked pride in his gifts and attainments; and he is forced to cry mightily unto God to save him from this evil way of the wicked, from the pride of his own heart, which constantly clamors for the dainties of the workers of iniquity, and would quickly lead him to practice wicked works with them in order to obtain these dainties, if not withheld by the restraining grace of God.

The Lord knows how to turn and overturn in our behalf; how and when to weaken our strength in the way, that we may know him as our strength; how and when to abase us in our souls before him, and even openly before our brethren, and cover us with shame and confusion of face; how to make us feel the sentence of death in ourselves, and to find its effect upon all that we have, even upon our gifts and graces, and all the time things of our religion, so far as they are regarded in any way separate from Christ and the glory of God. He knows how and when and in what measure to bring just that kind of affliction which will hide pride from us, make our souls loathe dainty meat, and forbid that we shall glory save in the cross of Christ; and then how lovingly, how tenderly and how bountifully he ministers to us of the sweet provisions of his grace. Even our afflictions, our pains and anguish under the chastenings of his loving hand, become to our souls sweeter morsels than the richest dainties of kings are to them; and we can say,

"Boast not, ye sons of earth,
Nor look with scornful eyes;
Above your highest mirth
Our saddest hours we prize.
For though our cup seems filled with gall,
There's something secret sweetens all."

(To be continued.)

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 15, 1894.

OCTAVIA, Neb., July 15, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—Inclosed you will find a very interesting letter from brother Joseph Bruce, which you will please publish in our family parer the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if it will not crowd out more useful and interesting matter.

Yours fraternally,

J. T. SKINNER.

CHENEY, Neb., June 30, 1894.

J. T. SKINNER—DEAR BROTHER IN A PRECIOUS HOPE:—Yours of the 24th ult. was received to-day, and was read with much pleasure. It is a source of great comfort to me to hear from my brethren. I do feel that it is good for me to speak often one to another. Malachi says, "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name."—Mal. iii. 16. John says, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." This is a great mystery to the religious world, the oneness of sentiment, and the love and sweet fellowship of the children of God, or the church of the living God. They cannot solve it, because they are of the earth, earthy. They are only carnal, natural men and women, and nature cannot rise above its fountain. They look upon God as a creature, as being one that they can offend, and then appease his wrath by good works and good promises; that they can overbalance their evil deeds and the little sins they have committed, and promise God that if he will forgive their past sins they will never sin again. But how is it with the poor, tempest-tossed child of God, who knows he is a sinner, and that all his good works are as filthy rags? He cannot think one good thought, nor do one good deed, to merit the favor of God, and is made to cry out in the language of Paul, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" We have a glimmering hope that God for Christ's sake has pardoned our sins.

I want to talk a little about the reason of our hope. What reason have I for a hope in Christ as my Savior? Well, once upon a time, as I verily believe, it pleased God to show me the inbred corruptions of my sinful heart. All my sins rose up before me like mountains. I felt that I was the worst sinner upon earth. My burden of sin and guilt seemed like it would crush me to endless woe and misery. I tried to pray, but it seemed that my prayers fell to the ground. I went to the law for protection; but the law shows no mercy. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." So, death and destruction was all I could gain from the law. Often would I resort to some lonely, secret spot in the forest, both by day and night, to pour out my feeble cries to God for mercy. Sometimes when I would wander far off in the thick wood, where I thought no one could see or hear me, I would think I would pray aloud, that God would hear my prayer; but when I would get there a sudden fear and trembling would seize me, and I could not say a word. I would get up and go home as quickly as I could, without even trying to utter a prayer; but these words were continually flowing from my heart, "Lord, have mercy upon me, a sinner. Lord, save, or I perish." This was my awful condition for over two years. Sometimes my trouble would seem to abate for a time, and then it would come again with double force, if possible. One day while I was plowing this Scripture flashed through my mind, "Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance." My mind began to meditate upon it thus: If all nations are so small before God, what could one poor sinner do to merit his favor? Yes, dear brother, often I was made to feel that it was only of the mercy of God that the earth did not open and swallow me up. When the last hope of mercy was taken from me, and I felt that I could not live to see another day, I became reconciled to the justice of God in cutting me off. I could adopt the language of the poet, and say,

"And if my soul were sent to hell,
Thy righteous law approves it well."

I could then view him as the God of the whole earth, and that whatsoever he did was just and right. While in this agony of distress and mourning my burden of sin was removed, my mourning and sorrow was turned to praise and thanksgiving to God because of his mercy to me, a justly condemned sinner. I was made to look to Jesus as my Savior, and the plan of salvation was so plain to my mind, how that Jesus bore my sins in his own body on the cross, that I, sin-polluted as I was, might be made the righteousness of God in him. Yes, for that great love wherewith he loved me, God sent the Spirit of his Son into my heart, crying, Abba, Father. My poor heart was filled with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Then if I could have had the opportunity of talking to the church I felt that I could give them a good reason of my hope in Christ as my Savior. The command of Jesus was, "Go home to thy friends and tell them what great things the Lord hath done for thee." But it was not long until the tempter whispered in my ears, "You are deceived." I looked for my burden, but it was gone. I was made to doubt the reality of my hope in Christ as my Savior. O how I tried to get that burden back, so that I might know how it left, and be sure that my sins were forgiven. But, dear brother, it was all in vain. Thirty-six years have passed, with many doubts and fears; but that hope remains. Sometimes it seems almost extinct, and I am made to cry, Can it be possible that one who has ever tasted that the Lord is gracious, been made to rejoice in him as their Savior, can be so full of sin as I am? At other times my hope seems sufficient if I were called to die. One thing I am sure of, that is, what God doeth is just and right; and if I am ever saved it will be of his love and mercy, and not because of anything I have ever done or can do. I feel perfectly reconciled to his will, and my prayer is that he may enable me to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith he has called me; that I may not bring reproach upon his holy cause.

This, dear brother, is a short sketch of the reason of my hope in Christ as my Savior. Let it be ever so little, it is all I have.

Your unworthy brother, saved by grace, if saved at all,

JOSEPH BRUCE.

PARIS, Ark., Feb. 10, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—As I am now receiving the SIGNS OF THE TIMES regularly, sent to me by a precious brother, I thought I would try to express my appreciation of the able editorials and communications that fill each number of this old time and reliable periodical. In 1869 my mother presented me with several volumes of the SIGNS which she had tacked together. These proved to be precious jewels to me, and I have spent many hours in reading them. There has been some opposition here to the SIGNS, even among those claiming to be Primitive Baptists; but I will say that I never knew a man among us that raised war against the SIGNS but what he came to some bad end. This expression was once used by my beloved brother and yoke-fellow, C. W. Anderson, of Dutton, Ark., and by close observation I find it to be true. In the first year of my ministerial efforts an old Elder said to me, "You better not read that paper; it is a God-dishonoring, rotten sheet; it makes God the author of sin." He has been trying to live with a people, and yet hating the doctrine they teach. It seems to me that if I did not believe in the absolute sovereignty of the eternal God over all worlds, controlling every atom to the accomplishment of his own purpose, I surely would keep out of that sect that is everywhere spoken against, the Primitive Baptists. But it seems that there have been some all along the line who have been engaged in trying to soften the truth, by mixing a little sympathy with it, as though there were half-breeds, and they must have food accordingly. If you will watch them closely you will find that they do not teach that it takes a power equal to that by which the world was made to give divine life to a sinner; in fact, that man in a state of nature is not altogether destitute of divine life; that he is a kind of complex being; that a little of the divine nature was put in man in his makeup, and all that is necessary is to reform this divine part and make it pure and holy. O how I do admire the uncompromising spirit that is manifest in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. The writers are not afraid to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints; that God in eternity, in his wise counsel determined to create the world and the fullness thereof; and before man was formed of the dust of the ground, God gave to his Son a portion of Adam's posterity for a bride, comprehending in his wisdom the awful condition she would be plunged into by sin. He clothed his Son with authority to redeem and give eternal life (not reform) to as many as he had given him. This first man that God made was by no means a half-breed, but was altogether natural, and is of the earth, earthy. Hence when sin entered he became totally depraved.

Hence if one is manifest as elect according to the foreknowledge of God, he must be born again. He must be in possession of something that will save him, and that something is grace, divine life; and that life was in Christ before the world was. It was on account of the relationship that existed in the covenant before the world began that the eternal Son of God came to earth, taking on him not the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham. Angels and spirits needed no redemption, but Adam sinners did; therefore he must have their nature, that he might pay their debt. He satisfied the demands of the holy law of God. He said, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost. Let no presumptuous wretch undertake to add anything to what Christ has finished. Those who are justified before God have that love shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost that moved the Son of God to come from heaven to earth. Being freely justified by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, the just shall live by faith. What wonderful love is this, O my soul! "While we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." Yes, while we were enemies, children of wrath, strangers from the covenants of promise, being without God, and having no hope, in due time the glorious news was sent forth on the swift wings of God's Spirit to poor sinners of Adam's race, delivering them from the power of Satan, and translating them into the kingdom of God's dear Son. This wonderful revelation of that life which was in Christ Jesus before the world began implants a hope in the sinner that when he shall be done battling with the fleshly nature, which he has by being born of a corruptible seed, he will fall asleep in Jesus; and when the last trump is blown he shall come forth in the likeness of the risen Savior, and shall be satisfied. The apostle John says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." So, my Father's children, you who are now the sons of God, must pass through a great change before you come into the full fruition of your hope. This is the teaching of God's word. On this hangs all my hope. God is one, and his doctrine is one. Joy and mourning, rejoicing and weeping, is the experience of every heaven-born soul.

In conclusion let me say with the poet,

"In all my Lord's appointed ways
My journey I'll pursue;
Hinder me not, ye much loved saints,
For I must go with you.
Through floods and flames, if Jesus lead,
I'll follow where he goes;
Hinder me not, shall be my cry,
Though earth and hell oppose."

Yours in hope,

W. J. HULL.

PINSONFORK, Ky., Aug. 6, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—ESTEEMED BRETHREN FOR THE TRUTH'S SAKE:—I have just received the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for August 1st, 1894, and in reading its richly laden columns I see you have concluded to discontinue the advertisements, of which I am truly glad. It did seem to me that the advertisements of temporary things ought not to be in nor annexed to such a wonderful and highly prized paper as the old reliable SIGNS; and I do indeed look upon the SIGNS as not only being wonderful and highly prized, but edifying, beneficial and very instructive to its many readers. It has been of such comfort and benefit to me that I cannot bear the thought of doing without it; and I was truly sorry to see in its columns any matter save that which pertains to the cause of God. As for my own part, I would rather pay three dollars a year for the SIGNS than to have an inch of it devoted to temporary things. I deem any one number of it worth what the paper costs for one year. I have cheerfully used my efforts in procuring subscribers, and shall continue to do so in the future; and were it not for the dreadful panic in financial affairs I could soon swell the list with the names of several good paying subscribers.

Hoping for better times, and craving the blessings of God upon you, I subscribe myself your unworthy brother, though in love of the truth,
W. J. MAY.

REPLY.—It was not without apprehensions that it might be distasteful to some of our brethren to have outside advertisements in the SIGNS, nor did we make the announcement that we would receive them until we had consulted with several of the brethren, whose general opinion was that if sufficient care were used as to what class we accepted it would not give dissatisfaction to our readers, especially if they knew that the object was to enable us to lower the subscription price of the paper. There are but two sources of income to meet the expenses of publishing a paper. One is the subscription receipts, and the other the money received for advertisements; and if no advertisements are taken the subscription price of the paper must necessarily be higher than is usually charged by papers that have an income from both sources. This is a fact that we fear many of our readers do not fully appreciate, as frequently we receive complaints that the price for the SIGNS is more than has to be paid for some local weekly newspaper that is more than half-filled with advertisements of all kinds.

This is not the case with brother May, as may be seen by his letter. He has given very substantial proof of his interest in the welfare of the SIGNS by sending many new subscribers, as well as by forwarding renewals; and we thank him for his kind assurances, as well as his kind and brotherly expression of his feelings in regard to the matter of advertisements in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—ED.

JULY 15, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—How many very precious letters are in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, filled with comfort to the little ones of our Father's household. Many are so situated that they cannot get to hear preaching, while others are so blessed with the privilege of getting to meeting regularly every month. It is a precious privilege to meet with the Lord's dear people and hear the truth preached in its purity, Jesus, the way, the truth and the life. I read with great pleasure and comfort the letter of our dear young sister, Susie Ball, in last week's SIGNS. The words of the dear Savior came forcibly to my mind, "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." The little, trembling one tells in sweet, childish language the wonderful love and mercy of the Lord to her, yet fearing she is deceived. None but the Lord's dear ones have these doubts and fears. None know of the bitter, heart-searching, fearful trials but the trembling ones of our Master's fold; the poor, needy, helpless ones, who have no merit of their own to plead; who find day by day that without Jesus they can do nothing; for he alone is their hope and strength. How dark is the way at the hiding of his face! In his presence there is fullness of joy and pleasures for evermore. In the springtime of love and joy the heart of his trembling ones is filled with praise to his dear name for the great things he has done for them. All along the way we find sore trials and temptations, and but for his many precious tokens of love and mercy our hearts would faint by the way. The Lord is good to them that fear him. He knows how weak we are, and how easily led astray; but his everlasting arm is ever underneath his loved ones. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." Each day we find more and more of the depravity of our sinful hearts manifested, and that we are but sinful worms of the dust. But for the blessed truth, "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God," we would be without God or hope. But, bless his dear name, he has given me the sweet and blessed hope that God for Christ's sake has pardoned my sins, and has made me love the things I once hated, and hate the things I once loved. All is of grace, free grace, from first to last. To his name be all the glory. With love to all the dear household of faith, your sister in hope,
M. E. DAVIS.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

JULY 2d, 1894, at her residence near Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., Mrs. Abbie Ann Benedict very suddenly expired at about eight o'clock p. m., having been stricken with apoplexy at four o'clock p. m., from the excessive heat.

Sister Benedict was the daughter of the late Jesse and Mary Randall, who were members of the Brookfield Old School Baptist Church, born Jan. 18th, 1834, and had been married to Wm. H. Benedict thirty-four years.

Sister Ann Benedict as she was familiarly known, was baptized by Elder J. N. Badger, May 8th, 1869, in the fellowship of the Warwick Old School Baptist Church, of which she continued a steadfast and worthy member up to the time of her release from the bondage of mortality. In her removal from our companionship the church feels that each of us has sustained a personal loss; and while we mourn not as they who have no hope, we are sad in the thought that we shall see her face no more in our little assembly. May divine grace sustain every mourning one under this dispensation, and enable each to say, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good."

Her funeral was largely attended at the meeting-house in Warwick, her pastor preaching from the text 2 Timothy iv. 6-8.

W. L. B.

Mrs. Josephine Boileau departed this life May 21st, 1894, after an illness of about six days.

She was a little more than fifty-three years of age. She was married March 8th, 1860, and her husband and one daughter survive her. She was baptized in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at Southampton, by Elder Wm. Quint, Nov. 4th, 1866, and she was indeed a faithful member. She was one deeply exercised in her soul upon spiritual things, and could not be satisfied with the forms of religion only as she was favored to feel the power. The church was very dear to her, and it was no light excuse that would keep her from its meetings. She had prepared to entertain a number of the friends during the association which was soon to meet here, and seemed to look forward to it with much animation. She was taken suddenly with a hard pain in her head; and to her daughter who brought her some remedy she said, "Do not be worried; it is all right." After that she was unable to speak any more. Her disease was apoplexy. Her loss is deeply felt by her little family, and by the brethren and sisters, and by the neighborhood in which she was held in high esteem.

At her funeral on May 24th I read by request the twenty-third Psalm.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa.

DEPARTED this life on July 25th, 1894, after a painful illness of twenty-five days, at his home in Worcester County, Md., Wrixam J. Pilchard.

The subject of this notice was born Oct. 11th, 1832, and was baptized in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at Pitt's Creek, same county, by Elder J. C. Mears, on June 2d, 1861. His disease was dysentery, which baffled all attempts at relief. With all that the physician and willing hands could do he gradually sank, until the 25th day of July, when he passed away. I stood by and saw him breathe his last, and O what a painful scene. I felt so rebellious in my feelings, so much at a loss to give him up, not seeing how I could get along without him, as we had been so intimate for twenty-five years. His worth to me as a brother in the Spirit, his worth to his family, and especially to his companion, can never be properly estimated. He was a loving and tender servant unto us all, and it seems to us all that his place can never be filled in his family. His religious and moral character was much admired by all who knew him. He was a shining light in the church, so much so that all the church would much desire to imitate his example. His loving companion esteemed him so highly that she said if she could only live as he did how glad she would be; but he told her a short time before he died that he had not prepared himself. He told me that he thought more of his meeting-day than any other day of his life. He talked very nicely and hopefully before he died, and expressed a willingness to depart; but knowing how closely his family was attached to him, he seemed to be sorry for their sake, knowing what great sorrow they would have. May God heal the broken hearts, and give quiet submission to his will. May we all remember the sweet rest that he has entered into. Our prayer is that his dear companion, who so much desired the sweet graces that he manifested, may be prepared to share largely of those evidences of God's favor. May God give her strength to bear her up under her loss. A long history could be written of him and no injustice be done; but this must suffice.

The unworthy writer tried to preach on the occasion from the words found in Jeremiah xvii. 7, "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is," to a large company of sympathizing friends. His remains were then laid away in his new grave-yard beside his son, to await the morning of the resurrection.

He leaves a heart-stricken companion, two sons, one daughter and five grandchildren to mourn their loss.

T. M. POULSON.

NEW CHURCH, Va.

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

CONTRIBUTIONS received by Silas H. Durand for Mary Parker, while in the University Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

Z. T. Davis, La., 2; Emma S. Halstead, N. Y., 5; S. J. Clark, Conn., 5; C. A. Spencer, N. Y., 5; Rebecca Yerkes, Pa., 1; J. C. Fenton, Pa., 1; W. D. Thompson, Ky., 10; The Misses Miles, Pa., 5; The Misses Nivin, Pa., 10.—Total, $44.00.

An operation for internal tumor has been performed upon sister Mary Parker, which appears to be successful. She is still weak, but improving. She is now in a private room, No. 15, and can be seen by friends at any time during the day. Dr. B. F. Coulter assisted at the operation.

SILAS H. DURAND.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Siloam Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon and Washington will be held with the Oak Creek Church, about ten miles northeast of Roseburg, Douglas Co., Oregon, commencing on Friday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1894, and continuing the two following days.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming by railroad will be met at Roseburg and conveyed to the place of meeting.

N. J. SHANKS, Clerk.

THE Sandy Creek Association of Regular Baptists will meet with the Sandy Creek Church, at Hope, in La Salle Co., Ill., on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1894.

Those coming by the Illinois Central R. R. from the north will stop at Tonica, and those from the south will stop at Lostant. The household of faith and all lovers of the truth are invited.

JOHN DOWNEY, Clerk.

THE second annual session of the Peace Valley Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will be held with the Friendship Church, Acton, Hood Co., Texas, commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren coming by rail will be met with conveyance at Cresson, on the Ft. Worth & Rio Grande R. R., and at Granbury on the same road. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren of our faith and order.

PRESTON STAGGS, Clerk.

THE Roxbury Old School Baptist Association will meet with the Second Church of Roxbury, Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. on Wednesday, September 5th, 1894, and continuing two days.

Our meeting-house is about two miles from Roxbury village, and six miles from Kelly's Corners, at which places the visiting friends will be cared for. We cordially invite those interested in the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord to come and partake with us, and a special invitation to those who labor in word and doctrine.

The Tuesday evening train on the Ulster & Delaware R. R. will be met at Kelly's Corners and Roxbury.

J. D. HUBBELL.

THE Maine Association will meet, the Lord willing, at Bowdoinham, Maine, Sept. 7th, 1894, and continue three days.

All lovers of the truth are cordially invited, especially ministering brethren who attend the Maine Conference. We propose to call for the ordination of Deacon Zacheus M. Beal. All who visit us will be cared for.

J. C. CLARK, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is appointed to be held with the Rock Springs Church, Lancaster Co., Pa., commencing on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, at 10 o'clock a. m.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming from Philadelphia will leave the Broad Street depot on Friday, by the P., W. & B. R. R., at 1:51 p. m., for Perryville. Those coming from Baltimore will leave the Union Depot about 2:00 p. m., on the same road, for Perryville. Change cars for Conowingo, where all will be met.

S. L. GREGG, Clerk.

THE FARMER'S NEW GUIDE.

A Compendium of Practical Information on all subjects relating to the Farm and Household.

Divided into Twelve distinct Parts as follows:

1. THE FARM.
2. BEE KEEPING.
3. THE HORSE.
4. CATTLE.
5. SHEEP.
6. SWINE.
7. POULTRY.
8. MEDICINAL.
9. HOUSEHOLD.
10. DOMESTIC PETS.
11. LEGAL POINTS.
12. USEFUL TABLES.

Compiled from the most reliable sources.

Containing 8 half-tone Photographs. Fine Cloth, Stamped in Gold, Silver and Ink, 780 Pages. $2.00. Post-paid G. BEEBE'S SON, Middletown, N. Y.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings, including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

THIS work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies.....50
Thirty copies.....1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1894.

NO. 36.

D. L. Blackwell June 94

CORRESPONDENCE.

MEEKNESS.

TO ME it seems preposterous that I should write upon a subject so deep and so profound as the one I have placed at the head of this article. I do not want to say that I have chosen it, for I hope it has been given me. Anyhow, I will say that I tried to get away from it. With misgivings and with concern of mind my pen has obeyed the dictates of my heart. I am glad that I am not to be the judge whether it will be of the Spirit of Christ or not; for were I so, what I write I would most likely condemn before it is written, from the fact that I seriously doubt if in my experience I have ever yielded so precious a fruit of the Spirit as that of meekness. Then if it is not a part of me, how can I tell of that which I know nothing? I would not be as a parrot, and sound forth the things that have come to my natural ears from without, especially to the saints; for I am aware that nothing will reach their hearts of flesh save that which comes from the same fountain. Therefore am I glad that my brethren shall be judge for me; for I oftentimes gather hope in that they continue to express fellowship for me. It appears to me that the possessor of a meek and humble spirit is very near the feet of the Master. The desire of the heart of every conscious sinner is that they might be conformed to the image of Jesus—that they might be like him; and also that a growth in grace might manifest in them his likeness. In this sincere desire of heart they realize that Jesus was meek and lowly of heart, that he was possessed of a meek and quiet spirit; for Jesus is "the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." The poor little child of Jehovah sees his own imperfections as no one else can. He is also enabled by the light of divine grace to see the perfection of his Redeemer; and this perfect man is his standard, to which in his heart he is always striving to attain. Boldness is the opposite of meekness; that is, the open and offensive boldness of ignorance in the natural heart. But there is a holy boldness that goes hand in hand with a meek and quiet spirit, and it is beautiful to behold. It is that earnest contending for the faith which was once delivered to the saints at all times, swerving neither to the right hand nor to the left; having no fear, but valiant for the truth. It is a harmonious blending together of the timidity (which signifies meekness), in a feeling sense of unworthiness, and the unwavering courage which is inspired by faith. Jesus said to his disciples, "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." He does not pronounce a blessing upon them because they manifest a spirit of meekness, for that condition never can be acquired by mortal man, but because the very meekness is an evidence that they are already blessed; and by faith they shall inherit the earth, in the sense that being Abraham's seed, the old corn and wine and the milk and honey of the land shall accrue unto them when they shall have become dead to the law. This goodly inheritance is by no means the leeks and onions of Egypt, which serve to satisfy the carnal appetite; but it is a goodly inheritance, even the riches which come by faith. The apostle says, "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Meekness is not a factor, then, to bring into manifestation the exercise of faith, neither does it make pretensions to the possession of any inherent power by which an eternal life principle is established; but as the apple upon the apple tree is an evidence that the life principle in the tree has accomplished its perfect work in nature, so also true meekness of heart is the manifestation of the accomplishment of a work of grace in that heart being perfected. There is a pretended meekness which the hypocrite uses to procure a standing with God's people, to deliberately deceive them, that their own ends may be accomplished; and they work their counterfeits to such advantage to themselves that for a longer or shorter period the dear saints are deluded by them. But their pretensions, like the chaff upon the summer threshing-floor, when the winds of adversity blow upon them, they become separated from the wheat, and are scattered, being buried in their own delusions. Sometimes the Lord's people manifest the spirit of meekness in the fear that they have deceived the church in the profession they have made; and also, having had conversation with a brother or sister, they pass sleepless nights in the dread that something unseemly or hurtful has passed their lips. Now, how great the contrast between the hypocrite and the fearful saint. While the one lies in wait with intent to deceive, and is glad in his apparent success, the other groans with sorrow of heart, with the fear that he possibly has deceived. Is there any difficulty in thus distinguishing between the precious and the vile? Surely not. Often we derive sweet comfort by attaching the plummet of truth to the measuring line of faith, measuring ourself by ourself, dividing between the works of the flesh and the fruit of the Spirit, and by so doing learn to distinguish between the natural cunning of the heart, which is "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked," and the spirit of meekness that overflows the broken heart and the contrite spirit. We behold in the flesh no good thing, a total depravity, a sink of sin, an abiding principle that is carnal, sensual and devilish, being in all its strength enmity to God; while by the same light of faith we behold the beauty of holiness in the temple of our God, as set up in our heart, with the wings of the cherubim overshadowing the mercy-seat, wherein the Spirit of truth and the angel of mercy have their constant abiding place. Having seen the Lord of life and glory, we are ready, with Job, to exclaim, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee: wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." No wonder we fall down prostrate and weep when we behold the great gulf fixed between the inestimable worth of Jesus and the utter nothingness and degradation of self. "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man" (for me). We follow his footsteps from the manger to the cross, and we find not that he made himself of any reputation, but was meek and lowly of heart. We follow the travel-stained, weary and footsore saints as they have journeyed in all the ages that are past, and the same spirit of meekness that characterized the Master has pervaded all their being. The bowed head, the trembling knee; not as the proud Pharisee, but as the poor publican, who, "standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God, be merciful to me, a sinner." In all this we discover in ourselves a dread and fear that we might be found walking in the counsel of the ungodly, or standing in the way of sinners, or sitting in the seat of the scornful; and in our heart we find a burning desire to be like the Master, to be like his followers, to be like our brethren, to be meek and lowly in heart, abhorring all the world with its vanities, its fitful fevers of arrogance, pride, lasciviousness, and its multitudinous works of darkness; while to the church of God our heart goes out in tender love and anxious solicitude, with the sweet fellowship of the sufferings of the dear Redeemer, the which we are glad to bear for his sake. In all this we discern the foundation of our hope, because every desire of our heart is with the Lord's people. It is not so much of a question with us whether these dear people love us or not. We do not see how they can. But if they will only bear with us we will follow along in the footsteps of the flock, and take the lowest seat in their assemblies. Our knowledge comes from the love that we know we have for our brethren. We may even question if it is genuine, but we know that we love them; and how greatly the apostle comforts us in the assertion that "we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." The heart becomes mellowed under the sweet influence of the sunlight of love, and meekness is the result of such influence; but how soon does the vile poison of sinful lusts creep in upon a heart bathed in love, and as a thick, dark cloud stand between the lover and the beloved, chilling to the very marrow the heart that was so lately bright with hope and joyful gladness. Meekness is replaced with coldness, indifference, pride and hypocrisy. The lion in his rage trampleth upon the sheep; he croucheth, and his prey is destroyed. The she-bears tear the little ones. The little hope, so lately bright and radiant, flickers, and is almost lost. Our Lord by the mouth of the prophet did say, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek." If we trace back through our past experience we will without doubt remember that whenever the good word of the Lord was received into our hearts, coming as good tidings from a far country, it was at a time when we were in a spirit of meekness; for the Lord's Spirit prepares the ground for the reception of the seed which himself does sow. The weeds of antichrist are uprooted, and burned by the consuming fire of the wrath of God; "for our God is a consuming fire." The preparation of heart is through tribulation; but the trials of affliction are of but small moment when compared with the priceless value of the good tidings which are of great joy. The people who are meek, having the broken heart and the contrite spirit, are the only people in all this world to whom good tidings are preached. To this end was Jesus anointed; for none others save the broken-hearted are sick, or blind, or poor, or mourners, or in prison. None others need his saving grace. Our own experience has already taught us that the gospel of Christ is not good tidings to the carnal mind, or the natural heart; for they are enmity to all things that come from God. The psalmist says, "The meek shall eat and be satisfied." What a volume of truth is contained in this expression! As we view man from the natural standpoint he is never satisfied. Ambition is a part of his make-up. He verily thinks, when he has reached the summit of a present ambition, that he will then be satisfied; but no sooner is that gained than others loom up about him. His soul is ever reaching for that which it does not possess. He is like the man in the parable, who said, "This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." But God said unto him, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee." The determination to be satisfied always refers to the future. Now, mark him who is of a meek and lowly heart. The wages of sin has proved to be death in him. His soul sickens at the vanity of all the efforts of the creature. His sorrow for sin is exceeding great. His head is bowed in mourning because he cannot serve the Lord as he would. He is conscious of the stings from the arrows of his enemies. He groans in anguish for the vileness of his nature. He is poor and weak and helpless. After beholding the vanity of all things after the flesh, how they are all under the curse of a violated law, all under sin, and all subject to death, he sums up the whole matter, realizing that the whole duty of man is "to fear God and keep his commandments." But, alas! how to perform that which is good he knows not. In his weakness and his insufficiency his meekness is made manifest. He pleads for mercy and acceptance to the God of his salvation. He would redeem the time because the days are evil; and when his little strength is exhausted, and he falls by the way, then Jesus takes him up and supplies all his needs. Now will he most gladly rejoice in his infirmities, seeing that the strength of Jesus is made perfect in his weakness. May we realize at all times that God's grace is sufficient for us, the right hand of his power having wrought in us the meek and quiet spirit.

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 24, 1894.

[THE following private letters, written by the late Elders Gilbert Beebe and George W. Staton, were forwarded by sister Susie Woolford, of Woolford, Dorchester Co., Md., for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. We believe they will be read with interest and profit, especially by those of our readers who were personally acquainted with those soldiers of the cross, who have been discharged from the warfare, and have entered into everlasting rest.—ED.]

BERLIN, Md., Nov. 28, 1865.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER WOOLFORD—With all your family, especially all those I have the privilege of calling brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus:—I received a letter from sister Parsons this morning, saying that sister Sally had paid them a visit in company with Whiteley, and I regret they did not get to see me. I am reminded of my promise to write to you all, and as I have a little leisure this morning I will commence a letter, which I may be able to finish during the day at intervals, for I shall probably be interrupted twenty times before I am through by customers coming into the store; so you can expect a broken, disconnected letter. Indeed, from such a dry stick as I am you could expect nothing better had I ever so much time to devote to it.

I often look back with much pleasure to the pleasant interview we had at our association; but there were so many at your house, and the business of the association occupied so much of our time, that I could have but little time to talk with the family. This has been the case during the only two visits that I have ever had the pleasure of paying you. I entertain the hope, however, that I may be spared to make you a quiet visit, and enjoy the pleasure of a quiet conversation with you, brother Woolford, and your very interesting and much loved family. Whether I shall ever realize my dreams of such a visit I cannot tell. I hope I am willing to leave all these things, with all others that concern me in this world, to the great disposer of all things. I want to be in all things reconciled to his most holy will, and feel that I desire he would take entire control of me, both spiritually and temporally; and I want to be directed by his holy Spirit in every action of my life, and every word of my mouth, and every thought of my heart. But O how far short of my desires do I come in all these things! How often it is that the world, this wicked, deceitful world, gets possession of my mind! How often this old man of sin and death which I carry about with me seems to overpower the new man, and almost to crush him out! I look in vain for any evidence that the new man dwells there at all, and sometimes am almost ready to give up in despair. Darkness and doubts overwhelm my soul, the Lord hides himself, the very heavens seem to be lined with brass, I can see nothing but thick darkness, and hear nothing but the reverberating thunders of Sinai as they roll out the terrible words, "He that believeth not shall be damned." At such times if the whole world were offered to me if I would only say that I believed Jesus Christ died for me, I could not believe it. I think, Surely if I were one of his people he would not thus leave me in darkness. But I can say, O that I could find him whom my soul loveth! I try to seek him in reading his word; but the book of prophecy seems sealed up. In prayer my words seem to rise no higher than my head. I try to preach his word, but O what a cold, dull and lifeless time I have of it! Such a scene as this I have passed through within the last two weeks. I tried to preach twice last Sunday, and the clouds did seem to part a little, and I seemed to catch a glimpse of the Sun of righteousness. Since then I have not been quite so despairing. I have received several letters this week from the brethren and sisters, and they all talk hopefully. I feel considerably cheered up to-day, and hope, that anchor of the soul, seems springing up. I know the Lord Jehovah reigns, and doeth all things right, working all things after the counsel of his own will; and if he chooses to hide himself it is no doubt for some good purpose, to teach us what poor, dependent creatures we are. "Lord, what is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?" O that I could learn to be resigned in all things to the dispensations of his providence, to commit myself with all my ways into his merciful hands, knowing that he careth for us, and will cause all things to work together for the good of them who are his people, and are the called according to his purpose. I am engaged nearly every Sunday in trying to preach Christ and him crucified, as the only salvation for perishing sinners. I am also on every other Tuesday evening preaching in our town to a mixed congregation of Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Methodists. The people turn out and manifest a disposition to hear; but the doctrine seems new and strange to them. Some find a great deal of fault, but seem to say, "We will hear thee again of these things." So long as they continue to come I feel it my duty to preach, and leave the result with my Master. I know he has the power, and can, if it seems good to him, give the hearing ear and the understanding heart, and cause these dry bones to quiver and shake, and finally cause a mighty army to stand up to magnify his name, even in this town. I sometimes feel as though I ought to let go my secular business entirely, and devote my whole time to preaching among the destitute; but then I am afraid to trust my blessed Master to provide for my family; yes, afraid to trust him, whose are the cattle on a thousand hills, who owns the whole universe, feeds the birds of the air, and clothes the lilies. With shame I have to confess that I am afraid to trust this great Being to provide for my family, and fear that if I give up my business I shall come to want. I shall perhaps hold on until he by some providence drives me from it, and compels me to trust in him, who has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." But if I could only have one undeniable evidence that I have been called to the work, one evidence that I could not doubt, it appears to me that I could then trust him, and give myself wholly to the work; but I am so often doubting whether I have ever been called.

My sheet is nearly full, and I must stop. I shall expect to have an answer from some of you. I think it will fall to sister Sally's lot, and I shall expect it. My wife sends love to you all. May the Lord bless and prosper you.

Your unworthy brother,

G. W. STATON.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 3, 1873.

DEAR SISTER SUSIE:—I was very much surprised to learn by your letter of the sudden departure from this vale of tears of your dear sister Emma. Truly you have been called to pass through scenes of deep affliction and sorrow. One after another in quick succession the dear ones have been called away, making the hearts of those who survive desolate and sad. I can hardly realize that so many of the former members of your interesting and loving family are now numbered with the departed. Most deeply do I sympathize with you, and earnestly pray that you may feel and realize that underneath you are the everlasting arms. Our flesh is weak to bear the heavy strokes which rudely sander the tenderest ties of our earthly nature. We mourn, we grieve, and if left to ourselves we murmur and refuse to be comforted, like Rachel, because the cherished objects of our affection are called away. The charms of earth recede, her pleasures lose to us their charms, the honey is mingled with gall, and we sigh for that home where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more. Truly our losses, crosses and bereavements have a tendency to wean us from this world, and incline our hearts to seek for enduring happiness in God, who is the spring of all our real joys, and the life of our delights.

But they rise not out of the ground, nor do they come on us unordered by our covenant God, who knoweth that we are but dust. He wounds that he may heal us; and we know that all things do work together for our good and his glory. These afflictions are but for a moment, and they work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not on the things which are seen, but upon the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

While our fleshly passions recoil at tribulation, our faith perceives the kindness of our God in loosening every tie that binds us to the earth. As earthly comforts fail we can more ardently desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better. Then let this earthly house decay, dissolve and fall; we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Remember me most affectionately to your dear father, whom I long to see once more in the flesh; also to every surviving member of your dear family, and to all our friends and kindred in Christ.

With much love and fellowship, I am your friend and brother in tribulation, GILBERT BEEBE.

KETTERMAN, Mo., May 9, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—Some time has elapsed since I have written anything for the SIGNS; and it has been getting along so well that it has not seemed prudent for me to occupy space in its columns. I should like to increase its circulation among Baptists, but I find it a difficult matter in this country. Where I find Baptists that indorse the sentiments which the SIGNS has maintained they are more disposed to patronize a local Baptist paper, and but few Baptists are subscribers to more than one religious paper. However, I find more Baptists claiming to be of the Primitive order who reject the most important points of doctrine as set forth by the SIGNS than those who accept them, claiming as they do to be the genuine Primitive Baptists. They reject the predestination of God as set forth by the apostles and advocated by genuine Old School Baptists, claiming that the predestination of all things is an innovation of recent origin. Some have gone so far as to say that they cannot fellowship anybody who reads the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Another error I find prevalent among churches south of here, and extending into Kansas and northern Arkansas: it is what is called "common salvation." I have been among the Baptists a little more than thirty-three years. I have read many of their periodicals, the SIGNS more than all others; but this doctrine, as it is held and set forth by its advocates, is really to me, as found among Old School Baptists, less than four years old. Here is an extract from the Corresponding Letter of one association: "All our churches represented are now blessed with sweet peace, and the watchmen present proclaim eternal salvation by grace alone, and common salvation by works." Perhaps this sentence to some brethren would not seem so objectionable at first sight; but if explained as its advocates hold it, it would be a surprise to them, as well as to me, why any of our brethren can indorse and defend it. The advocates of this "common" salvation say that God quickens the sinner into life, and all the rest in this world the quickened sinner must perform; that the coming into the church, and all things pertaining to his spiritual enjoyment, is alone dependent upon himself. I have not so understood the doctrine of grace since I have had a name among my brethren, that salvation was part of grace and part of works. This does very well for Arminians, and for those who hold to a limited predestination; for if man has part of salvation's work to do it would not be necessary for God to predestinate it. After hearing a great deal of this mongrel system I have examined the record to the best of my feeble ability, and I fail to find any real authority for the so-called "common" salvation. The word "common," in connection with salvation, is used but once in the Bible (Jude 3). The word "common" does not always mean inferior or mean, nor do I think it does in this connection; but the servant of God has reference to something quite different. "Belonging equally to all," is one definition of the word "common;" and I believe this is the meaning that the word "common" has in this place. Jude is speaking of a salvation that is common to all the saints, and that it was needful for him to write unto them and exhort them. "That ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."—Jude 3, 4. These saints to whom he is writing "are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called." Here he calls it common salvation; not to distinguish between eternal and some other salvation, but because it interests all the saints, and belongs alike to all. I cannot entertain the idea that God's people have two salvations, in such a way as that one is by grace, and the other dependent upon creature work; that Christ wrought out the one salvation, and the sinner the other. I have always understood that Old School Baptists, since I have had a name among them, contended and maintained that all their salvation was by grace, from first to last; and though they are exhorted to be careful to maintain good works, the good works are no part of that salvation. Nor are they blessed because of doing what may seem proper and right for them to do after they are made to realize their utter and complete dependence upon their Lord and Master; and if they in their experience are enabled to do things which are to them a holy privilege, they simply call the power of doing God's grace. Well are they taught in holy experience, and by the testimony of the word, that all is sin which is not of faith; so all they do spiritually is by faith; and faith is grace; so where is there any place found for God to reward for work without faith in God that he is the Giver of every good and perfect gift? The Lord will ordain peace for us, "for thou also hast wrought all our works in us." It is said that to rightly divide the word of truth is to separate the two salvations, and show that one comes by grace, the other by the works of the creature; that no spiritual blessings can come to one of God's children after he has been quickened, only by and because of obedience to the gospel; that the quickened sinner absolutely has the power of obedience. This is setting at naught what Paul says about having a will, but not the power to do good. It evades or denies the following and similar passages of Scripture: "For to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not."—Rom. vii. 18. It is virtually denying the christian warfare, the striving of the Spirit against the flesh, and of the flesh against the Spirit. If to divide the word of truth means to divide the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, I have not learned it, and many of my brethren are in ignorance. The law is one truth, and the gospel is another. The law is yea and nay, but the gospel is yea and amen. The law says, Live by works. The gospel says, Live by faith and grace. Faith and grace cannot be separated; neither can we split the gospel, and place one part on one side, and one part on another, because it is all upon one side, even the side of grace. The head-stone of the corner was brought forth "with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it." Upon the same basis of reasoning, how would it do to have two faiths, because in Titus is the expression, "The common faith," and in distinction from this say that there is a faith superior and different, because it is spoken of in a different manner? But we find that there is but one faith, the faith of God's elect. It is also called the faith of Jesus. It is once called common, and once called mutual; in both instances showing how it is related to the Lord's people, and how they are related to one another because of it. The common salvation which Jude speaks of I do not conclude as being inferior or different from the term "salvation" used in a general sense. Salvation means deliverance from sin; and if this is not common to all the saints, then all have not need of it. There is a temporal salvation which the preaching of the gospel is for, to save from the error of false doctrine, but this is also by grace; for his ministers must have grace to preach it, and the hearers must have grace to hear and to heed it. All work that is recognized by God as done by his children must be by faith; for "without faith it is impossible to please God." Faith is God's gift to his children, and exercises them to do his will; and in the absence of that faith they cannot do anything that is spiritual. Of all the free-will theories propagated among Old School Baptists this "common" salvation doctrine is the most pernicious, and it is also deceptive. Just think of it, that God quickens sinners into life, and they are then free, are independent, can receive or reject God, and are now free agents, now responsible to God, but their good works are not necessarily before ordained; for said one, "Paul does not say that they shall walk in them, but should walk in them;" that is, ought to, because of duty. I think this doctrine is one of the modern efforts to simplify the gospel to the comprehension of human reason, and is one of the luring baits to add numbers to the churches, and lessen the offense of the truth.

Brethren, this is at your disposal. As ever, in fellowship,

J. BEEMAN.

THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN.

"But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. xxiv. 37.

"And as he [Jesus] sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"—Verse 3. We see that there were three questions asked in one; first, these things; second, sign of thy coming; third, end of the world. These things were concerning the destruction of the temple; for said Jesus, "There shall not be left here one stone upon another." These things came to pass between A. D. 66 and A. D. 70. "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place (whoso readeth let him understand), then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains."—Verses 15, 16. The abomination of desolation was Jerusalem compassed with armies.—Luke xxi. 20. "And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh." "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled." "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there shall no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Therefore these things came to pass in that generation. "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."—Matt. xxiv. 34.

Second question, "Sign of thy coming." "But as the days of Noe

(Continued on page 286.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 5, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

MINISTERIAL QUALIFICATIONS.

In farther pursuing the subject suggested by brother Vail in our last number, we will also attend to the following request from a brother in Virginia.

"BROTHER BEEBE:—Will you be so kind as to give through your paper, your views on Matthew v. 13, 14?"

LEVI HESS."

As the passage referred to by brother Hess in our opinion has special reference to the ministers of the gospel, and was spoken by the Lord by way of admonition and instruction to those whom he intended to send into all the cities of Judea, where he himself designed to go, it properly belongs to the subject of ministerial qualifications, and we propose to notice it in such connection in the course of our subsequent remarks. But we will first attend to some things enjoined in the epistles to Timothy and Titus, quoted in our last. Of the sixteen necessary characteristics of a bishop mentioned by Paul, but few may be dispensed with in the character and qualification of such ministers of the gospel as are not bishops. We do not understand that all the ministers of the gospel should be married men, but it is desirable that pastors or bishops should conform to the rule. They should be the husband of one wife, and but one. Paul was himself a minister of Christ and an apostle, but not a bishop or pastor; and in his case it seems that this qualification was not required. Another injunction upon bishops is the ruling of their own house, and having their children in subjection. This cannot apply to those who have no families; but with those who have, it cannot be dispensed with, however far some of us may seem to come short of the rule. Neither is it allowed for a bishop to be a novice, or inexperienced learner; but many are called to preach Christ who are, compared with the old soldiers of the cross, mere novices, or learners. But the following requisitions must be found in all the ministers of the gospel, and none can enjoy the countenance and fellowship of the church on scriptural grounds without them.

1. They must be blameless. If by this we should understand that the ministers of Christ must possess holier or purer natures than their brethren, we should exclude Paul, and all others that have succeeded him in the ministry of the word; for in his flesh he could find no good thing; and in keeping his body under, he found difficulty enough to make him groan, being burdened.

But for those natural infirmities and corruptions of their nature which are common to all the saints they are not subjected to blame, in the sense here expressed or implied. They are not required by the apostolic rule to change their natures, for that is not in their power, and hence they are not blamed for omitting to do that which is not enjoined. But they are required to mortify the flesh, to deny self, and to observe all things whatsoever Christ has commanded; and if they neglect to conform to the rule and spirit of the gospel, they are justly subject to be blamed. No minister of Christ can be blameless who preaches any other gospel, who teaches any other doctrine, who imposes any other laws, customs or ordinances on the churches, than such as have the sanction of the New Testament. Nor can they escape the righteous censure of the saints, if in their walk and general deportment they indulge in such gratifications of the flesh as are forbidden.

2. They must be vigilant. The ministry is not the place for idleness, carelessness or laziness. God's ministers are required to be watchful, active and faithful; ready to forego any personal gratification, to make any sacrifice of ease, honor, wealth or preferment that is calculated to embarrass or hinder their service in the kingdom and patience of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let those who desire to enter the ministry for the sake of an easy, genteel and lucrative business, bear in mind that vigilance is an indispensable requisition of the gospel.

3. They must be sober. Not drunken with wine, with heresy, with the cares and anxieties of this world; for all these things are intoxicating, and when indulged in are calculated to inebriate and disqualify the christian minister for the high and holy vocation to which he is called of God. By soberness, we also understand that he is not to be light, vain, trifling, airy, foppish, or given to foolish jesting. It cannot be doubted that many otherwise valuable ministers of Christ would be greatly improved if they could forget volumes of witty speeches and funny anecdotes which like froth rises on top of that which is more solid and useful, and is generally the first to be seen, and which not only appears greatly to their disadvantage in common conversation, but is sometimes used in the pulpit to amuse the thoughtless, giddy and vain, and to disgust the more thoughtful and spiritual. A well selected anecdote may in some cases serve to illustrate a subject; but if calculated to excite levity, they will even then cost more than they are worth. In more than nine cases out of ten, the rule requiring gravity and soberness must be violated by the use of them. If any brother should think us personal in our allusion on this point, he is not mistaken; for, after reserving a full share for the writer, every one to whom it will apply is intended.

4. They must be of good behavior. The admonitions written by Paul to Timothy were designed to instruct him how he ought to behave himself in the house of God; and if Timothy required such admonition, can it be less applicable to the servants of Christ at the present day? How much of a minister's usefulness in the house of God depends on his behavior, we shall not pretend to estimate; but we know that if their behavior is not regulated by the word and spirit of the gospel, it can avail very little, if anything, for their doctrine to be conformed to the standard of truth. Indeed we have thought that the cause of truth has suffered more from men who could preach as sound doctrine as Balaam did, when in behavior they were as refractory as Jonah, than from the open and avowed enemies of the gospel. "Thou, therefore, which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?"—Rom. ii. 21.

5. They must be given to hospitality. There are many preachers who urge in their doctrine that it is more blessed to give than to receive, who plainly show in their practice that they are willing to yield this more blessed part entirely to their hearers, if they may thereby monopolize the less blessed part of receiving; but covetousness is idolatry wherever found among the professed disciples of Christ. It is unbecoming the character of saints, and cannot be allowed in the ministers of the Redeemer. They above others are watched, and such a blemish leads to a strong circumstantial evidence that they preach for filthy lucre's sake, and not of a ready mind. But woe unto such as go in the way of Balaam, who loved the wages of unrighteousness. While a faithful testimony of truth will excite the wrath and violent opposition of the enemy, let their love and practice of hospitality heap fire on the heads of their opponents, by demonstrating that the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, and that the spirit of the gospel inclines those who possess it to acts of kindness to their fellow-men, and especially to the household of faith.

6. They must be apt to teach. There has, perhaps, been quite too little attention paid to this important requisition, by churches as well as ministers. Are there not many, and among them some very fluent speakers, admitted to the work and set apart by solemn ordination, under whose ministry a child of God might sit for ages and never receive any perceptible instruction through that medium? And are there not cases where their hearers from other sources "Grow wiser than their teachers are,

And better know the Lord?"

There are other gifts in the church for public use besides that of preaching—gifts that may greatly comfort and edify, stir up and benefit the saints; but by consigning every gift to the pulpit, do we not disregard the admonition of this part of our subject? We are in no place informed how much a minister must know; for the most useful ministers the church has ever been favored with have felt their deficiency the most, and many brethren may have a good stock of sound knowledge from whom God has withheld an aptness to teach.

7. They must be patient. We can scarcely attach too much importance to this trait of a good minister of the cross. Poor Jonah, as a prophet of the Lord, suffered much, and was taken down into deep waters, in connection with his impatience; and even Peter, before he was sifted, required a double bridle to restrain his ardent zeal and impatient haste. All the children of God find much to try their patience, but the faithful minister of Jesus has many conflicts that do not fall to the lot of his brethren. Many of them might here be named to advantage, but few must suffice. Their constant conflict with inbred corruption of the flesh is perhaps the same that all the saints endure; but in addition to this, they must be instant in season, out of season. Whatever may be their conflicts of mind, embarrassment of circumstances, barrenness, darkness or coldness, a woe is on them if they preach not Christ. In all these trying circumstances they need patience. When they have labored for months or years, and witness no special outpouring of the Spirit, no special revival, no ingathering of the redeemed, but perhaps rather a falling off, a decrease of the spirit of holiness and of devotion among those with whom they labor, they require patience. When through storms or cold, rain or hail, they have urged their way to their stated appointments, and find that the weather is too inclement or the roads too bad for their brethren to meet them at the house of prayer, then indeed their patience is put to a severe test. When all their time is required to be devoted to the service of the church, and their pecuniary circumstances settled down to the freezing point, and their families complaining of neglect, and their brethren unwilling to inquire into their circumstances, and perhaps still more unwilling to divide with them their loaf, the minister requires patience. But we may not dwell too long on this point.

8. Moreover, they must have a good report of them which are without, lest they fall into reproach and the snare of the devil. By "them which are without," we understand such as are not in the church, the men of the world, with whom christians have to do in the ordinary business affairs of this life. The minister should have a good report from them; but we should determine correctly what report from that quarter the apostle would allow to be a good report. A minister of Christ may suffer reproach and persecution, and all manner of evil may be said of him falsely, for Christ's sake, without impairing his standing in the house of God; for such reports, when the accused has given no just occasion for them, shall be overruled for his good; he may rejoice and be exceeding glad when called to suffer shame, and even stripes, for Jesus' sake. But the good report insisted on by the apostle is that wherein the most violent enemy cannot accuse him, in truth, of conduct unworthy of the high vocation which he occupies. From them without, Christ was called a wine-bibber, a gluttonous man, a friend of publicans and sinners; but, with his immaculate purity, such scandal from that source was not an evil report of him in the sense of our text. But let a professed minister of the gospel associate with the jovial company of wine-bibbers or tipplers, join their merry festivals and indulge his carnal appetite among them, their report of him may be readily anticipated. Although they may speak of him as one of their number, their friend, associate, &c., still the report is not good; it does not become the high standing which he professes to hold. When the general report from them without is that the minister is proud, aristocratic, lordly, covetous, greedy of filthy lucre, given to much wine, jocular, trifling, peevish, quarrelsome, deceitful, dishonest, roguish, a slanderer, a brawler, a liar, a drunkard, or a busybody in other men's matters, such reports require the faithful investigation of the church to which he is connected; and if he be found justly charged, he is to be admonished and reclaimed by the rules laid down in the gospel, or expelled from the fellowship of the church of God. No unwarranted sympathy should be indulged in his case; the eye shall not pity, nor the hand spare. The church must act as the law of Christ provides, or she consents to a defilement of the temple of God.

The passage presented by brother Hess, which we proposed to notice in connection with the foregoing, is embraced in the discourse of Christ on the mount. "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."—Matt. v. 13, 14.

In applying the solemn admonitions on which we have been remarking to the ministers of our Lord Jesus Christ, we know of no figures or parables more appropriate than those employed in this passage. The disciples to whom this sermon on the mount was immediately addressed were, perhaps all of them, to be employed in preaching the gospel to the lost sheep of the house of Judah; and although much of the instruction, admonition and consolation of this discourse may have a general application to the whole church of God throughout all time, there certainly seems to be a special application of some parts of it to those designed for the work of the gospel ministry. "Ye are the salt of the earth." The church, or elect of God, is in one sense the salt of the earth, as it is for her sake that the world stands; but this is not the sense in which the figure seems to us to be used in this case; for in this sense the church cannot lose her savor, or cease to be the elect of God, for whose sake God continues to bear up the strong pillars of the universe. But the manner in which the figure is used leads us to conclude that its application belongs to ministers of the gospel. The most prominent property of salt is to preserve that to which it is applied, from putrefaction. It has no power to bring back from such a state that which has putrefied; but when applied to that which is in a sound state, if the salt be pure and clean, it will preserve and season that to which it is so applied. So with the ministers of the gospel; they cannot save lost sinners, nor be in any wise the means of their regeneration; but God is pleased through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Thus using them as salt is used, not to restore that which is putrefied, nor in any case to raise up or quicken the dead, but to preserve from the corruption of heresy and idolatry those whom God has quickened and brought to believe. All things of earth have a corrupting tendency, and unless that tendency is arrested it must progress in the work of decomposition; and so in regard to the children of God, all their wisdom, prudence and natural power are degenerate and strongly tend to corruption; so that as the saints sow to the flesh, they shall of the flesh reap corruption; and as salt is used in the one case, so the ministry of the word is in the other. Hence the admonition to Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."—1 Tim. iv. 16. Although God is able and often does enlighten his children and lead them deeply in the knowledge and understanding of divine things without employing any minister for the purpose, still we are confident that where he withholds a faithful ministry of his word there is a strong tendency manifested generally, even by christians, to embrace heretical doctrines and practices; but where this kind of salt is used, churches are preserved, and the saints grow thereby.

To answer this end, we see the necessity of applying good, clean and strong salt. We are aware that some contend that salt is salt, and it matters not what kind, if it be salt it will answer the purpose; and so it is with many, if they only have a minister he may be a minister of God, of men, or even of Satan; but in their estimation it is very uncharitable to doubt the piety of any of them. But let our dairymen take salt from their fish barrels and apply it to their butter, and the effect will not be dissimilar to that produced by the introduction of ungodly ministers among the churches of the saints; if both are not destroyed, they certainly will neither be seasoned nor preserved by such application. Again, salt is used to season our food, to make it agreeable to the taste, and to assist our digestive organs; and so also the ministers of Jesus are used to so define the doctrine of the gospel as to assist the saints in digesting it. Whether the relish of the truth be improved with the saints from having it defined by a faithful ministry, we will leave them to judge; but we venture to judge for them that filthy salt would be no improvement; for if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is sometimes argued that salt cannot lose its strength; and it is true that salt will retain its saltiness; but it may become so defiled as to entirely lose its savor, and thenceforth be good for nothing, &c. And is it not so with some ministers who have once stood high in the esteem of our churches, and have now become defiled, and have lost their savor so completely with the churches of the saints as to become useless, and worse than useless, a nuisance, to be cast forth and trodden under foot of men? Witness the case of those who within the last fifteen or twenty years have corrupted themselves with the idols of new schoolism; where is now their savor or seasoning qualities which were once so refreshing to the saints among whom they labored? Alas! they possess it no longer. Their presence now, instead of improving the solemn feasts of Zion, would rather nauseate and sicken them; they are therefore cast forth from the house of God and from the fellowship of orderly saints. There are others again who have been regarded as ministers of Christ, who continue to contend, when opportunity serves, for sound doctrine in theory while their want of conformity to the practice of the gospel, and, in some cases, their licentious course of life, imposes on the churches with whom they have stood connected the necessity of regarding them as salt that has lost its savor, and of casting them out, to be trodden under foot of men.

When those who have stood in the esteem of the church as faithful ministers of the Lord Jesus, so conduct themselves as to forfeit their standing, and become castaways from the fellowship of God's people, what are they fit for? Good for nothing but to be trodden under foot of men. And they are trampled on by men. If they have indeed known experimentally the love of God in their hearts, the world into which they are cast is not comfortable society for them. They may indeed try hard to accommodate their feelings to their condition, especially when urged thereto for the gratification of their lusts; but how sadly they are trodden under foot. Christians cannot, consistently with the divine rule, associate with them; they will try to avoid their company; and when occasionally cast into it, they will, despite all their efforts to the contrary, show evident signs of the unpleasantness and mortification of their situation.

Having extended our article to an unusual length, we must defer our remarks on the other part of brother Hess' request until a more favorable opportunity.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., May 15, 1847.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 283.)

were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting."—Acts ii. 1, 2. Read the remainder of the chapter. Now, this was the coming of the Son of man as the days of Noe. It was sudden, as of a rushing mighty wind.

The coming of the Son of man to Paul was as the days of Noe. And it came to pass that as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus, about noon, suddenly there shown from heaven a great light round about me."—Acts xxii. 6. His coming to that generation was as the days of Noe, and will be to all future generations. "For in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Matt. xxiv. 44.

Now I appeal to all who remember the hour of their first visitation. Did you bring it about by your good works? I say, No. "In measure, when it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it."—Isa. xxvii. 8. This was my experience. I was alone in a field when I first heard it speak in me. The word was so plain that I understood what it said, and I began to debate with it. I lived in a state of rebellion for several years. At last I remembered when I was first illuminated, I endured a great fight of afflictions. "Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love."—Rev. ii. 4. Therefore I remembered from whence I was fallen. "Repent, and do the first works."

"But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little."—Isa. xxviii. 10. "From the time that it goeth forth shall it take you; for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night; and it shall be a vexation only to understand the report."—Verse 19. This is true in our experience. It was a vexation that we might understand the report. "For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of these things is death. But now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." "But God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin; but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you."—Rom. vi. "For ye were sometime darkness; but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light."—Eph. v. 8. Therefore as the days of Noe were, so was the coming of the Son of man to us. "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin."—Heb. xii. 4. That is, if there is a striving against sin in us, it is the grace of God teaching us that we should live soberly and righteously in this present world. "And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."—Eph. vi. 4. "They may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation."—1 Peter ii. 12. If you try to get your child to pray and to seek God before his day of visitation, it will be provoking it to wrath. I know this to be true. Before my visitation I was asked to pray, and it provoked me to wrath. But I should have been taught that as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. We should tell our children that he will come when they least expect him, as a thief in the night. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Matt. xxiv. 27, 44. Let us tell our children to marvel not that they must be born again; for that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit."—John iii. 8.

Now to the third question, "the end of the world." "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only."—Matt. xxiv. 36. "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." "Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—1 Cor. xv. 51-58. Therefore the first and second comings of the Son of man are as the days of Noe.

J. J. MOORE.

CORNER, Ga., June 4, 1894.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Aug. 22, 1894.

BENTON L. BEEBE—DEAR BROTHER:—I have just read aloud the editorial of Elder Gilbert Beebe, written forty-seven years ago, and republished in the number of the SIGNS of this date, and I can hardly express how inspiring a sound it has to us. What a pure, clear gospel ring there is in it! How clear and comprehensive in the doctrine it presents, how full and discriminating in the order of the church, and how tender, but firm and faithful, in admonishing concerning the individual walk and conduct of an Old School Baptist, drawing the line between that which does and that which does not adorn the doctrine of God our Savior. Truly this editorial shows the writer to have been one called and qualified as an overseer of the flock, and as having been given gospel rule over the churches they serve.

The editorials have continued to be of much interest and value under the editorship of brother William, and to us who do not know the reasons for his withdrawal it seems unfortunate that the paper should be deprived of them; but I believe it will still maintain its character as a medium of correspondence between the Lord's people, of great interest and value to them, as it has been for more than sixty years. I write this note to say that I warmly approve of your decision to republish some of your dear and honored father's editorials. The choice of this was most judicious. It is of the kind that does not refer to anything of a temporary character in the church, but is suitable to the church in all ages, and very timely, appropriate, comforting, instructive and strengthening to the weak, such as I am, at this time.

Your brother affectionately,

SILAS H. DURAND.

REPLY.—It is always a pleasure to receive words of approval from our brethren in regard to our course in conducting the publication of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, but now under the present circumstances we especially appreciate any encouragement that our brethren feel inclined to express. Brother Durand has long been familiar with the business as well as the editorial department of the paper, and knows something of the trials and responsibilities of our present position, and for his kind indorsement we feel most thankful; and our prayer is that the Lord may not permit us to do anything that will bring a reproach upon his blessed truth, or detract from the character which the paper has, we trust, been prospered of the Lord to maintain for more than half a century.—ED.

CHENEY, Neb., Feb. 18, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN A PRECIOUS HOPE:—Through a well directed chain of God's love and mercy to his poor and afflicted children in this world we are still blessed with the manifestations of his love and presence among us. We have been made to sit together in heavenly places in Christ, under the droppings of his sanctuary, and our tongues have been loosed so that we could sing the songs of Zion, as we humbly hope, with the Spirit and with the understanding also, having an eye single to the glory of God. O what a comfort and a blessed privilege it is to meet together in church capacity, to attend to the things that are needful in God's house, when the church is so graciously blessed with the Spirit of Christ that they can see eye to eye concerning the things that pertain to his house. We know that God has set every member in the body as it has pleased him, and all are members one of another; and that, too, for the edifying of the body of Christ, which is the church of the living God. Therefore the gifts that God is pleased to bestow upon his church cannot be hid. Jesus says, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that it may give light unto all that are in the house."—Matt. v. 14, 15. The house here spoken of is surely the church, and the light is the fruit of that precious gift which he has so graciously bestowed upon the members of the body. What can be more perfect than the mind of Christ? What can be a more desirable place to dwell than in the company of the redeemed, where Jesus dwells? His assurance to them is that where two or three are gathered together in his name, there he is in the midst. Nor could we doubt for a moment the truth of his assurance when we remember all his mercies past and what he has done for us. O that he may ever keep us humble, low down at his feet, esteeming others better than ourselves, and so fulfilling the law of Christ.

Your unworthy little brother, who sometimes hopes he has a hope of an interest in the merits of the once humbled but now highly exalted Savior, who died for the sins of his people, and rose again for their justification, and is even at the right hand of God, making intercession for the saints.

JOSEPH BRUCE.

DELMAR, Del., Aug. 21, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—The yearly meeting at Bryn Zion last Saturday, Sunday and Monday was a happy season with those who were permitted to attend. There were two more added to our Little Creek Church here last Sunday, making nine received by baptism since our last association. I was with Elders

Francis, Rittenhouse and Poulson to-day at the depot. They were on their way to the yearly meeting at Forest Grove, to be held Wednesday and Thursday of this week. We are in our usual state of health, desiring to be thankful for good gifts, and especially for perfect ones, all which come undeserved from our dear Father of lights. We expect to see some of you at our association in October. The brethren at Broad Creek have a new and commodious meeting-house, and are well prepared to make visitors comfortable.

Desirous of your welfare, I remain yours in christian love,
W. W. MEREDITH.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE.

ELDER Joseph Bruce having changed his residence from Cheney, Lancaster Co., Neb., to Byron, Thayer Co., Neb., his correspondents will please address him at the latter place.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space, but we are now prepared to furnish any of them that may be desired.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express.

MARRIAGES.

ON April 6th, 1894, by Elder Thomas Cole, at the residence of Elder J. B. Smith, Findlay, Ohio, Mr. Franklin M. Hartman and Miss Laura Smith, both of Findlay, Ohio.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At her home near Eldon, Iowa, of old age and heart failure, August 18th, 1894, Rebecca Flint, aged 86 years, 6 months and 9 days.

The subject of this sketch was born in Butler County, Ohio, Feb. 9th, 1808, her maiden name being Rebecca Abraham. She was married to Elder J. H. Flint (then a young minister in the Old Predestinarian Baptist Church) July 24th, 1836, having united with the church herself several years previous. They removed to Jefferson Co., Iowa, in 1842, bringing with them three children, two of whom died within twelve months afterward. In the spring of 1843 they with several others organized the Des Moines River Predestinarian Baptist Church. Afterward they settled on the new purchase, within a half-mile of the present town of Eldon, on what then was known as Village Prairie. The valley soon became a beautiful, fertile farming country, and their home one eminently fitted to the developing surroundings. The husband as ardently devoted himself to cheering and comforting God's people around him, who were gathered into the fold of our Savior, as he did to fitting up home and comforts for his family. No wife was more ardently attached to the church, or possessed a stronger faith in its doctrine, or relied more firmly on the mercy, grace and love of God for his people, than she; and none could forego the pleasure of his presence at home, that he might be away preaching the glorious beauties of the Savior's atonement for his people, with more fortitude. Her husband was also prominent in the politics of his state as legislator, and identified in making many of its laws. He died May 22d, 1871. Since that time she lived with her youngest daughter, after having raised five children, seen them married, and some of her grandchildren also become the heads of families. Her home was always the home of Baptists, and denominated "The Baptist Tavern;" and since her death the sign will not likely be taken down, as her daughter belongs to the church, and the husband, Z. T. Knight, is just as firm in the faith, having already provided for several associations. But the light of the house seems gone out, temporarily at least, since "mother" has departed. She was not only a true mother to her children, in all that the word implies, but indeed a mother also in Israel. Many years ago, when the clouds of affliction and sorrow cast such dark gloom and despondency over our little church, at one time it met to consider the expediency of dissolution and taking letters to other churches. She alone had courage to stand fast. "No," she pleaded, "no; God in his providence has surely not ordained it. Let us still go on, and not forget or neglect the assembling of ourselves together in his name, if it only be to sing his praise and pray for deliverance." She pleaded with the members until they yielded. Her oft-repeated quotation was, "Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." The church revived, ministers were provided, and recently the old brick building that was crumbling has been torn down, and a nice new one built in its stead; while we look back in gratitude to her faithfulness and instrumentality in God's hand for our preservation as a body.

She had been a constant reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue, when she was at home with her parents, to the time of her death. Next to the Bible it was her treasure and spiritual comfort. As the time for the association drew near she seemed to languish, saying repeatedly, "I do not expect to attend." Although not sick, and able to dress and wait upon herself the last morning on earth, yet she seemed weighed down with a premonition of death. Friday afternoon messengers of churches began to arrive. At first she recognized a few; then a dazed feeling seemed to come over her, when she began rapidly sinking. She was placed in bed about two o'clock, passing into a languid stupor. Reclining in the arms of one or the other of her children, about half-past twelve o'clock in the night she sweetly slept her life away, without a tremor or sign of pain visible.

The association met on Saturday, and the family had the sweetest of all earthly consolations, the old brethren and sisters she had known so long and loved so well to mingle with and console them in the darkest hours of their grief and affliction. The funeral was on Sunday, and the discourse was pathetic and impressive. The minister, Elder J. M. True, while dwelling upon the noble example and blameless life of the deceased, often exhibited the deepest emotion; while the pallbearers were all among the ablest ministers of those attending the association. It was a grand tribute of love and respect for the dead, that came as a sweet solace to her sorrow-stricken children; while as if to cheer and comfort the church for the loss of its early founders, it repaired that same evening to the waters, to receive by baptism six persons who had stated a hope of spiritual resurrection from the dead, and having come out from Babylon. One never on earth can die a more timely or sweeter death, nor come nearer to being laid in the grave by angelic hands, than our "mother."

Gone from us now, to happy dwell
In blissful realms of promise bright,
Where sweet refrains of music swell
The songs of grace with pure delight.

O glorious clime! the darkest days
That here to us on earth may come
Cannot dispel thy cheerful rays
Of hope within for thee our home.

Almighty God, our heavenly King,
Well may the dead to thee arise
When time shall cease, and joyful sing
Thy grace through never-ending skies.
I. T. F.

DIED—August 13th, 1894, sister Pipe, wife of Samuel Pipe, of Ingleside, Steuben Co., N. Y.

She was born in Stradsbroke, England, in 1811; was married to brother Pipe in 1847; was baptized by Elder L. F. Collins, in Ganesboro, England, in 1834; moved to America in 1851. Her disease was cancer of the stomach, from which she suffered extreme pain and sickness for several weeks; but God in mercy called her to her eternal home. It was a number of years after they moved to America before they found the church of Christ, the pillar and ground of the truth, in its visible order. Finally in the providence of God they were led to the house of their Master's brethren, somewhere in the state of New York, and united with them. After several years they moved in the vicinity of the Old School Baptist Church at Riker's Hollow, N. Y., where they united, and where she died in full fellowship.

Words fail to express the value of sister Pipe as a wife and mother, or how she will be missed by her husband and children, who cared for her so tenderly in her sickness. May the dear Lord give them great grace to support them in their deep sorrow. O how she will be missed in the church! She was indeed a mother in Israel. She was of few words, but every word was to the point and very expressive. She was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her, especially her brethren. But she is at rest with her dear Savior, whom she loved above all else, and desired to be just like him. On Saturday preceding her death on Monday she said to me, "The same truth that has been my joy and support for sixty years is my only support now. I have nothing else to rest in." The text and hymns used at her funeral were her own selection. The writer spoke to a large congregation of attentive listeners at the meeting-house; after which her remains were carried to the cemetery at Prattsburgh, N. Y., and buried.

D. M. VAIL.

WAVERLY, Pa.

DIED—August 2d, 1894, Polly Montague, aged about 84 years.

She had been unable to walk from infancy, but supported herself by her needle until the last few years. The county authorities contributed to her support in the village of Royalton; but being taken out of the county to receive better care among her brethren, it was expected that her county support would be denied her. Then arose the question, Shall she be taken to the poor-house, or shall the church consider itself an infirmary for its poor? Not but that the best attention would be bestowed upon her if taken away, but shall she be isolated from her brethren and sisters, and surrounded by strangers, who would likely be as strange to her religious views as to her person? For she keenly appreciated the presence of her brethren. Strange to tell, a difference of views prevailed; but she was retained among her fellow church friends because of the strength of that tender tie which binds in one bundle the family of heaven. She was anxious to depart and be with her Lord, and died with no relative near, but was followed to her narrow house by a large number of her neighbors, who thus demonstrated their regard for her memory.

By request a few remarks were made by the writer upon 1 Corinthians xv. 53, 54; after which the body was laid in its dusty bed, there to await the sound of the last loud trumpet, to call the heavenly family together, where no distinction will be made because of honor, wealth or talents, as in this sinful world, but all one in Christ their Lord.

"Ah, lovely appearance of death!
What sight upon earth is so fair?
Not all the gay pageants that breathe
Can with a dead body compare."

THOMAS COLE.

ROYALTON, Ohio.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Please publish the death of brother Thomas Turner, of the Mill Creek Church, W. Va., aged about 74 years.

He was baptized by the writer in the year 1879, if I mistake not. He told me before his death that all fear of death had been taken away, and he was ready and willing to go. To Miss Ida Thompson he said, "I have seen the Father, and I believe on his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ." To sister Anna Turner, his daughter, he said, "The Lord has shown me that I am one of his children." He died in peace, and we believe him at rest. He was a kind and loving brother. The church has suffered a great loss, but we trust that our loss is his eternal gain.

May the tender mercies of the living God be the comfort and support of the lonely widow and surviving children.

Your brother, I hope,

E. V. WHITE.

LEESBURGH, Va., Aug. 29, 1894.

CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.

ACCORDING to appointment, the following named brethren and sisters, to wit, Nicholas Hess, Jr., Anna Hess, Hugh McKean, Mary J. McKean and Gipson McKean, holding letters of dismission from the churches of New Vernon and Middletown & Wallkill, met at a school-house near Shohola Creek, Pike Co., Pa., on Friday morning, August 24th, 1894, for the purpose of being organized into a gospel church.

There were present by request Elder D. M. Vail, of Waverly, Pa., Elder Wm. L. Beebe, of Warwick, N. Y., Elder Benton Jenkins, of Middletown, N. Y., and Deacon S. B. Beyea, of New Vernon, N. Y.

Elder Wm. L. Beebe was chosen Moderator, and Elder Benton Jenkins Clerk.

The letters of dismission were read, and also the Articles of Faith as adopted by the brethren making the application, which were approved by the council; whereupon the council proceeded to constitute them, under the name of the SHOHOLA CREEK PREDESTINARIAN BAPTIST CHURCH.

WM. L. BEEBE, Mod.

BENTON JENKINS, Clerk.

AFTER being constituted the church chose brother Hugh McKean Deacon, and brother Gipson McKean Clerk; after which the ordinance of the Lord's supper was administered.

The post-office address of the Clerk is Shohola, Pike Co., Pa.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING
THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT
SUBSCRIBERS.

Ebenezer Clark, Ohio, $2.00.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Seneca, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Lexington Association is appointed to be held with the Olive & Hurley Church, near Shokan, Ulster Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday following in September, 1894, to begin at ten o'clock. We cordially invite ministering and other brethren and sisters of our faith and order to meet with us.

Those coming on the Ulster & Delaware R. R. will be met at Shokan on Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning, and taken to the meeting.

WM. WINN, Church Clerk.

THE Siloam Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon and Washington will be held with the Oak Creek Church, about ten miles northeast of Roseburgh, Douglas Co., Oregon, commencing on Friday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1894, and continuing the two following days.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming by railroad will be met at Roseburgh and conveyed to the place of meeting.

N. J. SHANKS, Clerk.

THE second annual session of the Peace Valley Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will be held with the Friendship Church, Acton, Hood Co., Texas, commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren coming by rail will be met with conveyance at Cresson, on the Ft. Worth & Rio Grande R. R., and at Granbury on the same road. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren of our faith and order.

PRESTON STAGGS, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE annual three days' meeting with the church called Cow Marsh is expected to commence on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September, at two o'clock p. m.

The morning train down the Delaware R. R. from Wilmington will be met at Woodside Station, and the up train leaving Salisbury at 7:30 a. m. will be met at Felton, and the friends taken to places of entertainment.

We hope for a season of refreshing and encouragement, and cordially invite our brethren and friends from abroad to come and share with us.

E. RITTENHOUSE, Pastor.

PLEASE publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that a yearly meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Columbia Old School Baptist Church, Jackson County, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north will be met at Napoleon, and those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Church Clerk.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

WE have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		ST. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore " because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'
n ver. 31.		18 " Mary Magdalene came and told
CHAPTER XX.
1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.
		16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.
		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'
		18 " Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz: Single copy.....$ 05 Twelve copies..... 50 Thirty copies..... 1 00 Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1894.

NO. 37.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHENT, Ky., Aug. 29, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—As I was returning from the Licking Association a few days since, in company with Elder P. W. Sawin, he and I were conversing in the cars upon the wonderful truths given to the saints in the sacred word. In that conversation an inquiry was raised as to what is revealed in the tenth verse of the second chapter of Genesis, which is in these words, "And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads." The inquiry that arose in that conversation was as to what was prefigured by that river, and its being parted, and its becoming into four heads. You will please pardon me for offering to you and brother Sawin some of my feeble thoughts upon that subject.

The apostle says, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." The declaration recorded by Moses in regard to that river is part of that Scripture, and commands our attention. The saints as they travel toward their future and eternal home are often oppressed by a deep sense of their blindness and want of understanding of the divine truth recorded in the sacred word. But when the dark clouds are dispersed by the Spirit they are made to rejoice and give thanks to him who hath led them out of darkness into light.

The text says, "A river went out of Eden to water the garden." Solomon says, "A garden inclosed is my sister, my spouse, a spring shut up, a fountain sealed." That garden is the bride, the Lamb's wife. She is inclosed by the attributes of her God, and has been so inclosed from the ancients of eternity. But she has been watered from the dawn of time by that river which went out of Eden. It went out of Eden, a land of purity. Nothing was found or could exist in that land which was corrupt; and hence when our first parents sinned, God drove them out of that garden. But a river went out of that land of purity to water that precious garden that was inclosed by the love of God, and was shut up by the unalterable decree of that God who loved her with an everlasting love. She was shut up from all danger, all harm. To her it is declared, "Who are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

But that river was parted into four heads; still it was the same river, and its precious water was as sweet to Abel as it is to any of the dear saints that now sojourn in the earth. Abel drank of that river, which enabled him to offer a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; and all the dear saints are daily drinking from that great river, which enables them to bring an offering into the courts of our God; an offering which is acceptable in the courts of the Most High God, because it is the offering of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. To soothe and heal the wounds that sin has made, they flee to that great river of God's love and grace, and drink deeply, which causes them to rejoice in Christ Jesus, having no confidence in the flesh.

The name of the first head of that river was Pison. From that head Abel, Enoch, Noah, and all God's dear people who lived before the flood, drank. That head of that great river which was called Pison evidently prefigures that dispensation in which Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous. And Enoch was translated, that he should not see death. Before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God. All the dear saints, even in our day, have the testimony that they please God; for they have that faith which is a fruit of the Spirit, and in the sweet exercise of that faith they look away from earth to him who is the resurrection and the life, and who is made unto them wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption. In that faith they rejoice, because he who is their resurrection hath ascended upon high, and in their unity with him they are translated, and will never see death in all its horrid forms, for their glorious Lord is their resurrection and their life. In that faith which was given to Noah he prepared an ark to the saving of his house, by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

The name of the second river is Gihon, which prefigures that dispensation in which Abraham by faith sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. In that dispensation was given to them this great and glorious promise, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." That was called the patriarchal dispensation, and in it God's dear people drank deeply from the waters of that river, and rejoiced in the constant manifestations of the love, mercy and goodness of the Lord our God toward them, which enabled them to look by faith to that great day when the Messenger of the covenant would suddenly come to his temple. Our Lord said to the Jews, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it, and was glad." He saw it by faith; for he drank of the waters of that river. He saw the glorious appearing of Jesus upon the earth, when he would come and make one great offering for sin. Thus beholding him, Abraham was made glad. And all the dear saints are made glad when beholding by faith the wonderful works of our Lord and King in the redemption and final glorification of his people.

The name of the third river is Hiddekel, which prefigures that dispensation in which the law was given, which pointed away by the offerings in the temple service to the great sacrifice that would be made when the great and notable day of the Lord would come, when he by one offering would forever perfect all them that are sanctified, all them that were given him in the everlasting covenant of redemption, and in which holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Spirit, and foretold the coming of our Lord upon his great mission, which was to save his people from their sins. Yea, more than that, those prophets declared his great and wondrous character; and in doing so one of them said, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder. And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Moses in receiving the law on that cloud-clapped mount, standing in the presence of the great I Am, and Aaron putting on the priestly robes and making the offerings required by the law, which were only a shadow of good things to come, and all those among the twelve tribes of Israel who by the power of the Holy Spirit were enabled to hear and understand those great and wonderful prophecies, and to comprehend and understand the things prefigured by the offerings in the temple service, like Abraham were glad to see the day of the Lord, and drank deeply of the precious waters of that river.

But it is written, "And the fourth river is Euphrates." That is the fourth head of that river that went out of Eden, that land of purity, to water the garden. The Lord in the covenant with Abraham said, "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Thus it will be seen that the Almighty calls that river, the Euphrates, a great river. Then it fitly prefigures the fourth dispensation, the gospel dispensation, in which all the saints, from old Simeon to the last one who will live on the earth at that period when the angel will stand with one foot on the sea and the other on the land and swear that time shall be no more, will drink, and have drank, from the ever sweet and precious waters of that river. While here below they have all the promises of the gospel to sustain and uphold them amidst the cares, sorrows and afflictions of a sin-cursed world. They have the glorious gospel preached to them, which presents the sacred name of Jesus in all its great and precious fullness; that name in which is embodied all the great and wonderful attributes of him who rideth upon the heavens in the help of his elect, his chosen people. In that great name they behold by faith him who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor. The angels could not suffer that death to which he was subjected by reason of his unity with his people. Death had passed upon all, for all had sinned, and death was the wages of sin. None could meet the demands of the law which his people had violated, but the glorious Son of God. There were none that could help him in the great work of the redemption of his people. He said by the prophet, "And I looked, and there was none to help, and I wondered that there was none to uphold; therefore mine own arm brought salvation unto me." Again he says, "In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the Angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old." God is love, and is immutable, and in that never changing love he redeemed them, and carried them all the days of old. And it is written,

"Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness." John said, "And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." The water of that river was clear as crystal, and it proceeded out of the throne of God and the Lamb. The psalmist says, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever. The sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre." That river which John saw is the same which was prefigured by that river which went out of Eden. It was but one river, yet it had four heads. But John saw that river when all was accomplished in the great work of redemption. He saw it in the gospel dispensation; that dispensation of which the prophet speaks, saying, "Behold, a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." A throne is the habitation of a king, and a sceptre is the emblem of his power and right to reign. When John saw that river, our glorious Lord and King had fulfilled his mission to earth, had ascended up on high, and was seated on that great white throne, of which John speaks, saying, "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose presence the earth and the heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them." That throne was the throne of his mediatorial power and glory, where he ever liveth to make intercession for his saints, his redeemed. There he will continue to reign till time shall be no more.

The first river prefigured the first period in the history of the world. In that period or dispensation the power, love and mercy of God were manifested to his saints; and beholding them by faith, they drank deeply from the waters of that river, and rejoiced, having assurance that the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's head.

The name of the second river was Gihon, which means valley of grace. That river prefigures the patriarchal age. It evidently was an age of the manifestation of God's grace to his people. In it his people had the glorious promise made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that in their seed all the families of the earth should be blessed, which was a promise of the coming Messiah. In that age God with a high hand and an outstretched arm delivered his chosen people from bondage, just as he will deliver his elect from the bondage of sin and corruption. Pharaoh and his host could not defeat and make void the covenant and promise of God made with Abraham, "Unto thy seed have I given this land." Nor can all the powers of darkness make void the everlasting covenant of redemption. Of the glorious Son of God, the anti-type of Abraham, it was declared,

"He shall save his people from their sins."

The name of the third head to that river which went out of the garden was Hiddekel, which means, sharp voice, sound. That head of the river prefigures the third or law dispensation. It is written, "And it came to pass on the third day, in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud on the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud, so that all the people that were in the camp trembled." Again, "And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice."—Gen. xix. 16, 19. Then surely that head of that river was Hiddekel, which means, sharp voice, sound. In that long, dark shadowy dispensation the Lord led Israel, his chosen people, in a way they had not known, and in paths they had not seen; just as he is leading his saints through all their earthly pilgrimage. In that dispensation he gave Israel a law, which they did not keep, and they were sorely punished for their disobedience; just as the dear saints in this age of the world, who fail to keep the commandments of the Lord, and gloom, sorrow and weeping for a time is their portion. But when Israel was delivered from Egyptian bondage, and led into the land of promise, which flowed with milk and honey, and when they were delivered from Babylonish captivity, they rejoiced and drank deeply of the waters of that river.

And the fourth river is Euphrates. The meaning of that name is, that makes fruitful. It fitly prefigures the gospel dispensation. Surely in this dispensation the dear saints have the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. These are all the gifts of God to his redeemed. To Israel he gave a law, and he gave them the land of promise. But how much more glorious, dear saints, are the gifts of God to you! These great and wonderful gifts are all freely bestowed upon you; for "by grace are ye saved;" saved from the corruptions of a sin-cursed world; for ye are kept by the power of God; saved from the awful curse of a violated law, because your glorious Lord is made unto you righteousness and redemption; saved from the sting of death and the victory of the grave, because he who suffered the tortures of Calvary and was laid in Joseph's new tomb is your resurrection and your life. He rose a mighty conqueror, and brought in perfect and complete redemption to all his chosen people. Then surely Euphrates is a great river, for it prefigures this glorious gospel in which the saints sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. There they have the gospel preached to them, upon which they feast and feed, and grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. It is thus they drink freely of the waters of that great river, the streams whereof make glad the city of our God.

Affectionately yours,

H. COX.

STATE ROAD, N. C., Aug. 27, 1894.

B. L. BEEBE—My very dear and highly respected brother in the precious faith of Jesus:—I herein inclose to you the experience of our dear and very precious brother, Elder H. B. Jones, of Texas, for publication in the dear old SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Please publish it for the benefit of its many readers, for I feel sure that it will be read with much interest, and with comfort and encouragement. I have read it with much comfort and joy, and must say that if this poor sinner knows anything of the way of eternal life, brother Jones has been along that path.

May God sustain our dear paper, is my prayer.

WM. R. WELBORN.

LONGVIEW, Texas, Aug. 5, 1894.

ELDER WM. R. WELBORN—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—In compliance with your request and a promise on my part I will now try to write you some of what I sometimes hope have been the dealings of the Lord with me from my childhood until the present time. I desire, however, to preface with a few remarks. I have thought, since receiving your request, that if you could see and know me as I really am, or as I sometimes see myself, you would not care to know much of my past history. In all that I say, then, I desire simply to recount some of the blessings of God bestowed on a poor, unworthy sinner; for God's blessings have been great and abundant toward me, while I have been so prone to wander, so foolish and sinful. If I am anything at all in the sphere of God's kingdom, "By the grace of God I am what I am," a poor sinner saved by grace, if saved at all. I know that these are common sayings among the children of the Lord, perhaps because they convey a more correct idea of their feeling than any others that they can command. It was my hope in my younger days that I would become more spiritually minded and less carnally minded when I grew older; but I have since daily learned more and more of my mistaken idea. My daily foolishness and evil imaginations sometimes make me doubt that I have ever known a genuine christian experience. This much I think I know, that if I am a child of God I am entitled to no credit therefor. If I have at any time been able to walk more uprightly than others I am entitled to no credit for it. If I am anything as a gift in the house of God, or worth anything to his people as such, I deserve no credit for that; for I feel sure that I would have been anything but all this if I had been left to myself. Whenever I am blessed with any evidence that I am accepted of the Lord I feel that to his sovereign grace and tender mercy is due all the praise, glory and honor.

I was born in Bibb Co., Ga., May 27th, 1856. In my early childhood I was impressed with the idea that I was not prepared to die, and had a great dread of what was called the "judgment day," so much so that I sometimes dreamed frightful dreams concerning the matter, such as the day is at hand; the earth is being burned up; I see others being saved, but I am on the perishing side; I am too sinful for God to save me. Like all of Adam's race, I suppose, I thought that God would save or condemn me according to the merits or demerits of my conduct here on earth; so in my childish mind I set many resolutions (which were about as often broken) to live a better life. As well as I can now remember, my chief idea of reformation consisted in being obedient to my parents, in being kind to all around me, in refraining from the use of bad language, in observing the Sabbath, &c. To those things were added from time to time, as I grew older, more of the work-system religion, as Arminian Sabbath School literature fell into my hands. My father, who had never made any public profession of religion, died when I was about nine years old. My mother, who was a Primitive Baptist, never caused her children to attend Sabbath School, while she never especially forbade them going, that I know of. Through my oldest sister, who was a strict Methodist, and who was married and had a family as far back as I can remember, this Sabbath School literature reached our house occasionally. Among other things was a book entitled "The Ten Commandments Illustrated." I very attentively read it, and undertook to abide by its teachings. Of course the idea was that by so doing I would gain heaven hereafter, and also many blessings in this life. Among other good things that I felt in duty bound to observe was to read my Bible; and strange as it might seem to some, while trying so hard to live so as to gain heaven, I would contend for salvation by grace, for the doctrine of election, predestination, &c. I read in my Bible, "By grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified." Again, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." I did not then understand how that these Scriptures condemned the idea of salvation by works. It seemed that in setting my good resolutions, while I could get along very smoothly for awhile, I could not reach that state of perfection which I desired before I would fall through, so to speak, and get worse, it seemed, than I had ever been; so after awhile I became discouraged and tired of trying to be good, and concluded that I would enjoy this life as best I could. While I did not run with the dissipated, nor engage in drinking to excess, cursing, swearing, &c., I became very much engaged in balls and parties, and other pastimes of the young; but amidst all this serious reflections regarding my condition would occasionally come upon me, and I would feel that I was a guilty sinner before God, and unprepared to meet him in peace. It still seemed to me that to do good was very essential if I ever gained heaven; and I could look around me and see others that I thought were good, but I was far from it. It seems that I was forcibly impressed with the idea that mine was a different case from that of others—an extreme case. I had tried to be a good boy, but had failed in every attempt. I had tried to pray often, but that had proved a failure. I think I had an idea that some change had to come about with me that had not come, and that change I desired to see.

Thus things worked along with me, occasionally having a spell of serious and troubled reflections, and then for a time almost forgetting all about it, until in the fall of 1874, when I was married, which wound up my career of frolicking; for I was very poor, and had to go to work. Early in the spring of 1875 I hired to a man for wages to work on a farm. He had no family except himself and wife, and she was at her father's house, confined to her bed with consumption; so I moved into the house with this gentleman, and remained with him until November of the same year. His wife died shortly after I moved there. Some time previous to her death my troubles returned upon me with a double force, and I reached the point during this period that I could find no rest. I desired privacy as much as possible; it suited my feelings. Even my young and devoted companion was no company to me the greater portion of my time. I remember especially, in gazing into the grave of the lady above mentioned, that it seemed "the pangs of hell gat hold upon me." The gloomy forebodings, the black and heavy cloud that enshrouded my mind during those days, my pen cannot describe nor my tongue tell. The sentence of death was upon me, and I think I realized it. Not many days after the incident referred to above I was alone, closed up in a room. I was occasionally reading in a hymn book, and perhaps the Bible; but thoughts of my condition occupied my mind. I concluded that mine was an outside case, my doom was sealed, and hell was my portion; yet I could not help but pray to God to have mercy on me, a sinner, though I felt to acknowledge his justice in my condemnation. I had hoped that I was under conviction, and that I might one day have a hope; but now my hopes had all fled, and I lay a poor, polluted, helpless beggar at the feet of him whom I had so sinned against, begging for life, though death be just. About this time (whether I read it, or whether it occurred to my mind without reading it, I cannot tell, but it had never attracted my attention before) this verse of poetry occurred to me,

"Behold, my vital blood I pour,
A sacrifice to God;
Let angry justice now no more
Demand the sinner's blood."

With this trouble vanished, and a peace that passeth understanding took its place. Joy unspeakable and full of glory took the place of darkness and mourning. I arose from my seat, and walked the floor in joyful surprise.

"When first I was delivered
I hardly could believe
That I, so vile a sinner,
Such favor should receive."

I then thought I should never more see trouble. I could not conceive how one who had been so highly favored as I had been could go into disobedience to the commands of him who had done so much for him. In my ignorance and inexperience I knew nothing of a doubt or fear. I thought a christian's life was one of peace and happiness; but there were lessons in store for me which could only be learned in the school of experience. I was at this stage perhaps fully prepared to accept all that is contained in the traditional expressions, "changed from nature to grace," "killed to the love of sin, and made alive to holiness," &c. But I had to learn by sad experience that while I could hope that I was of that happy number "whose transgressions are forgiven, and whose sin is covered," that while I am "dead to the law by the body of Christ," sin still lives and sometimes reigns in this flesh. A cloud soon overshadowed my mind, and I feared that I was mistaken about the whole matter. I began to think that a child of God could not have such foolish and sinful thoughts and imaginations as I had. I found that I was just as full of lust, covetousness, pride, envy and bitterness as I had ever been before, and all my strength and substance seemed at times to be given over to this line of thought and feeling; and although twenty years have rolled by since I was first made to hope that I was interested in these things, I am just as prone to wander, just as much in love with the world, as ever. I sometimes fly into a passion, and gratify this old, fleshly nature by giving vent to my feelings in words and actions. I still lust, and would often have given way to my lusts, to my ruin and the disgrace of the cause of Christ, had I been left to myself, or had I the power to put my thoughts into execution. I covet, and still seek to accommodate these covetous inclinations. Is this a dark picture, my brother? Would that it could be made no darker than this, were all told. But why should I seek to magnify the evil that is in me in your eyes? Perhaps you have already heard enough to doubt me, as I doubt myself sometimes; but in these matters, if I know my heart, I desire to be honest, if in nothing else. I desire to deceive no one. I am charged by some with denying any change in the christian; and by those with whom I stand identified in church capacity I am sometimes called a "No change Baptist," a "Hollow-log Baptist," &c. We are sometimes required to say that some part of man that is born of the flesh is also born of the Spirit, changed, killed to the love of sin, &c. While we maintain that the sinner (not some part of him) is the subject of the spiritual birth, Jesus says, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." A birth is both a deliverance and a manifestation. By one birth he manifested a child of Adam, by another birth a child of God. His condition is greatly changed, but he himself is not changed. "So then with the mind ["the mind of Christ"—1 Cor. ii. 16] I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin."—Rom. vii. 25. So then the child of God has two natures, or himself is two in one. It is called the flesh and the Spirit, the old and the new man, the outward and the inward man. That which is given the sinner is in the Scriptures called "the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive," eternal life, Christ in you the hope of glory, the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Christ, which if any man have not he is none of his, &c. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would."—Gal. v. 17. In that nature received in the first birth, and which characterizes him as a child of Adam, the subject of grace still loves the world and the things of the world; and in that nature which he has received in the second birth, and which characterizes him as a child of God, he loves God and truth, and hates sin in all its forms. This, my brother, is what I am taught in my experience, and according to my understanding is confirmed by Scripture testimony. This is the only way that I can account for the life of daily repentance which I have to lead, and which brings me into fellowship with the inspired apostle when he said, "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."—Rom. vii. 22, 23. This brings him to exclaim, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

A feeling sense of my utter destitution of power to keep myself, to keep my feet from stumbling, caused me to write the preliminary remarks in the first part of this letter. Much of my time is spent in mourning on account of my proneness to wander from the paths of rectitude; but sometimes I am led to recognize the fatherly hand of the Lord in leading me about and instructing me. I was enabled to take up my cross in the fall of the same year that I received a hope, and follow my Master in the ordinance of baptism. I had no difficulty in finding the church, for the Primitive Baptists were convenient to me, and were the only people that preached according to my feelings, and are the only people that I have ever found to this day who preach my experience. I united with the Mt. Paran Church, Crawford Co., Ga., in the early part of the fall of 1875, and was baptized by Elder S. B. Burnett. I have often felt unworthy of a place among my brethren, but have been so blessed with the protecting care and tender mercy of God being thrown around me that I have been enabled so to walk that no charge of any character has ever been preferred against me in the churches of my membership.

Now, my brother, I have at your request briefly and hurriedly written some things in connection with my experience, and will have to postpone writing on my exercises in regard to the ministry until some future time. I am pressed for want of time to write, but will continue the subject some time, if the Lord will. Excuse the seeming neglect in answering your letter; for I assure you that it was not for want of inclination to do so, but for want of a proper condition of mind and the opportunity to write.

I remain your little brother in hope of a better life,

H. B. JONES.

CHENEY, Neb., July 8, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—Inclosed you will please find the outlines of the experience of sister Mary Devore, one of our members, who has moved away so far that she is deprived of the privilege of being with us at our regular meetings, so she has written this letter to the church as a token of her love and fellowship. What a comfort it is for the church to receive such soul-cheering letters of love from those who are thus deprived of the privilege of being present in her assemblies. Surely the prayers of the church go out in their behalf, that God in his goodness and mercy may administer daily unto them such blessings as his hand alone can give, and cause them to meditate upon his goodness and mercy to them. And now, dear brethren, if you think it will be of any comfort to any of God's humble poor, and especially those who are situated as she is, away from the church, so that they cannot attend, I will be glad if you will insert it in the SIGNS. Your unworthy brother,

JOSEPH BRUCE.

VALPARAISO, Neb., June, 23, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS OF SALEM CHURCH:—I will try to
(Continued on page 293.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 12, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

FOLLOW ME.

THE redeemed family of God, called by grace, quickened by the Holy Ghost, delivered from wrath, are brought home to Zion with singing and everlasting joy. They are not come to Sinai, where the majesty of God was displayed in terrific emblems, to the affrighted tribes of Israel; "But ye are come unto mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Heb. xii. 22-24.

With this introduction, the inspired messenger of God warns his "holy brethren," who were "partakers of the heavenly calling," thus, "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh!" He that speaketh is the same whose voice once shook the earth, and now shakes the heavens, of whom the Father testifieth, that he is his beloved Son, and commandeth, saying, "Hear ye him."

At the head of this article we have placed the words of that King who is higher than Agag, and whose kingdom is higher than the kingdoms of men. In these two words are comprised substantially the whole preceptive law of our Lord Jesus Christ. All that is incumbent on christians, and all that is to distinguish them from the world, is comprised in this short command of their spiritual Leader and Commander. To obey this command is better than sacrifice, and to hearken unto it is better than the fat of rams; but rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft and idolatry. But to obey this command, a preparation of heart beyond that of nature or education is indispensable. Can ye drink of the cup which he drinketh, and be baptized with the baptism wherewith he is baptized? And yet, except a man deny himself, and take his cross and follow Christ, he cannot be his disciple. We cannot from any or all the powers of self follow him, for self must be prostrated and denied before we can enter the strait gate or walk in the narrow path which he has marked out by his examples and precepts for the feet of his followers. The spirit of this command implies a distinction between following him, as did those who had eaten of the loaves and of the fishes, and those who are denominated "followers of God, as dear children." That relationship, which without regeneration we cannot know, alone can qualify us to obey this command of the Lord Jesus. Such as are born of God, though sometimes slow to learn, are eventually taught of God to know the difference between following and attempting to lead. The followers' place is in the rear of their Leader; it does not become them to mark out their own course, and then pray God to follow with his blessing what they have planned, devised or accomplished. Such, however, is the manner of very many who profess to be his disciples; but their claim to discipleship cannot be admitted; they cannot be his disciples, because they do not follow him, but attempt to lead. But with such pretending followers we design to say but little at this time; we desire rather in this article to stir up the pure mind of the saints who have followed him in the regeneration.

As it has pleased the Father that in Christ all fullness should dwell, and that in all things he should have the pre-eminence, we may profitably contemplate him as going before in all things that relate to the salvation and government of his people. In all things wherein God's children are his followers, Christ is their Leader; and as their Leader, his goings forth have been of old, from everlasting (Micah v. 2), and "He bare them, and carried them all the days of old."—Isa. lxiii. 9. As a Leader he was made manifest, in coming out of his chamber and rejoicing as a strong man to run a race. His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it.—Psa. xix. 4-6. And while we may contemplate him as taking the lead, in the counsel of eternity, before he came forth from his chamber to occupy the tabernacle which was set for the Sun; leading in his infinite, eternal, immutable and invincible love towards his people, when there were no fountains abounding with water; leading as the beginning of the creation of God, and the first-born of every creature; as the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, we have a still more clear development of his illustrious course as the Leader of Israel, in the actual fulfillment of his purpose and grace, in the accomplishment of that race for which he came forth from his chamber as a mighty man to run. Connected with the sure mercies of David, God has said, "Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a Leader and commander of the people."—Isa. lv. 4. And as a Leader, or "Captain of the Lord's host," he appeared to Joshua.—Josh. v. 14, 15. As a Leader, he "led Joseph like a flock."—Psa. lxxx. 1. Moses bore a faithful record of our divine Leader, in Deut. xxxii. "The Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye. As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings, so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him." May we not exclaim, "Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods? Who is like unto thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders? Thou in mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed; thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation."—Ex. xv. 11, 13. "And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness."—Deut. viii. 2. "And I took thy father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and gave him Isaac."—Josh. xxiv. 3. This subject afforded devotional exercise for the sweet singer of Israel. "In the daytime also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire. And he led them on safely, so that they feared not; but the sea overwhelmed their enemies; and he brought them to the border of his sanctuary, even to this mountain, which his right hand had purchased."—Psa. lxxviii. 14, 53, 54. "And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation."—Psa. cvii. 7. We might greatly multiply our references to the record God has given us of his Son as a Leader and Commander of his people; but we would wish to refer our readers, those of them at least who have been led to the holy hill of Zion, to their own personal experience; for they have the witness in themselves that "to him the porter openeth, and the sheep hear his voice; and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice. And a stranger they will not follow."—John x. 3-5. With them he has always been beforehand. When he has drawn them, they have run after him; when he has shed his love abroad in their hearts, they have loved him; when he has broken to them the bread of life, they have feasted. As their Leader, he has traveled all the road in which they are called to follow. He before them has met the fiery law and canceled its demands; to that bar they follow him experimentally, and share in his triumph. He, as the first-begotten from the dead, has arisen from under the curse and dominion of the law; and although in him their deliverance was simultaneous, yet in point of experience he is the first-fruits, and afterwards them that are his at his coming. This order applies both to their deliverance in regeneration, and their final resurrection from the dead.

As the pattern or example for his people, he led the way in christian baptism, and from the waters of Jordan to the wilderness to encounter the temptations of the devil; to feel personally the force of Satan's fiery darts, and be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. In a life of spotless purity, meekness, patience and submission to his Father's will, of suffering shame, reproach, persecution and violence, he is far in advance of his most devoted disciples; and, in short, in all things he has the pre-eminence. His position as our Mediator is in all respects that of a Leader, and all that have ever come before him are thieves and robbers, who came only to steal, to kill and to destroy. In no case has he ever suffered his disciples to lead him. When they felt indignant at the treatment he received of men, and proposed to call down fire from heaven, he reproved them; and when in ecstasy of joy they proposed to build three tabernacles, a voice came out of the cloud, commanding them to hear him; it was theirs to listen to his voice, not to propose. We read only of his being led, when led by the Spirit, as in the case referred to above, when led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil; except when led like a lamb to the slaughter, led before Pilate, and led away to be crucified. Among the little band of his disciples there was but one leader. Judas was leader to those who came with the mob to arrest him. It was not the province of the primitive saints to devise ways and means for building up his cause, converting sinners, and evangelizing the world, and then to call on him to follow with his blessing, approbation, or co-operation, their means, efforts or devices. The thunders of Sinai are not required to hold the followers of Christ in awe, nor seventh commandment societies to keep them chaste, nor total abstinence societies or pledges to keep them temperate. His law is written in their hearts, and his grace is sufficient for them. They are the circumcision that worship God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

"Grace, like an uncorrupted seed,
Abides and reigns within;
Immortal principles forbid
The sons of God to sin."

That kind of religion which scoffs at the thought of waiting on or occupying a position in the rear of Christ, of waiting for him to command, to quicken, or to legislate, is not of him; they that possess it cannot be his disciples. But let it be remembered, that to protest against will-worship, superstition and idolatry, although good in its place, does not constitute us his disciples. Vainly may we call him Lord, if we do not the things which he has commanded. We cannot follow Jesus in paths that he has never trodden. We cannot follow him in vice, in licentiousness, in pride and vanity; he has never led in any such direction. To follow him will require us to go without the camp, bearing his reproach. The pathway is through evil as well as through good report.

May the writer of this article, and all his brethren who may read, bring home the solemn inquiry, in the language of the poet,

"Am I a soldier of the cross,
A follower of the Lamb?
And shall I fear to own his cause,
Or blush to speak his name?"

But lest some good brother should think our corn too old and flinty for the tender lambs, and such old sheep as have poor teeth, we will just say to those who are standing in the way and asking for the old paths, "If thou knowest not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherds' tents." Be not discouraged because of the way, though faint and ready to halt; the Lord will give you grace and strength proportioned to your days, and

"The weakest saint shall win the day, Though death and hell obstruct the way."

Bear in mind, brethren, that our Leader has passed into the heavens, and that all his followers shall follow him in his exaltation. Because he lives, they shall live also; and where he is, there shall they be also; for he has promised that he will raise them up at the last day.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., June 1, 1847.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 291.)

write you a portion of my christian experience, or my travels from nature to grace.

All my life, ever since I can remember, I have thought I would like to be a christian. I thought that as I grew older, and had more of the pleasures of this world, I would try and be a christian. I was very fond of dancing, and had a lively disposition, and always enjoyed myself to my heart's content. After the dances were over, and I was at home, I would think, You are just as bad as ever. You have said time after time that you were going to be a christian; but you are as far from it now as ever you were. I would then think that I must pray to the Lord, and he would forgive me, and then I would be all right. I would repeat at night my pharisaical prayers, and came to the conclusion that I was really becoming good. But still when one of those dancing times would come I would be easily persuaded to go, and after getting home would try my prayers again. Sometimes I thought I was getting along nicely, and soon would be a good christian. When I was about sixteen years of age the Missionary Baptists held a protracted meeting in the neighborhood, and with my brothers and sisters I attended the meetings. One of my sisters and myself got very much interested, and being over persuaded we went to the mourner's bench, as it was called. For three or four nights we went up to be prayed for. One night I became very happy. While others were shouting, I was silent, yet I felt very happy. They insisted that I should join them; but I thought I would see my father first, as I knew he did not like the Missionaries. My father and mother were Old School Baptists. Father told us that we had better wait awhile and see if there was any reality in our religion. I felt very badly about it, for I felt sure I ought to know that I had religion. I was obedient, and tried to please my parents, and to do all I could to show my father how good I was. After the meeting broke up, the excitement gradually wore off, for it was nothing more, and after a short time I was again dancing and attending parties of all kinds, and happy as the days were long. I forgot to pray at night, and knew that all my religion was vain and a delusion. But still I thought that when I should get my fill of this world's pleasure I would then try to be a christian. Thus time passed on until I got married and had a home of my own. We left Illinois and moved to Iowa, and after we had been there several years the Old School Baptists organized a church near us. My father and mother were in the organization. I always attended their meetings, but was not interested in them. By this time I had lost all my religion, and thought from what the Old Baptists preached that it was no use for me to try to be a christian. Then I would think it might be that they did not know, for everybody was not like them. I had heard the Arminians tell how they got religion, by doing all they could to please God, and that finally God rewarded them for all their good works, and saved them. So I again tried of myself to get religion, but was very sly about it, and again thought I was getting very good. Of course I thought my people would see I was getting good, but I would not tell them that I was getting to be a christian. I thought they would see it for themselves.

Thus time passed on until one of my sisters was converted at home. She did not live very far from me. Another sister was living still closer, so I ran over to see her. When I got there my converted sister was there telling what great things the Lord had done for her, and praising God; and my sister was rejoicing with her. She was an Old Baptist. As I stood there neither of my sisters saw me, and it seemed as though a voice spoke to me and said, "You have no part with them." I shook as with an ague. I turned around, opened the door, and ran home as fast as I could, crying as I went, "O wretched sinner that I am! Whither can I flee from the wrath to come?" When I got home I shut the door and stood there trembling. I felt myself to be one of the greatest sinners on earth, and cried, "Lord, have mercy on me, a wretched and undone sinner. What must I do?" It seemed as though something said to me, "You never read your Bible." It lay on the stand, and I started to get it, but was afraid to pick it up. I felt to be so vile and sin-polluted that I dared not touch it. I was alone in the house, and knelt down and tried to pray; but all I could say was, "Lord, have mercy on me, a poor sinner in thy sight, one of the vilest of thy creation." I finally picked up courage to try to read the Bible, but could not find anything to give me ease. There was no promise for me. It seemed that my sins were so great that God could not pardon one so guilty as I felt myself to be. My Arminian religion was all killed.

Thus time passed on for several months with me, sometimes feeling better, and sometimes feeling worse. I tried to keep it hidden from my family, for I did not want anyone to know anything about my troubles, and I told no one. At night before I would go to bed I wanted to try to pray, but did not want my family to see me or to know anything about it. O how miserable I felt! Sometimes I would throw myself across my bed, and there try to pray, in my stammering way, and ask God to spare me one more night, and let me see the rising sun once more before he cast me into everlasting punishment, which I felt would be just. I could adopt the language of the poet and say,

"And if my soul were sent to hell,
Thy righteous law approves it well."

Sometimes my burden of guilt would not bear so heavily upon me, and I could feel cheerful. At such times I would do all I could to banish my bad feelings and get rid of that load of sin by being lively. Sometimes I thought nothing ailed me. The Old Baptists met once a month, and I attended their meetings, but was in much trouble. I felt that I was walking in darkness, and that it was the last time I would be permitted to meet with them. O how miserable I felt! The members all seemed so good, and all spoke to me, and shook hands with me. I thought if they only knew how sinful I was they would not shake hands with me. I could not stay in the house while the preaching was going on, but went out and wandered around, wishing I had remained at home. I went to the meeting the next day, but did not want to go; yet I could not stay at home. My soul felt dark and guilty, and my heart dead within me. The day seemed dark and gloomy to me, and my cry within was, "O! is there any one like me?" Yes, my cry was, "Lord, have mercy on me, an undone sinner, without hope and without God in the world." While sitting there and trying to listen to the preaching it seemed as though I could neither hear nor see. Either my soul was in darkness, or else my eyesight was obscure. I said to a sister by my side, "It is night," it seemed so dark to me.

Dear brethren and sisters, the darkest hour is just before day; and so it was in my case. The brethren and sisters held what they called a conference meeting, after the preaching, during which they talked and told of their experiences. O how I wanted to get away with my load of sin, and to hide myself! I knew not where, I cared not where, so that I were away from there, where God's people were. But "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." It seemed to me in the twinkling of an eye that my load of sin was gone. I felt the Savior's presence drawing nigh, and I exclaimed, "Here, Lord, take me as I am. I can do nothing more." There seemed a beautiful light surrounding me. O how happy I was! My soul was filled with that joy which is unspeakable and full of glory. I could praise God as I never had before. I loved everybody. I felt as though I would never suffer again. I hardly knew how time passed at that time. I went forward and tried to tell what the dear Lord had done for me. I was received, and baptized. That was twenty-eight years ago last May. I have my seasons of doubts and fears; but when Jesus reveals his presence to us again, then we feel to say within ourselves, I will never doubt again the One who has done so much for me. But the warfare goes on. "When I would do good, evil is present with me." This warfare will go on until the end of time with us.

Thus I have given an outline of my travels from nature to grace, but it is poorly connected. Dear brethren, if you find anything amiss in it do not receive it. It is written by one of the weakest.

Your little sister in a precious hope,

MARY DEVORE.

THE LAST DAYS.

"In the last days perilous times shall come."—2 Tim. iii. 1.

Are we to look for these last days in the future, or have they come and gone, or are we living in the midst of these last days? We must of necessity take one of the three positions. We should notice what is said will take place during these last days, and then see if we can decide which position is tenable. Do we see men covetous? Very much so; and no sane man will doubt it. We see men who have been thought to be above suspicion, striving by every conceivable means to heap to themselves the things of this world. Even zealous professors of Christianity stoop to petty tricks to gain a few dollars from their fellow-man. We see how the poor are oppressed by the more favored in this world's goods. "The almighty dollar" is the coveted price among all classes of men. This is one of the indications of the last days. Do we see men lovers of their own selves? Yes, it is a sad truth. Almost every one is for self, instead of every one pleasing his neighbor for good to edification.—Rom. xv. 2. This is another evidence of the last days. Do we see men boasters? Most of us will deny this; but to the test. Do we not see men traveling hither and thither, proclaiming what they have done in bringing sinners to Christ, saving so many sinners here and there, and how much money they have given for the heathen, for the spread of the gospel, and how much they have given to the poor and to the Lord? Do we not see and hear all these things? Yes, verily. This is another evidence of the last days. Do we not see men and women proud? Truly we do. Do we not see men dress as fine as clothes can make them, and sometimes at the seller's expense? But some will say, "The Scriptures require decency." True; but decency is not pride, although pride may carry decency with it, but not always. Do we not see men look down with scorn or indifference upon his poor brother? Indeed we do. This is another evidence of the last days. Do we see disobedience to parents? O how many of us have been made to mourn on account of such, notwithstanding the kind, loving and heart-wooning pleadings of parents. This is another evidence of the last days. Do we see men unthankful? Yes, frequently. The good Lord sends us rain and drouth, summer and winter, according as his superior wisdom sees fit. Yet we see many professed Christians very unthankful; for they complain about there being too much rain, so that they cannot make good crops; or too much sunshine, so that they can make nothing, and can hardly live; or the cold is too intense, &c. This is another proof of the last days. Do we see men unholy? (Women are included in the word men in this communication.) Yes, deplorably so. Even some who call themselves godly men, Christians, servants of the Lord, engage in doings that some nonprofessors scorn to engage in. Do we see men lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God? Reader, be careful right here. I may get very close to you. Let us all test ourselves. There is a regular meeting at the regular place; the hour arrives for singing the songs of praise to our God and Savior for his mercies to us; prayer is offered to God for more mercies; the gospel is preached; some sit in the house and see both the ungodly and the professed believer pass right by the place of worship, and go on to town, or to the sea shore, or to some other place of pleasure, or to business. Do not they who thus pass show that they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God? Truly they do? Some remain at home and say the weather is too hot, too rainy, too cold, I am too busy, I am too tired. Reader, do you think God will hold such guiltless, whom he has commanded to assemble themselves together? Do such show that they have pleasure in God instead of themselves? This is another proof of the last times. Do any have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof? Such deny the power of God who say, "If I had not done my part I would be among the wicked yet." Such as these "creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts."—2 Tim. iii. 6. They are "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth."

I have thus given some ten or more Bible evidences of the things which will take place in the last times, or days. These are the things which the apostle said should come in the last days. "Men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers [this I overlooked, but it is true], disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." May we not boldly take the position that we are living in the last days? What manner of persons ought we to be, seeing the end draweth nigh? Every man's work shall be tried so as by fire. O that I may sound the alarm in the ears of the people of God. Alas! the world is ripe for almost anything that is base. "Be still, and know that I am God."—Psalm xli. 10.

A. D. HUTCHINSON.

PARIS, Mo.

SHERIDAN, Ore., Aug. 16, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I send you the following relation of experience, written by brother William Moffit, of Missouri, to his brother, living in Newberg, Oregon, who also has a good hope through grace that he is an heir of God's spiritual kingdom.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

V. J. TURNIDGE.

KNOXVILLE, Ray Co., Mo.

DEAR BROTHER:—You told me your experience in your letter, which I indorse from the first to the last. You wanted to know if there could be a mistaken idea in what you told me. I will answer that I have read it again and again, and meditated upon it at times, ever since I received it, and I can see nothing but the work of the Lord in it. It was certainly good to be there; for where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty. I feel quite satisfied that in your case the burden of sin was rolled away by the breaking in of the light of the living God, through which light you could look with the Spirit's eye and behold the glory-world, the great King, and all the host of God at his right hand. It is a happy thought that one day all the church of Christ in heaven and earth shall be caught up together in the clouds, and wafted away to immortal glory, to forever dwell with your God and my God, your Father and my Father. O glorious thought, that not one of the redeemed shall ever be left out. Then be of good cheer, for the Lord has revealed himself unto thee as the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. My brother, this calls my mind back to my youth, when in the seventeenth year of my age, while in my wild career, rolling sin under my lips as a sweet morsel, I was struck under conviction of my sins. I then for the first time saw myself a miserable wretch, all undone, and made to feel that I was without hope and without God in the world, a poor soul, a miserable wretch indeed. I languished and pined, and went to and fro, pleading for mercy, trying to pray. But all seemed in vain, as my prayers did not seem to ascend beyond my mouth. I was miserable, my brother, miserable indeed, until one night on going to bed, thinking all hope was gone, and that I was lost, world without end. I suppose I went out of doors, although I have no knowledge of going out; but I remember coming into the house, and found that the family had gone to bed. I do not know how long they had been in bed. No one said anything to me. I got ready and went to my bed, but O what agony and distress prevailed over me! It seemed that death stared me in the face. I lay myself down, thinking never to arise again. I thought I had sinned away my day of grace, and that now I must die and be forever banished from the presence of God. O the gloom, the cloud, the mountain of sins that rose up on every side and completely shut me in! It was the darkest hour of all my life. Mortal tongue can never speak words to express what were my sad feelings. "God, be merciful to me, a sinner," was the very breathing of my soul on laying down. Then, blessed be the most holy name of Jesus, a voice of singing broke forth from heaven, and I heard a voice saying to me, "Come up, come up higher." Just then I saw a light as from the throne of God descending toward me. There amazed I lay, looking through the light and viewing the choir of singers. The light completely wrapped me in. O glorious scene! All the happy throng were singing the most beautiful song, and all speaking the same words at the same time. There was not a discordant note. It was a song I had never heard before, and I reckon it is not lawful for a man to utter it, for I have never been permitted to repeat it. There I stood in the light, a happy soul. Sin all seemed to be gone, and not a single thought of this world, or of ever living here, entered my peaceful mind. All was peace. Tongue and pen fail to express the joy of my happy soul. And now, my brother, I must tell you that since that time I have had many ups and downs, the greater portion of my time away down in the slough of despond, where I can hardly love or fear, till I almost give up in despair; but occasionally I get a crumb from my Master's table. My brother, fear not; temptations are sure to come, but our Father's ever watchful eye is over all his children, and he teaches them to watch and pray.

Yours in christian love and fellowship,

WILLIAM MOFFIT.

FEBRUARY 4, 1894.

As the time of my departure is not far off, I thought I would try and call up some of my exercises from my boyhood; for I cannot tell the exact time when it was shown to me what a great sinner I was; but it was in the Lord's own appointed time; and he made me to know his great love that he had for sinners like me before the world was. On the 14th of September, 1859, he appeared to me the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. Then I thought my troubles were at an end; but O how different it has been with me. The tempter soon came, and seemed to say that I was deceived, and that I had deceived others, and asked what I was going to do. I thought I would go to the Lord and tell him that if I was deceived I wanted him to undeceive me, and that if I should find peace I might know all about it. But I have never been able to get that burden back just as it was, from that day till this, and now I am glad of it. There have been twenty-two years of battling with the enemy of peace, but I have had a faithful Captain, and he has brought me through unto the present, and I feel safe in trusting him the few more remaining months or years that I may stay in this world of sin and sorrow. I feel that for me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. The way in which I came into the possession of such a hope sometimes makes me rejoice; for I know it must have come from the Father of lights; and when I can see how undeserving I am of the notice of one that is so high and holy, it fills my soul with praise. I am glad it was the Lord's will to choose or elect his people, and that he gave me to believe that I was embraced in that choice. O how glorious the truth that it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps; but God moves by working in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure.

I was born in the county of Worcester, state of Maryland, October 11th, 1833, and was baptized on the second day of June, 1861, in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at Pitts Creek, by Elder J. C. Mears, where I still by the grace of God hold my membership, and where I hope to retain it until the day of my death. I am now in my fifty-ninth year, and it seems I am just waiting for my change to come, which I hope will be a peaceful one. I want to be able to say, "The Lord's will be done, not mine," when I lay this armor by.

W. J. PILCHARD.

LEBANON, Ohio, April 23, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN CHRIST:—It has been about two years and six months since I first seemed to realize my lost condition; but at first it was only a very small cloud of darkness over me. This soon vanished, and I seemed to forget all my troubles, and was rejoicing in the wicked ways of the world, deeper in sin than ever before. In the first place I concluded to become good. I was building a fence, but quit work, went to the house, took up some paper and a pencil, and wrote on it that I would not do anything that was not good in the sight of the Lord. But I had no sooner written this than I forgot myself and broke my vow. I tried again and again in many different ways; but failing every time, I found myself growing worse and worse. The clouds of darkness seemed to be gathering on every hand; my situation was now becoming more and more critical; my burden seemed greater than I could bear; and as I knelt by my bedside, trying to pray to God for forgiveness, the thought came to me that I was as a lion bound in heavy chains, prostrate before his keeper; that I was bound with a chain which the rains could not rust, and more durable than time. This thought struck me as though it came directly from God. I felt I was the most miserable creature living, feeling that I had no power over myself at all, but that the whole power lay in God; that he could in the twinkling of an eye destroy the whole world, or do whatsoever he wished. I was finally glad to seek a home among the Old School Baptists, after going to hear other preachers of different denominations, and not believing their doctrine. I am a Baptist because I am compelled to be, and not because I wanted to. I used to think that the Old School Baptists were behind the times, but I now think the other way.

Yours in hope,

W. H. JOHN.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Licking Old School or Particular Baptist Association, the members of the different churches composing the same, would hereby greet and receive the Associations in correspondence with us in christian fellowship and love.

WE desire to thank and praise the name of our God for the numerous blessings he is conferring upon us, and for the privilege of meeting together in an associated capacity, and of greeting each other with messages of love and fellowship, and in hearing the glorious gospel of the Son of God preached in its fullness by our brethren that are visiting us from different portions of the country, and for our numerous correspondents that have remained with us for so great a length of time, without the shadow of a difference. But we feel sad when we hear some of our aged brethren say that they do not expect to meet with us again on account of age and infirmity; yet we feel sure that there remains for them a rest with the people of God.

We have appointed our next annual session with the church at Bethel, Shelby Co., Ky., to begin on Friday before the second Saturday in September, 1895, when and where we hope to meet you again in the fellowship of the Spirit.

H. COX, Mod.

J. T. McCOUN, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

BRETHREN J. K. Holcomb and C. Holcomb request that we should state that the loaning of their names to the book "Diagram of the Churches" was with the understanding that portions of the original manuscript should be eliminated; but as the objectionable parts appear in the book, they do not indorse the work as a whole.

MARRIAGES.

SEPT. 4th, 1894, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at the residence of the bride's father, in Middletown, N. Y., Mr. George A. Osborn and Miss Janie A. Purdy, daughter of Horton W. Purdy.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Elisha Fortner, the subject of this notice, was born Feb. 12th, 1835, in Claiborne Co., Tenn., and was married to Sarah Day about the year 1857. To them were born ten children (three girls and seven boys), of whom nine are yet living, one girl having died.

Brother Fortner professed a hope in Christ some twenty years ago, and never failed to adorn that profession by an orderly walk and godly conversation. He was a firm believer in the doctrine of eternal, unconditional, personal election and predestination according to the foreknowledge of God, and salvation by grace alone. He united with the Primitive Baptist Church at Pleasant Point, and always filled his seat as much as possible until his death, which occurred on June 5th, 1894. He was ordained to the office of Deacon some years ago, which office he filled until his death, with honor to himself and to the church.

He leaves his loving wife, nine children and some grandchildren, with many other relatives and friends, who mourn his absence; but we mourn not as those having no hope, for we believe that our loss is his great gain.

"Why do we mourn departed friends,
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms."

The writer has been acquainted with brother Fortner for a number of years, and knew him to be a gentleman, in the broadest sense of the term, as well as an orderly-walking christian. He will be missed by many.

P. N. MOYERS.

CAPP'S FORD, Tenn., Aug. 1, 1894.

SISTER Jane Lindsey, wife of brother Wm. Lindsey, departed this mortal life about one o'clock a. m. on Thursday, August 9th, 1894, at her residence in Middletown, N. Y., in the 73d year of her age.

Sister Lindsey had been an invalid for more than thirty years, and the greater part of that time had been confined to her bed. At times she suffered greatly, but bore her sufferings with christian fortitude, being wonderfully blessed with the presence of her dear Savior, whom she loved to talk about. The Bible was her almost constant companion, and in the law of her God she meditated day and night. Her end was very peaceful, and she breathed her last without a struggle. Her husband and only daughter were visiting in Europe at the time of her death, where they had gone three weeks previously by advice of their family physician. At the time of their departure the sickness of the wife and mother seemed nothing serious, and her death was very sudden.

Sister Lindsey was born in Trowbridge, England, and came to America with her parents in the year 1847. She was a daughter of John and Hannah Rogers, who settled near Liberty, Sullivan Co., N. Y., soon after their arrival in this country. She was married to brother Lindsey on Dec. 18th, 1849, and moved to this city in the year 1858. She professed a hope in Christ, and was baptized in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church many years ago, her membership at the last being in the Middletown & Wallkill Church, of this city, with that of her husband.

The deceased is survived by her husband, two sons and one daughter, one son having died in the year 1865.

The funeral services were held at her late residence on Sunday, Aug. 12th, and were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, in the presence of a large congregation of relatives and friends. The body was embalmed, to await the return home of the husband and daughter, and on Tuesday, Aug. 21st was interred in the family plot in Hill-side Cemetery, this city, after a short service at the grave.

"Dear Lord, though bitter is the cup
Thy gracious hand deals out to me,
I cheerfully would drink it up;
That cannot hurt which comes from thee.

"Dash it with thy unchanging love,
Let not a drop of wrath be there;
The saints, forever bless'd above,
Were often most afflicted here.

"From Jesus, thy incarnate Son,
I'll learn obedience to thy will,
And humbly kiss the chastening rod
When its severest strokes I feel."

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

CONTRIBUTIONS received for Mary Parker, in Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

Elder J. R. Respass, Ga., 5; Friends at Grover, Pa., 9; Mrs. Macfarlane, Ontario, 1; Sallie Laytham, for self and others, Ky., 14; B. F. Flagg, Mass., 10; Mrs. Hanna, Iowa, 5; Elder Blake, Iowa, for self and others, 14; Mrs. Wilson, Md., 2; from Dr. Coulter, amount received by him, 17.50.—Total, $77.50.

SISTER Mary has recovered from the effect of the surgical operation, and is so improved that she can sit in a wheelchair and move in it. She is to leave the Hospital to-day, and be taken by our sister, Mrs. M. M. Rounsavell, to her home in Warwick, N. Y., who will attend her there for awhile. The friends, as will be seen, have responded liberally to my call. After paying the Hospital expenses there will be left a sum for her. As she is no longer in the Hospital, there is no longer the special need for which friends have so kindly contributed. The change in her condition is most wonderful; but although free from pain, and able to lie down or sit comfortably, as she had not been for years, she is still helpless and dependent. I hope she will write for herself to the readers of the SIGNS soon.

Your brother in hope,

SILAS H. DURAND.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

A two days meeting will be held with the Jefferson Church, in Jefferson, Schoharie Co., N. Y., commencing on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September. We expect Elders H. M. Curry and W. C. Cornell, of Ohio, to be with us. We cordially invite all who love the truth.

D. C. HIX.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE annual three days' meeting with the church called Cow Marsh is expected to commence on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September, at two o'clock p. m.

The morning train down the Delaware R. R. from Wilmington will be met at Woodside Station, and the up train leaving Salisbury at 7:30 a. m. will be met at Felton, and the friends taken to places of entertainment.

We hope for a season of refreshing and encouragement, and cordially invite our brethren and friends from abroad to come and share with us.

E. RITTENHOUSE, Pastor.

PLEASE publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that a yearly meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Columbia Old School Baptist Church, Jackson County, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north will be met at Napoleon, and those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Church Clerk.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Juniata Primitive Baptist Association will be held with the Sidling Hill Church, in Fulton Co., Pa., to commence at ten o'clock on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, and continue Thursday and Friday.

We extend a cordial invitation to all of our faith and order to meet with us. All persons coming by railroad east or west will have to come on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Hancock on Tuesday, where they will be met on the Hancock side of the bridge and conveyed to the place of meeting. Try to be there as early in the day as possible, as the distance is about twenty miles.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Seneca, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Lexington Association is appointed to be held with the Olive & Hurley Church, near Shokan, Ulster Co., N. Y., on the third Wednesday and Thursday following in September, 1894, to begin at ten o'clock. We cordially invite ministering and other brethren and sisters of our faith and order to meet with us.

Those coming on the Ulster & Delaware R. R. will be met at Shokan on Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning, and taken to the meeting.

WM. WINN, Church Clerk.

THE Siloam Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon and Washington will be held with the Oak Creek Church, about ten miles northeast of Roseburgh, Douglas Co., Oregon, commencing on Friday before the fourth Sunday in September, 1894, and continuing the two following days.

A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth. Those coming by railroad will be met at Roseburgh and conveyed to the place of meeting.

N. J. SHANKS, Clerk.

THE second annual session of the Peace Valley Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists will be held with the Friendship Church, Acton, Hood Co., Texas, commencing on Saturday before the third Sunday in September, 1894.

Brethren coming by rail will be met with conveyance at Cresson, on the Ft. Worth & Rio Grande R. R., and at Granbury on the same road. A cordial invitation is extended to all brethren of our faith and order.

PRESTON STAGGS, Clerk.

APPOINTMENTS.

At Jefferson, N. Y., September 22d and 23d; Schoharie Hill, 24th; Middleburgh Church, 25th; Broome Centre, 26th; Gilboa, 27th.

Elder H. M. Curry and others, of Ohio and Maryland, are expected to be with us. All lovers of the truth are invited to attend.

D. M. LEONARD.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SONS, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1833, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1894.

NO. 38.

CORRESPONDENCE.

JOHN VI. 53-56.

"THEN Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him."

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST JESUS:—I received a letter sometime since from sister P. R. Barker, of Waverly, Union Co., Ky., asking me to give my views of the above portion of holy writ; and her request was for me to give them through the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. By your permission I will now try to do so in a very concise way, hoping that the Lord may bless them to the comfort of the dear sister, and to the readers of the SIGNS generally. I never saw nor heard of the sister until I received the request in her interesting letter bearing date August 4th, 1894, and in which she says, "I know there is a big sermon in these texts." Also she says, "All the preaching I hear is from the SIGNS." I fully agree with the sister that there is a big sermon in these verses, far too comprehensive for such a poor, weak, feeble and short sighted dust-worm of the earth as I am; but if I can only communicate in a comparative sense a cup of cold water to one of the Lord's little ones, I shall be richly rewarded. God's people in their pilgrimage here both hunger and thirst after righteousness, after Christ, who is the bread and water of life; and their hungering and thirsting is an unmistakable evidence of life; for life precedes all action. This principle Christ has plainly taught in the verses under consideration.

Eating and drinking are acting, which only the living can do. "The dead know not anything." They do not even know that they are dead. Hence where there is life there is power to move and do the actions of life, according to the ability of the living subject. This fact Jesus has emphasized in the context, as well as in the verses under consideration. Hence he said, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." Now, it is as plain as noon-day that those who do not eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of man have no spiritual or eternal life, no matter what their pretensions to religion are; and, on the other hand, no matter how feeble and faltering, weak and sinful (in the flesh), and even painfully doubtful, the Lord's little ones are, when they can realize a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and their hungering and thirsting soul is made to feed and feast on Christ, it is certain that they have spiritual life; for previous to being born again none hunger nor thirst for spiritual things.

A natural man cannot eat natural food nor drink natural water previous to natural life; neither can he desire to do so; but after being born of the flesh, with life, he then must needs both eat and drink in order to live naturally and move in his earthly relations as a natural man. His moving and acting in the vocations of natural life demonstrates beyond a doubt that he is alive; but without such evidences we cannot attribute to him life. So also are the children of God, when they are born again, born of God, made partakers of the divine nature, eternal life being communicated to them experimentally. Then they must needs eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, in order to live spiritually; and to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

"As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more [than the branch can] can ye except ye abide in me."—John xv. 4. This text proves the fact beyond doubt that there is an intimate union and communion with Christ and his people; that his children, who are members of his body, are receiving life every moment (Isa. xxvii. 3) from Christ, the source and fountain of life. Forasmuch then as they are receiving life and vigor every moment from Christ, who is their life, there is also every moment a flowing influence and quickening virtue to them, which causes them to live and bring forth fruit, which fruit is unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.—Rom. vi. 22. The verbs "eat" and "drink" in this array of Scripture, is in the present tense, and denotes a continuation of eating and drinking, or a constant partaking of the life and nature of Christ. As the branch is partaking of the life and nature of the vine in order to live and bear fruit, so also are the members of Christ's body partaking of him and his divine nature, in order to live and bear fruit; to live and do the actions of spiritual life; for without him we can do nothing. We can no more enjoy communion with Christ, and faithfully serve him, except as he enables us by the continual flow of his goodness, than a natural branch can of itself aloof from the vine.

Notwithstanding all the elect vessels of mercy were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, in order to holiness, I do not think there was any eternal life or immortality about them until quickened (Eph. ii. 1), until born again, born of God, or in other words, until eternal life was communicated unto them experimentally. And as God is the only absolute Sovereign in all the universe, this election or choice of God of his people was an act of divine sovereignty, irrespective of any goodness in them.—Rom. ix. 11, 12, 16. But in the fullness of time, "the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us [how did he save us?] by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly [how?] through Jesus Christ our Savior." Being born again, of incorruptible seed, by the word of God, which liveth (continually) and abideth (continually) for ever.—1 Peter i. 23. This Word of which the saints are born, being the eternal, uncreated word, is immutable and pure, and remains within them, whereby they are caused to hate sin, and produce the fruits of grace in the works of righteousness, the righteousness of obedience. From your letter, dear sister, I have no doubt but you have been permitted to know something experimentally of this eating and drinking in the enjoyment of the dear Savior and his blessed word; for the verses under consideration, together with the context, show the unity or oneness of Christ and his people, and their eating his flesh and drinking his blood in an experimental sense. The flesh and blood of Christ, as used in this connection, I think, just simply mean Christ, as is plain from verses 33, 35, and also 41, 48. And again, "As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by [through] the Father, so he that eateth [continually] me, even he shall live by [through] me."—Verse 57. Then in our experience we hunger and thirst after Christ, which has been the case with God's people in all ages of the world. David said, "As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God; when shall I come and appear before God?"—Psa. xlii. 1, 2. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," &c.—Isa. lv. 1. "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."—John vii. 37. And as we are brought in our experience to hunger and thirst after Christ and his righteousness, and our souls feed and feast upon Christ and his love, so we also hunger and thirst after his words; for they lead our minds to Christ. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them."—Jer. xv. 16. This text, together with all the tenor of Scripture, proves that the church is rooted and grounded in God's eternal love, and in a spiritual sense is growing out of Christ, upon the same principle that the branches are growing out of the vine; that the church of God is firmly united in Christ and among themselves by the Spirit, faith and love of God. Inasmuch then as there is an intimate union and communion with Christ and his people, they are one in an eternal life sense; for Christ is himself their life, and has said unto them, "Because I live, ye shall live also."—John xiv. 19. I say, inasmuch as these things are so, we should emphasize in our minds that Christ is the head, fountain and source from whence all the members derive life, fruitfulness, and all good. Therefore we do not eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, in order to eternal life, but because of eternal life, as Christ asserts in verse 54. "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath [not may have] eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." This eating and drinking is experimentally feasting on Christ and his love. And when it pleases God to give us the victory through Christ over our temptations and trials, and gives us to eat of the hidden manna, so that our souls soar away in spiritual enjoyment, it is then we can say, What gracious words proceeded out of his mouth. They are sweeter than honey and the honey-comb. Then, dear sister, I think it is in an experimental sense that the people of God eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ, when our souls are made to rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

Dear brother Beebe, I have hurriedly written this article, hoping it may in part answer the request of the aged and inquiring sister. Please correct both in matter and manner.

Yours in hope,

W. J. MAY.

PINSONFORK, Ky., Aug. 22, 1894.

BROWNSVILLE, Mo., June 7, 1876.

VERY DEAR CHILDREN, GRAND-CHILDREN AND GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN:—As I feel well assured that the time is almost come for me to leave you and go where time and time-things will be no more with me, I feel to write out my little experience, or what I believe the Lord has done for me. Unworthy as I feel myself to be, I believe he has taught me a glorious lesson in my heart, which the world with all its wisdom can never know or understand.

I was born in the year 1811, in the county of Monroe, state of Kentucky, on a little creek called Punccheon Camp, the waters of Barren River, and remained there until I was fourteen or fifteen years old. We then moved to the western edge of Allen County, I think in the year 1825, and lived on what is called Tramel's Fork of Drake's Creek, until I was grown and married. I was raised by professing and pious parents of the Old Baptist order. They were called United Baptists at that time. I tried to be moral, and really thought I was as good as most professors, and even better than some, as they did things I would not do. Yet I thought I had to undergo a change before I could be saved, and that the Almighty had to affect that change. I was traditionally taught this. I believed that the Almighty had to begin the work, and that when he did begin it he would perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. I have named this to show you the difference in children raised by different parents. I thought I believed these things, and I reckon that in the letter I did believe them; for I paid more attention to preaching, and the different kinds of doctrine preached, than any of the wild youths of the country at that time. I will go a little farther, and say that I thought I was smarter than most boys of my opportunities. But I now think that this was all carnal, and of the world. I sometimes would have serious thoughts about dying and meeting God in judgment; and the thought of being placed on the left hand and being banished from his presence forever was more than I thought I could bear. Generally when I would have these impressions I would promise the Lord, or rather myself, that I would do better for the future; but I was sure to fail in every instance. I fully thought I knew the way, and every crook and turn in the way, that the christian had to travel. I had read the travels of Christian as set forth by Bunyan, and had heard christians, as I thought, tell their experience; and I thought I knew it all; and I thought that when I should get certain things accomplished I would set about the matter in earnest. I thought I would not do like some professors had done, disgrace the cause, but would be a bright and shining star. But O what profound ignorance!

When I was about eighteen years old my mother died. While she was on her death-bed I tried to give her up, and went to the barn to try to sleep. I thought I would get rich before I attended to the religion which I thought it was so necessary to have. Then and there I believe the Lord showed me that I might labor and toil all my life, and accumulate riches, but in a few days the Lord would call me to account, and then what good would they do me? I then got to see that the great I Am rules and reigns in heaven above and on the earth beneath, and not man; that I was a sinner in his sight, and if he did not save me I would be lost forever. I had a more feeling sense of these things than I ever had before, and began to promise the Lord, as usual, that I would do better. But something said, "You better not promise; you will be sure to fail." For the first time in my life I prayed, if I ever did. I said, "Lord, help me, and enable me, and I will try to do better." I think I had some feeling sense of what I was saying. But after my mother died I soon was married, and my mind was necessarily drawn to the things of the world. My mother left eight children, and I was the oldest that was single. The others lay with a good degree of weight on my mind. About this time I commenced reading the Scriptures for myself. They taught me that God was holy, and that I was carnal, sold under sin. This I acknowledged to a certain degree. I felt a strange inward aching of heart that made me restless and uneasy. At the same time I saw such beauty in holiness, such glory in righteousness, that I desired it above all things I had ever thought of. But I could not at that time see myself the greatest sinner on earth; for, look at my condition as I would, I thought there were some who were worse than myself. I was then judging of outward sins, or acts. In this way I worried along for some time. I attended all sorts of meetings, and left off all outbreking practices, such as anger, swearing, &c. I believed then that the Lord had to convince the sinner and begin the good work in the heart; and I began to be uneasy, fearing he would pass me by and never begin the work in me. In this way it seemed that I got a real desire for the Lord to convince me of sin and show me what sort of a creature I was. I have heard some say that they tried to put their convictions off, by going in bad company, &c., but it was not so with me; for I had such a thirst for holiness, and saw such beauty in righteousness, that I desired to be filled, and knew of no other way, only by the convincing power of God's Spirit.

About this time the Lord gave me to see how good he had been to me all my life; that he had given me a being in the flesh; that he had upheld and supported me all my life, and that I had sinned against him from the earliest of my recollection to the present time. O what a great contrast there was between us! I wanted to love him, and thought I ought to love him. I tried to be sorry because I had so sinned against him. Sometime I would almost feel persuaded that the Lord had begun a good work in me; but it was so contrary to everything I had ever thought of, that I thought it could not be possible. But my prayer was, and is yet, "Lord, have mercy, and give me to see my condition as it really is; and if thou hast not begun that good work in me, and it can comfort with thy heavenly will, delay no longer." About this time the Lord, I hope, showed me what a desperately wicked and deceitful heart I had. It appeared that it was a sink of sin, a fountain of corruption. I could view myself the greatest sinner that ever lived. This at times made me cry, mourn and weep, for I could not see how God could be just and yet save such a hell-deserving sinner as I was. I then could say with feeling, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner. Show me the very worst of my case. If it be thy will, strike me down speechless, so that I cannot move hand or foot." I wanted to suffer. I saw it was so just that I should suffer, for I was such a hell-deserving sinner. I was willing to do anything in my power to appease the wrath of a sin-avenging God. I thought that by suffering, praying, weeping, mourning, together with many other good things I had in my power to do, I would become a suitable subject at least for God to have mercy upon. Sometimes I would go out and try to pray in secret; but I could not receive any comfort from my prayers, for my words seemed to fall dead to the ground from my lips, rather than ascend as a memorial before God. About this time Satan came and told me that I was too late; that the time had been, away back yonder, when I had some soft emotions of heart; that if I had attended to the matter then I might have been saved, but now it was entirely too late, for I had sinned away my day of grace. My heart at times would get so hard and unfeeling that I would almost conclude it was not the work of the Lord, but was of my own wicked heart, or the promptings of the devil. This would cause me to pray to the Lord with all my heart and soul that he would begin that great work with me, if he never had; and if he had, to deepen it and make it manifest in some way to me, for I desired to know it above all things in the world. Sometimes when my heart would feel a little tender and soft I could believe the Lord was in the work by his Spirit and grace, and I could weep and mourn. At other times, when I could not have any soft emotions of heart, I grieved because I could not grieve, and mourned because I could not mourn. Sometimes I would think I might as well give the matter up, as there was no mercy for me, and it was impossible for me to see how God could remain just and save such a sinner as I was, sin-defiled throughout. Instead of getting better, I thought I got worse. A load of sin and guilt hung heavy about my heart, and all my outward sins and iniquities had accumulated, which rose up before me. O what a guilty wretch I saw myself to be! Some of my sins appeared to be of a more aggravating nature than others. I had cursed my mother once, and that seemed to be the most aggravating sin of all. It seemed to me that this great mountain of sin was almost ready to burst and fall upon my guilty head; and I thought if it did I surely would have to bear the wrath and indignation of God forever. I said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do? I have tried my own prayers and tears, together with the prayers of ministers and saints, and they all avail nothing. O! is there anyone like me?" I almost envied the beasts of the field their happy condition, because I thought they were not accountable to God. I then thought, and yet think, there is no one like me in this world. I was then made to acknowledge that if I were sent to hell it would be just; for I had not only sinned against God's law outwardly, but I possessed such a fountain within that it made all my thoughts and actions unclean. It looked to me that everything I did was sin, or was mixed with sin. It seemed to be a sin for me to even try to pray, as my doom was sealed, and I was one of the reprobates that God never would have mercy on; that I was lost to all intents and purposes; for I had exhausted all the power and means I possessed, and rather grew worse. I saw that all I had done or could do to reconcile God to me was as nothing, and less than nothing, and if he did not save me by his own mercy and grace alone I was lost forever. My last hope was gone. I tried to be reconciled to my condition, but the breathing of my soul was, "Lord, have mercy upon me, a helpless, hell-deserving sinner." About this time I was taken sick with measles. I thought the Lord would not suffer me to live much longer. I went out into the corn-field to try to pray, as I thought, for the last time; but I never can recollect much about that trip. When I got back to the house I was very sick, and lay down in the shade, lamenting the awful condition I was in, and wondering if there was any way that God could remain just and save such a sinner as I was; and it seemed like an inward voice spoke and said, "Jesus died to save sinners." The words seemed to bring a calm, soothing feeling with them, such as I had never felt before, which caused me to rejoice for a moment in Jesus. But Satan soon whispered in my ear, "That is no evidence that he died for you; for you always believed that, and now you are about to apply it to yourself." I felt somewhat ashamed, yet I desired to thank and praise the Lord, although I was unworthy to receive it. But O! when I came to examine myself, particularly about night-time when I went out to try to pray, I could not feel that great burden of sin and guilt that had so long pressed me down; for these exercises had lasted about two years. The burden seemed to be gone, but when and where I could not tell. When I would try to view my awful condition as I had before, my mind would run back to the place and time in which I had such a view of Jesus as dying for sinners. Although I could not claim it, yet it seemed to soothe and ease my mind. I had no idea of its being the application of the blood of Christ to my sin-smitten conscience, for I had never come to the place where I expected to receive that, and so I could not receive it as a hope in Jesus; for it was at a time and in a way that I did not expect. I then tried to throw it all away and begin anew. I prayed to God to begin the work in me and show me my condition as it really was; that if I was deceived, he would make it known to me in some way; for I began to be greatly troubled because I could not feel troubled as I was before. I went on in this way for some months, between hope and despair. Sometimes I would almost believe that Jesus died for me; then again I would be tempted to believe it was all a delusion, and that God had showed me what he had in order that I might see his justice in my condemnation. Like one alone I seemed to be. I began to view my condition as worse than before, if possible. My burden of guilt was gone, and I desired and prayed the Lord to let me know if there was any reality in it, and if so to let me feel my burden again, that when it left me I might know when and where it went. I thought that perhaps the Lord would satisfy my mind in some way, for I thought I had been trying with all my might to come to the Lord, but that instead of coming to him I had gotten farther from him. I had expected to go in a certain way that I had planned in my own mind, and I had done all I could to go in that way; but I never could even get into it. If I am not deceived I was brought in another way, and a way I knew nothing about. My prayer was, and yet is, "Lord, teach, instruct and lead me in the right way; and if I am deceived, undeceive me, and reconcile me to thy will in all things." For I had now a more feeling sense of my ignorance, weakness and nothingness, if possible, than I ever before had. But I hope the Lord was made unto me wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. As I was riding along one night, on my way to see a dear friend that was sick (I never have been able to tell what I was thinking about), a great light was presented to my view, such as I never saw before, and which I have never been able to describe. In that light I saw Jesus as he is represented in the Scriptures of divine truth, nailed to the cross, between the heavens and the earth, suffering and dying, and the blood running from his side. These words of Scripture came with power to my mind (but I did not know at that time that they were Scripture), "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." I was then enabled to believe that he bore my sins in his own body on the tree of the cross, and that with his stripes I was healed. If my heart is not deceived, I was filled to overflowing with the love of God. I was made to rejoice in Jesus as my Savior, for he had revealed himself to me as the fairest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. I then for the first time in my life could pray with a feeling sense, "Not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done." It is impossible for me to describe my thoughts and feeling at that time. The moon had just risen, and seemed to shine with double brilliancy and ten fold more glory than usual. I thought it was the most glorious moon I ever had looked upon. The trees and all nature seemed to be smiling and praising God, and I felt to praise him with my soul, mind and strength; but I did not praise him with my mouth, and this caused me many doubts afterward. When I came to myself a little I was trying to pray the Lord to have mercy on sinners. I thought I loved them from my heart. But right here Satan came again and told me I was deceived, and that I was a pretty person to be praying for sinners. I felt somewhat cast down for a moment; but the love of God, as I hope, began to flow into my heart again, and I was constrained to say, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good." I then thought that I had such a plain manifestation of God's love that I never would see any more trouble, but would go on my way rejoicing. I thought I saw the plan of God's salvation so plainly through Jesus that I certainly could show it to others. I forgot that they were blind, and could not see until quickened by God's Spirit, and had their minds enlightened. I then thought I would go on and see my sick friend, and tell the people all about my hope; but before I got there I thought I better not do so, for I might be deceived; and if I was deceived, I did not want to deceive them. If I had felt compelled to shout aloud and praise the Lord then, I would not have had any doubts; but as it was, I began to have doubts about the matter. But my mind settled down, and peace and quiet seemed to reign within.

Although that was more than forty years ago, I recollect it well. That night I dreamed of preaching, and O how well I felt in the exercise. It seemed like it was a desirable and glorious work. As well as I can recollect, my calm lasted about one week, and then I began to have fears and doubts. I then tried to get back those same feelings, but instead of getting them I seemed to grow more cold. I saw that sin was yet present with me, and what I would, that I did not. But although I had many doubts and fears concerning my little hope, I never could entirely throw it away. To this day when my mind reverts to the time and place I received it, I feel a degree of assurance that the Lord was in the matter; and unworthy as I feel myself to be, I believe I have passed from death unto life; for my love and affections are drawn out to christian people. I love to hear them talk about God's great plan of salvation, and how he calls his people with a holy calling, not according to their works, but according to his purpose and grace, which was theirs in Christ Jesus before the world began.

I have told you that I was raised Baptist parents; but they never seemed to sectarianize their children. They told us to read for ourselves, and what we found a "Thus saith the Lord" for, to believe it, and nothing more. I have tried to follow that advice until the present day.

Soon I began to think about joining the church, and the question arose in my mind, What church will you join? I answered, The Baptist Church. (This was before the Old Baptists separated from the New.) Then the question arose, "Why will you join the Baptists? Because your father and mother belong to the Baptists is not sufficient evidence that it is the true church of Christ. There is but one true church; all others are false churches. And now, before you join any of them, take your father's advice and read the Scriptures for yourself." I then began and read the Bible through from beginning to end, and tried to be honest; but whether I was or not is not for me to say. I thought I was well rewarded for my trouble. I found recorded there, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God;" much less can he enter or join it. So the matter was settled in my own mind that the Old Baptist was the only church that held forth the faith and practice as commanded by Christ and the apostles. I joined the Old Baptist Church at Mount Pleasant meeting-house, in Warren County, Kentucky, and was baptized by Elder Zechariah Morris, in Drake's Creek, below Scagg's Mill, forty-two years ago this month. But I have often thought that I was not fit to be in the church.

I will bring my scribble to a close. I have left out many things that came to my mind, to make this as short as possible. My heart's desire and prayer to God is that he will humble us all in the lowest depths of humility before him, and give us to see our weakness and feel our unworthiness before him, who inhabiteth eternity, and dwelleth in the high and holy place, and that he will give us strength according to our days.

ALVIN POE.

LITTLE ELK, Ore., Feb. 21, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you a letter written to me by brother J. P. Allison, pastor of the Oak Creek Church of Old School, Predestinarian Baptists. If you think it worthy of a place in our worthy paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I wish you would publish it; for it has done my poor soul good, and contains good, wholesome food for the poor little ones of God. I have not his permission to have it published, but I will be responsible for it if you see fit to give it space. It may comfort some of God's dear children as much as it has me. May God's blessing be with you in your labors of publishing the truth as it is in Jesus.

Your brother in hope,

J. M. LAWRENCE.

LOOKING GLASS, Ore., Feb. 16, 1894.

ELDER J. M. LAWRENCE—DEAR BROTHER IN JACOB:—I hope you will not be hurt by my using this term to you, for it is as good to-day as it was when Moses wrote it, although it is sometimes a serious question with me as to whether I belong to it or not. It seems to exalt me too much, and places me on an equality with God's servants, whereas I know that I should be on the lowest seat, even at the feet of all my brethren. But as dear brother Loat used that appellation to me, it must be proper, he being such a wonderfully gifted brother in spiritual things that he would not misplace the appellation knowingly. But in this case he has applied it to the very least and most unworthy old sinner claiming the name of Baptist.

Your last epistle to me was truly a good one, and I have read it several times over. I was truly glad to know that your mind was thus exercised on the Scriptures of truth; for we read in the Acts of the Apostles that the Bereans were more noble than those over at Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures to see whether those things were so. Of course there was no possible chance to receive the word until their minds were made ready by the Spirit of God; and this made them more noble, because the Spirit of God

(Continued on page 300.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 19, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

PSALM LXXVI. 1, 2.

"In Judah is God known: his name is great in Israel: in Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion."

It is under a deep sense of our ignorance and inability to present anything for the edification of the saints of God that we attempt to offer a few brief remarks on the words quoted above. Evidently the inspired psalmist did not intend by this expression that the Creator of the universe was a being the fame of whose works was confined to the comparatively narrow limits of Israel; for we are informed in the Scriptures his supremacy over all things was manifested in the sight of the nations, as in the case of the division of the Red Sea for the deliverance of the natural sons of Jacob from the consuming wrath of the Egyptians; then the Egyptians found that the God of Israel was indeed mighty to save and destroy. Nor yet can we understand the natural children of Abraham to be intended by the Israel here spoken of; because we are told by inspiration that all are not Israel that are of Israel. The true children of Abraham, or the regenerated, antitypical people of God, do know him exclusively; for no man knoweth the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. Notwithstanding the tumult and confusion that is seen throughout Babylon, notwithstanding the union of effort on the part of all workmongers, saying to one another, "Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly," and "Let us build us a city, and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven [if we are faithful]; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth" (see Gen. xi. 3, 4); yet the Lord is the only Potentate who can reveal to the darkened understanding of unregenerated men the knowledge of God, which is eternal life.

When God is pleased to reveal himself to the quickened sinner, he presents himself in a manner not easily to be forgotten; for at the moment the poor sinner overwhelmed with a view of the infinite justice of God, is driven to the brink of despair, the tender mercy of our Lord is revealed, and the poor soul is made to feel himself plucked as a brand from the burning. When a soul in this manner is made to know God in justice and mercy, he is no more at a loss to comprehend the meaning of that saying of the Master, recorded in John xvii. 3, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." There is no danger of such a soul ever forgetting his experience; on the contrary, rather, every circumstance connected with the glorious change is so vividly impressed on the mind that even time, which effaces all other memories, seldom if ever destroys the remembrance of the attending circumstances of the lesson in which the justice and mercy of our God was first revealed to his mind; much less will anything be able to destroy that knowledge of God which is then implanted in his heart, and which is the incorruptible seed remaining in him, the Spirit of adoption, crying, "Abba, Father."

"His name is great in Israel;" and in this sense it is not great in any other part of the creation of God; that is, it is not honored and exalted in praises any where else as it is in his church. While the church of Christ is not at liberty to sing praises for their redemption to any false gods, such as means, money, or other heathen deities, God shall send to the children of darkness strong delusions, that they shall believe a lie, that they all might be damned that have pleasure in righteousness. Truly his name is great in Israel, exalted high above every name, as the only living true God, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet accomplished.

"In Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion." Here is great consolation to the poor, afflicted inhabitants of the spiritual Zion of our God; the Lord of life has prepared her for himself; he will defend his chosen from all the enemies of his will, and keep them as the apple of his eye. He hath spoken for their justification, and now the challenge, uttered by the apostle eighteen centuries since, remains yet unanswered, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

NEW VERNON, N. Y., June 15, 1847.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 299.)

dwelt in them. He must be a noble man indeed in whom the Spirit of God would deign to dwell. But although the Spirit of God exalteth a man, the man himself takes the lowest seat. He is not like the scribes and Pharisees, who sought the honor and praise of men. For the man who is in possession of the meek and quiet Spirit of God seeks only honor from God; and this Spirit humbles a man in the dust, and exalts and honors God in the salvation of poor sinners. So, dear brother, it is evident that your mind has been made ready to receive the precious word of truth, and given you a desire to search the Scriptures; not to just read them as a form, night and morning, and think that God will be pleased and tender you salvation. No; this would be honoring self, and expecting salvation for your good deeds. But instead, you search the Scriptures. You are interested in what they teach. Are these things so? Can it be so? Is it possible that I, a poor sinner, have a real interest in what is therein written? Yes, brother Paul says it is so. He says, "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given." And in another place, "I am not meet to be called an apostle." But he also says, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." Are these things so? Yea, they are; and by searching the Scriptures we find that it is so; for see how readily Paul received the word when his mind was made ready by the Lord. Ananias said, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight." The Lord said he was a chosen vessel. Ah, with what readiness did Paul receive this blessed word; and he at once preached Jesus; not his own works. This is true nobility. For the good Lord raiseth up the poor from the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, that they may inherit the throne of glory. O! these are blessed things. Are they so? Can they be so? Yes, for Paul says that it is so. He said that the law entered; and it tore his righteousness all to shreds, and stripped him completely of all his creature goodness. Then he declared that the law shall not have dominion over such poor sinners. "For ye are not under the law, but under grace." "But God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ;" or give us the knowledge of the glory of God's righteous law, fulfilled and made honorable by the obedience of Jesus Christ. Therefore ye are not under the law; for there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. Is it possible that these things are so? They received them with readiness of mind. So did Paul. So did you, dear brother, and searched the Scriptures. O, brother, when the Spirit of God awakens a poor sinner, what a searching man it makes of him. He finds, says Paul, that in his flesh there is no good thing. He finds a law in his members warring against the law of his mind, and bringing him into bondage to the law of sin, so that he cries, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But again he says, that no man ever yet hateth his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as Christ the church; for the church is his body. O blessed things! Are they so?

I cannot continue the subject. The brethren are all well, and send their love to you. May the good Lord bless and comfort you, is our prayer.

Your brother and sister in hope,
J. P. & MARY ALLISON.

YELL COUNTY, Ark.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—With a trembling hand and heart I will pen a few thoughts which have made some impression on my mind; not for edification, for I feel too little for that task; but merely by way of sanction of that precious truth which flows to us through the columns of our family paper, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I have many times been deeply impressed with a feeling to add my feeble testimony; but feeling my inability, I have forborne. If I may but write with the Spirit and with the understanding, as the dear brethren and sisters do, what little I may say may be of some comfort to some little one; for sometimes when I have been reading those sweet experiences which so enrich the columns of our paper, ere I was aware I found a tear stealing down my cheek; and as drops of water run together, so are my feelings toward the writers of those articles. At other times my heart is cold, as though it were entirely locked up with icy chains of carnality. My dear brethren and sisters, there is not one good thought, word or deed without the operation of the Holy Spirit. If you feel as void of power as I do, to do anything but that which is wrong, you will not have any merit of your own to claim. I have had a name among the Primitive Baptists since June, 1866. I find myself growing no better, but every day see more imperfections in the flesh; but O the thought of turning back! He that putteth his hand to the plow, and looketh back, is not fit for the kingdom of God. I feel as did the disciples of Jesus, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." If I press forward, there are so many things in the way, so many crooked ifs, and something says, "Perhaps you have caught the shadow and missed the substance." Tell me, dear brethren and sisters, is it thus with you? If I have some encouragement, if I have anything wherein to glory, it is in my daily infirmities. I feel to cry, Lord, help my infirmities. I know he has said that he will make crooked things straight, and rough places smooth; and every promise that he has made concerning his children will be fully verified. But in steps that crooked if again, "If you are one of them." Yet with all these things I sometimes hope I have a little foretaste of those living streams, the promises of the gospel. And from whence flow those living streams but from the fountain? Yes, they flow from Jesus, the living Fountain, from whence every blessing must flow. But here is another if. How can one so unlike a christian, one who yields so little fruit, if any, dare hope to have access to that Fountain? Dear reader, I believe that each and every one who gets a foretaste from those living streams will ere long have full and free access to the Fountain, and will never thirst any more, neither come hither to draw. O blessed thought!

I want to say a few words concerning the Babylonish systems which prevail all over our land. Their dealers have made themselves rich. They must first receive a fine education to acquire worldly wisdom, before they are ready for their work. I think they may properly be called merchants, who enrich themselves from the store of Mystery, Babylon. But these things will ere long come to naught; for her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Money is their chief corner-stone; not Christ, the living Fountain; not Jesus, but money, is the main post upon which all their powers are centered. Remove that, and down goes the whole fabric; yes, down like a mill-stone that sinks to rise no more. But not so with the church of the living God. She is complete in Jesus, adorned as a bride for her husband. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." Yes, she is dressed in pure linen clean and white; for this fine linen is the righteousness of saints. Not one of the stakes of Zion will ever be removed, nor one of her cords be broken. Not one more can be added, nor can one be taken from her. When Jesus bowed his head upon the cross, he said, "It is finished!" and so it was. When the last material is brought in, she will then hear those angelic voices, saying, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Who that has ever felt the weight of a guilty conscience, or tasted of those living streams, would want salvation in any other way?

I now want to ask our brethren and sisters a few questions, for them to think about. Do you love the truth? Do you believe that the doctrine of the Old School Baptists is the doctrine of the Bible, and therefore the truth? Do you believe it is the duty of your preachers to faithfully fill their appointments? Do you love to see them come? Do you love to hear them preach? Do you know that a faithful minister must spend from one-third to one-half of his time in traveling and preaching the gospel and visiting the sick? Do you know that they are generally poor men? Do you know that their families have to eat and dress, as do other people? Do you know that the minister often has to pay out money to have his horse shod, his buggy repaired, as well as for other things? Do you not know that some churches are suffering because they have not done their duty?

But I must stop. I have written much more than I expected to write. I cannot tell what I want to tell, and will only ask some brother to take up the subject and try to do it justice, for I cannot.

In hope of eternal life, I am your unworthy sister,

M. J. HARKEY.

VALPARAISO, Neb., July 2, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I enclose you a letter from brother Joseph Bruce, which we would like to have published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if it meets with your approval.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
MARY DEVORE.

CHENEY, Neb., June 24, 1894.

MRS. MARY DEVORE—DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—Your most welcome and precious letter came to hand yesterday, and its contents were read with deep interest. We were truly glad to hear from you, and to learn that you all were well, and that God, who is the giver of every good and perfect gift, impressed it upon your mind to speak of his dealings with you, and request the same to be read to the church. Your request, dear sister, is a reasonable one; and I assure you it will be a delight and pleasure to poor, unworthy me to read it to the church for their comfort, as well as for mine. I do feel that this is a happy privilege God's humble poor have, to speak often one to another of the great things God has done for them, and especially to hear such comforting words from those who are deprived of the privilege of attending their regular church meetings, as you are. Being deprived of the privilege of meeting with your brethren and sisters here in the church does not deprive you of the many rich blessings and crumbs of comfort which his hand alone can and does give from day to day. We cannot subsist on the food and provision of yesterday, but must have it day by day. So it is with the poor, helpless children of God, who have no strength of their own, but are as dependent upon him as the little infant is upon its mother or nurse for its needful nourishment to sustain life and comfort. Then, realizing the fact that we are always in his presence, and he keeps us as the apple of his eye, feeds us with the rich provisions of his grace, and ministers to us day by day such things as are needful for us, let us take courage, and press toward the mark of our high calling of God in Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath loved us with an everlasting love, and given himself for us a ransom. Yes, dear sister, Jesus our great High Priest was made to be sin for us, poor, sinful worms of the dust, who have many times trampled his mercies under our feet, and done despite to his goodness. He who knew no sin was made to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. What condescension of love the Father hath manifested for us, in giving his only begotten Son, who was ever with him, and by whom all things were made, to suffer and bear the reproaches of us all. What for? That we might be made the righteousness of God in him (Jesus). That implies, dear sister, that we have been regenerated and born again. We have been brought to the knowledge of what poor, helpless sinners we are in the sight of God. Our sins were like mountains, and we were made to see the justice of God in banishing us from his presence; and when all hope of mercy was gone, and we were reconciled to his will, we could truly say with the poet,

"And if my soul were sent to hell,
Thy righteous law approves it well."

But at an unexpected moment our burden of sin was removed, and our sorrow and mourning was turned to praise and thanksgiving to God for his mercy so richly bestowed upon us. We were enabled to see how God could be the justifier of such hell-deserving sinners as we were. We saw that it was for the great love wherewith he loved us; that we could not be redeemed with the corruptible things of earth; that nothing but a pure and holy sacrifice could reach our case. We were made to look to Jesus as our Savior, and were made to rejoice with that joy which is unspeakable and full of glory. Truly, dear sister, God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our poor hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Such a one, dear sister, I do believe is an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus; and if so, they shall be like him when brought home to that upper and better kingdom. Then is it not our duty to speak often one to another of the glorious plan of salvation, and tell each other of our trials and afflictions in this world of sin and sorrow, as we journey down the steep of time?

I can only speak for myself. I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, there dwells no good thing; for when I would do good, evil is present with me, and how to perform that which is good I find not. The things that I would I do not; and the things that I would not them I do. So you see there is a continual warfare between the flesh and the Spirit. Paul found it so, and I believe that all God's humble poor find it the same with them. This, I think, is that thorn in the flesh which Paul speaks of, and prayed God to remove it from him; but what was the answer of God? "My grace is sufficient for thee." Then, dear sister, while it is our lot and privilege to live in this world of sin and sorrow, let us strive to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and speak often one to another as we journey by the way; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is. We may be, and often are, deprived of the blessed privilege of assembling ourselves together in person for the worship of our God, when it is not in accordance with our wish; but let us remember that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. If we cannot be with the church at her stated meetings, let us write them a few lines. It is a great comfort to the church to hear from those who are deprived of the privilege of being present, and the prayers of the church are always in behalf of those little ones. So, while it is your lot to be deprived of the privilege of being with us, let us hear from you by letter. Let us comfort each other by the way.

May the rich blessings of God be with you and all of us, and may he keep us by the word of his power, ready to be revealed in the last time, is the prayer of your unworthy brother,

JOSEPH BRUCE.

VINTA, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Ter.,
Aug. 19, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—As my remittance is due, I will send it with one new name. We have no organized church here, and there are but few of the old order here. What preaching I hear is through the dear SIGNS OF THE TIMES. I have been requested by a brother to write a few of my travels, and in weakness I will try to do so, feeling my inability.

I was born on January 1st, 1854, two and one-half miles west of Fort Scott, Kansas, and was taken to Canie River at the age of three years. When I was seven years old my father sent me to the Osage Mission, to a Catholic school, under old "Father Shamaker." I stayed there most of the time for six years. My father then sent me to Anna, Illinois, to stay until my schooling was complete. In the year 1874 I became dissatisfied, ran away, and came back to this Territory. In the year 1876 my mind was troubled about my sinful condition, and I went to work, doubting nothing, but feeling that I was competent to accomplish my salvation. I read the Scriptures, and there found that Jesus died "for the sins of the whole world," and that he was too wise to err. As I read the Scriptures more, I found in Revelation that the whole world wondered after the beast. I thought, O my soul! is this the world that Jesus died to save? I then joined the M. E. Church, thinking I could do some good; but I became dissatisfied there, and so stepped down and out into the world again. I found I was doing them more harm than good.

Thirty-one years had elapsed, and I had done nothing good. I only found that I was a justly condemned sinner. I had heard several denominations, and they all seemed to advocate nearly the same doctrine or cause. My father was a Missionary Baptist minister, and tried to teach me to be a christian; but it pleased the good Lord to show me that it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.

I am making this scribble too long, and will close with remarking that I am only an Osage Indian by blood, a lost sinner by nature, and imperfect in practice. If you should publish this, please correct mistakes.

I remain your most humble brother, if one at all,

E. F. MOORE.

PERRIS, Riverside Co., Cal.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I desire a little space in our medium of correspondence. My object is to solicit the correspondence of brethren in California, especially of ministering brethren, as I am looking forward to the time when I hope to see a visible organization of the Old School Baptists again in this state; and not knowing the address of any of the Elders, I take this mode of calling them out, as I desire help in the work of organization. I know of seven baptized believers in Riverside County and four unbaptized believers in the same county, some of whom have signified to me a strong desire for an opportunity to walk in obedience to the command of their Lord and Master. Besides these, there are a number in an adjoining county—Orange. I wish to say to any brother, Elder, living within a reasonable distance of Perris, Riverside County, that I feel sure the Lord has a people there, and as servants of God it is our duty to gratify them by organizing them into a visible body. We have no promises to make, nor rewards to offer, only such as the Lord our God has promised to those that love and obey him. Hence I again ask for correspondence, believing it is the Lord's work. Address A. H. Hagans, Perris, Riverside Co., Cal., care of W. D. Ball.

SPENCERVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 5, 1894.

WILL the brethren and friends throughout the south please inform us by mail where we can find brethren of the Old School, Absolute Predestinarian, Eternal Union, Anti-Means and Anti-Secret Society order? We desire to visit the south a few months this winter, if we can make arrangements here to that end, giving an early idea of the location of churches and of scattered brethren, whom we also wish to call upon. We only wish to visit the south for the mutual and fraternal enjoyment of our faith in Christ as a blessed Savior of sinners, both theirs and ours.

Please give addresses for future correspondence if we can arrange to go. Write to our church Clerk, C. G. Miller, Spencerville, Allen Co., Ohio.

A. B. BREES.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Roxbury Old School or Primitive Baptist Association, in session with the Second Church of Roxbury, at Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., Sept. 5th and 6th, 1894, to the associations and corresponding meetings with which we correspond, sends christian greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Another year has passed away, and we are met according to previous appointment, in the capacity of an association, to behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. One Lord, one faith, one baptism." This is the spirit that moved Jeremiah to proclaim to Israel, "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." The letters from our churches show them to be steadfast in the faith once delivered to the saints, although the additions to their numbers have not been very great.

Your messages of love through your Minutes are thankfully received by us. Your messengers have come to us laden with the rich treasures of the gospel of Christ, for which we feel to praise God, the giver of every blessing. Dear brethren, we desire a continuance of your correspondence, hoping at our next session we shall receive a goodly number of your messengers.

Our next session will be held, if the Lord will, with the Church of Olive and Hurley, at Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., on the first Wednesday and Thursday in September, 1895, commencing at 10 a. m.

J. D. HUBBELL, Mod.

JAS. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Licking Association of Particular Baptists, now in session with the Elk Lick Church, Scott Co., Ky., to the several churches of which she is composed, sendeth christian love and salutation.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Another year has passed since last we saluted you with a Circular Letter; a year in which the great head of the church has called to their eternal home many of the dear saints, while we are left in these low grounds of sin and sorrow. But it is all in accord with his holy and immutable will, and with that exercise of his will it should be our chief desire to be reconciled. We know that it is through the grace and mercy of our covenant-keeping God that we are permitted to still remain and meet in holy convocation at this meeting, and join our voices in songs of praise and adoration to his great and holy name, and have our faith and hope strengthened by the preaching of the gospel and the presentation of the name of Jesus by his faithful ministering servants; that ever precious name which was borne to earth by a heavenly messenger. That name means a Savior. That messenger declared, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." O what an undertaking that was, when he became clothed with mortality, when he took that body which was prepared him, in which he suffered, that you, dear saints, might reign with him in glory. He said, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" He wept in Gethsemane, and suffered on Calvary, that he might bring in everlasting righteousness and redemption to his elect, his chosen people. They were his, given to him in the everlasting covenant of redemption, ordered in all things and sure. He said, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." He has all power in heaven and earth, and says, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." The prophet said of him, "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him: he hath put him to grief. When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. By his knowledge shall my righteous Servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities." He bore the sins of his chosen people on the tree of the cross, and thereby met in his own glorious person all the demands of the law against them. Having thus redeemed them, he in regeneration gives them spiritual, eternal life; that life which was treasured in him before time began. It was thus that he by grace divine made them heirs of God and joint heirs with himself to the glorious inheritance of the saints in light. And while here below may it be your chief delight to give to the Lord the glory due unto his name; and may you while in your earthly pilgrimage ever have the presence of your glorious Lord to guard, guide and uphold you amidst all the scenes of sorrow, pain and death through which you will be called to pass, till you are brought off conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him that hath loved you and given himself for you; to whose ever precious and glorious name be all the glory.

H. COX, Mod.

J. T. McCOUN, Clerk.

The Roxbury Old School or Primitive Baptist Association, in session with the Second Baptist Church of Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., Sept. 5th and 6th, 1894, to the churches in our fellowship, sends greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—Through the abounding goodness and mercy of our covenant-keeping God we are permitted to meet together in an associate capacity once more; and as you will expect a letter called a Circular, we will call your attention to some Scriptures as they may present themselves to our mind; for all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable to the children of God when their minds are exercised thereon. The apostle John in his first epistle, third chapter, writes these words, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." The apostle has presented the love of God as the moving cause of all our joy and comfort in this world, and also in that which is to come. Take that away, and where is our comfort? for we only love him because he first loved us. First of all he cites us to that which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life. While personally we have not seen the Lord Jesus as we believe John did, yet we can say with Paul that "last of all he was seen of me, as one born out of due time;" for by faith we view Jesus as the one altogether lovely, and the chiefest among ten thousand; who himself bare our sins in his own body on the tree. Truly this is love unspeakable and full of glory; for it is written, "For a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us," ungodly. Here then is the only salvation for sinners, by the death and resurrection of the Son of God; for sacrifices and burnt offerings under the law could not make the comers thereunto perfect; for had there been a law given that could have given life, then righteousness would have been by the law; but the Savior says that in sacrifice and burnt offerings he had no pleasure. "Then said he, Lo, I come, to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."—Heb. x. 9, 10. What a blessed assurance the children of God have, that their eternal salvation does not depend upon their own doings, nor their own natural will; for that is enmity against God, not subject to his law, neither can be; but their salvation is according to his own purpose and grace, given them in Christ Jesus before the world began. Paul says to the Ephesian brethren, "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved."—Eph. i. 5, 6. To sum up in short, dear brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus, our living head, this love of God brings to view the eternal vital unity of Christ and his bride, which is the church of the living God.

"In union with the Lamb,
From condemnation free,
The saints from everlasting were,
And shall forever be.

In covenant from of old,
The sons of God they were;
The feeblest lamb in Jesus' fold
Was bless'd in Jesus there."

When Jesus died, it was for their redemption, or deliverance from death; and when he arose it was for their justification; and because he lives, they shall live also. But this mortal body must die; and when it shall put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

J. D. HUBBELL, Mod.

JAS. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Mary Parker fund:

Mrs. D. C. Clark, Ill., 5; Louisa Staton, Del., 50c; Elder Benton Jenkins, N. Y., 2; E. C. Tollinger, Miss., 10.—Total, $17.50.

The above is the amount as published in the SIGNS of September 12th by Elder S. H. Durand.

ADDITIONAL.

Mrs. Fannie Thomas, Va., 5; Harrison Clore, Ky., 3; Mrs. Gaines, Ky., 1.—Total, $9.00.

B. F. COULTER.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Abi Albin Skinner was born in Perry Co., Ohio, in the year 1833, and died in Jay Co., Ind., Sept. 3d, 1894, aged 61 years, 7 months and 12 days.

He was married to Mary Ann Hooper, in Perry Co., Ohio, in the year 1854, and moved the same year to Jay Co., Ind., and settled upon the farm that he lived upon until the day of his death. To this union were born nine children, four of whom, with their mother, preceded him to the spirit land. His second marriage, to Isabel Brown, was in the year 1870. To this union were born three children, who with their mother survive him. He was a faithful member of the Primitive Baptist Church for more than thirty years. His long pilgrimage to the spirit land is now ended in the presence of him whom his soul loved, who maketh intercession for his people at the right hand of God.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder J. Peters. May the Lord be a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless.

NEWTON PETERS.

PORTLAND, Ind.

Mrs. Lovegrove died August 26th, 1894, at the residence of her daughter, in Grass Lake, Michigan. Her third husband was the late David Odell. After he died she married Mr. Lovegrove. She was for many years greatly afflicted with asthma, and suffered a great deal for about a week before she died. While suffering so much she said to her daughter-in-law, "I wonder if I shall get well. The Lord's will be done. My trust is in him." She received a hope in Christ when young, was baptized by Elder Morley, and joined the Baptist Church at Clyde, Wayne Co., N. Y. She took much comfort reading the SIGNS, which with the Bible were the greatest comfort she had on earth. She was a firm believer in the doctrine of salvation by grace, and grace alone. She was favored to have her senses until the last, and quoted Scripture as long as she could be understood. Her last words were, "Come, Jesus, come."

She has left two daughters, one son and his wife and three grandchildren to mourn, but not without hope. She was a firm friend, a kind mother and a good neighbor.

"No more shall sickness break thy rest,
Or pain create the smart;
No more shall doubts disturb thy breast,
Or sin afflict thine heart."

ESTHER.

MALCOM, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1894.

DIED—At the residence of his daughter, Mrs. L. W. Moore, in San Francisco, Cal., on June 8th, 1894, my beloved husband, Thomas A. Harding, aged 85 years and 9 months.

One year ago he fell and fractured his thigh. In due time he was able to get around on crutches, and was in excellent health until the day he was taken down. I found him on the bed in the afternoon of June 2d, and asked him if he were sick. He made no complaint, and only wanted to sleep. Paralysis came slowly on, his mind and body giving out together. Two days before he died he hardly stirred, and gently breathed his life away. I miss him, but do not grieve nor wish him back. I feel that I will soon receive the summons to come home. I wish to be submissive to the Lord's will.

Yours in faith,

P. A. HARDING.

BROTHER Harding was baptized, in company with his wife, the writer of the above, by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, in the fellowship of the Old School Baptist Church at New Vernon, N. Y., Aug. 20th, 1854, and on April 26th, 1856, united by letter with the Middletown & Wallkill Church, where his membership continued until the time of his death. Very soon after uniting with the latter church he was chosen as her Clerk, which office he filled until his removal to California, about the year 1870. He was one of the sweet singers in Israel, and for many years led the singing in the church at this place.

May the Lord comfort and support our dear sister, the widow, in her old age, until she shall receive the summons, "Child, come home."—Ed.

By request I send for publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES the obituary of our beloved brother, Deacon Gideon Buck, who died at his residence in Dorchester, Westmoreland Co., N. B., July 17th, 1894, aged 73 years.

I was intimately acquainted with our departed brother, and can testify to his high standing as a dear and beloved member of the body of Christ, and one who lived in the love and fellowship of the church. He was a kind and loving husband, a good citizen, and a strictly honest man, and was regarded by his neighbors as one whose character was without reproach. Most deeply do I sympathize with our dear sister Buck in her bereavement, with his children and all the relatives, and pray God to bless their great loss to their good, and to reconcile them to this dispensation of his grace; to be still, and know that he is God.

Brother Buck, his father and mother, several brothers and sisters and his wife were all members of the church of God. They were firm believers in the doctrine of salvation by grace, through faith being the gift of God bestowed on all the elect.

A very large concourse of people attended his burial. It was the writer's privilege to try to speak a few words of comfort and consolation to the sorrowing relatives and friends, using as a text Revelation xiv. 13.

ALSO,

DIED—At her home in Dorchester, Westmoreland Co., N. B., Mrs. Hicks, the beloved wife of Captain Marcus Hicks, aged 31 years.

She leaves a sorrowing husband and two children. The cause of her death was consumption. Her hope of salvation was in the merits of the crucified Redeemer. I preached her funeral from 1 Thessalonians iv. 14: "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

ALEXANDER BARNETT.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—It becomes my painful duty, by request of the sorely bereaved parents, to record the heavy and grievous affliction which has befallen Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McGuire, of Woolford, Dorchester Co., Md. On the 24th of June, 1894, their eldest son, John W. McGuire, aged 8 years, 4 months and 24 days, was taken from them, after a short illness with typhoid fever.

The mother writes, "Lonely the mother and sad the hours since our darling Johnnie has left us; but a brighter, better home in heaven is his.

"Dearest Johnnie, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

"Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed."

ALSO,

On July 24th, of the same disease, their baby boy, little Lee McGuire, was taken from their fond and loving embrace, we trust, to be with Jesus.

Of him the mother writes, "God in his wisdom has called a precious one to rest, and we must give him up to him who knows what is best. It is hard to give him up; but we trust in God, and that we shall meet him again."

"Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding
O'er the spoil that death has won,
Teach us in the hour of trouble
To calmly say, Thy will be done.

"By thy hand the boon was given,
Thou hast taken but thine own;
Lord of earth and God of heaven,
Evermore thy will be done."

Truly this is a severe stroke on these afflicted parents. Many fond hopes centred on these their only sons; but they seem to feel that the Lord has done it, and that it is for the best. I feel to sympathize with them in their great bereavement. May the Lord bless them, and sanctify their affliction to their spiritual good and his glory.

A. B. FRANCIS.

WILLARD, Va.

G. BEEBE'S SON:—By request of the bereaved sister and widow I send you the following notice of the death of Deacon Wm. Pace, who died at his residence in Ouachita Co., Ark., July 28th, 1894, at the advanced age of 87 years, 5 months and 21 days.

He was born in Kentucky, Feb. 7th, 1807. His father moved to Tennessee about 1808, and the next fall to Clarke Co., Ala. A sketch of the life and experience of brother Pace was published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES August 27th, 1890, to which the reader is referred for particulars. He had been married three times. First, April 7th, 1830, to Miss Sarah Yarbrough, a native of Tennessee, from which marriage there were ten children born, only two of whom are now living (both sons), one in Dallas, Texas, and the other in Alabama. He was next married in 1858 to Mrs. Pernicia Reed, widow of Christopher Reed. She died in 1870, leaving no children. His third wife was Mrs. Nancy Smith, widow of W. O. Smith, who now survives him. They were married in 1871.

Brother Pace united with the church at Antioch, Ala., April 7th, 1830. He moved to Ouachita Co., Ark., in 1844, and became a constituent member of the Primitive Baptist Church at Bethesda, where his membership remained up to the time of his death. He served as Deacon about forty-four years, to the entire satisfaction of the church; always vigilant and watchful in the discharge of every duty, being ever ready and forward to help the sick, afflicted and needy, and mindful to entertain strangers. His house was at all times a home for his brethren and friends. As a kind and affectionate husband and father none could surpass him. As a citizen he was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was known by all as "Uncle Billy." The writer of these lines was intimately acquainted with the deceased during forty-four years; and being only two years his junior, and living near each other, it seemed that our love one for another surely surpassed that of nature. During these years we frequently met, and spent many pleasant and profitable hours together. He was uncompromising in the faith and doctrine of the Primitive Baptists, as maintained by the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, of which he had been a reader for many years.

Brother Pace was very feeble for several years previous to his death, during which I visited him often; and during all this time, to the last day I was with him, I never heard a complaint nor a murmur pass his lips, always saying he had the best kind of sickness, that he suffered no pain whatever. A few days before his death he became speechless so far that we could understand but little he tried to say. He was perfectly resigned to the will of him whom he had tried to serve so many years. He was no trouble during the whole time of his affliction, he was so calm, and rested so peacefully. Thus he seemed to pass away without pain, as one overcome with sleep. Thus the bereaved family will mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and father, the church a beloved brother, and the community a worthy citizen; but we mourn not as those without hope. May the Lord bless the bereaved wife, children and friends, and enable us all to live up to the example he left behind.

His remains were buried by the side of his first wife, in the Bethesda cemetery. A large concourse of people attended the funeral, to whom Elder W. McDonald read a chapter, and delivered a short but appropriate discourse.

A. W. BACCHUS.

CAMDEN, Ark.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Juniata Primitive Baptist Association will be held with the Sidling Hill Church, in Fulton Co., Pa., to commence at ten o'clock on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, and continue Thursday and Friday.

We extend a cordial invitation to all of our faith and order to meet with us. All persons coming by railroad east or west will have to come on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Hancock on Tuesday, where they will be met on the Hancock side of the bridge and conveyed to the place of meeting. Try to be there as early in the day as possible, as the distance is about twenty miles.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Lenexa, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting is to be held with the First Church of Roxbury on Wednesday and Thursday, September 26th and 27th, 1894, commencing at 10:30 a. m. on Wednesday.

Also at Union Grove (Andes Church) on Saturday and Sunday, October 6th and 7th, 1894, commencing at 10:30 a. m. on Saturday.

PLEASE publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that a yearly meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Columbia Old School Baptist Church, Jackson County, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north will be met at Napoleon, and those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Church Clerk.

APPOINTMENTS.

At Jefferson, N. Y., September 22d and 23d; Schoharie Hill, 24th; Middleburgh Church, 25th; Broome Centre, 26th; Gilboa, 27th.

Elder H. M. Curry and others, of Ohio and Maryland, are expected to be with us. All lovers of the truth are invited to attend.

D. M. LEONARD.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GET THE BEST!
THE STAR
COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT
AND ANTI-RATTLER.
Fast selling; always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price, $1.50. State rights for sale.
THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1894.

NO. 39.

D. L. Blackwell 1 June 94

CORRESPONDENCE.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I have had a desire for months to ask for your views on the portion of Scripture recorded in 1 John v. 16, 17, and more especially the clause, "There is a sin unto death." I have hesitated to comply with the desire, as I always feel a sense of guilt whenever I attempt to write to a child of God, as if I were misleading them, causing them to think better of me than I deserve, and an ever abiding sense of not being able to express myself as I feel. Truly I am one of the dumb ones of the family, if I am one at all.

A dear brother said in a published letter to you, a short time ago, that he sometimes thought it would be an evidence to him of a work of grace in him, if his tongue was restrained from uttering things which he knew nothing about. And I sometimes feel it would be an evidence to me of a work of grace in me if my tongue could utter what is in my heart. But the dear Lord is too wise to err, and in his wisdom has seen fit to withhold this most coveted gift. Yet,

"If many things I cannot say,
One thing I know (all praise to thee),
Though blind I was, yet now I see."

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name," for opening these blind eyes and causing them to see the way, the truth and the life. But I will stop, lest I weary you with my scribbling. Excuse me for troubling you; I could not get the subject off my mind in any other way.

Your sister, I hope,
HATTIE A. WINFIELD.

SIN NOT UNTO DEATH.

"If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death; I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin; and there is a sin not unto death."—1 John v. 16, 17.

In considering this portion of the testimony of Jesus it is important to observe the subject presented by the apostle in the connection of the text, and the characters to whom he wrote, as well as to remember that this is included in the one record which God has given of his Son. It must be consistent with all that inspired truth, or it will tend to prove all Scripture a tissue of falsehood. Too much importance cannot be attached to a correct understanding of this declaration of the apostle. It is certainly of interest to all who hope in the salvation which is revealed in Jesus, as there is no instruction given in the inspired Scriptures but that is profitable to the man of God. Therefore, every lover of gospel truth must be interested in arriving at the spiritual significance of this portion of the infallible word.

In the context it is clearly expressed that the apostle was writing to certain characters to the exclusion of all others. They are not only described as believers on the Son of God, but it is further said that each of them hath the witness in himself. This is the infallible seal of the Spirit of truth, giving assurance that they have already received eternal life, which is the only evidence by which they "may believe on the name of the Son of God." Whatever profession they may make, no others can possibly believe except the character who has this "witness in himself." These are all brethren, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." In this birth they are all of one Father, even God; and Jerusalem which is above the bondage of the law of sin and death, is the mother of all the spiritual children; therefore they are indeed free born brethren. This relationship is made manifest by the effect of that life in the development of the belief on the name of the Son of God to which John refers as identifying those to whom he wrote. To the same subjects of redeeming love Paul wrote, "For sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace."—Rom. vi. 14. This is the liberty wherewith Christ hath made his people free, having delivered them from the power of darkness, and translated them into his own kingdom of perfect light and righteousness. Hence, the subjects of this work of salvation cannot sin against that law from which they are freed by the work of Jesus. This is the only hope of those who have learned the exceeding sinfulness of sin in their own personal experience. They know by bitter feeling of its power that there is nothing but death in the demand for perfect obedience from them. The adversary is ever ready to rob them of rest in the grace of God by directing their thoughts to that law as still claiming their service; and they can rely on nothing of their own works to satisfy its requirement. If they are still under that law, they must despair; "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them."—Gal. iii. 10. Since that law demands perfect and perpetual obedience, there can be no sin but that brings its utmost condemnation. "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."—James ii. 10. Its only judgment for the sinner is "unto death." Hence, it is clear that the "sin which is not unto death," is not any transgression of that law. If a saint could sin against that law there could be no salvation from death for him. But, as already shown, it is not possible that they should sin against that law, since it has no dominion over them. "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." There can be no life in that law since it is exclusively designated as "the ministration of death."—2 Cor. iii. 17. By its inflexible standard all unrighteousness is manifestly denounced as sin; and its only sentence against the sinner is death. Under that dispensation every sin is unto death.

In the gospel kingdom of our Lord Jesus all his people are redeemed from the power of death by the blood of the everlasting covenant. They cannot fall under the condemnation of the law of sin and death; because Christ has redeemed them from all its demands. Yet they are not without law to God, but are under the law of Christ.—1 Cor. ix. 21. While the transgression of the law of this spiritual kingdom cannot result in the final destruction of those unto whom Jesus has given eternal life, there is yet an experience of death to which they are subjected in the forsaking of the path of obedience to the commandments of their Lord. This is not the loss of that life which is hid with Christ in God; for that life never was subject to their disposal. Indeed, Christ Jesus is himself the eternal life of all the members of his body. Surely nothing can ever remove him from that glory which he had with the Father before the world was. Neither is it possible that his dying prayer should ever fail of securing the object for which he poured forth his soul unto death. Therefore, none of his ransomed ones can be absent from the throne of his glory, where he prayed that they might be with him. As they have immortality in their divine Redeemer, certainly no sin can result in their separation from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus. Whatever may be the correct understanding of our text, it cannot signify that one of his elect people may forfeit that life which was given them in Christ before the worlds were made. No such death can defeat the eternal purpose of God. Nor can the saints be guilty of any sin which shall bring upon them the condemnation of that law whose only penalty is death, in the sense of their final separation from the favor of God. No such death is found in the heavenly kingdom of our Lord.

In the perfect law the saints are not driven by terror to the performance of burdensome duties. Yet they are held to a strict obedience to that law of liberty which is put in their mind and heart. The reward of obedience and the chastening inseparable from disobedience are alike found in the very action or desire by which they are merited. No external testimony is needed for the decision of any case. The judgment seat is in the heart of every saint; and it is to them Paul declares, "Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh; for if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."—Rom. viii. 12, 13. Under this perfect law of liberty there is no more death. That is, no sin can separate the saint from the love of God in Christ which is eternal life. The sin which is unto death is that violation of the law of Christ by which there is a separation of the sinner from the fellowship of the saints. This is not a penalty to be visited by the judgment of the church. It is already experienced by the sinning one in his action when he yields his members servants to sin. Even though the sinful deed may be unknown to the church, and therefore there has been no formal action taken in the case, the sweet fellowship is broken so far as the sinner is concerned, and he is dead to spiritual enjoyment. No reasoning of his carnal mind can satisfy him in this state of death. He is cut off from the light and liberty of the sons of God. Only by the infinite grace of God can the joys of his salvation be restored to such a sinner. Neither can such death be felt by any one who has the love of God in his heart. Having sinned unto death, he must know the bitterness of that death in his own soul; no prayer of his brethren can save such a presumptuous sinner from the death unto which he has sinned. Not that they may not feel to pity his deplorable condition, and desire the mercy of God on his behalf; but the prayer of faith never seeks that which is contrary to the will of God. The blood of Jesus Christ alone cleanses his saints from all sin. When this antidote is applied by the Holy Spirit, then all sin is cleansed. But until this is manifested it is the bounden duty of those who love God to withdraw from the sinner whose sin has killed him to their fellowship.

No saint may presume to indulge his carnal mind in serving sin under the idea that his sin is not unto death. There is no unrighteousness in which there is not sin. It is not that one form of sin is unto death, and another form is not unto death. Remember that "All unrighteousness is sin." It is sin when one who loves Jesus confers with his own reason, and refuses to keep his commandments. It is unto death in his own soul when he persists in that sin. He can never know the life of a good conscience toward God in such rebellion. The admonition in our text does not enjoin that the saints should pray for the reversal of this ordinance of the King in Zion. Infinite love and wisdom have set this decree. It is the inflexible law of the Lord that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." When a man sees his brother sin in such a way that he is still living in his fellowship, he is authorized to ask, and the promise is that he shall receive the gift of "life for them that sin not unto death." Whoever can ask in faith for the life of an erring or sinning brother, must retain him in his fellowship. That instant when one has sinned so as to be out of that fellowship it is impossible to pray for his restoration. He has sinned unto death, and the text forbids prayer on his behalf. This does not involve the decision whether the sinner is a subject of salvation in Christ. No mortal has the passing of that judgment. All the directions of the inspired record are applicable to the present state of the saints. In eternal glory they have no need of scriptural instruction. It is in the bondage of the body of this death that the saints need to be instructed in righteousness; and here we have the complete guide in the written law of Christ as given by inspiration. In this law nothing is written which conflicts with the direction of the Spirit of Christ in the heart of those who are born of God. Whenever anything seems to vary from this test it is for want of divine light by which to discern the true meaning of the Scripture.

These reflections have been written at the request of sister Winfield, of Port Jervis, as expressed in her note accompanying this article. Fully conscious of the imperfection and obscurity of my manner, I submit what is written to her as an indication of willingness to comply with her wish. Also, I would unite in the request that others give their views on the subject without apprehension that I shall object to correction on any point wherein they may detect error.

In hope of life in Christ Jesus,
WM. L. BEEBE.

WARWICK, N. Y., Sept., 1894.

THE CREATION OF MAN.

THIS subject has been upon my mind of late with a desire to write such thoughts as present themselves upon the subject, and submitting the same to the consideration of my brethren, trusting they will in charity overlook my vanity in trying to write upon a theme that seems too deep for mortal man to comprehend. The Scripture bearing upon the subject is found in Genesis ii. 7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."

In considering this sublime subject, the formation of man of the dust of the ground, also his creation in the mind of God, in his image and likeness, there is food for reflection, which brings forth thoughts. Is there anything in the formation of man that is of a spiritual character? If I judge from a natural standpoint it would seem that when God made man there was a purpose to be fulfilled in the make-up of man that would reflect honor and praise upon his handiwork. I do not believe there was any mistake made in the creation of man, and his formation of the dust of the ground, but that man in all his parts just fulfilled the design and purpose of God in bringing into existence that which was created in the mind of God in eternity, before a man was found to till the ground on the face of the earth. Any other view, to my mind, would cause confusion in the whole work of the Creator. Then, taking this view of the subject, I wish to take up man as we find him here upon earth. We see him a creature of God, originally formed of the dust of the ground, having body, soul and spirit. All his offspring are but the production of the man whom God formed of the dust of the ground. I find him a responsible being, subject to the will of his Creator, and under law to him. I find him a transgressor of the law which his Creator gave him to keep, and by the act of disobedience made a subject of death. I see daily the penalty of that transgression visited upon the man, and his body borne away to the silent tomb. I witness mortality swallowed up in death, and the body returned to its mother earth. All this I witness concerning man in his earthly estate; now do we find in man any living substance that is spiritual in the narrative given by the inspired writer of the formation of man? We read, "God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Then is there anything spiritual in the breath of life? We know this breath of life is what gives action and power to move the man on the face of the earth, and without that breath of life man would be an inanimate form, having no power, no more than a lump of clay in form. Then is this breath of life spiritual? It certainly came from God, and God is a Spirit; and they that worship God must worship him in spirit and in truth. Solomon, in writing upon this subject, says the body returns to earth, and the spirit unto God who gave it. Then is this breath of life the spirit of the man? According to natural reasoning it would seem so. If I go back to the creation of man I read, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." I also read that "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." I wish to notice particularly that creation was before formation; showing to my mind that man had an existence in the mind of God before he was formed of the dust of the ground, which to me seems significant that man was to be elevated and made conformable to the image in which he was created; for it is written that Jesus was the express image of the Father; and in him was life, and that life was the light of men. Thus it would seem that man was formed in the image of Jesus, who was God manifest in the flesh. We have now a living substance, which seems to open up the great work of the creation of man in his own image, after his likeness; which is also significant that it was the purpose of God when he created man that he should be heir to his glory, and an inheritor of immortal life, and one with him in the heavenly world; that this image should be made perfect through the process it had to pass through in time; first being formed of the dust of the ground, a natural being, moved and acted upon by the breath of life, which manifested it as a creature of God; and second, that this same being should be born again, by the power of God, transforming him into a spiritual man, by the Spirit of Christ dwelling therein; having spiritual desires, and thereby reflecting the image of God, in which he was created. For illustration, I wish to take up Eve, who is said to be the mother of all living. Was the desire of Eve to attain knowledge, to know good and evil, to be wise, and become as a god, contrary to the will of God? I think not. Was she not created to manifest and bring forth all her seed into the world? Certainly Eve's disobedience was according to the will of God, that she might multiply and bring forth every image created in man to be manifested upon the earth, even Jesus, the express image of the Father. She inherited the penalty of death, by her act of disobedience, on all her progeny, yet in the act she became wise to know good and evil; by which knowledge she could fill the place assigned her by her Maker, to be the mother of all living. In her primitive state Eve, in her innocence, was like a little child, not knowing good and evil, and could not in that state fill the place of a mother to bring up children and teach them what was right and what was wrong; thus the necessity of Eve's transgression, to fill the place assigned her by her Creator in multiplying and replenishing the earth. I will notice particularly that the transgression was committed in the garden of Eden; and after the transgression they were cast out of the garden, in the earth, to till the ground from whence they were taken; therefore the transgression was necessary, to replenish the earth. In the transgression of Adam, who was created in the image of God, we have the figure of Jesus, the Son of God, brilliantly set forth. His wife, his bride, had gone into transgression. She by virtue of the act which she had committed became a subject of death. She was bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh. The idea of separation from him was impossible, for it took Eve to make the body of Adam perfect. God in his wisdom had taken away a part of the body of Adam to make him a helpmeet. Let us sketch a picture of Adam after Eve was taken from him, and you will see an imperfect man in form and stature. One of the main stays of his body has been removed, and without Eve he is an imperfect man; therefore when Eve transgressed Adam also transgressed, for she was bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh. There could be no separation, and he willingly received the fruit of the tree at her hand, preferring death to separation from part of his body. In like figure Christ willingly received the penalty of transgression, which is death, for the love he had for his bride, the church, which was given him by the Father before the world was made; for she was created in his image, after his likeness. Let us take the hope of the saints of God to day, and what is the foundation on which that hope is based? It certainly is not based upon the works of the creature; for the works of the creature were the transgression of the command of God. Then we must go back to a better foundation to base hope upon, and that foundation is found in the creation of man in the image and likeness of God; for in Adam was the seed of every subject of grace that should be manifest in the flesh in time, bearing the image of God, after his likeness. Let us take up the experience of the children of God to day, and what is their hope based upon? Is it not that their names were written in heaven before time was, or created in Christ Jesus before the world was; that the image or likeness they represent was with the Father, preserved in Jesus Christ, when as yet there was none of them; that the great work of creation, also the work of redemption, was settled in eternity, before man was fashioned of the dust of the ground; and that the work of creation was only the fulfilling of what was already in the mind of God when he created man in his image, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life? This would seem to be a foundation to rest hope upon, and a sure foundation, that man, bearing the image of his Creator, was significant; that according to the purpose of God he should pass through these changes, and when all was fulfilled concerning him on earth should be gathered back to the God that created him, to dwell forever in his presence. It is written, "It repented the Lord that he had made man, and it grieved him at his heart." What a consoling thought is presented in this Scripture, "It repented the Lord." What a fatherly affection is here displayed, that God should repent on the account of man; that when he looked upon his image, plunged into disobedience and sin, his bowels of mercy should be moved, and the end of all flesh should come up before him, to destroy that which offends. How often in our own experience the same thought comes up in our mind, when we see the workings of the flesh in our own sinful bodies, which causes us to repent that the Lord made man, and grieves us at heart. We often say, "O! if I could lay aside this body of sin and death, what a relief it would be to my troubled soul." Is this not the cry of every one that bears the image of Jesus? It was the Spirit of the Lord Jesus in the inspired writer that wrote this language, that it repented the Lord that he had made man; and the same Spirit in every child of God brings forth the same repentance, as an evidence that he is a child of God, bearing the image of Jesus. We know that without repentance there is no remission of sin. Then, if the Lord repented that he had made man, it would seem that his love was great for the man he created in his own image. Natural men do not repent unless their heart is grieved. How much more then should it repent the Lord. When the end of all flesh came up before him Jesus, the Redeemer of man, said, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." These were the words of the express image of the Father. How touching the prayer of Jesus! Did the Lord repent? Was he grieved at heart? Yes, Jesus repented, and said, "Not my will, but thine be done." So says every lover of Jesus that bears the image of the Father, when the end of all flesh comes up before him, a just penalty for his sins. This view of the subject may seem strange to the natural mind, why it should repent the Lord that he had made man; yet to the spiritual mind it brings hope and assurance that the Lord is mindful of the man that bears his image, and will never leave nor forsake him. His likeness is ever before him in the presence of Jesus; and the substance which that likeness represents shall in his own good time take the place of the image in the world of glory, to be forever with the Lord. I have often thought, Was my name written in heaven in the Lamb's book of life? If not, what hope could I have of ever entering that blessed abode? Certainly if my name, image or likeness were not there when man was created, how can it be put there in time? for we are told that the work was finished, and the end declared from the beginning. No additions, no subtractions, can be made in the predestinated purpose of God concerning the children of men. Every one must fill the place appointed for him of his Creator; and every image shall be transformed into a living substance, to meet around the throne of God, that was created in the ancients of eternity, to be manifested in time. This view of the subject, it seems to me, is the only foundation that poor mortal man can rest hope upon; that being created in the likeness of God, and bearing his image, he has some assurance that when he is called from time to eternity he will in the likeness of God be found, a subject of his mercy, redeemed from this body of death by the blood of Jesus, and raised to newness of life by his resurrection power, and come forth a living substance, to join the innumerable host around the throne of God. Such thoughts give comfort and hope to a poor, lost sinner now sojourning in the flesh, as I find myself to be; and my prayer is, May my hope be strengthened, and my faith fail not, trusting that when I awake in his likeness I shall be satisfied.

I submit these thoughts to the brethren. I have not put into words what I hope I see set forth in the subject, because of my inefficiency to write as I would like, not having the gift to express on paper the vision of thought. If brethren Beebe and Jenkins should think what I have written is suitable matter for the SIGNS they may correct language and publish the same.

Affectionately yours,
JOSEPH BROTHERS.

ALEXANDRIA, Va.

SANCTIFY--HOLY.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I was so much comforted and instructed in reading Elder F. A. Chick's letter in the SIGNS of August first, on "Sanctification," that I wrote to him concerning it, and suggested some additional thoughts on the subject. He replied to my letter, asking me to rewrite my letter and enlarge upon it, and send it to the SIGNS for publication. I have consented to do so, but with no thought of improving upon what brother Chick has written so ably and comfortably, but to present some features of the subject not presented by him.

I have often come in contact with modern Pharisees who "make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments." Two of these persons claimed to have lived without sin for more than twelve years; but, as brother Chick says, their neighbors had not learned of it except through their publishing it. Another said, "There is no such thing as hope with me. I am living in the eternal now." Yet this same man employed me, as a mechanic, to superintend the construction of a storm-cellar, into which he might run for safety in time of danger. For fourteen consecutive weeks, day and night, beginning with the second week in March, three men continued to publish their holiness (?) on the streets and in the houses of our town; and they are here now, with reinforcements to the number of fifteen, holding a tent-meeting. So you see that I have had some incentive to examine the subject, which I have done with considerable care. Not being a Hebrew nor Greek scholar, I have had to rely on approved authors for the literal rendering of the Hebrew and Greek. The Hebrew word from which "holy" and "sanctify" are translated occurs more than five hundred and fifty times in the Bible. It is four hundred and thirty times translated into some inflection of the word "holy," and about one hundred times it is translated into some inflection of the word "sanctify." Thirty-five times it is rendered "hallow," and seven times "consecrate;" and in every one of the texts referred to the word is defined as meaning "separate, set apart." The Greek word from which "holy" and "sanctify" are translated, and which has the same meaning as the Hebrew word, occurs about fifty times in the Bible. Twenty-four times it is translated "holy," twenty-four times "sanctify," and twice it is translated "hallow."

There is one other Hebrew word, meaning "kind, gracious," five times translated "holy." This word occurs in the following texts: Deuteronomy xxxiii. 8; Psalm xvi. 10; lxxxvi. 2; lxxxix. 19; cxlv. 17. There is also a Greek word of the same meaning that is seven times translated "holy," in the following texts: Luke i. 75; Acts ii. 27; xiii. 35; Ephesians iv. 25; Hebrews vii. 26; 1 Timothy ii. 8, 10; Titus i. 8; Revelation xv. 4.

I have simply used the one inflection of the words "holy" and "sanctify," but have included in the numbers given all their inflections, such as holiness, sanctification, sanctified, &c. These words occur more than six hundred times in the Bible, and never mean "sinless." When such is intended other words are used, as in the following texts: "The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works."—Psalm cxlv. 17. "In holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our lives."—Luke i. 75. "That ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."—Eph. iv. 24. "God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness."—Isa. v. 16. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."—1 Cor. i. 30. "That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word."—Eph. v. 26. If the thought intended to be conveyed by the words "righteous" and "cleanse" can be expressed by "holy" or "sanctify," then they are superfluous in the foregoing texts; but they are entirely different words in the original, and are therefore needed to convey thought not expressed by any other words in the text. The only difference that I am able to discover between the words "holy" and "sanctify" is a difference in the inflection of the same original Hebrew and Greek words. Wherever the original word is used as a pure adjective it is always translated "holy;" and wherever it is used as a verb or participle it is translated "sanctify." There are other inflections, but suffice it to say that the word is translated either "holy" or "sanctify," according to its use, and not according to its meaning; for in both renderings its meaning is the same.

I would not convey the idea that literal separation, in the sense of division, is the meaning of these words. Words in the Bible conveying that idea are translated from entirely different words. Its meaning is better understood by the words "hallow" and "consecrate," which are exact synonyms of "sanctify," and translated from the same original word, but not so much perverted by false teachers. Among the Jews it meant a ceremonial preparation, or setting apart for sacred or divine service; by which sanctification the person was qualified, or the object consecrated, for the worship of the true and living God. All the things in the temple were holy, and everything to be used in the service at the temple was holy. It was set apart or consecrated to the service, and separated from other things of its kind, in that it was not to be used for any other purpose. God sanctified the seventh day—set it apart as a day of rest, and commanded the Jews to keep it so; that is, to "keep it holy." They were required to devote it to his service. In Exodus xix. Moses was commanded to sanctify the people, and told how to do it. He did not purge them from their sins, but prepared them by a solemn ceremonial washing to meet with God, which should take place on the third day. Aaron and his garments were sanctified for the priestly office. Certain fields or parts of fields were sanctified, and the proceeds went into the sacred treas-

(Continued on page 310)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., SEPTEMBER 26, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

JEREMIAH XXIII. 33-40.

DEAR FRIEND AND PASTOR:—If not asking too much of you amid your various cares and labors, may I ask of you to give an explanation, as far as the Lord may give you light, on Jeremiah xxiii. 33, through the remainder of the chapter?

I have frequently, when reading these verses, thought of asking your views of them through the pulpit; but this day when reading them my mind was so forcibly impressed with the weighty meaning conveyed by the prophet's words, I could not longer delay asking you, through the SIGNS, by the aid of the Spirit, to unfold your views to my mind, as the Lord has so often made it my happy privilege to have his word, through you, set home with joy, comfort and edification to my soul. May his Spirit open the eyes of your understanding to impart knowledge of his truth, and illumine my mind to receive the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, is the desire and prayer of your friend and sister, if I can claim so great a privilege in Christ.

E. C. ROBERTS.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 23.

R E P L Y .

We have not so clear a view as we could wish of the text on which our views are called for by our esteemed sister; but such views as we have, and such as may be suggested to our mind, we will cheerfully submit. We are fully convinced from our own experience, and from the testimony of the Scriptures, that the record of eternal truth can only be clearly understood so far as the Holy Ghost, by whom holy men of old were inspired to write, may graciously open them to our understanding. Any view which we may have independently of the Spirit's teaching is only speculative, and can neither be satisfactory to our own mind nor edifying to our readers. Venturing some general remarks on the passage proposed, we hope to utter nothing discordant with sound doctrine, and if we utterly fail to bring out the true sense of this subject, it is our happiness to know that we have among the Old School Baptists many brethren sufficiently instructed in the school of Christ to correct us.

The period in the history of Israel and Judah, at which these words were applied, was remarkable for the degeneracy of both branches of Israel. The context tells us that the land was full of adulterers, and mourned because of swearing. Their cause was evil and their force was not right. Both prophet and priest had become profane; those of Samaria prophesied in Baal, and those of Jerusalem committed horrible things, walking in lies and committing adultery, until they had become unto the Lord as Sodom and Gomor-rah. From the prophets of Jerusalem had profaneness gone into all the land, making the people of Israel vain, speaking the visions of their own hearts, and not from the mouth of the Lord. God says of them, "I have not sent these prophets, yet they run; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." "I have heard," saith the Lord, "what the prophets said, that prophecy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed!" "How long shall this be in the hearts of the prophets that prophecy lies? Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own hearts." "Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that use their own tongues, and say, He saith. Behold, I am against them that prophecy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord."

"And when this people, or a prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is the burden of the Lord? thou shalt say unto them, What burden? I will even forsake you, saith the Lord." By "the people," we understand the people of Israel and of Judah, and especially those of them who perverted the word of the Lord, and delighted in the abominations of the priests and prophets who caused them to err. The same are referred to by Peter among whom he said there were false prophets, even as there should be false teachers among the Christian churches, privily bringing in damnable heresies, &c. The prophet and priest, who should thus inquire of Jeremiah, were evidently those who prophesied lies and committed abominations. To their inquiries the prophet of the Lord should reply, "What burden?" Thus signifying that all communications to them as the people, prophets or priests of the Lord, were interdicted; for he adds, "I will even forsake you, saith the Lord." In the execution of his righteous judgments on them for their abomination, he would send them no peaceful messages as aforetime; that they should no longer hold communication through the priesthood or by the Lord's anointed prophets with the God of heaven. No longer should they enjoy the succor and protection of God against famine, sword and pestilence; but they should be given up to the sword of the alien, and carried away into long captivity in Babylon. Forsaken of the God of Israel, they should make a feeble and ineffectual resistance against the invading armies of the Chaldeans, and such as escaped immediate death should go with their degraded prince to Babylon, and there be shut out from the hearing of the word of the Lord, until the time of their captivity should be accomplished.

"And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people that shall say,

The burden of the Lord, I will even punish that man and his house. Thus shall ye say, every man to his neighbor, and every one to his brother, What hath the Lord answered? and, What hath the Lord spoken?" In this part of our subject a difference is made between the "burden of the Lord" and the answer, or the thing or things spoken by the Lord. By the burden of the Lord we may understand those communications which God from time to time made to his people through his prophets, and were so called to express the manner in which the Lord by his Spirit wrought on the hearts of his prophets when he made them the bearers of his messages to his people; when his word became as fire shut up in their bones, and they could not forbear, without weariness, to speak that they might be refreshed. The communications of the Lord were weighty; they felt the responsibility that was on them, and with trembling and fear obeyed the commandment of their God, not daring to think their own thoughts or use their own words. They spake only as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, without conferring with flesh and blood. Perhaps every child of grace who has felt constrained to declare what God has done for his soul, or to stand as a witness for God and truth, has learned to understand experimentally how the word of the Lord was a burden to the prophets of the Lord. But how inappropriate when the false prophets of Israel, or the false teachers of Christendom, who use their own mouths, and say the Lord saith, who tell their false dreams and prophesy lies, for such to use these words in reference to their lies, "the burden of the Lord." It is not only presumptuous, but profane and blasphemous; attributing to God the abominable corruptions of their depraved hearts. There was much of this hypocrisy among the false prophets of ancient times, even before colleges and schools were instituted for the express purpose of teaching men to manufacture their own burdens; but now, false teachers having thrown off all restraint, shook hands with shame, and forgotten how to blush, it is not unusual for men to come before their congregations with the burden, if so it may be called, of their own words in their pockets, or hats, but not in or upon their hearts; and with a countenance long drawn and solemn as those worn by their ancient brethren, the Pharisees, talk of the burden of the Lord. They dare to call on God, in solemn mockery, profaning his name, and taking it in vain, and plead with him to release them from the burden of the Lord, under which they pretend to labor, by giving them a subject, and a door of utterance, a fruitful mind, a clear and experimental perception of his word, of his mind, and enable them to speak as the Spirit may direct, and as the oracle of God; when in their hearts they have never known the Lord, or felt the weight of his truth, or a woe is me if I preach not in honesty, simplicity and faithfulness the preaching which the Lord has bidden me.

The judgment of God recorded in our subject against degenerate Israel should be regarded as an admonition to the Christian church under the present dispensation; and truly we have found in the corruptions of what has been called the Christian church all that was prefigured in the history of the typical church. False prophets were there; false teachers are here. The former multiplied their prophets of Baal, of Jezebel, of the grove, &c., the latter heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. Those prophesied lies in the name of the Lord; these "teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." The former saying, "The burden of the Lord," when the Lord had not spoken to them; and the latter declaring that their communications are the messages of God by them to the people, when they know that they have, in most cases, garbled their entire manuscript sermons from some popular commentators or eloquent declaimers. But God will punish that man and his house who thus profanely says, in reference to his own productions, "The burden of the Lord." But, "Thus shall ye say, every man to his neighbor," &c., "What hath the Lord answered? and what hath the Lord spoken?" Although the Lord would withhold the burden of his word from the rebellious people described, in the manner and form which we have considered, yet he will reply to their insolence and profanity. He will answer them from his whirlwinds, he will reply to them in tones of thunder. He will speak to their confusion, and utter his voice to their destruction. "And the burden of the Lord shall ye mention no more; for every man's word shall be his burden; for ye have perverted the words of the living God, of the Lord of hosts, our God." To those who pervert the words which God has sent by his prophets, and other messengers, his word is not a burden; it lays with no weight on their hearts; they feel not its force or importance, or they would not dare to pervert it, or to turn his truth into a lie; "for every man's word shall be his burden." The burden which our Redeemer charged the scribes, Pharisees and lawyers with binding and laying on men's shoulders, were words of their own, whereby they taught for doctrines the commandments of men; and made void his law by their own traditions. And it is more abundantly so at this present time. Christ's words, in almost everything, are perverted by those who profess to be his ministers. For instance, he commissioned his apostles to go into all the world, and preach his gospel. This commission is, by a daring perversion, used as authority for Mission societies, composed of church and world, with state or national charters, for evangelizing the world and saving the heathen! The charge to the saints, "To do good and to communicate," is perverted to sustain religious fairs, lotteries, raffles, mock post-offices, religious tea parties, oyster suppers, &c., &c., &c.; for building splendid meeting-houses, paying church debts, supporting a popular clergy, and for any other pretendedly religious service that the pride and covetousness of the depraved hearts of men may devise. But the word of the Lord is no burden to such characters; their consciences are seared with a hot iron. If John the Baptist should tell them, in the words of the Lord, that these things, like the incestuous course of Herod, were unlawful, his head would be required in a charger. There being no fear of God before their eyes, they are burdened only with the execution of their own devices.

The whole bearing of this subject goes to show the abominable wickedness of ascribing to God the works, the words and doctrines and ordinances of men; the hypocrisy and presumption of those who use their own mouths, and say, "The Lord saith," or who do in the Lord's name what he has not commanded.

The punishment threatened to the rebellious Israelites was literally executed on them in the days of Zedekiah, king of Judah, and more fully consummated almost eighteen hundred years ago, in the destruction of the city of Jerusalem by Titus; and we have seen, in the antitypical application of the subject, those churches of the Baptist profession which once occupied exalted ground among the churches of the saints, for this transgression of the command of God utterly forgotten, or forsaken, and left to be filled with their own ways and burdens. While the various branches of antichrist have been suffered to do the same things, preach the same doctrines, impose the same burdens, and worship the same idols, with impunity, God's people have learned that they cannot sin as cheaply as those who have never known the way of righteousness. From the high ground which the Baptists have occupied, professing to know nothing save Christ and him crucified, and to do nothing religiously without a clear and distinct "Thus saith the Lord" for their authority, all that they have professed to insist on was the burden of the Lord, his easy yoke, and his light burden. In embracing the popular doctrines and modern institutions of this corrupted age, and at the same time retaining their old profession of strict and undeviating adherence to the Scriptures as their only rule, they have virtually said that all these inventions are the burden of the Lord. And as a consequence of their departure from the old paths of Zion, and a righteous judgment for their profanity in saying, "The burden of the Lord," they are now removed from his presence. They are not placed where he cannot see them; for in that sense he is everywhere present, beholding the evil and the good; but they are removed from the vision of peace, from Jerusalem, and from the sensible presence and smiles of the Lord, forgotten of the Lord in the display of his favors to his people. None of the Lord's ministers are provided for or sent unto them; they must supply themselves, through their schools, or by the attractive charm of their lucre, or remain destitute. The sons and daughters of the Lord are no longer fed and comforted within their assemblies, no more seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord are poured out upon them; as their own word is their burden, so all their animation, excitement, accession and apparent prosperity must arise from their own resources. An everlasting reproach and a perpetual shame shall, by the word of the Lord, be upon them, which shall not be forgotten. "Woe unto them, for they have gone in the way of Cain, and run greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core."

NEW VERNON, N. Y., July 15, 1847.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Powell's Valley Association of Primitive Baptists, now in session with the Holston Church, Grainger County, Tennessee, on Friday before the first Saturday in September, 1894, and two following days, to the associations with whom we correspond, sendeth greeting.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN:—We have been blest again with the privilege of meeting together in an associated capacity, to hear from the Zion of our God. We were glad to hear from you, and to meet with some of your messengers, and to learn that we are all in peace among ourselves. We desire in the future, as in the past, to keep up a christian correspondence with you. Our next association will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Pigeon Church, Cocke County, Tennessee, four miles southwest of Newport, to commence on Friday before the first Saturday in September, 1895, where and when we hope to meet with some of you. Brethren, pray for us. We have chosen our beloved brethren, whose names you will see in our Minutes, to bear this our epistle of love to you, whom we hope you will receive to sit with you in council. May the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ be with you, is our prayer.

JAMES McDONALD, Mod.

JAMES C. WALTON, Clerk.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Powell's Valley Primitive Baptist Association, convened with the church at Holston, Grainger County, Tennessee, August 31st, and September 1st and 2d, 1894.

VERY DEAR BRETHREN:—In compliance with your order of last year that I should write you something in form of a Circular Letter, I shall now endeavor to make the attempt. I shall call your attention to a certain Scripture which reads thus: "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matt. i. 21. This seems to be sufficient for us. "He shall save his people from their sins;" not try, and fail, as some would have you believe; but "he shall save his people from their sins." Not to be instrumental in their salvation; not to be a co-worker in their salvation; no, that is not what he shall do; but "he shall save his people from their sins." It is not said of him that he came to open up a way by which we can save ourselves, but it is said that he came to seek and to save that which was lost. He said, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: and this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." This is what he came to do; not to make provision, nor to offer eternal life to those dead in trespasses and sins, but to save his people from their sins. I wish to notice who his people are, and how he came by them, and what relationship exists between him and them.

First, as to whom they are. I understand them to be of the family of Adam, who "were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." I also understand them to be elect, chosen from among the sons and daughters of Adam's family, who had fallen to the very depth of depravity, and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others, and unable to extricate themselves either in part or in whole from that deplorable condition which they were in by reason of sin.

Second. I understand them to be the children of God (by virtue of choice made in Christ Jesus before the world began), and called the "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father," and said to be the "sanctified of God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called." Also said to be chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, and predestinated unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ. It is also said by inspiration, "The Lord's portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his inheritance." But, says the objector, Are not all the human family his? I answer, Yes, by creation they are his. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof." "For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him, and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." But there is a sense in which the human family as a whole are not his, and that is by election. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." If any man have not this gift in Christ he is none of his. Consequently if we have this gift in Christ, by virtue of choice, we are his, and it shall be made manifest to us at his own good time and place that we are his children, his elect. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." One more Scripture to show that all men are not his in every particular, that is by election. Jesus said unto certain Jews, "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." And now we begin to see where he got them. "My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one." Hence it appears that his people were given to him by his Father, beyond all doubt. But still the objector might say, Were not all given to the Son? I would answer, No; we do not think they were; for we hear it said again, "Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong, because he hath poured out his soul unto death." A portion is not the whole, but a part of the whole. We hear him say again, "As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him;" which would imply only a portion of all flesh. We hear it said again, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." This would imply a part given, as all will not be saved. Hence it appears clear to our mind that his people are a chosen people, chosen by God the Father in Christ before the world began, predestinated from eternity to adoption, called in time according to God's own good time and will, without any probability or even a possibility of a failure, and saved unto an everlasting salvation, world without end. Now, as to what relationship exists between Christ and his people, we understand them to be joint-heirs with Christ, having the same God to their Father, being children of the same parents, or in other words, "Both he [Christ] that sanctifieth, and they [his people] who are sanctified, are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee. And again, Behold, I and the children which God hath given me. Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." Not something like it, but part of the same flesh that they are partakers of. It is also said that we are "bone of his bones, and flesh of his flesh." Not bones like his, and flesh like his flesh, but of his bones and of his flesh. Our Savior said again to his disciples, "At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you." This brings us not only to a close relationship, but to a oneness of Christ and his people. It is said that the church is his body, the church is his bride, the church is his temple; she is his love, his dove, his fair one; she is his delight, while he is her bridegroom. He is her life, her hope, her righteousness, her sanctification, her redemption and salvation. In fact he is her all in all. A church without Christ would be a body without life, a city without inhabitants. And Christ without the church would be a head without a body, a captain without soldiers, a king without subjects. In fact, the oneness of Christ and his church is so plainly taught in Scripture that we are made to believe that when he suffered for her sins, there in a mystery did she suffer in the person of Christ; that when he went down into death, she went down in the person of Christ into death, and there suffered the demands of the law to the full extent. The law now being satisfied, she in the person of Christ arose from the dead, to die no more in that sense. "For by one offering he [Christ] hath perfected forever all them that are sanctified." Yes, by that one offering he hath perfected forever all those chosen vessels of mercy, those elected, those sanctified by God the Father. "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." Yes, this is the way he saves his people from their sins; for it is said, "But now once, in the end of the world, hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself: who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree; that we, being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed." Yes, he was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before her shearer, so opened he not his mouth. "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." Yes, this is the way we understand "he shall save his people from their sins;" their sins being imputed to him; and he bearing them in his own body on the tree, and putting them away by the sacrifice of himself, and his righteousness being imputed to them as their righteousness. So then it is "by grace ye are saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast."

So, in conclusion, I would say, brethren, live in peace among yourselves, believing that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." And, I would say, they cannot work otherwise. May the grace of our once crucified but now risen and exalted Redeemer rest and remain with you, and all the Israel of God here and elsewhere, to that world without end, is our prayer for Jesus' sake.

JAMES McDONALD, Mod.
JAMES C. WALTON, Clerk.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 307.)

ury. They sanctified certain things in payment of vows; but it must not be the firstling of their flocks or herds, for that was sanctified by the law of Moses.—Lev. xxvii.

The whole nation of Israel was sanctified, and was therefore a holy nation.—Ex. xix. 6; Lev. xi. 45; Deut. xiv. 2. But who will say that it was without sin? No people had suffered so much for sin as they, nor shall it be so again.—Matt. xxiv. Jerusalem was called "the holy city;" yea, more holy than the nation, in that it was sanctified above all the other Jewish cities for the service of God. In it was the temple, the grandest structure of its age, if not the grandest of all ages. This temple was sanctified to the special service of God. It was more holy than the city. This temple was divided into its apartments, one holier than another, until the holiest of the holy was reached, where no man dared enter except the high priest, and he not without the proper offering. But God is more holy than the temple or its most holy place, for no man can come into his presence. He is the one and only true object of worship. His name is above every name, his glory is incomprehensibly great, and his dominion reaches to the ends of the earth. When he made himself manifest to Job, Job said, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee: wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Would the modern boasting Pharisee do well to take counsel of Job?

The Jews could get no nearer to God in their worship than to the temple in Jerusalem. They could only worship in form, having their law written on tables of stone; but there is a people more holy than the Jews, whose sanctification is not an outward, ceremonial work, but a work of the Spirit. Their sanctification, like that of their type, is not limited to an act. They are "sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."—Heb. x. 10. By this sanctification they are separated from the condemnation of the law and all their sins in a legal sense, and were consecrated to God when Jesus arose from the dead and was seated at the right hand of the Father. Sanctification should not be confused with redemption; but, as brother Chick said, by election it is inseparably connected with it; yea, is not sanctification a part of election and redemption? Yet it falls far short of expressing the full meaning of those words. They were sanctified by the Holy Ghost when they were personally and experimentally delivered from the bondage of sin, separated from the love of it, and made to love God and serve him.—1 Cor. vi. 11; 2 Thess. ii. 13; 1 Peter i. 2. They are sanctified by the word of God. Of this brother Chick has spoken instructively, and all would do well to read his article again. The people of God "are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light."—1 Peter ii. 9. Anything that tends to separate them from the world, and consecrate them to God, contributes to their sanctification, even their own obedience to the law of Christ; for Peter said, "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance: but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy."—1 Peter i. 13-16. Read the whole chapter. See also 1 Thess. iv., and especially third to eighth verses. Their sanctification is not made manifest by boasting about their own righteousness, but rather by a confession of sin, humility, meekness and love.

The people who are sanctified of God in spirit learn their own helplessness in sin, and the power of God in salvation, to a degree that could not be attained unto in the ceremonial worship. The ceremonial is a type of the spiritual; and as the substance is greater than the shadow, so is our sanctification greater than that of the Jews. The new Jerusalem is more holy than the old, in that every inhabitant is a priest, qualified to offer up spiritual sacrifices unto God. Their High Priest is infinitely more glorious and holy, for he has entered not into the holiest of the holy made with hands, but into heaven itself. God, to them, is more holy, made so by the more excellent gifts bestowed upon them through his love and mercy. "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts."

I will say in conclusion that I have sometimes noticed quotations from Webster's Dictionary in giving definitions of biblical terms, which are objectionable for two reasons at least. First, Webster did not translate the languages, but restricted his work to the compiling of an American dictionary of the English language. He did not need to know what the word formerly meant, nor even what other nations may mean by it, but what do the popular speakers and writers of America mean by it. Second, for this reason he consulted mechanics for mechanical terms, botanists, scientists, theologians, &c. I think that he stated in an early edition that he assigned the theological part of his dictionary to a certain eminent Catholic priest. His definitions accord with common usage. If all the religious denominations should agree that to baptize was to sprinkle with water, the next edition of Webster's Dictionary would be revised so as to conform to their decision.

Brother Beebe, I submit this to you. Do with it as you think is right and I will be content.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

W. N. THARP.

LIBERTY, Ind., Sept. 6, 1894.

WEST UNION, Iowa, Feb. 28, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I will remit to you for volume fifty-three of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, as we deem it one of the best mediums of correspondence in the world; for therein is contained much good news from the heralds or ministers of our God, which makes us feel as did the old prophet when it was revealed to him by the Lord that he had reserved to himself seven thousand men who had not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. Even so at this time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace, who will be saved with an everlasting salvation, by that God who declared the end from the beginning, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." He is able to carry on his work, and none can hinder. He is calling one here and another there, and he places them in the body as it pleases him.

Dear brethren, I have heard many of my Father's dear children telling through the SIGNS the dealings of the Lord with them in bringing them from darkness to light, and the relation is comforting to us. Our God is ever faithful in his work of translating his dear children from the power of Satan, and bringing them under his own banner of love. They can all say with the apostle, that it is by grace they are saved. This is what makes manifest the relationship we sustain to our Lord and Master and to one another. There is neither male nor female, but all are one in Christ Jesus, their living Head. All are made to drink from that fountain which was opened to the house of David for sin and for uncleanness. Thus being led along we are made to say, "O Lord, how wonderful are thy works!" His ways are past finding out.

Dear brethren, I feel like throwing in my mite, and if you will bear with me I will try to relate some of the outlines of my travels from nature to grace. When I was about twenty years old I thought, as I always had, that I could get religion at any time I would go about it. My father and mother were members of the Old School Baptists. We lived in Muskingum County, Ohio. As their place of meeting was some distance from our home, it was very seldom that I attended. But there were a number of Methodist meetings, and I generally attended them. My associates began to unite with them, and they talked to me about joining them. They received their members on probation of six months, and guaranteed that they would get religion. I always thought I would rather be anything else than a hypocrite, so I came to the conclusion that I would get religion first, and then I would not be a hypocrite. I commenced in earnest one Monday morning, and tried all that week, but at the end of the week could find no change in my feelings. The thing that betrayed me most was swearing. I would swear before I could think. Right there something seemed to tell me that religion did not come in that way; so I concluded that if I ever got religion the Lord would have to give it to me. I was satisfied that I could not get it.

I now wish to quote a passage of Scripture found in Job xxxiii. 15, 16. "In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; then he openeth the ears of men, and seal-eth their instruction." It is in the fear of God I pen these lines, yet I may be called a dreamer. About a year after I had given up all hope of getting religion I had a vision in the night. It seemed to me as though it were day when I awoke. I seemed carried up into the sky, and all at once I was sitting in a nice large room, and on looking up I saw a man in black clothing, who said to me, "Thy sins, which are many, are all forgiven thee." Then I saw him no more. I was rejoicing with joy that is unspeakable and full of glory, and knew it was religion. I thought I could tell everybody of the glory and happiness there is in religion. Then the words came to me in a moment,

"Tongue cannot express the sweet comfort and peace

Of a soul in its earliest love."

I have never from that time doubted the reality of the Christian religion. But alas! those happy feelings soon seemed to vanish, and left me only the shadow. I thought Christians were always in possession of that love and joy; but alas for me! I was left to roam and wander in the wilderness of sin for twenty years. Right here I will quote another passage of Scripture. Paul in his charge to Timothy says, "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after." Some of God's dear children, in being brought from nature's darkness into the light and liberty of the sons of God, in a very great measure see themselves as sinners, and seek to justify themselves by being good; but the poor creatures seem to get worse instead of better; and when all their efforts fail them, and they expect only to be banished into everlasting torment, suddenly Jesus appears to them and says, "Thy sins, which are many, are all forgiven thee."

But my situation seemed to be so different; for my sins followed after, and I got into Universalism. I moved to Iowa in the year 1850, where I made myself a large farm, and thought I was getting rich. Everything seemed to prosper with me, and I was fond of mirth. It was then the Lord showed me my poverty. I got out my violin to play, when something told me I was doing wrong, and it sounded in my ears until I was compelled to give it up. It lost all its sweetness to me. My other evil habits left me in the same marvelous way. I heard an Old Baptist preach, and he told me all the things that ever I did. My faith began to grow, and I was relieved in a measure of my trouble. After that I went to the church and told them some of my feelings, and what I hoped the Lord had done for my soul; but O how unworthy I saw myself. After I was baptized I thought I never would see any more trouble. I was happy for two weeks, when suddenly a voice told me that I would have to preach. But I thought I could not, for I was very ignorant and unlearned, and of a stammering tongue. I cannot tell all my ups and downs, but you who have traveled this way know it far better than pen can express it.

Yours in christian fellowship,
HARRISON BUTLER.

MISSOURI VALLEY, Iowa, Nov. 16, 1893.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—I am sorry I have not been more punctual in renewing my subscription, for I do love the good news the SIGNS OF THE TIMES brings me each week. I have not done my duty toward you as I should; but I hope you will forgive me, and I will endeavor to do better by you in future. I know it is my duty we owe to God, to ourselves, and to you as dear brethren, for your faithfulness in sending your paper, when many times you get nothing for it. If we will but lay away a few pennies each month we can pay our subscriptions; but I have been careless, and have not done this. I will send you five dollars for the renewal of my subscription, and I do hope the good Lord will put it into the hearts of his people to do as I have done in renewing their subscriptions, and not neglect the matter as I have in the past. My dear brethren, I send you my best wishes for your success, and hope you may pray for me, a poor sinner saved by grace alone, if saved at all.

WM. T. BRONSON.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

WHILE we do not wish to distress any of our subscribers who are in arrears with subscription, yet we are compelled to again appeal to all who can make a remittance on amounts due to please assist us through our present financial cramp by sending on such amounts as they can conveniently spare. Several weeks ago we sent out nearly a thousand notices to delinquents, the aggregate of whose accounts amounts to about three thousand dollars, and thus far we have received only about two hundred dollars upon these accounts. Brethren and friends, please do not forget us.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BRETHREN:—I send you the obituary of my daughter, Mrs. J. K. Boyd, who departed this life August 31st, 1894, aged 39 years, 10 months and 11 days.

The subject of this notice was born in Bremer Co., Iowa, Oct. 20th, 1855, and was the second child of Wm. B. and Mercy M. Martin. In the year 1865 she crossed the plains with her parents. She obtained a hope in Christ in her sixteenth year, and was baptized in the fellowship of the Siloam Old School Baptist Church by Elder John Stipp. She became acquainted with James K. Boyd, became his wife, and moved with him into the bounds of the New Hope Church, where she retained her membership until death. She died in the triumphs of a living faith and hope in Jesus Christ, being conscious until the last. Six children survive her, four boys and two girls, with a loving husband, to mourn their loss; and we all feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

Your brother in hope,

WM. B. MARTIN.

DILLEY, Oregon, Sept. 10, 1894.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Broad Creek Church, Sussex Co., Del., on Wednesday, Oct. 24th, 1894, and continue three days. Ministering and other brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Those coming from the north will take the train leaving Broad St., Philadelphia, at 10:20 a. m., on the Delaware R. R., and those from the south will take the train leaving Salisbury at 2:02 p. m. (Old Point Express), and ticket for Laurel, Del., on Tuesday before the meeting. If it suits any to come on the Mail Train, leaving Philadelphia at 7:25 a. m., they will be met and cared for.

A. B. FRANCIS, Pastor.

THE Juniata Primitive Baptist Association will be held with the Sidling Hill Church, in Fulton Co., Pa., to commence at ten o'clock on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, and continue Thursday and Friday.

We extend a cordial invitation to all of our faith and order to meet with us. All persons coming by railroad east or west will have to come on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Hancock on Tuesday, where they will be met on the Hancock side of the bridge and conveyed to the place of meeting. Try to be there as early in the day as possible, as the distance is about twenty miles.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Lenexa, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Corresponding meeting of Virginia will be held, the Lord willing, with the Bethlehem Church, near Manassas, Prince William Co., Va., commencing on Wednesday, Oct. 17th, and continuing three days.

Friends coming from the north or east will come through Washington or Alexandria, taking trains from either place on the Southern Rail Road for Manassas, Va., which is about one hour's ride from either point.

Friends coming from the south will come direct to Manassas on the same Rail Road.

There is a morning train from Washington and Alexandria, due at Manassas between nine and ten o'clock a. m.

The place of meeting is one mile south of the station. Friends will be met and cared for. All who love the truth for the truth's sake, and the Lord's people for his sake, will be heartily welcome.

Affectionately yours,

J. N. BADGER.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

PLEASE publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that a yearly meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Columbia Old School Baptist Church, Jackson County, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north will be met at Napoleon, and those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Church Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the London Tract Church, Chester Co., Pa., commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Saturday, Oct. 20th, 1894, and continue three days.

Brethren and friends, especially ministers, are cordially invited. Those coming by rail will take the train leaving Baltimore, on the B. & O. R. R., at 8:45, and Philadelphia (Reading Terminal) at 11:26, on Saturday morning. Take tickets for Newark, Del., and there transfer to Newark Centre, on the Pomeroy Branch of the P. R. R., at 1:25 p. m. Ticket to Yeatman, where trains will be met in time for the meeting.

A. B. FRANCIS.

THE yearly meeting of the Old School Baptist Church of Olive & Hurley, of the Roxbury Association, will be held on the first Wednesday and Thursday in October (3d and 4th), 1894. We hope to see many of our brethren and friends, as we like to have them with us. Those coming from the east will be met at Olive Branch, and those from the west at Shokan.

A. BOGART, Clerk.

WE, the Old School or Primitive Baptist Church at Indiantown, Md., cordially invite each and every one of the same faith and order to visit us at our annual meeting on Wednesday and Thursday after the first Sunday in October (10th and 11th), 1894.

Those coming from the north by public conveyance will leave their homes so as to connect with the B. & E. S. R. R. at Salisbury, Md., on Tuesday, about twelve o'clock, for Pittsville, where they will be met and taken to places of entertainment.

L. A. HALL.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

A two days meeting is appointed to be held (if the Lord will) with the Andes Old School Baptist Church, at Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894, meeting to begin at ten o'clock a. m. on Saturday. We cordially invite all lovers of the truth who can to meet with us.

J. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

It is appointed by the church at Otego, N. Y., to hold a two days meeting on October 17th and 18th, 1894, Wednesday and Thursday after the second Sunday in October. Our meeting place is in Otego village, only a short walk from the depot of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company's Rail Road. All lovers of gospel truth are cordially invited to attend with us.

B. BUNDY.

THE "SIGNS OF THE TIMES," (ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GET THE BEST!
THE STAR
COIL SPRING SHAFT SUPPORT AND ANTI-RATTLE.
Fast selling; always gives satisfaction. No weight on horse. Worth twice the cost for convenience in hitching up. Agents wanted. Send stamp for circular. Price, $1.00. State rights for sale.
THE DECATUR SHAFT SUPPORT CO.
Decatur, Ill.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00
Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1894.

NO. 40.

D. L. Blackwell June 94

CORRESPONDENCE.

THOUGHTS ON PSALM CXLI.

NUMBER FIVE.

"LET the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head: for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities."

This is the language of David, but only as he was moved by the Spirit of Christ. It does not express the feeling of a natural man. Neither David, nor any one of Adam's fallen race, could ever have felt what is here expressed if Jesus had not come in the flesh, taken their sins upon him, humbled himself as a servant under the law, received its just smittings and borne its reproach for them, and "become obedient even unto death." The Spirit of the crucified and risen Son of God alone can cause any one to feel sin to be a burden and pain, experience godly sorrow for it, and be truly submissive under the chastisements which it justly merits.

We naturally hesitate to speak, or think, of language which confesses sin, and acknowledges the justice of stripes received for transgressions, as being the language of the holy Son of God. At first glance the very thought seems like profaning his holy and blessed name. But a reference to the fortieth and sixty-ninth psalms, as well as many others, will clearly show that it is so, for such psalms are referred to in the New Testament as speaking of him. And indeed this is the very marrow and fatness of the word. Jesus bore all the burden and shame of his people's sins, and received all that was done for their transgressions; and in his cries and supplications while suffering under the curse of the law for them, the poor sinner finds the feelings of his own heart told better than he could himself express them.

When I refer to this as the language of the Spirit of Christ, speaking by David, and telling his own feelings in his humility under the law, it is that we may more clearly recognize the same Spirit as moving his people when the same language expresses their feelings now; and that we may distinguish in ourselves and in others, between the feigned humility of the carnal mind, which would cause one to use such language who never felt its power, and the true humility which is produced by the working of the Spirit of Christ in the heart. David and the prophets truly felt what the Spirit of Christ moved them to speak, although that Spirit which was in them was at the same time testifying "beforehand of the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow."—1 Peter i. 11. It is the testimony of the same Spirit in his people now which causes them to have the same humble feelings, the same "fellowship of his sufferings," and the hope of the same "joy that was set before him," and so makes the same language suit them.

He who inspired this language was one who could speak of the future experiences of his people with the assurance that only the Spirit of the dear Savior can have, and say, "For yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities;" and looking forward with the certainty of omniscience to the time in the experience of each of his children when all human judgment and help shall fail, being "overthrown in the strong places," could declare that his words should be heard by them, and could say of them what is true of no other words but those of our glorious Redeemer, that "they are sweet." Sweet, as the honey Samson took from the carcass of the lion which he had slain. Sweeter than honey and the honey-comb, because they tell that the enmity of the law is slain, and eternal redemption obtained for us. Sweet, because they are full of grace, and truth, and mercy, and love, and power; and because they raise up the sinner from his death under the law, and wash him clean from his sins, and set his feet upon a rock, "and established his goings, and put a new song in his mouth, even praise unto our God."

God only is righteous, and is the only source and fountain of righteousness among men. Of all the sons of men none are righteous except those unto whom the Lord gives his own righteousness, imputing it to them without works. In order to give them this righteousness the dear Savior must be smitten by the holy law of God, and so "fulfill all righteousness" for them, as it was written: "Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, against the man that is my fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts. Smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered, and I will turn my hand upon the little ones." He bowed himself to the stroke. "Let the righteous smite me." It is in the singular. Only one is righteous, "And let HIM reprove me." He looks to God alone. "He was wounded for our transgressions."

"It shall be a kindness." Such kindness the world has never known. It was the kindness and love of God toward man that appeared in the smiting of his dear and well beloved Son. That kindness and love was in the heart of the dear Savior as he received the stroke which was for their deliverance, and "For the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross, despising the shame." Had the stroke fallen upon the guilty sinner he would have sunk down under it to everlasting woe. But it was Jesus who received the rod and reproof which give wisdom, and the reproofs of instruction which are the way of life.—Prov. vi. 23; xxix. 15. And this was that kindness of God which brings peace to the poor, mourning sinner, and that excellent oil which makes his face to shine as "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shines in his heart to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This is the excellent oil which was poured upon his head, and which comes to each of the members of his body as "the oil of joy for mourning." It did not break his head, but the very stroke of death saved him from death, and saved all his people. It gave him that knowledge by which he justified many, and that tongue of the learned by which he should speak a word in season to him that is weary. Through it comes to every child of God that holy anointing by which they know all things, and which abides in them as they abide in him.—1 John ii. 20, 27.

"Let the righteous smite me." By this same meek and lowly Spirit of Christ are his people through all time made willing to receive the stroke of chastening, and the just and wise reproofs of the righteous, which their sins require. "I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause and execute judgment for me: he will bring me forth to the light, and mine eyes shall behold his righteousness."—Micah vii. 9.

This is no indiscriminate inviting of reproof at the hands of brethren and sisters because we esteem them better than ourselves. It is no weak abasing of one's self before whomsoever he may meet; it is no cringing, cowering feeling caused by conscious baseness of motive, which would, in times of slavish fear and apprehension, seek chastisement at the hands of those esteemed holy, as priests, as a means of possible absolution. The principle which moves one to use this language, making request to be smitten and reproved by the righteous, is a most exalted and holy principle. It regards the honor of God's name, and the sacred purity and holiness of the church which he has established for his own glory. The request is also very discriminating as to the character of the one who shall smite and reprove—"the righteous." God only can "visit the transgressions of his children with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes." Only the dear Savior can "reprove with equity for the meek of the earth." Only his Spirit can make his people conscious of their need of reproof, and willing to receive it; and only by his Spirit can any one be prepared and made willing to administer the word of reproof.

Whatever is done in the church that God will approve must be done by the direction of his Spirit. By this power his servants are made to "preach the word, reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine." By the Spirit the members are all set in the body as it pleases him; and by the same Spirit every needed gift, and word, and power, is distributed to each one severally as he will. In nothing is the absolute power of the Spirit to direct in all the order and work of the church more manifest than in this matter of discipline. One may be spoken to, and labored with on account of some fault, and yet have no recognition of the fault, and no sorrow or repentance on account of it, even if the fact is acknowledged. Those whose lot it is to attend to this matter can only in meekness instruct such an one, "if God preadventure will give him repentance, to the acknowledging of the truth." God must give that or he cannot have it. One may, through a high regard for his brethren, or because of an unwillingness to lose his place in the church, or from some other fleshly motive, submit to reproof when it is evident he does not feel at all humbled and tender under it, and does not feel his need of it. Only the wisdom of our dear Savior can show the church what to do in such a case. It is clear that faithfulness and honesty shall always be used toward every one, while there should be all long-suffering and patience.

When one is made to feel most clearly and deeply his need of reproof, it is not every one who is qualified to administer it. There must be a special preparation of the Spirit for this solemn and delicate work. The one who has the clearest view of the fault, and the best understanding of the scriptural teaching concerning it, may not be at all qualified at the time to attend to the matter of discipline. He may come with such a feeling of indignation, and in such a haughty manner to the work, that the erring brother feels no benefit, although he may be quiet under the reproof, and may feel no resentment because his sense of his unworthiness, and of the magnitude of his transgressions, is so great that pride and anger are excluded. He does not feel that he has received the chastisement his soul has desired. He may not know what the trouble is, and may submit meekly; but he has not experienced the effect of heavenly kindness in the smiting. He has felt no oil in the reproof, no melting of soul under it, no tenderness of heart, such as he longs to feel, no comfort under the stroke, as of a child looking up into the father's face while being chastised, and seeing there the tender expression of love, and the tears of sorrow for the pain he must inflict upon the child he loves.

Whatever knowledge, and wisdom, and zeal, and faith, one may have, and eloquence of speech, if we have not love to guide and control every word and act, and to shine out through all, he is nothing in this or in any other gospel work.

Not only one brother, but a whole church may be lacking in the true spirit which qualifies them to administer the stroke of correction at the time when the erring brother is made contrite, and humbly desires it. There have been instances where a whole church, or the acting part, were in a carnal state, moved by some carnal impulse, so that they could not judge righteously, nor reprove with equity. There are times when the Lord's people are so carnal that they can only judge after the sight of the eyes, and reprove after the hearing of the ears. Happy is it for them at such a time if they can recognize their condition, and wait until the dear Savior is again manifest among them, upon whom rests the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord.

When a church is in gospel order, and the dear Savior is very manifestly present with them, then how earnestly they will look to him for counsel in the important matter of discipline, that he will appoint unto each his lot, and give unto all his own meek and lowly spirit, and work in them to do his will. Then the church, as a body, is righteous, and each of her members is righteous, and their walk and work are righteous, because Christ, who is their righteousness, is dwelling in them, as he promised, and walking in them, and "working in them both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

"It shall be a kindness." A kindness indeed are the smittings of the dear Lord, beyond all the kindness of the dearest earthly friend. "It shall be an excellent oil." His reproofs are truly so; they are the source of true and lasting joy and comfort. How sweet it is to feel this humble and contrite state of mind before the Lord, and before our brethren, and to have this spirit of submission to them. How sweet to our souls at such a time are the tender reproofs that come to us from our loving Father. How precious are the strokes of his chastening hand. When we are favored with the meek and lowly Spirit of Christ we receive each stroke as a token of his Fatherly care and love, and as an evidence that he receives us. We do not struggle and resist, do not feel injured by the stroke; it does not break our head, but carries healing power in itself for the wound and hurt it makes, and shows to us the kindness and never-failing love and faithfulness of our God.

The one by whose hand the Lord administers the chastening may not have us in his mind as he speaks, may not even have any knowledge of us at all. I have received the smittings and reproofs of the Lord while listening to the preaching of the word by his servants, when I was sure he himself had no thought of me while speaking, and had no thought of conveying a reproof to any one. Yet I had no doubt that the Lord had spoken to me distinctly through him. And how humble and thankful it made me feel that the Lord should remember me with such love as to chasten me, and thus deal with me as with sons.

Those who regard themselves as appointed and qualified to smite, reprove and correct their brethren, are very apt to be greatly mistaken altogether. Those whom God appoints to this most important work are so clothed by him with humility and meekness, that they would conclude that any other would be appointed rather than themselves to reprove the erring. They can only speak in judgment and rebuke when compelled by the Spirit to do so; and it is often the case that the mind and speech of those whom God appoints to the work are so contrasted by his Spirit, that the most effective chastenings received through them were not at all intended as such by them. They spake as they were moved to speak, and the Lord guided and sent the words home, and wrought his will by them in the broken and contrite heart.

When this work is done in the church of God by the direction of his Spirit, it is indeed a time of brotherly love, and tender regard for each other, and melting of heart and humbleness of mind. There is no anger or reproach or haughtiness in the word of reproof, but tender forbearance and love; and there is no feeling of wounded pride, and chafing of spirit, and resentful anger, which naturally we could not help feeling, under the necessary and deserved smittings and reproofs of the gospel church, but a subdued and softened feeling, a kissing of the rod, a tender thankfulness to God for the visits of his chastening hand, proving to us through the afflicting stroke that we are sons, and a closer drawing of our hearts to the brethren who have been given a spirit to deal faithfully with us, though the work was a painful one for them. It is indeed a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

But when such work is entered upon without the dear Savior's presence, and urged by fleshly passions, what havoc is often done in the church, what breaking down of the carved work with axes and hammers, what casting of fire into the Lord's sanctuary, and what defiling of the dwelling-place of his name, by casting it down to the ground, bringing it down to the grade of our base carnal minds.—Psa. lxxiv. The propensities of our vile natures are enemies to the Lord and his ways and people, and whenever they take the lead, destruction and desolation and sorrow are the result. Oh! how careful we should be of our movements in his house. How it becomes us to wait for the Lord, to wait patiently for him, and never to go forward, however urgent the occasion may appear to us, until he appears. We should remain still until we are sure of his presence. Whenever his ancient people presumed to go forward without his express bidding they fared badly. They were chased and overcome by their enemies, and brought into great distress; but when they went by his direction prosperity attended them. It is so in his church to-day. Therefore our eyes must be unto him. "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord."

SILAS. H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Sept. 21, 1894.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 18, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Ever since the departure of Elder W. J. Purington from the midst of the many brethren who loved him so well I have felt like penning down some reflections for the readers of the SIGNS, connected with what I had learned concerning his last hours upon earth. I do not think that my feelings concerning this are of the flesh, or that they grow out of my close associations with him almost from my infancy, though perhaps this may to some extent prompt me in this direction; neither would I be guilty of simply seeking to praise the man. This, I realize full well, could be of no satisfaction to those who are spiritual, and would be wholly contrary to the wish of Elder Purington himself. He spent most of the years of his life in preaching that doctrine which abases the creature and exalts the Creator, and this was the whole substance of his heart's desire to the end. Yet it is fitting to seek to magnify the grace of God through his servants, and through their memory after they are gone. When a servant of God has been called away, and we find that thousands of the children of God cherish his memory as a precious treasure, there must be a reason for it; and that reason is always found in the fact that in all things that servant has sought to magnify the name of Christ, and not his own. The whole burden and spirit of Elder Purington's ministry was expressed in the words of John the Baptist concerning Jesus, "He must increase, but I must decrease;" and in those other words of Paul, "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." The blessed Lord had written this in his very experience so deeply that he could not preach without preaching Christ. All who ever heard him know that his views of God were very exalted, and that his presentation of the character of God was at times awfully sublime. In that respect there was a wonderful similarity between his ministry and that of the late Elder Gilbert Beebe. Both at times have preached upon the theme of the character and attributes of Deity so that lovers of truth were spell-bound with awe, and even the careless would feel that in their solemn earnestness there was no room left for levity or caviling. This gift they had from God, and it was for the special edification of the church. My father heard Elder Purington preach his first sermon, and often when a youth I have heard him speak of it. The text was, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." In this, his first sermon, from the pulpit he presented with the ability of a man, rather than that of a beginner, the glorious doctrine of a finished salvation. The atonement was all his life a precious theme to him. He regarded it, as it indeed is, the very foundation of a sinner's hope, and as the only way in which God could be just and justify the ungodly. His firm faith in this method of salvation made him firm and unyielding in its defense, and often he would seem to those who did not know him very stern in the pulpit; but all of us who knew him best knew that his heart was as tender and his disposition as simple and confiding as a child. I have heard him say often, when he would come down out of the pulpit and meet his brethren, "Did you think I was angry?" or, "Did I seem angry to-day?" This he would say, alluding to the fact that some thought him stern in his preaching; but his earnestness grew out of the fact that he believed what he said, and that, more perhaps than is given to many,

he felt that he stood in the presence of God.

There never was anything uncertain in his views of the doctrine of salvation, nor concerning the character of Jehovah. "Salvation is of the Lord" summed up his faith and hope concerning this doctrine; and Jehovah to him was that Being who is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent, who is unchangeable, infinite and holy, who is the Creator of all worlds and beings, and who upholds them by the word of his power. He believed with all his heart that this God has both foreknown and foreordained all things that come to pass, and that always in time and in eternity he works, fulfilling all his eternal purpose in all things. As far back as I can remember, at my father's house I have heard him in solemn tones, with impressive words, declare these things. In these great and solemn truths I knew then that he found his joy and hope. Concerning these truths he never changed. So far as my acquaintance has extended, I know of no minister who more earnestly insisted upon a becoming manner of life in those who profess to be followers of the Lamb. He held his own conduct under stricter guard even than he required of others. I have often thought that he heeded more than most of us the apostle's admonition to Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine;" and the conclusion of this Scripture was plainly fulfilled in him and those among whom he labored, "For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."

I have heard him say many times that while he was glad when his brethren walked in the joy and peace of the felt presence of God, he felt nearer to those of a sorrowful spirit, because it had also been his lot to walk much in conflict and gloom. One thing is certain, that though he was in his ministry emphatically a son of thunder, he was also a son of consolation to many. In this respect also he and Elder Gilbert Beebe were much alike. God gave to them both the courage of a lion and the gentleness of a child.

It would be a labor of love upon my part to call up many reminiscences of all these past years of my acquaintance with Elder Purington, but I will not indulge this feeling much longer. It would be a labor of love, because from a child Elder Purington has been in my heart as no other minister of Jesus ever has been. I mean that he gave me words of comfort and words of counsel and advice which have influenced my whole life and ministry, and for which to-day I am glad.

But I wanted to speak a little of his last days among us who yet remain. The time came to him, as it comes to all sooner or later, when he must face the king of terrors. He who had been called upon to minister comfort to thousands as they wept for their dead must also in his turn face the realities of which he had so often spoken; and he had strength to endure the pain attending dissolving nature, and strength to depart. He showed no fear, and on the other hand he realized the full solemnity of the trying hour. I saw him twice after his work was near its end. This he knew, but I could not perceive any change in his manner nor in his testimony, except such groans as suffering extorted from his lips. He realized that the end was near, and his speech was earnest and solemn; but so had it always been whenever he spoke of the things of the eternal world. He seemed to me like a man who was now meeting what he had expected and looked for all his life. Death did not come as a surprise; and if his presence presented any terrors he was enabled to remember that Jesus had conquered death also. It seemed to me that he felt that the toil was over, and that soon the suffering would be, and then the everlasting life in which he had believed should be his. He seemed to me to be as one who follows calmly and earnestly the appointed path, sure that his God and Father had appointed it, and would be with him to the end. It is hard for me to find words to express just how I was impressed by the manner more than the words of Elder Purington in his last illness. I could wish that some one would write of this who can command better words than I am able to.

On Saturday after the Delaware River Association I am told that he preached his last sermon to the church at Hopewell. Brother Curry was expected, but missed a train. The brethren and sisters were sorry not to have brother Curry, but they are glad to have heard their beloved pastor once more. His subject was the twelfth chapter of Romans. He read the hymn beginning, "Begone, ye gilded vanities," No. 689, Beebe's Collection, and also the hymn beginning, "God of my childhood and my youth," No. 1210, Beebe's Collection. It would seem that he was guided, especially in this last selection, to choose his own farewell hymn. On Sunday he was out to the meeting, and heard two visiting ministers preach. Several young ministers visited Hopewell during the last weeks of his life, and with emotion he expressed his gladness that the Lord was raising up the young to declare the truth, now that others were becoming aged and were passing away. On this, the last Sunday that he was able to be at the meeting of his church, he spoke briefly at the close of each sermon, and, I was told, with his usual solemn earnestness. From that time he went down rapidly until the summons came.

I feel sure that many will be glad to hear of some of the last words that fell from his lips in the intervals of his suffering. One day, just before the Delaware River Association, he said that he hoped there would be plenty of ministers there, and that he liked to see the young ministers coming on, as we who are old must soon go hence. He said that he felt that his time was short. After the association, when Elders Curry and Carnell and brother Brink were there, he seemed much elated, and said, "I am so glad to see the young ministers, and hear them proclaim the glad tidings." He looked forward to Elder Lively's coming, but could not go out, and said, "I will have to submit to the inevitable, and there is something fastening upon me that I will never get rid of." One night, just before he finally took his bed, he was restless, and with his sister-in-law walked out into the yard. He gazed much up into the sky, and said, "I will never be freed from pain until I get into that great beyond." One day, to some of the church members who called, he said, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." One morning his sister-in-law said to him, "You have had a hard night." "Yes," he said, "but not a pain too many, nor one too severe." He often said, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." He said to another friend, "I know that I am in the hand of God. He performeth the thing that is appointed for me, and many such things are with him." He said to one of his warmest friends that he never before realized the meaning of the poet in the words, "O land of rest! for thee I sigh!" One night, during terrible suffering, when a dear friend from Philadelphia was with him, he continually repeated the words of the hymn, "Begone, ye gilded vanities." He so often said to his wife, "Mary, do not weep; you will soon follow me." The morning he died he repeated thrice, slowly and earnestly, "There is a balm in Gilead; there is a balm in Gilead; there is a balm in Gilead." The last he almost whispered. The loving friend who watched with him said that during the night he had repeated those words so often. Other things he said equally consoling to his friends and brethren, but perhaps these are sufficient. We do not need these testimonies of his dying lips to prove to us the faith that was in him—his whole life and ministry was a living proof of that; but these expressions are strengthening to our faltering faith, because they show the power of grace to sustain and console in sickness and death, as well as in life and health. It seems to me, when I read Paul's last written words of faith and hope, when he said, "I am now ready to be offered," &c., that they are wonderfully strengthening to my heart, which is so ready to shrink as I think of death; and so when the dying saint to-day, in the very hour of weakness, can testify to that mercy which is sufficient for the most trying hour, it serves to encourage our fearful hearts and strengthen our faltering souls, so that we can press on without fear. Our brother had grace to live by; he also had grace to die by. So we also need not fear but that for us also it will be true that as our day our strength shall be.

I have not written this in praise of brother Purington. His praise was indeed in all the churches; and they but obeyed the apostolic injunction when they esteemed him very highly for his works' sake. But the praise for all that Elder Purington was, as a child of God and a minister of Christ, belongs to God. By the grace of God he was what he was. By the grace of God he is what he now is at the right hand of God. While we sorrow for that we shall see his face no more, let us rejoice that we did once have him among us; and let us rejoice again that he now beholds the face of his Lord without a veil between. One thing to sorrow for, but two things to rejoice over.

In conclusion I will but add that the dear bereaved wife, the companion of forty-six years, has the comfort of knowing that hundreds of hearts go out to her in sympathy. This is a comfort so far as it goes, but it cannot heal the wound. Jesus only can work this work of healing, and he will heal the wounded heart.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ,

F. A. CHICK.

WOLF CREEK, W. Va., May 27, 1892.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—As my mind has been moved in the direction of writing something for the dear SIGNS OF THE TIMES, I take my pen to make the effort, hoping I may feel relieved in mind by putting some of my thoughts on paper. I wish first to say to you and the dear readers of the SIGNS that I send you all a loving greeting, for you are near my heart. While I know myself to be a poor, weak and very unworthy brother, if one at all, yet I do want to come to the household, and talk to you all a little while, if you can bear with my weaknesses and imperfections. I am inclined to call you my Father's children; for if I know and have experienced anything in the way of life, it is all by divine grace, without my aid; and when I read the testimony of those who are partakers of the heavenly love and holy calling, it stirs me up; and I want to tell all such to be of good cheer, and also to tell them that I believe their God is my God. Their language says so, and their general conversation leads me to hope that, little though I am, I belong to that family, the dearest of people on this terrestrial globe. Very precious to me are the Primitive Baptists, and I cannot express the feeling of gratitude to my God for giving me, as I humbly trust, a like precious hope with them, and a home among them. It is the highest honor to which any one can attain, to be a member of the body of Christ. It is not like unto worldly honor, which has a

(Continued on page 318.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 3, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF
G. BEEBE'S SON.

HEBREWS VI. 1-8.

BROTHER BEEBE:—At some convenient season I should like to have your views on the first eight verses of the sixth chapter of Hebrews. I make this request from a sincere desire to receive instruction.

AHIRA SANFORD.

BUFFALO GROVE, Ill., June 6, 1847.

[In the original the text was not quoted; but for the more convenient reading of the article we give the text in full.—Ed.]

"THEREFORE, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And this will we do, if God permit. For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame. For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God: but that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned."

REPLY.

From the number of verses proposed for our consideration, and on which we are desired to give our views, we judge that our brother expects only some general comments. The entire system of salvation by Christ, contrasted with all the imagery of the typical dispensation, is embraced in the text proposed. The doctrine of Christ, embracing repentance from dead works, faith toward God, baptisms, laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment, christian experience, and the impossibility of the saints losing their interest in the atonement of Christ, together with the profession of the saints in their experimental knowledge of the things of the kingdom of the Redeemer, is but a part of what these eight verses contain. Each point embraced is of sufficient magnitude and importance to constitute a theme for an inspired apostle to preach, or a redeemed sinner to contemplate. This chapter is introduced with an evident allusion to the preceding. "Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ." Three questions must be settled before we can proceed farther with the text, namely:

1st. What are the principles of the doctrine of Christ intended?

2nd. How are they to be left?

3d. Wherefore are they to be left?

On each point we must necessarily be very brief.

First. By the principles we are not to understand the doctrine of Christ itself; for we are commanded to stand fast in it, to contend earnestly for it, and to reject the apostle himself, or even an angel from heaven, should either come to us and not bring it. Timothy is admonished to take heed to the doctrine, and to continue in it; and there can be no license in the text before us for departing from the doctrine of Christ, as none depart but such as give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. By the principles, we are to understand the elements or first principles, as the alphabet contains the elements or first principles of the English language; and to go on to perfection in the knowledge of our language, requires that the learner shall not always continue in his A. B. C. lessons; but when he has learned the principles, he is to leave the study of the alphabet, and go on to a perfect knowledge of their application. In the preceding chapters the subjects of address were chided for their long tarrying at the alphabet; "for when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that some one teach you which be the first principles," &c. The letters of the spiritual alphabet are formed, like those of our language, by the use of types, hence the Old Testament is often referred to as the letter, or as containing the types of good things which were to come. On such types the inspired writer of this epistle had been dwelling. He had spoken of Adam as a type, of Jewish festivals and sabbatic seasons, and of the abolished priesthood of Aaron and his sons; all these were types, or letters, setting forth the elements of the doctrine which they prefigured. For the time the Hebrew brethren had been in the school of Christ, it might have been expected that they had learned that these types or letters were not the very things they were designed to spell, but they were the elements or first principles to be learned by the disciple or learner.

Second. How are these principles to be left? According to the similitude we have used, the same as the child is to leave the A. B. and C. in the progression of his studies, that he may go on to a more perfect proficiency in the knowledge of the things to be learned. As the infants fed on milk will leave the breast when they have attained a full age, and by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil, to eat strong meat.

Third. Wherefore should the principles be left? For the very reasons already assigned, because they can never become perfect scholars if they learn only the alphabet. An other reason assigned is contained in the fourth, fifth and sixth verses of our text, on which we shall say something more presently; but the apostle gives those stated in the latter part of the fifth chapter as sufficient; this we justly infer from the "Therefore," with which this chapter begins. The first verse of this chapter is a conclusion drawn from premises laid down. "Therefore," for the reasons already considered, "leaving the principles," &c., "let us go on," not tarry longer here, dwelling no longer on the types and shadows of good things to come, but let us go on to the good things to come; "not laying again the foundation;" but let us go and build on the foundation already laid. For if this foundation should fail, no other can be supplied. Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid. Having learned the principles, or rudiments, let us go on, for we cannot return again to infancy and require again to be fed on milk, if we have tasted the good word of life and the powers of the world to come. Therefore, if God permits, we will not tarry, but go on. "For it is impossible."—What is impossible? It is impossible for enlightened christians, who have experienced all that is implied in knowing the principles of the doctrine of Christ, tasting the heavenly gift, partaking of the Holy Ghost, and the powers of the gospel, or of the world to come, to fall away and be renewed again; for, "if they shall fall away," it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance. But why will it be impossible to renew them again, in such a supposed case? Because if the foundation on which their repentance, experience and hope rests should fail, in order to lay it again Christ must again be crucified; and that is not all, nor the greatest difficulty; for in such a case he must submit to the mortification, or open shame, of acknowledging that his sufferings, his blood and righteousness were not sufficient to secure the safety of the saints and the accomplishment of the purpose contemplated in the divine mind. It is impossible, for it would require a recreation of the universe, and a re-establishment of the legal dispensation, a revision of the counsel of God, another advent of Christ into the world, a re-assumption of flesh and blood, and subjection to the law; and finally, as the apostle sums up all in a word, a crucifying of the Son of God afresh, which must put him to an open shame; all of which is impossible, and therefore there can never be a necessity for laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, &c.

Some have supposed that the characters described in the fourth and fifth verses were only "almost christians;" but what additional evidence a child of God can have that he is a subject of grace, we have never heard stated. If to be translated out of darkness into marvelous light, to taste or partake of Christ as the heavenly gift, to be born of the Spirit (for there is no other way in which a soul can partake of the Holy Ghost), to taste the good word of God (by which Peter says we are born again, and which he calls an incorruptible seed, that lives and abides forever), and to taste of the powers of the world to come; if all these evidences are not sufficient to warrant a soul that he has passed from death unto life, what must they think who are not always sure that they have experienced all of these marks? Or what farther testimony is a christian warranted to ask the Lord for? If these are not enough to establish the point, are those who have experienced all these doing wrong when they cherish doubts of their adoption? There is in truth no such thing as an "almost christian." We are either dead or alive; we are either quickened, regenerated and born again, or we are dead in trespasses and sins; there is no intermediate state.

The doctrine of falling from grace, contended for by a portion of the Arminians, cannot be true; because they hold that a christian may fall away, or fall from grace, and then be renewed again to repentance; which thing the apostle in our text pronounces impossible. It is easy to prove by the most positive declarations of the Scriptures that those who have experienced the things stated in the fourth and fifth verses of our text have passed from death unto life, and that they shall never come into condemnation; that Christ has given them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of his hands.

The argument of our subject is applied to show the necessity of an onward progression from the legal rites of the old covenant to the spiritual things of the heavenly kingdom to which they pointed, and from the first rudiments of the doctrine of Christ to the perfect development of that doctrine; from the infantile state of using milk, and in which the son differeth nothing from the servant, to the maturity of christianity; and the argument demonstrates that the weaned child will not again become an infant to require milk; that the established christian is built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, and shall have no occasion to lay again the foundation. This subject is further illustrated by the doctrine of election and reprobation, asserted in the seventh and eight verses.

How beautiful are the figures in their application! "The earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it," describes the children of God, on whom his doctrine shall drop as the rain, and his speech shall distill as the dew, as the small rain upon a tender herb, and as showers upon the grass. The Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance.

"That little spot inclosed by grace, Out of this world's wide wilderness," drinks in the rain, that is, the doctrine and the speech of Christ, and is refreshed, invigorated and made fruitful, so that it brings forth herbs meet for him who cultivated it, even fruits which are unto holiness, and the end of which is everlasting life. Such earth receives blessing from the Lord; even as the church of God, thus clearly described, is blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, according as God has chosen her in Christ Jesus before the foundation of the world, that she should be holy and without blame before him in love. The blessing is not for receiving the rain, and bringing forth the herbs; for that construction of the text would pervert the figure. The natural earth only receives, drinks in the rain, and brings forth herbs, &c., while the Lord gives the increase; and all the fruits of righteousness developed in the garden of the Lord result from his special blessings, and are therefore an evidence that she has received blessings, and is blessed of the Lord. While, on the other hand, that which beareth thorns, &c., is rejected; not chosen or elected; is nigh unto cursing; as the production of thorns and thistles was the result of the curse which God pronounced on the earth for Adam's sake in the beginning. Here is a clear representation of the case of the Hebrews. Those among them who were enlightened, and were partakers of the heavenly gifts, and of the Holy Ghost, who had tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, had, according to the similitude, drank in the rain, or doctrine of Christ; and these fruits were the evidence of the same; while the scribes and Pharisees, together with all the carnal Jews among whom Christ and his apostles had preached and wrought miracles, were only hardened, drank not in his doctrine, had no thirst or relish for it, but continued to yield thorns and briers, as formerly, and thereby to show that they were nigh unto cursing, or to that day of retribution in which they should be destroyed root and branch, according to the words of the prophet of the Lord. They were rejected, and the day of the Lord, that should burn as an oven, and in which they that were proud &c., should be stubble, was at hand.

Much more might be written on the subject; and indeed much more may be written by abler writers for the edification of the saints on the subject which has been the theme of this article; but our time and space will not allow us to enlarge.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1847.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

(By E. F. RANDELL.)

The Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists, now in session with the Mount Hope Church, Harrison Co., Ind., August 31st and September 1st and 2d, 1894, to the churches composing her body sendeth christian salutation in the Lord.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—As it has been a custom with the Regular Baptists to address a Circular Letter to the churches composing an Association, we again seek the old paths and walk therein, hoping that the candle of the Lord may shine about Zion. We are thankful to the God of all grace that he has been with us the past year, and again permitted us to meet together, at the time and place appointed at our last year's session. In order to show our steadfastness in the faith of the children of God, we will present a few thoughts, contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Upon the great subject of religion we will address you, calling your attention to some of its principles; yet there is but one Lord, one faith, one doctrine, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. To the church of God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth, it is given to know the principles or wisdom of the gospel of Christ. Jesus said that his gospel should be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem; and to his children is given the wisdom to know when it is proclaimed by his called servants. Jesus said to his disciples, "Go ye, therefore, and preach," &c. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." He speaks, and it is done; he commands, and it stands fast. The gospel ministry can, through Christ who strengtheneth them, preach the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. They are first taught that they are sinners, and can sympathize with and comfort the poor, hungry children of God, saved by grace. And this gospel will be preached, without the support of man, unto the end of the world. The gospel of the Son of God is glad tidings to his people. It contains all the doctrine, love, grace, mercy, the redemption of all his chosen people, their salvation from sin, death, hell and the grave. Christ is preached by the gospel unto the people, both Jews and Gentiles. This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations. The question may be asked, Who believes the gospel? We answer, The preaching of the gospel is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us who are saved it is the power of God and the wisdom of God. The preaching of the gospel makes known the believers and the unbelievers. It divides the sheep from the goats. Those who hear through the Spirit's power, call upon Jesus to save them from their sins. To those who have ears and hear not, it is a stumbling-block. The doctrine of Jesus drops as the rain, and his speech distills as the dew. God's people know the truth, the doctrine, and rejoice in God with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Then, if we have the truth, proved to be such by the word of the Lord, let us run with patience the race set before us, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. "But without faith it is impossible to please God." Our faith beholds in Jesus an incorruptible and unfading inheritance. Our hope enters into that within the veil, and fastens upon Jesus as a sufficient Savior. This mystery among the Gentiles is Christ in you the hope of glory. All that the Adam man derives from being born again is from God in Christ. "Christ in you the hope of glory." "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The gospel of Christ thus preached is the only way of salvation, and our only hope. May the Lord direct our steps in the right way, and keep us in peace, is our prayer for his name's sake.

P. W. SAWIN, Mod.

E. F. RANDELL, Clerk.

The Elders and messengers of the Lexington Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church of Olive and Hurley, September 19th and 20th, 1894, to the several churches of which it is composed, sends greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We desire to stir up your pure mind by way of remembrance, by presenting that portion of the word of God recorded in the epistle of Paul the apostle to the churches of Galatia, fifth chapter and twenty-fifth verse: "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving."—Col. ii. 6, 7. "This only would I learn of you, received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye so foolish? Having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?"—Gal. iii. 2, 3. It is very evident that the spirit of the flesh or the works of the flesh had been manifested among them, contrary to the Spirit of Christ. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."—Gal. v. 19-24. Now, dear brethren, in these six verses we have enumerated the works of the flesh and the fruit of the Spirit. Let us give heed to the word of God. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. vi. 7, 8. "And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."—1 John ii. 3-6. "As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance; but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation."—1 Peter i. 14, 15. "And now I beseech thee, lady [church], not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another. And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it. For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist."—2 John 5-7. "These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, how that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit. But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. And of some have compassion, making a difference; and others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."—Jude 16-25.

JOHN CLARK, Mod.

JOHN A. MORSE, Clerk.

JAMES AVERY, Ass't Clerk.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Lexington Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Olive and Hurley Church, Ulster Co., N. Y., Sept. 19th and 20th, 1894, to the associations with which we correspond, sends greeting.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Through the continued mercies of our unchanging God we have the privilege of meeting and greeting one another once more in an associate capacity. We are happy to find peace and quietude in our borders, so that we can say, How good it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Five have been added to our membership by baptism, and one Elder ordained, during the past year. We feel to continue to extend the hand of fellowship to the brethren of our sister associations, and to all who love our Lord in sincerity and truth. We have been favored with visiting ministering brethren, Elder H. M. Curry, of Ohio, and Elder Wm. L. Beebe, of New York, who have spoken to us, as we trust, in the name of the Lord, and for which we would feel grateful. We wish to say to our brethren far and near, Come among us, and we will not harm you. And now we commend you to God and the word of his grace, desiring the Shepherd to be over us and to lead us gently to our journey's end.

JOHN CLARK, Mod.

JOHN A. MORSE, Clerk.

JAMES AVERY, Ass't Clerk.

The Mount Pleasant Association of Regular Baptists, now in session with the Mount Hope Church, Harrison Co., Ind., August 31st and September 1st and 2d, 1894, to the several associations and meetings with which we correspond sends greeting in the Lord.

GOD in his providence has again smiled upon us, and permitted us to meet and mingle in an associated capacity; a meeting that is indeed pleasant and harmonious throughout, all dwelling together in unity, all bowing at the feet of Jesus, ascribing praise alone to him.

For the coming of your messengers and messages of love we are grateful. We desire a continuance of your messages and christian correspondence, that our hands and hearts may be knit together, as it were, in a bundle of love. Your ministers sent to us preach Christ and him crucified in the Spirit's power.

Our next Association will be held with the Mount Pleasant Church, at Pleasureville, Henry Co., Ky., commencing on Friday before the first Saturday in September, 1895, when and where we hope to meet your messengers and hear from you.

P. W. SAWIN, Mod.

E. F. RANSDELL, Clerk.

(Continued from page 315.)

tendency to exalt and make us proud and God-forgetting. On the contrary it brings us low at the precious feet of Jesus, and we cry unto God to make us better. We hate ourselves; or in other words we hate the sins that make us mourn. Instead of this exaltation in Christ making us proud, and to feel above our brethren, it makes us conclude that the least of God's dear lambs are far better than we. The grace of our God makes us humble, and thankful to his most holy name for his great love and condescension in visiting us, calling us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Very ancient is this purpose and grace; but it is not too old for you, my dear brethren. It does not rest on the "possible" plan that we hear so much about at the present time. The Arminian world has not learned that their poor fabrics of man-made theories would have left us just where this blessed, rich and eternal grace found us, away down in the pit of total depravity, a great distance from God, and loving that distance well; naked and poor, low sunk and far gone. This knowledge must come to the man or woman by their being quickened or made alive. Then we need not tell them they ought to pray. O no! You might just as well address one literally dead, and tell him to walk, as to tell the poor sinner, who knows he is a sinner before God, to not pray. The first thing for a new born babe to do is to cry; and so with the child of God, when made to feel his helplessness before God, he will pray. That prayer comes from within and ascends to the ear of the God of mercy, and will be answered in tender love. If it is not answered at once, it will in time be answered; for I am made to believe that every prayer that is truly a prayer is indited in the heart by the Holy Spirit; for it is written, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." Then, dear ones, you see that our God purposed to save his people, and that by grace, before the world was; and we love to think of him as being so wise and so good as to made every necessary arrangement for our salvation. Christ is our great Head, our Prophet, our Priest and our King. He foreknew, and by his holy prophets foretold that which would come to pass concerning his people. He was our great High Priest to make an offering of himself for our sins, and to make intercession for us. He is our King to go before us in battle, to conquer death for us, to live for us, to reign for us and over us, to give us wholesome laws by which we are to be governed. He is our King to establish us in his kingdom of righteousness; to guide us in the way everlasting; to shield us from the curse of the law which demanded our life; to deliver us from death; to appear before the Father in our behalf; to satisfy every demand against us, paying the last item and canceling the whole debt. Surely then we have enough to encourage us to put on the whole armor and contest every inch of the ground against the enemy of truth, and not be afraid of the popular notions of the present time; for all the new and smooth eloquence is being brought to bear against the old-fashioned, Bible plan of salvation; so that it certainly does appear that the time is now at hand for every lover of Jesus and his truth to stand together in faith and practice, and follow that which makes for peace, and not be disputing one with another and trying to gain the mastery. My dearly beloved kindred in Christ, our Master has said, "He that exalteth himself shall be abased; but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Then let each esteem other better than himself; for if we are what we profess to be we are all brethren, and all our interests are one, and there should be no falling out by the way. But let us love one another, and so fulfill the law of Christ. If it please God to give unto one brother the discerning of spirits, to another the gift of healing, to another the gift of prophecy, to another the gift of teaching, it is all of God, and all for the edifying of the body of Christ; and no brother has a right to boast, but to thank God, and labor for the peace and comfort of Zion, honoring the great Head of the church, from whence all must draw their every supply. For my part if I can just be one of the little ones in this glorious spiritual building, that will be enough for me. One of the greatest hinderances to our peace is contentions about words to no profit, and a great deal of it arises from a jealous spirit among the preachers. This is plain talk, but nevertheless it is true, and it is sad to think about. It is sad to see those who are sent forth by a divine calling, to be examples to the flock, striving among themselves for the mastery, when they have the word before them, "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Instead of that, it looks like a great many want to be served, instead of ministering. They want to be looked up to. Many dear brethren have been led off from the true gospel path, and are following after that which brings strife and contentions, murmurings, divisions and confusions, which amounts to nothing less than a Babylon. Associations are dividing, and all on account of preachers who are leading in the movement. Let those who truly love the Lord Jesus Christ, and for his sake, and for the sake of the dear, little, feeble and tender saints, stand together, and bear with each other; for we all do wrong, and all need much forbearance with one another. Let the preachers just go forward, and as much as in them is preach Christ, and feed the flock of God, over which the Holy Ghost hath made them overseers, taking the oversight thereof, not for filthy lucre's sake, nor by constraint, but willingly, and of a ready mind, urging the church to keep every jot and tittle of the laws given her by her great Head. Let the church look to her Lord for all her spiritual food, and ask him to give her such servants as will edify her, and that they may have wisdom from on high, in order to glorify God and edify the church. Brethren, let us not look to man, but look to God, to send such laborers into his vineyard; for the harvest is great, and the laborers are few, and it is so much the more needful that they should be of one mind in working in the Lord's harvest. If he sends one to reap, and another to bind, some to gather the sheaves, and another to thresh out the precious grain, and another to prepare it for the garner, that is all being done by and through the Lord's own way. So let us labor, and so let us love to be found at our post, wherever that may be. Let us try, as much as in us is, to so live and act that we may abide in our Master's love, and serve one another for the sake of him who has redeemed us by his own precious blood. Soon we hope to be with him, where strife and turmoil will not be known, where no sinful, fleshly feeling can come to mar our peace.

Dear brethren, pardon me for my long scribble. I have felt like writing as my mind was led. If you think it worthy a place in our beloved paper, insert it therein; but if not, all will be right. I crave an interest in the prayers of all God's dear children.

Fraternally yours,

H. A. HARVEY.

MERRIFIELD, Va., Jan. 27, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—There is scarcely any Old Baptist preaching in this locality, and not many who have the least idea of even the letter of the word that is held by us. Elders Francis and White have preached here twice on special occasions, and the congregations speak highly of their manner of preaching, and of the men themselves. The people here are very sociable. If it could be so, I would like some of the brethren in the ministry to call here often; but it may be selfishness in me. As my own place of meeting is so far away I cannot get there very often, and it does seem that I never before did so long to hear the gospel preached. I have heard but two sermons since the Corresponding Meeting. My wife and I stay here, and but seldom meet any whom we can call our Father's children. I was glad you published that correspondence of brethren Jenkins and Brink. I was an eye witness to all that brother Brink wrote. As you are aware, I was once among the New School, but had to come home and declare that the new way of that people was not the way the Lord showed me in my first experience; yet the way of life and salvation in Jesus alone was not so clear to me at first, owing, as I have since thought, to the great relief I felt when my burden was taken away. I knew nothing, only as a little, glad-hearted child, having no other thought than that I wanted to let everybody know I was glad. While in this condition I was taken to that new school, and it took several years there, and nearly three years of sickness, for me to graduate, ere I could come home. Dear brethren, in view of all this, with Jesus in view, I think that Missionary preacher would have to bring something more substantial than an illustration of the cultivation of a potato field to take me from home. But if left to myself there is no telling where I would go, as I see so plainly in the lesson taught by our Lord when Peter denied him. I feel to tremble when I read or meditate on that lesson. If that deacon had ever been there with Peter, potatoes, field and all, could not have caused him to become a convert to another doctrine. That doctrine of "Potatoes and Missions" sounds very much like that which I heard when in Babylon.

Your brother,

ELI. T. KIDWELL.

EDNA, Kan., July 7, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—My heart pains me to think that I have had my lamp under a bushel so long. Sometimes I am made to cry aloud, "O Lord, be merciful to me, a poor sinner." My anxiety and trouble of heart no one can know, except those who have traveled through the dark wilderness alone, with no one to cheer them on the way. But O! when we come to the place where we say, "Lord, save, or I perish," there we see our blessed Redeemer with outstretched arms, ready to raise us from the mire, and to place our feet on a firm foundation. Then we can sing that beautiful song that the children of Israel sang at the Red Sea. Yes, I can well remember when I crossed over that sea. O how often my mind runs back to that time.

A few days ago, while I was on the streets of our little village, a young man came to me and asked me when we held our meetings on Snow Creek. My heart was faint to tell him that our meetings had gone down. I gave him a few copies of the dear old SIGNS OF THE TIMES, which he took home with him. He came back on the fourth day of July to my little shop, and I could see that he was troubled. I pointed him to that great Physician who was born in a manger in Bethlehem of Judea. The Lord from on high told Joseph and Mary that they should call his name Jesus, for he should save his people from their sins.

Yes, he had a people, and they were chosen in him before the foundation of the world. As for me, I am too poor and unworthy to have a place among them.

Yours most unworthily,

H. REDMAN.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

WHILE we do not wish to distress any of our subscribers who are in arrears with subscription, yet we are compelled to again appeal to all who can make a remittance on amounts due to please assist us through our present financial cramp by sending on such amounts as they can conveniently spare. Several weeks ago we sent out nearly a thousand notices to delinquents, the aggregate of whose accounts amounts to about three thousand dollars, and thus far we have received only about two hundred dollars upon these accounts. Brethren and friends, please do not forget us.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers; and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

MARRIAGES.

On Sept. 26th, 1894, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at the residence of the bride's parents, near Winterton, Sullivan Co., N. Y., Mr. Calvin I. Avery and Miss Anna M., daughter of Mr. Moses W. Jordan.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—On August 14th, 1890, of pneumonia, Samuel S. Fox, in the 33d year of his age.

Mr. Fox resided in Baltimore, and was the son of brother and sister Fox, of Port Deposit, Md.

Your brother,

D. M. THOMAS.

LYLES, Pa.

BROTHER Noah T. Terry died at his home in East Farmingville, Long Island, N. Y., on August 4th, 1894, in his 87th year.

His eyesight was so impaired that he could not read, and he felt life a burden. His mind seemed to be with the words, "I would not live always, no, welcome the tomb;

Since Jesus hath lain there I dread not its gloom.

There sweet be my rest till he bid me arise,

To hail him in triumph descending the skies."

JANE E. SMITH.

PATCHOGUE, N. Y., Sept. 22, 1894.

Jesse B. Green departed this life on the 13th of August, 1894. He was born on the 14th of February, 1814, thus being 80 years and 6 months old. About sixty of these years he was a member of the Old School Baptist Church. He was a man of strong and decided convictions, and ardent in attachment to his church, giving liberally to her interests.

Brother Green was patient and submissive during his long continued and sore afflictions, enjoying a good hope through grace of entering the rest that remaineth to the people of God.

Father Green was a good citizen and neighbor, an affectionate father and a humble, devoted christian. He leaves five children, a large connection and a host of friends to mourn their loss; but they mourn not as those who have no hope.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. Catharine C. Suddeth was born in Fauquier Co., Va., Feb. 14th, 1814, and died after a brief illness Jan. 16th, 1894, aged 79 years, 11 months and 2 days.

She was married to Edward Garrett March 30th, 1830. For more than half a century she was permitted the companionship of a loving and devoted husband, when death severed those ties, June 10th, 1883. To them were born ten children, of whom six survive her (two sons and four daughters); also twenty grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren. She united with the Primitive Baptist Church called Brookfield, in Noble Co., Ohio, about 1838, after which she moved her membership from that church to the Goshen Church, in Muskingum Co., Ohio, of which she lived a faithful and consistent member until her death, which occurred at her daughter's, Mrs. Alice Peters, in Licking Co., Ohio. By request the funeral was conducted by Elder L. T. Ruffner, using as a text the following, "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."—Isaiah lx. 1. After which her body was laid away to await the coming of the Lord.

L. T. RUFFNER.

HEBRON, Ohio.

It is with a sad and heavy heart that I record the death of my dear wife, Annie M. Lake, who departed this life at her residence near Laidig, Fulton Co., Pa., August 20th, 1894, aged 36 years, 9 months and 26 days, after a lingering illness and great suffering in the flesh for more than three months from a complication of diseases.

She had for about two months before her death been able to sit up part of the time, and walk a little with my help, or the use of a cane. She often spoke of dying, and her only desire to live was that she might stay with me to help raise her children. She did not seem much worse until about fifty hours before her death, when she awoke in the morning with a weakness in her speech and a despondency in her mind. About noon she was taken with spasms, which continued in succession for twenty-three hours, rendering her speechless and unconscious, in which condition she lay for twenty-four hours more, when she fell asleep, "from which none ever wake to weep." Her maiden name was Logne, being a daughter of the late Elder Samuel Logne, of Bedford Co. She was a firm believer in salvation by grace, had a warm feeling for all christian people, and was always ready to entertain all who might stop under our roof, and as ready to go with me to Baptist meeting as to any of her own. She was a kind, loving and affectionate companion, always willing to bear her share of the many cares and afflictions that we have had to pass through during our married life of a little more than fourteen years. She was the mother of seven children, of whom only four survive her, the youngest only living four days after her departure, aged three months and five days. Our loss is her eternal gain, for she has gone home to reap her reward. May the Lord comfort and care for us while here in this vale of tears.

Her remains were laid to rest in the Sidling Hill Baptist Church cemetery, by the side of our children gone before. Her funeral sermon was preached by Elder Ahimaz Mellott, to a large and attentive congregation, her three surviving brothers and only sister being present. Brethren, pray for me and my little ones, that we may be made more submissive to the Lord's will.

Your unworthy brother, I hope,

JONAS LAKE.

LAIDIG, Pa., Sept. 3, 1894.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Broad Creek Church, Sussex Co., Del., on Wednesday, Oct. 24th, 1894, and continue three days. Ministering and other brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Those coming from the north will take the train leaving Broad St., Philadelphia, at 10:20 a. m., on the Delaware R. R., and those from the south will take the train leaving Salisbury at 2:02 p. m. (Old Point Express), and ticket for Laurel, Del., on Tuesday before the meeting. If it suits any to come on the Mail Train, leaving Philadelphia at 7:25 a. m., they will be met and cared for.

A. B. FRANCIS, Pastor.

THE Juniata Primitive Baptist Association will be held with the Sidling Hill Church, in Fulton Co., Pa., to commence at ten o'clock on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, and continue Thursday and Friday.

We extend a cordial invitation to all of our faith and order to meet with us. All persons coming by railroad east or west will have to come on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to Hancock on Tuesday, where they will be met on the Hancock side of the bridge and conveyed to the place of meeting. Try to be there as early in the day as possible, as the distance is about twenty miles.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Lenexa, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Corresponding meeting of Virginia will be held, the Lord willing, with the Bethlehem Church, near Manassas, Prince William Co., Va., commencing on Wednesday, Oct. 17th, and continuing three days.

Friends coming from the north or east will come through Washington or Alexandria, taking trains from either place on the Southern Rail Road for Manassas, Va., which is about one hour's ride from either point.

Friends coming from the south will come direct to Manassas on the same Rail Road.

There is a morning train from Washington and Alexandria, due at Manassas between nine and ten o'clock a. m.

The place of meeting is one mile south of the station. Friends will be met and cared for. All who love the truth for the truth's sake, and the Lord's people for his sake, will be heartily welcome.

Affectionately yours,

J. N. BADGER.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

PLEASE publish in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES that a yearly meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the Columbia Old School Baptist Church, Jackson County, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth.

Those coming from the north will be met at Napoleon, and those from the south and west at Woodstock.

WM. L. BROWN, Church Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the London Tract Church, Chester Co., Pa., commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Saturday, Oct. 20th, 1894, and continue three days.

Brethren and friends, especially ministers, are cordially invited. Those coming by rail will take the train leaving Baltimore, on the B. & O. R. R., at 8:45, and Philadelphia (Reading Terminal) at 11:26, on Saturday morning. Take tickets for Newark, Del., and there transfer to Newark Centre, on the Pomeroy Branch of the P. R. R., at 1:25 p. m. Ticket to Yeatman, where trains will be met in time for the meeting.

A. B. FRANCIS.

WE, the Old School or Primitive Baptist Church at Indiantown, Md., cordially invite each and every one of the same faith and order to visit us at our annual meeting on Wednesday and Thursday after the first Sunday in October (10th and 11th), 1894.

Those coming from the north by public conveyance will leave their homes so as to connect with the B. & E. S. R. R. at Salisbury, Md., on Tuesday, about twelve o'clock, for Pittsville, where they will be met and taken to places of entertainment.

L. A. HALL.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

A two days meeting is appointed to be held (if the Lord will) with the Andes Old School Baptist Church, at Union Grove, Delaware Co., N. Y., on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, 1894, meeting to begin at ten o'clock a. m. on Saturday. We cordially invite all lovers of the truth who can to meet with us.

J. A. HUNTLEY, Clerk.

It is appointed by the church at Otego, N. Y., to hold a two days meeting on October 17th and 18th, 1894, Wednesday and Thursday after the second Sunday in October. Our meeting place is in Otego village, only a short walk from the depot of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company's Rail Road. All lovers of gospel truth are cordially invited to attend with us.

B. BUNDY.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....	$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen.....	4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge.....	1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge.....	2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt....	2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1894.

NO. 41.

D. L. Blackwell June 94

CORRESPONDENCE.

SPENCERVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 5, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—This looks so much like the old method of addressing the letters for the SIGNS; yet it is not altogether without its sorrow. I feel timid about asking so much space in the SIGNS, but will you please grant it for the sake of others, who join in this request for the inclosed letters to be published? I have marked them in the order in which I think they will best illustrate God's gracious care for his people. The first two are from sister Alice Wien, who stands as an accepted candidate for baptism. The last two were written by sister Bettie Peters, who was baptized, as was also her husband, brother George Peters, on the fourth Sunday in April, and illustrate the wilderness travel of the saints, and the heavenly places that await them by the way.

In love for the household of faith,
A. B. BRES.

MAY 15, 1894.

ELDER BRES AND FAMILY:—I thought I would send your SIGNS home, the reading of which I appreciated greatly. I find that the writings in the old numbers are just the same as in the last one. They all preach Jesus, if I am not deceived. Sometimes I am afraid I have deceived you good people. Elder Ford has been so good to come to see me, a poor, loathsome worm. I sometime think I ought not to read the Bible or the SIGNS, nor talk to God's chosen people, nor be in their company; for I am not fit nor worthy; yet they are the people and company I crave and long to be with. I thought when you told me about those who were going to be baptized at Sidney that by June I would be able to go to the church and offer myself (big offering) for baptism; but it does not look much like it now. The Lord knows what is best; let him do what seemeth him good, and all will be well.

"And if my soul were sent to hell,
His righteous law approves it well."

I would like to write more, but I do not feel able. I have not been feeling so well for the last three or four days. I will send you one of my SIGNS to read, as it contains better letters than I can write. This letter looks like myself, so little and good for nothing. Will you remember unworthy me when you pray?

ALICE WIEN.

SPENCERVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 22, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER

BRES:—If I am worthy to address you so. It seems too good to be so blest as to be

"Gathered into the fold,
With believers enrolled,
With believers to live and to die."

The SIGNS you sent me is full of truth. I think the letters are all good. If I could express myself as do the writers in the SIGNS, I would write some of my thoughts and feelings. I often have the sweetest of meditations in the daytime, and often at night on awaking the most precious of thoughts come to me. I am often telling the brethren, sisters and friends of the hope there is within me; but when they come to see me I am all shut up, and the foolishness of the world is all I can talk about. I think I have enjoyed myself the most since the association last September that I ever have in all my life before. It does not look like anyone could enjoy themselves in a sick bed, but,

"Prisons would palaces prove,
If Jesus would dwell with me there."

The blessed Lord has sent the gospel to me while lying here, and it has been a great feast to me. I feel as did Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." My prayer is, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." I ask not for riches and glory in this world. "Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." I often fear that I am deceiving the people of God, yet I do not want to. May the Lord direct my thoughts and ways, for in and through myself I can do nothing. O how I would like to go to the association next month; but I must be content with my lot.

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word;
At home or abroad, on the land, on the sea,
As thy days may demand shall thy strength ever be."

Remember me when it goes well with you. With love to all, I am your sister, I hope. I believe I get stronger every day. I hope I will be able to go forward in baptism before long.

ALICE WIEN.

ZANESFIELD, Ohio, April 1, 1894.

MR. BRES:—My mind so often runs back to the time when I first heard you preach the gospel at my father's house, when I was quite small. Those were dark days to me; but in my twentieth year I was relieved of my great burden; yet I was left to rejoice such a short time, until I felt at a loss to know what to do. For the last fifteen years and more my life has been so dark; so much so that I actually thought I was losing my mind entirely. I could not keep my mind on a question long enough to answer it. I was not only a worry to myself, but also to my dear family and companion. They thought I was losing my mind, I seemed so worried. But the Lord willed to give me peace of mind, quiet and contentment, and to take me, even me, before his dear saints, to ask them for a resting place, that I might feed my poor, hungry soul with that spiritual food, without feeling myself as a thief and a robber by trying to eat of what I had no right. It pleased the Lord to keep me from hearing the experience of others, but I will murmur not for that. I could not open the Bible without feeling condemned, which gave me great distress of mind and heart. It pleased the Lord to withhold my affection from my dear companion, and only at times could I express my mind to him, who held all my earthly affections. I often thought I would tell him how much I thought of him; but when I would undertake to talk to him such a feeling would come over me as if I were being hit with something in the breast, and my head seemed as in a vice. Sleep was almost a thing of the past, as I had not slept much for two years. What a helpless being I found myself to be. Things that I would not, those I was found doing. How mysterious are God's ways, and past finding out! "By grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." I have not words to express my joy and comfort of mind. Surely none but the Lord knows what my many trials have been. I long so much for my full deliverance, though I am so happy. I feel so quiet, knowing that the Lord's will will be done. I can now see where he has walked close by me when I was in such dark clouds, with not the least spark of light. When you were here in the fall I thought I would talk with you if I dared; but without the Lord's help I was still helpless. You looked so bright that I could only stand and gaze. I longed to hear you talk, but I had not the courage and confidence. Since I have been so reconciled I can read, and I find things different from what I supposed they were. O what a comfort it was to find it so! It was so much better than I had imagined. Mine was imagination; for I had felt as if I dared not read, I was so corrupt. I long so much to see you all, and to hear you all talk, I can hardly wait, as I have been hungry and thirsty so long, though I have been feeding on spiritual things for a short time, I hope. I can see so much pleasure in the Scriptures that I can hardly let them alone long enough to eat.

I have scribbled so long, but have not told anything yet; but I must close, hoping to see and be with you all soon, if the Lord wills. This is the desire of one who feels to be so small that nothing can compare with my littleness as I can see. I am less than the least, if one at all. I hope to hear from you soon, and to drink in the comforting words which the Lord has inspired.

Yours with the greatest of esteem.
The Lord willing, D. and I will be at Sidney the fourth Sunday in April to follow our Master.

BETTIE PETERS.

ZANESFIELD, Ohio, April 26, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER BRES:—I cannot but weep for joy. The Lord has blessed us. I can see nothing but blessing, mercy, peace, love. O! what a merciful Savior, to give the hope of that pure love, so spotless, so divine, to one so small as I. Could anything give more comfort to a poor sinner like me? What a comfort it is to know that others have felt that same blessing. I was singing the hymn which begins,

"Not with our mortal eyes
Have we beheld the Lord."

How much this hymn tells my feelings. I have been made to be still and gaze on his glories, which seem to have no end. I had such a beautiful dream on Monday. It seemed as if it were Sunday, just as it truly was with all your beautiful faces before me, as it were, and you were leading me to burial with my dear Savior, I hope. I heard, as it were, a voice from heaven, saying, "I speak as to the angels in heaven. My yoke is easy, and my burden is light. I lift thee up out of the horrible pit and miry clay, and place thy feet upon a rock, and establish thy goings, and put a new song in thy mouth, even praise unto my great name. I the Lord do all these things."

BETTIE PETERS.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 18, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I send you inclosed for publication in the SIGNS the following letter from sister Alderton. It seems to me to breathe the spirit of the humble-hearted followers of the Lamb. It is the record of the daily travel of a soul that has been translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of the dear Son of God. I send it because I think it will reach and touch many of the children of God. I trust the dear sister may often be enabled to rejoice in the house of her Father among his children.

I remain your brother in hope,
F. A. CHICK.

GOOD HOPE, D. C., Aug. 30, 1884.

ELDER F. A. CHICK—MY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Once more I must ask you to pardon the liberty I take in writing to you; but the Lord has been so graciously good and kind to me that I feel a desire to tell it to some one of his dear chosen, and have no one to whom I can speak on the subject; so I have longed to write out a few thoughts and send them to you. First, I want to tell you something of the blessing I have felt to receive from attending your meeting last Sunday. I had never met you, nor one of your members, but I came to the city a stranger, to make my future home here, about four weeks ago; and having heard that you preached here once a month, I determined to find out where and when you preached. I searched the papers diligently, and found notice of the services of every other denomination, I think, except the Old School Baptists, the despised of the world, but loved of the Lord; that people I love so well. Again I was reminded that the Lord's humble poor are not counted worthy to be "reckoned among the nations of the earth" by the unregenerate; but O, dear brother, if the Lord be for us who can be against us, or what does such persecution amount to? O that we could at all times be enabled to look away from our crosses, our trials, our weakness and disappointments, and from everything of an earthly nature, and "let the dead bury their dead," and we look unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. But, alas! I am too apt to dwell on those things which are so distressing, my most bitter trials, and forget that the Lord rules and reigns, and has said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." I emphasize these words because they are so precious, and have been such a comfort to me. But O! if it takes all these crosses and trials to keep us where the Master wills, then let them come and welcome; for he has said, "Where I am, there ye shall be also."

But to return (for I have wandered off). Through many difficulties I found out your place of meeting, and went there last Sunday. When I entered the house and took my seat among the few gathered together there I felt in my heart that I was indeed among the Lord's dear people, and then and there I felt to rejoice. Then in the singing of those precious songs again I was made to rejoice; and in listening to the preached word I felt so encouraged, so lifted up. As you so beautifully described those who are led by the Spirit as being the children of God, I never before felt a more sweet and blessed assurance that I was a child of God. But O what a longing I felt to bear the image of the heavenly! My whole soul seemed to go out in prayer and praise, and I could see the image of the blessed Savior in you while you were speaking; but, alas! I seem to bear the image of the earthly instead of the heavenly. How weak, how insignificant I must be! and yet how good and kind is the dear, compassionate Savior! He will have mercy on our unrighteousness, and our sins and iniquities he will remember no more. All the week he has been so graciously near unto me. Why is it such a joy and satisfaction to meet together with the Lord's dear people in the capacity of worshipers? This has often been a question with me, since we can enjoy the presence of the Lord in our homes; yea, some of my most precious seasons have been when alone in my home. No, not alone, for surely Jesus was there, and was so precious that I felt (in my imagination) that I could reach out my arms and embrace that sacred being. Yet this does not quench my longing, hungering and thirsting to meet with his people, and to hear more and more of this blessed Jesus. Nothing else is quite like it; nothing else will satisfy. There are no other people like his people. I feel to hope that the Lord has heard my supplications and my cries, inasmuch as he has given me an earthly home where I can meet with his people regularly. This is a privilege I never before have had. I do feel that it is of the Lord, and I cannot thank him enough. But again I must lament my ungratefulness, and loathe myself for it. Then the thought is suggested to my mind, Will these dear people be willing to recognize me as a sister, being a stranger among them? I cannot blame them if they cannot; for I feel to be very unworthy to be recognized as such among God's people. But you did not seem as strangers to me, but as children of the same heavenly Parent. I felt that I could not leave the house without shaking hands with you. Yes, I feel in my heart to love the same things that you love. The grace and power and love and predestination of God in the salvation of sinners are precious truths to me. On them rests my hope of salvation. Your communications through our religious papers have been a lasting comfort to me. Ever since I received a hope in Christ it has been my lot to be cast among Arminians. My husband being a Methodist, I have been thrown mostly in that society, and deprived of the society of those who feel as I do and see as I do, and deprived to a great extent of the care of faithful ministers, as I have always lived away off from the Baptists; but as we sit upon the banks of Babylon, and listen to its noisy, disturbing sounds, with our harps upon the willows, how our hearts go out after that dear people who alone know the joyful sound, and who alone can speak that dear, familiar language. But O these strange sounds, of which the world is full (I am sick of it), which exalt man and abase God. How disgusting! how God-dishonoring! I wonder that any one can feed upon such dry husks. But my mind goes back to a time when I too tried to feed upon these things; but instead of feeding I was starving. But in due time the dear, compassionate Savior found me, and gave me no peace until I came out from among them. What a Savior! what a Friend! Can any trials, any troubles, be half so distressing to the child of God as that of living in disobedience to his commands? But is there not sweet rest in obedience? Peace seems to flow as a river. How my sympathies go out after the poor, trembling lambs who are halting, faltering, and still living in disobedience on account of obstacles in the way. How I would like to tell them some of my own experience in this way. How I would like to say to them,

"Rise, go on, and falter not,
Till you reach the dreaded spot;
Then with deep thanksgiving say,
Lo, the stone is rolled away."

Do you not believe, my brother, that if the Lord's fearful ones will only go forward in discharge of duty he will remove all obstacles out of the way?

But indeed my pen has run off. When writing to my Father's children I do not know when to stop; but I will not weary you longer. If I have been presuming please cast over it the mantle of charity. I cannot ask nor expect an answer to this, though I would love to hear from you.

Yours in a precious hope,

ARAH ALDERTON.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 27, 1894.

MR. JOHN MCCONNELL—VERY DEAR BROTHER IN THE LORD:—It is said, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." But if the heart is empty, what then? Just now is one of the times in my life when I hardly dare take the name of the Lord upon my polluted lips. And even as I write the name, a feeling goes over me which plainly says, You speak very familiarly of that which you know nothing. And this has led me to ask myself a question, which is very important to me, How does the heart of the children of light differ from the heart of the children of darkness? Could I answer that question satisfactory to myself I feel sure my hope would be strengthened, because I believe only God's children know that there is a difference, and only they do know the deceitfulness of their own heart. It does seem strange, does it not, that if one has the mind of Christ he should doubt his heirship, or interest in the kingdom of Christ? Still more strange, we have to admit that one must have the mind of Christ ere he is capable of doubting. My memory carries me back only a few years, to a time when I did not believe that my heart was "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked," and that in me was no good thing; and just how I came afterwards to believe that which I once disbelieved, I cannot tell. I feel certain I was not taught it of man, for I was worshiping the gods of this world, in following after those who taught for doctrine the commandments of men, and was not with the Lord's people when I was favored to behold the true church, and myself a vile and wretched sinner. When it was made plain to me that those who called themselves Old School Baptists are a manifestation on earth of the true church, at the same time this knowledge came into my possession (how, I know not), that whereas this people were once begotten, of the corruptible seed of Adam, unto all the depravity of heart which falls to natural man under the curse of sin, now they are begotten from a seed that is incorruptible, by the word of God. "Which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." But although I could see this perfection for the church, I could not see it for myself. Therefore with the knowledge that I had been given a knowledge beyond that of man, I doubted more and more that I had any part in the matter; yet more and more did I long to be identified with them. At this time I began to know myself more and more clearly. But alas! that knowledge drove me farther and farther from that which was my heart's desire. I found myself now longing to be with that people whom I seemed to be so widely separated from. If now I were asked to try to answer the question, "How does the heart of the children of light differ from the heart of the children of darkness?" I could only answer it out of that experience. The same wicked and deceitful heart was there; no change in that; the same carnal and sensual desires of my flesh permeating all my being; no change in that. But there seemed to be a new principle implanted there, yielding new desires and new aspirations; desires that filled me with fear and trembling, and yet a kind of boldness that led me on in an opposite direction to that which I was wont to go before. I had before attended meetings in fine edifices, and listened to intellectual sermons on the topics of the day, entirely void of spirituality. Well do I remember the first meeting I attended in following out my new desires. It was held in a soiled and untidy room, up three flights of unswept stairs, where were eight or nine souls congregated to worship the Lord of heaven and of earth. That was indeed a happy forenoon to me. My heart did echo the every words of Jacob when he said, "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."

My dear brother, I did not intend to write to you in this strain when I began this letter, but somehow I am glad I have written just as I have; yet I recognize in it a selfish feeling, for a new feeling has arisen in my breast while writing. Now I want to be right honest with you; I want to lay bare all that is in my heart before you; I want to tell you how my heart has been drawn out to you in especial love during this little season. You remember how I told you, in the beginning, of my feelings in uttering the Lord's name, or in writing it. That is all gone now; and as I write the name, or think upon it, it is with a subdued feeling, as though it were bathed in God's love; a feeling of reverence intermingled with gladness, for your own experience has been in my mind all the time, going hand in hand with my own; and surely I have seen the hand of the Lord as he has guided each step in our journey; how he has graciously and mercifully restrained us; how, as wandering sheep, he has brought us again and again out from the mountains of sin, and gently and sweetly led us into his banqueting house, among his honored guests. I just now seem to realize that we never would have stood where we stand to-day, had we not by the abundant mercy of the gracious Redeemer been "begotten again unto a lively hope." Do you not sometimes get just a little glimpse of the glorious inheritance awaiting us, and you try to tell it, and cannot? I had some pleasant thoughts last evening, and I thought perhaps just a little was revealed to me of the way, or rather one of the ways, in which we eat the broken body and drink the spilt blood of our dear Redeemer; that is, by way of communion or communication one with another. If with the broken heart and contrite spirit my brother comes to me, and lays bare the burden of his bleeding heart, I do eat and drink the glad revelations of a heaven-born soul, which is Christ in him the hope of glory. Now I want to tell you why it is a selfish feeling that I have had while writing. It is simply because I feel that I myself have been profited, without much assurance that you will derive either profit or comfort. I have somehow been favored to drop the veil of the flesh, and have had sweet communion with you in the Spirit, while in it a closer fellowship has sprung up within me for your hitherto feverish experience; and I feel drawn very near to you. Although we have been led in a somewhat different channel, yet by the same spirit, subject to the same temptations, having one faith, and one hope of our calling in Christ Jesus our Lord, and all, as we fondly hope, to the declarative glory of our covenant-keeping God. Then, may not we each rejoice in our infirmities, seeing that the strength of our Lord is made perfect in our weakness. * * *

We all join in love to you both, and will be glad to hear from you.

Your brother in hope of life eternal,

B. F. COULTER.

WOODSTOCK, Michigan.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Often the many different frames of mind that we experience is a subject for consideration for us. Some can tell when they had no serious nor distressing thoughts concerning things of death or a future state; and others, like myself, can remember no time, perhaps, when these things did not trouble them; and this can be as deep a state of trouble as can be realized when brought to bear upon us with its full weight. It can be all that the heart can bear, and its removal from us can so lighten us that our joy can be full of glory and unspeakable. Or there may be diversities of operations, but all of the same Spirit. This is the beginning of spiritual exercises with us, whether we be gloomy or rejoicing, sad or sorrowful. And as we walk the thorny road how many changes come to us; too many to repeat; too many to at all times keep in mind; yet now and then they come back to us, sometimes by hearing others tell their travels and trials by the way. How cheerful we are as they tell their evidences, and we can say, These are my evidences too, although I had lost sight of them, or could hardly claim them at the time I was exercised by them. When I first began to hear the dear ones tell of their deliverances from the bondage of sin, of their first quickening in the regeneration and the new birth, I supposed they always remained in the same state of love and joy and peace. I supposed I were always to remain in that state too. I knew nothing of how we can "die daily," of how "death worketh in us." I knew nothing of "A daily cross, a stubborn will,

A heart replete with every ill."

I knew nothing of the warfare, nor of being brought into capacity to the law of sin and death. So much have I realized a dead state. It is not so much to mourn that we are dead to the things of the world, although I have ever wished to be more alive to the things required, of many things expected of me as right in relations of this life, yet find no interest therein. I am more longing for rest than anything else; rest in every sense of the word.

"And yet I cry, a weak and barren cry,
For rest, for rest;

And yet I sigh, a weak and barren sigh,
For rest, for rest."

Tired out with my little toils, my little cares, my little sufferings, so impatient of my little cross; weary with the one dull round of my appointed place; so dead to it all. Even the morning with all its beauty brings me no rising of soul. The evening glories are nothing to my faded and dying vision, all the earth is so barren and desolate. "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" More than all, to take the Bible and read, and yet not read; my eyes on the words, and yet my heart takes no hold of them; even sometimes a mocking spirit within, like a hateful serpent rising there to mock what I once most loved. It is too sad and I lay the book away. I try to think of prayer, but it is far from me; mocked even here. How far off I am! how dead I am! Afar off through trial and chastening, I think I see the way back. But must I be scourged and chastened all the while? There is yet life enough to know that I am dead, that I am blind and miserable, and poor and naked; to know that it is a time of famine with me; that I am only kept alive just enough to realize the awful bondage, the want of liberty, life and peace. And now is a place for the words, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "Ye are dead!" There is even comfort so far, if I can go on farther. I am in a state recognized by the word. I know it and feel it. May I not hope to feel the rest, to feel that my life is hid with Christ in God? It is so much safer than it would be in my keeping. And although no ecstasy of joy returns, yet how good is a little rest, a little returning confidence and trust.

"Then trust me, and fear not;
Thy life is secure;
My wisdom is perfect,
Supreme is my power."

It is enough, and a little unction of life is felt in the once thought lifeless heart.

"In love I correct thee,
Thy dress to refine,
To make thee at length
In my likeness to shine."

And so sweet, so precious, is the least felt presence of him who is our life; just to feel him returning, though yet out of sight; just to feel him drawing near, though our eyes may be holden so that we cannot see him; just to feel that we have life, even though it be hid with him in God. It is more than can be told. What will it be to realize that when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory?

When I began to write it was to tell how glad I am to hear that dear sister Mary Parker has found some relief from her sufferings. When I first read of sister Rounsaville, how that instead of pleasuring as so many do in the heated term of summer, or of seeking her own welfare, she was by the couch of the suffering one, it so filled my mind with love, admiration and appreciation of such a sister remaining upon earth, that I slept none that night. I would not, if I were to try, know how to praise her enough. All I could think of was, There is yet faith on the earth. The work manifested it. Nothing less than the Spirit of him who went about doing good was with this dear sister. Also Elder Durand and his family, and so many others, are worthy of the thanks and esteem of all. Afflicted as I am, I can sympathize with, but not do as I would for those who are afflicted. Long ago I had such an earnest wish to help her, but could not find how to do it. At that time I had such an exercise of mind in spiritual things, and a wish to write them down; but I did not find how to do this either. Afterward I commenced to write, when time and health were more favorable; but the things I had wished to write were gone from me, and all I could do was to record an outline of the way I had been led, in what we call an experience; and when written, I had such an impression to have it printed in a little book. I knew it was of no great importance, and I could give no reason for it, yet I so wanted it printed in the face of almost impossibilities; so, with much difficulty, it was accomplished; and no sooner was it advertised than I received letters from dear sisters, saying that for sister Mary's benefit they wished to collect her letters for a book for her, and asking me for what letters she had written me. So plainly was it revealed before me that perhaps the dear ones might not have thought of it but for my poor, little, simple book; and when I was afterwards told that hers had been a great benefit to her, how happy was I in it all. I might have been mistaken in my conclusions, but I was very happy about it at all events, and felt glad that I had endured all I did about the book I had published, although I knew it had not been so very well received, and that it contained sentiments not entertained by many of the dear ones, which caused me much mortification that I had ever advanced them. It is now a thing of the past, and I have been glad that it is forgotten; yet things past will come back to us again, and sometimes bring such a different light with them, and we realize something of the Savior's words, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." And how often we are made to feelingly confess that we know but in part. The little we know is not perfect; it is only in part. And if our knowledge of things is sometimes questioned, we should feel that it is no strange thing; for it was the apostle Paul who said, "We know but in part."

I am saddened when I read so often of the death of some of those who have been so long with us, and leave us so lonely as they go. How much their going away brings it to

(Continued on page 326)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 10, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

RELIGIOUS ATHEISM.

PARADOXICAL as the words at the head of this article may appear at first view, a little reflection cannot fail to convince an observer of the signs of the times that Atheism, which may be quite correctly denominated "Religious," is the most prevalent species of infidelity with which the world is infested. But, exclaims the popular religionist of the present age, Atheism signifies the doctrine of disbelief in the existence of a God; while that which is "religious" is the precise opposite of this. Not so fast, however. Let us investigate the subject. Paul, in his second epistle to Timothy, informs us that "in the last days" there shall be some "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." And is not the number of such at this time legion? Does not the world abound with various orders of professed Christians who pretend to be so zealous to serve God that they run far in advance of the divine directions revealed in the New Testament, and profess to improve upon its precepts, and transcend the standard of piety and morals—many that claim to possess so much superabundance of the quickening influence of divine religion that they are exporting large quantities to the heathen? Who will say that these are not "religious" characters? They claim to be exceedingly, excessively so, and are called so by the world. It only remains then to prove that their doctrine is downright Atheism in essence and reality, in order to establish the propriety and correctness of the expression, "Religious Atheism," and its application to the prevalent orders of professed Christians.

The essential attributes of Deity all will admit to be omnipotence, or unbounded power; omniscience, or infinite intelligence; and immutability, or unchangeableness of purpose. Without these attributes all will confess, in the abstract, there could be no God; for they are absolutely essential to the existence of an Almighty Being. Could we conceive of a power omniscient and immutable, but not omnipotent or almighty, the destinies of all beings and all worlds would be beyond its control, and some other supreme power must be supposed which should govern and control all things with an almighty hand. The first would not then be God, for it would lack the power of God. And the second, which we would suppose to possess all power, but not to be infinitely intelligent, would not be the God Christians worship, for it would not possess the wisdom of God. And could we suppose a being unchangeable, but wanting the attributes of almighty power and infinite wisdom, we should suppose a power as far short of the Godhead as before. Then, if any profess belief in God, but deny any one of these divine attributes, to the being in which they believe, viz: omnipotence, omniscience and immutability, they deny the existence of God, and are Atheists. They have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. Let us then inquire if there be any such among the pretended worshipers of God and professed Christians.

Are there not some who teach that man is a free moral agent, and that it rests with him to will and to do of his own pleasure? There certainly are such who profess Christianity. Of these are the Free Will or New School Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Universalists, and all other orders of Arminians. Now, if man were a free moral agent, he would act by his own volition. He would then possess and exercise some degree of power independently of and consequently not possessed by the Supreme Being. But if the least particle of power can be possessed independently of that Being, that Being comes precisely so far short of possessing all power and being omnipotent or almighty, and is not therefore the God of the Hebrews. Is it not then as clear as noonday that all who profess belief in God, and yet avow man's free moral agency, are false professors, Atheists, and "without God in the world?" Let them be as ostentatious and formal as they may in observing their ceremonies, chanting their false-hearted, odious and corrupt praises, and promulgating their delusive doctrines, all their pharisaical religion can entitle them to no other classification than "Religious Atheists," in contradistinction from their more honest brethren who openly avow the benighted belief of their unenlightened minds.

Again, do not the same class of professors to which we have alluded deny the predestination and fixedness of all things from before the foundation of the world? If so, they deny another of the three essential attributes of Deity which we have enumerated, that is, the omniscience or infinite intelligence of God; for infinite intelligence of course implies and includes foreknowledge. Infinite or unbounded wisdom occupies the immensity of eternity, and sees with an all-penetrating and perceiving eye the uttermost events of the interminable future, as well as those of the unbegun and eternal eras of the past. To deny the foreknowledge, therefore, is to deny the omniscience of God, to do which is to deny the very existence of Deity. To deny the predestination of all things is to deny the foreknowledge of them; for whatever is foreknown must at the same time be fixed and predestinated or determined. How else could it be foreknown? If a thing is not predetermined it cannot possibly be foreknown. Then, to believe all things were not predestinated or determined beforehand, is to believe they were not foreknown, and to deny the omniscience or unbounded knowledge of God, which is to deny the God of the Bible, who is everywhere declared to be almighty and all wise, knowing the end from the beginning. Hence the same class of popular religionists who deny the omnipotence of God, as we have before shown, also deny his omniscience, the two chief attributes of Deity. The denial of either of these would entitle them to the cognomen chosen to head this article; but the denial of both, doubly condemns them as disbelievers, Infidels and Atheists, all their high sounding, hypocritical professions of piety and religion to the contrary notwithstanding. If all things are predestinated, the children of God were chosen before they were born, "neither having done any good or evil," and their destiny was unalterably fixed without their aid, action or volition. How firm then is the foundation of the consoling doctrine of election, which secures the salvation of all God's chosen ones, without leaving a single condition to be complied with or rejected by themselves! It rests upon the very existence of God—its foundation is the rock of eternity! For if all things are predestinated, the election of God's people must be sure and unalterable—and all things were predestinated as a necessary consequence, if they were foreknown; and they were foreknown as sure as our omnipotent God exists! What could be more sure? It was in the raptures induced by these reflections that Paul burst forth in that unanswerable strain of argument in which he says, "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified."—Rom. viii. 29, 30.

The immutability of God is also denied by many of the professed religionists of the age, who charge him with a change of purpose corresponding with and dependent upon the course of conduct pursued by men. Men are often told that if they can be prevailed upon to give up their hearts to God they will be saved; but if not, they must be damned—making the decision of their destiny to depend upon themselves. So that if God had determined their destiny either way, his purpose would be changed by the opposite course upon the part of poor puny man, the creature of a day! We are told that if we will give liberally of our gold and silver, the gospel can be sent to the heathen, and God will be induced to save millions of the human family whom he would otherwise consign to eternal woe! In short, that if we will only use the means, we may change the purpose of God with regard to ourselves and others, and mould the destinies of men to our own liking! Such seem to fancy a god like unto themselves, changeable, short-sighted and impotent. They conjure up a creature of their own, which they call God, with whom they divide the empire of destiny, holding the balance of power, however, in their own hands; for at best they make themselves the legislative, and their fancied God but the executive instrument of their own enactments. Their views of a supreme Being are of a similar character with those of the heathen whom they profess to evangelize, or of the untutored savage of the wilderness, or of the learned Greek, or man of worldly science, who has not been enlightened by the shining of the Sun of Righteousness in his soul. They are Atheists of religious profession—"Religious Atheists." They are stumbling upon the dark mountains of bewildered imagination, where they must continue to wander in the benighted state of nature until the God of heaven writes his word in living letters as with a sunbeam upon their quickened souls.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 1, 1847.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

WHILE we do not wish to distress any of our subscribers who are in arrears with subscription, yet we are compelled to again appeal to all who can make a remittance on amounts due to please assist us through our present financial cramp by sending on such amounts as they can conveniently spare. Several weeks ago we sent out nearly a thousand notices to delinquents, the aggregate of whose accounts amounts to about three thousand dollars, and thus far we have received only about two hundred dollars upon these accounts. Brethren and friends, please do not forget us.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Maine Old School Baptist Conference, assembled with the church of Christ at North Berwick, York Co., Maine, August 31st, September 1st and 2nd, 1894, to the sister associations and churches with whom she corresponds, sends greeting in the Lord.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—Another year has glided by, and we again address you. We have met in our annual conference, and trust it is with gratitude to the glorious God that we are mindful of the unspeakable truth that we are his people and the sheep of his pasture. We greet you in the love and fellowship of the gospel of Christ, feeling the assurance that by the grace of God we are called in one hope of our calling, having one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. This being our profession, as the churches of Christ our fervent desire is that we with you may ever obtain that grace from Christ Jesus the glorious Head of the church, that we may walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Knowing the manifold infirmities that encompass us in our pilgrimage, we might well be faint hearted; the prospect before us would be dismal indeed; how could we continue if we were called to go on in our journey, and to war against the world, the flesh and the devil, at our own charges? Continual calamities would attend our steps. But, beloved of God, such a prospect is not before us. Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, has said, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Surely we shall be more than conquerors through him that loved us.

"Yes, I to the end shall endure,
As sure as the earnest is given;
More happy, but not more secure,
The glorified spirits in heaven."

Our beloved Savior before his ascension spake to the apostles, saying, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Believers in Jesus, who by the grace of God are favored to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded, truly prove that he is with them. Does it not become us, dear children of God, to be found continually seeking counsel and grace from our living Head, that in our personal experience and walk, and as the professed churches of Christ, we may so live to show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light? If indeed we are the churches of Christ, and at any time are turned aside, and neglect the statutes of our heavenly King, then in due time we shall certainly hear the voice of him who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, saying, "I have a few things against thee." The doctrine and commandments of our Lord are not trifles, playthings, or non-essential things; but in them is our peace and comfort, and our fellowship one with another, as members of the churches of Christ. Our gracious God has designed (and it has been our heritage to find it true) that the church of Christ, walking in the truth, is a heavenly place, a home to poor sinners saved by grace. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Amen. The fellowship and communion of believers in the Lamb of God, O how sweet and comforting!

"When each can feel his brother's sigh,
And with him bear a part;
When sorrow flows from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart."

Truly the body is unto the edifying of itself in love. If at any time schisms, wars and fightings arise, whence come they?—James iv. 1. What a sad plight the body is in when the members of the church fail to have "the same care one for another." History informs us that when, in the days of early Rome, the common people in their first great rupture with the patricians angrily seceded to the sacred mount, the venerable and patriotic Menenius Agrippa Lanatus, himself one of noble birth, effected a reconciliation by his famous fable of "The Belly and the Members," as follows: "In olden times, when every Member of the body could think for itself, and each had a separate will of its own, they all, with one consent, resolved to revolt against the Belly. They knew no reason, they said, why they should toil from morning to night in its service, while the Belly lay at its ease in the midst of all, and indolently grew fat upon their labors. Accordingly they agreed to support it no more. The feet vowed they would carry it no longer; the hands, that they would do no more work; the teeth, that they would not chew another morsel of meat, even were it placed between them. Thus resolved, the Members for a time shewed their spirit and kept their resolution. But they soon found that instead of mortifying the Belly, they only reduced themselves to the last degree of emaciation."

But far more blessedly and beautifully the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. xii. and in Eph. iv. has set forth the unity and relationship of the members in particular of Christ's body, the church. "Now God hath set the members every one of them in the body as it hath pleased him." The various gifts, and the varied experience of the several members of the body, all tend to the comfort and edification of one another. "Unto every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. (Now that he ascended, what is but that he also descended first unto the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all things). And he gave some, apostles, and some, prophets, and some, evangelists, and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ; from whom the whole body, fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, making increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. iv.

The voice of our beloved Redeemer is still full of good cheer, saying, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." In our seasons of trial his presence shall be our stay. In all our conflicts he is our shield and buckler. All through the ages Zion has ever proved the constancy, the undiminished love and mercy of the Lord of hosts, her Redeemer. Tribulation was the path our fathers trod, and tribulation still is the predestinated lot of Christ's church. But we shall triumph in his dear name. He is with us; who then can be against us? Though the world, the flesh and the devil conspire to accomplish our ruin. They shall be cast down, and the beloved Zion of God shall overcome by the blood of the Lamb. Jehovah is a wall of fire round about, and the glory in the midst of us. The gates of hell shall not prevail against us. In all the offices and characters the Son of God sustains to his people, it shall be our heritage to prove his language true, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world;" to which our needy, longing souls respond, "Amen," so let it be.

We desire, dear brethren, a continuance of your correspondence, and hope to see your messengers with us at our next session, which we have appointed to be held, the Lord willing, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, before the first Monday in September, 1895.

FRED. W. KEENE, Mod.
JOSEPH F. HALL, Clerk.

IN the removal by death of Elder

William J. Purington, the church of Christ at North Berwick, Maine, feels in some degree to sympathize with her sister church at Hopewell, New Jersey, in the loss of their beloved pastor. Since his removal from this State he has frequently visited us, and has come among us in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, preaching the unadulterated doctrine of the grace of God to our edification and comfort. By the grace of God he was "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." We shall miss him at the times of our annual conferences; but we desire that grace from the Lord to acquiesce in the sovereign good pleasure of him that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, and who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks.

FRED. W. KEENE, Pastor.
JOSEPH F. HALL, Clerk.

The Maine Old School Baptist Association, convened with the church at Bowdoinham, Maine, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 7th, 8th and 9th, 1894, to the several churches of which she is composed, sends greeting in the Lord.

DEAR BRETHREN:—In writing you this our annual Circular it seems to us that we need do no more than remind you of the former things, that you may be confirmed once more in them, and established in the present truth. The principles of the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ never fail nor change; and that which in the sight of God constitutes an orderly gospel walk must ever in its substance be the same. The principles and practices of those who are of the world, and who have to do with the affairs of the world, may change; but we, brethren, have to do with unchangeable things, belonging to an unchangeable kingdom, under the rule of that God who is without variableness or shadow of turning. Therefore it well becomes us to consider the former things, and ask after the old paths, in which it has pleased God that his people should always walk. It is certain that there is a broad difference between the doctrine of God our Savior and what are called the doctrines of men. It is equally certain that as broad a difference exists between that conversation which becomes a believer in Jesus and that which characterizes the world; and in nothing, it appears to us, is this difference more manifest than in the fickle, changing beliefs and practices of men of the world, and the steadfast faith and consistent practice of the church of Christ as she follows her Captain and Guide on earth. One of these differences is this, that children of God believe in and worship an unchangeable God, while all the followers of every worldly religious system frankly confess that the deity whom they reverence and worship is as changeable as they are themselves. This last mentioned difference is in reality the root difference between the gospel of God and the theories of natural religion. Believing in a changeable God, it is to be expected that the faith and practice of men would change to suit what they suppose are the changeable fancies of a changeable God; but believing in an unchangeable God, men do not change in faith or practice, unless indeed they become convinced that what they have been believing and doing is contrary to the revealed will of God. To believe in the unchangeability of God furnishes a solid ground to stand upon; and those who have received this truth can but by it be made more consistent and careful and stable themselves. If they believe that every word of God is not yea and nay, but yea and amen, to the glory of God, then will they also have a spirit of stability in themselves which will make their words to be not yea and nay, but true and faithful and consistent before God and man.

We believe that our fathers held the true faith of God's elect when they, in solemn obedience to the word of God impressed upon their hearts and consciences, withdrew from the changeable beliefs and practices of men, which were frankly admitted to be new by their very advocates, and chose to stand upon the old foundations which were established by the divinely inspired apostles of the Lamb. Believing that those who withdrew from their former associates more than sixty years ago stood upon apostolic ground in both faith and practice, we would exhort you to follow them as they followed Christ, and would bid you not to yield one iota of the doctrine then contended for by them. We have been sorry in these last few years to see a disposition to question some of the most firmly believed principles of our holy faith. There may be a need for popular religious denominations to revise their faith so as to keep in the popular approval, but there can be no need for the church of God to revise their faith. The truth of God revealed to his saints once is the same to the last day of time. Christians indeed may grow in knowledge; but this growth is not in the way of denying any principle once held, but right along the line of a further development of that truth. For instance, no additional growth can ever result in a denial that salvation is by grace, but rather by growing we come to see more and more clearly its truth and beauty. This is also true of all those principles of truth which are inseparably connected with this one fundamental and comprehensive truth. To assert the doctrine of salvation by grace is to assert also the doctrine of creature sinfulness and helplessness, of election and predestination, particular, full, clear and absolute, of God's unchangeability, universal and absolute sovereignty, and of certain final glory for all the elect. On the other hand, to deny all or any of these truths is to deny as a result the doctrine of salvation by grace. These great principles of truth are all wedded together, and one cannot fall without also pulling down all the rest. The Scriptures unite these truths together when they expressly declare that salvation is of the Lord. Our fathers, when they withdrew as they were bidden from the New School Baptists, clearly stated again their faith in what the Bible taught, and we feel like bidding you to still contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. We feel to exhort you thus all the more because we have been pained and surprised to hear from the lips and pens of Old School Baptists of late years arguments against some of these above named truths which we have been accustomed to hear from the lips of full-fledged Arminians all our lives. We expect Arminians to oppose any truth which grows out of salvation by grace, including election, predestination, God's foreknowledge, sovereignty and unchangeableness; but how strange such arguments sound coming from those who bear the name of a people who have always been the stern and uncompromising defenders of these Bible truths.

It is true that such a thing as a denial of God's predestination of all things may exist in the mind of one who believes election, God's foreknowledge, sovereignty and unchangeability; but as a matter of fact the man or the people who begin by denying this one truth, end by denying all the rest, as a reasonable thinking mind is logically bound to do. Nearly all thoughtful minds, both of those who oppose predestination, and of those who contend for it, in all ages of the world have seen this; and so in almost all cases we find men asserting all these principles of truth together, or else denying them altogether. This is always the sure result. He who begins by asserting one of these truths will go on in the end to assert them all; while he who begins by denying one of these things will in the end deny them all. We have seen signs already that those who deny the predestination of all things are beginning also to be very careful how they assert or defend either God's foreknowledge or unchangeability. It has been argued that prayer and exhortation are out of place with one who believes the doctrine of predestination. It now has begun to be said that prayer is of no use, and exhortation is vain, if God foreknows all things and cannot be changed. Brethren, unless we wish to start on the highway to open Arminianism we must still contend for the predestination of all things.

In conclusion we desire to say that we would not be understood as saying anything else but that we ought to be kind and forbearing and loving to brethren who cannot see clearly in this matter. It is certainly the teaching of the Scriptures that the weak in the faith ought to be received. Brethren, stand by your colors, but be gentle to the weak.

HIRAM CAMPBELL, Mod.
JOSEPH CLARK, Clerk.

(Continued from page 323.)

our minds that we too must die; and often we feel that we are on the border-land, that we almost see the shades giving way before the light of the morning of endless day. We almost feel the rest coming on us as we near the place of heavenly peace and joy. O! will it be so at last?

KATE SWARTOUT.

WAVERLY, Pa., Sept. 20, 1894.

BROTHER BEEBE:—Having promised to give a short account of my trip to the Maine Conference and the Maine Association, I take my pen with that object in view. I left my home on Wednesday before the fourth Sunday in August, and went to Shohola, Pa., to attend a two days meeting. There I met Elders Beebe and Jenkins, and heard four grand, soul-cheering sermons preached by them, the foundation of the hope of the saints, predestination, God's eternal choice of his people in Christ Jesus before the world began; not eternal spirits or children, as some have falsely accused us of holding, but fallen sinners of Adam's race, having had every spiritual blessing treasured up by God their Father in Christ Jesus before the world began, needful for them, and given to them, whoever they are, and wherever they are, in God's own appointed time and way. The experience and the duty of the saints in their walk and conversation, and the order of God's house, was ably set forth, and we believe that all present were benefited. At this meeting a church was organized, of brethren sound in the faith of the gospel of Christ. May the good Lord bless them with all needed gifts and graces as a little band of lovers of the truth.

From there I went to my appointment in New York City on the fourth Sunday. There the usual interest was manifested.

On Sunday night I took the boat for Albany, N. Y., and arrived there next morning. I went to brother Hecker's house, 272 Clinton Avenue, and had meeting there in the evening. There is a little company in that city of popularity who love the truth as it is in Jesus, and cannot bow the knee to the image of Baal.

On Wednesday I went to Boston, Mass., and on to North Berwick, Maine, where I was met by Elder Keene and brethren Clark and Staples. Brother Keene is very pleasantly situated, among a free-hearted, whole-souled, well-established church of Predestinarian Baptists, who esteem him very highly for the truth's sake. They are in a healthy, prosperous condition. Within a few months there has been a large ingathering, and the prospect is very favorable for many more, strange as it may appear to those who hold and advocate a limited predestination. This church has for seventy to a hundred years listened to the doctrine of God's unlimited predestination, and the eternal choice or election of his people in Christ Jesus, and have the privilege of listening to the same glorious truth every Sunday, proclaimed by their pastor, Elder Keene. Still they live, and love each other. Here I met Elder F. A. Chick, from Maryland, and brother F. S. Brink, from Middletown, New York, and had the enjoyable privilege of hearing both preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, with power from on high. I never before had heard brother Brink preach. He is a young man, rather slow of speech, but every word was to the point, and hit the mark; at least it hit me where I wanted to be hit, the heart. This meeting passed off very pleasantly indeed. Two young ladies came to the church, related their experience of grace, were received, and baptized by Elder Keene, the pastor. This was the home of the late Elder Quint. Elders Wm. J. Purington, Joseph L. Purington, F. A. Chick and P. Hartwell were all born, I was told, not far from this place.

From there we went to Bowdoinham, Maine, where the Maine Association was held, brother Brink returning to attend the Roxbury Association, in Delaware County, N. Y.

At the Maine Association I met Elder Hiram Campbell, who is well along in years, and a good preacher when you can get him at it, as I was told; but we could not persuade him to preach once during the three days of the meeting.

Elders Keene and Chick were at this meeting, and by the power of the Spirit of God preached the gospel of the grace of God, to the edification and comfort of the flock of God; also brother Beal, who was ordained to the work of the ministry at this meeting, preached an able, heart-searching sermon. I came near "speaking out in meeting" several times while he was preaching.

Here is a church of whole-hearted, God-fearing brethren and sisters, well established in the truth as it is in Jesus. Brethren, the Lord has blessed you with a good gift. Take good care of brother Beal and his family. If you neglect your brother and his family, you neglect yourselves. His time is not his own; he must be ready at any time to attend to any duties that fall to him in his position or official capacity, to marry, bury, visit the sick, look after the weak lambs, the lame sheep, &c. He has no right to say, I will stay at home one day this week. On that very day he may be called two or three hundred miles away to attend a funeral. I do not say that a minister should not work with his own hands, if he has the work to do, and has strength and time to do it. A lazy preacher is a poor piece of furniture in any church; but not many of them can engage to work for any definite length of time, however ambitious they may be, or willing to work. How many churches have become barren, cold, lifeless, yes, extinct.

through that spirit of covetousness, which is as the sin of witchcraft. How many brethren in the churches of the saints can say from the heart, I am interested in my pastor and his family, the same as in myself and family? How many churches to-day are virtually dead, though making some effort in the line of having meeting whenever the preacher comes, and that perhaps once in two or three months. Is there not a cause? What is it? I am not a beggar in a natural sense, and I am not writing these things for my personal benefit. My brethren are knowing to my needs, and the needs of my family, and their liberality is bountiful, far beyond my deserts, both at home and abroad. And not only this, but I have work to do every day I am at home on my little place, and have two strong hands to work with, though I am often hindered with my work, as I am away from my home more than half my time. However, I get along, with the help of my brethren in my home church at Justus, Pa., who are very kind to me.

Brethren, one and all, beware of covetousness, the spirit of pride and popularity. In fact, beware of self in all its delusive, bewitching forms; for if you live after the flesh, as sure as you are subjects of grace you will experience death. But I know that I am worse than any of you, and why should I write such things to you? May God and my brethren forgive me if I am wrong.

With love to all the brethren,

D. M. VAIL.

FERGUSON, Ky., Sept. 7, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—By request of the brethren of Licking and Mount Pleasant Associations I will send you a condensed account of my recent tour among them. I left my home on Thursday, Aug. 16th, and reached Alton Station, Anderson Co., Ky., at 6 o'clock p. m., where brother Alvin Herndon and his daughter Mattie met me. On Friday a goodly number of the members of Little Flock Church met at brother Herndon's house to whom I tried to preach. On Saturday and Sunday at Little Flock Church I met as lovable and devoted a band of brethren and sisters as it has ever been my good fortune to address on the great subject of salvation. Nowhere in my extended travels have I ever been more warmly received by the dear saints than by those of Little Flock Church. Here I met brethren W. Bond and Dudley Johnson, two young preachers, very promising gifts. On Monday night, Aug. 20th, I preached at Lawrenceburg to a small company. On Tuesday I went to Salt River Church and preached to a goodly number of God's little ones, who seemed to be well pleased and much comforted. On Wednesday at Goshen Church I met a goodly crowd, to whom I spoke of the saving grace of God. I also visited our beloved brother Farmer, at Farmdale, and from there nine of us went to the Licking Association, where we met Elders Pollard (of Canada), Eubanks and Sawin. Here we had a most pleasant time for three days. It was my happy privilege to meet our mutually beloved brother H. Cox, who writes so ably for the SIGNS. On Monday, Aug. 27th, in company with Elder Eubanks, I went to Campbellsburg, Ky., and on the 28th preached at Turners Church, and on the 29th at Sulphur Fork Church, and at night at Campbellsburg, where we met a goodly number of the saints, who received us with a warmth of welcome and with such indorsement that I rejoiced and took courage, and felt to thank our covenant-keeping God. In company with Elders Pollard, Eubanks, Sawin, Ritter, and others, I attended the Mount Pleasant Association, which convened with Union Church, Harrison Co., Ind. Here we met Elder Charles Ratcliff, of Blue River Association, on Friday before the first Sunday in September, and all spent three days most pleasantly with God's humble poor, speaking and hearing of the matchless mercy, the everlasting love and the sovereign grace of our God. By request I went to New Middletown, Ind., on Sunday night and preached, where I was again warmly received. I left my home desiring in my heart that I might go in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ; and, my dear brother Beebe, if I am not a poor, deceived one, my heart's desire was granted me; for it did seem to me that I was never enabled to see more clearly and to set forth more plainly the doctrine of God our Savior, than on that tour; for which may I praise God; and may his gracious love accompany me and keep me ever at the foot of the cross of Christ.

"Through this changing world below,
Lead me gently as I go;
Trusting thee, I cannot stray,
I can never lose my way."

When contemplating my own littleness, and God's sovereignty, how often do I feel the power of the words,

"To thee, my God, to thee I call,
Whatever weal or woe betide;
By thy command I rise or fall,
In thy protection I confide."

My fondest prayers are that those dear saints be kept by the power of Israel's God, and in his name farewell. Pray for your little brother, in hope of life,

T. C. HERNDON.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Sept. 30, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—Inclosed find postal note for one dollar. Please place it to my credit. It seems that I cannot get any more at this time that I can spare. I am so poor and hard run that I ought not take the paper; but I am almost alone in this country, and seldom hear any preaching, so I would be destitute indeed without the dear old medium of correspondence between or with that dear family purchased by the precious blood of Jesus, who offered himself without spot unto God for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity. To his name be glory, honor, praise and power forever and ever.

I, like brother Durand, was sorry to learn of brother Wm. L. Beebe's withdrawal from the editorial department of the SIGNS; but I heartily indorse the republishing of the editorials of your dear father, whose writings I have enjoyed from my youth up to the present, and I am now an old man. May the Lord bless and sustain you in publishing our family paper, is the prayer of your little brother in hope of eternal life,

JOHN A. NUCKOLS.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Maine Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Bowdoinham Church, Bowdoinham, Sagadahoc Co., Maine, September 7th, 8th and 9th, 1894, to the associations and churches with which we correspond, sends greeting in the Lord.

BELoved BRETHREN:—God has willed that we once more should meet, according to previous appointment, in the capacity of an association, to listen to the joyful sound; and as we hear, so we feel that we are blessed. Our hearts have been made glad as we have listened to the glad tidings of great joy that a Savior is born into the world, who shall save his people from their sins. It has pleased our God to send to us a goodly number of ministering brethren, who have administered to our many wants faithfully. They have come to us with one accord and of one mind.

The great God, who knows the hearts of all men, has caused us to set apart and ordain at this association a dearly beloved brother to the work of the ministry, which has caused us to feel glad and take courage, as we realize that our God is ever mindful of us.

The next session of our association will be held, if the Lord will, with the above named church, beginning on Friday before the second Sunday in September, 1895, and continuing three days, when we hope to be favored with your correspondence and messengers.

HIRAM CAMPBELL, Mod.

JOSEPH CLARK, Clerk.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Adelia Shepherd, Iowa, 3, Dr. D. M. Leonard, N. Y., 1.—Total, $4.00.

RECEIVED FOR CHURCH HISTORY.

W. T. Petty 4, D. F. Morris 5, W. A. Price 4, W. H. Lane 4, Mrs. Peter V. Osborn 4, J. W. Fairchild 4, A. Virginia Sellers 4, Samuel Barry 4, James McCook 4, R. D. Ivey 4, J. C. Williams 4.—Total, $45.00.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—On Monday, at 10 o'clock a. m., Sept. 24th, 1894, near Round Hill, Loudoun Co., Va., Mrs. Maria Larue, in her 66th year. She was born November 4th, 1828.

DEPARTED this mortal life on Sept. 17th, 1894, little Silas E. Hines, infant son of Lloyd and Fannie Hines, aged 7 months and 27 days.

He had indigestion almost all his short life. His brain became involved at four o'clock p. m. on Sunday, and he passed away at nine o'clock Monday morning, leaving a vacancy in the home circle that cannot be filled. We would say to the bereft ones that the Lord alone can heal the wound. May he give them grace, that they may feel to say, as did David, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

A FRIEND.

BLANCO, Texas.

Tabitha Peters, daughter of Robert and Susan Walcutt, was born near Groveport, Franklin Co., Ohio, Sept. 15th, 1823, and died June 9th, 1894, aged 70 years, 6 months and 24 days.

The deceased was married to Jonathan Peters on Jan. 2d, 1845, and with her husband united with the Old School Baptist Church in March, 1847. She remained a consistent member of that church, lived a christian, upright life, and died with the full hope of a bright hereafter. Her husband preceded her in death several years. She leaves to mourn their loss six children (three sons and three daughters), besides grandchildren and a large concourse of relatives and friends. Her sickness was of short duration, being sick only a few hours; but she bore her sufferings with great patience, and longed for the time of her departure.

The funeral was held at the Clinton Church, in Franklin Co., Ohio, conducted by the writer.

Your brother,

R. W. PETERS.

DIED—In Stockton, N. J., August 26th, 1894, Erma Fremont Rittenhouse, aged 3 years and 8 months.

She was the daughter and only child of J. Judson and Lillie Rittenhouse, and granddaughter of the late Wm. Rittenhouse. This little one had been a great sufferer a few weeks previous to her death with diphtheria, and often had the fond parents watched by her bedside, expecting her last hourly; but she was restored to health from that disease, only to be suddenly and in an unexpected moment taken from them. Her sufferings were intense, but of short duration, heart failure being the cause. She was an unusually lovable child, which greatly endeared her to all who knew her; and while the afflicted parents feel that it is a great trial to part with their darling, they are comforted with the assurance that their loss is her infinite gain. May they, with all who mourn, be made by grace divine to feel that perfect rest and trust in God, that they may be enabled to say, "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth good in his sight."

On the occasion of her funeral Elder Bundy spoke to the comfort of many from the words found in Romans v. 20, 21; after which the much-loved body was taken to the Frenchtown cemetery and laid away.

SUSIE R. KUGLER.

FRENCHTOWN, N. J.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Broad Creek Church, Sussex Co., Del., on Wednesday, Oct. 24th, 1894, and continue three days. Ministering and other brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Those coming from the north will take the train leaving Broad St., Philadelphia, at 10:20 a. m., on the Delaware R. R., and those from the south will take the train leaving Salisbury at 2:02 p. m. (Old Point Express), and ticket for Laurel, Del., on Tuesday before the meeting. If it suits any to come on the Mail Train, leaving Philadelphia at 7:25 a. m., they will be met and cared for.

A. B. FRANCIS, Pastor.

THE Pilgrims' Rest Association of Old School Predestinarian Baptists will, the Lord willing, meet with the Big Blue Church, in Johnson Co., Kansas, sixteen miles southwest of Kansas City, and five miles southeast of Lenexa, commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Friday before the second Saturday in October, 1894.

We extend a cordial invitation to all sound Baptists, especially ministers of the gospel, to attend.

Teams will be at Olathe to meet those coming from the west and south, and at Seneca, on the K. C., F. S. & S. R. R., to meet those coming from the east. Come on the morning trains Friday to get conveyance.

W. L. HALL, Clerk.

THE Corresponding meeting of Virginia will be held, the Lord willing, with the Bethlehem Church, near Manassas, Prince William Co., Va., commencing on Wednesday, Oct. 17th, and continuing three days.

Friends coming from the north or east will come through Washington or Alexandria, taking trains from either place on the Southern Rail Road for Manassas, Va., which is about one hour's ride from either point.

Friends coming from the south will come direct to Manassas on the same Rail Road.

There is a morning train from Washington and Alexandria, due at Manassas between nine and ten o'clock a. m.

The place of meeting is one mile south of the station. Friends will be met and cared for. All who love the truth for the truth's sake, and the Lord's people for his sake, will be heartily welcome.

Affectionately yours,

J. N. BADGER.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the London Tract Church, Chester Co., Pa., commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Saturday, Oct. 20th, 1894, and continue three days.

Brethren and friends, especially ministers, are cordially invited. Those coming by rail will take the train leaving Baltimore, on the B. & O. R. R., at 8:45, and Philadelphia (Reading Terminal) at 11:26, on Saturday morning. Take tickets for Newark, Del., and there transfer to Newark Centre, on the Pomeroy Branch of the P. R. R., at 1:25 p. m. Ticket to Yeatman, where trains will be met in time for the meeting.

A. B. FRANCIS.

TWO DAYS MEETINGS.

It is appointed by the church at Otego, N. Y., to hold a two days meeting on October 17th and 18th, 1894, Wednesday and Thursday after the second Sunday in October. Our meeting place is in Otego village, only a short walk from the depot of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company's Rail Road. All lovers of gospel truth are cordially invited to attend with us.

B. BUNDY.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1892, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....	$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen.....	4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge.....	1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge.....	2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt....	2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1894.

NO. 42.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DELIVERANCE.

AN act of deliverance necessarily implies a former condition of bondage, or captivity, or restraint. It means freedom from something to which we were bound or subject. The Lord's people have abundant reason to know both the meaning and the sweetness of deliverance. It is indeed a daily realization all through the christian pilgrimage. Were we to raise an "Ebenezer" each time we are delivered, it would be a pathway with multitudinous waymarks. And were we to count up the different ways by which we have been delivered of the Lord, we would be amazed. Or were we to attempt to enumerate the times deliverance came through other sources, perhaps we would be astonished also; for in our count of the latter we certainly would never reach number one. Were our own arm sufficiently strong to deliver us out of the snares of death, of temptation and of sin, it would be presumption to call upon the Lord to perform for us the things we could ourselves accomplish. There are particular conditions in the different stages of an experience of grace requiring special deliverances, while others of more frequent occurrence may be classed under those which the apostle Jude calls the "common salvation." We are not to conclude, however, that those conditions which seem to be minor in character are of less importance than the apparently greater ones. My own experience teaches me that the details of my every day life, and every little incident connected therewith, are of as great moment as the instances which appear to be of more worth and greater weight. To present the complete type of the whole economy of grace, it is just as important that Sarai should be delivered out of the hands of the Egyptians, when Abram deceived them (through fear) regarding his relationship to her, as any other of the acts recorded of that memorable couple. For had she been defiled (although it were done innocently of any crime), it would have broken that perfect chain whose every link sets beautifully forth the way and plan of the salvation of God's chosen people. We dare not think a defiled Sarai could bring into existence the "child of promise." In this incident the lesson is taught us that although Abram was made the father of the millions of Israel, he was not given the wisdom to direct his steps aright, but was as weak and helpless and dependent as the weakest of his posterity. He needed the guiding hand of the Lord as continually as do the Lord's erring children to-day. The first sweet and comforting thought in connection with the deliverance of the children of spiritual Israel is the Lord's promise that he will deliver them from all their troubles. Even in the midst of dreadful conflicts with their enemies, or when assailed by and tormented with great afflictions, they have the hope of an eternal inheritance, which is the seal of the righteousness of Christ imputed unto them. The poor, tried soul who has a hope in the mercy of God, sees no possible way of deliverance, except in the atoning blood of Jesus. He is the Mediator of the new testament, and death must come upon him ere we can realize that the eternal inheritance is ours. The Old Testament Scriptures record God's promises which he made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and to his people by the mouth of the patriarchs and prophets; and all point with perfect exactness and constant uniformity to the one atonement, the death of Jesus. All the sacrifices and offerings upon Jewish altars, by the shedding of the blood of animals, pointed to the one great sacrifice, the shedding of the blood of the Son of God. The apostle sums up in his letter to the Hebrews the fulfillment of this precious promise of the eternal inheritance: "But Christ, being come an High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building, neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God. And for this cause he is the Mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead; otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."—Heb. ix. 11-17. Jesus, who is "God manifest in the flesh," hath delivered his people by the sacrifice of himself, by the shedding of his own precious blood. And this is the highest proof of the bestowal of a perfect love, that he died, not for his friends, but when we were yet enemies he died for us, because he loved us. Of this lovely and lowly one who bore our sins, suffered for our transgressions, and by whose stripes we are healed, the Father said, "If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments, if they break my statutes and keep not my commandments, then will I visit their transgressions with the rod [upon Jesus] and their iniquity with stripes [also upon Jesus]; nevertheless my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail." How wonderful and precious are all his promises! not a possibility of failure. There is not yea and nay in the promises of God in Christ Jesus, "For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God by us." The whole plan of deliverance of the bride of Christ, from the entrance of sin into the world until the great sacrifice upon Calvary, was all of Christ. He trod the wine-press of God's wrath alone, and there was none to help. God's own arm (Jesus) brought salvation. If I must write of deliverance, as coming to the Lord's people, I must of necessity write of Jesus; at the same time having my mind's eye directed to all the nations of the earth, as "less than nothing, and vanity." And I would also ask with the dear old prophet, "Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counselor hath taught him? With whom took he counsel, and who instructed him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and shewed to him the way of understanding?" And I would echo the assertion of the same prophet, "Behold, the nations are as a drop of the bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance." As the clouds of doubt become dispersed by the light of faith, and we see with perfect vision whence cometh all our deliverances, and that Jesus is the only door through which the lawful captive is delivered, the only balm in Gilead, the Physician who heals every disease with which we are afflicted. Being thoroughly rooted and grounded in the faith, that in Jesus dwells the fullness of the Godhead bodily, we can with greater clearness look over the way and manner of our deliverance. And while all are set free and can rejoice in the glory of the Highest, yet each one must tell his own story of the way the Lord did lead him. The lost sheep of the house of Israel, and every conscious Gentile sinner, who has set his face toward Jerusalem, looking for the consolation of Israel, with a belief in the truth that Jesus died to save sinners, all are alike burdened with the sore plague of sin. To each one Jesus manifests his love in the bestowal of divine mercy, and to each one he comes as aforetime he declared that he would, "As a thief in the night," when we least expect him, and in a way we knew not. Contrary to our expectation, he speaks peace to a soul that longs for rest. To some he comes as with a rushing mighty wind, and ere they are aware their burden is gone, they know not whither. To others, in visions of the night, when all is dark and drear, just at the time life is despair-ed of, and no hope near, and when death is at hand, life comes as a glad surprise, and darkness is made light. The birds sing a sweeter song, the midday sun shines more brightly, each little blade of grass seems to raise its tiny head in praise. The babbling brook, the sleeping valley, and the echoing walks upon the mountain side, all join in sweetest strains of heavenly music, in anthems of praise to the King of glory, who has come in and taken up his abode in the once burdened soul. To others, and, I am inclined to think, the great majority, deliverance comes as the breaking of the day, so gradual as hardly to be seen or felt. Link by link the chain of earthly hopes and desires is all taken away, and we discover, as it were by chance, that the world has lost its charms, and that we have a hope; such a little thing, but O! so sweet, so pure, so holy. Its silken tendrils are entwined about our heart. With fear and trembling we watch and pray, lest it should go away as it came. As with the others, our burden is gone, and we know not whither. But as we attempt to look back through the foggy days and the misty nights of the bygone days, we remember how at such a time our heart did burn within us by the way, as though someone spoke sweet words of comfort. At another time we were favored to look beyond this vale of tears, to a glory in the deep and unfathomable beyond. And as we looked, pressing forward, turning not back to the ruins of the earthly temple where once we reveled, our step grew lighter and stronger; and now we can say, This was the gate of heaven, and I knew it not. Our burden gone, we realize in our hope that the hope is Jesus, and that he began and has finished our salvation. We were blind, and he gave us sight; we were naked, and he clothed us; we were sick, and he healed us; in prison, and he delivered us. Having been brought out of death into life everlasting, wrought upon by many wonderful miracles, our sins and iniquities washed away in the blood of the Lamb of God, and remembered no more against us forever, we ask ourselves, Can it be that we shall need our gracious Redeemer longer? Can we not now walk alone in the strength of past deliverances? What more do we need of him, our great Deliverer, save to love him and praise his holy name? Alas! in our childish innocence of the first love, we think we will never more be troubled with sin and fleshly lusts. But how soon are our bright hopes shattered as we fall into divers temptations, and realize the need of a daily, yea, hourly deliverance. For as through our infirmities we die to the comforts of Zion, and the love of Zion's King, we are powerless to deliver ourselves, and so cry, and continue to cry, for deliverance. It is true, and graciously assuring to our souls, that we never can go back into death under the law of sin and death. That has been removed far from us, in the death of our dear Redeemer upon the cross. But so long as we continue to inhabit these fleshly, sinful bodies, wherein "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh," we shall continue to realize the need of our risen, living Savior, who is our Captain of the host arrayed against our enemies, to wit, the lusts of our flesh; for without him we discover daily that we can do nothing. And while he is our Captain, he is also the Rock of our salvation. What a safe and peaceful resting-place, as under the shadow of a great rock! How comforting to know that our Lord neither slumbers nor sleeps! His watchcare is constant and faithful. His arm is never shortened that he cannot deliver; neither does he ever turn a deaf ear to our entreaties. How refreshing and how soothing that we can lay our aching and weary head upon his breast and breathe out all our sorrows sweetly there. Jew and Gentile alike are nurtured under the banner of spiritual Israel, and they twain become one flesh, members of the same body, of which Jesus is the living Head. Great and marvelous are all thy works, Lord God Almighty! For thou hast delivered thy people Israel out of death, and out of every trouble; thou hast clothed them with glory and honor, even the glory and honor of thine only begotten and dearly beloved Son; and thou has set them on the right hand of thy majesty on high. May our lives be devoted to singing anthems of praise to thy glorious and matchless name!

B. F. COULTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 18, 1894.

"SAY ye to the righteous that it shall be well with him; for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him; for the reward of his hands shall be given him."—Isaiah iii. 10, 11.

This Scripture, with others of like import, is often referred to as proof of the doctrine of a universal salvation of the human family, based upon conditions to be performed by them; reference being had, of course, to their deliverance from sin, to eternally live with God and his Christ. For this purpose my attention was called to it recently by a highly esteemed friend who has not as yet, I fear, fully entered into his rest; "for he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his." After some thought upon the matter, I have concluded to write out some of my views, and submit them to your better judgment; and if you think they would be of any general interest to the household of faith, you can publish them; if not, all will be well with me; for I suppose I have gotten out of the subject all that is necessary for me, for the present at least. If published, and it should meet his eyes, peradventure the God of all truth may so apply it as to enable my friend to enter fully into the rest that remains to the "people of God."

With this end in view, let us see, first, who this message that the prophet was commanded to deliver was from, and for a time contemplate his name and character, as revealed in the word of truth.

The prophet, in the sixth chapter and first verse, says, "In the year that king Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne," &c. In the eighth verse he says, "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I, send me," &c.

It would be well to read the six opening chapters carefully, with a heart uplifted to God for the guidance of his Spirit into all truth.

Now, the Lord that the prophet saw "high and lifted up," and of whom the seraphim "cried one to the other, saying, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts, the whole earth is full of his glory," is the Lord God Almighty, that created all things by his word. "For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities; all things were created by him and for him," and for his pleasure.—Col. i. 16; Rev. i. 11; x. 6. This God is our God, and is infinite and immutable in all his divine perfections, of holiness, justice, mercy, love, truth and wisdom. He is omnipotent, and of one mind, and none can turn him. He takes counsel of none, but does his own pleasure in all things, in the heavens above and in the earth beneath. These things we should always keep in mind in all our search for divine truth.

From this awfully majestic and adorable God Isaiah received the messages at the head of this article, to be delivered to two distinct characters, but both belonging to the same covenant-inclosed people, of the same covenant-keeping God. We take up the book and read, and we find that from the first to the tenth chapter of this wonderful prophecy, all the judgments denounced and blessings promised, whether of a spiritual or temporal nature, were to and against God's chosen Israel, of whom Abraham was the covenant head; which covenant secured to his literal or fleshly posterity through Isaac (not Ishmael, nor the sons of Keturah) their literal inheritance, the land of Canaan, and to spiritual posterity, through the same child of promise, their spiritual inheritance of eternal life, of grace here, and glory hereafter; and the law (or covenant of works), which was four hundred and thirty years after, could not disannul this covenant, that it should make the promise of none effect. Observe that all the blessings of this covenant with Abraham, both temporal and spiritual, were unconditionally secured to all the heirs of promise, resting alone upon the immutability of the oath and promise of God.—Heb. vi. 17, 18.

The first or literal inheritance God had already placed them in the possession of, but in doing so had at the same time placed them under a conditional covenant, or a covenant of works; in other words, the ritual or ceremonial law; which, however, could not, nor did not, as before said, render void or disannul their spiritual heirship.

Now, to this chosen people under this legal covenant were these messages sent; to the righteous (they that abide by the law; for the law is the rule of right) he should say, It shall be well; for they should eat the fruit of their doings. But, to the "sinners in Zion," the wicked, the law-breakers, it shall be ill with him; for the reward of his hands shall be given him. As he had done to others, so it should be done unto him.

I might enlarge, but I must not be tedious. I want to call attention to the fact that God judges his people, and that his judgments denounced against his people are coupled with promised good, while to the heathen nations this was not the case. The chastisements of his people are for their correction, not for their destruction.

Now, of what I have said, the substance is this, that the language of the text has a literal application to the Jews under the legal covenant; and if space would allow, I would like to show that it also has a spiritual application under the covenant of grace, or the gospel dispensation. I will cite a parallel passage from the 89th Psalm. "I will visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes. Nevertheless my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that has gone out of my mouth."

Every covenant has its seal, and this one, securing the land of Canaan to Israel, was in the flesh; that is, the seal was "outward in the flesh," but the seal of that which secures all spiritual blessings in Christ, is inward, in the heart, whose praise is of God, and not of men, and reads thus: "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people: and they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest. For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." I believe we might emphasize the wills and shalls in this citation, and do no violence to the harmony of the Scriptures; for Jesus says (speaking of himself), "Thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give [not sell or barter] eternal life [to whom?] to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

But I shall have to sum up just in this way: The fleshly Jew that was under law to Moses, by his wickedness (disobedience) forfeited his rights to the blessings of the land into which God had unconditionally put them, also to suffer severe chastisement. So the spiritual Jew, who is under law to Christ, by his disobedience forfeits his rights and privileges in the gospel kingdom, of which he has been made an heir and fellow citizen. And as in the former case the prophets were to earnestly, vehemently declare to Judah his sins, and to Israel his transgressions, so in the latter case God's servants are to admonish, exhort and rebuke with all long-suffering and doctrine; "rebuke sharply." May the great Head of the church make his ministers bold and faithful; and not only "sons of thunder," but "sons of consolation" as well.

I now leave these broken and disconnected remarks, trusting they may do no harm if no good.

R. F. HAYNES.

OAK HILL, Ill., Sept. 23, 1894.

DIVORCE.

ABOUT four months ago I was asked this question, "Would you perform the marriage ceremony for one who has a divorced husband or a divorced wife living?" My reply was, "That would depend upon the circumstances of the case. I would not confirm a marriage which, though according to the law of an earthly government, is prohibited by the law of Christ. I would not marry one whom I could not afterward baptize, on account of that marriage, in the fellowship of a gospel church." I then explained, as I have done to individuals and churches, my understanding of the law of Christ upon this subject. I will now briefly present my views to the brethren generally through the SIGNS, and through any other of our periodicals that may be willing to copy this article.

On two occasions the Savior taught upon this subject. A record is made of both by Matthew, v. 32 and xix. 9. Luke records only one, which is the second recorded by Matthew.—Luke xvi. 18. I will quote from the sermon on the mount: "It hath been said [Deut. xxiv. 1], Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement; but I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." In Matthew xix. 9, where the Savior is replying to the tempting question of the Pharisees, the words recorded are identical with these, except that the man is said to commit adultery, instead of the wife who has been put away. It is true of both when they marry again; but the man who puts away his wife is the cause of her sin in this respect. Under the law of Moses, which is only recorded once (Deut. xxiv. 1), she was at liberty to marry another. The "saving" clause is not found in Luke; but that does not affect its force, as once recording it is enough. It is in both of the records made by Matthew. The sermon on the mount consists of the Savior's teachings especially and exclusively to his disciples: therefore I have quoted from that, as it especially refers to many of the teachings of Moses, and establishes the law on those subjects for the gospel church.

The saving clause is clear and distinct, and the force of such a clause is well-defined and settled. It is precisely the same as to say that for the cause of fornication a man may put away his wife and marry another. In any document submitted to the judgment of a court, the decision would be that a saving clause like this exempts the persons or things named in that clause from all the provisions and ordinances expressed in the writing. They are not meant by it, and it does not apply to them. They are left just as they were before.

Now, the provisions of the law concerning divorce are all in this one declaration of Moses. It is not found in any of the commands and ordinances given expressly by the Lord. Moses suffered the Israelites to put away their wives because of the hardness of their hearts; but from the beginning it was not so.—Matt. xix. 8. There was no provision for a divorce on account of adultery or fornication. The reason is very plain. It is expressly provided that the adulterer and adulteress shall die. It is never said they shall be put away. The statements on this subject are merely in two places, Leviticus xx. 10 and Deuteronomy xxii. 22. That crime brings the relationship to an end at once. From the time that crime is committed the husband has no wife in the sight of the law, nor the wife who has been thus sinned against any husband. By the command of the law of God the one who commits the crime is dead. The Savior, therefore, in speaking of the woman who has been put away being married, does not refer to one who was put away for the cause of fornication, for she was not put away by the husband, but put to death by the law; but he referred to the one whom Moses suffered to be put away because her husband was not pleased with her. She is still his wife, according to the teaching of Christ, and cannot marry again, nor can he. He might have kept her with him if he liked to do so; but one could not keep his wife after she had so sinned. The law took her away, and he had no wife. So also with the husband who commits this crime—the wife cannot keep him; the law takes him from her. She has no husband, and may marry.

It was near twenty-five years ago that this was especially called to my attention by a circumstance in which I must act. A man wished to be baptized whose wife was a member of the church. I learned that he had been divorced from a former wife, who was yet living. Upon inquiry I learned that she had left him, and had married another man. He then procured a divorce, and was afterward married to his present wife. As she, by living with another man, had committed adultery against him, I understood that according to the law of Moses she was dead to him, and that according to our Savior's teaching she was no longer his wife. Under the gospel such are not put to death, but are dead to the husband or wife, as the case may be; and the one thus released from the marriage bond by the crime of the other may marry again. So the brother was received by the church and baptized. I should have distrusted my judgment if I had been alone, although I could not and cannot see differently; but I was glad that my judgment was in accordance with that of Elders Beebe, Beaman, Conklin, and the other fathers in the church, so far as I could ascertain.

Your brother in hope,

SILAS H. DURAND.

DILLEY, Oregon, Sept. 17, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON:—The following communication being richly laden with the fruit of the Holy Spirit, I send it to you for your disposal, believing it belongs to the children of God.

Your unworthy brother, who sometimes hopes he has a hope,

J. K. BOYD.

SOME time in the summer of 1889 I had a great longing come over me to understand the Scriptures. I would get the Bible and read, and try to pray; but it did not seem to do me any good. I felt dreadfully depressed by spells, and could not understand what made me feel so. I kept getting worse and worse for about a year, when a Methodist minister came to see me. I did not tell him any of my feelings, but he told me that my husband and I ought to go to church. He said they were going to have their annual basket-meeting the next Sunday, about one and a half miles from our house, and we promised to go. I decided that if I would join the church I would feel better, and my troubles would be over; so when the morning sermon had been read the question was asked if there were any one present who wished to become a christian. I arose to my feet to go forward, when my knees began to tremble, I felt cold and scared, and sat down again. On our way home I declared I would never go to meeting again. I felt like I had done wrong, and was disgusted with myself and every one else. That was in August, and from that time on, all the summer, I tried to put away all my desire to read or pray. I would not talk with my husband, nor let him read the Scriptures to me. This state of things went on until one night in January, 1891. There was snow on the ground, and just after dark some one knocked at the door. My husband opened the door, and greeted very cordially a man whom I soon found out was an Old Baptist. He had not been in the house half an hour until he was talking to us about all those things which I had been trying to forget, how God loved us with an everlasting love before the foundation of the world, and gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life. O how good that man did talk to us! All night I sat and listened with every nerve on fire; but I would not say anything for fear he would think I was interested. In the morning he left us, and all my old trouble came back, worse than ever; and I hated him, and hated the very name of Old Baptist. After a few weeks he came again, and how glad I was to see him. He talked to me on the subject of "Two manner of people." I had been raised to believe in Spiritualism; therefore I thought that in the world to come our lives were to be taken up again, knowing those gone before, as father and mother, son and daughter. I could not believe his doctrine of all brethren and sisters in Christ, with God the Father as our head. He quoted passage after passage of Scripture on the subject, until my old belief began to be terribly shaken. After he left next day I thought I would go to work and search it out myself, and see how it all read; but I soon began to find out that I could not read the Bible at all. I prayed to be able to read, and to be given understanding and knowledge of the truth.

Another year passed in this way, with frequent visits from our Baptist friend, when one day I sat sewing by the machine, and heard or felt what seemed like a voice saying, "Read the birth and life of Christ." I did not pay much attention to it, thinking it was only imagination, or that my mind was overwrought on those things; but I would hear it several times a day and in the night. Everywhere I was I would hear the same thing said to me. At last I gave up, and read carefully the four gospels, and everything was made clear in a moment. I could see then that every word which that dear Old Baptist had said to us was truth. That night I could not sleep, and kept my husband awake to talk to me. I felt that I was a sinner, and the very worst sinner that ever was. O how bad I felt! It is impossible to describe my feelings with words. I told my husband that if I were to die I knew I should go straight to hell; that God would never, never forgive such a terrible sinner as I. He tried to comfort me by telling me that God had granted me repentance, and that in his opinion God had forgiven my sins. I prayed that night as I was never able to pray before. It seemed that my burden was lifted, and I was relieved, but only for a little while. In a few days I was despondent and doubting. I felt that God could never forgive such a miserable sinner as I, so unworthy of anything. It seemed to me that I was unfit to pray. Then again I would feel that my prayers were heard, and I would feel so happy that I could almost shout for joy. It seemed as though I would rather see an Old Baptist coming to see me than any one else in the world, they always gave me such blessed comfort. I felt that I had been fed, and I longed to be one of their members. I finally decided to tell the church some time, if I could, how I felt. In May, 1894, I went forward, but my tongue was tied; I could say nothing. I felt they must all see how miserable, how unworthy and how little I was. I could not even hope they would take me in. When the vote was cast, and I was accepted, I was so overcome that I could not speak a word. I felt they must be deceived, and that I had no right to be there as a candidate for place or name among those dear children of God; and if they could only see me as I could see myself they would know

(Continued on page 333.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 17, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

FELLOWSHIP.

IN reflecting on this subject we are led to contemplate that love which is the foundation of the true fellowship of God's elect.

The Redeemer informs us (John viii. 58), "Before Abraham was, I am;" and he has told us his delights were with his people from before the foundation of the world. Again, John says, "We love him because he first loved us." Before we loved him we could have no fellowship with him, and consequently none with the brethren; hence it is that the Scriptures present this as a test by which that question which so often vexes and troubles the child of God may be decided, viz., "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." But some may say, If this is really the case, why are the people of God so often perplexed by doubts and fears concerning their adoption? The reason of this is evident to every heir of promise as soon as it is the pleasure of the Lord to remove the cloud that is covering his mind with gloom: it is in this peculiar path that God's chosen are led in order to show them their dependence on him; and this exercise also is very useful in marking them, as a people, with that certain seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are his." But to return to our subject. As the Spirit of truth can have no fellowship with the spirit of error, so while we were enemies of God by wicked works we neither had nor wished to have any fellowship with righteousness; but when we were brought near by the blood of atonement, which cleanses from all sin, our hearts were filled with the love of God; and love to him led us to love the brethren in exact proportion to the fullness of the revelation of his image in them, and the exercise of his Spirit in us; so that the fellowship of the saints is directly the result of the eternal love of God shed abroad in our hearts.

The fellowship of the saints, founded, as has been shown, on the electing love of God, is that which is intended by the inspired singer of Israel when he says, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"—Psa. cxxxiii. 1. Well might the psalmist break forth into such an exclamation of delight, for every child of God finds ere he passes through many trials that as "Iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."—Prov. xxvii. 17. Also, the apostle exhorts the brethren to "Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called; with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."—Eph. iv. 1-3. And throughout the writings of Paul his great object seems to be to promote the fellowship of the saints in all things pertaining to the cause of the dear Redeemer, that the conduct of the church might be rendered as near to the rule laid down in the word of truth as possible. He says (Heb. xiii. 1), "Let brotherly love continue." In the experience of the people of God how often do they find the joys of fellowship in traveling through this dreary wilderness; and what child of God who has suffered the buffetings of the adversary for any great length of time has not felt his heart move with delight on meeting a brother in the exercise of the Spirit who has passed through the same trials?

The people of God are peculiar in their fellowship, as well as in all other things pertaining to the heavenly union existing between Christ and his church. They are not of that class which receives anything and everything but the truth as it is in Jesus; and it is for this cause that they are so much despised and detested by all worldly religionists and workmongers; as the Master says, "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John xv. 19. It was the pleasure of God to choose his people in a furnace of affliction; not from any necessity on his part, but of his own uncontrolled will, which yields to no contingency, but is the only Counsellor of the Deity. What amazing love and condescending mercy, that God, infinite in righteousness and justice, should choose a people among the sons of men, and not forsake them even when they were dead in trespasses against his holy law! But some may object, that the justice of God, which cannot behold sin with any allowance, could not admit of such a choice. Here is the principal glory that is revealed in the whole plan of salvation by the absolute and sovereign grace of God; this is a mystery which the natural mind and carnal heart of man can never understand and love, viz., how justice and mercy can be made to agree; or, "How should man be just with God?"—Job. ix. 2. Numerous and learned are the commentaries which have been written in endeavoring to justify God and clear his character from the imputation of iniquity in saving his sheep and rejecting the goats; but the authors have only succeeded in exposing their ignorance of the character and attributes of Jehovah; for if they had known him, they would not have had the presumption to undertake to justify him, but would rather have adopted the cry of the poor publican, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner," or of the prophet, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Here is manifested how far the wisdom of men comes short of the knowledge of God; but Paul under the inspiration of God found no difficulty in explaining this subject to those whose hearts were opened to receive it. He says (Rom. iii. 28), "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." This is, then, a decisive answer to Job's question, from one of those who are appointed to sit on the twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

John declares in the beginning of his first epistle that his object in mentioning the things which he had seen and heard was, "That ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." If, then, the "beloved disciple" thought it worthy of his attention to secure the fellowship of the saints by stating the things which he had seen and heard, or in other words, by relating what God had revealed of his grace to him, would it not be well for brethren in this age, according to sister Jewett's suggestion, to speak often one to another? In time past the Lord has not always been pleased to grant to his people the freedom from persecution which we now enjoy; and in those ages when the nations of the earth were combined for the destruction of the church of Christ, when the punishment for being associated with those who remained steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship was death, the brethren seemed to have more freedom to communicate with each other, and to express their fellowship, than they have now. In contemplating these things it has sometimes suggested itself to our mind that the trials and persecutions of the people of God are in exact proportion to their ability to bear them; and that when the church is nearest to perfection in doctrine and order, the rage and malice of the world is most excited against her. In the setting up of the Redeemer's militant kingdom in its visibility on earth, while the Master was yet with them, the persecutions of the world were, perhaps, as severe as at any subsequent time; and we may observe further that the Lord himself, being perfectly holy, harmless, and separate from sinners, excited the enmity of carnal professors and hypocritical workmongers more than any of his disciples. Now, why was this? Simply because their false systems of idolatry could not endure the purity of his doctrine and practice; for as Dagon fell before the ark of the covenant, so the inventions of men fall before the gospel of the Lord Jesus. But why could not a compromise be effected between the two systems, so that the offence of the cross might be in some measure removed? For an answer to this question we might simply quote the word of the Lord recorded in Exodus xx. 5, "I the Lord thy God am a jealous God;" but the apostle has replied to it by another question (2 Cor. vi. 14), "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? or what communion hath light with darkness?" Here we see that the apostle considered a lack of fellowship as a sufficient objection to any formal union; for "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" and where there is agreement, fellowship is a necessary consequent. As well might we attempt to distinguish between two streams of water after they have joined the ocean, as to prevent the hearts of God's children from uniting in fellowship when under the influence of the Spirit of God. Being alike born of God, and having tasted together the fellowship of his sufferings, it is not strange that they should so act towards each other as to lead the world to say of them, See how Christians love one another.

Perhaps there is nothing which causes more heartfelt sorrow to the children of God, or more rejoicing in the camp of the aliens, than to see difficulties arise in the church which mar the fellowship and break the peace of the family of God. Though in reality the children of God can never cease for a moment to love one another; for the apostle bears witness (1 John iii. 9) that "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God;" and the Lord has commanded by his Spirit through the apostle Peter, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently;" yet the visible church on earth is often seen troubled with internal dissensions. This apparent difference between the declaration of Scripture and the actual conduct of those professing Christianity has often furnished the opponents of all good with a weapon with which to wound the bewildered child of God; for when by the light of the Spirit of truth he discovers the corruptions of his own sinful heart, the accuser addresses him in language like this, "Now your case is decided; you have committed sin, and the apostle expressly declares that 'Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin;' so it is plain where you belong." But when it is the pleasure of the Lord to reveal to him the fallacy of the tempter's argument, and the true interpretation of that passage of Scripture, he is made to rejoice in that very same passage, which, under the false coloring given it by the evil one, had given him so much uneasiness a short time before; for by reference to the preceding part of the chapter alluded to (1 John iii.), it will be evident to those who have eyes to see that the argument of the apostle is directed to prove the total and complete justification of the saints, and this (the ninth) verse is intended rather as a reflection for the comfort of the children of God, than as a sentence to condemn them all.

Since the fellowship of the saints, then, is founded on their vital union with Christ, and their unity of spirit is in consequence of the fact that their life is hid with Christ in God, how shall we ever be able to ascribe sufficient thanksgiving and praises to his holy name for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins? Therefore let us rejoice that we are made partakers of Christ's sufferings, that when his glory shall be revealed we may be glad also with exceeding joy. When we reflect on the nature of this heavenly fellowship, our mind is absorbed in the contemplation of the magnitude of that love which none but the great and self-existent Jehovah could possess, which could embrace poor, depraved mortals, and raise them from their guilty wretchedness, and cause them to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; and we are led to exclaim with the poet,

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above!"

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 1, 1847.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

By a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

(Continued from page 331.)

that I was nothing but a poor, unworthy sinner, and had no right among them. My husband and I were baptized the same day. As I went down into the water it seemed as though a blessed peace and calm came over me; and as I came out I felt a joy and happiness indescribable; and as all those dear Old Baptists took me by the hand and called me sister, it seemed that I had been dead, but now was alive, and all through grace alone.

An unworthy sister in hope of eternal life,

IDA A. CASS.

MEDUSA, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—If I had the ability to convey my thoughts on paper as others do, how I would like to cast in my feeble testimony, even if it were nothing more than like the widow's mite. As often as I think of writing for the SIGNS to unburden my weary soul, I think I feel humbled in the dust and very small. Then I say within myself, It is better for me to sit at the feet of my brethren and sisters of like precious faith, and listen to the gracious words which fall from their lips. We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love them and their testimony, and the eternal truth which proceeds from the throne of grace. Every word of God is pure; and we are informed that his word shall not return unto him void.

In reading the last number of the SIGNS I could witness with Elder Chick that Elder Purington's words had distilled upon my soul like the dew upon the tender herb, and I felt exceedingly comforted; so much so that I felt to shout aloud, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward man." Yes, indeed, my soul would be so lifted up in the truth of God's word, and it was so sweet to my taste, that I could sing praises for his marvelous works unto the children of men, and say, Eat, O friends, yea, drink abundantly from the wells of salvation. For the Lord has comforted his people, and made them to lie down in green pastures. He has filled the longing soul with goodness and fatness. He has abundantly blessed the provision of his house, and satisfied his poor with bread. The psalmist exclaimed, "O how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee!" What exalted views the psalmist had of God's goodness and mercy to the children of men. He said, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord, and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance." "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputed not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile."

I feel that I cannot let the opportunity pass without speaking of Elder Purington's communication in the SIGNS of eleven years ago this fall. He took for a foundation of his remarks the words, "On this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." I was in a very low state of mind at that time, and in reading it O what a thrill of joy entered my soul! It lasted me forty days, and yet it is with me. O how sweet and good the word of the Lord is when applied by the Spirit to our souls!

I am glad the Lord put it into your heart to republish the editorials of your father. I do love to read them over and meditate upon them; for his views of Scripture were what I believe.

I was edified in reading Elder Durand's views on the christian walk. I felt that it was a word fitly spoken, in due season, and like apples of gold in pictures of silver. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." I have always thought it the duty of the saints to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil world, to put off the old man with his deeds, as far as we can by grace given, and to put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. We are to let our conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ. "Be ye holy, for I am holy," says God. "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," says Jesus. I have always wished and desired to adorn my profession with a well ordered life and godly conversation; but do the best I could I have been a wayward child indeed, if one at all. The Spirit is willing to do right, but the flesh is weak. Sometimes I have been in divers temptations, manifold temptations, and my faith has been tried as gold is tried; but the Lord has been my deliverer, my strength, my song and my salvation, and by his help I continue until this day. I feel sure that all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution, reproach and shame from the world, and their names shall be cast out as evil. The servant is not above his master. If they have done these things unto Christ, the head, we can expect nothing more nor less, according to the word of him who cannot lie. The Savior has said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen, and have the keys of hell and of death." "To him that overcometh will I give to sit with me in my throne; even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." We must get understanding by experience of the fellowship of Christ's sufferings, and the power of his resurrection, in order to know what is the hope of his calling. It seems that the apostles did not understand until the Scriptures were opened to them, at a certain time. "Then opened he [Christ] their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." "Then said he unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself." I am so slow to learn, and so full of sin and unbelief, that I must have the lesson repeated to me over and over. Last summer I was doubting that I was a subject of grace, an heir of glory, when the words came to my mind in a moment, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Only those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious, and has power on earth to forgive sins, can realize the joy I felt at the time. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." How wonderful, how marvelous are his works to the children of men in goodness and mercy. "Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." The word of the Lord endureth forever, and is sweet to our taste. May we not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. "The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his."

Forty-one years ago this month I united with the Lexington Church, Greene Co., N. Y. I firmly believe in the final perseverance of the saints through faith. I long and sigh for home with Christ. Pray for me, brethren.

LUCY C. WHITCOMB.

FOREST HILL, Md., Sept., 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Inclosed find a letter from our dear and much afflicted sister Mary Parker. I take the liberty to send it to you for publication, as no doubt many of the readers of the SIGNS will be glad to hear from her, as I was, since she has gone from the hospital, and is now in the hands and tender care of dear sister Rounsavell. May the Lord sustain and bless them both in this vale of tears, is the prayer of your unworthy sister, BARBARA GRAFTON.

WARWICK, N. Y., Sept. 12, 1894.

MRS. BARBARA GRAFTON—VERY DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—Through the goodness and mercy of our covenant-keeping God, who works and none can hinder,

"Who plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm,"

I, in company with our dear, self-sacrificing sister Rounsavell, was permitted to arrive here in safety one week ago to-day, at six o'clock p. m. We parted with our dear friends at Philadelphia amid tears of heartfelt sorrow. I thought I loved dear brother and sister Coulter, and all our dear ones in Christ Jesus, before I ever met them face to face; but O how the blessed tie was sweetened and strengthened during those days and weeks of anxiety and pain, when dear Dr. Coulter visited me almost every day, and I learned to listen for his dear footsteps and the sound of his kind voice, as I used to listen for those dear familiar sounds in the happy days of my childhood, when my poor life was encircled with the love and watchcare of my dear, godly and God-fearing earthly parents. Now that they are gone, I often ask myself if the sheltering wing of the everlasting Father is round about me, if I am graven in the hollow of his dear hand, and underneath me are indeed his everlasting arms. It seems to me, dear sister Grafton, if any poor, sinful mortal ever had cause to be thankful to the Lord, it is myself, and that I ought to praise and thank him with every word, act and breath. But O! this cold, hard heart, so prone from the dear Master to depart. It seems I seldom seek him, seldom think of his great goodness and mercy, save when I can find help and solace nowhere else. And how often, O how often, am I made to cry, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner."

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound!
That saved a wretch like me;
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see."

I am so glad Paul was inspired to write, "By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." O blessed gift! far more precious than countless millions, more brilliant than the gleam of rubies, more priceless than shining pearls, more to be prized than the wealth of diamonds. Surely when we attempt to compare the riches of divine wealth and glory with the inexhaustible wealth of Jesus, it all sinks into utter nothingness. The earth with all it boasted wealth, together with the wisdom of man, becomes as nothing; a nonentity in fact. How a sense of all this takes away all self-importance, self-confidence, and strips us of all self-conceit, which seems such a natural element, at least in my makeup. My dear sister, how I am made to despise myself, to repent in dust and ashes, and to daily cry, Unclean! unclean! Surely when all these truths are brought home to us we can but say with the poet,

"Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

Dear sister, I cannot tell you how glad and, I trust, thankful I was for the pleasant visit you and dear sister Scarborough paid me. I did not feel one bit jealous when you said you were as glad to see dear sister Rounsavell as you were me. I tell you, sister Grafton, I am not worthy to unlace the latchet of her shoes. What a blessed privilege it is to be where I can daily see the faces of so many who are dear to me in the Lord, and with whom I enjoy sweet spiritual intercourse. The scenery here is delightful, and the mountain air most invigorating. No word of mine can express the grandeur of the scenery upon which I was permitted to feast as we were whirled along on our trip here, with the smooth, unrippled surface of the Delaware River on the one side, and the grand old Blue Ridge Mountains on the other. O! how God's mighty handiworks do praise him.

Dear Elder Beebe just favored me with a call. He is looking quite well. He brought me the very pleasant news that dear Elder H. M. Curry, of Lebanon, Ohio, so near my own dear home, will favor me with a call this coming Friday. How glad it makes me!

Although it is not very pleasant to be in a hospital, I became much attached to many of my nurses and my attendant physician, and it really touched me very deeply to give them good-by. Of Dr. Gooddell's skill as a surgeon, and Dr. Jofson's medical attentions to myself, and his unsurpassed skill in one so young, I feel I cannot speak too highly; and never, while reason lasts, can I cease to feel grateful to them and to my dearest Lord for the benefit I have received, and for the comforting assurance that I am now rid of the malignant trouble that of all my complications gave me the greatest pain. I now sit up some every day, although not long at a time. Strange to say, the fatigue of moving about, or any undue physical exertion, seems to aggravate my dropsical trouble; yet through dear sister Rounsavell's wise administrations I hope to yet be relieved of dropsy.

I would like to again express my thanks to you and the many dear ones who so generously contributed to the funds to aid in my financial comfort; but I feel unable to do so. May he who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me," reward and bless you all. Please remember me in love to Elder Grafton, sister Scarborough, and all who may inquire after me.

With love and best wishes to yourself, I am sincerely and affectionately your sister,

MARY PARKER.

PINSONFORK, Ky., July 20, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SONS—DEAR BROTHERS IN CHRIST:—I inclose you a short but very interesting letter. It was written by a very precious sister, and I think it would be read by the many readers of the SIGNS with comfort. This seems to be a trying time with the Lord's people, and also a time that their pure minds are being stirred up by way of remembrance to discharge their duties and to communicate to each other.

Yours as ever,

W. J. MAY.

HURLEY, Buchanan Co., Va.

MR. W. J. MAY—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—This is a lonely Sunday to me, though a beautiful and pleasant day. I am thinking of the poor, wayworn ones who are so cast down, and feel themselves nothing, and less than nothing, and vanity. But the time will come when the wayworn ones, whoever they may be, will be done with the trouble and care of this life. There are some people here who are so simple minded as to say that we, the Old Baptist denomination, are a thousand years behind time. But I believe the time will come when they (Old Baptists) will be up with the times; for all that the Father gave to his Son will come unto him. I have no doubt but the Old Baptists are God's covenant people, the church, whom he gave to his Son, even before the world was; and they are the Israel of God. So all Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation. Of this I have no doubt; but I do have doubts and fears that I am not one of them. But the good part of it all is, "The Lord knoweth them that are his." Jesus said, "No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day." Then, "Salvation is of the Lord." Poor, finite man, while in carnality, claims many things that are vain and unscriptural. But the child of grace feels very small indeed; so much so that they have nothing to boast of; but, like the poor publican, they smite on their breast and say, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner," and are glad in the assurance that our God carries on his own undisturbed affairs, without the aid of Arminians. Arminians are stronger than Samson, in their imagination. But the time will come (or is and has been) when a class of people will call on the rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne.—Rev. vi. 16. The children of grace have nothing to boast of, but often fear that they are mistaken, and say, God knows our poor hearts. Then they appeal to their own experience, and upon a close examination they know there has been a change with them, but cannot be thoroughly satisfied of what it consists. I think I love the brethren and sisters, but I do not know that it is the right sort of love. I do hope and believe that I love Jesus, yet I am often times afraid that I do not. Dear brother, are you ever in this condition, in this state of mind? We, like sheep, have gone astray on all the mountains. We are poor, maimed, halt and blind, yet the Lord's eyes are over us. He knows who and where we are. I am oftentimes afraid that I am not one of the Lord's little ones, I have so many doubts and fears. I will close my scribble by saying, I hope to hear from you and yours soon.

MARY ANN SMITH.

RUNYAN, Ky., Sept. 5, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—By request of some of the dear brethren I have thought I would once more write something for the SIGNS; yet it does not seem to me that what I would write would be of any profit; but I hope God may direct my mind, that I may say something to comfort God's people. This is what the ministry is for, to speak comfortably to Israel. Yet they cannot do this, except as the Lord directs the mind. In the beginning God made man and gave him a law, the violation of which has sunk his posterity in sin. Out of this race God has chosen a people for the praise of his great name. God knew what man would do before he made him; for God is all-wise, and foreknew all things. Christ Jesus died for the sins of his people, and made ample satisfaction to the law they had violated. He paid the debt for us. We sold ourselves for naught, and had nothing to redeem ourselves with. It required the sufferings and death of Christ to redeem us from the dead state we were in, being dead in sin. "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins. Wherein in time past ye walked according [in harmony] to the course of this world." The people of God walked after the things of this life, as do others, before they were made to know the riches of the grace of God, which he gives them. Then they were saved by grace, and not by their own works. "With his [Christ's] stripes we are healed." That is, by the sufferings and death of Christ we are cured of our sins. He bore them on the tree of the cross. He gave himself a ransom for us, his people. Then we are the subjects that are redeemed from the law, and we are the ones who are born again. The word "again" means that we were born once, and of an earthly mother, and possess all the nature of the earthy man. That which is of the earth is earthy; and that which is of heaven is heavenly. Then, after we are born of the Spirit we possess the nature of the heavenly, which is Christ. Here is where the warfare comes in with God's people. They possess two natures, the earthy and the heavenly; and one lusts against the other, which causes the conflict. The battle-ground is in a man. The things which he would he does not; and the things which he would not do he does. This is the way with every one of God's people. They would do better if they could, but they are not perfect in the flesh; yet the Spirit runs after the things of God. The flesh is weak, so weak; and we fear that we are wrong, and that we are not born of God. We have doubts and fears, and fear that we will be in the way of the people of God, and harm the cause of God. This is all of the flesh. Those who feel in this way, from the depth of their heart, are the ones who ought to come and tell what the Lord has done for their soul; that he has forgiven them their many trespasses, and made them to see their vileness, and to know that they are sinners in the sight of God. The cause of this is light, which springs up in their heart, causing them to see what they are by nature—justly condemned sinners. From the time that I was made to see myself a vile sinner, it has seemed to me that I am in the way of God's people, and fear that I am wrong, and that I ought not to be among God's people. I fear that I am not born again. I have bright spots in my life, but at times I am cast down, and it seems that

"All feeling sense seems to be gone, Which makes me fear that I am wrong." I go burdened, bowed down, mourning because of my evil heart. Sin is in my flesh to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure. The people of God see that in themselves (that is, in their flesh) there dwells no good thing; but they see in Christ life everlasting.

Dear brethren, I did not think I would write so much. I thought if I would write a little my mind would be relieved for awhile of the burden that was upon it. It seems to me that I am oppressed on every side, cast down and perplexed; yet I am not destroyed. We bear the dying of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in our body when we are bowed down and feel the effects of sin. I think this is the meaning of that portion of Scripture.

The SIGNS is full of rich pieces from the brethren, but it does seem to me that I cannot write anything worth publishing in so valuable a paper.

I subscribe myself your unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,
JEFFERSON FARLEY.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE.

OCTOBER 10, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Kindly give notice in the SIGNS, for the sake of any brethren who may be interested in my whereabouts, that my residence and address after this date will be at 2028 Boston Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., instead of 6 Knapp Ave., Middletown, N. Y.

F. S. BRINK.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

(By the New Hope Primitive Baptist Association, of Arkansas.)

THE doctrine of the never-ending existence of the soul being of such vital importance, and the sincere belief of it a matter of such comfort and peace of mind to the children of God in this life, it might be well in this Circular Letter to examine it in the clear light of inspiration, thereby stirring up the pure minds of the saints to this blessed hope so graciously set before them.

That the soul is unending, or that it never ceases to exist, is a truth so clearly taught in the holy Scriptures, and so deeply impressed upon the mind and conscience of every rational human being by the God of nature, that it would seem none could for a moment doubt the truth of it. Man at his creation was given a place above every other creature; he was made in the image and likeness of his Creator. All other creatures were subject to him, and he was given to rule over them. The chief difference in man, and the pre-eminence given him over other creatures, and wherein lay his greatest resemblance to the divine likeness, was in a rational soul being created in him, being endowed with thought, reason, intelligence, and a sense of responsibility. Solomon says, in Eccl. iii. 21, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Elihu said, "There is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job xxxii. 8.

That the soul does not die when the body does, is proven by express passages of Scripture, such as, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."—Eccl. xii. 7. Our Savior makes a very clear distinction between the material body and the immaterial soul when warning his disciples whom to fear, and whom not to fear. They were not to fear those who can kill the body, and have no more that they can do; but rather to fear him who can destroy both body and soul in hell.—Matt. x. 28. The soul being immaterial, is therefore incapable of death, in the sense of ceasing to exist. There is a sense in which man, after the fall, and before regeneration, is said to be dead: he is dead in sin; dead to his former state and condition; dead to fellowship with God by reason of sin and transgression. He is corrupt, and his whole being so poisoned that he is said to be brutish, and like grass that withereth and falleth away; and he is said to have, in this sense, no pre-eminence above the beast.

Man, who was created in the image of God, and made the ruler of this world, did by transgression fall from that exalted condition, and brought a curse upon himself, and upon the earth for his sake; and in this condition he is like the brute that perishes.

The Scriptures do clearly teach that there is a principle in man, both in the regenerate and unregenerate, called the soul, or spirit, that never ceases to exist; and those Scriptures which speak of the destruction, death and everlasting punishment of the wicked, are no contradiction to this, but rather proof, in that their punishment could not be everlasting if they were annihilated or ceased to exist. The case of the rich man is clear evidence, to all who believe the Bible, that the soul is still alive and conscious after it leaves the body, and all the faculties of the mind in active operation; and that this respects the state of the soul between the death of the body and the resurrection of it, is manifest from the petition of the rich man. The translation of Enoch and Elijah, the transfiguration of Moses and others, the spirits in prison, and the souls under the altar, all prove the unending existence of the soul. The London Confession of Faith, with which all other Baptist Articles of Faith agree, says in so many words, "The souls of all men are immortal." The language of our Savior was very clear, when he said to the thief on the cross, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Paul the apostle, in speaking of what we call death, talks like one about starting on a journey. Dr. Gill, in commenting on Paul's language, says in his "Body of Divinity," page 411, "Death is signified by a dissolution of this earthly body. Heaven is represented as another house, into which the saints are at once removed when dislodged from this earthly house, the body. He adds, "This is no conjecture, but a certain thing, of which there are strong desires in the saints. Of this they have an earnest, and this will be as soon as they are absent from the body. Elder Hassell says, in August number of "Messenger" for 1894, "He who denies that the soul or spirit of man (that imperceptible part of man which is endowed with thought and will and conscience) is immaterial, and will endure forever (a fact inborn in the nature of every human being, and set forth plainly enough in all the Scriptures), is a superficial reader of nature and Scripture, and is, in such denial, an enemy of God, and of himself, and of the human race." Elder Gilbert Beebe, in the "Signs of the Times" of July 15th, 1875, says, "We do not know of any Scripture which says in so many words that the soul, body or spirit, of either the elect or non-elect, are immortal; but the Scriptures very clearly prove to our mind that all the human family possess a being or existence, call it by what name we may, which must continue to exist after the death of the body. The soul is in some cases spoken of in distinction from the body, and as that which after the dissolution by death may be cast into hell." Paul the apostle says, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." "For I am in a strait betwix two, having a desire to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better." Again, he says that to be at home in the body is to be absent from the Lord; and to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord. The apostle Paul expresses himself as being cheerful in his present state, being assured of future happiness, though he chose rather to be absent from the body; that is, to die, to depart out of the world. The interval between the death of the body and the resurrection of it is not one of inactivity and sleep, but one of happiness, in which the saints are employed in praising God, and in fellowship with him.

The principal arguments urged against the never-ending existence of the soul are such passages as speak of man as being but flesh, a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again; that his breath goeth forth, and he returneth to the earth; all of which respect only the death of the body. Again, the language of Job, "My days are past, my purposes are broken off," with other Scriptures of like tenor, are thought by some to disprove the unending existence of the soul; but these Scriptures relate only to this present earthly life, and have no reference whatever to the non-existence of either soul or body. Dr. Gill, in his able treatise on the "immortality of the soul," says, "If the souls of truly gracious persons are upon their departure hence insensible and inactive, what is become of the work of grace upon their souls? How does this well of living water spring up into everlasting life, when it does not spring at all, but the streams thereof cease to flow? What a chasm there must be between grace and glory."—Body of Divinity, page 412.

The sincere belief of the soul's unending existence is the foundation of all true religion, and the source of inexpressible joy and comfort to God's people. With what comfort and satisfaction does the apostle Paul speak of his departure from this world of sin, sorrow and disappointment, to the home God has prepared for his people. A king might take off his head, but what was that to Paul, after Jesus had told him to fear not him who can kill the body, and have no more that they can do? There is a principle in man beyond the reach of any slaughtering weapon; the sharp arrow cannot penetrate it, nor the two edged sword divide it. In this glorious hope the old battle-scarred soldier of the cross could exclaim, in the triumph of a living faith of what his Captain had told him, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." Why was he so willing to depart, to cut loose from the shore of time, and set sails for the other shore? His answer is, "Having a desire to depart, and be with Christ."

Where is Christ? Let the martyr Stephen answer, who says, "I see heaven open, and the Son of man sitting on the right hand of the Father;" and he exclaimed, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Dear children of God, can we not rejoice in this blessed hope, this sweet consolation? In the language of the poet,

"This glorious hope revives
Our courage by the way,
While each in expectation lives,
And longs to see the day."

When this mortal life is over, this life of pain, toil and sorrow, when the last battle with sin is fought, when the last victory is won, when the earthly house of our tabernacle is dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. We will be borne by angels, as was Lazarus, to the home of the redeemed, where, in ineffable glory and joy inexpressible, we will give glory and honor and everlasting praise to our God. In the resurrection these vile bodies, which are sown natural, will be raised spiritual, and soul and body will be united again, and in the likeness of Jesus will the saints be, and qualified to join the heavenly host in praising him who washed us from our sins in his own blood, and raised us up as kings and priests to our God. Destroy this hope, and we are of all men most miserable, without God and without hope in the world. Amen.

ASSOCIATIONAL.

THE Salisbury Old School Baptist Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the Broad Creek Church, Sussex Co., Del., on Wednesday, Oct. 24th, 1894, and continue three days. Ministering and other brethren and friends are cordially invited.

Those coming from the north will take the train leaving Broad St., Philadelphia, at 10:20 a. m., on the Delaware R. R., and those from the south will take the train leaving Salisbury at 2:02 p. m. (Old Point Express), and ticket for Laurel, Del., on Tuesday before the meeting. If it suits any to come on the Mail Train, leaving Philadelphia at 7:25 a. m., they will be met and cared for.

A. B. FRANCIS, Pastor.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE Old School Baptist Church of Schoharie, N. Y., have appointed a yearly meeting to be held at their house on Schoharie Hill, on Wednesday and Thursday after the fourth Sunday in October (Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st), at 10 o'clock a. m. each day.

Brethren and friends of our faith and order are invited to meet with us. All who come by rail will be met at Howe's Cave on Tuesday previous.

G. W. GUERNSEY, Clerk.

A YEARLY meeting will be held, the Lord willing, with the London Tract Church, Chester Co., Pa., commencing at two o'clock p. m. on Saturday, Oct. 20th, 1894, and continue three days.

Brethren and friends, especially ministers, are cordially invited. Those coming by rail will take the train leaving Baltimore, on the B. & O. R. R., at 8:45, and Philadelphia (Reading Terminal) at 11:26, on Saturday morning. Take tickets for Newark, Del., and there transfer to Newark Centre, on the Pomeroy Branch of the P. R. R., at 1:25 p. m. Ticket to Yeatman, where trains will be met in time for the meeting.

A. B. FRANCIS.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1-00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,
Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,
BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

H Y M N B O O K S .

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....	$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen.....	4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge.....	1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge.....	2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt....	2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1894.

NO. 43.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SABBATH.

A Memorial or Petition to the Elk River Association of Primitive Baptists, of Tenn., to drop the Twelfth Article of Faith, which reads:

"We believe that the Lord's day ought to be observed and set apart for the worship of God, and that no work of worldly business ought to be transacted; there are works of piety, mercy and necessity only excepted."

By common consent this would be understood to mean the first day of the week, or Sunday, as the day "to be observed and set apart for the worship of God." This conclusion is suggested in the fact that it is the custom of Primitive Baptists in part to observe Sunday and set it apart for worship. The language of the article is indefinite; hence this course of reasoning, to determine the day of the week meant in the expression, "the Lord's day," as there is nothing in Scripture to determine the day implied in that scriptural phrase.

It occurs but once in the whole Scriptures. It reads, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet," &c., recorded by John in Revelation i. 10. There is not one word or syllable in the text or whole context to denote any day of the week as the time of this wondrous revelation which John terms "the Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him," and which "he sent and signified by his angel unto his servant John." Nor is there any Scripture in the whole book that gives to this passage any such meaning as a reference to any day of the week. "Seventh-Day Christians" contend that John must have meant the Sabbath as "the Lord's day," because on one occasion Christ declared himself to be Lord of the Sabbath, referring to the Jewish Sabbath, the seventh day of the week, or Saturday, the only Sabbath mentioned in holy writ. This is far more plausible than any testimony which can be offered in favor of the first day of the week. They hold that as he is Lord of the Sabbath, it must be his, "the Lord's day."

The controversy is settled as to whether any day of the week is meant in the expression, "the Lord's day," by reference to other similar Scriptures. There are many such, to which Bible readers have never thought of giving any such meaning as that they refer to a day of the week; and yet they are just as specific and definite in reference to time as the one now under consideration, "the Lord's day." Peter, writing to them of the faith, foretells wondrous and supernatural events to transpire on the same day John was in the Spirit. In 2 Peter iii. 12 he says, "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." In Acts ii. 20 Luke says, "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come."

Joel the prophet foresaw a similar time. In Joel ii. 11 he says, "For the day of the Lord is great and very terrible." In Malachi iv. 5 we are told, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." The miraculous scenes and events depicted in all these Scriptures are very similar in all particulars to those which John saw on "the Lord's day," and, like John, all these servants of the Lord must have been in the Spirit when they saw them. The phrases are all as similar as the events described. Who can tell the difference between the expressions, "the day of God," and "the day of the Lord," and "the Lord's day?" An expression more pointed as to time than these even, if possible, was uttered by the Savior himself when in the gospel by John, viii. 56, he says, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad." Now, when the Lord calls it "my day," is it not "the Lord's day?" Paul alludes to a very definite and a very important day when he says, in 2 Corinthians vi. 2, God saith, "Now is the day of salvation."

Can any one tell which day of the week that is? The sons and daughters of regeneration rejoice to hope that it is every day for all time with them. It must have been the same day he alludes to when he says, in Ephesians iv. 30, "Ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." The same glorious day is specifically mentioned by Paul in Philippians i. 6, "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." What can be more consoling to the children of grace, of the promise and of hope, than this confidence of Paul, that he which hath begun a good work in them will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ? O glorious work! O glorious day! To every one of you it is every day; from the day on which you were born again, to the day of final triumph in him who gave you that second birth in the good work he hath begun in you.

But John concludes the question of the day on which he was in the Spirit when he says, "And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven, and swore by him that liveth forever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer." He embraces all time in this vision. He saw the end of time. The time of this vision could have no reference to a day. The whole thing is spiritual, and is addressed to the spiritual, "to the seven churches which are in Asia," and can only be understood by the spiritual, and not fully by them while in the flesh. "Blessed is he that beareth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy."

If, then, there is any special day of the week to be observed and set apart for worship, the authority for it must be found somewhere other than in John's reference "on the Lord's day." Is there a Sabbath for Christians to observe? All the references to a Sabbath found in the Bible are to the Jewish Sabbath, the Sabbath of the Mosaic law, the Sabbath of the old covenant. Can any one assign any sort of reason why the Sabbath part of the Mosaic law is binding on Christians any more than the balance of that law? Primitive Baptists, of all professing Christians, believe with James, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Keeping the Sabbath law truly, and yet disregarding all the balance of the law covenant, would in no wise bring the blessing of that covenant; whereas Baptists know that salvation is not by the law. Salvation is the promised blessing of the new covenant. We are taught that "no man is justified by the law;" and "the law is not of faith." "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law." "The covenant in Christ, the law cannot disannul." Thus spake Paul to the Galatians in condemnation of their desire to return to the things of the Mosaic law, such as circumcision, &c.

Baptists rejoice in the doctrine that salvation is by grace, and grace alone. It is "not of works [the works of the law], lest any man should boast." "And if by grace, then it is no more of works." So that under the covenant of grace there is no place for the works of the law. The called according to his grace all know this. If, however, it depended on keeping the Sabbath law, how much obedience were there in a pretended observance of that law which palpably and consciously disregards the day required by that law to be kept? A great and noisy pretense is made about the Sabbath, when by those most ostentatious and demonstrative about it there is not even a pretense of keeping the proper day. The only Sabbath day ever designated to man was the seventh day, or Saturday. The direct law on the subject is found in the ten commandments, in Exodus xx., in the so-called Decalogue. It reads, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."

Twice over is the seventh day mentioned in this law as the Sabbath, and hence it was the seventh day that the Lord blessed and hallowed, and commanded to be kept holy; and yet, pretending to keep the Sabbath law as the law of God to them, professing Christians have dared to change the day commanded of God in that law to be kept holy. In place of keeping the day specified, they have assumed to change the day to the first day of the week, or Sunday. Could anything be more impious or sacrilegious? While it is plain, from the word of God in the law which they pretend to regard, that they do not keep the day commanded, their Sabbath observance even aside from the question of the day is but a mockery, a false pretense. Their manner of keeping Sunday is no more akin to the Sabbath-keeping of the Jews, to whom this law was given, and to them alone, than if there were no such pretense in it.

The Jews were forbidden to kindle fires in their habitations on the Sabbath, or to go more than a Sabbath day's journey, a little more than one of our statute miles. The day was to them indeed a holy day; whereas Sunday-keepers, in their manner of keeping it, mock the very idea of it being even a memorial day, or a day sacred to the memory of a sacred event. They usually claim that it is in memory of the resurrection of Christ that they keep it, when driven by the plain testimony of the holy record from the claim that Sunday is the Sabbath. O what sin there were in all this mockery of memorializing the resurrection, if there had been any injunction by him to observe as a day in any wise sacred to his name or memory the day on which he rose from the grave!

Every kind of work is performed on that day. They wantonly and cruelly push the ox into the ditch in order to have a Sunday job in pulling him out. All kinds of public works are run on that day the same as others, factories and mills of every description, railroad trains, &c. Sunday is the favorite day for their preachers to make long journeys to do the work of the Lord, to save souls, provided the fee for the trip justifies. It is their ideal day for all sorts of demonstrations of a mixed mess of religion and politics, or other matters altogether secular; and they seem to think they are specially celebrating the day when engaged in what now seems to be their chief mission, the work of combining church and state.

That the Sabbath law (which is the only authority for observing any day of the week in the Old or New Testament) was given alone to the Jews, or Israel, is settled conclusively in the words of Jehovah himself, recorded in Exodus xxxi. 16, 17: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying," "Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed." Again, it is the seventh day which is declared to be the Sabbath. Language could not be more explicit than the terms of this law in excluding all others but Israel from its blessings and its obligations. Ezekiel xx. 12 says, "Moreover also I [the Lord] gave them my Sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them." Can it be that the Sabbath was given to the children of the covenant of Christ that they may know that it is the Lord that sanctifies them? Paul says, in Romans xv. 16, that the Gentiles are sanctified by the Holy Ghost. In 1 Corinthians vi. 11 he says, "But ye are sanctified by the Spirit of our God." Nowhere are they told that they are to know it by the Sabbath being given to them; and yet the limitation of the Sabbath to national Israel is even more direct in another passage, in Ezekiel xx. 20, wherein the Lord says, "And hallow my Sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God." Is this the way he makes himself known to the children of grace, that you may know that he is the Lord your God, brethren? You all know in your experiences, as well as from his sacred word, that it is not. This alone ought to settle this whole Sabbath question with all Christians. Other direct and conclusive Scriptures could be added showing that no part of the Gentile world was embraced in the Sabbath commandment.

In conclusion of this part of the subject your attention is invited to an editorial that ought to have great weight with all Primitive Baptists, because it is from the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, published at Middletown, N. Y., perhaps the oldest Baptist paper in America. It is certainly one of the oldest and soundest. Its founder (father of the present editor), Elder Gilbert Beebe, was one of the heroic men who rallied to the standard of the primitive faith in the celebrated convention at Black Rock, near Baltimore, Md., in 1832, and arrested the tide of Missionism and other isms that rose up about that time to overthrow the church. The editorial appeared April 12th, 1893:

"Are we, under the gospel dispensation, commanded to observe the Sabbath day? If not, why not?"

For the benefit of those who have been in the habit of hearing the gospel preached, or of reading the correspondence of the saints, it might be sufficient to reply to this inquiry with a simple negative, and assign the reason that the whole of that legal covenant, in which this precept is included, was expressly confined to the natural children of Israel, unto whom exclusively it was given. "And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them. The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day."—Deut. v. 1-3. Certainly no language could be more definite and exclusive than this. Throughout the Scriptures there is nothing to signify that there ever was any extension of the demands of that law to a single individual who was not embraced in the covenant of God as given to that nation. In confirmation of this truth God spoke by his prophet, "Hear this word that the Lord hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up from the land of Egypt, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities."—Amos iii. 1, 2. In all the denunciations of divine condemnation against the idolatrous Gentiles there is not an intimation of censure for their neglecting to observe the precept which enjoined the Sabbath day upon Israel. It is absurd to suppose that they were so careful to keep that day that they needed no reproof on that ground. Not even the patriarchs had received this covenant by which the sabbatic law was enjoined upon the nation whom the Lord chose as the type of his spiritual Israel, the election of his grace. There is no intimation of any injunction given from God by which man was authorized to observe any portion of time as a Sabbath until after the Israelites had been delivered from Egyptian bondage; nor can any precept be found in all the sacred Scriptures by which that sabbatic law was ever extended to include one sinner who was not a fleshly Israelite.

Aside from the presumption by which men have claimed to change the time of sabbatic rest from the seventh to the first day of the week, it is worthy of special attention that the most fanatical hypocrite who takes pride in his strictness as a keeper of that precept is not less guilty than the sinner whom he despises. The law of God no more emphatically forbade secular labor on the seventh day than it enjoined such labor on all the previous six days. On the Sabbath day the Israelite was not at liberty to attend religious services, or to stand in the synagogues, or in the corners of the streets, and make long prayers; the law required expressly, "Abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day."—Ex. xvi. 29. By their very religious devotions the advocates of sabbatic observance are themselves guilty of transgressing the letter of the law they claim to observe strictly.

Not only is it clearly recorded that the sabbatic law was confined to the nation of Israel, but under the gospel dispensation the saints are expressly commanded, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col. ii. 16, 17. There can be no other meaning consistent with the letter of this admonition, but that the saints are not under the dominion of the law which enjoined the observance of the things specified. While they were held under the law of Moses every Israelite must be judged in all these things according to the precepts written in that law. There is no more divine authority for the saints rendering obedience to the law of the Sabbath day than for their abstaining from those meats which were forbidden to the Jews. All those special ordinances cited by the apostle are certainly included in the handwriting that was against us, and which was blotted out, and taken out of the way, being nailed to the cross of Christ. For the saints to still endeavor to attain to justification by obedience to those precepts involves the denial that they are redeemed from the condemnation of the law by the atonement of our Lord Jesus. If they are still under the dominion of the law of sin and death, then there is no hope of their ever being justified; "for as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them."—Gal. iii. 10. Since the only righteousness by which any sinner can be justified before God is that which is complete in Jesus, those who still seek justification by the works of the law refuse to confess their entire dependence upon that salvation which is revealed in him. Since it is declared by inspiration that there is salvation in no other name but Jesus, it is a necessary result of looking to the law for acceptance that those who fall into that error are debtors to do the whole law. The truth is written that the curse abides upon all such. This is realized in the experience of the saints themselves. So long as they are looking to their own works for righteousness they bear the condemnation of continual failure. While carnal professors may attain such success in this slavish service of the letter of the law as to feel themselves holier than others, the light of the knowledge of God shining in the heart of the saint shows him the pollution of his best emotion, so that he cannot rest in that false confidence. Of course, the eternal salvation of the saints is secure in Christ Jesus; it cannot be made more sure by anything which they can do. But it is in their present enjoyment of the comfort of hope that they suffer loss in yielding themselves to the service of the law. They can no more find the answer of a good conscience toward God in trying to keep the law of the Sabbath day than in the effort to fulfill any other of its precepts. Peter characterized that law as a yoke "which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear." The result of the solemn consideration of this matter by the inspired apostles was recorded for our instruction. "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you [brethren which are of the Gentiles] no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well."—Acts xv. 28, 29. Nothing is said about the observance of any day as a Sabbath; neither can any precept or exhortation be found in the law of Christ by which the saints are authorized to do anything on one day which they are forbidden to do on any other day of natural time. The whole time of their sojourn in the body belongs to their Redeemer, and they are not at liberty to yield their members to the service of sin on any day; nor is there any moment when they do not owe implicit obedience to the perfect law of liberty which is written by the Lord in their hearts. Being bought with a price, they are not their own.

The advocates of Sunday-keeping seem to have a confusion of ideas on the subject. They have the idea of a memorial day and a Sabbath all confounded together. They insist that the Sabbath has been changed from the seventh to the first day of the week; but when they fail to find any authority for the change, except in the assumption of men, they then insist that while it may not be the Sabbath, it is a day to be kept in memory of the resurrection of Christ from the grave on that day. They say that he made it such to his followers by appearing to his disciples on the day he rose; and that the apostles so celebrated it by making it the special day for meeting to worship, to take the Lord's supper, &c.

They fail to observe that Christ in the fulfillment of the Mosaic law made an end of that law; and that nowhere in his law can be found a word regarding the observance of the first day of the week as a Sabbath, or a holy day, or a day on any account distinct from or sacred above other days; neither by way of changing the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day, nor as instituting a memorial day as a part of his or the new dispensation. When he was asked by the young man who was a ruler, and who desired to know what to do to inherit eternal life, supposing he was entitled to great consideration for having kept the commandments (which are the commandments?), the reply was, "Do not commit adultery, do not kill, do not steal, do not bear false witness, honor thy father and thy mother, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Is it not exceedingly strange that he did not include the Sabbath command in this enumeration, if it were to be a law to his followers? It cannot be said that he left it out by accident or oversight.

Not only does he fail to give out the slightest indication in his commandments of a day to be observed, as he enumerated them on this occasion, but in his sermon on the mount there is not a word of precept or doctrine to that effect; nor in all his works or words or ways or walks throughout his entire ministry is there anything of the sort.

In addition to all this, there is the testimony of Paul as to whether holy days or Sabbaths have any place in the economy or dispensation of Christ. In Colossians ii. 14-16 he says that Christ blotted out the handwriting of ordinances, and nailed it to the cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, "let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days." To the foolish Galatians, who had been bewitched, and who desired again to be in bondage under the law, he said, in Galatians iv. 10, 11, "Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." This certainly leaves no room for further doubt as to christian duty in relation to holy days or Sabbath days.

As to the resurrection of Christ from the grave on the first day of the week imparting to that day any sort of holiness, it is fully offset by the argument of Seventh-Day christians, that his sleeping in the grave on the day before, which was the Sabbath, was an example to all mankind of a holy rest, as was that of God the Father resting on that day when he had finished the creation, which is the reason given for commanding from Sinai, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy." The argument is unanswerable from any point of view that concedes the keeping of a day. If certain days are to be kept or commemorated because of some important event occurring thereon in the life and suffering of Christ, certainly the crucifixion day is not to be overlooked; for Paul makes the taking the Lord's supper point directly to the crucifixion. In 1 Corinthians xi. 26 he says, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." In Hebrews ii. 14 he says that it was through death that Christ might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil. In Hebrews ix. 22 he says, "Without shedding of blood is no remission." So then, on their own hypothesis, those who keep a day because of an important event ought at least to have regard enough for the crucifixion day to observe it once a year, and, with the Catholics, ought to celebrate Good Friday.

The appearing of Christ on the first day of the week to his apostles could not have had the significance that Sunday-keepers insist on, because we have positive proof in the first chapter of Acts that he was seen of them forty days. There is nothing in the account to indicate that there is any more importance attached to his appearing on one of these days than another; but because particular mention is made of certain occasions of his appearing, which are assumed to have been on the first day, it therefore is become a special day to his followers. If they would but read the first fourteen verses of this first chapter of Acts they would see a far deeper and more solemn significance in his showing himself to the disciples than any reference to holy days, or forms, or ceremonies of any kind. On the day it was discovered that the stone had been taken away from the sepulchre they were together at evening, being the first day of the week, and the doors were shut for fear of the Jews. Then it was Christ first showed himself to them. They as yet did not believe he had risen. He stood in their midst to convince them by their natural senses that he was alive, and that he must needs suffer these things because the prophets had spoken them of him.

His next appearing, of which there is any special account, they assume also to have been on the first day of the week. The account is, "And after eight days again they were within, the doors being shut, and Jesus stood in their midst." Now, how after eight days from the time of the first appearing could be on the next first day of the week passes all reasonable comprehension. The usual significance of language would certainly put it later than that. Thomas was with them at this second appearing; and the only special significance there seems to have been in it is that he too was convinced, as were the others at the other meeting. John says, "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." Then it cannot be that it was to teach any reverence for the day on which they occurred. There is nothing of that sort intimated in the account.

But all quibbling on this matter is silenced in the next appearing of Christ to his apostles, of which there is any account, other than that of his being seen of them forty days. This time they were about their daily calling, by which they earned their daily bread. They were together fishing in the sea of Tiberias. It could not have been on a holy day, or a day designed to become holy, or to be commemorated on any account. If so, he certainly would have rebuked them for engaging in their everyday calling; instead of which he signified his entire approval by assisting them in their work. They had caught no fish the night before; but when he stood on the shore the next morning, and told them on which side to cast the net, they were not able to draw for the multitude of fishes. Yet this appearing was as important as the others; the text shows it. But withal the day of the week is not mentioned; hence the necessary inference is that no special significance is imparted to the days on which these occurrences took place.

The meetings of the apostles on Sunday, after the ascension of the Lord, certainly could not give to the day more holiness than when he was with them. Indeed, the only account we have of their meeting on the first day of the week was when they met on that day at Troas to break bread; except when they met daily for a time at Jerusalem, which of course included the first day. When they were met on this occasion to break bread they were so indifferent about the day that they did not attend to that duty until the next day. Paul preached to them till midnight, and then went down and restored the young man to life who had fallen down out of the third loft, and was taken up dead; and when he (Paul) was come up again they broke bread, and he talked till break of day, and he departed. Their meetings after the ascension were for worship, and were not on special days. They were daily for a time at different periods. Their meetings on the Sabbath (the seventh day) are specialized oftener than on any other day. Before his ascension, when he appeared among them, they were not met in worshiping assembly. On the first two occasions they were together for fear of the Jews; for they were within, and the doors were shut. The third time they were about their daily calling.

Only one other special mention of the first day of the week is to be found; and that has no reference to a meeting of the disciples, or any other public duty. It occurs in 1 Corinthians xvi. 2, where Paul commands, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." This certainly could not have been a duty to be attended to as a public worship; for it is enjoined upon them individually, "Let every one of you," and is not to be done collectively. Then it must have been a duty to be attended to at home. Besides, giving alms is not worship; and so there is nothing in this to celebrate the day.

The striking thing in all this is, if Christ and the apostles designed that the first day of the week, or Sunday, should be regarded in any sense as sacred, a Sabbath, or as a memorial day, or a special day for meeting for any church purpose, they did not so command on some of these occasions. There is not a word to that effect in the whole New Testament Scriptures, nor can anything be claimed for the force of an example in any of these instances. The example has the same call on the christian world in the case of any one of the daily meetings, as that of the one meeting on the first day, numerically a stronger call; and so it is with the Sabbath meetings. The proportion of importance attached to the Sabbath over the first day, or Sunday, in the New Testament is about as fifty-nine is to eight, that being the number of times they are mentioned respectively.

One of the most wondrously strange things in the history of what the world calls the Christian religion (and it is full of strange things) is that there should have ever grown up among the professed followers of Christ this unaccountable disposition among all sects to regard days, and yet reject many other forms and ceremonies and festivals that have just as much scriptural authority for them as Sunday keeping has. It is unaccountable how the Catholic church failed to incorporate the whole body of Jewish rites and ceremonies and sacrifices into her system. Perhaps it was only because there was not room for them in consequence of the prevalence of so much of the Pagan system in that of Rome. Then it is equally strange her Protestant daughters, who copy so much from the Catholic system, did not copy it entire. * * *

If there is such utter absence of all Bible authority for Sunday regard, as appears in this view of the subject, whence comes so general a belief in it as seems to be the case in the religious world? The same inquiry might be urged as to many other customs and beliefs among professing Christians, for which Baptists believe there is no authority in the Bible; such as sprinkling and pouring in mockery of the solemn ordinance of baptism; infant church membership, without the preparation of repentance and pardon for original sin; baptismal regeneration; missionary boards to usurp the authority of the church in sending them forth who are to "go ye, therefore, and teach all nations;" theological seminaries, Sunday schools, and numerous other devices and inventions, to display the importance of man. They all, with Sunday keeping, are of the same brood, and were born of the traditions of man. Even as early as Paul's day, professing Christians had to be warned against the traditions of men, as in Colossians ii. 8: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." If Primitive Baptists are not utterly wrong in most things wherein they differ from the balance of the religious world, since Paul's day, there has already been that "falling away," and "that man of sin revealed, the son of perdition," which he foretold. * * *

It is unmistakably a Roman Catholic institution. The fact that her Protestant daughters have generally adopted it is no sort of proof that it is not of Catholic origin. The same fact would disprove that all the other institutions and beliefs named above are from that source. Catholics are candid enough to confess there is no authority in the Bible for Sunday keeping. They insist that the church in its "divine mission" has the right to make its own ordinances and institutions independent

(Continued on page 341.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 24, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

1 JOHN III. 10.

"In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil; whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother."

It is true that the testimony of this servant of Jesus is regarded by many professed doctors of divinity as being too mysterious for the comprehension of the poor of Christ's flock; yet when it is considered that all Scripture is by inspiration, and that it can only be understood by the teaching of the same Spirit which influenced the chosen ones of God to indite it, and which reveals the deep things of God to babes, while they are hidden from the wise and prudent of this world, we hope our brethren will not censure us for attempting to give such views as we have received concerning this passage.

The apostle seems to have had a view of the electing love of God, on which he dwells with rapture; and in the course of his remarks on this subject he is led to give some of the evidences by which it pleased the Lord that his saints should recognize each other in this vale of tears. These evidences are not as the Arminians would represent, to be found indiscriminately in all professors of religion; but, on the contrary, they are the only visible mark by which the children of the light are made manifest, and false professors can no more counterfeit them than the Ephraimites at the passages of Jordan could frame to pronounce Shibboleth. No doubt they may be very sincere in their efforts to deceive the Deity and make him believe that they possess the marks of his people, but his all-seeing eye can never be deceived; he knows his people from before the foundation of the world; and all the long faces, sanctified airs, and hypocritical obedience of ordinances in respect to the dead body of Moses, that the father of lies ever put it into the hearts of his servants on earth to practice for the purpose of deceiving, if it were possible, the very elect, can never pluck an heir of promise out of his hand, or smuggle one of those to whom the Lord said, "Ye are of your father the devil," into the green pastures where he causes his flock to rest at noon. Uncharitable as this may seem, it is nevertheless supported by the authority of that voice whose mandate moves the rolling spheres in one perpetual strain of symphonious praise to their Creator, before the scrutiny of whose eye the heavens are not clean, and whose angels are charged with folly in his presence; and we are not only willing to submit to it as a matter of necessity, but with all the chosen of God we feel to ascribe praises to God and the Lamb for ever for the glorious manifestation of his mighty power in bringing his people out of nature's darkness, in which they are found belching forth all the enmity of their carnal natures against God, and translating them into the light of the kingdom of his Son, where there is no need of the sun to enlighten; for the presence of God is an unceasing and boundless source of light to all those to whom he is revealed by the operation of the Spirit of his Son in their hearts, quickening them from dead works and offerings of their own performances, and causing them to rely wholly on the blood of the sacrifice which he has provided for all them that fear him, who are the called according to his purpose and grace, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, which cleanses from all sin. When they are brought by this way which they knew not, they can sing,

"Not by the terrors of a slave
Do we perform his will,
But with the noblest powers we have His sweet commands fulfill."

"Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God." This is one of those passages with which the evil one is ever ready to attack the child of God, for he well knows that the light of the Spirit reveals to the view of the bewildered saint all the corruptions of his nature, and humbles him under a sense of his own depravity; and while he is cast down in contemplation of his own ingratitude, the tempter, with all his characteristic subtlety, applies this passage to his case, telling him, If (for the devil is an Arminian, and must have ifs) you were a christian, this corruption could not be in you; for "Whosoever is born of God doth not committ sin;" but inasmuch as yourself must admit that sin remaineth in you, it is evident that you are not of God. In this way the poor soul is beset with the temptations of the adversary until he is made to feel his own weakness and insufficiency to do anything as of himself; and at the very moment when all his refuges of self-sufficiency are exhausted, and he finds himself sinking in deep mire where there is no standing, the Lord reveals himself to him in love, shows him the true meaning of these passages, and rebukes the tempter; and the child of God, released from the embarrassment of the doubts thrown over his hopes by the misrepresentations of the adversary, rejoices in the renewed evidences of his adoption, giving praises to his Redeemer, even the Holy One of Israel, for his deliverance. But how can the seeming variance between this passage and the promise of salvation to God's chosen ones be reconciled? There is none of all the children of men who can say with truth that he is righteous. It is well known that the scribes and Pharisees were the nearest to sinless perfection (speaking after the manner of men) of any of the human family; for Paul says that he was, as touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless; yet the commandment came, sin revived, and Paul died. Again, the Master himself informs the disciples (Matt. v. 20), "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Now, if our righteousness must exceed the righteousness of the Pharisees, it is necessary that we should be more righteous than Saul of Tarsus, against whom no charge could be brought even by the exasperated lawyers and Rabbis who were familiar with all the precepts of the law written on tables of stone. But, says one, if we are blameless, must we not be righteous? Paul does not profess to have been righteous in the sight of God, but only in respect to the righteousness which was in the law. This was not sufficient to secure to him an entrance into the kingdom of God. The law was never intended to give life; for if a law had been given which could have given life, then verily righteousness should have been by the law. But God has a chosen people, whose life was hidden with Christ in God from before the foundation of the world. Now, this people is involved in transgression in their fall in Adam, and therefore they are sinners, and under the sentence of death in common with all mankind; but there is a relationship existing between the elect and Christ their Head, by virtue of which they are released from the law of sin and death, and brought under law to Christ their Savior, who is their Life; as he says, "I am the Resurrection and the Life."—John xi. 25. Now, the righteousness of the Pharisees was something entirely manufactured by themselves, and the materials were furnished from their own resources. Just so with the Arminians of the present day; they work zealously to convert the heathen from the worship of idols, but at the same time seem themselves to be blind and not to see that they are assuming the work which God has reserved unto himself. The Master told the Pharisees that when they had made a proselyte, they made him twofold more the child of hell than they themselves were; and since the system on which they wrought was identically the same with that of the popular religionists of the present day, is it not uncharitable and unkind in modern Pharisees to deny their zealous Jewish brethren?

Neither he that loveth not his brother. It matters little what learned elucidations the men of this world may have published to gainsay or resist the truth of this assertion, it remains and ever must remain an indisputable decision of the King of Zion, delivered through one of his inspired apostles, and to remain until time shall cease to be. There is no danger of this decision operating to the injury of one of God's chosen people, because that wherever God quickens a sinner and reveals his Son in him, he gives him a new heart in which as a law or governing principle is written the love of God, and consequently of godliness. It is just as impossible to prevent the regenerated soul from loving the children of God in proportion as they bear the image of the heavenly as it is to make an unregenerated man love the doctrine of the sovereignty of God in the eternal election of his people, and their predestination to eternal life, which is given them in Christ from before the foundation of the world; for the new heart is love to God just as much as the carnal heart is enmity against God. Hence we see that while the church was in its primitive purity, though the world was unable to avoid seeing the love of christians to one another, yet they hated them and persecuted them. All these things, however, were foretold to the disciples by the Lord during the time when he was personally with them in the flesh; and he told them why the world hated them—because they were not of the world; for if they were of the world, the world would love its own; but "I have chosen you out of the world; therefore the world hateth you."

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 15, 1847.

THE SABBATH.

THE leading article in this number, written by brother Wm. P. Tolley to the Elk River Association, will, we think, commend itself to the majority of our readers. There is considerable copied from a recently published editorial in the SIGNS; but as the article would not be complete without it, we trust our readers will pardon our republishing it.

The subject is one of interest to all Old Baptists, and we believe will be read with edification and instruction. There is perhaps no tradition among our people that is more calculated to deceive the lambs of the fold than this hoary-headed heresy of Constantine's, that Sunday is the Sabbath, or the Lord's day, or more sacred than any other day of the week.

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

WE will continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

(Continued from page 339.)

of the Bible. Cardinal Gibbons, one of the highest dignities in America in that man-made organization (it would be well for Protestants to note that there are no dignitaries in the church of Christ, and to copy after Primitive Baptists in that particular) said in a letter a few years ago: "The Catholic church changed the day of rest from the last to the first day of the week, because the most remarkable of Christ's works were accomplished on Sunday. It is needless for me to enter into any elaborate proof of the matter. They (the Protestants) cannot prove their point from Scripture; therefore, if sincere, they must acknowledge that they draw their observance of the Sunday from tradition, and are therefore weekly contradicting themselves in claiming to be governed by the Bible in all things."

The Sunday institution grew up in the development and establishment of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, or the Papacy. That man of sin, the son of perdition, was established in a corrupt bargain between the Bishop of Rome, and his adherents, on the one hand, and the Roman Emperor, Constantine, on the other. They were each in great straits, and each glad to have the aid of the other in accomplishing his ambitious and sinful designs. The Bishop desired the ecclesiastical supremacy over all the surrounding churches. The Emperor in his effort to usurp the rule of the empire needed the aid of the Christians, then grown to be a considerable power in the Roman world, to establish himself securely on the throne. A union of church and state was then formed, by which each was enabled to succeed in his evil and wicked purpose. O! the curses and devilry that have afflicted mankind as the result of this illegitimate marriage. And so it will be always, as long as there is any sort of union of these two incongruous elements, church and state. For Christ says, "My kingdom is not of this world." And only evil can come of uniting the two.

About the first thing Constantine did in carrying out his part of the bargain was to issue his famous decree of the year 321 A. D., forbidding certain employments on Sunday. He was, himself, a Pagan before his pretended conversion to Christianity, when it became necessary to ally himself with that power to accomplish his political designs. So were many of the leading church dignitaries; hence the adoption of Sunday as a day of rest, as the great day of the sun, as it is called in the decree. Authorities are abundant that this is the first law, civil or ecclesiastical, setting apart Sunday as a day of rest. Some of them are here given. The Encyclopedia Britannica says, "The earliest recognition of the observances of Sunday as a legal duty is a constitution of Constantine in 321 A. D." Chamber's Encyclopedia says of Sunday, "Unquestionably the first law, either ecclesiastical or civil, by which the Sabbatical observance of that day is known to have been enjoined, is the edict of Constantine, 321 A. D." Alexander Campbell, who ought to be high authority with certain "Lord's day" people, said before a graduating class of Bethany College, in 1848, "Was the first day set apart by public authority in the apostolic age? No. By whom was it set apart? By Constantine, who lived about the beginning of the fourth century." On this immediate point attention is called to another paragraph of the editorial, already partly inserted, from the SIGNS OF THE TIMES:

To the second question of our correspondent it is sufficient answer to say that there is no shadow of authority in the inspired Scriptures for changing the day to be observed as a Sabbath. Certainly the Jews who crucified Jesus did not consider his resurrection from the dead as requiring the change of that sabbatic law which was given their fathers by the hands of Moses. The immediate disciples of Jesus had no reason for adopting the type of that rest which was fulfilled in the revelation of the gospel day. Nowhere in the New Testament is the first day of the week designated as the Sabbath; nor is there any portion of time set apart as peculiarly holy time to the church of Christ. The religious world, who devise their own laws, have established the observance of the first day of the week as what they call the christian Sabbath; but that very ordinance exposes their spurious profession, since there can be no ceremonial observance of days under the dispensation of the gospel rest. The saints are not under the bondage of the law of a carnal commandment; therefore they cannot give six days to unremitting labor, as was enjoined by the law of Moses. We know of no higher or older authority for the designation of Sunday as a Sabbath than the decree of the heathen emperor Constantine. When he claimed to become a believer in Christ he changed the doctrine to his own idolatrous system, and was as zealous in persecuting the saints after as before his professed conversion. The fact that he dared to establish by the power of the sword that which he called Christianity, of itself shows that he was utterly ignorant of that God whom he professed to worship. Following in his false claim of Christianity, all the Protestant daughters of the Roman hierarchy have united in the erroneous notion that the gospel church is but a modification of the Jewish organization. Evidently no truth can be built upon so false a foundation. Probably the substitution of the first instead of the seventh day for his Sabbath was made by that tyrant in order to humiliate the Jews. Certainly it was not done by the commandment of the King in Zion.

Other testimony of Sunday keepers may be added, such as what Dr. Heylyn, an Episcopalian, says of the early Christians holding meetings on Sunday: "For three hundred years there was neither law to bind them to it, nor any rest from labor, or from worldly business required upon it." And "yet was not this done all at once, but by degrees, the fifth and sixth centuries being well nigh spent before it came into that height which hath since continued." Another Episcopalian, Jeremy Taylor, says: "The primitive Christians did all manner of work upon the Lord's day (Sunday) even in times of persecutions, when they were the strictest observers of the divine commandments; but in this they knew there was none."

That Christians did not generally regard Sunday in the early times is manifest from the language of the twenty-fifth canon of the celebrated Council of Laodicea, in 364, A. D. "Christians ought not to Judaize, and to rest in the Sabbath, but to work in that day; but preferring the Lord's day [of course Sunday is meant] should rest, if possible, as Christians. Therefore if they should be found to Judaize, let them be accursed from Christ." They had a harsher way of dealing with Judaizing than Paul had with the Galatians for that sin. And this was about the beginning of the Roman practice of anathematizing.

Other proof could easily be had to establish the origin of Sunday observance, but no more is needed. If the Sunday question has been correctly presented in this argument, there certainly can be nothing in it to bind Primitive Baptists to retain the article in question in their church platform. And if this is not at least the correct Bible view of the subject, your able and faithful ministers are your sentinels to give you warning. Not one of them, it is conjectured, differs from this view in the main. You are urged to look alone to the truth of the matter. Certainly to follow a great Bible truth like this can lead to no ill results, especially since Primitive Baptists are so scrupulous to observe its truths in most things. It cannot be that you will be influenced by the prevailing opinion of those around you any more on this than on other Bible questions. From other denominations you are widely separated on all religious tenets. You are no more Protestant than Catholic. You never had anything in common with either. They are both Arminian, differing only in degree. They alike reject the doctrine of predestination and election, and salvation by grace alone. Occupying common ground in relation to the great fundamental truths of the Christian religion, it were but natural they should gravitate toward each other, as there are many signs they are now doing, particularly on this Sunday question. In the eagerness with which Protestants embrace this Catholic institution, and the co-operation of the two in the effort to have the civil powers committed to it, it seems the Protestant world is about to cause all men to "receive the mark of the beast." Are you to be a party to this wicked work? If you retain this article, and it be true there is nowhere "thus saith the Lord" for it, you will be found in very singular company for Primitive Baptists.

There is abundant Protestant authority to show that no injustice is done in associating them with the mother from whom they confessedly sprung. Sir William Hamilton, of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, Presbyterian, of course, declares that "Protestantism has gravitated back toward Catholicism, until the differences are only nominal." Prof. Philip Schaff, of New York, one of the ablest Protestant church historians, affirms, "that so many churchy and Catholic elements were retained by the Reformers that, as a growing consequence, much of the present Protestantism must be considered an apostasy from the position of Luther, Melancthon and Calvin." Prof. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton, N. J., an able Presbyterian theologian, makes the strong remark that, "the Protestant pulpit of to-day is as much in need of a thorough reformation as the Catholic pulpit of four hundred years ago." More could be added. This is enough to show who are your company keepers on this Sunday question, as brother Short would say.

The weakness, as well as wickedness, of the position of Sunday advocates is disclosed in their clamor for laws and legislation in their behalf. Less than a good sized book could not portray fully the character of the movement by which they induced Congress to forget its Constitutional obligations, and the teachings of our fathers, and decree Sunday to be a holy day by ordering the World's Fair closed on that day. The bitter spirit of religious persecution of the early Puritan days of New England is displayed in their manner of enforcing the Sunday laws in many of the states. Men are now under indictment for their religious opinions in Georgia and Tennessee, while others languish in jails in Maryland. One poor fellow in Obion County, Tennessee, R. M. King, was actually hounded to death by the Sunday prosecutors.

If there were any Bible strength in the Sunday idea, or any of the Christian religion in it, it could well be intrusted to the free exercise of conscience to sustain it. The bloody code of criminal law would not be invoked. Legal despotism would not be appealed to as the arbiter in matters belonging exclusively to the realm of conscience and reason, as does this Sunday question, as much so as any other religious question. Why not invoke the civil authority to settle such religious disputes as those pertaining to the mode and office of baptism, or to the question of infant baptism, or to that of an hired ministry, or to the many other disputed points of doctrine and dogma that divide the religious world, as well as this one? The same arguments urged in behalf of the Sunday as a civil institution can be urged with equal force in favor or against other institutions nobody would think of regarding as other than purely religious. As an illustration, the argument is often urged against immersion as a mode of baptism, that it is indecent and unseemly. What an easy stretch of the idea underlying Sunday rest as a necessary civil institution to promote the welfare of society would embrace also the suppression of immersion by civil law in the interest of public decency. As for that matter, only about as short a period of time as a century has elapsed since the cry resounded in several of the older states of the American Union, that a state religion, an established church sustained by the direct authority and revenues of the state, was a civil necessity to the community. To disestablish the Episcopal church in such states as Virginia and North Carolina, as a state institution, would result necessarily in the demoralization of society, it would be such a radical change from the existing order of things, and would argue so strongly against all idea of religion, that only evil could result. Baptists were then unmoved by such groundless fears, and continued in the even tenor of their way as among the foremost in disestablishing the state church and establishing religious liberty. And so they will now insist upon "rendering unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's," and upon non-interference by government in all matters of religious dogma or doctrine. A due reference to the principles of the church in their application to the things of this life forbids our being a party to any such wickedness as an interference in matters of conscience, under any plea of a civil necessity, or what not. You cannot afford to remain a party to it by maintaining a false doctrine that may even remotely lend encouragement to it; for you are too much out of harmony with the popular religion of the world on other matters of fundamental principle to hope to escape the tortures of a season of religious persecution now about to have a beginning in connection with this Sunday question. Let us prepare ourselves for it by clearing our own consciences of all possible connection with it, and then we can calmly await the judgment of the Lord. Trusting the church may be set right in these premises, I subscribe myself,

Your brother in hope,

WM. P. TOLLEY.

WARWICK, N. Y., Oct. 4, 1894.

MR. B. L. BEEBE—VERY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I feel called upon to tell the dear household of faith of the wonderful change that has by the mercy of God been wrought in my physical condition during the past few eventful months; and I know of no better way to speak to the many dear ones who have manifested an interest in my condition and welfare, and who have also so kindly and generously contributed to my comfort, than through the medium of our dear family paper; and if in presuming to do so the insertion of my letter should crowd out other and better matter, I sincerely beg you to throw it aside. For more than a year my almost unparalleled sufferings had been intensified, and the disease with its increased complications accelerated by the appearance of an internal cancer. The physicians at home said I had a polypus tumor; but that they were erroneous in their judgment, as they were incompetent to render me relief or aid, past developments have emphatically proven. Sometime during last May I became alarmingly worse, and for several days was so prostrated that I had not power to raise my hand to my head. During the time, my brother telegraphed to sister Rounsavell, under whose hospitable roof I am now so mercifully placed, that I was not expected to live many days, and requesting her to come at once. She speedily obeyed the summons, and, strange to say, found me much better. Through the advice of a number of physicians I had nulled my pain by the use of frequent hypodermic injections of morphia for seventeen years, until I had become a helpless victim to its poisonous, alluring and intoxicating effects. I kept the drug within reach, and increased and frequented the doses until I took an almost incredible amount daily. Finding my symptoms so much better in some ways than during her former visit, except those occasioned by the cancer, dear sister Rounsavell determined to break me from the galling chains of the morphia habit, and set to work at once to accomplish it. She gradually decreased the doses, the while striving to heal the fearful sores with which my body and left limb were almost covered, and in seven weeks broke me of the morphia habit, and during the same time healed all my sores. But O! the mental and physical agony I endured during the awful breaking up of those poisonous depths no pen could describe. In Materia Medica it is termed the "horrors of Hades;" and it is certainly that or "Dante's Inferno" intensified. But O! the joy I feel now that I am delivered from its clutches, and the thankfulness I feel to my blessed, tender and very pitiful Father, and to dear, courageous sister Rounsavell, whom I regard as my best earthly friend and true benefactress. It was not until all this was accomplished that it occurred to any of us that it was possible for me to go to a hospital and submit to an operation. Sister Rounsavell felt so strongly impressed that this must be speedily done that she wrote to Elder Durand and family, and both he and sister Durand wrote emphatically not to leave me until she saw me placed in a good hospital. She then at once determined to take me to Philadelphia. On the morning of the 9th of July sister Rounsavell and myself found ourselves on the cars enroute for Philadelphia. The ecstasy of my feelings after being shut in for seventeen long years, to find myself once again mingling with my fellow-beings in the busy outside world, beholding its beauties, feasting upon the grand and mighty handiworks of God, as we were hurled along across mighty rivers and across lofty mountains, through many cities, may be in some degree imagined, but not described by my imperfect pen. We arrived in Philadelphia at five o'clock a. m., having traveled one day and night. We were met at the depot by our dear brother B. F. and sister Coulter, Elder Durand and sister Hattie Walton. During my entire stay at the hospital I had the great privilege of seeing the faces of some of those dear ones in the Lord almost daily. I felt, I think, very happy and thankful, and as though my blessed Savior had brought me home to my mother, where I could sit down with his lovely and beloved people in heavenly places. After entering the hospital I had to go through a preparatory course of four weeks before I was thought in a fit condition to undergo an operation. It was a wonderful experience to me during my eight weeks stay in the hospital, and the most intense emotions, the most interesting and varied experiences and events of my strangely afflicted life seemed crowded in those few weeks. The sensation under the etherizing, when I first began to lose consciousness, was exceedingly pleasant to me. I felt myself being enveloped in a soft golden light that seemed heavenly in its dreamy and starlike scintillations. How soundly I slept, and how wonderful that I could undergo such a physical ordeal and transformation, and be unconscious of it all. When I came out from under the effects of the ether and through the operation I found myself on my couch, and a sensation that remained with me for days came over me that I had been asleep or in a state of non-existence for years; and how wonderful seemed it all. How great the wisdom, mercy and goodness of God! For days such an abiding sense of his mercy and tender care filled my soul as I cannot express. At times it seemed my gladdened soul must burst its bounds, or I must cry aloud that God is so infinitely wise and holy and good, or I must shout aloud his praises in the presence of everyone. Dear brother Coulter was present at my operation. I feel that great praise and gratitude is due from me to Dr. Gooddell, my operating surgeon, and also to Dr. Jopson, my medical attendant, for their efficient skill and attentions. But with them it was a matter of business, and advancement of their personal reputation as learned and skillful men of medicine; and O how comforting it was to have someone who through the oneness we have in Christ with me who did feel an interest in my welfare. Yet how infinitely strong, how comforting, it was to feel that the everlasting Arm was underneath and about me, and that he who loveth at all times, and who sticketh closer than a brother, who will never leave nor forsake his people, shed his love about me and encircled me with his tender watch-care. How sweetly would often come these words as I lay there alone so lonely, prostrate and helpless, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." Surely no one ever had cause to feel the depth and tenderness of an earthly father's pity more sweetly and deeply than I have. And when we feel the tender pity of our heavenly Father's love filling our whole being, how restful and secure we feel. Like a helpless child we gladly lay our hand in his, and down by the calm, clear, still waters we can sweetly say, "He leadeth me." How blessed and sweet and restful to my soul, after all the storms and billows that had washed its pitiless surges upon my soul, to be once more led into his rich, green pastures, to sit beside the calm, still waters, and to once more sit down under his shadow with infinite content and delight. What a blessing it seems to me, after so long dwelling disconsolate and alone beside the stagnant waters of Babylon, to once more be permitted to dwell with my own kindred, and to come unto Mount Zion, the city of our solemnities, the dwelling place of our King. Here I can almost daily enjoy the profitable and spiritual intercourse of Elder Wm. L. Beebe and family; and many in whose faces the beautiful reflection of our dear Savior clearly shines. Last Tuesday afternoon dear sister Rounsavell had me taken to the meeting-house in my wheel-chair to hear Elder Curry preach. It was the first time I had met with the Lord's people in a church capacity for over twenty-one years. The sweet memories it awakened, the emotions of mind that almost overwhelmed me, cannot be told. But how my hungry soul was fed and comforted by the sweet old story that is ever new (whose strains fell more sweetly on the ear than that of the softest, sweetest earthly strains), which fell so clearly and fluently from the lips of this valiant under-shepherd. Truly could I say, "It was good for me to be there." What great cause I have to praise and bless his holy name! How sweetly and beautifully have the rainbow colors of his promised "bow in the clouds" shone through all my pathway, and how truly has he verified his promise to me that he will never leave nor forsake! Although I am gaining in strength, I cannot walk, nor sit up long at a time. They did not give me any treatment at the hospital for elephantiasis, or the enlargement of the left limb, which has prevented me from walking for seventeen years. But through the mercy of God and dear sister Rounsavell's efficient nursing and skill, I have hope that I yet may walk.

With many heartfelt thanks to all the dear ones who have in my late contingencies so kindly remembered me, and much love to yourself in the blessed gospel, and to all the household of faith, I am affectionately your unworthy sister,

MARY PARKER.

CREATION OF MAN.

EDITORS SIGNS OF THE TIMES—
 DEAR BRETHREN:—I have written letters to you which you have not published, and there is no doubt with me that you acted wisely in keeping my unfruitful scribbles out of our medium of correspondence. But again, dear brother, I am impressed by some means to try to add my little mite, in keeping with the words at the head of this scribble. First, I must say that it appears to me of late that many good brethren would make it appear that God breathed into man's nostrils divine, immortal, spiritual life; and so, when man disobeyed God, by reason of his disobedience this divine, immortal, spiritual life principle died, and so was dead in trespasses and sins; not the man dead in trespasses and sins, but this holy, divine principle dead in the man. According to this, when Paul said, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins," he meant or had reference to that immortal, divine principle which died in man by reason of his sin. Now, brethren, I do not want to be understood that when I take issue with this I am waging war or seeking controversy; but I merely want to let the brethren know that I have not so learned it. I know it as I have been taught it. I understand there was nothing in or about man, when God pronounced him a living soul; that was spiritual or immortal. Now, to the law and to the testimony. What does it take to constitute a complete man? I think I hear you all say, "Soul, body and spirit." Well, God says to this living soul, body and spirit, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Well, did he die? Yes, all of him. Was it the soul part or was it the spirit part that died? God says of the man, or "living soul," yes, soul, body and spirit, or to the understanding of this living soul, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." So this living soul is the one who sinned, and this living soul did die, and was dead in trespasses and sins. Then it is not some part of the man that is dead in trespasses and sins, but the whole man. Just so it is not some part of the man that must be born again, but the whole man. So then, if Adam ever had eternal, immortal life, it was given him after we find him dead in trespasses and sins. So, again, by the disobedience of this man, or living soul, "sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so death has passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." I do not understand that this death stops at all being dead in trespasses and sins; no, it sweeps us all from the stage of action, back to the ground from whence we came. In the midst of the uncounted thousands that die by reason of sin, is the blood-bought throng, saved with an everlasting salvation, because of the great love wherewith God loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses and sins. For this purpose and to this end did Jesus come, to save his people from their sins. Who were his people? Those of the Adamic race, according to the flesh and according to what God had already done after the counsel of his own will in the ancients of eternity. He chose them in his Son before the foundation of the world. God is love, and love chose them. God is love, and love wrote their names in the book of life of the Lamb slain, from the foundation of the world. God is love; and this love was as great for us when we were aliens and strangers to grace, even when we were dead in sins, as it is now, that we hope we have been quickened and brought to the knowledge of the truth; for God is love, and changes not.

I understand that when God formed man, and pronounced him a living soul, he was only a natural living soul. Arminians say, God being divine, he could not communicate or give any other than a divine law; that therefore there must have been something divine about Adam to receive this law. I say that God could and did make or form a natural man, and then read or spoke to him a natural law; and this natural man did do what this law of God said he should not do; and so also he was driven from Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. Now, was it the soul, the body or the spirit of this man that must till the ground, or was it the whole man? I understand it was natural life God breathed into his nostrils, and nothing spiritual about it. God wanted a natural man, and God formed one of the dust of the ground. This man must have natural life, and God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. This Adam was the figure of him that was to come—Christ. Howbeit this first Adam was not spiritual, but natural. And now, brethren, I will venture a little farther, and if I am wrong correct me, and bear with me in my weakness. When Adam sinned he acted or developed what was in him. We see in Adam an inclination or disposition to sin, though we see this in him after God had told him what he might do, and what he might not do. Adam did have an inclination to do what we call wrong; for it seemed that just as quickly as God told him he should not do thus, he manifested a disposition to do thus. Where and when did he get this disposition? Was it after God said, "Thou shalt not?" or did he have it before? Where there is no law, there is no transgression. There was a time with Adam when he had no law, and he never did act out sin until God said, "Thou shalt not." God had a purpose in all this. Adam never knew his wife until after he sinned; therefore the first one born was a sinner, and so are all the rest. I know that this, "where there is no law, there is no transgression," by some is applied to little children. Again, "Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound."

Now, brethren, in conclusion, let me say that God knows them that are his. God knows me altogether. What I have intended to tell the brethren is this, I believe that God's people "were dead in trespasses and sins;" that all who are quickened are the chosen vessels of God's mercy. They are the sheep, the wheat, and they receive an earnest here. They mourn, they hunger and thirst after righteousness. They die by reason of sin, but in the resurrection their vile bodies shall be changed, and they shall see Jesus as he is, and they shall be like him. Then they will be satisfied.

I am a bungler. Do with this as you see fit. Yours with a little hope.

U. J. BELL.

PALESTINE, Texas, Oct., 1894.

COOPSTOWN, Md., Aug. 21, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—If I may thus address you. Please allow me a small space in the SIGNS to thank some dear brother or sister for continuing the SIGNS OF THE TIMES to me after my dear mother's death. While she lived I read hers, and enjoyed it. When she died I did not send to you to stop it, as it seemed to be so much comfort to me. It is the next best reading to the Bible. If I could write like most others I would like to write for it too; but I cannot. I have sometimes thought of trying; but thinking that I could not write anything worth while, I gave it up. I love the dear ones who do write, and love to read their letters, and wish I were as good as they are; but I am afraid not. There is so much sin in me, and I am so prone to do that which I hate, that I fear there is not much good in me. I want to be a christian above all things, and serve my dear Lord as I ought to do; but I come far short of it. Much of my time is darkness, and I cannot feel my Savior's love in my heart. I would like to feel him near always, and to love him as I ought, and to walk in the path that leads to heaven, for he is the one I want to see the most if I should get there; but if I ever do it will be all of grace, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

In hope of eternal life,

MARTHA E. GREEN.

BAXTER SPRINGS, Kan., Oct. 10, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—As my subscription to the SIGNS is past due, I will send you the money, and hope you will excuse me for so long delaying. I do not see how I can get along without the paper, as it contains such rich food, which suits my appetite. It seems like the brethren and sisters know what kind of flavoring to put in to suit my taste. I do hope they will keep on writing. I would write often, but I feel so poor, so cold, so dead, and my nature is so prone to sin, that it looks as though everything I do is mixed with sin. Sometimes my hope seems so little that I think I will throw it by; but sometimes it seems sufficient, even if I were called to die. I believe in salvation by grace, and by grace alone.

I wish some brother would give his views through the SIGNS on Mal. i. 3, 4, and Jer. i. 4, 5.

I remain your unworthy brother in hope of eternal life,

R. G. BOND.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

By a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

WHY IS IT

THAT in reply to our notices to delinquents so few respond? Certainly there must be some carelessness, brethren.

While we do not wish to distress any of our subscribers who are in arrears with subscription, yet we are compelled to again appeal to all who can make a remittance on amounts due to please assist us through our present financial cramp by sending on such amounts as they can conveniently spare. Several weeks ago we sent out nearly a thousand notices to delinquents, the aggregate of whose accounts amounted to about three thousand dollars, and thus far we have received only about three hundred dollars upon these accounts.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

MARRIAGES.

ON Sunday evening, Oct. 14th, 1894, by Elder Benton Jenkins, at his residence, Middletown, N. Y., Mr. Fraser A. McIntosh, of Tuxedo, N. Y., and Miss Lena L. Armbruster, of New York City.

ON Wednesday, Oct. 10th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's mother, Wilmington, Delaware, by Elder Wm. Grafton, Milton Dance, of Maryland, and Miss Jennie Sherwood, of the former place.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At her brother's residence in Dorchester, New Brunswick, on August 9th, 1894, Ella B. Milner, beloved wife of Robert F. Milner.

The subject of this notice was born in Dorchester, August 5th, 1866, and on August 13th, 1884, was united in marriage to Robert F. Milner, and moved to Amherst, Nova Scotia, in the year 1886. Five children were born to them, four of whom, with a loving husband, remain to mourn their loss of an affectionate wife and mother. An infant of five months was buried in the grave with its mother. In December, 1893, she was taken with "La Grippe," which terminated in consumption. Her physician ordered her to come to her native climate for her health. She came on May 17th, and after being here only one week was taken worse, and was never able to return to her home. She was a great sufferer, but bore her affliction with christian fortitude, never murmuring nor complaining. Her remains were laid in the Dorchester Cape burying-ground, beside her father and mother and two sisters.

"Ella, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening
When it floats among the trees.

"Dearest Ella, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

ETTA COOK.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BROTHER:—I will preach, the Lord willing, as follows:

Campbellsburgh, Ky., Tuesday night, Oct. 30th; Sulphur Fork, Wednesday morning; Little Flock, Thursday night and Friday morning, Nov. 1st and 2d; May's Lick, Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 3d and 4th; Mt. Sterling, Monday night and Tuesday; Mt. Carmel, Wednesday morning; Elk Lick, Thursday, 9th.

SILAS H. DURAND.

YEARLY MEETINGS.

THE Old School Baptist Church of Schoharie, N. Y., have appointed a yearly meeting to be held at their house on Schoharie Hill, on Wednesday and Thursday after the fourth Sunday in October (Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st), at 10 o'clock a. m. each day.

Brethren and friends of our faith and order are invited to meet with us. All who come by rail will be met at Howe's Cave on Tuesday previous.

G. W. GUERNSEY, Clerk.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS

OF

MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Our subscribers will confer a favor on us, and enable us to keep their accounts with more accuracy, by observing the following instructions:

HOW TO REMIT.

The most convenient and safest way of sending remittances is by post-office money orders, which should invariably be made payable to G. BEEBE'S SON, at Middletown, N. Y., and not at the New York City Post-office, and always inclose the order in the same envelope with the letter containing the information how it is to be applied. When it is not convenient to procure a post-office order, the money can be inclosed in the letter, and registered, and it may then be considered safe. We request that bank checks on distant banks be not sent, as they are subject to quite heavy discounts.

LOOK TO YOUR DATES.

Opposite the name on the slip pasted either on the margin of your paper or on the wrapper will be observed a date. This date denotes the time at which your subscription expires; and when a remittance is made to renew the subscription the date should be watched to see that it is forwarded to such time as the remittance pays to, and if neglected, by informing us, it will be corrected. By this method each subscriber has his own account, and can see that the proper credits are given for his remittances.

RULES FOR ORDERING.

In making remittances be sure to give the post-office and state of each name to be credited. In ordering an address changed always give the post-office and state at which the paper has been formerly received, as well as the post-office and state to which it is to be changed. When ordering the discontinuance of a subscription, give us the post-office and state as well as the name to be discontinued.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1894.

NO. 44.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!"—Solomon's Song vii. 1.

When a person has been in some distressing predicament, I have heard people remark that they would not care to stand in his shoes. Well, by nature all the offspring of Adam stand in the shoes of Adam; and it is a fearful and awful condition to be in before the holy and just God. Many who have no other than their Adamic shoes, appear to be content with them on. They strut along proudly, filled with self-admiration, saying, How beautiful are my feet with shoes! Having their feet dressed with their fleshly righteousness, they deem that their goings are pleasing in the sight of their fellows, and of God also. Our feet do some very loud talking. Those who are swallowed up in self-righteousness will be found making a tinkling with their feet as they are tripping along so nicely in their own eyes. They want the admiration of men. Ah, sometimes the daughters of Zion become haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks, and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, making a tinkling with their feet. But those who walk in pride, the Lord is able to abase; and if we are of God, he will so deal with us that he will hush such musical feet, and in our soul's desolations we shall sit down in the dust before the Lord our God.—Isaiah iii. 16-26. How are you shod? Are your shoes fleshly or spiritual, earthly or heavenly? Are they old covenant shoes or new covenant shoes that you wear? Before we were born of the Spirit, and brought into the liberty and consolation of the gospel of Christ, we might dress our feet ever so finely, and at our best we were only shod with defiled, carnal, earthly shoes, and in these shoes we were ever going astray from the paths of righteousness: all our steps were in transgression and sin. Now, when a sinner is called by grace and quickened into divine life, he ponders the path of his feet, and it will not be long before all the admiration of his feet will vanish away; for he will see that his shoes, like those of the inhabitants of Gibeon who came unto Joshua, are "old and clouted."—Joshua ix. 5. Then we are humbled, and feel it cannot be said of us, "How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!" Ah! it is our woeful experience to find that there is a print upon the heels of our feet, and in all our footprints the print is sin.—Job xii. 27. As the Holy Spirit (who convinces of sin) brings in review before us our past tracks, we are made to bow down in shame and grief before God, for all our footprints are iniquity. We see that our feet were never beautiful; that we never took a step that was pure and right before the Lord our God. Our Adamic shoes, old and clouted, have made ugly and wretched tracks; and as we are made to scan narrowly our goings, from the infancy of our journey to the present, we are constrained to see and to confess with mourning before the Lord that we have been rightly called "a transgressor from the womb."—Isa. xlviii. 8. What else but eternal punishment could be the just doom of such a transgressor against God? "These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." Our dear Savior saith, "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John v. 28, 29. This solemn doctrine felt in the heart of a poor, guilty sinner, that sees no way of escape, sinks and overwhelms his soul in the gloom of the shadow of death; and as he ponders over his ways, apprehensions of the wrath to come may well make his life sad. O how blessed through the mercy of the Lord to sing,

"Preserved in Jesus, when my feet made haste to hell;
And there I should have been, but thou dost all things well!
Thy love was great, thy mercy free,
Which from the pit delivered me."

There is, it is to be feared, very much tinsel religion among what is called Christianity; but the pure gold will be found in those who are taught of God. The true worshipers of the everlasting Jehovah are such as by divine grace have been brought and taught to worship him in spirit and in truth. "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."—Psa. li. 17. So you, poor, mourning sinner, humbled under your guilt, and grieving over your iniquities, are precious in the eyes of the holy One of Israel. His grace has brought you low, and has drawn a hell-deserving sinner like you to seek the face of the Lord. You shall not seek in vain; mercy and salvation are in store for thee; and though thy ways are crooked, and thy footprints are sin, the time of love shall come, when the voice of the beloved Savior of sinners shall cheer thy heart, saying, "How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!"

The holy Scriptures testify of the manifold relations subsisting between Christ and the church; among them is this one in our text, declaring the royal lineage of the saints. "Who-soever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God." Being born again, poor sinners are thus manifested as the seed of the Prince of glory. The love of Emmanuel, his labors and willing sufferings in behalf of his people, to redeem them from under the curse of the law, and to present them unblameable in his sight, has raised them up from the depths of depravity and woe, to sit with him in heavenly places, and to reign with him also; for he hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood. Glory be to the Lord! "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory; for the pillars of the earth are the Lord's, and he hath set the world upon them." All the apparel of the prince's daughter is the gift of the heavenly Bridegroom. Unto her he hath granted that she shall be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, which is her righteousness, presenting her all glorious and beautiful in his sight. The face of the church is comely with the imprinted loveliness of her Savior and King. Decked with his salvation and robed in his righteousness, the King greatly desires her beauty. He calls her name Hephzibah, for his delight is in her, and speaks to her heart, saying, "Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee."

"How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!" When the prodigal son returned home, "the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet." Surely they were not "old and clouted." Ah no! but beautiful new shoes, fit to wear with the best robe. Look at him stepping out of those old, ragged shoes, into the new ones! There he stands, robed in beautiful garments; and those feet that in times past walked in iniquity, that strayed so far away, now shod, O how beautiful are thy feet with shoes! The father said, "Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat, and be merry; for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry." It is written, "The Lord will keep the feet of his saints."—1 Sam. ii. 9. And the apostle Paul speaks of them, "Having your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace."—Eph. vi. 15. Such are the shoes that the Holy Spirit puts on the feet of sinners called by grace. All the footsteps of the elect of God, when shod with these shoes, are right and glorious. What say you, dear children of God? Do you not want your feet to be always shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace? O beautiful shoes, that make beauteous the feet of the blood-bought host! Thus shod, even a poor, vile sinner like me can walk in ways of pleasantness and in the paths of peace. While we were walking in our own fleshly shoes we were free from righteousness; we never could keep in the right way. Our God, who knoweth, hath said, "They are all gone out of the way." "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in the sight of God; for by the law is the knowledge of sin." The quickened sinner finds it very abasing, and a grief to his heart, that in his old patched up shoes his steps are ever straying from the way of holiness, which he yearns to walk in. He hungers and thirsts after righteousness; but the shoes of fleshly righteousness can never satisfy the longing soul of the sinner born again. While we were experimentally under the old covenant, our condition, our health, our apparel, our shoes, everything, was wretched. But when the time to favor Zion, the set time, was come, and faith in Christ Jesus was given us, then Jehovah changed our estate. Precious faith in the blood and righteousness of the Son of God healed our diseases and brought health and cure to our sin-stricken hearts. We were then arrayed in beautiful apparel, the imputed righteousness of Christ, and with our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel, we were ready to walk in peace with our God and with men. "I clothed thee also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skins, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk."—Ezek. xvi. 10.

Let us together, dear children of God, examine these shoes that believers in Jesus wear. These shoes have various names to describe them in the Scriptures, but they all are embraced in this designation, "The preparation of the gospel of peace." In whatsoever aspect these shoes are viewed, our soul's exclamation will be, "How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!" When faith, which is the gift of God, comes to the quickened sinner, he steps out of the old into the new covenant shoes. In the first shoes he stands guilty, a transgressor condemned. But when by faith in Christ Jesus he steps into the shoes of the preparation of the gospel of Christ, he stands complete before God. In the shoes of the first Adam he is a sinner, wretched, lost, undone. In the shoes of the last Adam, Christ, the Lord from heaven, he stands redeemed from the law and its curse; for Christ was made a curse for us. In these shoes he stands righteous before the Lord; for Jesus is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. In these new covenant shoes poor sinners experimentally find access into the grace of the justified, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.—Rom. v. 1, 2. Yea, the world, sin and Satan are put under their feet, while the melody of that triumphant song is felt in their hearts, "Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us."

Having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, what though our enemies, our sins and Satan, death and hell, array themselves against us? Shall we tremble and flee at the sight of them? O no! our feet are prepared (by faith in the blood and obedience of the Captain of our salvation) to run through a troop. God giveth us the necks of our enemies. Shod with such shoes, we trample them under our feet.—Psa. xviii. 29-40. Our enemies are found liars unto us, and we tread upon their high places.—Deut. xxxiii. 29. O believer in Jesus! shod with such shoes, like thy Savior, "thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder, the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet".—Psa. xci. 13. Look at the sight! There goes forth the stripling against Goliath of Gath. Is he prepared for the encounter? The world would say, No. With his staff and sling and five smooth stones in a srip, he draws near the Philistine. "Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand, and I will smite thee, and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcasses of the host of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel. And all this assembly shall know that the Lord saveth not with sword and spear; for the battle is the Lord's, and he will give you into our hands. And it came to pass, when the Philistine arose, and came and drew nigh to meet David, that David hasted and ran toward the army to meet the Philistine. And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth. So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine and slew him; but there was no sword in the hand of David. Therefore David ran, and stood upon the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath thereof, and slew him, and cut off his head therewith."—1 Sam. xvii. In the name of the Lord of hosts he stood upon the prostrate giant. How beautiful are thy feet with such shoes, O David!

Having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, we are enabled to walk even as Jesus walked.—1 John ii. 6. For our God in giving us these shoes for our feet makes his grace to abound toward us, that we always, having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work. "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass, and as thy day so shall thy strength be." When believers walk in the ordinance of baptism, how beautiful are their feet with shoes! Zacharias and Elizabeth were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. How beautiful were their feet with shoes! When members of a gospel church are found walking in the truth, walking in love, walking in tender-heartedness, forgiving one another, bearing one another's burdens, walking as children of light, how beautiful are their feet with shoes! What shoes have we on? Are we walking in pride, going on frowardly in the way of our carnal hearts? Then we have evil shoes on our feet. But are we walking humbly with our God, walking in the truth as it is in Jesus, walking in the old paths, and the good way? Then the evidence is that our feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace.

May our feet ever thus be shod; then shall it be said, "How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter!"

FRED. W. KEENE.

NORTH BERWICK, Maine.

[THE following extracts from letters written by the late Elders Wm. J. Purington and George W. Staton were forwarded by sister Susie L. Woolford, of Dorchester Co., Md., for publication in the SIGNS. Although the writers have passed from earth, their memory will long be cherished by those who knew and loved them for their works' sake.—ED.]

DAVISVILLE, Pa., Jan. 12, 1872.

MY DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—Your letter dated the 9th inst. was received last evening about seven o'clock. I began to feel considerable anxiety, as I had received no reply to my letter, fearing that you did not receive it; but when yours came last night I felt very much relieved. Yourself, dear father, brothers and sisters, as well as other relatives, are not forgotten by me; for I know that there are times when sadness will come with great weight into your minds as you think of the loved ones who were once with you, whose cheerful countenances you will see on earth no more, and whose sweet voices are hushed into everlasting silence in death. But you sorrow not as they who have no hope; for when you reflect that earth's cares and sorrows can disturb and annoy them no more, it tends to soothe your sorrows and drive away your grief.

My dear sister, there is a balm in Gilead for every wounded heart; and I have not any doubt but that you know something of the power of that balm, it having been applied to your lacerated and bleeding heart by the great Physician of souls and Healer of all the maladies of his loved ones. All things, yea, every event also, are under the direct control of Jehovah, who is the sole Arbiter of the universe; and as he has declared the end from the beginning, nothing can transpire by chance. There certainly is great consolation for his children in the glorious truth that his purpose is eternal, his love immutable, and his power almighty. When clouds gather thick around his children, and their pathway is hidden from their view, they can rest assured that their heavenly Father still loves them, and his arm is not shortened that he cannot save, but is the same God of love in the dark night of sorrow as in the day of gladness and rejoicing; for Jesus Christ is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever." Blessed truth to the heaven-born and heaven-taught.

My aged and venerable brother Woolford, allow me to say in this brief letter that I daily, yea, almost hourly, think of you; for I know that your afflictions are severe. You not only feel keenly the loss of so many members of your dear family in so few years, but you have deep anxiety about the little church of which you are a member; but, dear brother, try as much as God may enable you to leave the matter all with your dear Redeemer and Savior. Your sore trials and deep afflictions are so many marks or evidences that God is your Father and heaven is your home. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?"—Heb. xii. 6, 7. The inspired apostle upon another occasion said, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."—Romans viii. 28.

My dear brother, a few months or years only will have to pass before you will awake in that heavenly world, where grief, sorrow, affliction, tears and death are known no more, but where perfect joy and endless day will be known by all the redeemed family of our God. None of them, on whom God set his eternal love, can be taken from him, or shall fail of heaven and immortal glory; for God's word is, like himself, unchangeable. May our God sustain you while you are enduring so many and such deep troubles, and you be enabled to sing,

"Through many dangers, toils and snares I have already come;

'Tis grace has brought me safe thus far, And grace will lead me home.

"Yes, when this flesh and heart shall fail, And mortal life shall cease, I shall possess within the veil A life of joy and peace."

Sister Sue, please remember me to all inquiring friends, for I feel desirous for them to know that I have not forgotten their many acts of kindness, and should be glad to have the opportunity to reciprocate. * * * I hope that my friends around Fishing Creek may have the opportunity at some future time to make me a visit, as I should be glad to have them come and see me. I hope nothing will transpire to prevent my anticipated visit to your place in March next; but I have been disappointed so much in gone-by days that I dare not place much confidence in any plans whatever, but must say, "If the Lord will I shall live, and do this or that."

Affectionately yours,

WM. J. PURINGTON.

DAVISVILLE, Pa., March 24, 1875.

MY DEAR SISTER IN CHRIST:—Your letter dated the 19th inst. was received yesterday; and while I was pleased to hear from you, the information relative to your sister, Mrs. Anna Mace, was what I expected to hear. I am glad to learn that her mind is still calm, and that she is still so remarkably reconciled to the will of God in this (to her) dark dispensation of his providence. Should she still be living when you receive this, remember me kindly to her; also to Mr. Mace and the children.

My dear sister, the journey of life is mysterious; for mortals, while here in this world, have hope, disappointment and sorrow allotted them. Still they look forward, thinking their condition may be changed for the better at some future day; yet when a few years are past they go hence, to be here no more; and soon with you and me, and all now living, it will be said that he or she is dead. A few of the near and dear will mention our names for a brief period, but soon our names will be in oblivion, so far as the inhabitants of this world are concerned; and some note on the fly-leaf of some book may for a short time show that such a person once lived, or a few words on the gravestone may tell that our dust slumbers in the grave beneath. Nothing but the grace of God can sustain his children under deep trials and afflictions; but, adored be his holy and reverend name, his grace is sufficient for his loved ones in every trying moment. Were it so ordered that his children had no disappointments, sorrows nor afflictions, they could not know the sweet solace, the glorious upholding and reigning power of God's grace; for it is manifested unto his children as rich, reigning, free, discriminating and sovereign. For a purpose supremely wise and infinitely glorious, our heavenly Father chose his children in the furnace of affliction; not to destroy them, but to consume the dross, thereby purify them, and make them meet for his kingdom.

It should be a foundation for comfort (and in fact is, when faith is in lively exercise) to the poor, trembling lambs of Christ to realize that not a trial comes upon them by chance; and said the inspired apostle Peter, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." Professed earthly friends might desert us in our times of deepest sorrow, because their outward or seeming friendship might depend wholly upon our worldly prosperity; but if we are so happy as to be of that blessed number who were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that heavenly Friend will never, no, never leave nor forsake us; for though dark and dreary may be our pathway at times in this wilderness world, though loud may be the wailings of the storm, there is a hand of mercy near us in the darkest hour, though not seen by mortal vision. When all the troubles, trials and afflictions allotted a child of grace are endured and suffered, then such one will be released from this world of tribulation; and sometimes there is a peculiar sweetness in the words, "Welcome, sweet hour of full discharge, That sets our longing souls at large, Unbinds our chains, breaks up our cell, And gives us with our God to dwell."

Often do I think of the great change in your dear family during the past eighteen years; yet I am satisfied that all has taken place in exact accordance with the purpose of God, for he works all things after the counsel of his own will. Therefore whatever is allotted for us will surely come to pass; and we as individuals shall be so guided by the Spirit of God, or left to consult our own minds, or be led by our vile passions, in such a manner as to exactly fill up the "niche" in the building of God's eternal purpose ordained for us. I hope that mercy, grace, strength and patience will be granted you in all your trials and deep sorrows, to sustain you until you are called home, where pain, sickness, sorrow and death are known no more. * * *

Affectionately yours,
WM. J. PURINGTON.

BERLIN, Md., Jan. 12, 1865.

DEAR BROTHER WOOLFORD:—It has not been long, if my memory serves me right, since I wrote to you. I have not received any reply; but owing to your infirmities I cannot stand on ceremony, although I should be very glad to have a line from you or any of your family. * * *

My dear brother, our blessed Lord has seen fit in his all-wise providence to bring affliction upon us; and although we in our weakness, and ignorance of his plans and purposes concerning us, are unable to see how it is to eventuate in his glory and our good, yet doubtlessly such will be the case. He has assured us in his word that all things work together for our good, if we are his people, the called according to his purpose; and all these afflictions, which are but for a moment, shall work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. All our grumblings and fault-findings with the course of his providence are of the flesh, proceed from our carnal hearts, and are unbecoming those who have professed to commit themselves and all they have and are into the hands of God. Then let us all quietly await the unfolding of his purposes, and what must certainly follow, the glorification of our Lord Jesus Christ, and consequently of all who are in him, for they must be glorified together.

I am getting along about as well as I shall ever do while I tabernacle in the flesh. Sometimes I catch a glimpse of the divine favor through the clouds and darkness that intervene, my heart rejoices in the sunshine of the blessed Jesus, and I can look through all these worldly afflictions and say, with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." He has told me in his word, "Because I live, ye shall live also." I know he lives, and that is a surety that I shall live, if I am his. At other times distressing, doubting fears harass my mind, the deep-seated corruptions of my own evil heart, the temptations of Satan, all rise up and obscure the light from the Sun of righteousness, and I have a sad time of it. I am engaged three Sundays in the month trying to preach Christ as the only way of salvation; but my preaching is so barren, so cold and lifeless, that I often doubt my being called to the work. But necessity seems to be laid upon me, and woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel. I dare not throw off the yoke, although my fleshly feelings would prompt me to do so; and sometimes when trying to preach I have thought I enjoyed the divine presence, and have felt comforted and built up in the faith.

But my sheet is nearly full, and I must come to a close. When I commenced this letter I felt very dark and gloomy, and thought if I could only converse with some dear brother I should feel comforted, if only on paper; and while writing this I have felt as though I were writing to one who understood my feelings, and would sympathize with me in all my troubles. Soon all these troubles will end, soon all the redeemed of the Lord will be called home, and then we shall be ever with the Lord; no more partings, no more buffetings with Satan and the flesh. All will be spiritual and eternal, and we shall join in that song which will last forever. Not unto us, but unto him who hath redeemed us and washed us in his own blood, be glory forever. May the Lord bless you in all your afflictions. My love to all of your family.

Yours in the love of Christ,
G. W. STATON.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Juniata Primitive or Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Sidling Hill Church, Fulton Co., Pa., October 10th, 11th and 12th, 1894, to the Associations with which she corresponds, sends greeting.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—No language is sufficiently adequate to express our gratitude for the goodness of the Lord to us, his abounding mercy in sparing our unprofitable lives for another year, to meet your messengers once more in the flesh, all seemingly one golden chain of praise and thanksgiving to the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men. We feel doubly grateful to the Lord, in that he directed two of his faithful and tried servants in the way, having no other message to deliver but Jesus and him crucified. Surely the Lord's people have been comforted by their sojourn among us. May he further bless them with a double portion of his Spirit, that others who are not of this fold may hear and be glad, and rejoice in the Lord. Surely this people have been taught of the Lord, for they all speak the same things. We send our love to our sister Associations with whom we have asked correspondence. May God bless you all until we meet again, with Springfield Church, Huntingdon Co., Pa., on Wednesday after the first Sunday in October, 1895, and two days following.

E. V. WHITE, Mod.
AHIMAAZ MELLOTT, Clerk.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

IN this our epistle to the several churches composing the Virginia Corresponding Meeting, and to all who believe in our Lord Jesus Christ, we desire to call your attention to such matters as will command your consideration and profit you in their investigation. We do not know of any subject of more vital importance than Charity; and we will, if God permits, consider this subject in the light in which the apostle has presented it in the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th verses of the 13th chapter of First Corinthians. In these verses, it will be observed, there is no attempt made to tell of an effect that will produce a cause, or to tell the saints what they must do that they may have charity; but they deal with charity as a cause, and tell what is and what is not the effect of charity.

There is not a particle of matter, however great or small, in all the universe but that is governed, controlled and directed by law, and is by that law compelled to produce certain results. These results are the intermediate ends of God's purposes, upon the accomplishment of which depends the final end. Though the things of the spiritual kingdom are and must be revealed, they are revealed with respect to the weakness of our understanding. It is not to be supposed that we now understand as we shall when we are like him and see him as he is. Our conclusions are derived from the consideration of cause and effect. This is the basis of christian experience, wrought in us by God's power, though we know and understand but in part; but that which is the cause of heavenly effect in us, when considered with reference to God, is not a cause. It is only so experimentally and with reference to us. It is in this light we understand the apostle is considering charity in the verses we have under consideration. We should remember, however, that it is God who giveth charity, and who is the cause of all causes. Cause, then, with man is only secondary, when considered with reference to God, though it be primary with us. When we undertake to find out why or the cause of God doing what he does, we are lost in unfathomable mystery, and the undertaking only leads to unprofitable questionings and misleading suggestions. It is forbidden to all living. No man shall see God and live. The man who is born again is only capacitated to understand such things as are controlled by law; effect traceable to cause, and cause traceable to effect. Christ must be in us before we know there is a Christ. The spirit that confesseth that Christ is come in the flesh is of God. This confession cannot be made where the Spirit is not. We are not without law to God, but under law to Christ. The law of the Spirit of life is as infallible, unerring,

(Continued on page 350.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., OCTOBER 31, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

AN ABLE DISCOURSE.

IT having been our privilege Sunday, the 14th inst., to listen to a most able and instructing sermon by our beloved brother and Pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, we have persuaded him to write a synopsis of it, which we give in this number, that our readers may also have the benefit of it. While, of course, it was not possible to reproduce it verbatim, yet the principal points are given in the following article; and if we have any knowledge of the truth, we think our brethren will agree with us that it is worthy of the space it occupies in our columns, and will be glad of its publication.

Brother Jenkins, as nearly all of our readers are aware, has for years been associated with us in the editorial department of the paper, and as his articles have occasionally appeared they have met with great favor, as attested by the many references and commendations sent by brethren from all parts of the country. Ever since we have been deprived of the editorial assistance of our brother, Wm. L. Beebe, we have tried to persuade brother Jenkins to write for the editorial columns, but from a feeling sense of inability he has hesitated to undertake the work. But we hope now that he has thus written he will be encouraged to continue in the good work.

B. L. BEEBE.

BUILDING UPON THE FOUNDATION.

"ACCORDING to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire."—1 Cor. iii. 10-15.

It is well for us to remember that this epistle was written by the apostle Paul to the church of God at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. There were many disorders found in this church, many evil practices, to which the apostle calls their attention, and also rebukes them sharply for their schisms and divisions. In the matter of the Lord's Supper, they had turned it into a carnal feast, for the gratification of their fleshly appetites, instead of discerning in it the Lord's body. In the matter of preachers, instead of viewing or regarding them as men or ministers by whom they had believed, even as the Lord gave to every man, they evidently regarded them as instruments in quickening them into divine life. They were not simply expressing their preferences for certain ministers, but were saying that they were of (not for) this one and that one. "I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ;" as though Christ were divided. Says the apostle, "Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos?" Were they men ambitious for glory and preeminence among the people? No indeed. True, Paul was an apostle of Jesus Christ, but he gloried in being his bond servant, and a servant to the saints for Jesus' sake. Whatever he might have been among men before being called to be an apostle of Jesus, he now declares that by the grace of God he is what he is as a minister and a saint. Could any man possess greater natural advantages than did this man Paul, either as a moralist or as a scholar among men? Was anything that he had attained unto in the Jews' religion, or anything else in the world, an advantage to him in his ministry in the church of Jesus Christ? Let him tell his own story as an honest, truthful man and christian, and may God give us a willing mind to accept his testimony. He says, "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any man thinketh he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more." "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung," &c. In the face of the testimony of this inspired apostle, how can any man, professing to believe the Scripture record, declare and contend that worldly wisdom, human erudition, can and does enable a gospel minister to more ably declare unto the people of God "the testimony of God?" We are pained to hear anyone professing to be a minister of the gospel, declaring that many of the gospel ministry are making a public display of their ignorance by calling attention to the peculiar wording of certain Scripture declarations, because they are not acquainted with the Greek and Hebrew out of which such words were originally translated. If such worldly wise ones are what they profess to be, God will surely humble them, and make them ashamed of their boasting over their less educated brethren. "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." It has been said that when God wants an educated man to proclaim his truth, he knows where to find him, and will call him to the work. This is true; but it is not true that God calls any man to the work of the ministry because he is an educated man in the arts and sciences of this world: God does not work in that way or after that manner. It is not true that worldly wisdom, however desirable it may be in its place in the world, will aid one in "declaring the testimony of God." The ability with which a gospel minister proclaims the testimony of God is positively declared in the New Testament to be the gift of God, and not an acquired ability. This declaration is not at all inconsistent with what Paul wrote to Timothy, saying, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." A gift is one thing, and acquired natural ability is quite another thing. They should never be confounded by the children of God. "Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. * * * And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Is it necessary for a minister of Jesus Christ to study Greek and Hebrew in order that he may be prepared to "declare the testimony of God" wrought by the Spirit in the heart? How absurd the statement! Said Jesus, "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." How careful the apostle always was to assure the saints that all the ability with which he labored among them in the ministry was by the grace of God and by revelation. "Whereof I was made a minister according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power. Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ." "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it: and profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers. But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, to reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me.

* * * Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not." "By the grace of God I am what I am; and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." While the apostle did not, nor would I, glory in ignorance or lack of wordly erudition, yet he did declare that the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; that the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen; yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption; that, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." Can any of us believe from the record that the apostle Paul was lacking in natural ability as a man, or that it was not in his power to use excellency of speech? He tells the saints that he did not come to them with excellency of speech or of wisdom in declaring unto them the testimony of God; that his speech and preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power; and the reason he assigns for his manner of preaching was, "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." An able and highly esteemed gospel minister once remarked, while in a fleshly frame of mind, that the gospel was such a glorious thing that it was worthy of being set forth in the very choicest language it was possible for him to command, and he felt it was his duty to study his grammar and dictionary to that end. But the good Lord soon converted him from that error, and he was then satisfied to minister "as of the ability that God giveth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion forever and ever. Amen." It is sometimes remarked that it is the duty of the preacher to seek out acceptable words in setting forth or declaring the truth; and the words recorded in Eccl. xii. 10 are referred to in proof. Well, who is that Preacher who sought to find out acceptable words? Is it any other than Jesus? The late Elder Wm. J.

Purinton occasionally remarked while discoursing, and truthfully, that the church has but one Preacher (Jesus), although he uses the lips of many mortals in uttering his words. Did the Preacher really find out acceptable words? If so, where may they be found? We are told that they were written, and that they were upright, even words of truth. If they are not found in the record of the "form of sound words" which the Preacher through his inspired servants has given us, and which we are exhorted to "hold fast," where shall we find them?

It was indeed a wonderful providence and display of God's goodness which has given to his people of the present age the "King James Version" of the Scriptures; and no gospel minister need fear making a public display of ignorance while calling attention to the form of sound words therein given. The Erye and Spottiswoode "Variorum Bible," which is the product of the ablest scholars of the world, in which is given the various renderings and readings of said scholars, shows conclusively that the variations which they suggest from the "Authorized Version" really do not make it very desirable that we be in possession of their critical, scholarly production. On the contrary, to the average reader, I am satisfied that it is more calculated to confuse the mind than to enlighten it.

"Give me the Bible in my hand,
A heart to read and understand,
And I desire no more."

Let us remember that it was as an apostle that Paul was a wise master-builder; and according to the grace of God which was given unto him (nothing more, nothing less), he laid the foundation for the saints to build upon. Grace, not worldly wisdom, was given him (as also it is to all the saints), just according to the measure of the gift of Christ. "But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." This foundation which the apostle has laid, he tells us, is Jesus Christ. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation. He that believeth shall not make haste." Said Peter to the persecuting Jews, "This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Jesus Christ is the foundation stone which supports the building of mercy. Upon him the church is built. The hope of salvation and eternal felicity of all the saints rests upon him, and in him are all the promises of God to his people, which are in him yea and amen. As the foundation stone, he it is that unites all the parts of the building of God.

"Other foundation can no man lay." While in this sense there is no other foundation, yet we read of the twelve foundations of "that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." "And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb."—Rev. xxi. 10, 14. Here the apostles of the Lord Jesus are set forth as the pillars or foundations of the organized gospel church. The declaration of Jesus to them was, "In the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." It is also written in the prophets, "A King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Wherever the organized church of the Redeemer is found, these twelve foundations, judges, apostles, will be found, and their authority recognized. There can be no real gospel organization where this is denied. When Jesus, the King, sent his apostles or princes to preach, and to baptize believers, he commanded them, saying, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." The doctrine of the apostles is the wall that surrounds the holy city, New Jerusalem, the church of Christ. So the names (the authority) of the twelve apostles are said to be in the foundations of the wall of the city. Only those who love and continue in the doctrine of these apostles, as set forth in the New Testament, have a right to the privileges of the holy city, or are in the fellowship of the apostles of the Lamb. The saints whom the apostle Paul addressed, were said to be "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." As such they were "no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." All others build, not upon the foundation that is laid in Zion, not upon the doctrine of the apostles, but upon worldly, carnal theories which the wisdom of this world has invented. That foundation, that doctrine, which is the joy and comfort of the heaven-taught and Spirit-led children of God, is a stone of stumbling and rock of offense to those who stumble at the word of truth, being disobedient, whereunto also they were appointed.—1 Peter ii. 8. Were these foundations to be entirely destroyed it would cause no distress to those whose hope is not in Jesus Christ the righteous. Indeed the powers of darkness in malice have raged for centuries, and many have been their attempts to sweep from the earth the testimony of Jesus and his apostles, and with it all those who have loved and contended for it; but adored be the name of our God and Savior, the gates of hell shall not prevail against the church, which is built upon the sure and tried and precious foundation.

"Rest, troubled saints, assured of this,
For God has pledged his holiness."

While worldly religionists have found it necessary and desirable from time to time to revise and change their creeds, to conform to the demands of their "progressive religion," how different is the case of those who love the law of their unchanging God and his unchanging kingdom. They are abundantly satisfied with the provision of his house, even of his holy temple. "In his temple doth every one speak of his glory." "We have thought of thy loving-kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple." "Walk about Zion, and go round about her; tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces, that ye may tell it to the generation following. For this God is our God forever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death." The faith of this highly favored people was once delivered (never to be repeated nor changed) to them as the saints of God. Centuries go and come, earthly kingdoms and governments rise and fall, the fashions of the world change and pass away, but our God and his kingdom remain unchanged. This is the kingdom that the God of heaven has set up, which shall never be destroyed, nor left to other people. The law of its King, as expounded by his princes, is unchanging and perfect. Like the King, it is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. How blessed are they who are favored to build upon the only foundation that can be laid in Zion, gold, silver, precious stones, which will stand the test of the fire that is in Zion and the furnace in Jerusalem! Who can fully tell the glorious reward of those who thus build? Their work is that which shall abide and be of comfort to the saints. How important it is that the saints take heed, and especially gospel ministers, how they build upon the foundation which the apostles have laid, lest their labor be in vain, and they suffer loss; for if they build with material that will not stand the test of the fire of the word of the Lord by his apostles, they will not only labor in vain, and so suffer loss, but will cause distress to be felt among the household of God. Hay, wood and stubble are combustible materials, and represent the carnal theories of man, which are sometimes palmed off upon the saints for gospel truth. But the apostle assures us that "every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." This day and this fire are spoken of by the Lord through his prophet Zechariah. "In that day [the gospel day] will I make the governors of Judah [the apostles] like a hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour the people round about, on the right hand and on the left. Hay, wood and stubble will make a very hot fire, but are soon consumed. How many gospel ministers have devoted years to formulating and promulgating carnal theories, while professing to be building upon the true foundation which the apostles have laid. While such may for a time command the admiration of some of the saints, and be in reputation for profound wisdom, they cannot long deceive or mislead the saints. How many have in this way suffered loss, not only in labor, but also the loss of the esteem and fellowship of the saints. Such have turned aside to crooked ways; and of them the Lord says, "As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways, the Lord will lead them forth with the workers of iniquity." There is a manifest disposition on the part of some, even at the present time, to make a display of their erudition, and to palm off upon the saints for gospel truth what has been gathered from the writings of men in Babylon, and which are deserving of no more consideration by the saints than the notions of Milton and Dante. The saints should be faithfully warned by the ministry of the word to beware lest any man spoil them through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. It is a consoling truth that however much the saints may be spoiled, or robbed, however much they may suffer loss by building with hay, wood and stubble, they shall all be saved, yet so as by fire; for salvation is of the Lord, by grace, and not by works of righteousness which they may do. "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you."

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

By a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

(Continued from page 347.)

and as absolutely sure of producing certain effects, as the law of nature. Was it ever known to have a miscarrying womb or dry breast? These are the things we would consider, the things which God has revealed unto us by his Spirit, evidenced to and in us by cause and effect.

"Charity suffereth long, and is kind." In the preceding verses the apostle contrasts charity with other gifts, and says though he had these, and not charity, he would be as a sound that had no meaning; as a prophet without understanding, that amounted to nothing; as one whose acts of kindness and personal sacrifices profited nothing. Then he tells of the virtue and power of charity. He says it will suffer long, and is kind. We do not understand him to mean that it will suffer long and be kind toward some one else, though that may be included; but rather that charity begins at home, and its effect is personal. Charity is not only love, but the gift of love as well; and the gift of God's love is that we should suffer long, and be kind. This is necessary that we may have peace with God, who has left among us a poor and afflicted people, of whom he says, "With weeping and with supplication will I lead them." David, who is a type of the church, as well as of Christ, says, "Mine enemies reproach me all the day, and they that are mad against me are sworn against me. For I have eaten ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping, because of thine indignation and thy wrath." If this be our experience, if such are the trials to which we are subject, how necessary that we have that love which suffers long and is kind. The Spirit of God discerns enmity in the mind, hardness in the heart, baseness in our members. These enemies reproach us all the day long. Suffering, weeping, supplication, follow. What would we do without charity, which suffereth long, and is kind? These burdens must be carried all the day long, because our enemies stand ever ready to reproach us. So God has given us charity equal to our day and trials; charity that suffereth long, and is kind. This suffering does not produce, where charity is, irritability, anger nor revenge. These have no place where charity is, by the blessed influence of which we possess our souls in patience. It is a work in us and personal to us; and while we repent in dust and in ashes, our suffering and kindness are from and unto God. It is indeed the very suffering and kindness of Jesus, which charity has given.

In the remaining portion of the fourth verse, and so on down to the seventh verse, we are told what charity does not do. It does not envy, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, behaveth not itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not iniquity. Where these exist, charity does not, and our communion is not with light, but with darkness. As soon as left to ourselves we go to the world. In the absence of charity the lion of our nature vaunteth itself, and is puffed up; behaveth itself unseemly; seeketh not its own, but rather whom it may destroy. This cannot be where charity is; for charity rejoiceth in the truth; and this is not the truth. "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest; for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things." Charity stays at home and attends to her own business. When we get away from home we are apt to meddle with other people's business. Charity is between God and man. Here is the true order of the house of God, and that which is not true. If we should be governed by the law of charity, and not by what our fathers did, or some church did, or some good brother did, we should be found rejoicing in the truth, and not annoying others, ourselves puffed up, and behaving ourselves unseemly; for charity beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Notice, it is "all things" that are borne, believed, hoped and endured. Not simply the good things, for then would there be nothing more than natural powers needed; but all things. Job did not say, The Lord gave, and the devil hath taken away; but "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away." He acknowledges no power that the Sabeans and Chaldeans had, but that which was of God. He believed all things. Isaiah did not say, The Lord formed light, and the devil darkness; the Lord made peace, and the devil created evil. But he did say, "I the Lord do all these things." The same earth that beareth fruits and flowers, beareth also briars and thorns. Because one is blessed and the other cursed, by no means signifies that one is of God and the other of the devil. Charity believeth that all things are of God, and rejoiceth in the fact that affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground.—Job v. 6, 7. There can be no question but that Jesus did recognize and accept the fact that all things, both the evil and the good, were appointed unto him of the Father; else had he not said, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" And while he was enduring the mighty agony of the cross, it was charity's gift that so successfully sustained him that he opened not his mouth. Enduring in silence, he speaks louder than words, I love my Father. My Father loveth me. I will endure all things for his sake. Charity "believeth all things." It seems to us that if charity believed the good only (as we term good), was of God, and the evil was of the devil, charity would believe that the Lord had very little to do with the affairs of this world, and never would have said, Charity "believeth all things;" for it is certain that charity believeth only in God, not in the devil. It is but reasonable, and we think scriptural, to conclude that when Peter remembered the Lord had told him beforehand that Satan desired to have him, but that he had prayed for him, and that the devil got him, but the Lord delivered him, and that all worked for good, that he would after that have believed all things, good and evil, were ordained of God, even the desire of the devil; nor can we see where comfort is to come from in times of dreadful afflictions, blasted hopes and ruined expectations, unless from charity, that "believeth all things." But we can see how we shall be comforted and made to rejoice, though all our earthly delights be swept away, as were Job's. Because Habakkuk did not believe all things when he saw the people that God loved in bondage to and cruelly treated by a people that he did not love, the prophet was confounded, and cried, saying, "O Lord, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save! Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me." Evidently there was a strong disposition on the part of Habakkuk to complain of the Lord because he would not hear him when he cried unto him; especially so when he told him of the violence and iniquity and grievances that were being heaped upon his beloved people by these unbelieving and ungodly people. Habakkuk could not understand, as many cannot at this day, how that God can be of purer eyes than to behold evil, and will not look upon iniquity, and yet look upon a wicked people dealing treacherously, and devouring his own people, and open not his mouth, but allow them to go on in the gratification of their damnable lust. Had he had in his heart toward God charity, which "believeth all things," he would not have been questioning God about things he could not understand. After Habakkuk had learned the lesson that God then taught him, "The just shall live by faith," we hear him say, "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls;" in other words, though all the earth should fail, and all things go contrary to my wishes and my understanding; "yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." The trouble with Habakkuk was, and the trouble with us all is, we want to live by sight; we cannot believe that it is right in God to do things that are not right in our eyes. Right with us makes right with God. For the want of charity we vaunt ourselves, and are puffed up. Charity "believeth all things." Whether it be what Habakkuk saw, the wicked devouring the man more righteous than he, or whether it be what Moses saw at the Red Sea, the righteous triumphing over the wicked, all alike is right with charity.

"Hopeth all things." Hope that springeth from charity has no fear in it. Perfect love casteth out fear. Charity toward God, who gives this blessed hope, forbids that we should believe that angels in heaven, or devils in hell or out of hell, or any other creature, shall ever be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus. We hope all things; that all the words of the prophets, of the law and of the gospel, were, are and shall be fulfilled in Christ. This is charity toward God. More of this, and less of pretended charity for man, would be more becoming believers. This hope has, and always will be, persecuted. But he who promised to supply all our needs has given to us this blessed charity, that we may be able to endure all things. All things must be of God if it is true that he does his will in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth. For the hope of the promise God made unto the fathers, Paul was brought before king Agrippi to be accused of the Jews. Is it not strange that just what they professed to believe, Paul did believe? and because he did they persecuted him. But it is even so to this day, that they who profess to believe that Jesus is the Savior of sinners, persecute those who believe that in all things he is their Savior.

"Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part." In these two verses charity is compared with prophecy, tongues and knowledge, and its great superiority proven, in that it never fails; therefore it cannot cease or vanish away. This justifies the assertion made in the beginning, that we could not select a subject of more vital importance. However good the one kind of food upon which we live, and inferior the other, if the good fails and the inferior does not, upon the inferior we must depend for life. Then the inferior becomes far superior to the good. Charity is a well of water springing up into everlasting life. It is our life here, and will be more abundantly when we reach our heavenly home. However much we may esteem the gifts of prophecy, tongues and knowledge (and we do and should esteem these gifts very highly), be it known unto you, men and brethren, that he, however so humble, who has charity, has the greatest gift. How presumptuous the brother who, because he has superior knowledge, or the gift of tongues, or even of prophecy, and even though he understands all mysteries, to lord it over God's her itage, and judge the brother whose gift is superior to his own. Charity never yet drove a lamb of God out of the fold to perish by the way because the little thing had not sufficient knowledge to understand the deep mysteries of God. No, charity gathereth the little ones in her arms, and carrieth them in her bosom, and cheereth and nourisheth them, as a mother her tender offspring; remembering that through love and mercy and compassion they themselves have been cared for. Charity fellowships not envy, hatred, bitterness or strife; neither does charity fellowship those who vaunt themselves, and are puffed up, and think evil of others, because of their superior wisdom; but charity fellowships love. Charity is unto God. Prophecies, tongues and knowledge are unto and for men. Brethren, follow after charity.

We have been highly favored of the Lord in the conditions surrounding us during our meeting. The weather has been delightfully pleasant, the attendance good, as well also as the attention paid to the preached word, which has been in demonstration of the Spirit and with power, to the heart-felt comfort and delight of the saints, whose bright countenances, with the occasionally falling tear, gave evidence of the glad reception of the truth into the hearts prepared of the Lord; all of which leads us to exclaim with the psalmist, "Praise ye the Lord; for his mercy endureth forever."

Our next annual meeting is appointed to be held, by divine permission, with the New Valley Church, Loudoun County, Virginia, to begin on Wednesday before the third Sunday in October, 1895, when and where we hope to meet your messengers and receive your messages of love and fellowship again.

J. N. BADGER, Mod.

G. G. GALLEHER, Clerk.

The Juniata Primitive or Old School Baptist Association, in session with the Sidling Hill Church, Fulton Co., Pa., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 10th, 11th and 12th, 1894, to the churches of which she is composed, sends greeting.

BELOVED BRETHREN:—As it has been a custom with the Old School Baptists to address a Circular Letter to the churches composing an association, and to call their attention to some subject, we will call your attention to the most grand and glorious subject left on record, that is, the words used by Jesus Christ to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again;" the word "again" signifying a manifesting of life once before, which was to manifest the natural man in the natural world, with natural eyes and a natural mind to behold all the glories of a natural creation; yet viewing all of God's mighty wisdom in nature did not give eternal life. He still remained a subject of vanity; for to it he was made a subject, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. The same one that has brought this subject in hope is he that says to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." In this birth they receive a single eye, or the eye of faith, which is to the honor and glory of God, and the mind of Christ. The love of God is shed abroad in their hearts. This child loves God with all his heart, and all his soul, and all his mind, and has a desire to be free from sin, and to live a life holy and acceptable in the sight of God; hating sin in all its ways; hating even the fleshly garment that they are clothed with; desiring and longing for the change to come. "Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." For we know that we have the first-fruits of the Spirit. "Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." This creature, our bodies, has not yet been delivered from that bondage of corruption, or this hope would cease; for we cannot hope for that we have attained to. We know that we yet groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption; so the adoption has not yet come. We have only received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, "Abba, Father." Having this Spirit, it is the foundation of faith and hope, believing that God is able to change this vile body to a spiritual body, like unto his glorious body. "For we are saved by hope. But hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." So then, we wait for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. "It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul: the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit."

Our Association was very pleasant. All who attended seemed to be interested in the meeting, and good order prevailed throughout, even among those outside of the church.

E. V. WHITE, Mod.

AHIMAAZ MELLOTT, Clerk

CHURCH LETTERS.

The New Valley Baptist Church, Loudoun Co., Va., to the Virginia Corresponding Meeting, in session with the Bethlehem Baptist Church, Prince William Co., Va., October 17th, 18th and 19th, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Again we send you our greeting of love and fellowship in the gospel of Christ our Redeemer, and accredit as our messengers all our male members who may be present at the meeting. * *

The past year has been blessed to us by the mercies of our God and Savior, and our meetings have been regularly held at the Valley, and also at Broad Run, in Maryland, and Hughesville, Virginia. During the year Elders Lester, of Virginia, Rowe and Gold, of North Carolina, Lively, of Alabama, Eubanks, of Kentucky, Beebe, of New York, and Chick, of Maryland, together with brother Brink, of New York, have visited us at the several meeting places of the church, and all have preached to us the truth, the Word, "Christ and him crucified," all contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints; and we feel that the church has been edified and established in the doctrine of God our Savior.

Our pastor, Elder Elipah V. White, has faithfully ministered to the church in word and doctrine, often, we know, meeting much to discourage him, particularly in the too frequently scant attendance of many members at the regular meetings, though some have been faithful at all times.

We of the Valley are no better by nature than other people, but are as weak in the flesh as any; nor are we better taught spiritually than our brethren elsewhere; for all must have the same teacher, and grace and faith come to all alike, in the same way and by the same Spirit. But sometimes, being led of our own lusts and enticed, we fall away, and our chastenings are grievous. The Philistines are camped all about us, and in our wars with them we are made captive, and, like the giant Judge of Israel, fettered to the mill-sweep, and made to grind in the prison-house, till death comes to our release; and then, like Samson, we are enabled to destroy more of our enemies than we could in a lifetime of conflict, for then we come off more than conquerors through him that loved us.

Dark days have come to us of the Valley, too, and one by one our brightest have gone before. This year we mourn the death of another cherished one, in sister Lizzie White; but our faith makes us believe that she is at rest in the home of the ransomed ones, where no more bitter tears from mourning hearts are dropped on clay-cold faces, for in that perfect life God himself shall wipe away all tears. We know that this earthly house must be dissolved; and if so, then we have a house not made with hands, changeless, eternal, where the glorified body, redeemed with blood, is joined in one with its glorious Head and risen Lord, who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God, and in the fullness of times gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth. So, "Tis by the faith of joys to come We walk through deserts dark as night."

Some bright glimpses of gladness have brightened our church life in the year that is gone, and one lamb has been brought by baptism into the fold of the church; while we are persuaded that there are other precious ones of the flock just outside the gates, only waiting till the good Shepherd in the fullness of time shall open to them a door of hope and call them in.

We hope, brethren, that your meeting may be a pleasant and profitable one, and that the ancient landmarks of our faith as a peculiar people may be made plainer, if possible; so that those who come after, when you and we have "gone the way whence we shall not return," may be able to prove your work by the law of our Lord and Savior.

Done by order of the church, Sept. 15th, 1894.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Mr. Lewis Brasell was born August 6th, 1818, in Tennessee, and came to Illinois in infancy. His father was drowned during the Black Hawk Indian war, in McDonough Co., thus leaving him the eldest of five children to assist a widowed mother in the great battle of life, in a new country, surrounded with savage beasts, and almost equally savage men, with but few of the advantages enjoyed by the present generation. In 1841 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Stout, daughter of the late Elder Ezra Stout, of Oregon, with whom he lived until her death, July 6th, 1893, and by whom he became the father of eleven children, five of whom are still living. On the last day of July, 1870, together with six others, including the writer, he was baptized on profession of his faith in Christ, and became one of the constituent members of the Barren Grove Church of Regular Predestinarian Baptists.

He died of paralysis on August 10th, 1894, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Albert Krause, with whom he lived, and was buried August 12th. The writer failed to reach the place at that time, but by his request, on the third Sunday in September, spoke to the relatives and friends from Psalm xxiii. 1, 2.

ALSO,

DIED—On Sept. 18th, 1894, at her home with her sister, Ellen Vandike, near Elmira, Stark Co., Ill., Mrs. Catharine Bolt, aged 86 years.

She was born in Montgomery Co., Pa. She came to Stark Co., Ill., in November, 1841, and in January, 1842, was joined in marriage to the late Charles Bolt. In June, 1844, she united with the Spoon River Old School Baptist Church, and was baptized by the late highly esteemed Elder James B. Chenoweth, and remained a faithful member until her death. In infancy or early childhood she became a life-long cripple by an incurable affection of the spine. Although she had no children of her own, she and her husband adopted and raised a number of orphans, thus filling the kindly offices of a mother. Her mind had become weakened as the weight of age pressed upon her, until she became a source of great care to her sister's family. The immediate cause of death was a broken thigh, resulting from a fall received a few days before.

Her funeral occurred Sept. 20th, and was attended by a large circle of relatives and neighbors, and was conducted by the writer.

S. KETCHUM.

ELMWOOD, Ill., Oct. 20, 1894.

My very dear father-in-law, Enoch Brewer, departed this life August 13th, 1894, after nearly nine months of illness, his disease being "La Grippe" and kidney troubles.

The subject of this notice was born in Washington Co., Ind., Feb. 2d, 1826. With his father he moved to Iowa in 1834, where he resided until the spring of 1854. He then returned to Washington Co., Ind., and was married to Clarice Brown on April 9th of that year. In May following he moved to Mercer Co., Mo. He (with his companion) united with the Palestine Church of Predestinarian Baptists, and was baptized by old brother Zion, and was soon afterward elected Clerk by the said church. He moved to Texas in 1876, and settled in Wise Co., eleven miles north of Decatur, where he united with the Bethel Church of Predestinarian Baptists, and also served as Clerk faithfully as long as he lived. He was truly a father in Israel. He was never better pleased than when in company with his brethren.

Brother J. A. Campbell at his funeral spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones. He leaves a loving wife, son and daughter-in-law, together with the church and many friends, to mourn the loss of a kind and devoted husband, an affectionate father, and a faithful and consistent member of the church; but we mourn not as those without hope, for our loss is his eternal gain. In all his illness I never heard him murmur or complain, but always said, "I am waiting God's time; I am ready." O! if we could but be reconciled to the will of him who rules, and none can hinder, and say, Thy will, not mine, be done. Father was a constant reader of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and had been for more than ten years.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,
MAGGIE BREWER.

It is with a sad and heavy heart that I record the death of my dear wife, Mary Jane Pettipiece, who departed this life at her residence in the township of Harwich, Kent Co., Ontario, Sept. 8th, 1894, aged 53 years, after a lingering illness of about four months.

She often spoke of dying, and her only desire to live was that she might stay to see her only son grow up. She did not seem much worse until about two or three days before her death, when she suddenly grew worse, and died apparently without any pain, gently breathing her life away. She was a firm believer in salvation by grace, and had a warm feeling for christian people. She was a kind, loving and affectionate companion, always willing to bear her share of the many cares and afflictions that we have had to pass through during our married life of more than twenty-two years. She was baptized by Elder Beebe, and united with the Ekfrid Church about the year 1894. Her remains were laid to rest by the side of her father in the Botany cemetery.

Her funeral sermon was preached by Elder Kelly, to a large and attentive congregation, her husband, son and three surviving sisters and brother being present; but we mourn not as those who are without hope. "By grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."

"Dearest Mary, thou hast left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

"Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed."

JAMES PETTIPIECE.

NORTHWOOD, Ont., Oct. 20, 1894.

RECEIVED FOR MARY PARKER.

CONTRIBUTIONS for Mary Parker, received by Elder S. H. Durand.

C. L. Buracker, Ill., 5; Laura Darby, Md., 2; Adelia Shepherd, Iowa, 5; Elder R. W. Thompson, Ind., 3; Mary Lowmaster, Ohio, 1; G. W. Goodrich, for the Abington Church, Pa., 6; Mattie Kingseed, Ind., 1; others, 3.25.—Total, $26.25.

APPOINTMENTS.

DEAR BROTHER:—I will preach, the Lord willing, as follows:

Campbellsburgh, Ky., Tuesday night, Oct. 30th; Sulphur Fork, Wednesday morning; Little Flock, Thursday night and Friday morning, Nov. 1st and 2d; May's Lick, Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 3d and 4th; Mt. Sterling, Monday night and Tuesday; Mt. Carmel, Wednesday morning; Elk Lick, Thursday, 9th.

SILAS H. DURAND.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05
Twelve copies..... 50
Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore " because of the Jews' preparation day: for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
1 st Is. 53. 9. n ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'	1 st Ps. 22. 22. Matt. 28. 10. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 st ch. 16. 28.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 " Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING.

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges, 3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges 4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good

Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

SEVENTH EDITION SMALL TYPE.

These books contain 800 pages, and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also, an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth binding, single copy, 75c, half dozen $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00: per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, full gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz:

Cloth binding.....$1 00
Cloth binding, half dozen..... 4 50
Blue, Marbled, Edge..... 1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books postage paid to any part of the United States or Canada.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

"THE EDITORIALS," FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES.

Contains all the Editorial articles written by the late Eld. Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume $2.00, or both first and second volume ordered at the same time and to the same address $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3, formerly $3.50.

Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged) $3.50, formerly $5.00.

Address, G. Beebe's Son, Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1894.

NO. 45.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REISTERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 20, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I suppose that in the minds of all the brethren in Christ, including all who believe on his name, whether they are members of the church visible or not, there are some questions concerning the meaning of the Scriptures, some questions concerning particular sentiments, and some questions concerning what is right in church order and in individual conduct, about which they do not feel decided. In our present imperfect state, in which we see in part and know in part, this must of necessity always be the case. It is true indeed that the Scriptures contain what may be called a perfect rule of faith and practice for every believer and for the whole church of God; but our understanding of the Scriptures at best is limited, and we all know that many times we have been mistaken in our view of what they mean. And from the past it is safe to conclude that we shall all yet make mistakes in our views of their meaning. I am free to admit that, concerning some Scriptures, my views now are very different from what they were some years ago; and also, I will frankly say that while my views of the great cardinal principles of our common faith have not changed, in the sense of turning about, but rather have been intensified as the years have passed along, yet concerning some minor questions of faith and practice I have sometimes held different views from what I have at other times. And I suppose that all who read the Scriptures much, and think much about their teaching, will acknowledge the same as being true in their own case. It is also doubtless true with all of us that some questions remain undecided in our own minds. All this is only the natural result of our present state of imperfection, and our carnality of thought and feeling and life. The truth is infinite, and we are finite. We can, at best, see but little of it at a time, and what we do see we see with but an imperfect vision.

Growing out of this, it would be wholly unreasonable to expect that the people of God who are yet in the flesh should see eye to eye in all things. We can see nothing except as God is pleased to reveal it unto us; and even the things he has shown us we can never tell, simply because the weakness and imperfections of human language will not let us. Two brethren may have seen the same thing; but yet, as they tell it, one seems to the other to be misrepresenting the thing that he has seen, simply because he employs different words to convey it from the words of the other. Both mean to tell the truth, but each does not understand the other's words. Again, God has revealed a truth in the experience of one which he has not to another. The brother tells what he has seen. Necessarily his words sound strange to the other. But because of this, each should bear with the other. Let him who has seen these things not deride him who has not seen them. Why should he boast over the other? If he has something that his brother has not, he has received it from God as a gift. It is nothing to cause derision or boasting. On the other hand, let not the brother to whom this added light has not been given harshly criticize the testimony of the other. He is not to be compelled to receive it, and yet that is he to denounce his brother as one who is departing from the faith of God's elect. Let each remember that if this be the true light from God it will abide; but if not, it will fall of its own weight. This does not, by any means, leave an open door for the introduction of any false doctrine, contrary to the doctrine that we have learned. The great truths of election, predestination, salvation by grace without works, cannot be questioned; and concerning these and many other things there can arise no question among believers in Jesus Christ. But yet in connection with all these great principles of truth there will arise questions concerning which we may feel unsettled, and concerning which we may differ, and while yet our fellowship in Christ remains unbroken.

I have been led to think much of late concerning this subject of Christian fellowship, and more especially concerning the right and proper expression of it in our intercourse with each other, both with those who are united to the church on earth, and the many children of God who are without the church visible, though in the kingdom of God by a new and spiritual birth from above. It is sure that sincere christian fellowship ought to exist in our hearts before we give any expression of it. It is also sure that this fellowship embraces many who fear to make a religious profession, because of felt unfitness or unworthiness. It is also sure that where this fellowship exists in the heart, God has put it there. And it also seems clear to me that where this God-given fellowship exists it cannot be wrong to express it. Such fellowship in the heart, the offspring of the love of God, shed abroad there by the Holy Ghost, must necessarily be expressed in some way. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth must and ought to speak. When this fellowship is felt in the soul, going out toward any one, how spontaneously do the words brother or sister arise to the lips. It surely must be right for the lips to speak what the heart feels. I have met, at different times in my traveling among strangers, with those who were speaking of the things of God, the very things that I had felt, and that I loved; and as they spoke, my heart burned with love to them; and though they were strangers, and I did not even know their names, I have felt like going to them and saying, Brother, or sister, I am as you are: what you say is my experience and my joy. If you are a child of God, I must be; if I am one, then you are my brother, or my sister. If God has put us both among the children, and we both from our heart's most deep and spiritual experience can cry, Abba, Father, then is it sure that we are brethren and sisters.

It seems to me that it must have been out of an experience like this that Ananias could come to Saul of Tarsus while he was yet blind, and say, "Brother Saul." Just think for a moment of all the force and intensity that this expression of fellowship must have had, coming as it did from the lips of the persecuted to his persecutor; now no longer injurious, but a brother beloved by the Lord and in the Lord. A little while ago Ananias feared him; now he loved him. What an entire revolution of feeling! No wonder the words leaped from a full heart to his lips. And how blessed must those words have sounded to Saul, who was evermore to be "Paul the little," coming as they did from one whom he recognized as the messenger of God to him. It was just the word he needed. Nothing else could have answered the purpose so well, nothing else could have so satisfied his heart as the words "Brother Saul." As he knew that Ananias was the messenger of God to him, he could feel that in this language there was not only the expression of personal fellowship from this christian man, but that it also conveyed to him the assurance that God was his Father, and Jesus, whom he had persecuted, was his Savior. The words, "Brother Saul," meant to him in his blindness and contrition and guilt, more than words could ever tell. It meant that even such an one as he had found mercy, and was entitled to all that a gracious God had purposed to bestow upon his children. It meant that full salvation was his, and that he had a right to the fellowship of saints, and to share the final glory of Jesus and his people. For the first time his ears drank in, and his heart received, like a comforting, healing balm, the sweet meaning of true christian fellowship. Must it not have sounded most wonderful to him? And must he not have always cherished the memory of that hour in his breast through all the coming years?

How often is it true that the humble-hearted seekers after truth, who are mourning in darkness over sins, have heard the word of truth from the lips of some servant of God, whom God had sent with a message to them, just as certainly and truly as he had sent a message to Saul by Ananias; and as that servant of God described their case, and then said that all such were his brothers and sisters, how sweet has been the message to them, and how they have been humbled, and yet comforted, that a servant of God could call such as they his brothers and sisters. I can well remember when Elder Gilbert Beebe, thirty-one years ago, at North Berwick, Maine, gave me his hand, as I came before the church there, with my feeble testimony to the grace of God, and called me brother. It was the first time that I had ever been called by that endearing name, and I can never forget it. I did not then know all that it meant, and I do not yet know all that it meant, or that it means; but I felt that it meant the most wonderful things of which I could ever conceive, and it filled me with joy.

Is it not true that the Lord yet sends some Ananias to his children with a message to them all, as he did to Saul then? What can answer to this now, if it be not that the blessed Lord stirs up our hearts toward some one of his children, and causes us to feel drawn to them, and to feel that we have a message for them? Is not this then our warrant for going to them? And is it not our warrant also for saying, Brother, or sister, the Lord has sent me to you? At times this has been my feeling, and in such cases I have felt that I must obey what I believed was a divine prompting in my heart. In such cases are we wrong to say just what we feel to say, Brother, or sister? I have not been able to see that we are. This question as to using the term brother or sister was in my mind when I began this letter. I know that there have been different opinions about it. I have not myself always held one opinion about it. I feel sure that many brethren cannot think it right to ever use the term except to one who is in the visible church. I have been thinking much about the matter of late, and it has seemed to me to violate no scriptural rule, when the heart feels fellowship, to express it. And is there any better way to express it than in the words brother or sister? These words are sacred words to me. I can never use them lightly. I never use them without thinking of what they mean. They mean, not that one's name is on some church-book; not that one has been baptized, but that such an one is a child of God and an heir of glory. Ananias called Saul brother before he was baptized, and before the church had heard his experience and received him for baptism. Surely then we have not sinned if where the heart feels fellowship our lips express it. I have heard reasoning about the matter, but reasoning somehow has not satisfied me that it is wrong. If the Scriptures teach that it is wrong, to them we must and ought to gladly submit. But in the Scriptures I do not now recall any rule or example about this matter, except this case of Ananias and Saul. It would seem that it cannot be wrong to follow the example of the messenger of God in this case. I should be glad for other brethren to write upon this subject if they feel so disposed. I leave these thoughts, praying that they may help lead our minds into the clear light of truth.

I remain your brother in the hope of Christ,

F. A. CHICK.

PETERSBURG, Del., Sept. 30, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I have copied the experience of my dear father, and send it to you for publication in our dear family paper. He wrote it to his father. Part of it is lost, or I would copy it from his own handwriting. There are many brethren and sisters who knew him so well, and loved him, that I think they will be glad to read an account of his christian experience. We do miss him so much, but know that he is now at rest with his dear Redeemer, whom he served so faithfully for so many years. While I write this morning, my mind goes out to our dear sister, Martha Gooden, as she is passing through the very same to-day that I was called to pass through in July. Her father's body will be consigned to the cold tomb to-day. What a privilege, or blessing rather, to know that we have a dear Savior to whom we can go in such times of sore distress, who is able to comfort and cheer us as no living person can. He surely is a present help in time of trouble, and his everlasting arms are ever underneath. O that we could always feel that he holds us in the hollow of his hand, and that his love is shed abroad in our hearts. If I could write anything that would be of comfort to the household of faith I would willingly write more. A dear sister asked me, not long since, why I did not write for the SIGNS. If she knew me as I know myself, I think she would not have asked me.

Your unworthy sister, I hope,
ANNIE MEREDITH.

OCTOBER 18, 1859.

DEAR FATHER:—I received your kind letter last week, and it was very encouraging to me to believe I had been led in the same way you had. I will try and give you a relation of my exercises, and of the way, I hope, the good Lord hath led me on. To commence, I must go back to my tenth or eleventh year, when I hope the Lord gave me eyes to see and a heart to feel that I was a vile sinner.

There were three brothers of us, Thomas, Job and myself. When at work in the field Job often told me what he had read in the Bible, and tried to explain it so that I could understand him and the meaning thereof. On one occasion I remember his having gone with you to a yearly meeting in Susquehanna County, and after his return he told me Elder Granstreit preached from this text, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."—Isa. i. 18. He told me many things said by Elder G. This was a little while before brother Job was taken from us by death. After that sad occurrence the thought often intruded itself upon my mind, "Why was it that the Lord should have taken him who was so good a boy, and spared me who am so vile?" When these thoughts, and those of my sinfulness, would come upon me with so much force, I would resolve to mend my ways and do better. But alas! my good intentions and promises would soon be forgotten, and I would find myself running into sin. I would excuse myself, under the delusive suggestion of the evil one, that there was no necessity for one so young as myself to be thus disturbed, and that when I became older it would be time to think of these things. In this way I traveled on for some years, till 1842 or 1843, as well as I remember, when my mind became disturbed upon the doctrine of election. I concluded, if that doctrine be true, what hope can I have of being of the chosen few? After retiring to bed one night, I asked my brother Thomas what he thought of this doctrine. He replied that he believed it was true, and gave his reasons, by referring to several passages in Scripture as proof of the doctrine. I next inquired what hope we could have that we were of or a part of the elect. The reply was, "Trust in the Lord, and leave all with him." I felt satisfied with his answer, and have not been disturbed on that point since. Some time after this brother Thomas was taken sick and died. My troubles as to my situation before God came upon me again; and as when my first brother died, I again wondered why Thomas should have been taken and I left. It appeared as if I had been left alone, without having any one to sympathize with me in this forlorn and sinful world. Those I believed to be christians were too good for my associates, and seemed to care nothing for me; they could have no sympathy or fellowship for so vile, polluted, sinful a creature as I felt myself to be. Not a great while after the death of brother Thomas I was taken sick; and while I was rolling and mourning upon my bed, as if in much pain, you came to my room. It occurred to me that you suspected my being troubled in mind as well as being sick in body, and that you were going to say something to me about the state of my mind. I was unwilling you should know I was distressed upon the subject of my sins; and to prevent you from talking to me, I made an excuse of wanting something, which made it necessary for you to go down. After returning, I told you I was better; but this was a mere excuse. Thinking why I was so much troubled, it came into my mind, "It is because you are sick, and think you are going to die; and it is not worth while for you to ask forgiveness of the Lord, as he will not accept an offering at your hand, for the reason that under the covenant God made with Israel, an offering must be without spot or blemish. Neither will he hear you while you are sick." I remained in that distressed condition for some time. One morning I awoke, and it appeared to me that I saw a bright spark or light, which seemed to depart from me. Then I was led to think the Lord had withdrawn himself and left me in my lost condition. These words came to me, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." I felt calm and resigned to my lot, and thought if it was his will it was all right. The distress of mind seemed to be removed. I could not think it was the work of grace, but that it was my own imagination. My conclusion was that if ever I should experience a work of grace in my heart, or be born again, I would know the very time and place, and would have no doubts about it. I had laid down in my mind the way the Lord would lead me, and concluded if not led in that way that I would not be led aright. Often I attended meeting, hoping the Lord would send some word to my heart that would make me know my true condition, and cause me to feel some greater manifestation. I would go from meeting disappointed and distressed, because I received not what I hoped for. Sometimes when I heard preaching, and the minister would set forth Christ as a full and complete Savior, I would think, O! if I were a christian, how I would rejoice in such a Savior. But alas! I felt myself to be such a sinner that I had no right to rejoice. I feared I had not been born again. I wandered in darkness several years, alternating between the hope of light and darkness. I was beset with the most horrible temptations and sins, as if I should be overcome by them. Again and again I begged the Lord to forgive me, saying, "Lord, save, or I perish." My prayers seemed but presumption or abomination in the sight of the Lord. In this way I roamed in thought and mind till last year, 1858, when, as I trust, the Lord opened the eyes of my understanding, and gave me hope through the righteousness of Christ, my Lord and Savior.

PETER MEREDITH, JR.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Sept. 18, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Please publish this letter of sister Attie Curtis, for the instruction of the brethren concerning the churches and meetings in Maine, and for the comfort of the tried little ones.

Your brother,

SILAS H. DURAND.

BRUNSWICK, Maine, Sept. 15, 1894.

ELDER S. H. DURAND—MY DEAR BROTHER:—I know you will be interested to hear about our meetings, and it is with pleasure I talk with you in this silent way. I attended the meeting at North Berwick, and met Elder Vail and brother Brink for the first time. I was satisfied with their preaching, for I heard the name of Jesus exalted above every name that is named. I have felt to rejoice with the church there ever since Elder Keene came among them; for the Lord is blessing his labors in bringing the trembling ones home to their friends, and they all declare what great things the Lord has done for them. The Lord has made Elder Keene a faithful minister and a faithful brother. You were right in saying I would like Elder Vail, and I sincerely hope he will visit us many times. Brother Brink could not attend our association this year, but I feel confident he was satisfied with the brethren he met at North Berwick, and will desire to become better acquainted with the brethren in Maine. I wish I could tell you how good the Lord was to me in giving me health to attend every meeting at both associations, in giving me joy while listening to every sermon, and the comfort in conversation with those I love in the truth. I do not think I can remember as much of each sermon as others can; but while I am listening the Lord gives me such fullness of joy it is impossible to express it. I was made to forget all perplexing things, while the witness within assured me that I was hearing a risen Savior set forth as my hope of salvation. I found this song in my heart, "The Lord hath triumphed gloriously." It was his work in bringing me from nature's darkness into his marvelous light, making me know that my condemnation was just, and then revealing Jesus unto me as the all-sufficient Savior. He filled my heart with love for his people, and gave me a name and place with them. He has given me the privilege of meeting with them every month since May, and it has been a delightful summer to me. It has also been his will for some of the saints to visit us here at my home; and as we have sat at the table, the thought has been comforting that we all professed Jesus as our salvation. Elder Keene visited us in July, and it was a profitable season to all the brethren who could meet him. Elder Chick attended our meetings as usual this fall. He has been with us many times when he had all the preaching to do, and I could not see that he lacked for the good things of the kingdom, or that we were not fed. Surely our God is able to do all things, and without him we can do nothing.

"My God, the spring of all my joys,
The life of my delights,
The glory of my brightest days,
The comfort of my nights."

I thought when I took my pen I could give you an interesting account of our meetings, but you will see I have failed. It was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and no tongue or pen can express the joy which his presence gives. There was a sweet peace and joy in my heart during the meetings, and I feel to say,

"Jesus, thy boundless love to me,
No thought can reach, no tongue declare;
O knit my thankful heart to thee,
And reign without a rival there.
O let thy love my soul inflame,
And to thy service sweetly bind,
Transfuse it through my inmost frame,
And mould me wholly to thy mind.
Thy love in sufferings be my peace,
Thy love in weakness make me strong;
And when the storms of life shall cease,
Thy love shall be my heaven and song."

In every sermon the love of God "bestowed upon us" was presented clearly; and instead of giving you an account of each sermon, I will say each minister declared the same truth Paul did, "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast."

Brother Beal was ordained to the work of the ministry. Elder Keene preached what is called the ordination sermon, and it was full of power; for he told us he felt assured the Lord would give him something to say; and it seemed as if everything concerning the order of God's house was given him to speak of. He used these words, "Take heed therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." The earthen vessel was filled, and I shall have to say the same to you that I did in a letter to brother Brink, "It was a wonderful sermon." The brethren will not forget it very soon. I wish I could remember every word of it as long as I live. If I could always feel the power of it I never should hurt the feelings of any of my brethren; for the Spirit of Christ would reign in me, and I should be meek and lowly, like Jesus. Brother Brink told me many interesting things about sister Mary Parker, and I am very glad she suffers less. I hope, with you, that she will soon write for the SIGNS. How good the Lord is to permit her to meet those she loves for the truth's sake. I hope to see her face to face sometime, now that she is so much nearer. I miss writing to her very much, and miss the cheerful letters she occasionally sent to me. How glad I am that the Lord declared the end from the beginning, so it is impossible for any event to be unknown to our God. He has promised his children strength as they need, and we shall always find that his grace is sufficient for us. We must be led so as to learn that "The flesh profiteth nothing." He leads us in paths we have not known, and makes darkness light before us, and crooked things straight, and will never leave nor forsake us.

Dear brother, I cannot help feeling that this letter will not be interesting to you; and I would write another, but I cannot do any better if I try, so I shall have to send it. I hope it will not make you feel that you will not want to write to me again. I shall not blame you if you kindly request me to not write again. I cannot say what time we shall start for Florida, for my father seems very poorly. At times I am very anxious and worried about temporal things, but the Lord often calms the troubled waves, and gives me a trust in him, showing me that nothing good can be found in the flesh. I hope you are all in usual health, and will feel to talk with me when you have an opportunity. My parents join me in love to you all. May the Lord reconcile us to his will, and make us know we are saved in him with an everlasting salvation, and that underneath us are the everlasting arms, is my desire; for then we can sweetly sing, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty! just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints!"

Love and sweet fellowship for all the saints you meet. I hope next year it will be the Lord's will for you to come.

Your sister in hope,
ATTIE A. CURTIS.

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."—James i. 2-4.

The language here made use of by the inspired apostle is indeed peculiar in its character. That the children of God should count it all joy when they fall into divers temptations seems truly strange. Temptation in its varied forms is something that a heaven-born soul dreads, and, like the disciples of old, it prays, "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Surely God's children are exhorted to "watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." How then is it that they are to count it all joy when they fall into divers temptations? May the Spirit of truth guide us as we attempt to consider the subject, and enable us to come to an understanding of it.

In the experience of a child of God there would seem to be what we would call a being led into temptation, an entering into temptation, and a falling into temptation. Now, it would seem to be the last named portion of experience that the apostle James is speaking of, that is to say, a falling into temptation. When the saint falls into temptation, such falling is something unlooked for. So we read that "a certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves." We have no reason to think that when this man started on his journey he anticipated meeting thieves.

In the portion of the word under consideration the term "temptation" means trial. "Divers temptations," that is to say, various trials. These trials are of a temporal and of a spiritual nature. In the providential dealings of God with his children how often they are called upon to experience trials unlooked for, loss of worldly riches, impairment of health, and the breaking of earthly ties near and dear to them. Then again, after experiencing a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, they are plunged into gross darkness, and made to mourn an absent God. Surely under such circumstances it is hard indeed to say, with the apostle, "Count it all joy." No, like dear old Jacob, they cry, "All these things are against me;" and they fail to see that his falling into temptation is for the trial of that faith which is the gift of God, and which, having been bestowed upon them, is being tested.

The apostle Peter writes to the saints, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." This same apostle, after telling the saints of their great rejoicing in the knowledge of an inheritance reserved in heaven, &c., adds, "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations [trials]: that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." There is a "need be" for it all; and the apostle James tells us what this "need be" is: "Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." The word "patience," as used here, would seem to imply endurance; and so we read in James i. 12, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation," &c. Again, we have a similar expression in James v. 10, 11: "Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job," that is, the endurance of Job. The apostle Paul, writing to the brethren at Rome, says, "And not only so, but we glory in tribulation also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope."

"But let patience have her perfect work," &c. If we take the case of dear old Job, and look at his patience (or endurance), we will find that all the calamities which befell him were unlooked for, and that in very truth it was "a falling into trials." First, his substance, his children, his servants, all taken from him; then smitten with a loathsome disease; then told by the companion of his bosom to curse God and die. Yet in all this Job did not sin with his lips. If we look more carefully into this case of Job we shall see the work of patience (or endurance) going on unto completion. His three friends come to comfort him; and we read what his verdict is regarding their judgment: "Miserable comforters are ye all." These three friends, and even Elihu, did not seem to understand the matter as Job did when he cried, "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me." Job saw the hand of God in it all, but could not understand why he should be so dealt with. In all this the work of patience (or endurance) was going on. Now, when this patience has had its perfect work, we find Job saying (after God had spoken to him out of the whirlwind, and had asked him many questions), "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee: wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." We read that "the Lord turned the captivity of Job." Again, "So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning." Does it not seem strange that in all the trials of Job it was God's hand he recognized? and yet we read that God placed him in Satan's hands, or power. So we see that when patience has had her perfect work (and not

(Continued on page 359.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 7, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

JESUS LIFTED UP.

DEAR BROTHER JENKINS:—Will you be so kind as to give your views through the SIGNS on the following portion of Scripture, and oblige one who wants to know the truth? "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John xii. 32. Do the all men here spoken of mean Adam and his family? If so, in what sense (the Son of God being lifted up) will he draw all men? Your early compliance will greatly oblige me.

J. C. WALTON.

HURRICANE BRANCH, TENN.

R E P L Y .

That one is indeed a blessed character who desires from the heart to know the truth. Alas! how few there are among the multitudes of professors who have the desire to know and walk in the truth. Some, like Pilate in the presence of Jesus, will ask, "What is truth?" when they have no desire to either know or walk in it. Jesus not only declares that he is the truth, but the life and the way. And the apostle tells us that the truth is in Jesus. We cannot know the truth without knowing Jesus, who is the truth, and is full of grace and truth. The truth cannot be in us, therefore, unless Jesus is in us. "If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus."—Eph. iv. 21. How shall any one know and understand the truth recorded in the Scriptures, unless that truth is also written in their hearts by the Spirit of God? The Spirit takes of the things of Jesus and shows them to his saints. The most that even an apostle could do was to stir up the pure minds of the saints by way of remembrance. Hence John says to the saints, "I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth."

In reply to the first question of our brother, "Do the all men here spoken of mean Adam and his family?" we answer, Certainly not all the family of the first Adam; for such a sentiment would contradict the testimony of Jesus and his apostles. The word "all," as it occurs in the Scriptures, frequently means only a portion of the persons or things referred to. This is too manifest to require much argument. In John iii. 26 it is said that all men came to John the Baptist; while we know that a very small portion of mankind came to him. In 1 Cor. x. 33 Paul says, "Even as I please all men;" yet we know he pleased very few, even among his own nation. In Rom. xvi. 19 Paul says, "Your obedience is come abroad to all men;" but he did not mean that it had come abroad to all mankind. The usual meaning of the expression "all men," as it occurs in the Scriptures, is some of all nations of men, or some of all stations in life. "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men;" that is, as the context shows, to aged men and aged women, young men and young women, husbands and wives, masters and servants. The connection in which the words occur will usually, if not invariably, determine the sense in which they are used.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth." This little word "if" does not here deal in or express doubt; for there was no uncertainty about the lifting up from the earth of Jesus. In John iii. 14 Jesus himself says it must be accomplished. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." This lifting up of Jesus had been the subject of prophecy from the time that sin entered into the world by the disobedience of Adam and his bride. The Lord God said unto the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." All the blood of beasts and birds upon Jewish altars declared the awful and glorious truth that once in the end of that typical, Jewish world should Jesus come and shed his blood for the remission of the sins of his people. "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Here is the explanation of the "all men" spoken of in the text; they are the "many sons" whom Jesus should bring unto glory. "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. For verily he took not on (him the nature of) angels; but he took on (him) the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren [the "all men" spoken of in the text], that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people."

Not only was the lifting up or crucifixion of Jesus foretold by the prophets, but also the time for its accomplishment, as well as his betrayal by Judas Iscariot. "Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." "Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the brethren rage, and the people imagine vain things?

The king of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together, against the Lord and against his Christ. For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done."—Acts ii. 23; iv. 25-28.

"Will draw all (men) unto me." In this declaration of Jesus we have the assurance that all for whom he should give his life a ransom would be drawn unto him. His death upon the cross and his resurrection from the dead has secured their deliverance from the law under which they were held captive; for he was delivered for their offenses, and was raised from the dead for their justification. "It pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief. When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous Servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bore the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors."—Isa. liii. 10-12. Said the apostle Peter, "This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." This is a "must be" salvation. The lifting up of Jesus did not make it possible for men to save themselves from their sins, but it has saved his people from their sins. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." While it is true that all for whom he was lifted up have not yet been brought to an experimental knowledge of their salvation by virtue of his atoning blood, yet that revelation to them is as certain as the fact that Jesus died and rose again. Said Jesus, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." Again, he said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him; and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me."—John vi.

It is often said by workmongrel religionists that God draws all men, but that all men do not come to him, because they are obstinate, and will not allow God to save them. This statement is often made by the men of Babylon who are in reputation for wisdom; but it would be difficult to find a greater display of ignorance of Bible truth, or perversion of the meaning of words, than is manifest in the above statement. To draw is to cause to move toward or after one by the exertion of force. How absurd to say that a thing is drawn and yet does not come. If Jesus will draw all men to him, then all men will come to him. But we know that all mankind do not come to him, and therefore he did not mean all mankind when he said he would draw all to him. To some he said, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." The reason they would not come to him was that he did not draw them; nor had they any will or desire to be drawn to him. But all that the Father giveth him shall come to him, and none of them shall be cast out, as he says. Again, he says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish; neither shall any (man) pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one." Even those whom Jesus will draw to him, while in a state of nature, without spiritual life, are without will to come to him. He is to them as a root out of dry ground, having no form nor comeliness, and there is no beauty in him that they should desire him. He is despised and rejected of them, and they esteem him not. But when called with a holy, effectual calling, not according to their works, but according to God's own purpose and grace, which was given them in Christ Jesus before the world began, they hear the voice of the Son of God and live. With this calling from death to life there is given them a knowledge of their sinful and helpless condition, and their just condemnation by the holy law of God, and a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, which can never be satisfied until they are drawn by and to Jesus, and behold him as the end of the law for righteousness, and as having been lifted up for their salvation. "To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious. Ye also, as lively [living] stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." "Unto you therefore which believe he is precious; but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient; whereunto also they were appointed. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy."

"My God, what silken cords are thine!
How soft, and yet how strong!
While power and truth and love combine
To draw our souls along.

"Drawn by such cords we onward move,
Till round thy throne we meet;
And captives in the chains of love,
Embrace our Conqueror's feet."

A WORD TO THE DRY BAPTISTS.

IN our recent travels we were introduced to many persons as "Dry Baptists;" and as we have found them to be quite numerous it has occurred to us that some notice should be taken of this hitherto neglected portion of our friends. But first, it may be proper for us to give a brief description of them. They are not called Baptists to signify that they baptize, as did John the Baptist, nor that they have themselves been baptized, as were John's disciples, or the primitive disciples of our Lord Jesus Christ; they are not therefore entitled to the name of Baptists in any scriptural sense of the word; for practically they are not Baptists at all. Nevertheless by a sort of common consent the term, as qualified by the adjective dry, has been used to denote a peculiar description of persons who evince a strong attachment to the people of God, attend strictly on the public ministry of the word, seem to receive the testimony of truth with avidity, are always ready to defend the cause of truth, so far as words or arguments are concerned, can tell what is regarded by saints as a christian experience, and can be satisfied with nothing short of the children's bread, and yet manage so as to keep out of the water. In their walk and conversation, and in all respects except the ordinance of baptism and those privileges to which gospel baptism is a prerequisite, they are agreed in sentiment, sympathy and feelings with the Baptists. They are somewhat deficient in confidence in regard to their vital interest in the blood and righteousness of the Son of God. They firmly believe that it is the privilege and duty of all who love our Lord Jesus Christ, to be "buried with him by baptism," and really feel that it would be a delightful privilege to them if they could only see their way clear; but alas! when they would do good, evil is present with them, and how to perform that which is good they find not; but they find a law in their members warring against the law of their minds, and bringing them into captivity; and from all that we can learn from them we are led to conclude that if they could be perfectly satisfied that this law of their members were slain, and that they should never be plagued any more with it, and that they were truly subjects of grace, and that they could do honor to a christian profession, they would gladly obey the command of Zion's King, and be baptized and unite with his church.

Having thus briefly described the characters to whom the appellation at the head of this article is given, and informed our readers that there are many of them scattered over all our country, we will say something of the advantages and disadvantages of their rebellious course. They are not subjected to so much persecution and reproach for righteousness' sake as they would be if they were obedient to the commands of Jesus Christ. For if any man will live godly in Christ Jesus he shall suffer persecution; and, of course, as they are living in disobedience it is reasonable to conclude that they will escape at least some of the persecutions which the saints are subjected to. The faithful admonitions of the saints to church members, when they walk disorderly, are rather mortifying to the flesh; but all such mortification the "Dry Baptists" escape, as they are not under the watchcare of the church; and even the world will look very differently on their foibles if they make no public profession of religion. They will also be very likely to escape the charge of hypocrisy, and of having a name to live when they are dead. These are some of the advantages, if they may be called, which the "Dry Baptists" enjoy; but against these there may be some offset in the disadvantages of this rebellious course.

In contemplating the disadvantages we shall find that the way of the transgressor is hard; for rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft and idolatry. He that knoweth his master's will, and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes; and we conclude that God's children who have experienced the quickening power of the Holy Spirit, who have felt the bitterness of sin, the fiery indignation and wrath of the law, and the efficacy of the Savior's blood applied for the remission of sin—those who have felt the joys of salvation and the love of God shed abroad in their souls, do know from painful experience something about the stripes and chastisements which the faithful God inflicts on his children when they forsake his law and walk not in his commandments. They feel an uncomfortable consciousness that all is not right; something whispers to them that their course betrays a want of gratitude to God their Savior; and when they mingle with the children of God they manifest a shyness, as though they were intruding; yet their hearts seem to go out after the society of God's people. The language of their hearts is,

"Entreat me not to go back;" but the language of their practice is, "Urge me not to go forward;" and so between a will to do and a want of confidence or energy to obey the commands of Christ, they tarry long in their disobedience. As their rebellion is in Scripture compared to the sin of witchcraft, it often brings them on a sort of "enchanted ground," where they spend their money for that which is not bread, and labor for that which satisfieth not, instead of hearkening diligently unto the authority of Christ, eating that which is good, and enjoying the sure mercies of David.—See Isa. lv. 2, 3. What they are vainly laboring for they can never attain unto; for they seem determined to walk by sight, whereas God has ordained that his followers shall walk by faith. If they could see their way clear, that is, if their natural judgment could be convinced that there were no impediments in the way, that they would never meet with anything to cause them to regret it, they would at once ease their consciences by taking Christ's yoke on them.

What we have written above is about the "Dry Baptists;" our intention was to address a few words to them. And as we feel in duty bound to preach to sinners, we know of no class of sinners to whom we can address ourselves with more propriety than those described above. But how shall we address them? Shall we call them brethren? We hope they are born of God; but Jesus has said, "Except a man deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me, he cannot be my disciple;" and, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." We doubt the propriety of calling them brethren, so long as they disown Sarah as their mother. We do not find it in our heart to call them reprobates, for we believe they are bought with a price, and will ultimately reign with Christ in immortal glory. Well, for want of a more appropriate name we will call them by the name by which they are frequently designated.

Ye "Dry Baptists," are you satisfied with the leeks and onions of Egypt? Are you willing to live and die in disobedience to him who has loved you and given himself for you? Have you ever reflected that Jesus your King has placed the ordinance of baptism as the very first command that is binding on heaven-born souls? This command being the very first enjoined, must be obeyed before you can obey any other. It is in baptism that the children of God take on them his yoke; and until they are yoked, they are not qualified to serve him. Nothing that you can do religiously, before you are baptized, can be in order, for in the order of his government that ordinance stands first; so long, therefore, as you neglect it, after having passed from death unto life, you are living in a state of open rebellion. May we not say to you as Laban said to Abraham's servant, "Come in, thou blessed of the Lord; wherefore standest thou without?"—Gen. xxiv. 31. If you have passed from death unto life, you belong to the household of God, and the church has a claim on you; whatever gift or talent for usefulness you may possess, is the property of the church; why, then, will you persist in your wicked course, and rob the church of what belongs to her, and your own souls of the privileges which are prepared for you in the Zion of our God? And, above all, why will you transgress the law which your covenant God has written in your hearts, and rank yourselves with the enemies of the cross of Christ? "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city; for without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."—Rev. xxii. 14, 15. Will you, can you, dare you, say that those who are without are your companions, your associates, and your chosen company? Your practice says all this; let your practice, then, no longer belie the language of your hearts.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 15, 1847.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

BY a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

CIRCULAR LETTERS.

The Salisbury Old School or Predestinarian Baptist Association, in session with the Broad Creek Church, Sussex Co., Del., Oct. 24th, 25th and 26th, 1894, sendeth greeting in the Lord to the several churches composing her body, and to all who are interested in her order.

DEARLY BELOVED:—We will at this time call your attention to the reading of such comments as we in our weakness may be able to make, from Jude 3. "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

The first word of the apostle in this address shows unmistakably the characters unto whom he was moved to write, showing that they were beloved; not of men particularly, but of God; and they were called to be saints, and were in sweet accord and fellowship with the apostle. Therefore, having a great desire for their spiritual comfort and joy in divine things, he was moved to give all study, which seems to be the meaning: studying over their condition as pilgrims and strangers in the land; not only strangers in the world, but sometimes strangers unto themselves, because of the strange acts of God toward and in them; bringing things to their view in a mysterious way, in order that to them the Scripture should always be true, "Great is the mystery of godliness;" making them witnesses that the kingdom of heaven with all its glory cometh not by observation. The apostle virtually says that he was moved to write to them of their salvation. He shows that by the use of the word common. Not as the word might be used under other circumstances, meaning inferior to other things, but belonging to many, and this to all God's people, which all who are manifest are deeply interested in. What does this word salvation mean? It has its various applications. When the apostle said to Timothy, "Who hath saved us," he meant reconciled to God by the death of Jesus. And when the same apostle in writing to the Hebrews says, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" he meant as it was made known to them in their personal experience. It is salvation as it is made manifest to them who are called of God. This the apostle gave all diligence to write to them about. Why write to them about that which they are already subjects of? Because God brings the blind by a way that they knew not, and leads them in paths that they had not known. They may possess all the knowledge of the world, they may have passed through the highest degrees of religious training, but it does not open the first avenue to the salvation of God. He opens up to them a new and living way, and that is through Jesus Christ; not by any provided way or scheme of men, or reform, or works of the sinner himself. Amidst and yet apart from all this high towering and confident boasting, behold, one feels from what he sees in himself or herself, "I am vile." From that time his or her boasted self-confidence or goodness begins to fade, like the flowers of the grass; as the prophet compares the goodness of man to the fading of the flower of grass, when the breath of the Lord has blown upon it. The sinner must realize that he or she is lost, and cut off from every refuge or way of retreat, and to feel like David when he met the defiant one of all Israel with no sword in his hand. When the bed upon which they had been resting becomes too short, and the covering with which they wrapped themselves too narrow, then they are being brought to see the need of salvation; and all such Jesus came to seek and to save. From this standpoint they are led to call upon the name of the Lord in truth. Then salvation is the reply. For the prophet has said that when the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, the Lord will hear them. But the cause of such a cry, and the answer to the cry, comes in such a way that the whole matter is wrapped up in a mystery; and it is the mystery of godliness; but it leaves the subjects of it in possession of a knowledge that the kings and nobles of the earth do not possess. The apostle John calls it an unction from the Holy One, whereby they know all things embraced in the gospel. He said to them that he did not write these things to them because they did not know the truth, but because they did know it, and truly to them it was no lie. So when the apostle Jude wrote to those who were sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Jesus Christ, and called, it was to present to them the theme of that salvation which was and is common to all the saints; assuring them that if they saw that the salvation of God's people was according to the oath and promise of God, and secured unto them in Jesus Christ, their covenant head, they are heirs of salvation; for the psalmist has said that the Lord will show unto the heirs of salvation his covenant. Now, it seems to be in the order of the gospel, commencing on the day of Pentecost, first to teach or instruct the saints, bringing before them the assurance that they are subjects of gospel exhortation; for we are told that on the day of Pentecost, with many things or words did the apostles teach, and then exhort, telling them what to do. And the apostle, after going over the ground by which the Lord had brought them, telling them what he had done, now he writes farther, and exhorts them, as he thought it needful, that they should earnestly contend for nothing more or less than what he by revelation of the Spirit had delivered once unto the saints. Only delivered once; that is, God's work never needed to be done again; for what God does is done forever; so that the prophets and apostles all walked by it, and all died in it. As the Scriptures tell us, this faith is the believer's strength. It is that which overcometh the world. And this, they should, according to the apostle's exhortation, earnestly contend for. This covers a great deal of ground; but we can only give a few hints in this letter.

To contend, according to one of our lexicons, is to strive, to struggle; not to fold our arms. It is not simply to use our tongues in a contentious way; for words are very weak if there is nothing to sustain them. One of the apostles pronounces faith without works dead. There was more earnestness shown in the movements of Abraham than there could have been in all that he could have said; also in Moses and Noah, and in many other cases, when there was a struggling or striving. The faith of God requires a certain manner in our persons, which forms our life. In the first place we should show by our life that we have no fellowship with antichrist; as light has no fellowship with darkness; as righteousness has no fellowship with unrighteousness. Contend by every step and every act, showing that the faith of God has separated; because it is the substance of things hoped for. It is contended for by an honest and upright walk, maintaining the principle of honesty and sobriety. The contending with our tongues and feet and hands, and our whole life, should agree in one, and

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess."

This is contending for what God has done; and this will draw a line between those that are truly the subjects of faith, and those that only have the word on their tongues.

A. B. FRANCIS, Mod.
J. H. TRUITT, Clerk.

CHURCH LETTERS.

The Dry Fork Primitive Baptist Church, to the Rock Spring Association of Primitive Baptists, to be held by appointment with us on the 24th, 25th and 26th days of August, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE LORD:—It is again our privilege to inform you of our standing; and as there are many claiming to be Primitive Baptists who are not, who have the name, but neither the doctrine nor order of the apostolic church, we feel it necessary in this letter to show you where we stand. It matters not what name we may wear; if we have not the doctrine and discipline taught by Christ and his apostles we are not Primitive Baptists. The prophet tells us that "seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." There are people claiming to be Primitive Baptists who are content to live upon the production of their own flesh, and clothe themselves with their own self-righteous works, as long as they can be called by the name which God's people wear; but he who was dead and is alive saith, "I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan." We see organizations dotting this country, claiming to be Primitive Baptists, but are only Satan's synagogue, which have a name that they live, and are dead; and their assumption of the name Baptist is but blasphemy. Many churches whose candlesticks have been removed still retain the name; but they are dead, have lost their savor, and are "good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." In order to be Primitive Baptists we must have (not falsely claim) both the faith and practice taught by Christ and his apostles. Now, brethren, let us heed the apostle's admonition, "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." Are we contending for the doctrine and order of the primitive church? If we believe and contend for what our Confession of Faith states we are; for our second article says, "We believe in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the true written word of God, and the only rule of faith and practice." Then, if the doctrine we advocate, or the order we practice, is not laid down in the Scriptures, we are found liars; and if we are opposing a doctrine or practice which we cannot condemn by the word of God we are found fighting against God. Then, brethren, "to the law and to the testimony" let us resort; for if we speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in us. Now, brethren, let us compare our doctrine and practice with that recorded in the Scriptures, and see if we be walking in the old paths.

The children of God are not of the world, even as Christ is not of the world. Their laws are diverse from all people. They are to dwell alone, and not to be reckoned with the nations; and they are commanded to "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." Is it manifest that we are not of the world, neither love the things that are in the world, when our members go into the secret lodges of the world, hid away from the eyes of their brethren, to revel with the wicked, for filthy lucre? Can we say that our laws are diverse from all people when our members go so far into the world as to take an oath to conform to those laws which even the world holds in secret? Again, the Lord to his people is their rock, their fortress, their deliverer, their strength, their shield, their buckler, the horn of their salvation, their high tower, and in him they trust. Are we making the Lord our strength, our deliverer, our shield, our help, is our trust in him, when we are joining ourselves to the world, entering into oath-bound leagues with them to secure their aid and protection? No, alas! but we are trusting in man, making flesh our arm, our hearts departing from the Lord; and the Lord says, "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord."—Jere. xvii. 5. Again, the Lord says to his people, "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." But if we belong to a secret society, and do a charitable deed, we do it in the name of the society, it gets the honor for it, and Christ is forgotten. We should be careful to maintain good works, but do them in the name of Christ, him be honored for it, and not the organizations of men. Brethren, consider how far we have departed from the ancient landmarks, and then tell us, Can you continue to fellowship these devices of men? We as a church cannot, and we have withdrawn fellowship from all members who still hold to them, and ask our sister churches to do the same. May the Lord enable you to cleanse yourselves from idols, and put every unclean thing out from among you.

We have appointed our beloved brethren to sit with you in our association, to wit, W. A. Caudill, Wm. Patton, Henry Eldridge and Andy Patton. Our standing is as follows (the statistics here given is the standing of the church before the division): Died 2; total 38.

May the Head of the church guide you in the way of righteousness.
Signed in behalf of the church.
J. W. FAIRCHILD, Mod. pro tem.
WM. PATTON, Clerk.

MINUTES.

PLEASE do not forget that we are prepared to print Minutes of the proceedings of the Associations and meetings of the brethren more correctly than the publishers of secular papers, who know nothing of the terms and expressions peculiar to the old, despised Baptists.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above.

These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

(Continued from page 355.)

until then) we can say with the apostle, "Count it all joy."

The apostle Paul, in writing to the brethren at Corinth, says, "There hath no temptation [trial] taken you but such as is common to man [the family of God]: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted [or tried] above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." There is no assurance that the trial or temptation will be removed until patience has had her perfect work; and it is through that perfect work that the way of escape is furnished. Listen: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them that are exercised thereby." The fruit of righteousness and the fruit of the Spirit are one. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy," &c.—Gal. v. 22. Do we then not find that when patience has had her perfect work, and we realize that falling into temptations is for the trial of our faith, do we not find, I say, that like Job our latter days are even better than the former ones; that God has dealt with us as with a child; that in our living and exalted Head we are complete and entire, and as he is also our Shepherd we are "wanting nothing?"

God bless his truth and pardon error.

R. M. STRONG.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct., 1894.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 18, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Inclosed I send you a letter written to me by the late Elder Wm. J. Purington. Some of our brethren and sisters have read it, and would like to see it in the SIGNS. Publish it if you think best.

I would be glad to meet with the church at Middletown, unworthy as I am of a name among you. I am a poor sinner, with a stammering tongue. I cannot tell my mind nor express my feelings toward God and his people; yet I long to meet with them. If I am one of the Lord's children I am less than the least. O that the Lord may keep me from bringing reproach upon his church, and that I may not wound the feelings of even one of his children. I ask for the prayers of the church. I desire a name and place with the church if they can bear with me in my weakness. I feel that I am of little benefit to the church, living so far from it. Remember me to the brethren and sisters. My love to you and the church.

Your brother, I hope,

P. GATES.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 27, 1891.

P. GATES—DEAR BROTHER:—Your letter, mailed the 16th instant, was received in due time and read with much interest; but since the reception of your letter I have been so engaged that I could not get an opportunity to answer until now.

My dear brother, I have to state that I would gladly answer your questions concerning the "two witnesses," spoken of in the eleventh chapter of Revelation, did I dare make the attempt; but it has not been the pleasure of the Lord to lead my mind into much of the awfully sublime imagery recorded in the book of Revelation, though I know that everything therein recorded is in perfect harmony with the rest of the Scriptures. How much of what was revealed to John has been fulfilled in the destruction of the Jews as a nation I cannot tell, also in the rise and fall of kingdoms and empires since John wrote, as well as in the organized church; but one thing is certain, all must be completed, if not fulfilled now. I can only make some suggestions concerning the two witnesses, and you may be thereby led to meditate thereon more fully.

In the fourth chapter of Zechariah the olive trees are spoken of in connection with Zerubbabel's building the house, &c. (when you have time read the entire chapter), and the same two olive trees in connection with the two candlesticks; and God by the Spirit said to John, "And I will give power unto my two witnesses," &c.; and then says of the two witnesses how long they prophesy, &c.

In the purpose of God he has represented his witnesses by the dual number two; for when God gave to Israel his commandment it was Moses and Aaron, then Joshua and Caleb, then Ezekiel the priest and Daniel the prophet, Joshua and Zerubbabel, John and Christ. They truly might be called "living olive trees," for the truth of God was given through them. God gave Elijah, which is Elias, a prayer to deliver, and the heaven gave no rain for the space of three years and six months; which, allowing three hundred and sixty days for a Jewish year, would make the exact time that they prophesied clothed in sackcloth. Read carefully the sixth verse in the eleventh chapter of Revelation.

Also, the church had a living witness composed of Jews, and now one composed of Gentiles. Now the two Testaments, viz., the Old Testament ministering consolation to believers under the old or legal dispensation, and the New Testament to-day for the church.

At the transfiguration two witnesses appeared, viz., Moses and Elias; but to-day those witnesses are not believed by the great mass of the so-called religious world, but are actually trodden under the feet of men, and in that sense are dead, and their dead bodies are lying "in the street of the great city [this ungodly world of mankind], which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified."

My brother, I have made the above suggestions for your meditation.

Affectionately yours,

WM. J. PURINGTON.

CORRESPONDING LETTERS.

The Salisbury Old School Baptist Association, in session with the church at Broad Creek, Sussex Co., Del., Oct. 24th, 25th and 26th, 1894, to the several associations and meetings with which she corresponds, sendeth love in the Lord.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:

—We are once more permitted by our covenant-keeping God to meet in an associate capacity. We have been favored to sit together in a heavenly place in Christ. Our hearts have truly been cheered by the coming of so many able ministers of the new testament, and so richly laden with the unsearchable riches of Christ Jesus our Lord. They truly came in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel. We truly feel to thank and adore the God of heaven, and take courage, and to go on our way with renewed strength.

We do feel to rejoice that the report from all the churches is that they are living in peace with each other, and in the same sweet fellowship with each other, and with their sister churches of this Association.

We still occupy the same ground upon which we have ever stood by the grace of God, believing that salvation is alone by the grace of that God who said, "I will do all my pleasure." We desire to know no other God but the one who is able to bring his children through the fire; yes, able to save to the uttermost all who come unto him by Jesus Christ.

We desire a continuance of your correspondence, as we believe it to be profitable unto edification.

Our next session is appointed to be held with the church at Little Creek, Sussex Co., Del., commencing on Wednesday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1895, when we hope to again have the privilege of greeting your messengers and to receive your messages of love.

A. B. FRANCIS, Mod.

J. H. TRUITT, Clerk.

WHY IS IT

THAT in reply to our notices to delinquents so few respond? Certainly there must be some carelessness, brethren.

While we do not wish to distress any of our subscribers who are in arrears with subscription, yet we are compelled to again appeal to all who can make a remittance on amounts due to please assist us through our present financial cramp by sending on such amounts as they can conveniently spare. Several weeks ago we sent out nearly a thousand notices to delinquents, the aggregate of whose accounts amounted to about three thousand dollars, and thus far we have received only about three hundred dollars upon these accounts.

MARRIAGES.

On Oct. 17th, 1894, by Elder G. N. Tusling, Dr. R. M. Bonar, of Hebron, and Miss Lora S. White, all of Licking Co., Ohio.

By the same, on Oct. 18th, 1894, Mr. Edward J. Rowls, of Fairfield Co., Ohio, and Miss Annie S. Nixon, of Hocking Co., Ohio.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At the residence of her son, Mr. Charles Graham, near New Vernon, Orange Co., N. Y., on October 11th, 1894, sister Maria Graham, in the 75th year of her age.

She was born in Scotchtown, Orange Co., N. Y., Nov. 12th, 1819, her maiden name being Connor. She was married at the same place, on Oct. 12th, 1832, to Mr. Wm. Graham, who died on Feb. 2d, 1880. Eleven children were born to them.

Sister Graham was received in the fellowship of the New Vernon Old School Baptist Church, and baptized by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, on Sept. 5th, 1875, and continued a worthy and beloved member of the same until the Lord called her to her eternal home.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins; after which her mortal remains were laid by the side of her husband in the New Vernon cemetery.—Ed.

Thomas M. Hyatt departed this life at his residence in Middletown, N. Y., on Sept. 27th, 1894, aged 54 years and 13 days.

He was born in Warwick, N. Y., Sept. 14th, 1840, and was the eldest son of David Hyatt and Matilda Case, long since deceased. He was sick for two weeks previous to his death, the immediate cause of which was valvular disease of the heart. His sufferings for the last five hours were intense; but he bore all with patience and fortitude, never murmuring nor complaining. Although he had not made public profession of faith in Christ, he was a lover of the truth, and loved to contend for it. Hymn 488, of Beebe's Collection, was a great favorite of his during his sickness, especially the verses, "Through many dangers, toils and snares I have already come;

'Tis grace has brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home.

"The earth will soon dissolve like show,
The sun forbear to shine;
But God, who called me here below,
Will be forever mine."

He leaves his wife and three daughters, Minnie, Nettie and Josie, all at home.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins, who discoursed from the thirty-second Psalm; after which the mortal remains of the husband and father were interred in the Philipburgh cemetery, about three miles from his late residence.

May the bereaved family realize abundantly the assurance that "A father of the fatherless, and a judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation."—Ed.

DIED—At the residence of her daughter, in Shannondale, Ind., Elizabeth Vail, widow of Moses Vail.

Elizabeth Vail was born in Butler Co., Ohio, near Middletown, Feb. 24th, 1813. She was married to Moses Vail on Feb. 12th, 1829, by 'Squire Irwin, near her birthplace. She and her husband experienced religion in the winter of 1831, joined the church on March 19th, and were baptized in May of the same year by Wm. Bascom. Eight children were born to them, seven of whom survive. She was left a widow July 31st, 1876. They lived near Middletown about two years, removing thence to near Princeton, nine miles south of Middletown. In 1833 they moved one mile west of Princeton, living there until the death of the husband. Four years after that the widow went to make her home with her daughter Ellen, in Indiana, remaining there the rest of her days.

She was taken sick Oct. 21st, with paralysis of the lungs, and died Oct. 22d, very peacefully and quietly, aged 81 years, 7 months and 28 days. Her remains were taken back to Ohio, and laid beside her husband in Greenwood Cemetery, at Hamilton, five children being present to see her laid away. She made a request three years ago that a statement of her death, &c., be sent to the SIGNS after her decease.

By her granddaughter,
CORA JEWELL.
SHANNONDALE, Ind.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS OF MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

THE

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIMS PROGRESS,

and a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

In this superfine edition of this charming story we have presented a perfect portrait gallery of almost every imaginable type of humanity in the characters so indelibly impressed upon our minds by Bunyan's vivid description.

The copious explanatory notes are very concise, right to the point, abound in beautiful thoughts, and throw a flood of light on Bunyan's "Immortal Allegory."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

THIS work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principle cities, etc., etc.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.
G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz.: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1894.

NO. 46.

POETRY.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

ART thou with true humility
And self-aborrence blest?
And dost thou feel thyself to be Less than the very least?
Is sorrow for thy waywardness
Deep graven on thy heart?
And wouldst thou for a Savior's love
From every idol part?
And do the tears of midnight's gloom
Bear witness to thy cries,
That Satan may not overcome
Or take thee by surprise?
Dost thou most solemnly confess,
"Lord, I am weak and vile;
O pardon all my sinfulness,
And bless me with thy smile?"
Have Jesus' visits ever been
To thee so sweet and dear,
The thought of grieving him again
Was more than thou couldst bear?
Are the dear children of the Lord,
Despised though they be,
In poverty and wretchedness,
Beloved still by thee?
Though silent in their company
From fearfulness of heart,
Unwilling they should think of thee
As better than thou art.
Yet dost thou with them sympathize
In pain and loss and grief,
Although thou art not able to Afford them much relief?
Couldst thou refuse a diadem
Where Jesus is not known,
Preferring his reproaches to Advancement and renown?
And couldst thou poverty endure
Beneath the gospel's sound,
Rather than leave it for a land
Where earthly goods abound?
If thou canst read thy features here,
Then thou mayest comfort take:
Jehovah is thy Savior, and He'll never thee forsake.

BIDE A WEE AND DINNA FRET.

Is THE road very dreary?
Patience yet.
Rest will be sweet if thou art a-weary,
And after the night cometh the morning
cheery;
Then bide a wee and dinna fret.
The clouds have silver lining,
Don't forget;
An' though he's hidden, still the sun is shining;
Courage instead of tears and vain repin-
ing.
Just bide a wee and dinna fret.
When with toils and cares unending
Thou'rt beset,
Bethink thee how the storms from heaven descending
Snap the stiff oak, but spare the willow bending,
And bide a wee and dinna fret.
Grief sharper sting doth borrow
From regret;
But yesterday is gone, and shall its sorrow
Unfit us for the present and the morrow?
No; bide a wee and dinna fret.
An over-anxious brooding
Doth beget
A host of fears and fantasies deluding;
Then, brother, lest these torments be intruding,
Just bide a wee and dinna fret.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GHEENT, Ky., Oct. 30, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—The apostle says, "Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."—1 Cor. iii. 21-23.

The apostle commences this epistle with the following words, "Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours." This broad and comprehensive language covers and embraces the saints of this day, as well as those who then were in Corinth; and evidently the great and precious truth recorded in that epistle was given for the comfort and edification of the people of God who now live upon the earth, as well as those who then lived amidst scenes of persecution in Corinth. Then it is highly appropriate that we who are now sojourners upon the earth should turn our thoughts and meditations to the precious and sublime truth given to us in the text at the head of this article.

"All things are yours." How infinitely comprehensive is this language! It covers the vast universe of God. "All things are yours." Let the finite mind attempt to grasp all that is embraced in this language, and we are lost in wonder and amazement. Yet all that is embraced in those words is given to and belongs to the saints. They are theirs by the gift of an unchanging God, given to them for a purpose, not that they should glory therein; but "he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." It is written, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." "God is love;" and the election of grace was and is the object on which that love rested. "All things are yours." That love was the great moving cause which led to the creation of all things. In love for his saints, his chosen people, he created the heavens for his glory; and they being his, one with him, the heavens were created for them. "In his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bear them, and carried them all the days of old." All things are his, and in their unity with him all things are made theirs. Hence it was appropriate for the apostle to say, "All things are yours;" and to further say, "By him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him." In that great and wonderful display of his power, made manifest in the creation of all things, he was moved by his love for his people, who were one with him. He says by the psalmist, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge." Now, dear saints, let us remember that God in his infinite power and wisdom created all things for his own glory; and you, being joint heirs with him, will all be made the happy participants with him in that glory. But the apostle particularizes, and says, "Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas." These were true ministers, called of God to proclaim the everlasting gospel; and they represent all whom God calls to the great work of preaching the gospel.

But it will be remembered that these great assurances were alone made to the church of God, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Then the true ministry is the gift of God to the church. Paul said to the church at Galatia, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." To the church at Corinth he declared what that preaching was when he said, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." He declared the testimony of God, not knowing anything among them save Jesus Christ and him crucified. In this he obeyed the command of his Lord, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." All true ministers of the gospel know that the world by wisdom knoweth not God, and the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. They know that the gospel cannot be preached without preaching Jesus, and telling of his glory, power, wisdom, love and mercy; and they know that the saints are not comforted, edified and built up in their most holy faith unless Jesus is preached to them. They by the grace of God are given that faith which works by love. They by the power of the Holy Spirit are made to know him who is life eternal. In that knowledge they see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor. He suffered the cruel death of the cross, that they might be redeemed from all iniquity. But O how they often mourn on account of sin in their mortal bodies! Still they have this great and glorious assurance from the lips of him who trod the winepress of his Father's wrath alone, that he might bring in eternal righteousness and redemption for them. By his suffering they are made perfect, made free from the galling yoke of sin, and forever liberated from the dark prison-house of the law. If Christ make you free, ye shall be free indeed—free from sin, free from death, free from the grave; for he is their resurrection and their life.

But in that great and wondrous gift the world is given to them for a home, for a dwelling place, till they are disrobed of mortality. Their glorious Lord took upon himself a body, in which he trod the green plains of earth. While in that body he set up no claims to the things in which the natural man glories. He said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." But the children are partakers of flesh and blood, and he took part of the same for the suffering of death. He came to earth in that holy and heavenly mission; and upon this earth, in this world, he set an example of suffering and patience. But how the dear saints often mourn because they fall so far short of following that example! They are impatient under persecution. Yet they know that it is written, "If any man will live godly in Christ Jesus he shall suffer persecution." Persecution is part of their inheritance in this world, which was given them; but for their joy while here below faith is given them, by which they are enabled to see Jesus, and behold the superlative glories that shine forth in his great and wondrous character, and by the grace of God are enabled to love him, and to love one another, which is the unerring test of their heirship to the ineffable glories of the fairer worlds on high. While surrounded with the cares, sorrows and afflictions of earth, and standing on the verge of a never-ending eternity, as this poor, little one now is, they rise on the wings of hope, and with an eye of faith behold that land which is very far off. That faith and that hope are freely bestowed upon them; and in those fruits of the Spirit they rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. In this world they have the life which now is, with all its trials and gloom, and the promise of the life which is to come; yea, they have that life reigning in them now. Their Lord hath said, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." In that life they enjoy the sweets of redeeming love, and cry out, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." It is then that they, like Abraham, seek a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God; and they realize that this world is not their home, is not their abiding place.

But they have death also. They know that without death there would be no glorious resurrection. They are assured that this mortal must put on immortality. In the sweets of that never-ending immortality they fondly hope and trust that they will be with Jesus, be like him, and see him as he is; see him in all his radiant glory, with their hearts and voices attuned to the sweet melodies of the skies. For their joy while in their earthly pilgrimage the apostle has told them, "Ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." What a great and wonderful unity! "Ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." O think of it, dear follower of Jesus, that you belong to him who has all power both in heaven and in earth, in whom dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and who attested his love for you when he passed through the sorrows of Gethsemane and the tortures of Calvary, that he might bring in everlasting righteousness and redemption for you; that he might make you kings and priests unto God; that you might reign with him in glory throughout the never-ending cycles of eternity. What more can you crave while in these low grounds of sin and sorrow? The apostle hath said to you, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." You were predestinated to the adoption of sons, saved, and called with a holy calling, redeemed with the precious blood of Christ, and fitted by grace divine for a place in that kingdom which he set up on earth; that kingdom which the Lord established in the top of the mountain of God's eternal and unchanging love, and exalted above the hills of poor, sin-polluted man's vanity and superstition, and for a place at the right hand of God, where there are joys evermore. The apostle further says to you, "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" Christ was given in the everlasting covenant of redemption by the Father, and in that great and wonderful gift all things that pertain unto life and godliness were secured to his saints, his redeemed. Then, well might the apostle say, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" What shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? But that inspired man of God triumphantly says, "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." These comforting assurances are given to the dear saints because they are Christ's, and Christ is God's. That God is he of whom Moses speaks when he says, "There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun, who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the sky." For the comfort of his redeemed Moses further says, "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." Then surely, dear saint, "ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's;" to whose great and wondrous name be all the glory.

You will please dispose of these thoughts as you may deem best. They are the meditations of one to whom the vanities of earth are fast passing away, and they may be my last benediction to the dear saints, who are richly fed on the glorious truth of the gospel through the columns of the SIGNS. Be that as it may, I feel to adopt this language of Job, "If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come."

Affectionately yours,

H. COX.

OAK LANE, PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I inclose a letter from a dear aged sister in Missouri, who has now passed away. Her husband still lives at Green Ridge, Mo., and is a subscriber for the SIGNS. I thought he would be pleased to see her letter in our paper, as would also many of the friends she names in it, some of whom I know take the SIGNS. I have long intended to send it, but am such a poor hand at copying. As the letter contains a great deal not of interest to SIGNS readers, I could not send the original. I think it a wonderfully good letter from one of her years and bodily affliction, strong in the faith once delivered to the saints. Many sentences I have been compelled to leave out for brevity's sake, all breathing faith in and thankfulness to our Father in heaven.

We were truly sorry to miss our dear brother, Wm. L. Beebe, from the editorial department. We have felt that he ably filled the place. We hope you may yet induce Elder Jenkins to take the place for which he seems fully competent. We hope the Lord may direct you in choosing, and bless the choice wherever it falls, for the welfare of the dear old SIGNS is very near to us.

We spent last Saturday and Sunday with our dear sister Purington at Hopewell, N. J. Her health was better than when last we saw her. She seems just waiting for her summons to join the dear departed, our much loved brother Purington. She loves to tell of him, and how dearly we loved to hear every word. We think it would do the brethren good to visit her, she seems to appreciate every attention so much.

With love to yourself and the household of faith, unworthily your sister, SUSIE E. TERRY.

TIPTON, Mo., March 22, 1892.

MRS. SUSIE E. TERRY—DEAR SISTER:—It seems a long time since I have had a word from you. I do not know which owes the letter, but that does not matter with me. I do not suppose you will object to hearing from one who holds you in the bonds of love as a friend, and as a sister in the church of the same faith and order, unless you have changed since I last heard from you; but I hope not. There seems to be so much wrangling and controversy of late, it is sorrowful to think of. How any one that claims to be a Primitive Baptist can drop off and follow after such flimsy stuff as is called preaching in this day and time I cannot understand. It really looks like they are trying to take all power from God and give it to man. It gets worse all the time. It troubles me to see sensible people so blinded as to pin such faith to man and give him all the glory. We have had no preaching for more than a year at the church where we hold our membership (Bethlehem); but nearly all the members are dead or moved away. Our dear old pastor, brother John West, died one year ago last "Thanksgiving." He dropped dead from his chair at the breakfast table. He lived in Lamonte, Pettis Co., Mo. It was sad news to us. All the preaching we have had since is from the SIGNS, which is a great comfort to us. We do not know how we could give it up. My husband sent and got the first and second volumes of brother Beebe's Editorials; he enjoys reading them so much. I sent for our dear afflicted sister Mary Parker's last book. I have had the first since it came out in pamphlet form. I see in one of her letters to a sister, where she sends her love to sister Terry. I wondered if it were you. Dear, suffering sister! how does she live and write as she does? I feel sorry for her, and fear she can never get well. I wrote her a long letter a few weeks since. I am very much afflicted myself. I fell and nearly broke my back since I saw you, and more than a year ago I fell and broke my arm at the wrist, and dislocated my right hand so badly that my fingers are all stiff, so I cannot open or shut them. I cannot sew or do any kind of work with my needle any more. I have to hold the pen between my stiff fingers, which is very tiresome; but it was always a pleasure to me to write to my friends, and get letters from them, telling me how they are getting along in this world of sickness, sorrow and death. I try to feel thankful it is as well with me as it is. We are not our own. God's will, not ours, be done. His ways are past finding out. I have had much sorrow of late, still I am blessed. I still have my dear husband to comfort me and provide for all my wants with love and kindness; for how long we know not, and well it is for us it is so. Our children are all scattered; none are left with us in our old age; but they are very kind to us, and if we get sick they come and care for us. We have nearly all the comforts of life, pleasant neighbors, as healthy a situation as we could find any where. O! if we only had a good "Hard-shell" Baptist preacher to proclaim the gospel in its purity, and near enough to visit us. There is not one in our county that I know of. When I read of the good preaching you have, I long to be with you. Dear sister, I want you to tell me all about your good meetings. I must tell you of the pleasant, good time we had last fall going to meetings. We got very hungry for preaching. On the sixth day of September we started on our way to our association, which convened at Little Arrow Rock Church, near Slater, Saline Co., Mo. We visited relatives and friends all along on our way for a week, crossed the Missouri River at Arrow Rock, and spent several days in Howard County, with a relative. We reached the church in due time on Saturday morning. The meeting was largely attended, and great interest manifested. One would not have thought the Old Baptists were all dead. There were fourteen preachers; some old, white heads, some young in years, but old in proclaiming the gospel truth. The preachers were few in number to what I have seen, but we were satisfied. We put up with brother Coplin, the pastor of the church. We did not miss a sermon day or night. Meeting broke up on Monday in love and harmony. Brother Botts and wife, from Walnut Branch Church, accompanied us as far as Sweet Springs and then went on home. We spent several days at Sweet Springs with Thomas Nelson and family, and then went on to Green Ridge to visit our children. We had a very pleasant visit with them, and went out in the country to visit your sister. We enjoyed our visit very much with them all. We remained in the Ridge till the association at Bethlehem Church came off, near Winsor. We had a splendid meeting, largely attended, and I must say, the best preaching from beginning to end I ever heard in my life, and the most hospitable people we ever met; not a stranger among them. All was love and kindness. We felt,

"Not as a stranger or a guest,
But like a child at home."

We then came back to Green Ridge and remained until the yearly meeting at Walnut Branch Church, which lasted three days. It was well attended. Two preachers were present, brethren Ogle and Barnes. We had a good meeting, and formed many pleasant acquaintances. After the meeting closed we went to Lamonte, Pettis Co., to visit our dear old pastor's widow, sister West; also sisters Reaves and Baldwin. Brother Reaves was one of our preachers, and died about the same time brother West died. With those sisters we went to visit sister Hughs, the worst afflicted person I ever saw. She was paralyzed, and drawn out of shape, so that she cannot help herself the least in any respect. She can talk so you can understand by close attention. She says all she has left is her mind. She praised God while we were there for his goodness. Her son and his wife take care of her. She is a great care. I have not heard from her since we were there. I often think of her, she is so like poor sister Mary Parker. I feel ashamed to complain for there are so many so much more afflicted than I. I can go around, and have very good use of my limbs, for which I try to feel thankful. After we left Lamonte we went back to Green Ridge, and spent several days, and came home after a trip of three months, feeling better in health, and revived in spirits. We did all our traveling in our buggy, several hundred miles, and visited in five counties.

Dear sister, why do you not write some for the SIGNS? You write us beautiful letters. Now please let us hear from you in that way, and by private letter too. It is true I have never known much of you, except through hearsay and correspondence, but you have always felt near and dear to me. I am the last one of my father's family. My only sister is gone. She was more like a mother to me. Our mother died when I was a babe, only two years old; but I was blessed with a dear, good step-mother. I should feel lonely indeed were it not for my kind, loving husband, who is more than all the world to me. I hope I greatly appreciate all the blessings bestowed upon me. We hear from your brother Bise sometimes through the SIGNS. We would love to see him and hear him preach. Sister, if you laugh at my long scribble I do not care. I will not hear you. If you get tired of reading it, just lay it down and rest. You must excuse an old woman of seventy-two years, who longs to speak with and hear from her kindred in Christ. Give our kindest regards to your husband. I suppose we can claim him as a brother. I have been told he is one of the poor, despised "Hard Shells." We love him all the better for that. They feel near and dear to us wherever they are. Not that they are perfect, but we love them for their very imperfections, for therein lies the fellowship. But I really must close, with love and best wishes from myself and husband for you all. May God bless us in this world, and in the world to come.

R. ANN CRAIG.

CATSKILL, N. Y., July 29, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—The SIGNS comes to me regularly, and is the only source of the preaching of the word I have, being located over thirty miles from any church of our faith and order; hence I the more appreciate the value of your excellent and faithful work and labor of love, and the communications of those whom I believe are the beloved disciples of Christ, walking in newness of life. If God has ever revealed himself to me as my Redeemer, my Savior (which when I look at myself, my daily walk and conversation, I have reason to doubt), it is alone through the riches of his grace and abundant mercy.

"Nothing in my hand I bring, Simply to thy cross I cling."

When I get down in the valley of humiliation, and see in myself nothing but weakness, then am I strong in the Lord; and when I feel that he lifts upon me the light of his countenance for one small moment, then

"Tis a heaven below,
My Redeemer to know."

And I feel a sweet fellowship, communion and love for the brethren, whose hearts are opened to understand the revealed word, and whose pens are ever ready to write for the comfort and consolation of the poor in spirit. I have thought much today of the faith of the prophets and holy men of old. Many of their declarations were introduced thus, "The word of the Lord came unto me, saying;" and it seems to have been the groundwork of their faith, as it surely is of mine. We read, "In the beginning was the Word." "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Then does it not appear that this same Jesus, the Word of the Lord, was with them, to guide and direct them? "Sacrifice and offerings thou wouldest not; but a body hast thou prepared me." He was recognized in the flesh by God himself, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased: hear ye him." Then why should we, who have tasted of the good things to come, be discouraged, or our faith be shaken, knowing the great sacrifice was made, the debt paid, the work finished? I say, knowing this, through the Comforter, the Holy Ghost.

While some brethren are so fearful of making God the author of sin, it seems to me conclusive that this very Word being with them of old, and also with us, sums up the whole question of the absolute predestination of all things. Satan we find going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it, and asking the same question as he did in the case of Job. The Lord said to Satan, "Hast thou considered my servant Job?" And Satan answered the Lord, "But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face." Job little knew the fiery trials with which God would try him. The only reserve made was, "But save his life." No, Satan cannot touch that, for it is hid with Christ in God. Herein is the security of every subject of God's grace. In all his trial Job maintained his integrity? Why? The Word of the Lord came unto him, saying, &c.

Please pardon my intrusion upon your time and patience. I had no thought of writing so much; but perhaps it may draw forth from you an editorial that may comfort others, as these thoughts have comforted me. Although strangers in the flesh, I would like to correspond with some of the Old Baptists who have patience to bear with my imperfections, that I might grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. My prayer to God is for the welfare of Zion, as it seems, in her low estate; and may you long be spared to wield "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," through the power and revelation of Almighty God.

I would be very much pleased to see a communication from Elder F. A. Chick on Titus i. 15, 16.

My great failing is that I never know when to stop. Very unworthily, I sign myself a companion in tribulation,

J. E. MOORE.

SANDUSKY, Ala., Oct., 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I do not know that my approval of the way you conduct the SIGNS of late will be of any great force or encouragement, but I feel inclined to cast in my mite with others, and say amen to what Elder Durand has already said better than I could frame it. Your father's editorials do have what I understand to be the old time gospel ring or sound; and to many like myself, that have been brought in and become readers long since they were first published, they are new, fresh and comforting; and the old readers are carried back by them to memories of years gone by, and read them again with interest and instruction.

The old order of Baptists may long be thankful for such an able gift at such an appropriate time. The enemies had come in like a flood, and the Spirit of the Lord lifted up a standard against them, in the person of your father, and other bold soldiers of the cross; but he was the most conspicuous object for the batteries of the enemies, having founded the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. Yet he turned their own weapons upon them many times, and gave them defeat. He was like a David in Israel, and did not fear the greatest champions of the eager foe. The immortalized Fuller and Judson he could handle as two birds; and the minor generals, who used Arminian shot and shell, retreated from the field, with the decision, "We had best to let him alone."

His editorial republished in the SIGNS for October 10, 1894, shows how firmly and uncompromisingly he maintained the principles pledged in the prospectus. I wish all the Baptists in the United States could read it, unbiased and prayerfully. Surely those who have tried to set up against such doctrine have never seen his plain and logical argument. It further shows the spirits he had to combat against at that time; and those who oppose this doctrine now, seem to bid those spirits God speed.

I am some distance from your office, and would not presume to dictate for you; but when you have conducted the SIGNS in the present way as far as you see proper, I don't see why you could not appoint Elder Jenkins editor, and let him choose an assistant, if he feels to need one, and still go on with the good work. His experience with the paper would help his qualifications for the editorial department, and it seems to me that he would be an appropriate man for the place. He may feel like Moses did when called to go into Egypt as a prophet and leader of Israel; and if he does, he feels just right for the work. When Joab gave Ahimaaz leave to go to the king with tidings, he outran Cush; but when he got there he could not tell anything but "tumult, tumult," and had to stand aside till Cush came and told the king of Absalom's death. This is a fair illustration of those that are so anxious to go and do some great thing, and those that are called of God and sent to the work. The Arminian orders are outrunning the Old Baptists to different quarters of the earth, but when they get there they can tell no more about the death of Christ than Ahimaaz could tell about Absalom. They pretend to count converts by the hundreds, sometimes; but they are like the national Israelites; there is an

(Continued on page 367.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 14, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

NO FORGIVENESS.

"WHEREFORE I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."—Matt. xii. 31, 32.

By request of several brethren we will attempt to express our understanding of what is taught in the above Scripture. It is sometimes easier to understand what a declaration of Scripture does not mean, than to determine what it does mean. We know from the general teaching of the Scriptures that Jesus does not here teach that there is a sin which a child of God may be guilty of that God will never forgive, or that the blood of Jesus cannot wash away. The Savior himself here declares, "All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men." No sin, however heinous, which a child of God may be guilty of, can cause him to lose his inheritance of heaven and immortal glory. Says Jesus, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any (man) pluck them out of my hand."

Two worlds are spoken of in the text. When Jesus spake the words he was with his people under the law, in that typical, legal world, where the Pharisees were who uttered the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, and for which there was no forgiveness in the law of that world. Blasphemy under that law was a sin unto death. No offering might be brought by the Israelite guilty of blasphemy that could save him from the penalty of death. The law made no provision for an offering for that sin, as in some other cases, such as sins of ignorance, &c. There was therefore no forgiveness in that world or law for any Israelite who was a blasphemer. This is what Jesus means when he says that "whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, &c. The law relating to blasphemy in that typical world is recorded in Leviticus xxiv. 16. "And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord [Jehovah], he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him; as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the Lord [Jehovah], shall be put to death." No forgiveness here.

Let us now turn and read the circumstances that called forth the declaration of the Savior in our text. "Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw. And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the Son of David? But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils. And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation: and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand: and if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house. He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."—Matt. xii. 22-30. This was blasphemy; not a sin of ignorance. Their natural reason condemned their conduct. It was a willful sinning. These Pharisees were learned, intelligent men. They knew, as Jesus told them, that "if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself: how shall then his kingdom stand?" They knew that no one could enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house. Nicodemus, a member of the Pharisees, and speaking for them, said to Jesus, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles which thou doest, except God be with him." This confession of one of their number is evidence that these Pharisees were convinced that Jesus was a "teacher come from God," and consequently that the miracles he wrought were not by the prince of devils. But what they professed to know was the work of a teacher come from God, they ascribed to the prince of the devils. This was proof that malice moved them to say and do as they did in this matter; and had the law of that typical world been executed upon them, they would have been put to death. They were not speaking against Jesus, the Son of man, but against the Holy Ghost, by which he cast out devils. "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils." This was speaking a word against the Holy Ghost, and was blaspheming the name of the Lord—Jehovah.

"The world to come," in which "whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him," is the gospel world, or kingdom, in distinction from the legal, Jewish, typical world; as it is written, "But now once, in the end of the world, hath he [Jesus] appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."—Heb. ix. 26.

The inspired writer of the epistle to the Hebrews tells the saints that the things that happened unto the carnal Israelites in that old world were types of spiritual things found in the gospel world or kingdom. If there is nothing in the gospel kingdom (the new heavens and the new earth) which answers to the sin of blasphemy and its punishment as found in the legal world, why speak of it as a type? Surely every type must have its antitype; every shadow must have its substance; every pattern must have its reality. We are told that "the law was given by Moses; but grace and truth [or the real substance] came by Jesus Christ." Indeed the writings of the apostles are little else than a presentation of the real spirit or substance of what was contained in the law as given by Moses, which is said to have a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things. We may rest assured that we have in the gospel kingdom the antitype of everything that existed in the legal, typical, shadowy kingdom or world. As the sin of blasphemy under the typical law was a sin unto death, so must it be under the gospel law in the spiritual Israel. We have seen in the quotation from Lev. xxiv. 16 that the typical Israelite who was a blasphemer was certainly to be stoned to death by the congregation. This, of course, was corporeal death; but in the antitype it is not that. Even the carnal Israelites found that it was a fearful thing to fall into the hands of Israel's God, who said to that nation, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore will I punish you for all your iniquities."—Amos iii. 2.

The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews says to the "holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling," "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."—Heb. x. 26-31.

"All manner of sin and blasphemy." There is more than one manner of sin, and more than one manner of blasphemy. There were sins committed by the carnal Israelites which were unto death, and for which there was no forgiveness. The sinner must die for them. There were also sins which were not unto death. The same is true under the gospel dispensation among spiritual Israel, who have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. It was as a redeemed people that Israel in the type were disciplined by the God who redeemed them from Egypt, the house of bondage. Their God chastised them, scourged them severely at times, because they were his redeemed people. Alas! how many of them died for their wickedness. But they were Israelites, and a redeemed people, whether dead or alive; whether obedient or disobedient.

It has been said that no subject of God's grace can speak a word against the Holy Ghost, and that therefore such cannot be guilty of the sin of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost; that the sins of all the people of God are against Jesus, the Son of man, and have been atoned for by him; that their blessedness consists in this, that their sins are not imputed to them, but to Jesus, and that by his sufferings and death he paid all the claim that divine justice had upon them; that Jesus by his own obedience atoned for all the sins of his people; past sins, present sins, and sins that may yet be committed by them; that the sins of all others, who are not the people of God, are against the Holy Ghost, and not against Jesus, the Son of man, and therefore have not been atoned for by him; so that such persons must eternally suffer the vengeance of God, there being no forgiveness for them. This, we believe, is the usual interpretation of the words of the dear Redeemer at the head of this article.

It is indeed a precious truth that Jesus is the life of all his people, the head of the church, which is his body; that the sword of divine justice did awake against him as the Shepherd of the sheep; that he did bear their sins in his own body on the cross, and made ample atonement for them. Hence the apostle gives the challenge, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us."—Rom. viii. 33, 34. It is also written in the prophets, "It pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities."—Isa. liii. 10, 11. "For he hath made him to be sin [a sin offering] for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." "God was in Christ, reconciling the world [his people in all the world, both Jew and Gentile] unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them." "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." "By one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us." "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

The inspired writer of the epistle to the Hebrews testifies of Jesus thus, "And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance." So the saints are said to be delivered from the law, "that being dead wherein we were held," &c. "God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." So when Jesus was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, his church, which is his body, was raised up "together with him," was redeemed, not only from the curse of the law, but also from under the law itself. In the Lord's own set time, when those for whom Jesus thus died and rose again shall be born of the Spirit, the Holy Ghost will be a witness to them of their part in that wonderful transaction of Jesus, their glorious Redeemer and Savior. It is as redeemed from under that law of sin and death that the apostle John says of them, they cannot sin; for no one can transgress a law that they are not under. "That being dead wherein we were held." But while it is true, as the apostle declares, that the saints are "not under the law," as Jesus has died and redeemed them from that law, yet he also says that they are not without law, being under law to Christ. As "sin is a transgression of the law," and as the saints at times are transgressors of some of the statutes of Jesus, they are thus found to be sinners, or transgressors of the commandments of the King in Zion. So John says to the redeemed, to those who are born of God, and who cannot sin by transgressing the law from which they are redeemed, and to which they are dead, "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins [and we cannot confess sins if we have none], he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." "All unrighteousness," he says, "is sin." Every transgression therefore of the law of Jesus is unrighteousness, and is therefore sin. But every transgression of the law of Jesus is "not unto death." So John says, "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death." Thus it is clear that under the gospel dispensation (which is the world that was to come when Jesus spoke the words of our text) there is a sin unto death, for which there is no forgiveness, and the saint who is guilty of it must die to the fellowship of the gospel church. Such a case was found in the church at Corinth, a record of which we find in 1 Cor. v. The apostle says to that church, "For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath done this deed, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." When one is thus put away from the fellowship and from membership of a gospel church, he is dead to the church. But although one may thus lose his life, yet it is possible for him to be restored to life; for God is able to "destroy the works of the devil" in such "wicked person," and restore them to that life which they formerly had enjoyed in the church. In proof of this, we call attention to the words of the apostle in his second epistle to the church at Corinth, where he evidently refers to the one who had by his command been put away from the church; or as we commonly speak of such church action, had been "excluded." "Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many. So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow. Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him. For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things."

But while there may be such sinning unto death by the saints, and they may afterward be restored to life, and to the confidence and fellowship of a gospel church, yet instances have not been lacking where such a course of conduct has been pursued by the wicked person as to forever destroy confidence, and forbid restoration to life in the church, and the person guilty of such heinous crime has been compelled to spend the remainder of their natural life outside the visible church on earth, notwithstanding restoration has been sought by them diligently with tears. For instance, if one should be guilty of a crime, and in the presence and hearing of the church should call upon God to witness that they were innocent of the crime, and afterward, when it was clearly proved that the person was guilty, he or she should acknowledge their guilt, such wickedness would not be likely to be forgiven in this world, whatever amount of penitence might be shown by the person guilty of the same. Would not such conduct be a willful sinning? It certainly would not be sinning ignorantly for the person to call upon the God of heaven to witness that they were innocent while they knew they were guilty. To thus treat the God of heaven with irreverent familiarity is in its nature blasphemous. It is true there might not be in the person, in this instance, a disposition to detract from the real character of God, but it is none the less one kind or manner of blasphemy. Another, and the kind of blasphemy named in the text, is willful, malicious calumny by one who endeavors to impress others with the same irreverence toward God, or abhorrence of him, which he cherishes in his own heart. But let us remember that Jesus has said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have none it unto me."

As we have already said, and as the Scriptures abundantly teach, none of God's redeemed people, whatever their conduct on earth may be, can possibly fail of their inheritance of heaven and immortal glory; for that inheritance is based upon their relationship to their God and Savior. That eternal inheritance is sure to all the seed of Christ. Their salvation is by grace, and not by their works. It is as a redeemed people, children of God, that they are the subjects of discipline. God dealeth with them as with sons; "for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all [sons] are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." It is, as they find, a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, who will visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes. Nevertheless his loving-kindness he will not utterly take from them, nor suffer his faithfulness to fail. "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David [Christ, our spiritual, antitypical David]. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me."—Psa. lxxxix. 30-36. "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Rom. viii. 38, 39.

"Shall this, O christian, make thee say, I'll serve my lusts, and sin obey? Nay, rather, this, My God, to thee Let all my powers devoted be."

J.

RIGHTEOUSNESS WROUGHT OUT AND RIGHTEOUSNESS BROUGHT IN.

[Extract of a letter from a very worthy brother in Kentucky, whose name we suppress by his request.]

BROTHER BEEBE:—It has been my custom when I have heard an idea advanced that appears objectionable, or that I do not understand, to inquire into it, and seek such further illustration and explanation as may be had, in order to a better understanding. A case of this kind occurred in your discourse at Versailles, Ky. I think your remark was this: "The obedience and sufferings of Christ rendered satisfaction to the law of God in behalf of his people, and placed them on original ground." This, you remarked, was a wrought out righteousness for them, but gave them no title to heaven; that it was a brought in righteousness that gave them title. The object of my inquiry is, in what does this "brought in righteousness" consist? As you left or dropped the remark without comment.

MADISON COUNTY, Ky., Oct. 12, 1847.

R E P L Y .

THE remarks alluded to by our brother were incidentally made in reference to an expression of frequent occurrence in the writings and common conversation of brethren, namely, "the righteousness which was wrought out and brought in, by the active and passive obedience of our Lord Jesus Christ." The precise words we used at Versailles are not recollected, but our intention was to say that the obedience and sufferings of Christ for his people constituted a wrought out righteousness, commensurate with the demands of the law; and that this wrought out righteousness was required for our redemption from the demands of the law; that by it we were redeemed from sin, from death, and from hell; yea, and from the dominion of the law; but that no wrought righteousness could give us a title to heaven or spiritual things. To be more plain, we will now say that the expiation of our sins by the sufferings of Christ, or the putting away our sins by the sacrifice of himself, restored us to the state of perfect innocence from which we had by transgression of the law of God fallen, and placed those for whom this redemption was effected back upon the ground occupied by Adam before sin entered into the world. But this removal of our guilt, and satisfaction to the law of God, did not make us spiritual, capacitate or prepare us for, or give us a title to, spiritual life or spiritual enjoyments. Notwithstanding the complete redemption of the church of God from all the demands of the law, by which she is delivered from wrath and damnation, all her members must be born again, or they cannot see the kingdom of God. Christ's obedience and suffering has redeemed his people; but the Spirit quickens such as are so redeemed, and prepares them for heaven and heavenly things.

The saints' title to heaven rests upon the ground of relationship. If sons, or children, then are they heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus.

Christ. But redemption and justification do not make them sons nor heirs. Their sonship is embraced in the sonship of our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; and as he is the only begotten of the Father, we were begotten in him, or we are not sons; and if not sons, we are not heirs, and consequently have no title to heaven. But if, as the Scriptures declare, Christ is the Life of his people, and that life is the only begotten of the Father, in it is our relation to God and our title to heaven. Christ is himself our righteousness, brought in, but not wrought out. "And this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."—Jer. xxiii. 6. "And this is the name whereby she shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."—Jer. xxxiii. 16. The legal right of Christ to redeem them rested on his previous right of property in his church. We may purchase, but we cannot redeem a property that never before belonged to us. His name was called Jesus, for he should save his people from their sins. They were his people before they were redeemed, and before they had sinned; and because they were his people, he had a right to redeem them.

The everlasting righteousness which Christ brought in for his people, we understand to be his inherent, eternal righteousness, which must have been the same before he came under the law as now. His incarnation, obedience to the law, and suffering its penal thunders, has revealed, but has not altered it. His wrought out righteousness has so cancelled the claims of law and justice, which held us as lawful captives, that the prison is legally opened, the lawful captives are delivered, and brought under circumstances where the righteousness of Christ, their Life and Head, is justly revealed in them. These views are opposed by,

First: Those who believe that Adam saw a spiritual man, and that a restoration to the state and condition that he occupied before the fall, is all that is necessary to prepare us for heaven and the enjoyment of spiritual things.

Second: By those who deny the doctrine of eternal union of the church to Christ, as her Life and Head, or who consider this union as a matter of too little consequence to insist upon or contend about.

Third: By those who have no higher or clearer views of the great system of salvation than to think that deliverance from guilt, either by redemption or by remission, is all that is or was necessary to constitute us children of God and heirs of immortality.

Fourth: By all Arminians, who hold that men are saved by their own wills and works, and only differ from all other men in the quantity and quality of their own personal works of righteousness.

Fifth: By Universalists, who profess and try to believe that all mankind stand in precisely the same relation to God, and with their Arminian brethren deny that there is any such thing as sovereign and discriminating grace in the salvation of sinners; but it is sustained by the infallible testimony of the Scriptures and the experience of all the children of God.

While on the subject of redemption, we may as well notice the objection made by Elder T. Boulware, in behalf of the Baptists of Missouri, to our views of redemption, as stated in number 4 of the current volume, and to the doctrine of the union of Christ and his people, as set forth in the Circular Letter of Delaware River Association, as copied into the SIGNS, number 14, of this volume, page 106. The objections stated, as the letter on the 165th page, this number, will show, are,

First: That the doctrine is not clearly revealed in the Bible, and only sustained by vague deductions, inferences, &c.

Second: That it is identical with the "Two Seed System;" or that the Baptists of Missouri can see no difference between the one and the other; and,

Third: That the five points, as stated in his letter, are regarded by the Baptists of Missouri as substantially embracing the faith once delivered to the saints; and as a vital and eternal union to Christ is not stated nor intended to be implied in the said five points, it is rejected as being no part of the faith which was once delivered to the saints.

Before we proceed to notice these objections, we wish to be distinctly understood that, so far as they go, the five points laid down in Elder Boulware's letter are fully embraced in what is held by all Old School Baptists; but that these five points do not substantially comprise all the faith once delivered to the saints; that is, if taken abstractly or apart from the doctrine of vital union to, and identity with, Christ. Whether all the Baptists of Missouri will consent to the version given of their faith, we are not able to say. We hope not. The "Regular Baptist," published in that State, has agreed to drop these subjects during its present volume, after having duly apologized for having suffered such doctrine to be published in its first volume. How far we shall express the views of our brethren generally, we will leave them to determine when we say to Elder Boulware, and to all others, that if he or they can destroy the union and identity of Christ and his church, they shall be welcome to their five points; for in the absence of a vital union to Christ, these points could be of little or no advantage to us. Destroy the doctrine of Eternal Union, and you sap the foundation of Zion, and forever blast the prospect of salvation and eternal glory. But to the subject.

Is not the union of Christ and his church clearly revealed in the Scriptures? By Eternal Union, we mean to assert that the heirs of salvation had a spiritual existence in Christ, their spiritual Head, before time began. This is no deduction, or inference, but plainly and emphatically declared in the Bible, by such terms as, "created in Christ Jesus."—Eph. ii. 10. "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world."—Eph. i. 4. "Sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Christ Jesus, and called."—Jude 1. "Saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."—2 Tim. i. 9. "Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself; that in the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him: in whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will."—Eph. i. 9–11. "And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me. Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou has given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world."—John xvii. 23, 24. Will Elder Boulware deny the Eternal Union of Christ with the Father? If not, let him remember that the saints are one with Christ, even, or exactly, as Christ is one with the Father. And if it be even, then the identity and union of Christ and the Father is no more eternal than the identity of Christ and his people. But again, they are "his body, his flesh and his bones." They are the bone of his bones, and the flesh of his flesh. He is their Head, and they are his body, and members in particular. He has been their dwelling place in all generations. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou God."—Psa. xc. 1, 2. "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty."—Psa. xci. 1. Christ is the secret place of the Most High, and in that secret place God has hidden the life of all his saints, and there they abide under the shadow of the Almighty. In all candor we ask Elder Boulware, and all who quarrel with or lightly esteem the doctrine of Eternal Union, whether the saints can be in Christ, and not united to him? Can they dwell in him and not be united to him? Can they be his body, his flesh and his bones, and not vitally united to him? Can they be one with him, even as he is one with the Father, and not be united to him? And if they were, as we have proven from the Scriptures, created in him, preserved in him, chosen in him, saved in him, and hidden in him, before the mountains were brought forth, or ever the earth or the world was formed, could all this be true, and yet the Eternal Union a delusion, or an unimportant matter, not worth contending for, and not belonging to, or embraced in, the faith once delivered to the saints?

The second objection to Eternal Union, urged, is that the Baptists of Missouri can see no difference between it and the Two Seed system, as set forth by Daniel Parker, which denies that God is the Creator of all the human family; and asserts that he is only the Creator of the elect portion of them. Eternal Union sets forth that not our human or natural life, but our spiritual life, was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began; and that Christ is the spiritual Head of the church, in the same sense that Adam was the natural head of all the human family. That the natural life of the saints was created in Adam in common with the natural life of all others of the human race; so that they were by nature children of wrath, even as others; and yet, wonderful to say, Elder Boulware can see no difference between the doctrines. If this be so, all our efforts to enlighten him will prove abortive, until God shall give him light.

If Elder Boulware's five points, to the exclusion of Eternal Union, eternal, personal election, &c., are to be the standard of Old School orthodoxy, he may well apprehend danger that some who now claim that name will be found above or below par; but the name has hitherto been exclusively applied to those who hold the doctrine, which his summary excludes.

Elder B., like all others who put down new stakes and boundaries for our faith, is opposed to controversy; he goes for peace, and desires that his remarks may not be considered as complaints; but he may rest assured that so long and so frequently as he will appear in the Old School papers denouncing the most vital and fundamental principles of the doctrine of the gospel, he will draw forth the arrows of truth in their defense. Sooner by far could we consent to discontinue our connection with the SIGNS, than suffer the assaults of friends or foes upon so important a branch of the truth to pass unrebuked. We can but regret, however, that he has placed himself in the position which he has taken, and we indulge in a hope that he will yet see the impropriety of consenting to the truth embraced in his "five points," and rejecting the truth on which those very points are founded.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 1, 1847.

(Continued from page 363.)

awful backsliding. When Moses went up into the mount, there were lightnings and thunder and fire and smoke, and the people were in great awe and fear. One would have supposed they were genuine converts; but when the noise and fire ceased, there was a great backsliding; and when Moses come off the mount they were worshipping the calf that Aaron had made of their jewels.

But I am writing more than I intended, and will come to a close by saying that our yearly and union meetings and associations are about all over for the present year. We have had the best of order and harmony, and a good manifestation of brotherly love and kindness, for which we feel thankful.

Yours in hope and fellowship,
P. J. POWELL.

OPELIKA, Ala., Oct. 31, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER B. L. BEEBE:—By request of brethren in Texas I submit the following items.

I reached home safely, and found all well, after an absence of six weeks in the Lone Star State. I was in Texas about forty days, and filled forty-five appointments. The meetings were pleasant indeed to me. I found the Baptists that I visited in peace, and some accessions in some places. I visited the Sulphur Fork and the San Marcus Associations. The Sulphur Fork met with the Good Hope Church, in Wood County, about nine miles southeast of Winnsborough. Here I heard Elder H. B. Jones, and Elders Odom, McWilliams and others, speak. Some of the Texas would-be regulators publish these brethren as two-seeders, fatalists, non-resurrectionists, and no-change Baptists; but I am prepared to say that it is not true. I have been among them often, heard them preach, and talked with them, and am prepared to say that it is a false report. Why brethren should have a disposition to publish people to the world in a false light I cannot see, nor what good can come out of it, except it be that the Lord designs to manifest the character of the publisher, and let it be seen and known what is in him, for the good of the brethren. If brethren do err, which all are free to admit they do, is it right to publish them to the world? Suppose I should commit to writing what I have heard brethren say about certain brethren and Elders; do you think I would be right in such a course? If so, I could fill several large letters this morning, and it would make many heave heavy sighs. But I am trying to look at things in charity, hoping the Lord will give grace to overcome evils; for I am sure this is our only hope to overcome the faults and defects that we find in ourselves. I desire the brethren abroad to know that those brethren in Texas whom I visited are good, sound Baptists, and love the truth as it is in Christ, and indorsed the doctrine that I preached while among them; and I denounce two-seed, non-resurrection, no-change, fatal doctrine. I understand fatalism to be some things that arise without God's purpose; and that is what I do not believe, and therefore I am not a fatalist. But those who charge it on me believe it themselves; like the Arminian, who charges the Old School Baptists as believing or preaching infants in hell, while their own doctrine seems to place them there, if belief and works are conditions of salvation. I only mention these things by way of defense against a false charge, and hope the Lord may give brethren grace that they may cease from these things; for they should know that it is not charitable to do such things.

I also met Elders Wagner, McAdams, Jones, Pate and Grant at the San Marcus Association, which met near Sweet Home, on the fourth Sunday and Friday before. I heard them preach, and their preaching was in line with what I have been accustomed to hear since I have been a Baptist. Why brethren should try to set off such brethren I cannot see, except for their own ends and motives.

I also visited a church in the Little Flock Association. They seemed to enjoy my preaching, and seemed anxious for me to come again. Why is it that all the Baptist family cannot walk together? Why should they fight and devour each other? May God give that grace that will bring union and peace throughout the borders of Zion, is my humble desire.

I have not designed in this to write out a tour, but to mention and set forth a few facts for the consideration of the brethren here and elsewhere. May the grace of God and the love of the Lord Jesus attend us all in our goings and pilgrimage here.

Yours in hope,
W. LIVELY.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

To MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—On Friday morning, Oct. 26th, at his late residence near Lowe's Cross Roads, Sussex Co., Del., Mr. Burton Truitt, a few days more than 80 years of age.

Brother Truitt became a member of a small church that I think was called Harris's Mills many years ago; and as that church went pretty much down, some fifteen years ago he went to Little Creek, and was received into that church, where he continued in fellowship to the end of his pilgrimage. His baptism was, as near as we can ascertain, about 1844, fifty years ago. His lot was cast quite a distance from any of the churches, so that he was not much known abroad. So far as I have ever known, he fulfilled all the obligations of his profession consistently throughout his long life, dying as he lived, in the enjoyment of a good hope through grace.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

DIED—At the residence of her son-in-law and daughter, on Saturday, Oct. 20th, Mrs. Elizabeth Dady, aged 91 years and 14 days.

It seemed to be a failure of the vital powers, with not much sickness or suffering. Sister Dady was baptized in the fellowship of the Baptist Church in Wilmington, in May, 1827, more than sixty-seven years ago. As Elder J. P. Peckworth was then pastor of that church, the baptism was probably by him. She of course had passed through all the commotions and revolutions that make up the travel and history of that church until the final division was accomplished. Always modest and unassuming, yet she was always consistent and firm. She did not cease from yielding fruit even in her extreme old age. More than forty years ago she with her husband took a letter of dismission from that church and moved to Smyrna. For a long time she has been connected with the church at Bryn Zion. For about twenty-two years she had been totally blind; but though deprived of the light and sight of nature, her spiritual vision was clear and bright. Her faith and hope were steadfast, and her memory and other faculties were retained to the last. There was much church history in her long life, and I enjoyed many an hour's conversation with her. A fall, and a fractured limb, added much to her bodily suffering, for she had suffered intense pain in her eyes, and to her helplessness; but through that long night, which no ray of light ever penetrated, she enjoyed the care and attention of kind and devoted children that seemed patient and never-tiring. She fought the good fight, finished a consistent christian course, and kept the faith to the end. I trust the children and grandchildren will find a reward in the consciousness of having discharged a great and important duty.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

Mary Lippencott, daughter of Wm. and Pheba Wells, and wife of Elder Wm. Lippencott, was born in Kanawha Co., W. Va., August 12th, 1819, removed with her parents to the state of Ohio in the year 1831, and was united in marriage to Elder Wm. Lippencott on Feb. 20th, 1840. She united with the Ross Run Primitive Baptist Church in the year 1855. In the year 1873 she with her husband removed to the town of St. Paris, Ohio, herself and husband by letter uniting with the Nettle Creek Church of Primitive Baptists, of which she was a faithful, worthy and consistent member, beloved by all, until her death, which occurred Oct. 22d, 1894, aged 75 years, 2 months and 10 days. Her funeral was largely attended on the date named, and the writer tried to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing ones. It is written, "Thou shalt surely die;" but while "Plagues and death around me fly,

Till he bids I cannot die;

Not a single shaft can hit
Till the God of love sees fit."

Yet when he commands us back to dust an angel's arm cannot turn the shaft. She has left no offspring, but a beloved and bereaved servant of the most high God, who knows the exceeding great and precious promises. Having finished her course, her body lies in a peaceable habitation and quiet resting place. Here she has thrown off every burden and escaped from every snare. Here the eye forgets to weep; here she has received a final release from pain, an everlasting discharge from sorrow. Tranquility softens her couch, and quietness guards her repose. Rest until the last trumpet shall awake your gentle slumbers, and sound through all your quiet resting place. "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." In view of death and eternity may this be the supreme desire of each of us, to live the life and to die the death of the righteous. May my latter end and future state be like theirs. May grace so reign in my heart that death with me, as with my dear departed sister, shall be my sweet release, and then my ransomed soul shall fly to her happy home on high.

G. N. TUSING.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—I send you inclosed the following obituary notice for publication in the SIGNS.

Our brother, Joseph C. Ensor, departed this life at his home near Black Rock, Baltimore Co., Md., on Wednesday a. m., Oct. 10th, 1894, in the 60th year of his age.

He was a son of John B. and Delilah Ensor, who for many years were widely known as faithful Baptists, and members of the church at Black Rock. Twenty-one years ago last February it was my privilege to baptize our deceased brother in the fellowship of the Black Rock Church, where he remained a steadfast member until it pleased the Lord to call him away from earth. His disease was consumption, brought on some two years ago by an attack of "La Grippe." He suffered much during this time, but endured all with much patience and submission to the divine will. He was a firm and settled Baptist from the first of my acquaintance with him. He had very soul-humblng views of himself as a sinner in the sight of God, and often complained of doubts and fears growing out of the view which he had of himself. His faith was in Christ alone; and this he often expressed in conversation with his brethren. He believed so fully and entirely that salvation is of the Lord that often during his illness he stated as his request that if no Baptist minister could be had to attend his funeral, no religious service should be held at all; for he did not desire that Arminian doctrine, or salvation by the choice of the creature, should be preached over his remains. He did not wish that his funeral should be the occasion of dishonoring the gospel of Jesus Christ by the preaching of creature choice or works.

I was absent at the time of his death, but his family saw that his last wishes were carried out. As Elder Grafton could not be reached, brother Hart, from the Baltimore Church, and brother T. H. Scott, of the Black Rock Church, conducted services, much to the comfort and edification of the dear friends, as I have been informed.

The deceased brother leaves a widow and several children to mourn their loss of a kind and indulgent husband and father. As a church we shall also greatly miss our brother. May God bless the church, and grant an especial blessing to the dear wife and children in their bereavement and loneliness. May the same faith that was his be also theirs. Brothers and sisters are also left to mourn their loss; but they also share the faith that was in their deceased brother, and have hope for him and for themselves.

F. A. CHICK.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE
TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c.
The above described book of 719 pages, 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

BUNYAN'S
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,

And a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tint.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY
OF THE
UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'	Ps. 22. 22.
n ver. 21.	CHAPTER XX.	18 " Mary Magdalene came and told	Matt. 28.
	1 " Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.		Rom. 8. 29.
			Heb. 9. 11.
			1 ch. 16. 23.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges, 3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges 4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

In fact we are prepared to furnish any priced Bible. If you will send us a statement of what you want we will give you the price. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00. Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Those wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1882, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

TO ANY PERSON

SUFFERING FROM DROPSY,

Who will write me, giving name and address, with symptoms, I will send

A TRIAL PACKAGE FREE

Of what I consider the greatest remedy ever discovered. Will remove two gallons in a day. Relieves the worst forms of heart dropsy in a few days. Inclose five cents for postage. Address,

C. W. ANDERSON,

Dutton, Madison Co., Ark.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1894.

NO. 47.

SELECTED.

WEAK HANDS AND FEEBLE KNEES.

BY DAVID SMITH, OF ENGLAND.

"STRENGTHEN ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you."—Isa. xxxv. 3, 4.

What are we to understand by weak hands and feeble knees? I understand them to mean that God's people get down into low places sometimes, where they are much perplexed and distressed in soul, body and mind. The devil sometimes tempts them, and their consciences accuse them, and everything appears for a time to be against them; and at such times everything is perplexing and distressing to them.

God's people have troubles of such a trying nature sometimes that they cannot name to their dearest friends. At present I know a good man and his wife who have a trouble of this sort in their family. I saw them in the chapel the other Sunday well-nigh heart-broken. The person with weak hands is one who has weak faith, or but little faith; and the little he has gives way to doubt, through the temptation of Satan and the difficulties of the way. Faith is compared to hands, feet and eyes; hands of faith, feet of faith, and eyes of faith. These hands, feet and eyes are affected by circumstances, such as trials, afflictions, sorrows, and distresses of body and mind; and "though affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground," yet "man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." They come according to the wise appointment of God, and are intended to try the faith and patience of his people, and have a tendency to weaken hands of faith, and make our knees tremble before God and man. Satan is ever ready to take advantage at such times and send his hellish darts of unbelief into the soul, and these make it "stagger like a drunken man." These are some of the things that make weak hands and feeble knees. I have often found it to be so in my own experience, and some of you have, no doubt, done so too. The way to heaven is a way of trouble; no one ever got there without it, nor do I believe ever will. All God's people need to be strengthened with a little strength. Yes, and sometimes God is pleased to strengthen weak hands and confirm feeble knees under the word preached. The house of God has been a place of refuge to them, and he has supported and strengthened them with a little strength. God sometimes weakens the hands of his people by deaths in the family. He sometimes takes away the head of the family; and this dries up all sources of supply; for they are cut off, and everything appears, for a time, dark and distressing. Sometimes the Lord is pleased to take away a fond and pleasing child, the very idol of its parents, to make their hands hang down and their knees to tremble. Some of us have tasted a little of those wormwood and gall bitters, and we have cried, "Lord, help me!" for we then felt as if we were "sinking in the mire where there is no standing, and where the floods had well nigh overwhelmed us," and then we concluded that the Lord had forsaken us, and we said, "Is his mercy clean gone for ever, and will he be favorable no more? This has been the experience of God's people to a lesser or greater degree in all ages, and is so to this day, and I believe will be to the end; and these things make us feel that our hands are weak and that our knees are feeble. But in the midst of all these things God is good, and will not lay more upon his people than they are able to bear.

"Our sorrows is the scale he weighs,
And measures out our pains;
The wildest storm his word obeys,
His word its rage restrains."

O what a mercy, friends, that all things are under the management of him "who is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind." He knows exactly how much trouble and sorrow his people can bear without being crushed, and he will give strength to bear up under it. His everlasting arms are underneath every trouble his people have to bear, and he will support them. But sometimes their weak hands hang down, and their feeble knees tremble through fear. Yes, and their eyes of faith are darkened, but not blinded. The sight is not altogether gone, but the poor soul sometimes fears it is. The psalmist says, "I am weary of my crying; my throat is dried; mine eyes fail while I wait for my God." And again, "My heart panteth, my strength faileth me; as for the light of mine eyes, it also is gone from me." These portions evidently have reference to the faith of the Lord's people, which fluctuates like the mercury (quicksilver) in the weather-glass, which rises and falls according to the pressure upon it. We know that our hands lay hold of the spoon to convey food to our mouths to feed our bodies; but weak hands cannot use the spoon. They are sometimes too weak; as the psalmist says, "My strength faileth me." He might have said, as the prophet says, "My hope is cut off." We cannot exercise faith when we please; for "it is the gift of God." For want of food our bodies droop, and for want of faith our souls droop and sink low, and it is alone the work of God to raise them up; as Hannah says, "The Lord killeth, and maketh alive; he bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up. He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory." Hannah gives God the glory of his own work, and I wish to do so too.

At one time David said, "He brought me into darkness, and not into light;" and at another time he said, "The Lord is my light and my salvation." So it appears that his faith varied, and that he was sometimes up, and sometimes down. And so it is with you and me. We are of all men most miserable if God hide his face from us; but if he smile upon us our hearts rejoice. Then it is that our weak hands are strengthened, and our feeble knees confirmed.

A man in a certain state of distress or trouble cannot move hand or foot heavenward, any more than he can make a world. Like the poor, impotent man at the pool, he has to wait until the Lord is pleased to put him in with his own hands, or say, "Rise up and walk." In this way only is a poor child of God helped and healed.

God's people are blessed with an interest in the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ; but they do not always see it and believe it. Some of them often question it, and are brought to their wits' end about it; but, blessed be God, their fears and doubts cannot alter the fact. Do you, my friends, know anything of these things, and do you believe them? If you do, you are the children of God; but if you do not, you are not yet manifestively among the exercised and tried family of God. The exercised child of God knows something of the things I am speaking about this morning; but thousands of professors, who have only "a name to live, while dead," know nothing about them. Some preachers condemn experimental religion; but I consider it to be the very life of God in the soul, and, therefore, I must preach it for the comfort of others. The living in Jerusalem know something of these things, for they sometimes hang down their heads like the bull-rush, and cannot lift them up. Their weak hands hang down, and, as I have said before, their feeble knees tremble under them, and sometimes a thousand fears surround them.

Have you ever been asked to pray, and take a part in the public service, when you have feared to do so lest you should be confounded, and that your hypocrisy would be discovered, as you thought? If you have, the hands of your faith have hung down, and you have wished you were a thousand miles away from the place. I have been there many times when I have had to preach to you and others. God's people cannot always pray when they are called upon to do so. Many people think the Lord's servants can pray at any time, and for everything they desire; but not so; for they are subject to like passions as you are, subject to like infirmities, and can only pray as the Lord is pleased to help them. I have got myself into many troubles since God called me by his grace, but I have ever found, where he has brought me to real heartfelt prayer, he has answered my prayer and brought me out of my troubles. Therefore I would say to all weak-handed and feeble-kneed saints, Keep on praying until he answers your prayers.

"For prayer, indited by the Lord,
The Lord will surely hear."

May you thus be enabled to take all your troubles to the Lord, for he will never deceive you, but will deliver you. He will remove every hindrance and every obstacle, whether it be of a temporal or of a spiritual kind, and then you will be like a "hind let loose;" so that, if you could, you would take the "wings of the dove, and fly away, and be at rest." When such a deliverance is brought about, you will say with the psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name; who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercy;" and who reneweth thy youth as the eagle's. I have read of one that was 340 years old. When you have been held down by sin and Satan for a long time in a state of unbelief, when your weak hands and feeble knees have been trembling like the aspen leaf, and the Holy Ghost has come and whispered in your ears, "Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee," or some such words, you have been made young again; your youth has been renewed as the eagle's. Sometimes, under the preached word, God is pleased to bless the souls of his people, and refresh them with his presence, so that they feel young again. The hands of their faith are then strengthened, and their feeble knees are confirmed in the truth of God's salvation, and they run with delight in the ways of God's commandments, and conclude they will never see war again. I hope we have felt a little of this divine influence in our poor souls, and that it has made us sing with joy in our hearts.

Then, "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong; fear not." O what lengths and breadths of grace, to lift up the poor child of God out of self and sin. Yes, and from the power of Satan too. When the blessed Spirit of God, the Holy Spirit, is pleased to make a revelation of the person of Christ, O how blessed it is! It is then that "crooked things are made straight, and rough places plain," and that we are made young again.

In the beginning of this chapter we read, "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice, even with singing." Is not that a blessed promise? "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them." Our poor hearts are the desert and the solitary place. Does not your heart often appear like a wilderness, or a desert, and is very solitary? This wilderness and solitary place does not mean the Arabian or African desert, but it means the dry and scorched heart of a poor child of God that is blackened with the burning sun of temptation and infidelity. These things have a tendency to dry up the spirit, and make the heart of a child of God feel like the wilderness and the sandy desert, where no green thing grows. If this is not so, I am out of the secret experience of the exercises of a living soul; but I believe I am right, and I believe all others are right who are exercised in the same way; and I am sure that the weak hands of such will sometimes hang down dejected, and will be frightened as if a thousand serpents lay in their pathway. O what fears and doubts arise under the wily darts of the devil! His serpentine workings make a man stagger—they make his feeble knees to tremble; and in this way the Lord the Spirit "teaches men to profit," but more especially to know the plague of their own hearts, and their utter helplessness to deliver themselves out of such a state.

"Without me," says Christ, "ye can do nothing." A man learns this truth experimentally, as he is brought "into deep waters, where there is no standing." Do you believe what I say about these things? Or do you believe what Arminians say, viz., "Believe and repent, and then God will love you?" But let me tell you, without God's grace you can neither believe nor repent aright; and if ever you desired either, you have proved what I say to be an unmistakable truth. God brings his people into a state of want and destitution, and then "they cry to him in their trouble, and he delivers them out of their distresses," by an act of his almighty power and grace. All delivering power comes from God. He alone can lift up the hands that hang down, or confirm feeble knees: though he says to his servants, "Do this, or do that." I believe God sometimes gives power with the preached word, and blesses it to the souls of his people; for he says, "As the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth out of my mouth. It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it." I could give you many proofs of this, both in my own experience and that of others. One proof is that at one time I had been for some months in a very dark and miserable state of mind, and I concluded God had forsaken me, and that he would "be favorable no more." At that time God sent one of his servants to preach at our chapel, and the Lord so blessed my poor soul through the man's preaching that I was raised up above all my fears, and I was made to "rejoice with joy and singing," and my soul was made to "blossom as the rose;" and as the Lord has said, "It shall blossom abundantly," so I proved it in my own soul's experience. At another time, when I was preaching, the Lord so blessed his word to the soul of one man that he said, "Through that man's preaching this morning God has lifted my soul out of the very belly of hell, where I had long been in a state of darkness and distress." I could instance many other proofs of a similar nature, but I forbear to do so.

I consider my text is one that traces out, or at least records, the barren and helpless state of a needy soul, on behalf of whom the Lord says, "Strengthen ye the weak hands," ye servants; "and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not." My text will only meet the cases of, and is only intended for, a poor, fearing child of God, who is, as we Yorkshire people sometimes say, "down in his shell;" one who is experimentally in a dark and distressed state of mind, but is a "prisoner" of hope.

Friends, I love experimental truth, and I must preach it so far as the Lord has taught it me. Sometimes, when a servant of God is led into the experimental part of God's truth, he finds some poor soul in a state of bankruptcy, or in some deep trouble, who is hedged up and hedged in with difficulties that he fears he can never get out of; but under the word, he gets a hope that God will yet deliver him. I remember one case of this sort, where a preacher and a hearer wept and rejoiced together. These things sometimes bring about a godly union that is never dissolved while memory lasts. Sometimes a poor backslider is reclaimed, and made willing to return and fill up his place, with weeping and godly repentance.

One sweet manifestation of God's love and mercy will and does raise up the cast down soul, and will bring it out of the prison-house of bondage and distress. And is not this felt and known to be so in the experience of the saints? And at such times they "fear not." Nothing can bring about such a state of things in a poor sinner's soul but the presence and influence of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter. Then you who have ever enjoyed his presence, give him the glory, for you will go to heaven when you die; yes, "As sure as the earnest is given."

What a blessing God has bestowed on you, to favor your poor souls with such a love-visit, such a spiritual blessing, such a blessing as I am sure strengthened your weak hands, and confirmed your feeble knees, and raised you above all your fears; and then you "triumphed in redeeming love" to your heart's content.

God brings his people out of the wilderness sometimes, "leaning on their Beloved." O! it is good to be there. When the Lord shows his people the blessedness of his covenant, and gives them a felt sense of an interest in it, it makes their souls rejoice, it makes them "blossom as the rose;" for then the Lord sheds his sweet influence around them, and reveals his beauty, and then his name is like "ointment poured forth," and gives a goodly smell.

The child of God is subject to changes. He is sometimes up, and sometimes down. The man that has no changes is dead while he lives. The presence of God brings with it a foretaste of heaven into the soul; but very few people seem to know anything of it. Under such blessedness the children of God cannot hold their peace. If they did, "the very stones would cry out." Such persons have "tasted that the Lord is gracious," and they walk in the precepts of the gospel. They have the law of love in their hearts, and they live in God's fear all the day long; as it is written, "They shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance, and in thy name shall they rejoice all the day, and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.—Psalm lxxxix.

16. No man can do this in his own strength; but he can do it under the anointing of the blessed Spirit. Yes, he can then mount up on eagles' wings, and it is then that his weak hands of faith are lifted up, and his feeble knees strengthened and confirmed in the faithfulness of God. Such a man is confirmed in the truth that God will "regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer." God has heard his prayer, and brought him out of the mire and clay of infidelity, from Satan's yoke and sin's fetters, and from the condemnatory power of the law, and then he is like the bird which has escaped from the snare of the fowler.

True religion is worth ten thousand worlds; for it has God for the author, and the Holy Spirit for its comforting influences and graces, and the graces of the Spirit are "love, joy and peace."

In the enjoyment of these graces, the wilderness blossoms as the rose. The children of God have their times of trouble, as well as their changes, while on earth; but they have their times of deliverance also. Trouble is a very necessary thing to the child of God, to bring down his pride and make him pray. This ingredient embitters the world, the flesh and the devil. It lays man low, and keeps him there until God is pleased to deliver him. God has a special purpose to answer by troubles, as Newton says in that most experimental hymn of his,

"These inward trials I employ,
From self and pride to set thee free,
And break thy schemes of earthly joy,
That thou may'st seek thy all in me."

Friends, do you know anything about spiritual troubles, about conviction, of sin, the condemnation of the law, and the arrows of a guilty conscience? Do you know what it is to cry to God to undertake for you and deliver you from bondage and distress of soul? The men of the world have a share in all other troubles, but they know nothing of these. God's people only have these, and they all have them to a lesser or a greater degree. True religion has a beginning, and I believe it all begins in trouble, but will end in peace. True religion, then, has a bright and a dark side; and I will tell you, friends, if you are the children of God you have an old man of sin and a new man of grace within you, and they are like two armies, fighting one against the other. The old man of sin will be daily trying to get the mastery over the new man of grace. He will, as it were, sometimes hold you down with an iron hand, and make you feel as weak as water. I know your hands will then hang down very low, and your feeble knees will be "ready to halt." These are some of the things the exercised family of God experience while they are in this vale of tears. Their path is one of trial, affliction and sorrow for the most part, and will be so until the body and soul are separated; for that only,

"Which puts an end to strife,
Will put an end to sin."

Between the flesh and the Spirit a continual warfare will be carried on, so that "ye cannot do the things that ye would." If you know anything of this Christian warfare, you are in the way to heaven and happiness. It will end in peace; yes, in the peace of God, which passeth understanding." I am sure it will. Then, strengthen ye the weak hands, confirm the feeble knees; yea, and say to the fearful heart, "Be strong; fear not."

A fearing or fearful heart is a broken and a contrite heart; one that has the fear and grace of God in it; but its fears often are that these blessed graces have not been planted there; hence they are exercised and tried about them, and sometimes you hear them say,

"Tis a point I long to know
(Oft it causes anxious thought),
Do I love the Lord, or no?
Am I his, or am I not?

"If I love, why am I thus?
Why this dull and lifeless frame?
Hardly, sure, can they be worse
Who have never heard his name."

And sometimes you hear them sing,

"Assure my conscience of her part
In the Redeemer's blood;
And bear thy witness with my heart,
That I am born of God."

The fearful-hearted are praying men and women, and they say with the psalmist, "Hear my prayer, O God, and let my cry come unto thee." Such people have also a filial fear. They fear to offend God in word or deed. O what a mercy if your religion and mine is like theirs; for God says of all such persons, "They shall be mine in that day when I make up my jewels." What could God say more for their encouragement in the midst of all their fears, doubts and misgivings? "They shall be mine." Say, then, to the fearful heart, "Be strong, fear not." How can such poor weaklings be strong? Not in themselves, but in the Lord, for he is "the strength of the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress." Then, having his strength on their side, they need not fear, and to all such the servant of God may say, "Fear not." Fear not, for Christ has died for you, and has redeemed you by his precious blood, and most assuredly will land you safely in heaven, your desired home.

May God add his blessing upon these few remarks, for his name's sake. Amen.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HUNTSVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31, 1894.

It sometimes seems to me that if there were no other evidence to support the doctrine of predestination, the fact that it is the one great doctrine which has ever been assailed, despised and rejected by the world would alone be sufficient to sustain it as the true foundation of God's omnipotent power and glory on earth. Man has to a certain degree succeeded in classifying the limited knowledge which has been given him in mercy, and collecting it under certain heads or branches; and these classifications he calls science. By working in strict conformity to the laws which govern a science man can obtain results which are approximately exact. He is bound and limited in all his efforts by these methods and results; and he cannot even see to the end of them, much less ever hope to accomplish things beyond them.

The results obtained by these scientific investigations are stamped by human authority as truths, and the natural mind will never be able to comprehend any truth which cannot be reconciled to some of these laws. Any proposition which states a set of things contrary to these laws is said to be impossible, and the natural mind could not believe it even if it desired to do so. For an instance, if any substance come in contact with fire, so as not to extinguish it, it will become heated, and if it be a combustible substance it will be consumed. The opposite of this human wisdom must ever regard as being impossible, because science fails to point out methods by which such results can be effected.

Also, when a certain state of facts is said to exist, a clear perception of a second state of facts which would be a most natural consequence of the first is called reason. The human mind is guided by reason; and when anything cannot be accounted for by reason the natural mind can never understand it. Now if reason, science and philosophy are perfect and infallible in human hands, our Bible is untrue, and the hope of the christian a farce; but we frequently err in all three of these, when, were they perfect, we could not. We are constantly adding to them, in a certain sense; and so long as anything will admit of being augmented in any degree whatever it cannot be perfect. So man is bound either by an imperfect system or by an imperfect knowledge of a perfect system, and to admit either proposition will render all his accomplishments more or less imperfect; and especially would this be so in the salvation of a human soul, where nothing short of absolute perfection could be effectual. God in his infinite wisdom did not limit or bind himself by any law, except that it would be impossible for him ever to approach sin, or become contaminated with it in any degree whatsoever. Everything he has recorded of himself, and every act he has performed, has been done with a supreme disregard for all the laws of science, by which human wisdom is bound and limited. Whatsoever he does is wise, just and perfect. To deny his infinite power, wisdom or goodness is to deny his existence. To limit any of these in any degree whatever is equivalent to denying them altogether. To concede them is to bring every other power in absolute subjection to him, and this destroys the Arminian's hope of heaven.

The Arminian can conceive of a God who can undertake and fail; who can love a sinful man, persuade and importune him to accept of the proffered mercy, and yet be subjected to the anguish and humiliation of being scornfully rejected. Surely such things are but the frantic imaginations of a worldly mind. In direct contrast to such a being the God of Israel, the God of the Bible, the God of the christian's hope, can take a man dead in trespasses and sin, and through a perfect, crucified and risen Redeemer bring him triumphantly into everlasting glory, absolutely perfect, spotless and sinless, and independently of all opposition from wicked men and devils. The natural man will always reason that predestination would be fatal to divine justice; but the church, which is led by the Spirit and taught by Christ himself, knows that her only hope of salvation lies in the fact that her God loved her before the foundation of the world, and chose her, and gave her grace in Jesus Christ, and decreed to triumphantly save her in heaven for his own glory, redeemed, perfected and sanctified, in spite of every opposing power in the universe. By faith alone is she permitted to see, know and understand these things; and she can never impart this understanding to the world. She is as completely separated from the world, so far as an understanding of her faith and hope is concerned, as though she were upon another planet. She is not commanded to convince the world of these things. However formidable and threatening may be the powers arrayed against her, however bitterly she may be assailed by her enemies, it will be given her at the appointed time to remember that her God will not forsake her, that all her afflictions are chosen for her in mercy, and that her God is omnipotent and unchangeable. It will be given her to remember that her battle is fought, her warfare is accomplished, and it is only hers to wait in patience for the coming of the Captain of her salvation. The church as a body knows that if the doctrine of predestination is untrue, the divinity of Christ is destroyed, and her hope and faith are in vain. No wonder, then, that she is unwilling to make any concession, or enter into any compromise, with those who seek to limit or deny this doctrine. Were it not that this is God's own doctrine, upon which all creation is founded, and were it not that it is upheld by his own omnipotent power, surely it could not have withstood the assaults which have been made upon it since the beginning of the world.

This is not quite what I undertook to write at the beginning; but I hope to write at some other time upon the subject of predestination as clearly as I sometimes see it.

JOE McDONALD.

STATE ROAD, Del., Nov., 1894.

BROTHER BEEBE:—I will offer some reflections for your consideration on the subject of faith. As this word seems to embrace the vital point upon which everything else depends, we do well to understand it, and to have all the light possible upon it. The inspired writers speak of faith as though it were not obscure, or of doubtful construction at all, but as something tangible, and so marked and distinct in its sources, developments and fruits as to be clearly distinguishable from everything else. The word "belief" or "believing" are terms quite frequently used, and generally are used in the same sense as faith. "If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest," is the prerequisite to the ordinance of baptism, and of course to all the rites and privileges of membership in the gospel church. Those who see nothing in this believing only the result of persuasion, a mere act of the sinner upon his own volition, betray an utter ignorance not only of what faith really is, but of the literal signification of terms. We have no discretion in what we believe about anything. Even the most trivial natural things, we believe what we know to be true, and we cannot and do not believe otherwise. We should suspect a person's sanity who would try to induce us by rewards or by threatenings to believe contrary to our knowledge.

But I will not now discuss the negative, but look after that belief which accompanies salvation. It is uniformly held forth in the Scriptures as an exercise and manifestation of a new life, a life that natural men do not possess. If so, it rests upon a knowledge that men in nature do not have. Men enlightened from above believe things as they now see them, and believing does not make any change in the believer nor in the things believed; but believing with all the heart manifests such experimental knowledge of the things believed as to demonstrate that he or she has passed from death unto life. We cannot and do not believe in Christ as a Savior until we know him as a Savior. That knowledge he must himself give us. The Spirit, the holy Instructor and Comforter, must receive of him and show unto us. Hence, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost." Believing in Jesus embraces a belief in some other things.

(Continued on page 374.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 21, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS ARE ESPECIALLY REQUESTED TO ADDRESS ALL LETTERS FOR US TO THE FIRM NAME OF

G. BEEBE'S SON.

SCARCELY SAVED.

DEAR EDITOR:—Will, you at your earliest convenience, give your views on the portion of Scripture that reads thus, "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?"—1 Peter iv. 18. I heard a Presbyterian minister last Sunday handle that text, and he made a strange application of it. He said that the righteous were saved with difficulty. Now, dear Elder, was anything ever difficult for Jesus? Please elucidate the text, and greatly oblige one who loves the truth.

LUCY A. CRAWFORD.

LOGAN, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1894.

REPLY.

So far as the Lord may enable us, we hope and trust it may ever afford us pleasure to serve his dear people, both in speaking and writing upon those wonderful things which are written in the Scriptures, and revealed by the Spirit to the hearts of the subjects of God's grace. It is no wonder that an Arminian minister should make a strange application of the Scripture referred to by our sister, or fail to satisfy one who has felt the power of God unto salvation. As well might we expect to gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles, as to gather truth from those whose utterances prove them to be false prophets. The Lord said by the mouth of the prophet Jeremiah, "I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophecy lies? Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart; which cause my people to forget my name by their dreams, which they tell every man to his neighbor." The apostle Jude speaks of these, and calls them "filthy dreamers." "Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord." "Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go."

That there is no lack or scarcety in the salvation of God's people from their sins, through the redemption which is Christ Jesus, the Scriptures everywhere testify. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." "Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus." "Let Israel hope in the Lord; for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption; and he shall save Israel from all his iniquities." "He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth; and the isles shall wait for his law."

The theme of the apostle Peter in this fourth chapter of his first epistle is the suffering of Christ in the flesh, and also the suffering of his redeemed people, who as the members of his body, and in the flesh, must suffer with him. In the first verse of this chapter the apostle says, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." It was in the flesh (and that of his people) that Christ suffered; in no other way could he suffer. He "was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death." "For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham." "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

—Gal. iii. 29. In their relation to the earthly Adam the saints are partakers of flesh and blood; and in order that Jesus might suffer and redeem them from sin and death, he also himself likewise took part of the same flesh and blood that they are partakers of. The spiritual life unity of Christ and his people was and is an eternal unity. Hence the apostle says that the saints were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before God in love.—Eph. i. 4. They were "by nature the children of wrath, even as others." It is as related to Adam, in the flesh, the saints were sinners, and so needed redemption. "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." He took on him flesh when he "was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Thus we see that in being made flesh, taking part of the same flesh that his people are partakers of, Jesus became one with them in the flesh. The Scriptures very plainly and clearly, to us, teach that both these relationships of Christ to his people (in the Spirit and in the flesh) were necessary, in order that he might redeem them from all iniquity, and satisfy the law which they had transgressed in their unity with the earthly Adam. So perfectly and truly were Christ and his people one when he suffered for them in the flesh, that he recognized and called their sins his own sins, saying by the mouth of David, "O God, thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee."—Psalm lxxix. 5. His taking on the flesh of his people brought him necessarily into the pit where they were. There is not a shadow of doubt that in the fortieth and sixty-ninth psalms it is Christ who is speaking by the mouth of his servant David, for this same apostle Peter so declared on the day of Pentecost.—Acts ii. None of the angels, nor a pure, sinless man, could have been accepted by divine justice as an atoning sacrifice for the sins of God's people, the members of the body of Jesus. Christ Jesus suffered for his people on account of the relationship existing between them. How very strangely it sounds to hear a professed minister of Jesus denying this relationship, which is the only possible ground of redemption for the saints.

"The man that would this truth withstand,

Would pull God's temple down;
Wrest Jesus sceptre from his hand,
And spoil him of his crown.

"Brethren, by this your claim abide,
This title to your bliss;
Whatever loss you bear beside,
O! never give up this."

Yes, glorious truth! Jesus Christ has suffered in the flesh, suffered for the sins of his people, put them away by the sacrifice of himself; so that if the sins shall be sought for they shall not be found, for the mouth of God hath declared it. "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us." "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." "But this man ["the man Christ Jesus"], after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God; from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool. For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us."—Heb. x. 12-15.

"'Tis the gospel's joyful tidings
Full salvation sweetly sounds;
Grace, to heal thy foul backslidings,
Sinner, flows from Jesus' wounds.

"Hail the Lamb who came to save us!
Hail the love that made him die!
'Tis the gift that God hath given us,
We'll proclaim his honors high."

As, therefore, the sins of God's people have been atoned for by Jesus, their dear Redeemer, who has suffered for them in the flesh, those sins cannot be remembered against them, and they will not be required to suffer for them; for justice will not twice demand nor accept the payment of a debt. Divine justice will not demand satisfaction at the hands of the bleeding Surety of God's people, and then at the hands of his people. Jesus pleads his own sufferings and death in behalf of his people. He is our "Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the propitiation for our sins," whether we be Jews or Gentiles in the flesh.

But will any one, in the light of the Scripture testimony, and also christian experience, deny that the subjects of redemption in Christ Jesus suffer in the flesh? Certainly not. God's people are a suffering people, and they suffer in the flesh. But when they shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, when this mortal shall have put on immortality, then, like their glorified

Redeemer, their sufferings will be forever ended, for they will no more be in the flesh, where all their suffering is. They are scarcely saved from suffering, however soberly, righteously and godly they may live in this time state. Says the apostle to Timothy, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure." As followers of Jesus, the saints must suffer with him, and so are exhorted by Peter to arm themselves with the same mind that was in Christ when he suffered in the flesh. If that same mind is in us, we will suffer patiently all the persecution that in the purpose of God we may be called to endure. When we thus suffer, we suffer as a christian, as a follower of Christ, and therefore need not be ashamed. It is an honor thus to suffer, and we may, like the disciples of old, when they were beaten, and commanded to speak no more in the name of Jesus, rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer shame for his name. Says Paul, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."

Being born of God does not exempt any one from suffering in the flesh. What tongue or pen can fully describe the terrible sufferings, both in body and mind, which many of the subjects of God's grace are now enduring? How many are upon beds of languishing, and O! how many wearisome days and nights are appointed unto them. Why is it so? God alone knows. Often those who thus suffer most are and have been living soberly, righteously and godly. They are, as we know, scarcely saved from suffering. Indeed we think it would be difficult to find one who is not suffering, either in body or mind, that is enjoying much communion with God their Savior, or much fellowship with the afflicted and poor people of God. When free from all suffering the child of God is very apt to be found following the world and the pleasures of the world. Said David, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word." "It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes." As the Lord declares that he has chosen his people in the furnace of affliction, it must be true that they are scarcely saved from it, as the apostle says. But while many of his people may be spared much bodily affliction, yet they cannot escape that suffering which is the effect of the trial of faith; for it is doubtful if God ever bestows faith upon his people without trying it, as gold is tried; and such trial must necessarily cause suffering. There is a needs be for this. Says Peter, "Though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations; that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried by fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter i. 6, 7.

In the immediate connection of the text, the apostle says, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you. On their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified." This, the apostle says, in the sixteenth verse, is suffering as a christian. "If any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf."

But how about those subjects of God's grace who are not living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, but are living after the flesh, and walking in a shameful manner? Such are not obeying "the gospel of God." Says the apostle, "But let none of you suffer as a murderer [He that hateth his brother is a murderer], or as a thief, or as an evil doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters." This would not be suffering as a christian; for a christian is a follower of Christ; and we can only follow him by walking as he walked. This word, "christian," is not used and applied by the apostle as it is commonly applied in the world to-day. He uses it as identifying the obedient children of God, who "obey the gospel of God;" so that one may be a subject of God's grace, a child of God, and yet not be a christian. It is quite common to-day, even among the saints, to speak of all subjects of the new and spiritual birth, wherever they may be found, or whatever their walk may be, as christians; but such is not a correct application of the term christian.

The terms "ungodly" and sinner," as here used by the apostle, are by him applied to those subjects of God's grace who are transgressors of the laws of Christ, who are living after the flesh, instead of living soberly, righteously and godly. If those of the saints who are walking worthy of the vocation wherewith they have been called, are not exempted from suffering, what shall the end be of those who, though subjects of God's grace, yet walk after the flesh and trample under foot the laws of Christ? It was of those among the saints at Philippi that the apostle wrote, "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." How many of God's people have destroyed themselves, so far as fellowship among the saints is concerned, and so far as spiritual comfort is concerned, by the gratification of their carnal appetites and passions. But as the Lord will surely judge his people, and scourge them for their ungodly conduct, how terrible must be the suffering when such are brought in their soul's experience before the judgment seat, and their faithful God lays upon them the rod of chastisement. "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—1 Cor iii. 17.

J.

PREDESTINATION.

"THE Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice."—Psa. xcvi. 1.

There is much dissension in what is called the religious world, about the amount of government held in the hands of God over the beings and events of this world; and if these contentions were confined to the children of Ashdod and Moab, we would have cause neither for astonishment nor regret; but it is sorrowful indeed to know that many who on other points seem to be sound and experimental, deny the universality of God's providential government.

War has been waged in a multitude of forms against the absolute predestination of all things. Some have virtually denied the government of God altogether in reference to the conduct and destiny of mankind, by asserting what they call the free agency of men. If men as agents are truly free to act as they please, they cannot be accountable for their actions. Accountability is restriction; and if either men or devils are free, they are subject to no restriction; and if restricted in their course, they are not free agents; but they are bound by the laws and penalties, and by the direct providence of God. God has said that they are restricted. The wrath of man shall praise him, and the remainder of wrath he will restrain. Do the advocates of free agency believe what God has said upon this subject? Or do they only mean that in the committing of sin they act voluntarily? If this be their meaning we will not dispute the point; for experience demonstrates the position; but this does not constitute man a free agent; it only makes him, in acting out the deep corruption of his depraved nature, a voluntary actor, so far as he goes in sin; but if unrestrained by the overruling government and providence of God, they would go much farther in crime and wickedness than they do; for they are frequently prevented from acting out their abominable designs by manifest interposition of the government of God; as when the patriarchs would have murdered Joseph, when Saul would have slain David, or when the high priests would have prevented the resurrection of Christ from the dead. If Jezebel had been a free agent Elijah would not have been translated to heaven in a fiery chariot; and, indeed, no man's life would be one moment secure from the murderous hand of his fellow man.

A mere superficial view of the subject brings convincing evidence that God restrains the wicked actions of men, and that men are not therefore free agents or actors.

But we have another view to present; we allude to what God has said on this subject. When the Son of God stood before the bar of Pilate, he was interrogated thus by the conceited Judge, "Knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and power to release thee? Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above."—John xix. 10, 11. Who is prepared to dispute the decision as to the amount of Pilate's free agency in this matter? Like the claims of all other pretending free willers and free agents, he could have no power at all in the matter, of which he claimed to have all power, except it had been given him, and that, too, from above. Neither Herod, Pilate, the men of Israel, nor the Gentiles, could do more or less in the case than what God's hand and counsel had before determined should be done. Will any man dare to dispute this position? If so, let him tell what more or what less they had power to do. And here let it not be overlooked or forgotten that he was by the foreknowledge and determinate counsel of God delivered up to be crucified and slain by wicked hands. The death and sufferings of the blessed Savior were not accidental; thus it behooved him to suffer, and to rise again on the third day.

Another class of disputers of the divine government, as though quite willing to compromise the crown and sceptre of Jehovah's power with the Arminians, admit that all these things were foreknown of God; but they would make his foreknowledge depend on something short of his own determinate counsel. Of such we demand, What could be foreknown that was not determined? If God foreknew that Christ should suffer and die in the manner, at the time, and by the hands, that he suffered, was it, at the same time that God foreknew it, undetermined whether it should or should not be? If it was determined, and the certain knowledge of God was based on that settled determination, by whom was it determined? If by any other than God himself, then his independence is impaired, and he is dependent on another for his prescience, or foreknowledge. Before God created the heavens and the earth, he either did certainly know, or he did not certainly know, all events of time, all the actions of wicked men and devils. If he did not certainly know all this, then he was deficient in knowledge. If he did know all beforehand, he either knew it independently, or was dependent on another for his knowledge. To foreknow that which was undetermined, and consequently unsettled, is absurd and ridiculous; and to know from information or from the determination of another is no less wild and absurd; and a denial of his determinate counsel, or absolute decision, or predestination, is equivalent to a denial of his government; for the government of God is not embraced in his foreknowing simply, but in his determining whether things shall or shall not be. We, as creatures, foreknow that we must die; but in this matter we have no government; our mortality rests not on our decision, but on the decision of him who said, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

The objections commonly urged against the predestinating government of God over all beings, all worlds, and all events, are seldom attempted to be drawn from the Scriptures. There is nothing in the testimony of the Bible to limit the power, sovereignty or government of God, but everything to sustain it. The opposers of the doctrine are compelled to look elsewhere for argument. "It is fatalism," says one. "It makes God the author of sin," says another. "It conflicts with the volition and free agency of man," says a third. While by far the greater portion put the matter to rest by saying, "I do not believe the doctrine." To meet all these objections, and make the doctrine clear and plain, and palatable and pleasant to the natural sense and feelings of men, is not by any means our province; but to believe it, confide in it, and rejoice in it with joy unspeakable and full of glory, we trust God has graciously made our privilege.

The frightful images drawn by arch-opposers of the truth have beyond all doubt alarmed many of the timid saints of God; and the apprehension that the doctrine reflects on the character or perfections of God, very naturally leads them to fear to investigate it; but they do not perceive that on the other hand those who deny it assail the independence and limit (if not deny) the government of God.

With us it is no very easy matter to comprehend what they mean by "author of sin." If they mean to charge that the doctrine represents sin as originating in God, and emanating from him to corrupt the human family, or that the Spirit of God moves men to sin, the charge cannot be sustained in truth. If such an inference could in truth be drawn from the fact that God has predestinated all things in general, then the positive declarations of God himself that he predestinated the sufferings and death, as well as the resurrection and glory of Christ would involve the same consequence. If God's raising up Pharaoh and hardening his heart, to make his power known, his choosing the delusions of his enemies, sending a lying spirit to persuade Ahab to go and fall at Ramoth Gilead, and creating the waster to destroy, makes God the author of sin, then his foreknowledge and determinate counsel, delivering Christ to be crucified by wicked hands, can involve nothing less. If the rule be a true and correct one, it will apply in all cases alike. But we deny the theory, and with our Bible in hand confront the whole Arminian world, and boldly assert that God has made all things for himself, even the wicked for the day of evil.

Let cavilers paint all their frightful conceptions of the doctrine that ascribes to God the right of universal rule, that asserts that he works all things after the counsel of his own will, and that he causes all things to work together for good to them that love him and are called according to his purpose; and then let them show the beauties of the doctrine which hinges God's government on contingencies, that makes his foreknowledge (if indeed they admit that he foreknows all things) depend on something other than his own determinate counsel; let them feast upon the notion that God did not create the wicked for the day of evil, that his hand and counsel did not determine beforehand what the wicked Jews and Romans should do in crucifying the Lord of life and glory; that an evil spirit was not sent from him to trouble Saul, nor to be a lying spirit in the mouths of Ahab's prophets; that he does not send strong delusion, that they may believe a lie, that they all may be damned, who have pleasure in unrighteousness and believe not the truth; and that he has no absolute control over the events of this world; but be it ours to rejoice that the Lord reigns, and that "Death and hell can do no more Than what our Father please."

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 15, 1847.

ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS

RECEIVED from now until the end of this year will be entered on our subscription list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1895. The remainder of this year we will send them free.

We still continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express, at expense of party receiving book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of books we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

BY a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

(Continued from page 371.)

We must know what it is to be lost before we can know what it is to be saved, or what that salvation is that can rescue and save us. When we experience that salvation we believe in it, and believe and rejoice in it just as far as it is made known to us, and no farther. "Unto you therefore which believe he is precious." A precious Savior has been revealed, and all his preciousness is embraced in the faith of the believer. "Before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterward be revealed." The law is a teacher or school-master to show us our justly condemned condition; but when faith comes we are no longer under a school-master. Faith comes. We cannot tell of its coming, for it comes not with observation; but the apostle has it that way all the time. "But before faith came," and "after that faith is come." When therefore faith in Christ comes, Jesus is precious ever after. We then cease from worrying about our own works and duties, and enter into rest.

I spoke of being enlightened from above. The inspired apostle informs us that the life which is in Christ is the light of men; that is, the illumination is divine life. People do not believe in the sinfulness of sin nor in their own sinfulness while they love it and delight in it. They believe and rejoice in all the elements of that life which they have received. The exercises of mind, the hungerings and thirstings of that life, are new and peculiar, and nothing that the world can bestow will satisfy them. This experience awakens a sympathy and companionship, endearing the subjects of it to each other. Where there is this love there is proof of this life. "He that loveth is born of God." This faith in Christ is worthy of him. It builds upon him as a foundation. It gives the soul to see the King in his beauty, as he is seen only as he is revealed in this faith. Those that begin in this life, their faith groweth exceedingly, and they increase in knowledge of their Lord and Savior. Our love to any object does not go out of our own volition, nor result from the efforts or persuasion of others. Our love to the Savior results from our knowledge of him as a Savior; and we only know the salvation that has come to us, and our love does not go beyond that. "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world." Right on the back of this the apostle says, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" This faith, thus said to be born of God, is thus traced to him, as having been wrought by him. In another place he is said to be both the author and finisher of it. This faith embracing the salvation which is in Christ, believes in that salvation, and disbelieves and discards everything else, and gives the victory in every conflict with worldly systems, religious excitements, and delusions of every sort. God himself has fixed the faith and hope of the believer in him to be as Mount Zion, which cannot be moved, but abideth forever.

"He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." This coupling of living and believing together would seem to imply that they were inseparable. Life is placed first, and then faith develops; and certainly no faith without previous life. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." He is possessed of a life that can know no condemnation. The burden of the word of the Lord is testimony to this faith. The testimony of Jesus to the subjects of his grace is the spirit of prophecy and of all gospel preaching. There must be witness borne with and to their experience that they are children; and if children, then heirs of the kingdom, and that as heirs they shall inherit in full the things which God has prepared for them that love him.

The above is submitted.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

RIVER VIEW, Ala., Oct. 30, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I inclose you a letter written to me by Elder P. J. Powell, which you may insert in the SIGNS if you think proper, as I have his consent.

Your brother, I hope,

H. J. REDD.

SANDUSKY, Ala., Oct. 19, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER REDD:—Your letter came to hand in due time. I am around home to-day, doing nothing, and thought before the matter gets too old I had best reply, although I know but little to write of. I am glad to hear you are able to go out to the associations and declare some of the counsel of God, to the comfort of the saints. It does a poor man good, after he has been shut in for some time, in body and spirit, to get out, and to feel that the Lord has helped him, by leading him out into the gospel field, and showing him some of the rich pastures. You remember that David said, "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He leadeth me beside the still waters; he maketh me to lie down in green pastures." We can sometimes realize the same things, and O how good it is! Then we are ready to spend and be spent for the great cause. But just let that darkness come on, and the evil beast of our carnal nature begins to creep forth, and we begin to fag; and, like old Jeremiah, we will say within, "I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name." But before we are aware we begin to feel his words in our hearts, as a burning fire shut up in our bones, and we become weary with forbearing, and cannot stay away from the company of this people any longer. Paul puts it as a "Woe is unto me if I preach-not the gospel." Necessity was laid upon Paul, as it was upon Jonah. And when one is called of God, as was Aaron, he will preach even if he cannot get away from home by reason of poverty or sickness of himself or family. He has to preach any how. I have done some of my best preaching about home here, and enjoyed it well, and none knew of it but myself. David also says, "Blessed are the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance." That sounds good. I think sometimes I realize and feel it. I believe that David had reference to this gospel sound of salvation by grace through the redemption of the Lord Jesus Christ. None know this "joyful sound" except those who have been redeemed from among men; having been "blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world." "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." Excuse me for quoting so much here. Paul puts it together so nicely and so compactly. How pleasant it is to meet a congregation that knows this joyful sound, including God's immutable, unlimited predestination. Of course there have been, and always will be, here and there one that has not fully been stripped of the old grave-clothes of carnality, who will flinch and complain, and sometimes misrepresent a poor servant of the Lord among strangers; but we should remember that Paul says, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" To the natural eye it looked like a critical time with Daniel when condemned to the lions' den, and to the three Hebrews when condemned to the furnace; but that earthly king with all his army, his wild beasts and fire, could not be against them to harm them before God; for his Son Jesus Christ was with them, as he is with all his people to this day. "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." The Lord has said to all his people, "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction;" and every one has to suffer afflictions of some kind. The churches of our association had to pass through a great fight of affliction a few years ago; but all is now healed, our meetings have been harmonious for some time, and we hope the Lord is adding to us "such as shall be saved."

I see in the SIGNS that Elder A. B. Brees wants to visit south some. If we had anything to help him on his way I would ask him to visit us. I think we could indorse the doctrine he wants to find; but finances are so tight now, cotton is so cheap, there will be little money in the county.

I will bring this scribble to a close. I did not think I could fill one page when I started to write, but I have filled nearly four with such as I did not think of when I began. We are all well, and still have good food and raiment, and trust you and yours enjoy the same. Write again as you feel inclined.

Yours in fellowship,
P. J. POWELL.

HIGHLAND HOME, Ala., Oct. 28, 1894.

BROTHER BEEBE:—We hope the brethren and friends that are behind with you will soon respond to your call for that which they are due, and not let the paper be a burden to you, and that all the brethren will do all they can to get new subscribers; for I think it one of the best Baptist papers I ever read. I think brother Chick's and brother Curry's pieces cannot be excelled.

With love to you and yours, your brother in hope of eternal life,
H. P. YARBROUGH.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEPARTED this mortal life on Nov. 1st, 1894, at the residence of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha R. Harding, in Middletown, N. Y., our beloved sister and mother in Israel, Mrs. Lydia Mullock, aged 100 years, 2 months and 3 days.

Our beloved sister celebrated her one hundredth anniversary with her two surviving children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, on August 28th, 1894, being in the enjoyment of good health, which she retained until a few hours before her departure. She was surprisingly active for one of her age, and was able to be about the house, and also to occasionally attend our meetings for worship. On Sunday before her death she met with the church here and partook of the Lord's supper. With the exception of a slight deafness, all her faculties were well preserved. She came of a long-lived family, her mother living to the age of ninety-four years, and her great-grandmother died at the age of one hundred and five years. All her brothers and sisters died in early childhood, with the exception of two. She was a daughter of Ashbell Cadwell and Sylvia Stevens. In the year 1812 she was married to Zavin King. To them were born six children, of whom Mrs. Sophia M., wife of brother Elisha R. Harding, of this city, and Mr. Thomas King, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, are the only ones living. She is also survived by fourteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. Her husband, Mr. King, died in 1835, and in 1845 she married Mr. Joshua Mullock, who died in 1867.

When in her twenty-fifth year she received a hope in the Savior of sinners, and on the third day of October, 1819, was baptized in the fellowship of the New Vernon Old School Baptist Church, by Elder Benjamin Montanye, who was then pastor of that church. She continued her membership there until the time of her death, a period of seventy-five years, being loved and esteemed as a humble follower of Jesus by all her kindred in Christ who were favored to enjoy her acquaintance. She was possessed of a sunny and pleasant disposition, which endeared her to all her relatives and friends, who sorrow most of all that they shall see her sweet face and hear her familiar voice no more. Although her health was good, and her surroundings all pleasant, yet she longed to be absent from the body, and to be present with her God and Savior, in whose presence is fullness of joy.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Elder Benton Jenkins, assisted by Elder Wm. L. Beebe, at her late residence in this city; and although the day was very stormy, a large company assembled to pay the last tribute of love and respect to "Aunt Lydia," as she was familiarly called by us all; after which all that was mortal of the loved one was conveyed to the New Vernon cemetery, and laid by the side of her first husband.

"Welcome, sweet hour of full discharge, That sets our longing souls at large, Unbinds our chains, breaks up our cell, And gives us with our God to dwell."

Ed.

DIED—At his residence in Clatsop Co., Oregon, of typhoid fever, our beloved brother, P. B. Heckard.

Our brother was born in Huron Co., Ohio, April 19th, 1830. He moved with his father's family into Illinois in 1843, and from there into Bremer Co., Iowa, in the fall of 1852, where he met and married Miss Abigail J. Gibson. Our brother united with the Baptist Church in June, 1860, and was baptized by Elder J. B. Burch, he being pastor of the church called Providence, near Waverly, Bremer Co., Iowa. From there our dear brother and family traveled across the plains to Oregon, in 1865, enduring all the hardships of that long and perilous journey. He and his beloved wife united with the church they loved so well upon arriving in Oregon, and have been firm and devoted members ever since. They both delighted in reading the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, for which paper they were subscribers for many years.

I cannot express how dearly we loved our departed brother; words fail entirely. The corner is desolate, his chair empty, and an aching void in our hearts. His lonely wife is left to finish the journey of life alone. We all miss him so much, sons, daughters, grandchildren, brother, sisters and neighbors; yet as we gazed upon his peaceful countenance, smiling in death, we knew that our bitter loss was his eternal gain.

He has finished his journey; the Lord knoweth best;

Like the favored disciple, he may lean on the breast

Of Jesus, his Master, whom he loved to obey,

Whose hope was an anchor, whose word was his stay.

Dear Lord, make us willing, prepared and resigned;

O let us be waiting, that the Bridegroom may find

Our lamps trimmed and burning with the oil of his grace

When we too have finished this wearisome race.

D. H. & L. C. HECKARD.

CHADWELL, Oregon.

THE church in Warwick, N. Y., has been called to part with a much loved sister in the death of Mrs. Charity Wood, wife of Mr. Daniel S. Wood, and daughter of the late Joel Wood, which occurred at her home in Warwick, on Friday, Nov. 9th, at about one o'clock a. m. Her age was 75 years, 2 months and 27 days.

Sister W. had been much afflicted since she was brought low by "La Grippe" several years ago, but her great energy kept her from giving way to her suffering until within a few days of her final release.

For many years the deceased held membership with the Methodists, but ever manifested preference for the preaching of the Old School Baptists. She was received in the fellowship of the church April 28th, 1888, and was baptized by Elder Wm. L. Beebe the next day. From that time until she was called home the chief joy of her heart was ever in the church. In her removal we feel that the visible church has suffered a serious loss, and our sorrow is only relieved by the sweet assurance that her gain is infinite. A short time before her last breath she told her pastor that her hope was clear, and the faith which had sustained her through her temporal trials was still sufficient for the final change. She passed away without a struggle, as one falling into a quiet sleep, leaving her husband, one son and one daughter to mourn their loss. May they find comfort in the power of divine grace, which sustained the dear one whom they have lost; and may all who mourn be made to confess that "It is the Lord" who has smitten, and who alone can heal our griefs. B.

G. P. Wilder, the subject of this notice, was born Nov. 18th, 1857, in Bell Co., Ky., some twelve miles northeast of Cumberland Gap. He was married to Miss Aney Goin, of Claiborne Co., Tenn., Oct. 19th, 1879. To them were born seven children, two boys and five girls. Brother Wilder professed a hope in Christ some ten years ago, and always adorned that profession by an orderly walk and a godly conversation until his death, which occurred at nine o'clock p. m. on Nov. 3d, 1894, at his residence in Claiborne Co., Tenn., some fifteen miles south of Cumberland Gap. He united with the Primitive Baptist Church at Browney Creek, Bell Co., Ky., some eight years ago, and has ever since been a consistent member. He served as Clerk of the Powell's Valley Association two or three sessions. He has also been chosen to serve on several important committees among the Baptists, and has been appointed messenger by his church to the association generally. He was ready at any and all times to defend the doctrine of salvation by grace, through the merits of Christ's blood. He labored in the ministry five or six years, and will be missed by many lovers of the truth.

He leaves a father and mother, three brothers and two sisters, a loving wife and seven little children, with many other relatives and friends, to mourn his absence. I tried last night, in company with Elder John Miracle, to speak some comforting words to a large audience who had gathered to pay their last respects to him.

P. N. MOYERS.

CAPP'S FORD, Tenn., Nov. 5, 1894.

APPOINTMENTS.

B. L. BEEBE—DEAR BROTHER:—You will please publish this list of appointments for me.

Elder A. B. Brees, of Spencerville, Ohio, will preach at the following named places in Roanoke, Franklin, Bedford and Pittsylvania Counties, Virginia, on the following dates at the named places:

Roanoke City, December 2d; Bellevue, 3d; Little Creek, 4th; Chestnut, 5th; Bethel, 6th; Gill's Creek or Cross Roads, 7th; Fairview, 8th; Ephesus, 9th; Chapel, 10th; Union, 11th; Weatherford, 12th; Galilee, 13th; Fairfield, 14th; Strawberry, 15th; Mt. Ararat, 16th.

He will then go south to W. R. Welborn's, but will stop according to appointments which brethren Thomas N. Walton and R. W. Dix will make. He will need conveyance. Come to the previous appointment and carry him to your church. Brethren reading this will verbally advertise it.

J. T. LUMPKINS.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Dr. D. M. Leonard, N. Y., 4.50, Mrs. N. B. Libbey, Iowa, 1.—Total, $5.50.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE
TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c.

The above described book of 719 pages, 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

BUNYAN'S
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,

And a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY

OF THE

UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

B. L. BEEBE.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

We have so frequently received inquiries from brethren and friends concerning the purchasing of Bibles from our office that we have been induced to make a thorough investigation of the publishing and sale of Bibles, and find that we can furnish them of any size and style of binding cheaper than they can be purchased at the bookstores throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore "because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.
n ver. 31.		18 "Mary Magdalene came and told
CHAPTER XX.
1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.
		16 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.
		18 "Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good

Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.	6 00

These large Bibles are too heavy to go safely by mail, and therefore will be sent by express at expense of party receiving the book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of book we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS,

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

308 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00 Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No: 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

(BEEBE'S COLLECTION.)

These books contain 800 pages and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth Binding, single copy, 75c; half dozen, $3.00.
Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.
Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.
First Quality Turkey Morocco, Full Gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth Binding.....	$1 00
Cloth Binding, half-dozen.....	4 50
Blue, Marbled Edge.....	1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge.....	2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt....	2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books, postage paid, to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES,

Contain all the Editorial articles written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume, $2.00, or both first and second volumes ordered at the same time and to the same address, $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3.00, formerly $4.50. Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged), $3.50, formerly $5.00.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS' A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1894.

NO. 48.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Ghent, Ky., Oct. 20, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I am blessed with some sweet meditations upon the ever glorious subject of the resurrection. Upon that great subject I have spent many happy hours in sweet converse with dear brethren and sisters, and have often in my feeble way written upon it; and what I may now say will perhaps be a repetition of what I and abler brethren and sisters have written and said upon that subject.

God said to Adam, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This decree reached all the unborn posterity of that man who had violated the holy law of God, and it is from that state or condition that they will be raised in the glorious morning of the resurrection. That returning to dust was the penalty for the violation of that holy law, and none among the many millions of Adam's fallen race have had power to make void that decree. But when our Lord appeared upon the earth he came bearing a name which had been given him from on high. The angel of the Lord said unto Joseph, "And she [Mary] shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." "Hear ye now, O house of David: Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." That Immanuel is declared by Matthew to be God with us.

It will be remembered that Jesus said to the weeping sisters of Lazarus, "I am the resurrection and the life." He who is God with us, clothed with all the great and wonderful attributes of Deity, is the resurrection and the life. What an unfathomable mystery to the finite mind is God manifest in the flesh! Yet he was so manifest that he might be "the first-fruits of them that slept." He was as much the resurrection when he talked to Mary and Martha, as he was when he came in holy triumph from Joseph's new tomb. When he came to earth his work was before him and his reward was with him. Part of that work was his triumph over the grave. His name was Jesus, Immanuel, God with us. In that great and wonderful name he was and is the resurrection and the life. But for the unity that existed between him and his people, his resurrection would have availed nothing more than the taking of life again of that body that laid in that tomb, and his individual ascension to the realms of glory. It was that unity that caused the prophet to say, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." In that glorious unity they were loved by the Father before time began. They were loved in the Son because they were one with him. He said, "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love." "I and my Father are one," is his language. The apostle declares the oneness of Christ and his people when he says, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." This language of the apostle presents most forcibly the unity of Christ and his people, his children. These are the same children of whom the apostle speaks when quoting from the prophet Isaiah, "Behold, I and the children which God hath given me." Those children partook of flesh and blood, and that flesh and blood must die; and for that reason he took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, and deliver those children from the bondage of death. In their delivery he must conquer both death and the grave. This he could not do without going down into the grave. Those children being one with him, for their perfect and complete redemption from both death and the grave he went down into both, and arose a mighty conqueror, declaring, "Mine own arm hath brought salvation unto me." That salvation was brought to him in his unity with those children which God had given him; therefore their salvation from death and the grave was made perfect by his being both the resurrection and the life. The apostle presents this great truth both in a negative and affirmative form when he says, "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised. And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." But the apostle affirmatively and triumphantly records this great and glorious truth when he says, "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept." Then surely he is the resurrection and the life. The wages of sin is death, and the grave follows in close proximity to death. O how our hearts and our voices should be attuned to the most lofty praise and adoration to his great and wonderful name for having conquered the grim visaged monarch of the tomb, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. That gospel presents the unfathomable mystery of God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, as one God, blessed for evermore. In that great and ever glorious oneness, Jesus took on himself flesh and blood, and made manifest to his saints that he was both the resurrection and the life. While he sojourned on earth, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, he was mortal, and subject to death; but when he came from the tomb he came clad in glorious immortality. He said to John, "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and, behold, I am alive for evermore." At the resurrection of Jesus was life and immortality brought to light through the gospel. The gospel would never have been preached if Jesus had not risen from the tomb. The apostle in his admonitions to Timothy says, "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ; which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting."

The children that were given to the Son, in their unity with Adam were without immortality; but in their unity with Christ, their living head, they had secured to them that immortality which they must and will put on when they hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth from their long resting places on the great and glorious morning of the resurrection. Of that great period the apostle, in declaring what shall be done, says, "This mortal must put on immortality." If they already had immortality there was no necessity for the apostle to tell us they must put on immortality. Then they will be like their glorious Lord, alive for evermore. It is written, "We shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." Death had no more power over him when he arose from the tomb. Death had power over him till he said, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost. And you, dear saints, while here below, are subject to death, yea, dying daily; but when you are laid in the darkness of the tomb, death will have no more dominion over you. The grave will then supercede death and hold dominion over your mortal remains till that hour of which our Lord spake, "The hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life." Then you will come forth clad in that immortality which is the great and wonderful gift of God. "By grace are ye saved," is the language of the apostle. Then the full scope and meaning of that language will be made fully manifest to you, inwrapped as you will then be with the seraphic glories of your future and eternal home. Then you will be saved from the curse of a violated law, saved from the sting of death and the victory of the grave, yea, saved with an everlasting salvation, all through the grace of God, who hath loved you, and given himself for you, that he might redeem you from all iniquity, and make you kings and priests unto God, and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ, your elder Brother, to all the ineffable glories around the eternal throne of God and the Lamb. Then will you have been sown in corruption and raised in incorruption; sown in dishonor and raised in glory; sown in weakness and raised in power: sown a natural body and raised a spiritual body. For your comfort while you sojourn here below, the apostle hath said to you, "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." When the dear saints are enabled by faith to behold him in his great and wonderful character as the God-man-mediator, as the one who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption, and who is their resurrection and their life, their cry should be, "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name," and their daily song should be,

"Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all."

Please dispose of these rambling thoughts, and believe me affectionately yours, often in sorrow, darkness and gloom because of the reigning power of sin in this old and corrupt body that must ere long be laid away to await the sound of the great trumpet that shall call from their long resting places the pale nations of the dead.

H. COX.

THE WANDERER.

DID I hear some one say, "Return unto thy rest, O my soul?" But I cannot return unto that rest that was mine so lately in my Father's house, for I have lost sight of that dear house, and I do not know the way back. I am like a little child that has heedlessly wandered away out of sight of home while playing, and is utterly lost. It is so short a time ago that I was in that house, enjoying all its inexpressible comforts. I merely walked abroad a little, more out of curiosity than anything else, to see the wonders and beauties of nature. I noticed some different varieties of plants and flowers, and went on examining one after another, but thought I kept all the time in sight of the house. Some peculiar butterflies and bright-plumaged birds attracted and drew me farther on; and I followed for awhile the winding course of a very sparkling and musical stream. I had gone but a short distance from the door, as I thought, when it began to grow dark; and as I looked about me I found myself in this deep and terrible wilderness, entirely out of sight of home. It seems like I had come down into some deep gulf, though I was not conscious of coming down hill. I hear the terrible roar of wild beasts, and the howling of a storm that seems to be rising. I am terribly afraid. I have run in every direction, but can find no way out. I seem to be getting deeper and deeper in the wilderness the more I seek for a way of escape. How tired I am! But I dare not stand still; and yet my strength is so nearly gone that I will soon have to stop.

O how thoughtless and foolish I have been! Why did I ever leave the house at all? I had no need to go away to seek for any real comfort or joy, for everything I could possibly need was there. The delights that are provided for the happy inmates of that wonderful home are beyond what they could have imagined. The gardens and grounds are filled with every beautiful and useful tree and plant and flower, and refreshed and animated by streams more beautiful and sweeter than any which flow upon earth beside; and all the great house, with its wide gardens and lovely lands, is inclosed with walls of glorious beauty and absolute strength, so that all the favored family enjoy the untold riches and privileges and delights in perfect safety.

How I could have had it in my mind to wander away from such a home and from such company, "in chase of false delight," I cannot now imagine. How sinfully foolish I was. How full of vanity and selfishness and pride and self-confidence I must have been. I knew that all the flowers which grow outside will soon fade and die, and that their beauty and fragrance, even while they last, are not pleasant to the refined sense of those who have been in the heavenly gardens, but only attract the senses of our depraved nature, which has been the only cause of our trouble while in that sweet home. They yield only that gross pleasure which is real annoyance and pain to the spiritual minds of those who dwell there. I remember now that I felt that fragrance and beauty to be repugnant to me when I first began this walk, which was so sinful, and has ended so sadly; but as I went on, curiously examining what I saw, I became used to that which was at first disagreeable, till it finally became in a manner pleasant, as it was before I first got sick of these vain pleasures, and was taken away from them, and received into those blessed mansions of rest, from which I thought I would never even wish to go out for a moment. There began to be something exciting, like the effect of mixed wine, in chasing the bright-winged insects, and following the dancing waters of the stream, though I must certainly have known that the one would die and fade as soon as caught, and that the other would lead me away from home, and from all true comfort and peace.

But it is all over now, and I must soon be destroyed. I am lost. I shall see my dear Father's face no more, nor that loved home, nor those dear kindred. Indeed, I have no right to call him Father, nor them kindred, nor that my home. I have forfeited all those rights, even if they were ever mine. It is likely I did not belong there; but O how sweet it was while I was there! How glad and happy I was! I was singing from morning till night. I had no question then of my right to be there. I was like a child at home. But now O how dark and terrible it is! How far away I must be from that place. No one could hear me if I should call; and they could not care for me if they did hear, for I am not worthy. But could that dear Father hear, and would he attend to my cry? For I must cry out of this obscurity and out of this darkness; I must cry for mercy and for help. What voice is this I hear saying, "Out of the depths have I cried unto thee?" Has any one else been in such depths as this? There it is again, speaking somewhere through this darkness and danger and gloom that surround me: "I cried unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me, and heard my cry." Is it not wonderful that I should hear such words while there in such darkness, and the furious noise of the storm and of the beasts around me? The words are very low and soft, but I hear them plainly. It seems as though it is I that am saying them. They are down deep in my soul; and now I am crying for mercy and help. "O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul."

And now I hear that wonderfully soft and sweet but powerful voice coming to me again with the words, "Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee." As I turn to make one more effort to find my way back, what a wonder do I behold! Here is that beautiful house, right before me, with all its doors wide open, and all its loveliness and beauty spread out before and around me, and with all the dear family gathering about me with a loving welcome, singing and rejoicing because I am back home again. How astonished I am that there is no reproach in their looks or words; and the dear Father comes to me in the fullness of his infinite love, and receives me again into his rest.

"Seizing my soul with sweet surprise,
He draws with loving bands;
Divine compassion in his eyes,
And pardon in his hands."

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul; and forget not all his benefits."

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., August, 1894.

HOLMES, N. D., Aug. 18, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Inclosed you will find a copy of a letter which I received from Mrs. Annie E. Smith, of Laurens, Iowa. You will remember her two letters which were published in number twelve of the present volume of the SIGNS, which were called forth from reading the editorial on "The Footsteps of the Flock." The Lord has heard her prayer. The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much. The Lord has declared that he will be inquired of by the house of Israel; also, that many shall come from the east and the west, the north and the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of heaven with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and enjoy the glorious feast at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

I have not asked consent to have the letter published, but I know she will have charity, as the power of God is so plainly manifest in making his people willing in the day of his power.

Yours in hope,

B. F. BUTLER.

LAURENS, Iowa, July 23, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BUTLER:—If one so unworthy as I feel myself to be may so address you. I received your highly prized letter of March 25th, and thank God that he put you in remembrance of me in my time of need. The joy and comfort, the lifting up of my poor soul, was more than words can express. It seemed to me that my cry had gone up to God, for I got ten letters from preachers in one week. I got fifteen letters in all. I give God the praise for it all, for he led me in a way that I knew not. He found me in a waste howling wilderness, he turned me about, he guided and instructed me, and kept me as the apple of his eye. Bless his holy name, for his mercy endureth forever. I did not know, dear brother, when I wrote to the SIGNS, that it would be so; but God knoweth all things, and he caused me to write. He gave me the understanding of what to write. But O how long did I fight against God, and tried to refrain from writing. He says he will make us willing in the day of his power. How my heart did burn with love for the dear saints of God. The Lord said to me, "Go tell thy brethren what great things the Lord hath done for thee." I knew who they were, because the Lord had instructed me. I cannot doubt my calling, dear brother, for it was made so plain; but I feel very unworthy of such a high calling. I cannot help praising my God. It seems sometimes that my poor heart will burst with love to God. I believe I have a perfect right to praise and adore his holy name, for he has done so much for me and my family. He has lifted my feet up from the mire and clay, and placed them on the Rock, Christ Jesus. Although I have at times many doubts and fears, yet the fear of the Lord is always before my eyes.

God sent me a preacher. You know I wanted to hear the word of God preached in its purity, for I was very hungry for that spiritual food. How my poor soul did hunger and thirst after righteousness. Elder Blake came to me from Waterloo, Iowa, on the fourth Saturday in April. He came with such love and praise for God and the church that it seemed like he was sent from God. How I pitied the poor brother, to think he had to come out here and preach to one so unworthy as I was. I cannot tell you how I felt, and how I prayed for that man; for when he wrote me he spoke of being so cast down; yet I insisted that he come to me, and then it grieved me to think that he had to come to preach to one so unworthy as I was. I got his letter just as we were ready for supper; but I did not want to eat, for I was full already. I went to bed troubled about myself, and praying God to have mercy on unworthy me. It seemed like I knew just how that dear brother felt, and it seemed like I was unworthy of one of God's ministers to come under my roof. O how I poured out my supplications to God! Then I saw Jesus sitting on the well, like as the woman of Samaria saw him, and I cried out, and said, "Lord, ever give me of this living water to drink!" O how my poor soul was lifted up, so that I praised God aloud. I never shall forget that well, and the lovely form that sat thereon. I had nothing to fear then. When God reveals his face we have nothing to fear, but all is brightness and sunshine, and he drives all fear away. Then I wrote and told Elder Blake what I had seen, and he was made willing to come. I went to Waterloo on the second Saturday and Sunday in May. Elder Murphy was there, from Nora Springs, Iowa. He is a noble speaker. I went there for shelter, and they took me in. I was hungry, and they gave me some meat. I was thirsty, and they gave me drink. I was baptized on Sunday. O what a lovely day that was! But I had many doubts and fears from Saturday till I got to the water. I thought the church thought I had deceived them. O how I poured out my prayer to God! I well knew I could not deceive God. When I went into the water all my troubles rolled away. My dear companion went with me to Waterloo, but I did not know he was traveling the same road till after we got there. After I was baptized he told his travels to the brethren, while on the way home from the water. He did not go to the church then, but he was made willing by the power of the Almighty God to go. So we went back on the second Sunday in July, and my husband was baptized. This is why I feel that I have a right to rejoice and be glad, because God has done so much for us. It is not because of anything good that I have done, dear brother, for it seems there is nothing good in me. But O how I do love the brethren! O how my poor heart goes out with love and supplications to God for all the dear children of God! But I have need for them to pray for me.

I must quit, lest I worry you. How much I would like for you to come and see us; we live so far from the church. There are four of us here who believe that salvation is of God. I wish you could come on the fourth Sunday in August. I think Elder Blake will be here. I would like to hear from you again if you get this.

ANNIE E. SMITH.

PALESTINE, Texas, Nov. 3, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I am apprised that I am a little behind with my dues; and as I wish to send a little money for myself and others, I thought I would say a little about the love of God, for your consideration.

The love of God passeth understanding. The love of God is stronger than death. It is God. It passeth understanding, inasmuch as the natural man by his natural, carnal mind does not know it. This love of God the natural creature cannot understand. The carnal mind of the natural man cannot understand how it is that the love of God is stronger than death, while the mind of Christ in us can see the strength and power of this love over the power of death, as set forth in many instances in the Bible. And further, it is the work of God that we do believe, and go on believing. The hour is coming when all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth. Yes, how many instances there are recorded in the Bible in which we find the love of God to be stronger than death. I cannot enumerate them all; suffice it to say that they who cast the three Hebrews into the fiery furnace purposed to destroy them; but here the love of God was stronger than death. Again, they purposed Daniel's death, but were defeated by the love of God. Again, Lazarus was dead already four days; and it looked as though death would surely hold him. But no; the time arrived when a voice came from him who is Love, with power to quicken, and it reached Lazarus, who came forth, bound in grave-clothes. Also, Christ was securely fastened by his enemies in the sepulchre; but here again they were defeated; for this love which is stronger than death was manifested. But his enemies were none the better for it, for straightway they went with a lie, saying that his disciples had stolen him away while they slept; and they received large money for telling this lie.

I will have to leave the subject, hoping the love of God has constrained me to judge thus.

Dear brother, as you have begun to give us your father's writings, we hope you will continue until you have given us all.

Yours in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began,

U. J. BELL.

NORA SPRINGS, Floyd Co., Iowa.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I would like to say to those of our faith and order, Old School Baptists, who may be traveling through this country, that we would be glad to have them call on us. Our church meets on Saturday before the first Sunday in each month. I live at Nora Junction, the crossing of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern R. R., and the Chicago, Milwaukie & St. Paul R. R. Inquire for me of the agent or baggage man. To our ministers we extend a special invitation. Lime Creek Church holds meetings at my house.

WM. C. BROWN, Clerk.

SELECTED.

SPIRITUAL MIRACLES.

"THEN the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert."—Isa. xxxv. 5, 6.

The eyes of the blind being opened, as we have read, and the ears of the deaf unstopped, literally had its accomplishment in the days of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is the mystical and spiritual signification of these words with which we have to do, and it is that which more particularly concerns us. We know that such is the state of man through the fall that all by nature are spiritually blind and covered with gross darkness; as we read, "Darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." "The people have no knowledge;" they have no knowledge of God, no knowledge of a covenant of grace, no knowledge of Christ, or of salvation by him; no knowledge of the Holy Spirit, of his work, of his operations upon the heart; no real knowledge of the corruptions of their nature, the evil of sin. In this state of spiritual darkness, blindness and ignorance all remain until their understandings are enlightened by the Spirit of God. Being enlightened by the Spirit, they find it just as written in the Scriptures, "Whatsoever maketh manifest is light." This light which shines in us, the eyes of our understanding being opened, we find to be a reproving one. "But all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light." Light is given us to see the spirituality of the law; and feeling the wrath of God in the law, we are, under divine teaching, made to flee from the wrath to come, to the Lord Jesus Christ, as the only refuge for the perishing, the helpless and the lost. They have light to see themselves lost, to see their corruptions, their sins, their wickedness, and the plague of their heart; unbelief, vanity, pride, the evil imaginations working in it, and so on. It is with them spiritually as it was literally with the blind man, of whom we read that they brought him to the Lord Jesus, entreating the Savior of sinners on his behalf. We are then told Christ Jesus took him by the hand, and led him out of the town. Having done this, he spat on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, then told him to look up, and asked him if he saw aught. Said the blind man, "I see men as trees walking." The Lord Jesus Christ did the same thing over again, and made him look up; and he was restored, and saw every man clearly. This man was an emblem of those spiritually blind, brought to Jesus, whom the Lord Jesus takes by the hand; and, as he led this man out of the town, so it is with us. It shows the great kindness and condescension of the Lord, who is our leader and guide. By this you will see all the Lord's people are a separate people in election, in redemption, and in vocation. By his Spirit and grace he separates them from the world.

We are told that this man, at the command of Christ, looked up, and said he saw men as trees walking; which we all know is a very imperfect state of vision. Just so it is with those in whom a work of grace is begun; the views they have of the Lord Jesus, his person and work, by the account they give, are very glimmering and very weak. Perhaps they have not much light in the doctrine of the everlasting gospel. Their hearts being made upright and honest, they speak no farther than what the Holy Spirit has taught them, and what they have been brought to know and feel. Jesus Christ again put his hands on the man's eyes, and made him look up, and then he saw every man clearly. Just so it is spiritually. Even those who have the clearest views only know in part. Paul said, "For we know but in part, and prophesy in part; but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."

"The eyes of the blind shall be opened." The eyes of our understanding being opened by the Spirit, we see our sin, our guilt, our perishing condition, our lost state, and our want of righteousness. "My people," saith the Lord, "shall have the light of life;" that light which is everlasting life.

Jacob, we read, "saw the face of God." And thus it is written of the prophet Isaiah, "Mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts." Job, in his day, said, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee." What was the effect of this? "I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Said Christ, "The world seeth me no more; but ye see me." Now we can all tell what spiritual views we have had of the Lord Jesus Christ, "whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not [meaning the Spirit], neither knoweth him. But ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you."

Also Moses, we read in the word, saw him who is invisible. "By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible."

"Am I not free?" said the apostle; "have I not seen Jesus Christ my Lord?" The Savior tells us the will of the Father is, "That every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life." "That every one that seeth the Son," in the glory of his person, the fullness of his grace; to see him an all-sufficient Savior, that he is able to save to the uttermost; and, under divine power, which the Lord communicates, the soul goes forth in faith on the Lord Jesus. However transient, however weak, and however glimmering these views may be, they are transforming, they are as-

(Continued on page 382.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., NOVEMBER 28, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
F. A. CHICK, REISTERSTOWN, MD.
B. L. BEEBE, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.*All letters for this paper should be addressed, and money orders made payable as formerly, to*GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

GLAD TIDINGS.

It is with feelings of inexpressible pleasure, and we trust with true thankfulness to God, that we announce to our brethren and friends in this number that we no longer have to continue the publication of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES in our name alone. When a few months ago we were deprived of the editorial labors of our brother, Wm. L. Beebe, the deep sense of the fearful and solemn responsibilities that devolved on us in carrying on the paper with but our own name at the head seemed more than we could endure. Indeed, we were nearly driven to despair, and had there been any way of escape we fear that we should have deserted our post. But the Lord has been better to us than all our fears, in enabling our brethren by divine grace to extend their christian forbearance, and some even to kindly write us words in commendation of our feeble efforts. For the second time since our connection with the paper we have had to appeal to the charity of our brethren. When our dear father was called home we were left alone at the helm, and a few months ago when our brother William withdrew; but we were in the hands of our friends, and as long as the Lord shall permit us to remain on the shores of time we shall ever hold in grateful remembrance their kind leniency extended to us during both these trying periods. The kind and indulgent patience of our brethren we feel is now rewarded by the Lord, in putting it in the hearts of two of our ablest and most highly gifted brethren in the ministry to consent to accept the position of editors of the paper, brethren Benton Jenkins and F. A. Chick. Both of these able defenders of the truth are too favorably and widely known to need any introduction by us. It is with a profound sense of the goodness of God, and with all the gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift that our poor, weak heart is capable of feeling, that we make this announcement. The "Salutatory" of each of the brethren will be found in the editorial columns of this number, and their names will be seen under the editorial head, as well as in the advertisement of the paper on the last page, where also will be found instructions how to address letters for the paper.

Again thanking you, brethren and friends, for your kind indulgence, and feeling that you are now richly rewarded of the Lord, we are, we humbly trust, your brother in Christ,
B. L. BEEBE.

SALUTATORIES.

TO MY BRETHREN, THE READERS OF THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES:—In this number of the SIGNS will be seen the announcement that, together with brother Jenkins, I have consented to take charge, for a time at least, of the editorial department of the SIGNS. In doing so I feel as though I am under obligations to the readers and patrons to say a few things by way of expressing the feelings which have and do actuate me in taking this step.

When a few weeks ago I received a letter from the proprietor and publisher of the SIGNS, brother Benton L. Beebe, in which he laid before me the proposition to become one of its editors, coupled with the earnest entreaty that I should do so, and with the statement that he had weighed the matter in his mind for some time, and that he had also tried to wait upon God in prayer concerning it, I was deeply surprised and humbled in feeling. I could not believe that I was in any sense qualified to assume such a responsible position. There came upon me a sense of all the burden which in my mind I had always associated with the filling of such a position. Whatever ambition the weakness of my flesh might lead me into, surely I never have had the slightest ambition to be an editor of a paper, especially of a paper like the SIGNS. I have never felt qualified for it, and I have ever felt that such a public position was not to be desired; but while I felt all this, the appeal came to me with such solemn weight that I did not dare to respond at once, just as I felt to do, and say no. I felt that I must take time to consider; and I trust also that my desire was to ask wisdom of God, and to be wholly submissive and obedient to his will. I have waited and thought over the matter for several weeks, and at the last have not dared to decline walking in the way which I have been constrained to believe the God I desire to serve has opened before me. Therefore in this number of the SIGNS my name appears associated with that of brother Jenkins as editor. I cannot but feel to fear and tremble as I enter upon this to me untrodden way. I do not think that in my earlier life, when I felt called to the work of the ministry, I ever had a deeper sense of unworthiness and unfitness than attends me now as I take this important step. I have never in my ministry, nor in the pastoral office, felt more sensibly my dependence upon God, who alone can bestow the grace that we daily need. I trust, nay more, I feel that my decision to accept this position, with whatever of toil and care, of reproach and censure, it may bring, is of the Lord. I could not accept otherwise. If it is of God, it will appear sooner or later. If it be not of God, this also will soon appear. Thus in brief I have sketched the reasons which I believe have influenced me in finally coming to the decision which is now made known to the brethren.

For more than thirty years I have been a more or less frequent contributor to the columns of the SIGNS. So far as my faith in the doctrine of God our Savior is concerned, surely after all these years of writing I need not again define it. I have written in weakness and in fear often; I doubt not also that I have often made mistakes in the interpretation of portions of the word of God; but I desire to take this occasion to say that so far as the doctrine and practice of the church of God is concerned I have nothing to take back. So far as it is given to any one to know the future, I do not expect to contend for any other things in the editorial department of the SIGNS than I have contended for in its columns as a correspondent. I have read the SIGNS ever since I could read anything. From its columns in my youthful days I derived many a word of strength and comfort. The doctrine of salvation, to which it continually bore testimony, was what I was led at a very early age to believe and love. The SIGNS has not changed or turned away from its early faith. If it had I should not be writing this communication for its columns; for the very same principles of truth that I then loved I love still. I still indorse and expect to continue to bear my feeble testimony to all the principles of truth laid down in the earlier pages of the SIGNS. I expect to do this because they seem to me to be according to the law and the testimony. Predestination, foreknowledge, election, particular atonement, finished and complete in Jesus Christ, effectual calling, embracing the doctrine of the new birth by the Word and of the Spirit of God, the final preservation of the saints to glory, and in the resurrection of the dead. All these I have always believed and do still believe to be the teaching of the Bible, and also the hope and joy of the believer in Jesus. Also, the obligation resting upon all who believe in Jesus to maintain good works, or to be obedient to every command of our Lord. In writing for the SIGNS all these past thirty or more years I have tried to avoid strife and vain jangling and disputes about mere words to no profit. I have tried to write of things to which the hearts of the Lord's people could respond amen. I have also tried to write in such a manner as would not irritate or tend to the wounding of one of the tenderest and least of all the children of God; and I have tried to write simply and plainly, so that the least child who knew the truth by blessed experience could understand what I meant to say. No doubt I have often failed to write plainly, but this has been my desire and aim. I hope to be led by no other desire or spirit in the future, so long as I may continue to write, whether as editor or as correspondent. I feel a great desire to tread very softly and yet very firmly in the way that is before me.

There comes up into my mind as I pen these words a feeling of deep emotion as I remember the names that for more than sixty years have stood at the head of the editorial columns of the SIGNS, Elder Gilbert Beebe and Elder Wm. L. Beebe. No one can know how earnestly I desired that the last named brother should still have remained as editor. I cannot hope to half-way fill the gap that is left. It would be presumption in me to even for a moment compare myself with such a man, with such a servant of God, as Elder Gilbert Beebe was; and there is no brother in all our ministry dearer to me than is his son, Elder Wm. L. Beebe. I could not allow my name to appear where theirs has so long been were it not that I desire to do what I may toward sustaining the SIGNS. I feel to say also that I rejoice to be associated with Elder Jenkins, who has for so many years been a trusted counselor and adviser in the conduct of the SIGNS. I feel that by far the larger part of the responsibility for its future conduct will of right and of necessity devolve upon him; but yet I am willing to do what I can.

I do not desire to make many promises for the future. If this is the work of God he will sustain and guide us all as we go forward in it. It is never his way to give us to see far into the future; but we may safely trust him to give us an open way just when we need it. We cannot open the path before us, and the Lord does not open the way one moment before we need it; but yet the Red Seas are always divided and Jordan's waves are always stayed in time. So I feel sure that the future will be as the past. God will guide us; and he alone knows what is in store for us and for the SIGNS. We may rest assured that his will is done, and will be done. Our God has made the SIGNS a great blessing to many in the past, and he can still bless his people through its columns. I feel to pray that so long as I fill the place into which I have entered nothing may appear in its pages which can justly be held responsible for any alienations or strife or heart-burnings among those who love God. I desire to always strive for the things which make for peace, and whereby we may edify one another. The SIGNS was started in humble reliance upon God. May God be our reliance still.

In closing these remarks I want to say that I trust that all the brethren may have a heart to pray for Zion, and for Zion's sake, that to me and to all who are in any way engaged in the conduct of the SIGNS there may be given the spirit of wisdom and of fear and of love, that we may have but one object in view in all we do and say, viz., to strive together for the faith of the gospel, and to do all to the glory of God. I trust that the dear brethren will remember my constant need of forbearance, and be able to show that charity in their judgment of me which hides the multitude of faults. I feel encouraged to hope for this in the future, because of the kind judgment of my brethren in the past. I certainly should be unfeeling and wholly ungrateful did I not have some sense of all the love and forbearance that my brethren have shown me in the past.

Praying that the blessings which our God is wont to bestow upon his Israel may rest upon all, both the readers and publishers of the SIGNS, I remain your brother in the hope of the gospel,

F. A. CHICK.

FROM early childhood I had serious thoughts on the subject of religion, and was troubled on account of my sinful condition, not knowing the cause of it all. A deep feeling of solemnity almost always possessed my mind, and I was a child of sorrowful spirit, little inclined to mingle with those around me. In the year 1857, at the age of thirteen years, against my wishes, but in subjection to my parents, I was sprinkled by an Episcopal minister, by which, they said, I became "A member of Christ, a child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven." Up to this time I was not aware of the existence of a people who were known as Old School Baptists. My first knowledge of them and their peculiar faith was given me through my schoolmate, Benton L. Beebe. Curiosity led me to inquire further into their peculiar faith and order; and soon I was persuaded, by reading the experiences recorded in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, that they were the people of God, and that I must have an experience like theirs if I should ever be so happy as to be indeed "a child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven." I realized that I had the same sorrow for sin that they spoke of, but not the assurance and joy that they had felt; yet there was in my heart a very faint hope that as I had known the bitterness of sin, I should at some time also know the joy of God's salvation. In the Lord's own time and way, but not in the way that I had anticipated, he was pleased to give me a hope in his mercy; and in the spring of 1867 I was baptized in the fellowship of the Middletown & Wallkill Old School Baptist Church, by the pastor, Elder Gilbert Beebe, of precious memory. In December previous to my baptism I entered the office of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES as a compositor, and have been an attache of the same ever since. Upon the death of Elder Gilbert Beebe, when Elder Wm. L. Beebe was called as associate with brother Benton L. Beebe in the conduct of the SIGNS, I was honored with the privilege of assisting them in the selection and preparation of material to fill the columns of that time-honored and truth-bearing family paper, and shortly afterward was announced in its columns as an associate editor. The relations existing between us were pleasant indeed, and I was distressed in mind when brother Wm. L. Beebe withdrew from the editorial department of the paper, leaving me to render about all the service in that department. I then felt, and yet feel, that I must either have assistance from some brother in the arduous labors and responsible position, or retire from the field entirely. Notwithstanding brother Benton L. and many others of the brethren have expressed their confidence in my ability to successfully continue in the work without assistance, I have not felt that the Lord required it of me, nor that it was possible for me to endure the mental and physical labor necessarily connected with it.

I am heartily in accord with brother Beebe in the call of our dear brother, Elder F. A. Chick, as an associate with us in the work, and sincerely hope and trust that it is pleasing to God, and will also be pleasing to the numerous subscribers and readers of the SIGNS, so that we all shall have their good wishes and fervent prayers in our behalf in our work and labor of love for them.

With such ability as the Lord may be pleased to give me, and as my mind may be impressed, I hope to still contend for those principles of truth which the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from the beginning of its publication has contended for, believing them to be the substance of that "faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

BENTON JENKINS.

MELCHISEDEC.

BROTHER Springsteen, of the Ramapo, N. Y., church, has desired us to give our views on the person, character, &c., of Melchisedec, as stated in Heb. vii. 1-3.

"For this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace; without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually."—Heb. vii. 1-3.

Various and conflicting comments have been given by the learned and the wise on this part of the sacred record, and, perhaps, tending rather to darken counsel by uttering words without knowledge, than to edify and instruct the inquiring minds of the children of God. We cannot flatter our brother that what we have to say on the subject is going to settle the matter, and make the subject clear and plain; for we are as liable to err in our comments as many of our brethren who have taken the subject in hand. Nevertheless such views as we have shall be freely expressed, and if any brother has a clearer light let him not put it under a bushel; for truth is sufficiently precious to be worth searching for, as for a hidden treasure.

Some have expressed the opinion that Melchisedec was the Son of God himself, personally made manifest to Abraham; and that there never was such a man, literally in the flesh; in support of this opinion, what is said of his being without father or mother, &c., has been urged; and it has been thought that what is said of Melchisedec cannot be applicable to any mere man. But by a careful examination of the subject it will, as we think, be seen that what is inapplicable to him as a man, is applicable to him as a priest and king, or rather of the peculiar order of his priesthood.

That Melchisedec was a man, and as such was born into the world like all of the sons of Adam, and that when he had served his generation he fell asleep and was gathered to his fathers, we have not the least doubt.

To sustain this position, we find him expressly called a man, and that, too, in the same sense that Abraham was called a man, in comparing the one with the other. "Now consider how great this man was unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils." The contrast is between Abraham as a patriarch and seminal head of the Levitical priesthood (for that entire priesthood was at that time in the loins of Abraham), and Melchisedec as a priest unto the most high God, of a royal order, of prior existence, and "whose descent was not counted from them" (the tribe of Levi.)

Melchisedec, as a man, met Abraham, and as a priest of the most high God blessed him, and received tithes from the Levitical priesthood from the hand of the patriarch of that priesthood, by which was signified his superior greatness. But the superior greatness of Melchisedec was not only signified by his receiving tithes of Abraham, but also in the following particulars, viz:

1. His priority. He was king of Salem, and priest of the most high God, when Levi was yet in the loins of his father Abraham.

2. His priesthood was not derived from men, as it was not hereditary, like that of Aaron and his sons; nor was it, like theirs, transferable; for the Son of God did not receive his priesthood from Melchisedec, nor was it of the order, but after the order of Melchisedec. Melchisedec was the type, and Christ the antitype. Melchisedec, as priest and king, was without father or mother, as predecessors in the priesthood, and without issue, as successors in the offices which he held; and in these particulars he was made like the Son of God; for Christ "is made an High Priest forever, after the order of Melchisedec."

3. His priesthood was superior to that of the Levites, because it united with the ephod the crown, and thus prefigured the Royal Priesthood of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom Zechariah prophesied. "He shall build the temple of the Lord, and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne; and the counsel of peace shall be between them both."—Zech. vi. 13. In this prediction there is a very manifest allusion made to the priesthood of Christ, in building up his spiritual temple, or rearing up his church, as being after the order of Melchisedec: between the two offices, priest and king, the whole counsel of peace, embracing the priestly atonement, and the kingly government, should be conspicuously demonstrated in the man whose name is "The Branch."

4. The order of the blessing of Melchisedec on Abraham implied the superiority of the former, as the less do not confer blessings on their superiors; and in this case, the apostle says, "Without contradiction, the less is blessed of the better." And Abraham acknowledged the superiority of Melchisedec in giving him the tenth of all his spoils.

The superiority of the priesthood of Melchisedec over that of Levi is expressive of the superiority of the new covenant over the old; for under the priesthood of the sons of Levi, the Sinai law was given; but under the priesthood of Christ, which is after the order of Melchisedec, the law is changed; "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." "For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God."

We might greatly extend our remarks on this very important and highly interesting subject; and, perhaps, at some future day we may resume the subject; but for the present we will conclude with a few additional reasons for believing that Melchisedec was a man, and, as a man, a descendent from Adam. We have already noticed that he is expressly called a man, and the sense in which he is spoken of as without father and without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God, &c. If he were himself the identical Son of God, we cannot conceive how he could be made like unto himself. Viewing him as the figure of him that was to come, we see a propriety in his being made to resemble the character of whom he was the peculiar type. Without father or mother preceding him in the offices of priest and king. Without descent, officially, as all the sons of Aaron were who officiated at the altar. Having neither beginning of days nor end of life, in the scriptural account given of him. All that we have to do with him, as a type, is just so far (and no farther) as his history is given in the Scriptures, and his person and character and offices are used in their figurative application to Christ, whose type he was. There is no account of his origin or death, in the use made of him as a type; but his identity, his offices, his blessings on Abraham, his location, and his superior greatness, are given in the divine record. In establishing the identity of Melchisedec, in distinction from Christ, it will be seen that the apostle not only speaks of Christ being made a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, but he speaks of his rising up after the existence of the Levitical priesthood, which was not commenced when Melchisedec met and blessed Abraham. Hear him in the 11th verse, "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood (for under it the people received the law), what farther need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?" Allowing that the Melchisedec that met Abraham was Christ, in the interminable order of his everlasting priesthood, how could it be said that he arose from necessity, subsequently to the event of the people receiving the law under the Levitical priesthood? And if Christ actually officiated as priest on the earth when Levi was in the loins of Abraham, was there not as imperious a demand for a change of the law connected with his priesthood, in order to establish the priesthood of the Levites, as there was in the abolition of the Levitical priesthood, and re-establishment of the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec? We use the word re-establishment; for if Christ did officiate on earth in his priestly office, in that order, and his priesthood was suspended, to give place to the priesthood of the sons of Levi, and the Levitical priesthood was abolished for the purpose of again setting up Christ's, then the abrogation of Judaism and the old covenant, with all the rituals of the Levitical priesthood, and the bringing in of a better hope, and the setting up of the spiritual government of Christ, was after all but the re-establishment of that priesthood, that law, and that order and state of things which existed and was in full force before the establishment of the Levitical priesthood and law.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 15, 1847.

ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS

RECEIVED from now until the end of this year will be entered on our subscription list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1895. The remainder of this year we will send them free.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express, at expense of party receiving book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of books we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

BY a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

(Continued from page 379.)

simulating. The light that shines in the Lord's people leads, in the end, in faith to God, through the Lord Jesus Christ. They have light to see they are quickened by the Holy Spirit, and brought forth from the insensible sleep of death. Life is the entrance of light. They have light to see that they are pardoned; that justification unto life has passed upon them; that, through the mercy of God in Christ Jesus, all condemnation is removed. We read in the text that "the eyes of the blind shall be opened." The eyes of our understanding being opened, we find it as it is written, "The path of the just is as the shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

"The ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." It is written in the Scriptures that man, in a state of nature, is like the deaf adder, which listens not to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely. Now this charmer is a preacher of the everlasting gospel, who charms wisely when the word is faithfully preached, without any mixture of error, and a certain sound is given. Man is like the deaf adder.

We read, "The seeing eye, and the hearing ear, the Lord hath made even both of them." In the New Testament a man was brought to the Lord Jesus who was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech. The Lord led him aside, then opened his ears, and the string of his tongue was loosed. The deaf heard and the dumb spake; and as the deaf heard, and the dumb spake, so it is with the Lord's people; they speak their gracious experience to others, inform them how life and light entered into them, the effects of it, and what was wrought in them. They tell to others what the Lord God Almighty has in mercy done for their souls.

"The ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." When this is the case, what do they hear? Said Christ, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." That is, they hear the Lord's voice of love, mercy and grace in the gospel. They hear him in the word proclaiming liberty, righteousness, pardon, salvation and life. "And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness." "The deaf shall hear the words of the book," the truth of the everlasting gospel; and not only hear, but know so as to understand them. No people can read the Scriptures so as to understand their spiritual meaning unless enlightened and quickened by the Holy Ghost. "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear." Christ Jesus by his word and Spirit speaks to the soul; and where the word of God is thus spoken there is power.

"Then shall the lame man leap as a hart." Lame sometimes signifies those who halt between two opinions, which some do a long time, not knowing what to do. What does the Savior say? "When thou makest a feast, bring in hither the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind." "The halt." Well, pray, who are they? Those who feel in themselves that they have no power to come to the Lord Jesus Christ. Though there are many sweet promises in the word, they feel, unless the Father puts forth the drawings of his loving-kindness, they cannot come. "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." Therefore we feel in ourselves no power to come to the Lord Jesus Christ; we are halt ones, whom the Savior has commanded to be brought in. He has said, "I will save her that halteth." A person that is halt is one that is lame. We read, "the lame take the prey." Filled with unbelief, they pass from one thing to another; they cannot rest. They seek to God by prayer; they cannot give up. What they want is to know and feel that the kingdom of God, which stands in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, is set up in their heart. This was the case with Jacob. The angel said, "Let me go, for the day breaketh; and he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me;" and he touched him, and Jacob became lame. If you consider these things, and attend to their spiritual meaning, how beautiful it is. "The lame take the prey."

The bread we feed upon by faith is the Bread of God that came down from heaven. "He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him." Eating his flesh and drinking his blood, we know what a blessed thing it is to believe that Christ Jesus offered himself a sacrifice for our sins. Our hearts being broken, and by faith having our conscience purged, we know his blood is drink indeed. What a prospect lies before us; every day that passes over our heads diminishes the number; every trial we have gone through, that part of the battle is fought. Then that which lies before the soul is immortal, eternal glory. Blessed be God, "then shall the lame man leap as a hart," being filled with joy and rejoicing on account of what he has seen. Our eyes see him. We hear his voice, and our hearts leap for joy, because we are saved in him with an everlasting salvation. We leap for joy on account of what we have received from him. We have received pardon, peace, righteousness, sanctification and salvation. He is made of God unto us wisdom, &c. Christ is in our hearts the hope of glory. So in us the blessed Spirit reveals Christ, and is pleased to grant us more of that grace which is of the operation of the Holy Spirit; and he brings us to live, as Paul writes, "I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Faith, we see, deals not in general terms, but has a special regard to man's salvation. You and I well know how very little these things are thought of in this day. There is a very great difference in the effect on the mind upon hearing the Word preached. Some seem to be all life. I have seen some persons so lifted up that I have been cast down, and though I knew nothing of the matter. I remember once hearing one of these preachers, and this was the effect. I was filled with joy and light, which left me in a little time where I was before, dry, barren and unfruitful. After a time I heard the Word from another, and the effect it had upon me I shall never, I trust, forget. It communicated meekness, a softening influence, which made me still, quiet, and of a lowly mind. It gave me a meek and quiet spirit, so that I often thought I entered into what Jesus said in the parable, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field," which field a man goes and sells all that he hath to purchase. Sometimes I understood by that word purchased, that he would give all he possessed to come fully into the enjoyment of the Lord Jesus Christ, to know him for himself, to have that knowledge and experience of him which is eternal life.

"Then shall the lame man leap as a hart." Such are persons who have seen Christ as God over all, blessed forever, and believed in him as the Lord their righteousness. They have received him in all his offices, characters and covenant relationship; they have realized the pardon of their sins, and his justifying righteousness; therefore they are said to walk in him. They walk after the Spirit of Christ, according to the rule laid down in the word by the Spirit, which is, "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." These are the people who run in the ways of the Lord, and do not grow weary; walk, and do not faint. The longer we live the more beauty we see in such as these, though we frequently turn aside and draw back; so it would be if God did not mercifully preserve us and fulfill his word. Well, blessed be God, though in one sense we faint, he keeps us pursuing, following the things that make for peace.

"The tongue of the dumb shall sing." I was once so discouraged about my eternal state, I was dumb with silence indeed. So it is with others; the reigning desire in their heart is that of David's, "Deliver me from all my transgressions." This is what we want, to be delivered from all our transgressions. How frequently it is the case, when under afflicting dispensations, we do not know how the matter will end; we cannot tell what the Lord is about to do. We are frequently exercised with fears that it will end in trouble of the world; that in temporal matters we shall be brought to nothing. These are the trials and exercises which we go through. Here it is said, "The tongue of the dumb shall sing." We begin to sing when we are brought up, as David says, out of the horrible pit and the miry clay, and our feet set upon a rock. Then a new song is put into our mouths, even praise to God. It is by the blood of the covenant we come forth out of the pit. No person will ever get out of this pit but by an application of the blood of sprinkling.

"He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay." I was here a great length of time before I understood what this meant. I was brought to understand it by seeing that my sin was laid on Christ; in his flesh it was condemned. Many things every day we feel and greatly lament, yet through the sovereign mercy of God they will never be imputed to us. "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." If we feel the plague of our heart, the infirmity of our nature, troubled on account of the vanity of our mind, the evil imaginations of the heart, and how to get rid of them, when we feel condemned and much cast down, so that we do not know what is the matter with us, as soon as ever we are brought again to look at the things in a Scripture light, the Lord fulfills his word, confirming the truth in us, then we see all is right. Therefore, "the tongue of the dumb shall sing," being led to Christ Jesus, the Rock that is higher than they.

"The tongue of the dumb shall sing." Of what shall they sing? They shall sing, it is written, in the heights of Zion. The Lord enabling us to see our calling and election sure, we sing the song of electing grace. The blessings of redemption being applied to us, we sing the song of redeeming grace and dying love; which song none can learn but those who are with the Lord on Mount Zion. The Lord favoring us with the remission of our sins, we sing the song of pardoning grace. Being enabled by faith to realize the righteousness of Christ, we sing the song of justifying grace; having obtained help of God, we continue to this day, and sing the song of preserving grace; and having been blessed with the comforting power of the Holy Spirit, we sing the song of sanctifying grace. "They shall come and sing in the heights of Zion."

"The tongue of the dumb shall sing." I will sing of thy power, yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning. We sing of the power of God in creation; we sing of the power of God in upholding all things; we sing of the power of God in providence. "Yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning." "Thy mercies are new every morning." I dare say we all know something of this, and feel a grateful heart to God for that which his providence has furnished us with in the morning, whether it be little or much. We sing aloud of mercy in a land of special mercies. We sing of the power of God in the covenant of grace, in the pardon of sin, in regeneration, in salvation and eternal election.

We know what it is to sing of mercy and of judgment. "I will sing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O Lord, will I sing." We sing not only of mercies we have seen, but we sing of judgment also; because it is with us, according to the word of truth, a day of prosperity, and then a day of adversity. There is a mixture of merciful and afflicting dispensations throughout; therefore we have continually to sing of mercy and judgment; for these things will alternately take place as long as we continue in this life. So the tongue of the dumb is to sing. It is with us as it was with the psalmist, who said, "Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage." We are only strangers and pilgrims on the earth. This world is not our rest; every day proves it. "Here [as Paul writes] we have no continuing city; but seek one to come." His statutes are our songs in the house of our pilgrimage. Just as a traveler going on his journey sings a hymn, or goes humming a tune, which makes the journey more pleasant and more delightful. Just so it is with us, bless the Lord. In the morning frequently a portion of his word dwells on the mind; and all the day, let our hands be employed in what they may, the word is passing through the mind, very sweet, comforting and refreshing to the soul. Thus his statutes in the house of our pilgrimage are our songs. First one promise, and then another, is brought to the mind, and under divine power it sometimes distills its refreshing comforts into the soul all the day long.

"Waters break out in the wilderness." They do so in the preaching of the everlasting gospel in faithfulness and truth, in those places which before that time had been as a wilderness; the Lord God Almighty fulfilling his word, that it should not return unto him void. Bless God forever, we know something of this. Christ says, "Whosoever shall drink of the water that I shall give him, it shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Living waters shall flow out of him, and we are enabled to praise his blessed name. These waters of life flow out, and we are enabled to speak of our gracious experience to others, which is not only refreshing to our souls, but to all who are partakers of his grace. No doubt you know very well what it is to converse one with another; very refreshing, strengthening and comforting. I am sure I know what it is.

These things teach us to deny all ungodliness, all worldly lusts, to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil world. As these things are lasting, they abide with us. "Shall be in you," says Christ, "springing up into everlasting life;" continually flowing, according to the words of Jesus, from the heart. This is the view I take of it.

"And streams in the desert." One stream in the desert is pardon. "I will pardon them whom I reserve." This stream is felt and experienced in a soul being pardoned. Sin shall never be imputed to us. What is once done is done forever. Another stream is peace. Internal peace felt and enjoyed in the soul is the fruit and effect of pardon, because in the conscience it takes the lead. "Follow after peace." Another stream is righteousness, the work of which is peace, and the effect of it quietness. We enjoy this stream when he gives quietness. "When he gives quietness, who then can make trouble?" The mind is stayed on God; the soul is in perfect peace. The gentleness of the Lord makes us great. A few of us at times have been so tried that nothing was looked for or expected but destruction; however, it has been so with me. The Lord's gentleness has brought me through all. Thus spiritual gentleness makes us great. He sets us among the princes of his people. Those people who have passed through this life, and so ever wish him to inherit the throne of his glory.

Another stream is comfort. "Comfort ye my people." That which comforts us is, Christ has overcome every enemy, and makes us the happy sharers of the fruits of his victory. He hath obtained comfort for us! "Comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." Her iniquities have been pardoned by Jesus Christ. Another stream is joy, which is a fruit of the Holy and ever blessed Spirit. The Lord Jesus Christ is "God over all, blessed forever." That being the case, all that he did answers the end for which it was done. One thing in which we rejoice is the righteousness of Christ. "We joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." The atonement Christ made; and our faith receives such atonement; a foundation that never will give way. This joy of ours is frequently interrupted, and with Paul we cry, "O wretched man that I am!" But it will return again, and then shall our comfort be increased. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." David, said, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation."

Another stream that breaks out of our heart is praise. It is comely to bless and praise God: "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men." If we are in trouble, we are told to call on him, and he has promised to deliver us; and then adds, we shall glorify him. "Whoso offereth praise, glorifieth me."

MARRIAGES.

In River View, Ala., Nov. 18th, 1894, by Elder H. J. Redd, Mr. A. J. Williams and Miss Addie Hudgins, both of River View, Chambers Co., Ala.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE

TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c.

The above described book of 719 pages, 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

BUNYAN'S
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,

And a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY
OF THE
UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, N. Y.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK,

To whom all letters should be addressed, and money orders made payable.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, Middletown, N. Y. F. A. CHICK, Reisterstown, Md.

B. L. BEEBE, Middletown, N. Y.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

For the convenience of our brethren and friends we have made arrangements by which we can send them Bibles at as reasonable rates as they can be purchased at the book store throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore " because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
1st Is. 53. 9.		17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'	2nd Pa. 22. 29.
m ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	18 " Mary Magdalene came and told	Matth. 28. 10.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.		Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

These large Bibles are too heavy to go safely by mail, and therefore will be sent by express at expense of party receiving the book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of book we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

(BEEBE'S COLLECTION.)

These books contain 800 pages and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth Binding, single copy, 75c; half dozen, $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, Full Gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth Binding.....$1 00

Cloth Binding, half-dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books, postage paid, to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No. 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05

Twelve copies..... 50

Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"
FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES,

Contain all the Editorial articles written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume, $2.00, or both first and second volumes ordered at the same time and to the same address, $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3.00, formerly $4.50. Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged), $3.50, formerly $5.00.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand.

400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00 Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1894.

NO. 49.

POETRY.

CONFESSION.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John i. 9.

Son of God, I bow before thee,
Fountain of eternal love!
While the hosts of heaven adore thee,
Draw my wandering thoughts above.

All my sins to thee confessing,
Pope and priest I here disown;
Every mercy, every blessing,
Flows through thy dear wounds alone.

Not by penance, not by fasting,
Can I claim one smile from thee;
All thy gifts are everlasting,
Sovereign, undeserved and free.

On thy faithful love reposing,
Lo, I come with guilt oppress'd;
Ere the evening shades are closing
Give sweet pardon, peace and rest.

Lord, to thee my soul is clinging;
Every faithless hope is gone.
No good works to thee I'm bringing;
Grace must save, and grace alone.

On thy word of truth relying,
On thyself, the Rock, I stand;
Trusting in thy doing, dying,
Who shall pluck me from thy hand?

Death and hell can harm me never;
All my sins were laid on thee,
Cast behind thy back forever,
Lost in mercy's boundless sea.

W. S. ROBINSON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BLAIR, Neb., March, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—As the inclosed letters of sister Coddington have done me so much good, I would like to have them published in the SIGNS for the benefit of others. She has told my feelings better than I could, an unworthy worm of the dust.

H. E. PARKER.

FREMONT, Neb., Feb. 5, 1894.

DEAR SISTER PARKER:—I received your very welcome letter in due time, and am really ashamed of myself that I have allowed so long a time to pass without answering it. I had really begun to think you had cast me aside as one not worthy of your christian fellowship; yet I could not murmur or complain at your wise and prudent counsel. You know the wise man says "Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out."—Prov. xx. 5. O! my sister, why do any of God's beloved condescend to bear me in remembrance at all? In your writings you told me of your rejoicings, and of your sweet fellowship in the congregation of the saints, the living children of the heavenly Father; but, poor me, I am not worthy to come into their assembly, neither do I feel that I am worthy that one of them should ever come under my roof; yet for some reason they continue to come and see me. Last Sunday night Elder McFarland staid with us, and about a month ago Elders Wagner and Bronson were here at different times. They had been at Stanton to preach. Why do I continue to murmur and repine at my lot while it is so much better than I am worthy of? My sister, I do not say this merely for the sake of something to write you, for I truly feel to be one of the most unworthy of all who have ever named the name of Jesus. But can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? No. Except God gives us wisdom and understanding we shall ever remain among the tombs and in the congregation of the dead. God, be merciful to us. I do feel that I am different from everyone else, and with the poet say,

"Like one alone I seem to be;
O! is there anyone like me?"

Now I have given some expression to my mind; I have told some of the sadness of my heart, and have caused you to think that I abhor sin, and that my greatest desire is to walk softly before the Lord; but listen, sister. Let me go out into the world, and there I meet those who are of the world, who are inclined to jesting, and vain, foolish talking. Where now is that visage that was so lately marred by contrition in the secret tabernacle of my God? O! my sister, is this confessing my Savior before the world? Is it any wonder that one so unworthy the Savior should be cast out where is weeping and wailing. But hope, faint heart: is not the secret of the Lord with them that fear him? What matter is it if the world knows nothing of this secret? It is enough for one poor sinner to know this, and to feel its dreadful weight. Let the world go free. In the secret of my heart I do not envy them. You spoke of sister Mary Parker: I do sometimes feel that it is she I do envy. But that is not right. Let the dear patient one rest in that peace which passeth understanding; while of myself I must say, I will bear the indignation of the Lord, for I have sinned against him. I sometimes feel that you will never again ask me to write you; for I allow my pen to go on in such a woe begone strain that surely there can be but little if any comfort gathered from the gourd of my own planting, which withers and dies in a night. But I do hope you will consider me and my imperfections and cast over all enough of christian charity to cover my multitude of faults. I think you will find it a hard matter to follow me in my ramblings through the contents of this letter. It seems like a strange way. Hoping to see you soon, I will close with love.

ABBIE CODDINGTON.

FREMONT, Neb., March, 1894.

DEAR SISTER PARKER:—Your precious letter was most welcome to me. I was not expecting one from you so soon. When I had finished reading it, which I could hardly do through blinding tears, of course I was disappointed, yet I could not complain. I was expecting you would fulfill your promise to visit us this month. This earth, which had so long been void and without form, with nothing but darkness upon its face, could not, of course, bring forth fruit. But when the Spirit of God, as we trust, had moved upon the face of the waters, through the medium of your pen, and when one ray of light from the Sun of righteousness had penetrated the gloom, and the light was separated from the darkness, then the fountain of the great deep was broken up. And when I realized that your good letter in which you seemed so hopeful, so trusting, was an answer to my miserable scribble, I could but exclaim, "Beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." My dear sister, could I then have been permitted to sit down, while this hard heart of mine was touched, as it would seem, with fire from off the altar of God's goodness and mercy, then would I have been found declaring his works with gladness. I would make mention of his loving-kindness, his power and mercy to poor, fallen, depraved creatures. He is the embodiment of all truth, and of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace. He is the way, the truth and the life. But why is it that we do not at all times realize this? We know we do not. It is our own iniquities that separate us from our God. While he is the same unchangeable God, the same yesterday, to-day and forever, ought not Israel to be glad that it is because of his unchangeable perfections they are not consumed? Ought not poor sinner to rejoice that our God is in the heavens, and knows not the shadow of a turn? The Lord's people have often to mourn their own unstable hearts, being likened unto the stormy deep, which casteth up mire and dirt. Tossed upon the billows of the great deep, like David we cry, "Deep calleth unto deep at the voice of thy waterspouts: all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me." It seems, dear sister, that this is but a transcript of my own life. The world has its times of prosperity and adversity; and are not God's people, in this respect, like other men? They have their ups and downs. If this be not so then I am not one of them.

In your letter you spoke of a passage of Scripture, but did not quote it in full, and remarked that I would know what you referred to. Yes, I am quite familiar with it. It reads, "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness and hath no light? Let him trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God." Yes, let him trust. It is written, "Let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." But the Savior said to some, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." The Lord says, by the prophet Isaiah, "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." But it seems that I am as one who will not, even because I cannot. "The spirit is indeed willing, but the flesh is weak." Remember the healing of the impotent man. He said, "Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool." O that the windows of heaven might be opened, and that God would pour out such a blessing upon me, that I might not have almost continually to say to myself, O thou of little faith! I ask, What knows the world of this conflict within? It has rightly been said, "He that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption;" and mine is a bountiful harvest. When I would do good, evil is present with me. How often do I think that the gracious God has wisely prepared the place of my abode remote from his pleasant vineyard, the garden of his graces, where it is his delight to dwell. He says, "Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us see if the vine flourish." He delights in the fruit of the vine, and that the tender grapes do flourish.

There is this one thing I am sure of, my sister, that if it were made known to me that this is my last day upon earth, and that at its close, with the setting of the natural sun, my own life would close, and I would be ushered into the immediate presence of my Maker, if my acceptance with him depended upon one good deed performed by me, independent of my God, it would be better for me that I were never born. All our springs are in him. I cannot but hope at times that when I have been tried I shall be brought forth as gold, and that the day of my death will be better than the day of my birth, all through the abounding goodness and mercy of God to the chief of sinners. My health has not been good this winter; my heart has troubled me considerably. Often have I had cause to feel that my weary feet stand almost upon the shore of the eternal river; and O! I am so fearful that an abundant entrance will not be given me into that blessed abode of the just, where nothing can enter that defiles, where sin and Satan can have no dominion over the inhabitants of the eternal city. While here I am annoyed day by day by the cunning and artful devices of the adversary. O! who would live alway? Life is certainly long enough for all the joys this world contains.

You really did surprise me when you asked my consent to send my last letter to brethren Beebe to be published. I cannot recall the contents of that letter; but if it was like my other scribbling, and no doubt it was, I think you must have been in an almost starving condition, to so eagerly devour its contents. If you still think it fit for the King's table, withhold it not.

With abundant love to you and all the household of faith, your sister in hope of eternal life,

ABBIE CODDINGTON.

BRUNSWICK, Maine, Nov. 23, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER:—I send the inclosed letter from Elder Keene, which I have read with pleasure and comfort, and I feel that the brethren would enjoy it with me, if you think best to publish it. It contains the same precious truth the SIGNS OF THE TIMES has clearly set forth all these many years.

May the Lord bless your labors, and make us realize that the will of God is done in heaven and earth.

Your sister in hope,

ATTIE A. CURTIS.

NORTH BERWICK, Maine, Nov. 10, 1894.

TO ATTIE A. CURTIS—DEAR SISTER IN THE SAVIOR OF SINNERS:—May the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, continue to take of the things of Christ and shew them unto you. I know from my own personal experience that this is needful, that we may thus be nourished and thrive in the kingdom of God. The apostle

Peter assures us that Jehovah's "divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue;" and thus I am sure no other power can minister the things that pertain to life and godliness. Every soul therefore that knows in any measure the things of Christ, is manifestly one beloved of God, with whom in our Beloved Emmanuel, who is the Head of the body, the church, God hath made an everlasting covenant, even the sure mercies of David.—Isaiah. v. 3. Transcendently glorious is the hope of the believer in Jesus, the Son of God! Earthly, temporal things, much as many of them are prized as needful for our natural comfort while we are in the world, yet are they infinitely beneath the unseen, eternal things which are the heritage of all the household of faith. Now, while eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for those that love him, yet it hath pleased the Lord of hosts to reveal them by his Spirit unto us; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. As of old the holy prophets were found "searching what, or what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow," so the saints to-day have an earnest in their hearts of the inheritance and blessedness that is stored up for all the ransomed church of God.—Eph. i. 14; 2 Cor. v. 5.

"And am I blest with Jesus' love?
And shall I dwell with him above?
And will the joyful period come
When I shall call the heavens my home?"

Think, O my soul, what must it be,
A world of glorious minds to see,
Drink at the fountainhead of peace,
And bathe in everlasting bliss.

To hear them all at once proclaim
Eternal glories to the Lamb,
And join, with joyful heart and tongue,
That new and never ending song."

The more I ponder over the grace that has been shewed to me, a poor sinner, in giving me a good hope in Christ Jesus, the more I see and gladly acknowledge that all is of the sovereign favor of Jehovah, the Father, the Word and the Holy Ghost. O! I know it has not been the fruits of my works, nothing that I ever thought or wrought, merited such favors divine. But I have hope that the Lord hath loved and hath saved me, that he hath sought me, and brought me to love him, and to trust him, and to know him as my hope, my salvation and my everlasting all. You, dear sister, I know, can say with me, and we together with the psalmist, "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." But, my sister, I am often brought low. Vanity, carnality and various cares oppress my life, and I am called to mourn and sigh before my God over the vexations and vileness of my life. Ah, Lord, I am a wretch undone without thy sovereign, matchless grace. My hope is in the blood and merits of the Lamb of God, who all our sorrows bore. O! when the Holy Spirit takes of the things of Jesus and shews them to a poor, wayworn, sin-plagued sinner like me, then I lift up my head again, and "To Jesus, the crown of my hope,

My soul is in haste to begone."

Earthly vanities become trifles indeed when our precious Christ is revealed in his beauty to our souls. "Thine eye shall see the King in his beauty, and behold the land that is very far off." Everything earthly is fleeting, fading, unsatisfying. Earth's choicest mercies in time become marred, they slip from our grasp, and perish with the using. But the Holy Ghost by faith shews to us the unperishable things of that kingdom which cannot be moved. Here we have righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Here our Redeemer reigns, and all our foes, sin, death and hell, are discomfited, and in the name and merits of our dear Savior we trample them under our feet.

In the kingdom of Christ everything bespeaks the glory of the everlasting God. All the attributes of Jehovah are magnified by the life, the sufferings, death and resurrection of our beloved Mediator, Jesus Christ. "Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him, that glory may dwell in our land. Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from heaven. Yes, the Lord shall give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase. Righteousness shall go before him, and shall set us in the way of his steps." What an unspeakable mercy it is that we are the subjects of Christ's kingdom. That 72nd Psalm describes the reign of our lovely, glorious and gracious King, and I am sure that you, as well as I, can testify to the truth of this Psalm, that Jesus and his people are the substance thereof. "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations."—Psalm cxlv. 10-13. Am I a subject of this kingdom? Has the great and glorious God delivered me from the power of darkness, and translated me into the kingdom of his dear Son? Then how unspeakably favored am I! Will our blessed and glorious King suffer any power or thing to harm or to destroy even one of the least or most insignificant of his subjects? Ah, never, O no!

"He shall break in pieces the oppressor." "He shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy. He shall redeem their souls from deceit and violence; and precious shall their blood be in his sight." Having such a gracious King, let us not fear. He reigns on high our Savior God. And he must reign till all enemies be put under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Then we shall triumph, and shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. It is true that sin hath reigned unto death—this is the consummation of sin; but how comforting is the doctrine that grace reigns, even the abounding grace of the almighty, eternal God. Grace shall reign through righteousness unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Romans v. 17-21. This hope of eternal life, how consoling it is to us, poor, needy sinners. It buoys us up amidst the tumultuous waves of the ocean of our mortal life. We taste even now the earnest of the heavenly and eternal things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But there is a looking beyond these scenes of our earthly sojourn; for we long to arrive at the fullness of conformity to our glorious Head, our Lord Jesus Christ. O how blessed the hope of eternal purity and happiness at the right hand of God!

"No more shall we mourn that thy face thou'rt concealing,

No Satan, no sin, base intruders below;
But ever behold thee, fresh glories revealing:

Amen! hallelujah! Come, Lord, even so."

We know, dear sister, that in a little while at the most our frail life in this world will be done, and I feel in my heart to say,

"Now my remnant of days

Would I spend to his praise,

Who hath died my poor soul to redeem;

Whether many or few,

All my years are his due:

May they all be devoted to him."

Many are the things I encounter that would interfere with my devotion to our precious Lord and Savior. To my soul's grief I often find that I cannot do the things I would. Conflicts within, and vexations and temptations from without, are constantly humbling me, that I see I come short of glorifying my God in my body and spirit, which are his. I am straitened in myself, and I only find enlargement when Jehovah in his love and pity administers to me abundance of grace. "My grace is sufficient for thee." We have proved this many times, and it will be true to the end. We are assured of the abiding love of our God, which many waters cannot quench, neither can the floods drown it. "He will rest in his love."—Zeph. iii. 17. Then we may take comfort, and have no fear that the Lord will cast us away and cease to love us.

"No dart, though Satanic, no strong accusation,

No watery deep through which burdened I go,

No sin, no uncleanness, no hellish temptation,
Can change his affection, ah, never, O no!"

"We have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John iv. 16. "Father, we'll rest in thy love." O may the Holy Spirit enable us by precious faith to do so.

With love and fellowship for you in the kingdom of God, I am, I hope, your brother,

FRED. W. KEENE.

RIVER VIEW, Ala., Nov. 16, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—As I have not written anything for the SIGNS in a long while I feel like writing a few lines (if for no other purpose) to express my continued love for and appreciation of the paper, and the doctrine still being set forth in its columns. The last number of the SIGNS, November 14th, 1894, has seemed more than usually interesting to me, as it seems to contain some things that I have long been wishing to hear, and some of which I wish to speak in this letter.

First in this number is a letter from brother H. Cox, of Ghent, Ky., on the text, "All things are yours." Brother Cox's articles have long graced the columns of the SIGNS, and his name is familiar to all its readers. He has written well on this portion of the inspired word. O what a comfort to the saints in their pilgrimage upon earth to be assured that all things are theirs, "whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." Do not these grand and glorious words embrace everything, either in time or eternity? Do not the expressions, "Ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's," embrace the eternal vital unity of Christ and all his members? Glorious thought, that "neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

The next is a note from sister Susie E. Terry, of Philadelphia, indorsing a good letter from one who has passed away; and in it is fulfilled the Scripture which saith, "He being dead, yet speaketh." It seems that this dear sister was granted a feast of good things among the saints just before she was called hence. I am also reminded by this letter that we never know how to appreciate the glorious blessings of the gospel and its privileges until they are taken away from us.

Brother J. E. Moore, of Catskill, N. Y., comes next, with a good letter expressing his love and fellowship for the saints, and for the doctrine of God's sovereignty and predestina-tion, and an expressed desire for the peace and prosperity of Zion. Is not a heartfelt desire for the peace and prosperity of Zion a good evidence of being born again? I think it is.

The next on the list in this paper is from an old battle-scarred soldier of the cross whom I know personally, Elder P. J. Powell, of Sandusky, Ala. I always enjoy anything from his pen, whether private or public, because I know him to be sound in the faith, and not carried about with every wind of doctrine. I can certainly join him in saying, "Your father's editorials do have what I understand to be the old-time gospel ring or sound."

Elder Lively, of Opelika, Ala., I am also personally acquainted with. He has always since our first acquaintance, some thirteen years ago, been one of my best friends, and has continuously preached the same old-fashioned doctrine, turning neither to the right nor to the left. He also, like those brethren in Texas he speaks of, has had many hard things said of him because of the doctrine he preaches and believes with all his heart.

I want to say that I am wonderfully pleased with Elder Benton Jenkins' article in this number on the "Sin against the Holy Ghost." This to my mind is the most satisfactory explanation of this subject that I have ever heard or read, although I had held different views before. But I know brethren who hold similar views to those of Elder Jenkins. Elder Lively, I believe, holds substantially the same views as Elder Jenkins.

But now, best of all, comes the editorial of Elder G. Beebe, published November 1st, 1847, one year before I was born, and I am this day forty-six years old. Truly "He being dead, yet speaketh," and that to the comfort and instruction of the saints. What a gracious gift to the church from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. How plainly he shows the difference between a wrought out righteousness and a brought in righteousness, which is an everlasting righteousness. How plain it does seem to me that the obedience, suffering and death of Jesus secured to the saints all the blessings of salvation in this life, embracing their redemption from the law and its penal curse, together with all the blessings and privileges of the church; and all this because they were the children whom the Father had given him before the world began. Therefore their inheritance of the blessings and salvation which are in Christ Jesus in this life is secured to them in what Jesus has done for them, connected with their obedience to his commandments, which is carried out in their walk when God works in them both to will and to do of his own good pleasure. But the title of the saints to heaven and immortal glory beyond this life is based upon what Jesus is to them as their life, for they are one with him. They are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. As Adam's posterity had a natural life standing and existence in him when he sinned, so the saints of God had a spiritual life standing and existence in Christ when he took on him the seed of Abraham; and as the saints, the chosen of God, sinned, fell and died in Adam, they also obeyed the law, were raised from the fall, and restored to life in Christ. Hence, as the poet says,

"And fixed my standing more secure Than 'twas before I fell."

Let me illustrate a little here. My children are entitled to inherit my possessions after my death by virtue of the relationship which they sustain to me, but the amount of that inheritance depends upon what I accumulate while living, and all that they have and enjoy in this life while I am living is hinged upon my provisions as a parent; but after my death they are entitled to my property because of the relationship they sustain to me. Even so all the children of Adam inherit just what Adam obtained for them by transgression, and this because of the relationship they sustain to him as their natural father; and the ultimate result or wages of sin is death. "But the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord;" and this because of the spiritual relationship that we sustain to him as our life, our head and our Redeemer. But Elder G. Beebe has fully explained these things in this editorial, written forty-seven years ago, and why should I continue? Where is the child of God that can consistently and scripturally object to this doctrine, and why object to it? It is true that some may think that even if this doctrine be true it is not worth contending for, or is not essential; but it is, I must say, a great source of comfort to me, and has been for many years. I have been called a "two-seeder" because I hold to this doctrine, but these things do not change my views; "none of these things move me."

I could write more, but will close. I felt that I could not suppress the impression to say something in regard to the things contained in this number of the SIGNS, all of which I submit to you.

Yours in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began,

H. J. REDD.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 15, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I send this letter from brother Chambliss for publication in the SIGNS because the exercises of mind related in it are very interesting to me, witnessing to much that I have felt; and I believe for the same reason the letter will be read with interest and comfort by many others. My family and myself spent a week at his pleasant home last March very pleasantly, were favored with a visit from him and sister Chambliss at our home the last of August, which we and the friends here enjoyed very much. They are of those with whom it is easy and profitable to talk upon spiritual things.

Your brother in christian love,
SILAS H. DURAND.

OCALA, Fla., Oct. 23, 1894.

DEAR ELDER DURAND:—Since I wrote you last I have been in that dreadful condition called "ease in Zion;" and though I would read the words of the Bible, there came no response from my heart. I could not even keep the mind centred on the story being told. With the same mechanical motions I began Sunday to read Elder Oliphant's article in the last Messenger, and to my great surprise there seized upon me a great interest in it; and before I could stop I had read the book of Ephesians, and that with some degree of understanding, such as I once had, but which I felt to be gone from me forever. Though afraid to grasp this as a fresh hope, I was greatly comforted.

Last night, on reading the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis, there ran involuntarily a thought of myself, paralleling the journey of Jacob to Padan-aram. He seemed to have had a fair day for his starting; but night came on, and he took such a hard thing as a stone for his pillow. His sleep was not restful, so he dreamed; and in it he saw God, and his angels ascending and descending. He had in this dream a promise given, that the land he saw should be his, and that God should be with him until he had done what was promised. On awaking he said, "Surely God is in this place, and I knew it not." This dark night and uncomfortable pillow seem so strange as a meeting-ground for Jacob and his Lord; but Jacob blessed the unpleasant stone, and set it up as a landmark—as Bethel, the house of the Lord. A most significant thing is that on account of only a dream he vowed a vow, promising by the help of God that with only the small provisions of food and raiment sufficient to enable him to reach his father's house in peace, "Then shall the Lord be my God."

With much pain and some pleasure I remember beginning a journey to a far country. With a willing mind and a prosperous beginning I made a day's journey; but some four or five months ago night came on me, and many a sorrow have I used as a stone for my pillow. Though I have been spiritually asleep, it has been a tortuous and unpleasant sleep. My experience at the hospital was as the dream where God appeared; and the voices and angels which were so plain, and the sweet foretaste of heaven which I cannot describe, were as the promise that when I am relieved of this poor mortality I should possess an enduring land. On awakening I thought as Jacob, "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew

(Continued on page 390.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 5, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
F. A. CHICK, REISTERSTOWN, MD.
B. L. BEEBE, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.*All letters for this paper should be addressed, and money orders made payable as formerly, to*GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

TITUS I. 15, 16.

I WOULD be much pleased to see a communication from Elder F. A. Chick from Titus i. 15, 16.

J. E. MOORE.

CATSKILL, N. Y.

REPLY.

THE Scripture referred to reads as follows: "Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled. They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate."

We desire, if the Lord will, to call attention briefly to some things in the above text, according to the expressed wish of our correspondent in No. 46, page 363, current volume. A careful reading of this whole epistle of Paul to Titus, who was his own son in the common faith, and also a preacher of the gospel, will show that it is mainly occupied with advice and counsel to Titus as to what the burden of his ministry should be. He instructs him as to how he shall instruct Bishops, the aged men and women, and young men and women, servants and citizens. He exhorts Titus to be very plain and practical in his teaching, and to avoid foolish and unlearned questions. It is well that we have such a pattern left for our guidance; and surely we ought not to hesitate to preach or write the same things at all times when needed. The apostle Paul indeed wrote with all the authority of a judge in Israel, and by an infallible inspiration, which it is not ours to do. But while this is true, we may present the same things upon the authority of this inspired writer; and as he directly warned, reprov'd and rebuked the brethren, so may we also present the same words of exhortation. Indeed, it is the express injunction of the inspired Paul to Timothy and Titus, who were his sons in the gospel, that they should thus exhort.

Thus far we have presented the general drift of this short letter. In addition we would call attention to the fact that the apostle also did not hesitate to point out the darker side. He felt called upon, in very plain terms, to declare that there were many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, especially of the circumcision (or of the Jews); and in close connection with the text he calls them by some very hard names. He says that they subvert whole houses for filthy lucre's sake. He says that one of their own prophets said that they were always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies; and without further comment Paul simply says that this witness is true. He further says that their mouths must be stopped. Therefore he says, "Rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith."

The reason we have called attention to this general drift of this epistle is that it may be seen that the whole letter is in harmony with the special truth presented in the text itself to which our special attention is called. In the verse which immediately precedes the text the apostle exhorts Titus that he should warn against "giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth." In all things the test is to be the truth revealed in the word of God. If any spoke not according to this word it was because there was no light in them.

From this reference to Jewish fables and commandments of men, in the fourteenth verse, it has seemed to us that perhaps the special truth which the apostle meant to set forth in the text was the same as that presented in the following Scriptures: Luke xi. 39-41; Romans xiv. 14-20; 1 Corinthians x. 23-29; 1 Timothy iv. 3, 4; Romans xiv. 23. In those places, as may be seen by reference to them, the apostle speaks about meats and drinks, and the Jewish claim that some were unclean, and to eat them was a defilement of the conscience and a sin against God. Paul found occasion very frequently to warn his brethren against this Judaizing tendency to count some of God's creatures unclean, in the sense of a defilement of the heart and conscience by eating of them; and to Timothy he expressly says that every creature of God is good, and to be received with thanksgiving. This is a very different feeling and a very different thing from the fact that some things which a man may eat or drink are physically unwholesome or injurious. Somehow, those of whom Paul was here speaking had the impression that by the eating of some things the heart and conscience were defiled. They seemed to still think that the old Jewish ceremonial provisions regarding meats and drinks had been brought bodily over into the order of the gospel; and thus their liberty which they had in Christ was subverted.

In the text under consideration, and in the Scriptures to which we have referred, the apostle earnestly combats this notion, and strives to show his brethren that the ceremonial law is no longer of binding force among Jewish believers, and that it never did have any claim upon the Gentiles. It would be a matter of utter astonishment to us that Paul should find such difficulty in weaning the churches away from these multiplied forms and ceremonies, and from their superstitious notions about meats and drinks, after they once had received Christ and believed in him, were it not that even to this day millions of professed christians are following hard after Judaizing teachers, and think and speak more of forms and rituals, and fasts and feasts, and meats and drinks, than they do of Christ. The observance of these things but helps feed the pride of men, and lifts them up with a false notion of their superior sanctity; while a simple, humble belief in Christ must always be found coupled with self-abasement and self-abhorrence.

Now, out of all this Paul says, "Unto the pure all things are pure." It seems evident here that the apostle would include believing as one of the characteristics of the pure, because in the next clause he couples the unbelieving with the defiled or impure. The word "pure" here used embraces also the ideas of innocency, sincerity, unfeignedness, uprightness and virtuousness. The apostle means, it seems to us, to teach that to him who believes in Jesus, and trusts in God, who has been brought out into the pure light of gospel truth, and who sees in every creature the handiwork of God, there is nothing impure. There is nothing by which his heart and conscience can be defiled should he partake of it. "Every creature of God is good," and he receives it with thanksgiving. He who sees clearly the truth that Jesus is all and in all as his salvation, has no longer any trust in either eating or in abstaining from eating, in days or times, in fasts or feasts. Nothing in that sense is unclean. To such a man the only unclean thing is sin. This defiles him indeed; but what enters into his mouth does not defile him. What comes out, rather than what enters into his mouth, is impure. Not his food nor his drink is impure, but his words. It seems to us that this is the first and most direct meaning of the apostle in this language.

But it is one of the peculiarities of this great apostle that he very frequently connects in his argument particular, and what might seem to be small things, with broad and everlasting principles of truth; and this it seems to us he has done here. It is a truth as wide as the universe which God has made, that all things seem to us and are to us as we ourselves are. "We see all things through our own glasses." To the selfish man all others are selfish. The man who himself imagines evil devices, always suspects others of doing the same; while the unselfish, the generous, the kindly, the honest man, does not think evil of others. "To the pure all things are pure." This does not mean that any man is in and of himself free from sin, or from fault, or from the impurities that belong to flesh or to the fleshly mind, but that the motive which actuates the believer is the glory of God and the good of others. The pure in this text are the same characters as Jesus meant when he said, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." We understand that the meaning of the apostle here is not actual freedom from indwelling sin, but that pure and holy principle which God has implanted in the hearts of his people, which gives rise to pure motives, desires, thoughts and feelings in their minds, and to obedience to God's word in their lives. To such all things are pure that God has said or required, or that God has made. But still the special object of Paul in the text, we understand, is to show that meats, drinks and days are all alike holy before God, and therefore pure to all whose hearts God has cleansed.

"But unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled." The truth presented here is precisely opposite to that contained in the former clause. However good and pure anything in and of itself may be, to the defiled and unbelieving it is not pure; it can minister no grace nor benefit to them. No ordinance of divine worship, though it may be appointed of God, is pure to the impure. Baptism and the supper, which are sacred ordinances of the Lord's house, when engaged in by the unbelieving are to them no better than unclean things. Religious service of any kind does not sanctify or make an impure man holy. The man must be a believer, a holy man, and then to that man is the ordinance holy. Where the mind and conscience is defiled, all that it has to do with is also defiled. If there be no faith in the heart, all the outward religious service becomes a mockery.

To our mind the next verse, the sixteenth, but sets forth and enforces the same truth in more definite terms, and in a more particular reference to those who seem to be religious, while their conduct shows that they are reprobate. There is a profession of faith in Christ, who saves from sin and from legal forms; but their adherence to an evil life, and to a set of religious forms, shows that they do not believe in him either to save from sin or from their legality. A dependence upon religious forms is perfectly consistent with the most outrageous immoralities in practice; but a humble belief in Jesus, and a steadfast reliance upon him, always leads to careful living and self-denial. Those who trust most in themselves are found living the worst; while those who trust not at all in themselves live the most carefully. It is the grace of Jesus that makes all the difference.

C.

RIGHTEOUSNESS WROUGHT OUT.

"To be more plain, we will now say that the expiation of our sins, by the sufferings of Christ, or the putting away of our sins by the sacrifice of himself, restored us to the state of perfect innocence from which we had, by transgression of the law of God, fallen, and placed those for whom this redemption was effected back upon the ground occupied by Adam before sin entered into the world."

Our grateful acknowledgements are due to kind brethren who have called our attention to the above sentence, which occurred in our reply to a brother in Madison County, Ky., on the 166th page of the last volume. We assure our readers that it was not our intention to express the idea that the obedience and death of Christ had only redeemed his people back to their Adamic state; for such a redemption would not have secured them from falling again under the condemnation and wrath of the law of God under which Adam, and in him all his posterity, fell before. This sentiment has been fully expressed in almost every article we have ever written on the subject of redemption. But in giving our views in regard to the difference between the essential, inherent, eternal righteousness of Christ, as that which he brought in, and that which consisted in his righteous obedience to the law and suffering of its penalty in behalf of his people, we designed to represent that while the obedience and sufferings of Christ so effectually put away the sins of all his people as to make them as innocent as they were in Adam before he sinned, or as perfectly free from the contamination and defilement of sin as though they had never transgressed the law of God, yet that redemption, or deliverance from sin, simply, while it would deliver from wrath, would not prepare the redeemed for the enjoyment of spiritual things; and hence the necessity of regeneration, and an implantation of that spiritual life which was given them in Christ before the world began. That Christ wrought a righteousness by his obedience to the law, and suffering the just for the unjust, we presume none will deny; and that he brought in an everlasting righteousness for all his people, which did not consist in his work or sufferings, we think is equally apparent. Christ is himself "The Lord our righteousness," and the righteousness of his obedience and death is also imputed to his people for the satisfaction of law and justice. The law could not in justice require a higher righteousness, either at the hands of Christ or his people, than that in which they stood as created in Adam; but their Adamic righteousness, if it had been inviolately preserved, would not have qualified us for heaven. The atonement of Christ was commensurate with the demands of law and justice, but could not exceed their demands without infringing both. To exact more of the surety than was due from the debtor would violate both law and justice, instead of satisfying them; and neither the one nor the other demanded that fallen sinners should be made any more holy or spiritual than they were before the fall. The union of Christ with his church, he in them and they in him, has raised them up far above their original purity as they existed in and stood related to Adam, when he came from the hand of his Maker. We could, and hereafter may, enlarge on this interesting subject; but for the present we only design to explain what we carelessly left ambiguous in a former article. We trust this explanation will be satisfactory to our readers. It was not our intention to start a new doctrine, or to speculate on the old doctrine held by the saints. A remark incidentally made, when preaching at Versailles, led a brother to request of us an explanation, and in giving such explanation we were not clearly understood by several brethren who have written us on the subject; hence this explanation.

No subject can be more vitally important than that of redemption; and certainly none who are enabled to hope that they are redeemed of the Lord, not with such corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, will object to a full discussion of the subject. We rejoice to know that Christ has, in the fullness of time, come into our world, that he has lived for us, and died and risen from the dead, and forever liveth and maketh intercession for us; and it is equally pleasant to know that God treasured up in him life and righteousness with all spiritual blessings for us before the world began.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 1, 1848.

WE HAVE

ON our subscription list several hundred new subscribers sent on about a year ago by old subscribers at one dollar for the first year; and as their time will expire with the end of this year, we request all old subscribers who sent new ones to ascertain whether they wish their paper continued another year at the regular rate of two dollars, or wish it discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for, and let us know before January 1st, 1895. We send the first year on trial at one dollar, but cannot afford to continue the paper at that rate. As most of our old subscribers know, we are in the habit of continuing the paper after the time paid for expires, unless otherwise ordered. This fact is not generally known by new subscribers, and they are liable to rely on our discontinuing the paper when their time is out unless they renew their subscription. We print plainly on the little pink slip containing their name the date at which their subscription expires, and if they take the paper from the post-office after that time they are liable for the pay, whether they order the paper continued or not. We never intentionally continue the paper to any one longer than they wish to take it, but we cannot adopt the rule of stopping the paper when the time is out without giving offense to most of those whose papers are thus discontinued. We have lost thousands of dollars by thus continuing the paper, but cannot see how it can be avoided without, as we said before, giving offense to many who wish their paper continued. Experience has taught us that many who are sent us at the one dollar rate for the first year are quite indifferent as to whether or not they notify us if they do not care to take the paper after their time is out; and after our continuing it until they become a year or two in arrears they will inform us that they never ordered the paper, and therefore refuse to pay for it. Indeed, our loss from this source is very heavy every year. To protect us from these heavy losses we appeal to our brethren to let us know if the new subscribers they sent us wish their paper discontinued.

While we never force an account, we think that it would be well to disabuse the minds of some of our subscribers as to their liability in taking a paper after their time paid for has expired, viz.: If a person takes a paper from the post-office, whether they ever subscribed for it or not, they are liable for the payment of the subscription. Furthermore, if a person becomes in arrears with his subscription, the publisher can continue the paper to him, whether he takes it from the post-office or not, regardless of his ordering it discontinued, until all arrearages are paid. This may at first thought seem a little severe; but when you take into consideration the position of a publisher, the righteousness of such a law is apparent. It is impossible for a publisher to know who wish their paper discontinued unless they inform him; and if he discontinues it without being ordered to do so he gives offense to many who would otherwise have continued their patronage, and his loss thereby becomes heavier than it would be by extending credit to the wrong parties. As for ourselves, we never go beyond a question of honor with our patrons, and only give the law in the case to let our readers know what is considered equity by "Cæsar."

B.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

By a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS

RECEIVED from now until the end of this year will be entered on our subscription list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1895. The remainder of this year we will send them free.

We still continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE.

BROTHER BEEBE:—Please say through the SIGNS that Elder Garrett Murphy has removed from Nora Springs, Iowa, to Garden City, Minn., where he will be glad to see any of our Baptist brethren or hear from them by letter, and especially those living in Minnesota and north-western Iowa.

GARRETT MURPHY.

(Continued from page 387.)

it not." Yesterday it came to me, "How dreadful is this place!" I could not say positively, as he did, that "This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven;" but the very suggestion of it brought me hope and joy. But O the heaven that I find in my poverty and misery when I feel in my heart that if God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me the bread of faith to eat, and the raiment of righteousness to wear, so that I can come again to my Father's house in peace, "Then shall the Lord be my God." Is this dreadful spiritual darkness of mine to be a landmark in my journey, which I can set up as a meeting-place with the Lord? But Jacob went on with his journey. Shall I go on? May the God of grace and mercy grant it. I feel almost afraid to lay claim to any connection between the chapter and my feelings, but only give you the thoughts as they come to me.

When I think of that scene which I thought to be heaven, as if it were in the presence of God that I stood, it does indeed become a dreadful place. My nature is so conservative that I could never go into ecstasies of joy nor the realization of sorrow that I see in others; and this was the first instance in my life where I could contrast the joy of heaven with the tortures of hell. O how could one bear through eternity the opposite state of mind which I saw? Looking down the road ahead of me I see Unbelief in every dark corner; but for the present, just near by, I see the gracious and almighty hand of God which can remove it, and I hear the loving voice of my Jesus say, though there be the chilling of sins, "Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him." With the assurance of such blessings how can there be fear, and how can there be cold? Whether I be a christian or not has been a great perplexity; but with such feelings inspiring me I am bold to believe that I am.

We are both well, and send love to each of your dear family, and to the many friends at Southampton whom we love.

Yours affectionately,
Z. C. CHAMBLISS.

TEMPTATIONS.

"If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down."—Matt. iv. 6.

Why should a creature such as I sometimes get comfort out of this kind of language, spoken, as this was, by the devil? It is even as some of the words used by Job's "miserable comforters," which he had to listen to, when they were parading all their theories of good works before him. He, too, like Christ, was enabled to say to them, "I have heard many such things: miserable comforters are ye all."—Job xvi. 2. So this one, who would tempt even Jesus, by taking him up into an exceeding high mountain, and showing him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, thought to induce him by false but wonderfully great promises to fall at his feet and worship him. Now, how is it that such a poor creature as the writer of this can sometimes be comforted by reading these things? Yet it is so that comfort seems to flow out of the flinty rock. The first word at the head of this is "if." How does this if comfort us? Only as we can see it after it has so often been presented in so many connections. "If I only could be assured that I know the truth." "If I only could know that my love of the brethren is sincere." "If I could be assured that I am not deceived in my hope in Christ." "If I really could be clear of doubts of every kind." These and many other tempting ifs are presented to my mind. To-day as I lay on a couch that my dear wife had so tenderly prepared for me, as I was somewhat indisposed, these ifs began to annoy me, and my mind was carried back to the fourth chapter of Matthew, to the language used by the devil in offering his temptations to Jesus. I was then given a sweet rest for a time that I, feeble as I am, was only following in a small degree the very footsteps of the dear Savior. If my dear Master was subject to temptations, is it strange that his children should also be? Nay, verily. The One that was tempted in all points like as we are, has said by the apostle Paul, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."—1 Cor. x. 13. I also call to mind some others of the words of Jesus, where he was teaching his disciples, when he said, "If they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?" If Jesus was led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil, is it at all strange when we, poor creatures, sometimes feel that we are very high up, and even forgetful of what manner of creatures we are, should fall into the tempter's hands, and that he should then say to us, If you will only do my works I will give you great things? How apt, my dear brethren, are we to fall into the snares and pits that David said were laid for his feet. "The wicked have laid a snare for me."—Psa. cxix. 110. But the psalmist could add, "Yet I erred not from thy precepts." Can we say the same? I fear not. But this same one who was in his life so clearly a type of the blessed Savior, was also, when pursued by Saul, made to say, "I shall now perish one day by the hand of Saul." It seems from these, and many other temptations left on record, that the Lord's people, as well as the Savior himself, have always been liable to temptations. But James tells us, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations," and then says,

"Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience."—James i. 2, 3. This, I trust, is how I draw comfort to-day when under the temptations spoken of while on my couch. The case of Daniel came into my mind. He surely was as literally unable to help himself, as I was to drive back the clouds of temptation I was passing through. You remember that Daniel said he escaped the claws and jaws of the ferocious beasts. "Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live forever. My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me."—Daniel vi. 21, 22. How calmy could Daniel rest, even in the midst of the lions, when he knew the angel of God was with him. So the child of God can sweetly trust in God when the angel of his presence is felt. All ifs flee away when they can be assured that Jesus has said to the devil, "Get thee hence, Satan."

Brother Beebe, having felt some comfort flowing into my soul from the Spirit being given, as I trust, to look beyond these earthly things, and having, as I trust, been made to see with James that the trying of my faith has worked patience, I feel like trying to comfort some other poor, cast down child, with the comfort wherewith I have been comforted.

Before closing this I want to say to Elder Jenkins that his article in the SIGNS of November 14th, on "Forgiveness," was in accord with the teaching of the truth as I have been given to understand the truth. "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."—James v. 7, 8.

JAMES M. TRUE.

KANSAS, Ill., Nov. 16, 1894.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 17, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—In reply to many inquiries about the present condition of sister Mary Parker I will send you extracts from letters received this morning.

Sister Rounsavell says: "Mary gains so much that I feel amply paid for the little I do for her. She can bear her whole weight upon her feet now, and can take ten or twelve steps with very little aid. Her limbs have lengthened about six inches. The rubbing has done wonders for her, and should have been done while she was in the Hospital. Had I more physical strength I could do better by her, no doubt. She seems perfectly satisfied and happy."

I cannot help expressing my wonder that one possessing so little physical strength, and with so much other work to do, should accomplish so much. This is certainly one of the dear Savior's many and wonderful gifts to the church, the gift of healing.

Sister Mary writes: "I went out recently in my wheel-chair, when the wind was blowing a heavy gale off the mountain, and took a severe cold, which brought on a bad attack of bronchial trouble. For nearly a week I felt not nearly so well, and my physical improvement was much retarded. Through the goodness of God I am now much better, and my good Auntie had me taken out in the bright sunshine and refreshing air this morning. I was out once in a closed carriage over a number of the streets and avenues. It was a delightful treat to me, as I had not been in a carriage, except when I left the Hospital to be driven to the Broad Street station, during all these years of my severe affliction. When I left the Hospital I had to be lifted into the carriage; but now I can rise to my feet myself, and, with a little assistance to steady me, can step into a low carriage. O! it fills me with a deep thankfulness and joy that is beyond utterance; and I feel that I can never cease to think and speak of God's wonderful goodness to me, a poor, imperfect and undeserving sinner, nor be grateful enough to dear sister Rounsavell for all that she has done for me and is still doing."

I am sure these extracts will be read with deep interest by the many who have known of the sad condition and extreme sufferings of this dear sister for the past fifteen years or more, and who have known that any radical improvement in her physical condition was regarded by physicians and all her family and acquaintances as absolutely impossible, and not to be looked for at all.

When one comes to such a condition in his soul, as a sinner appointed unto death, when all hope of improvement is utterly gone, we see the wonder of God's power and grace in working that which is impossible with men, and bringing "health and cure" to the soul, and causing the poor sinner, tottering upon the verge of the pit, to return to the days of his youth, and his flesh to be fresher than a child's.—Job xxxiii. 25. And sometimes such wonderful cures are wrought by the power and goodness of God in the body literally.

Your brother,

SILAS H. DURAND.

MANSE, Ky., Oct. 6, 1894.

VERY DEAR BROTHER COX:—It has been some time since I wrote you; but it has not been because I did not want to write, but because I did not feel like I could say anything that would be of comfort to you; and even now I do not feel that I can write you in the way that I ought, unless I have the Spirit of God to take of the things of Jesus and show them unto me. This morning my mind is on the third verse of the first chapter of Genesis. "And God said, Let there be light; and there was light."

My dear brother, we find that in the beginning the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. O what a scene must this have been! All was darkness, total darkness, a fathomless abyss. But the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. As yet there was no sun nor moon, and even the stars were not hung there with their lights. All was darkness. Let us take notice that darkness was before light. Darkness is always before light. "And God said, Let there be light." What power, what grandeur, what magnificence, in those three words, "And God said." It was the power that moved the universe, that caused the sun to take its place in the heavens, and that caused the moon and stars to shine. It was that which brought Lazarus from the tomb. Blessed be God, it is that which moves a sinner in spiritual life.

What a beautiful picture we have before us. How it makes us think of the time when we were in darkness, without God and without hope in the world. All was darkness. O what a miserable state we were in! But God said, "Let there be light: and there was light." We believed that God was just, and could not see how he could save us, for we had sinned against him all the days of our life. O the horror of darkness! Surely the world could have looked no worse when it was without form, and void. O how awfully we felt! But while in this awful state of darkness, when all hope was gone, when we had tried everything we could think of, tried our own works of righteousness, and everything had failed, and we felt that we were lost, God said, "Let there be light; and there was light." Then what peace of mind we had! Instead of darkness, there was light. Instead of trouble, there was rest, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

"When first I believed,
O what joy I received,
What a heaven in Jesus' name."

We rejoiced with joy unspeakable and full of glory. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." O what love! "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." O! let us praise God for his great love wherewith he has loved us, giving his Son Jesus to die, that we, poor worms of earth, might live. I feel that if I am a child of God I am the least of all. But, dear brother, my hope is in the finished work of the blessed Redeemer. It is in what Jesus has done for me, and not what I am doing for him; for I feel that in me, that is, in my flesh, there dwells no good thing. For to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not. This makes me cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But I know that Christ is our righteousness, sanctification and redemption, and in him dwelleth all the fullness of the God-head bodily. In him centers all our hopes. This is the doctrine that I love, and which I have been trying in weakness to preach for years.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
ELDON BARTLETT.

CHENEY, Neb., Nov. 9, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Inclosed you will find the proceedings of the constitution of Little Flock Church, in Nuckolls Co., Neb., which we desire you to publish in our highly appreciated medium of correspondence, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, that the brotherhood may know that the Lord is still lengthening the cords, and taking a few of the tender branches of the true Vine and planting them together for a habitation of God through the Spirit, to offer up spiritual sacrifices to the Lord. O that he may water her with the gentle dews of heaven, that she may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord. May the great Head of the church rule and reign in the hearts of this little flock, and enable them to see eye to eye in his kingdom; and may all they shall do redound to his name's glory and honor, and to the comfort and enjoyment of his little ones here, in what used to be called "The Great American Desert." Our members are scattered from fifteen to forty miles apart, and all have to drive with teams.

Well, I will not worry you longer with my scribble, but earnestly ask you to remember us in your prayers, that we may walk worthy of the vocation wherewith the Lord hath called us.

Your unworthy little brother in a precious hope,

JOSEPH BRUCE.

CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.

PURSUANT to a call from a number of brethren having in God's providence located near Ruskin, Nuckolls Co., Neb., and desiring to be constituted into a legally authorized Old School Predestinarian Baptist Church of Jesus Christ, to be known by the name of LITTLE FLOCK, the following named churches responded, to wit:

West Union Church, in Shawnee Co., Kansas—Elder A. D. Jones.

Salem Church, in Lancaster Co., Neb.—Elders James H. Ring, John Chapman, Deacon J. N. Berry.

Mt. Pleasant Church, in York Co., Neb.—Elder C. M. Cooper, Deacon Thomas Steavens.

The council met at the house of brother James H. Hammons, on Saturday before the fourth Sunday, being the 27th day of October, 1894.

Praise and prayer by brother Joseph Bruce, and the reading of the Minutes of the August meeting, of the call upon those churches.

Elder James H. Ring was called upon to preach the introductory sermon, to which he responded, using for a text 2 Timothy iii. 16, 17.

1. The council then proceeded to business by choosing Elder James H. Ring Moderator, and Elder A. D. Jones Clerk.

2. Called for the letters of those desiring to be constituted.

After the reading of the same, and due consideration, all were unanimously received by the council, whose names are as follows:

Brethren James H. Hammons, Joel Hammons, H. W. Gearard, Joseph Bruce, M. F. Atkins, sisters Nora Gearard, Martha H. Simonds, Lovina L. Stratton, Barbary Bruce, Ava B. Swartz and Jane Atkins.

3. Called for the reading of the Articles of Faith.

Two copies were presented, one by brother Joseph Bruce, and one by Elder A. D. Jones.

After reading both, by motion and second, the council left it with the church to choose either of the copies to adopt, they being the same in substance.

4. Called for the reading of the Rules of Decorum.

After the reading, the copy from Salem Church, in Lancaster Co., Neb., was adopted; also the thirteenth article of the Rules of Decorum of the First Kansas Association.

5. Those holding letters were requested to come forward and join hands.

Prayer by Elder John Chapman.

Charge by Elder C. M. Cooper.

The right hand of fellowship was then extended to the church by the council and all the visiting brethren and sisters present, amid much warm feeling.

Adjourned until 8 o'clock Sunday morning.

THE council, and the church called Little Flock, met pursuant to adjournment.

By motion and second, the church chose Elder James H. Ring Moderator pro tem., and Elder A. D. Jones Clerk pro tem.

Then proceeded to business.

1. Invited brethren and sisters of our faith and order to seats in council with us.

2. Called for the peace of the church.

Found all in peace.

3. Called for references.

4. Extended invitation for membership, whereupon brother George Hutchinson presented himself to the church without a letter, stating that he had been in Nebraska about twenty-one years, not taking a letter from the church called Zoar, in Illinois, not knowing of any church in this country. On being asked if he had ever called for a letter, he said no, and stated that it had been so long since he left there that he did not know whether he could obtain a letter or not.

The church took brother Hutchinson under her watchcare, and advised him to write to his church and see if he could obtain a letter.

5. Miscellaneous Business called for.

By motion and second, the ordination of brother JAMES H. HAMMONS was called for by the church, and by unanimous voice was presented to the council for examination, and, if thought proper, to proceed with the ordination.

After due consideration, the council being fully satisfied that the gift and call to the work of the ministry were of God, proceeded to set him apart to the full functions of the gospel ministry as follows:

Laying on of hands by the presbytery, with prayer by Elder C. M. Cooper.

Charge by Elder James H. Ring.

Right hand of fellowship by the council and the church, and all the visiting brethren and sisters present, amid much warm feeling.

6. The church chose Elder James H. Hammons Moderator and pastor, and brother Joseph Bruce Clerk of the church.

7. We agree to hold our meetings on the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock, and Saturday before at 2 o'clock p. m., of each month.

Adjourned until our next meeting in course, to be held at the house of Elder James H. Hammons, at 2 o'clock p. m. on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in November, 1894.

JAMES H. RING, Mod. pro tem.

A. D. JONES, Clerk pro tem.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DIED—At the residence of his son, Wm. J. Boaz, President of the American National Bank of Fort Worth, Texas, June 28th, 1894, at 9:15 o'clock p. m., brother Samuel Boaz, son of Thomas Boaz, a Primitive Baptist preacher.

Brother Samuel Boaz was born on Sandy River, Pittsylvania Co., Va., March 8th, 1809. When seven years old his father moved to Davidson Co., Tenn., and there he grew to manhood. When that part of Kentucky west of the Tennessee River was bought from the Indians and opened to settlement he (being then twenty-two years old) got a pre-emption, cleared a farm, and settled in what is now Hickman County. In December, 1833, he married Miss Agnes, daughter of Richard Freeman. In the fall of 1859 he moved to Birdville, Tarrant Co., Texas, where he lived many years. His wife died Jan. 6th, 1883. The fruit of their union was five sons and two daughters, all living but one son. After the death of his wife he rented his home for several years, reserving a room which he called home, but the last few years made his home with his sons, Wm. J. and Richard. On June 28th, 1894, he went to bed as well as usual; but after a short time he was heard groaning, and could not be aroused to consciousness. A physician was hastily summoned, but did not arrive until breathing had ceased and pulse was still. Thus passed our dear old brother from time to his home in heaven.

I was well acquainted with him from the time he came to Birdville until his death. He attended our meetings very regularly for many years before the death of his wife, being in sentiment a firm Old School Predestinarian Baptist. He told me that he had determined not to join the church; but after the death of his wife he seemed to take more interest in the cause of Christ and the welfare of the church than before. On Saturday before the second Sunday in May, 1886, we went to meeting together as usual, and he said, "I fear that I am doing wrong, and the people will say that I am a hypocrite." After preaching, and the door of the church was opened, he went forward and told some of the Lord's dealings with him, dating back to early manhood. He was baptized in the fellowship of the Sardis Church, by Elder W. P. Mothershed, on the second Sunday in May, 1886, and transferred to the Denton Creek Church, where my membership is. As we went home and often since he has told me of the sweet peace of mind he felt since he had discharged a long-neglected duty.

I. D. PARKER.

DIED—In the city of Bushnell, McDonough Co., Ill., at two o'clock a. m., Nov. 7th, 1894, after a lingering affliction, our beloved brother, Matthias Prichard, aged 65 years, 8 months and 4 days.

Brother Prichard was born in Muskingum Co., Ohio, March 3d, 1829, and when about nineteen years of age professed a hope in Christ and united with the Lost Run Church of Primitive Baptists, and was baptized by Elder John Fry. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Ann Evans, March 30th, 1850, who became the mother of one son and three daughters, and who died in Bushnell, Ill., May 26th, 1890. The subject of this notice came to Illinois, and united for awhile with the Copperas Creek Church; and in October, 1870, he united by letter with the New Hope Church of Primitive Baptists, located in Greenbush, Ill., and had the confidence and fellowship of the brethren until he was called away by death. For some years before his death he but seldom got to meeting on account of the insanity of his only son (who is now in the Asylum), his own affliction, and the distance he had to go. He suffered for years with cancer on the face, but the cause of his death was lung and kidney trouble, which he bore with very remarkable christian patience. The last talk I had with him he was patient and even cheerful, but said that death was not only welcome, but desirable. The deceased was a brother to the well known and gifted Elder John Prichard, of Ohio, who visited him a few days before he was called from earth.

On Nov. 8th, at two o'clock p. m., the citizens and friends met at the residence, and the writer addressed them briefly from Philippians i. 23: "For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better." After which his afflicted body was laid to rest in the city cemetery, by the side of his departed wife and daughter, until God shall call for them. The Lord bless the two surviving daughters and son.

I. N. VANMETER.

MACOMB, III.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE
TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c. The above described book of 719 pages 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY
OF THE
UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK.

To whom all letters should be addressed, and money orders made payable.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, Middletown, N. Y. F. A. CHICK, Reisterstown, Md.

B. L. BEEBE, Middletown, N. Y.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

For the convenience of our brethren and friends we have made arrangements by which we can send them Bibles at as reasonable rates as they can be purchased at the book store throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.
With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 " There laid they Jesus therefore " because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'	Ps. 22. 28.
m ver. 31.	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 2 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 " Mary Magdalene came and told	10. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

These large Bibles are too heavy to go safely by mail, and therefore will be sent by express at expense of party receiving the book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of book we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

(BEEBE'S COLLECTION.)

These books contain 800 pages and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth Binding, single copy, 75c; half dozen, $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, Full Gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth Binding.....$1 00

Cloth Binding, half-dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books, postage paid, to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05

Twelve copies..... 50

Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES,

Contain all the Editorial articles written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume, $2.00, or both first and second volumes ordered at the same time and to the same address, $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3.00, formerly $4.50. Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged), $3.50, formerly $5.00.

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand. 400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00 Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1894.

NO. 50.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WILLARD, Va., Nov. 29, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN EDITORS:—My attention was called to the inclosed article, originally published in Zion's Landmark some time last spring, and I have obtained consent of the writer, our esteemed brother, Elder E. Ritzenhouse, to copy and forward to you, and request its publication in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, if it meets your approval. I think it an excellent article on an important subject. Too many of our people, in their thoughtlessness of effects, send or allow their children to go to Arminian Sunday Schools, and it is well that their attention be called to its baleful effects. We certainly do not object to others having any kind of schools for their children which they may see fit; but it seems to me to be inconsistent for Old School Baptists to turn their children over to their religious enemies, to be taught a religion which is the opposite to what they profess to believe, resulting in too many cases in developing an open, avowed enmity to the truth of God, bringing grief to the hearts of the parents, and a continual disturbance to the household.

I rejoice with you, brother Beebe, that you have obtained consent from Elders Chick and Jenkins to assume the editorship of the SIGNS. I am sure it will meet the approval of the readers of the paper. We have few better or more popular writers than Elder Chick; and if we cannot have Elder Beebe, I am glad to welcome Elder Chick as one of the editors. May the blessing of the Lord be upon you and the dear old SIGNS.

Your brother in the hope of eternal life,

A. B. FRANCIS.

STATE ROAD, Del.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I have been accustomed to hearing people say that we Old School Baptists were opposed to Sunday Schools; and as that is an institution which is idolized by most of the religious denominations, and believed to be an important auxiliary to the church, and a means of saving any that would otherwise be lost, it seems to be utterly unaccountable to them that anybody who was not a heathen or an infidel could object to them. I have not heretofore felt called upon to say anything about schools of any description, either in writing for the press or in public speaking. I have sometimes heard brethren allude to what are called Sabbath Schools in a way which implies that they did not approve of them. I have wished that when they had anything to say about them they would take time to explain themselves fully, and state the grounds of their objections.

It seems to be regarded as opposition to any and all education, and as an indifference to the proper care and religious training of children. I am not writing for the purpose of disturbing the advocates and supporters of Sabbath Schools, but simply to enlighten honest inquiry with regard to our faith and practice on this subject.

As to the phrase, "opposed to Sabbath Schools," we have no disposition and have never shown the least inclination to disturb any schools of any description that parents provide for their own children. It is their undoubted right to have their children taught in any and all branches of natural science that they believe to be for the benefit of their children, and to provide public and private schools and academies for the purpose; and if they believe they can teach them religion they should be allowed to try it without interference. I remember when the gathering up of poor, neglected children on the first day of the week, in order to have them washed and dressed and furnished with books, so as to be taught to spell, read, write, &c., and get some start in the primary elements, was first introduced. There being no public provision for the support of schools, nor for the purchase of books, and the education of children being very expensive, many were allowed to grow up without ever learning even to read. There was then no objection, and could be none, to this charitable work of kindly-disposed people, who would gather up neglected children and give them some elementary instruction without cost to either children or parents. It was a matter in the hands of citizens, and not of denominations; and all charitably-disposed citizens, whether church members or not, took hold to help along the good work. Sunday morning or afternoon was generally made use of, because in villages the citizens were engaged in business during the week.

The reader need not be told that the "Sabbath Schools" of the present day are entirely another and different institution, and are organized and maintained for another and different purpose. It is the rich, and not the poor, that are sought after; and each of the several denominations has its Sabbath School, in which the children are taught religion as sciences are taught, and carefully trained up in the faith and practice of that denomination.

This is all, I suppose, natural enough, that denominations would see in the schools a chance to exercise an influence over the infant mind when away from the care and protection of parents, and so secure the plants as from a nursery, to be in due time transplanted within their own pales. The several denominations have each their seminaries, academies and colleges for those farther advanced, but the earlier in life control can be obtained of children the more certain will be the ultimate success. The object being changed, the class and character of the children to be taught must also be changed. The object is no longer to benefit needy, neglected children: it is to benefit the denomination at the expense of the children. As a matter of course the wealthy, and those whose parents are leading, influential citizens, are sought after, and every possible effort resorted to to secure the attendance of children whose parents belong to some other denomination. The charity is all on the other side. As far as the teachers are concerned it is entirely selfish. I have before me the annual report of contributions from the Sunday Schools in one association of what are called Missionary Baptists. It foots up the enormous sum of $23,887 for a single year. It is probably generally known that the children are required to always carry some money with them to contribute.

Not only so, but there is a rivalry kept up between the different schools as to which shall excel in the size of the annual contribution. I suppose somebody must know who gets this money, and what use is made of it. About all the satisfaction that the children ever get is that it is for the missionaries. I doubt whether there was ever a grosser imposition palmed off upon innocent, unsuspecting people than this missionary enterprise. Even if the millions of dollars that are collected ostensibly for that purpose were all honestly used in that way, what worth while to send men to China or Japan with a princely salary to convert those people? Do we not all know that they cannot convert their nearest neighbor? If they think they can, let them commence on those that we have in our own country. We have Chinese and Italians and Hungarians and others of almost every nationality, and then we have heathen that are natives.

If people of mature years and with ample means of information see fit to contribute of their own funds to support and maintain this grasping, gigantic fraud, it is their right as citizens of a free country to do so; but to impose upon these innocent children, persuading them that their contributions will save souls that would otherwise be lost, and that heaven and happiness hereafter will be their reward, constitutes a degree in deception and crime that the heathen themselves would hardly be guilty of. We are not given to intermeddling with the rights of others, and we do not as a people wish to deprive any other people of their right to do what they will with their own. They can have as many different schools, on any and all days from first to seventh, and send their children so as to keep them ever learning, if they think proper to do so, and we will not have a word to say. In this sense we are not opposed to Sabbath Schools, nor to any other schools that parents see fit to provide for their own children.

I suppose everybody knows that most of the denominations have each their Sabbath Schools conducted under their own supervision. If we do not see fit to send our children to a Methodist or Presbyterian school, why should we be complained of? Why should it be a matter of reproach that we see fit to care for our own children? We only claim the right that we concede to all others; but why so anxious about our children? If any of our people move into a town or village they are immediately set upon and teased about attending Sunday School, that is, if there are children in the family; and the different denominations one after another will press their suit. They are called "Hardshells" and other hard names, but they are not quite hard enough to withstand the pressure that is brought to bear upon them. I heard a very candid, conscientious man, who had a grandchild in his family, once say that if he were not to let that child attend their Sunday Schools all patronage would be withdrawn from him, so that he could not remain in that city. Is the object of this to press contributions from our children, or is it to enlist them in the Methodist or Presbyterian faith? In either, or in any case, why should we not be opposed, so far as our own children are concerned? We do not believe that religion can be taught in that way; but if we did we would not be inclined to have our children learn it in those schools. I think it is a pet idol with many in our day, and that it is with them the one institution upon which the perpetuity and prosperity of their respective organizations depend, and that to object to supporting and encouraging it is in their view an incorrigible heresy. I do not know but they may be sincere in this, and that they honestly believe that there is no other hope for the rising generation.

I have only to say in addition to this a word to our brethren. Do you take thought what you are doing when you dress up your children on Sunday morning and furnish them with the required funds to attend a Missionary or Methodist Sunday School? Who will be responsible if in the end your worst religious foes are the men of your own house? Do you attend with them even sometimes to see and hear what is doing there? Suppose we all judge between you and your vineyards. What more could you have done that you have not done in it to cause it to bring forth wild grapes?

E. RITTENHOUSE.

BUTLER, Md., Aug. 12, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—I have often thought of the answer you gave to the request I made when you were here last. At the intermission, while at my mind was meditating on the subject of faith, and I remarked that I would like to hear you upon the two portions of Scripture, James ii. 17 and Jude 20. "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." "But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith." You replied, "What sort of a building would you have?" I did not answer you, but am now making the endeavor to do so. Taking the inspired apostle's explanation, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," we have faith as both the substance and the evidence of things not seen. Therefore the building must be of things not seen, and also of things hoped for. Unseen yet hoped for things are the only material the beloved are to build themselves upon. This brings us to the eighth chapter of Romans, which is a magazine of christian comfort. It begins with a declaration of no condemnation to believers, and ends with a declaration of no separation from the love of God.

Now, dear brother, methinks this answers your question, "What sort of a building would you have?" I, a poor, weak, vile sinner, yet without condemnation, all washed away by the precious blood of the immaculate Lamb of God. This is the unfolding of the great mystery. All the beloved addressed in Jude's short epistle are one in Christ Jesus, viewed as beloved and chosen in him. What a solid foundation! And how glorious is the manifestation of Jehovah's justice and holiness! How free and full is the discharge to all the beloved from all condemnation! How it exalts the name of Jesus above every name! And the heart confesses that Christ is all in all. Unspeakable privilege the beloved ones possess, freedom from all condemnation, the blessed effects of the unity of the Head and body, embracing the poor, yea, the destitute, the beggar at the rich man's gate, the one who smites upon his breast, and cries out, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." Of that whole world that was chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world the psalmist declares, "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God."—Psalm xc. 1, 2.

Thus we find that the plan of salvation was drawn in the eternal counsel, founded in the eternal, unchangeable love of the Father, and completed in the death, resurrection and continual mediation of the Son. Every inhabitant of Zion has this stone, "a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation. He that believeth shall not make haste."—Isa. xxviii. 16. O how often we try to make haste, and O what a fearful mistake! for we become exhausted, and give up, crying, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Then we again learn that "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound."—Rom. v. 20. Also, that we were born sinners, live sinners, and must die because of sin. "So death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Though sinners, let us look up our receipts in full, and thus build up ourselves on our most holy faith. As to the sure foundation, how readest thou? "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree." "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God." "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace."

Now, in the conclusion of the evidence given, that we are not our own, but are bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ, we learn that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Please read from the twenty-eighth verse to the close of this eighth chapter of Romans, the glorious summary of soul-inspiring, comforting truth; and if there be faith as large as a mustard seed, which is the smallest of all seeds, we will not fail in building up ourselves on our most holy faith; and in doing so we will also have learned the meaning of the Scripture, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his own good pleasure."—Phil. ii. 12, 13. Also, that faith without works is dead; for faith reveals the great love where-with God has loved us, "even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."—Eph. ii. 4-8.

We, the beloved, embrace all who believe that Christ is the Son of the living God, and that his reward was with him; that is, his bride, his love, his own, whom he declares to be flesh of his flesh and bone of his bones. His work was before him, even the redemption from sin, death and hell; and he has so completely cleansed his fair one that, like the lily, she does not have to work. She, the lovely bride, the church, the called out, toils not, neither does she spin. With a righteous cleansing, whiter than snow, whiter than any fuller on earth can make his linen, she is not only white, but pure, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

This is the sweet rest that remaineth to the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. This is our rest, the rest of his beloved.

Dear brother, please accept this hastily written and badly arranged letter. I hope you will not find in it any word or sentence that you will condemn as heterodox. I remain a steadfast contender for the faith that is distributed weekly through the columns of the dear old SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

THOMAS H. SCOTT.

NOVEMBER 25, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER:—You will see by the date of the inclosed letter that it has been a long time written. The reason I did not mail it was because it was so imperfect; but my subscription is past due, and wishing to send it, I thought I would write another letter. But I find that a heavy cloud is enveloping my mind, so I will send what I have written, with a few additional thoughts, hoping you will take up the subject in the near future, that I, with the many readers of the herald of truth, may be made to rejoice in its perusal. I know it will be a joyful proclamation of victory to poor, perishing sinners over sin, Satan, death and hell, through Jesus, who loved us and gave himself for us; proclaiming a free, full and finished salvation by Christ, to the glory of God. Neither the greatness nor the number of sins can expose any sinner to wrath who believes in the Son of God. No guilt is so great but what it is cleansed by his one offering. No stain is so deep that his blood has not removed it. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."—Isa. liii. 6. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God."—Rom. viii. 16. This is the highest pinnacle that it is possible for any to attain to, far above the holy angels; yes, eternal unity with Christ in God. "Heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ."

Dear brother, how could I refrain from calling the SIGNS OF THE TIMES the herald of truth, when the editorial of Nov. 1st, 1847, written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, contains these words, "Destroy the doctrine of eternal union, and you sap the foundation of Zion, and forever blast the prospect of salvation and eternal glory." Even now we have this heavenly blessing, the heavenly witness to this high and glorious relationship existing between the high and holy One and poor, miserable sinners. In Jesus united, forever we stand. From Jesus, the Head, the Spirit proceeds, and flows to all his members; and faith, the fruit of this anointing, binds us in the one life with him; as it is declared by the apostle Paul, "The life I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God." Now,

"Children of the heavenly King,
As you journey sweetly sing."

Though everything, to sense and reason, may be against you, remember that the Spirit bears witness with our spirit, and not to our senses. The witness the blessed Spirit bears is that we are the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; for saith Jesus of the Spirit, "He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you."—John xvi. 14. May we "ask in faith, nothing doubting," and thereby attain to the high and holy blessedness of children, who can glory only in Christ.

I will close by wishing all a prosperous voyage to the fair haven of rest. Though it be through much tribulation, yet your living Savior says you shall enter the kingdom, and abide above the accusing terrors of the law, the groveling life of sense, the vain life of worldly pleasure, and the distressing life of Satan's accusing. Ah, you are children of God. So would I have you. But, dear child, faith reveals God's beloved Son in us, and we have eternal life. "Lord, increase our faith."

THOMAS H. SCOTT.

THOUGHTS.

JUST where one is in regard to his spiritual condition, whether in the dark or in the light, is not always easy for himself to tell. His own judgment cannot well be relied upon. Sometimes we are in great "heaviness through manifold temptations," and sorely afflicted by a sense of the depravity of our nature, and by a vivid view of our transgressions in thought and word and deed. We would then be apt to say we were very much in the dark; whereas these acute troubles are because we are very much in the light. "All that is reproved is manifested by the light; for whatsoever doth make manifest is light." "In him was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." If I stand in a flood of sunlight and look downward, I may be in great fear and distress, because I see so very distinctly a great many very dangerous and obnoxious things. But when my eyes are lifted up, and I notice the glorious light itself, and my sight reaches on along that path of brightness till it rests upon the sun, I am filled with wonder and admiration, and forget my fears and distress. "In thy light shall we see light." This is a true figure, but is it true of me? Do I see Jesus in that way? Have I eyes of faith to see him, and are the feelings of confidence and joy and peace I sometimes have, so that for a time I forget my troubles, given me by that view of my dear Savior? I cannot even lift up my eyes from the earth of myself. He must lift them, or I cannot look upward. He only can reveal himself to me. In his light only can we see light.

Sometimes I have a quiet state of mind, free from any sharp trouble or painful apprehension, able to enjoy the blessings of this life, and to talk with interest upon important subjects pertaining to the affairs of the world; and at the same time having a clear view of the doctrine of God our Savior, and able to bring forth some special portion of the word which may be brought to mind, in writing or in speaking, some rich and glorious views of the way of salvation. Then I might say of myself that I am in the light. But I have become very suspicious and doubtful of my whereabouts spiritually when in such a state of mind; for I have often at such a time been, as it were, awakened to find that my quietness was a worldly repose, and not the peace of God; that instead of realizing the presence of the dear Savior, I was very much "at home in the body, and absent from the Lord;" and that the Scripture which was so clear to my mind, was not at the same time felt with power in my heart.

I do not expect to always feel the power of the word upon which I am speaking or writing; nor would I feel justified in refusing to express my views in writing, or to try to preach, when it appears to be my lot to do so, because I do not at the time feel that the portion of Scripture to be dwelt upon is living within me. But I do not want to feel contented when such is the case. It is startling to find myself taking pleasure in building up a scriptural argument for the truth, or in opening up the glorious doctrine contained in some Scripture, and in speaking of the experience of it, when I have reason to fear that my natural mind only has been engaged in the work.

What a solemn thing it is to have to do with the word of the Lord! What a great work it is to preach the gospel! Well may we say with the apostle, "Who is sufficient for these things?" Truly our sufficiency is of God. We well know when the power of the word is felt in our souls. It does not always produce peace and joy, but more often pierces and cuts through the flesh, and abases us before the holiness and majesty of God, and causes "rotteness to enter into our bones," and makes "our belly tremble," and yet lifts up our souls gloriously in the contemplation of the power and glory of God, and causes a solemn and self-forgetful joy at times in seeing and feeling the wonderful goodness and wisdom and grace and love of our God in Jesus Christ our Lord.

We may not feel like speaking much when we are favored to feel the power of the word, lest we darken counsel by words without knowledge, but to let our words be few. But a few words, a few broken sentences, at such a time, are worth more to the hungry soul than all that could be said at another time with the tongues of men and of angels.

There are times, however, when the effect of the word which the Lord puts in our heart is to make it necessary to speak in order that we may be refreshed. It is easy then to speak, whether we have to confess our own abasement or declare the exaltation of our souls in Christ. It is easy to speak, for the flesh is broken down, and pride is out of sight. It is easy to speak, yet words seem too few and weak to tell of the unsearchable riches of Christ; and that is what we want to tell. We want to exalt his blessed name. For a little we forget the earthen vessel, caring only to exhibit the gospel treasure, "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ," that the excellency of the power may be seen to be of God, and not of men. It is easy to speak, but it is the energy of divine power which makes it easy, breaking down our own strength, and breaking through all of the opposing forces of our carnal nature.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Dec. 2, 1894.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Nov. 22, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Please publish this letter from one of the Lord's lonely and afflicted ones, showing how tenderly he cares for them. Sister Himes is one I baptized in August, 1893, with her young brother, at Riddlesburgh, Pa. We had been declared that she could not receive the administration of the ordinance without a fatal result, on account of her frail health; but when the dear Savior says, "Follow me," he gives the strength to obey. She is one of the many scattered ones of that dear family who love each other as the members of no earthly family ever can. How these lonely ones long to meet in the assembly of the saints, and how dearly they prize the precious privilege when they are favored to have it. It is better that way than to have the privilege weekly and prize it little. How much better to have only affliction in the world, and all our pleasures in the church, than to enjoy all worldly blessings, and have but little or no care for the things of the kingdom of God, and no knowledge of those pleasures at God's right hand which are forevermore.

Your brother in hope,

SILAS H. DURAND.

HOPEWELL, Pa., Oct. 2, 1894.

ELDER SILAS H. DURAND—MY DEAR BROTHER AND FAMILY:—Being alone this evening, the girls in bed, and Mr. Himes gone to town, I felt as though I wanted to talk with some one who could understand and rejoice with me in the way the dear Lord has been pleased to lead and strengthen me; and you seem like a father to me, and to you I come to speak of the joys that have come to me through my dear Lord, for through no one else could I receive them. I know you will rejoice with me, as would every child of our God who knows of his dealings with his people.

Two weeks ago last Saturday I started for Rainsburgh, and when I got off the train at Bedford I felt so bad that I wished I had staid at home. But O, bless the dear Lord, he had great things in store for me. He had a feast prepared which my soul hath never before enjoyed, and one never to be forgotten. Brother John McClellan met me, and we had only driven from town a short distance when a feeling of great joy came to me. I was perfectly happy and perfectly well. I could see no cloud to mar my path. We told to each other the way the Lord had led us, and of his goodness and mercy to us, and I think brother John felt just as I did; he felt the power of God. I scarcely knew we crossed the mountain, the distance seemed so short. After dinner we went to meeting, and heard a grand sermon preached by brother Ahimaaz Mellett. O, my dear brother, words of mine fail to express the joy I received. On Sunday morning came one of those sinking spells that I am subject to, but by the hour of meeting I was ready. What a grand sermon we had! How I wished that I could go often to hear this glorious doctrine preached, salvation by grace. After preaching was over came the communion, something new to me. Yes, it was all new, for this was the first time that I was ever in a Baptist Church. O, my dear brother, is it not good to meet with brethren and sisters here below? Are we not strengthened? I know I was.

I have improved in health so much that many marvel, and want to know what has come over me. I was down home yesterday. Mother said it did her good to see me come the way I did. The Lord has been pleased to comfort me ever since my return; and many have been the tears of joy that have flowed from my eyes when meditating on his goodness, and why he comes to me as he does. Had any one told me before I went that I would have been so strengthened and built up on his most holy word, my answer would have been, "Impossible." But he tells us that he will bring us by a way that we knew not, and lead us in paths that we have not known. He makes darkness light before us, and crooked things straight. Then, my dear brother, who can we praise? Does it belong to ourselves? No, never. It belongs to him who doeth all things, and none can stay his hand. It was the first time in my married life that I was absent from home without being home-sick. The only thing that seemed to grieve me was that I must be separated from the brethren for a short season at best. When I bade them good-by a burden arose on my heart, a sadness which I cannot describe. The distance seemed as far again as we came for home, and it was all I could do to refrain from crying. After arriving home I gave way, and cried as though some one had been taken from me by death. Is it not wonderful how the dear Lord draws his children together in love? Some day we can meet to part no more. O how sweet the thought!

"There shall we all be at rest,
Leaning on our Savior's breast;
There shall we forever be Gazing on the Deity;
There shall we the Lamb adore;
There shall we all part no more."

How sad I felt when I read the obituary of sister Boyd. She wrote me such good letters, and now I will not receive her words of comfort any more forever. But we have the blessed assurance that ere long we shall meet to part no more. How glad I do feel that dear sister Mary Parker is improved in health. Is it not truly wonderful? I have thought many times that if she could undergo an operation and recover, why should I dread another one so much? The doctor asked me just the other day if I still thought I would go. My answer was, "Not so long as I feel as much improved as I do now." He said, "You cannot possibly continue in this state longer than the first of December, and perhaps not so long." He said it was the cool autumn weather that caused the change. Perhaps this has something to do, but I praise my dear Lord for giving me these great blessings; for never before hath my soul been fed with such good things. I do not envy those who have the privilege of meeting together and hearing the blessed gospel preached, but I do so long to be with them; and when I think of being far from my kindred, how sad and lonely I

(Continued on page 399.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 12, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
F. A. CHICK, REISTERSTOWN, MD.
B. L. BEEBE, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

All letters for this paper should be addressed, and money orders made payable as formerly, to

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

ORDER.

It is in our mind at this time to present some reflections upon some points of order in the churches of Christ. It is not our purpose at this time to attempt to give anything like a general view of this matter, but simply to answer a few questions which have been proposed to us by a correspondent whose name and address have not been given. We do not desire to take any part in any debate or strife which may exist anywhere among the brethren and churches. It has long been our opinion that if the brethren concerned cannot settle their own difficulties and differences, it is useless for brethren from a distance to undertake it. If the brethren have in them the spirit of love and peace they can come together themselves, without any need of outside help; while on the other hand, if the spirit of strife be uppermost in them, no amount of interference by outside brethren will avail to make peace or settle the trouble. Another thing is true, viz., that no one at a distance can know all the circumstances connected with any given case of trouble; and therefore, in attempting to give counsel and advice, he is likely to render himself liable to the charge of darkening counsel with words without knowledge.

Another thing is also true. It is well-nigh impossible for either one of the parties involved in any trouble to give an impartial account of it. The intention is to be perfectly frank and truthful, but we are all so constituted that in any trouble our own faults do not stand out as prominently in our view as do the faults of others; and this fact is sure to color our view of it, and as a result to make our narrative more or less one-sided. We would not, therefore, be understood as undertaking to give our judgment in any one particular case, but only as desiring to present what seem to us scriptural answers to a few questions.

1st. Is it right for members of a church, either separately or by mutual agreement, to stay away from their meetings for any cause save sickness, or distance, or something providential, over which they have no control? We can feel no hesitancy in answering most emphatically, No. No alienation of feeling, no fancied or real wrong done by another, no dissatisfaction with other brethren, can be used lawfully as an excuse for so doing. If there be anything wrong in the church, or in any of the brethren, the Scriptures inform us what to do; and it is not to stay away from the house of God. To do so is to forsake the Lord. By such a course we cease to gather with him, and are found among those who scatter abroad instead. There may be wrong-doing among the followers of Christ; but it is better to bear this wrong than on its account desert to the enemy.

2d. Is it right for members, after staying away, as named in the first question, to then attend the meetings for a few times, simply in order to obtain letters of dismissal? Surely this question needs no answer. Such a course from such a motive is unqualifiedly wrong. It is a sort of cunning craftiness which may be practiced in the affairs of the world, but which should have no place among the children of God; and even in the world such a course would earn the scorn of all right-thinking men.

3d. After getting letters of dismissal from the church, have these members a right to bring up accusations against a member of the church? Under the circumstances named above we should say that after withdrawing by letter it would have a bad look to bring up an accusation against a brother. In asking for letters, and in receiving them in full fellowship, it is declared that there is no quarrel or schism in the church. This ought to be true, or else the statement given in the letter of dismissal is false. We wish to add, however, that it is in our judgment unwise and wrong for a church to grant indefinite letters of dismissal. If another organization is in prospect the letter should so state; and if members wish to unite with some other church the letter should be addressed to that church. No letter should be granted on any other terms; and the letter does not dismiss the member until the other church is organized, or until he is received into the church to which the letter is addressed. When once a member of a church of Christ there is no way of getting out of it except by dismission to another church, by exclusion or by death.

4th. Is it right for brethren who stay away from their meetings to be offended with any brother who admonishes them to do so no longer? On the contrary, they should be glad and rejoice that God has loved them well enough to put into the heart of that brother the word of admonition for them. It may seem to them that the brother has spoken severely; but even if he has the admonition is of God, and not of man, and should be heeded, as being designed for their spiritual welfare and growth in grace.

5th. If the letters of dismissal were not granted with the understanding that a new church was to be organized at a suitable distance away, to organize such a church without consulting the church of their former membership would be, to say the least of it, discourteous, and calculated to stir up dissatisfaction and ill feeling; and the Spirit of Christ always strives for the things which make for peace. A thing of that kind might not be in itself wrong, but it would certainly have the appearance of evil. Perhaps it might be borne with, but yet it ought not to be done.

6th. If the presbytery who are called to assist in the constitution of a church know that there is any trouble, and that those who propose to enter into the new constitution are not in full fellowship with the church which granted them letters of dismission, have they any right to go on with the constitution of the new church? We should say, on the contrary, that their plain duty would be to charge those members to leave their gift before the altar, and go first and be reconciled to their brethren. If the church had reason, in the first place, to believe that all was not right, they sinned in granting the letters. In such a case both parties erred, and both should confess to God and to each other, and ask forgiveness.

7th. Which is the chief thing, church order and discipline, or to know Christ? It seems to us altogether needless to ask such a question, or to say anything that would lead to such a question. Everything in the word of God tends to exalt the name of Jesus above every name; and this very Jesus is King in Zion. The order and discipline of the church is established by his word. To observe it is to obey him. To obey him is to honor him. To him who confesses Jesus from his heart, and not in name only, his slightest word is more precious than gold. The order or discipline of the church is what he has himself ordained. If we love him we shall love it. The test of our love to God is that we love his commandments; but the discipline which he has ordained in his church is the discipline of love. It is designed to save life, and not destroy it. How can a believer then say that he cares nothing for the order or discipline of the church—that he only wants to know Christ? If the church has established any order from her own fleshly judgment which is not of Christ, this indeed should be disregarded; but the law of Zion is from her King, and to disregard it is treason to the King. If we know Christ we shall also love his law. If we know him we shall inquire what is his divine will.

In conclusion we desire to say that without love, real, warm, heartfelt, christian love, in the heart and among the members of the body of Christ, everything is wrong. The very discipline of the church without love becomes but legal formality. Its enforcement in the letter, when destitute of love in the heart as the moving spirit, but kills instead of giving life. It is to be feared that much of what passes for church discipline has in times past been used as the kiss of peace, which concealed the purpose of him who gave it to stab the offender to death. The form of church discipline may be complied with, when the spirit beneath it is to destroy. It is easy for our poor, human minds to be deceived in our own motives; therefore we have need of daily wisdom from on high to know what is right, and what are our own secret motives in all that we do.

We leave these reflections, hoping that they may do good and not harm, and that all may strive for the things which make for peace, and things whereby all may be edified.

C.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OLD AND NEW SCHOOL BAPTISTS.

NUMBER ONE.

ALTHOUGH much has been written and said on the various points of doctrine and the general order and practice on which the Old and New School Baptists divide, there is still a great lack of correct information with many of both parties on the subject. It is important, for the general peace of Zion, and permanent fellowship of the saints, that the real position of the Old School Baptists in regard to the New School, their movements, doctrines, and humanly devised institutions, as in reference to everything else, should be as distinctly understood as possible. Such an understanding will promote harmony and fellowship among ourselves, not only as it will lead to unity of sentiment, but as it will more fully prepare us for resisting those who would palm themselves upon us, whose hearts are not with us. We have no reason to doubt that some have found their way into our connection whose claim to the particular classification is that they are opposed to the missionary operations of the New Order, or that they stand aloof from all the other popular religious institutions which are cherished by the New Order. It should be remembered that all these things may be resolutely opposed from very different motives. As a body the Old School Baptists oppose those institutions because they honestly believe them to be contrary to the spirit and letter of the divine rule which Christ has given us as our only rule; and consequently a reflection and insult upon his wisdom, power, goodness and government as Head over all things to his church, and King of Zion. But we have no good reason to doubt that there are those who oppose the same institutions rather because they find them expensive, oppressive and insatiable. This class in some instances have claimed kindred with the Old School Baptists, and their claims, it is feared, in too many instances have been allowed, where covetousness more than the fear of the Lord has governed their course. Neither the Old or the New School Baptists have any general or uniform creed or published standard of their faith and order which by general consent must be adopted in order to their being allowed to bear the names by which they are called; both parties profess to regard the Bible as their standard, and generally the churches and associations of both orders adopt such written summaries of their understanding of what the Scriptures teach as they can agree upon; while one church does not require that a sister church shall adopt the same written confession in order to correspond with and fellowship each other. If they are generally agreed in certain leading or cardinal points, they generally leave other points as of minor consideration. Hence, among the New School especially, we find in some cases their adopted articles of faith and their practice are as inharmonious as light and darkness; and yet they all agree in their worldly policy for evangelizing the world, and opposing the Old School Baptists.

The Old School solemnly profess to be governed by the New Testament of our Lord Jesus Christ, in all matters of faith and practice; and we hold that to either add to or diminish from that standard disqualifies for a name and place in any consistent Old School church or association. The Old School Baptist church we hold to be the only apostolic church on earth, and the ground of the fellowship in that church is clearly stated, Acts ii. 42. None can enjoy the fellowship of the apostles, or of the apostolic church, who do not continue steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine. The rejection therefore of any part of the doctrine taught by the apostles, or the reception or practice of anything which the apostles have not taught in Christ's name, must unavoidably mar the fellowship, and disqualify the offenders for the privileges peculiar to apostolic churches and saints. As the New School no less than the Old School claim to be Baptists, the essential matters of distinction between them cannot be too clearly stated nor too strongly marked. We propose to devote a few articles, as we may have time and space for them, in subsequent numbers, to a statement of some of the most prominent and radical points of doctrine between these two kinds of Baptists. The field before us in this undertaking is much more extensive than it may at first appear; for there are few if any points wherein we can consistently agree. It is not our work to make the difference greater than it now is, nor to exaggerate the real discrepancy, but to draw the line in truth and soberness, that all who read may understand more fully on which side of the line they belong. And if it shall be found that we have among us any who do not belong to our common family, every consistent Old School Baptist will freely give them up that they may go to their own company; and if any captive prisoners among the New School shall find that they belong to us, we trust in God they may be enabled to come out of their captivity, and return to Zion with singing and everlasting joy. Such an interchange of prisoners would promote harmony on both sides; for God's people cannot sing the Lord's song in a strange land, neither can the children of the alien unite in spirit and in truth with the children of the living God. Let them who have no inheritance with the church of God go every man to his tent, while Zion, in the language of the inspired psalmist shall pray, "Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood; that our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace; that our garners may be full, affording all manner of store," &c.—See Psa. cxliv. 11-15.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1848.

REVELATION XXII. 19.

"AND if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

The presumption of altering or attempting to alter the things which God has spoken, is set forth in very strong and expressive language, both in the verse under consideration and in the preceding. What God has said by his prophets, apostles or other holy men by whom he has spoken, can admit of no improvement. All that he has spoken is important to make the record complete; and more than what he has said would not only be superfluous, but a corruption of the volume of divine truth. To those who add to what God has spoken, God shall add the plagues written in the prophecy, such plagues as are described in the pouring out of the seven vials of the wrath of God. To take from the words is equally abominable, and must subject the offender to expulsion from the church and privileges of the saints of God.

It seems to have been the opinion of some, that to take from the word, or at least to omit to hold forth, observe or practice some parts of what God has established in his word, is a much lighter matter than to add to his words; hence we frequently hear them say, "I admit that election, predestination, &c., are Bible doctrine; I believe them as firmly as you do; but I do not think it profitable to preach them: indeed my hearers manifest a strong aversion to such sentiments, and if I were to bring them out in preaching I soon should have to preach to unoccupied seats. Besides, such doctrine is so discouraging to sinners, we cannot have revivals, conversions, accessions, &c., if we insist on all that God has said, and there is certainly enough to preach without cramming this old, flinty corn down their unwilling throats." So they take from the words of the book. While others will with equal presumption enjoin such things as God has not required in his word. It is common to witness among the preachers of modern times all the popular religious institutions, inventions and doctrines of men insisted on as equally important with that for which we have a "Thus saith the Lord!" and those who reject the doctrines and commandments of men, and adhere strictly to the words of the book in all their religious course, are denounced as wanting the spirit of true christianity. How insulting to the God of heaven for men to attempt to improve what he has said; to sit in judgment and decide what part of his word is well spoken, and what may be admitted, and what rejected; as though the Holy One were deficient in knowledge or wisdom, or had given his creatures more of both than he has reserved to himself!

But what we presume our brother more particularly desires of us is to relieve the subject from what in it seems to favor the Arminian notion of "falling from grace." The lovers of the doctrine of inefficient grace and precarious hope have seized upon the text with an air of exultation, as though it would feast their very souls if they could make it appear that the regenerated sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty could fall from the favor of God and sink down to hell, after having been written in the Lamb's book of life, and made experimentally the citizens of the holy city, New Jerusalem, which came down from God out of heaven, adorned as a bride for her husband.

In a preceding verse, Jesus personally certifies that he has sent his angel, or messenger, to testify these things in the churches. John was undoubtedly the angel thus authorized, as he had commanded him to write and communicate the testimony to the "seven churches," which were named, and which represent the whole church of Christ, in all her branches, throughout all time. According to his important commission, John testifies to "every man that heareth the words of the book of this prophecy," what shall be the consequence of adding to or taking from them. It is important to know who they are that take from the words of the book, what part they who are guilty have in the book of life and in the holy city, and in what sense we are authorized to understand that these things shall, together with all interest in the things written in the book, be taken away from every man who shall thus offend.

The holy city is described as coming down from God out of heaven; by which, we understand, is set forth the organization of the apostolic church, composed originally of materials which came down from God out of the old Jewish heaven, when they were gathered under the ministry of John, from Jerusalem, Judea, and all the region round about Jordan. The application of the name New Jerusalem, was not only to distinguish the church from the old Jerusalem, which was in bondage with her children, but also to express that the new was the antitype of the old Jerusalem. The book of life here mentioned answers to the register kept in typical Jerusalem of her living citizens, as referred to Isa. iv. 3, and not to the eternal record of God's election in Christ Jesus, which was mentioned Psa. cxxxix. 16. Answering to the figure of the record of all the living in Jerusalem, there is a record kept in apostolic churches under the gospel dispensation, of members in good standing and communion; and when, for any departure from the faith or practice of the gospel, any were excluded from fellowship and membership, their names were expunged from the record of the members of the church. Judas Iscariot, Simon Magus, Ananias and Sapphira, with many others, were for a season numbered with the primitive disciples, and written among the living in the church of God, were entitled to all the privileges of the church and consideration of the brethren, so long as their names were recognized among the living or unimpeached members. Their parts in the holy city, or the orderly apostolic church, may vary. The part of Judas was to be numbered with the apostles of the Lamb: others were to occupy the parts of bishops, deacons, private brethren, &c.; but, when expelled, the part assigned to them severally when in the church, is taken from them and occupied by others; as in the case of Judas, "Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein, and his bishopric let another take."

From the foregoing considerations we conclude that the admonition of the text is designed to show that no church can be regarded as of the New Jerusalem order where "the words of the book of this prophecy" are not observed without addition or diminution, and that a church scripturally entitled to this distinction will expel from her communion and from the register of orderly members all who depart from the doctrine and order of the gospel; and in the execution of the discipline of the house of God, the names and privileges of such delinquents will be taken from them, and they shall be deprived of all the privileges of an orderly church of our Lord Jesus Christ.

It may be urged that many churches where the doctrine and order of the gospel were once maintained, do now tolerate departures from the divine rule, and still are regarded as apostolic. But by whom are they so regarded? They may claim to be apostolic, and their claim may be admitted by a majority of those who profess to be of the household of faith; but it is written, "God will judge his people!" The same rule which applies to individuals in this case will also apply to churches. Individuals may have a name to live while they are dead; may be held as members when there is no vital union connecting them with the family of God; and so churches, when they depart from the laws of Christ, and join with the alien, are spued out of the mouth of the King of Zion. The old Jerusalem stood for a short time after God had taken his people out of it, but it stood desolate. So there are instances, like that of the church of Rome, where once the gospel in its beauty, order, ordinances and effects, prevailed; but what have they come to be since God has taken his people from among them! Where is now the church of Rome? The saints to whom Paul wrote, and addressed as the church at Rome, are now with other glorified spirits in the world of glory, and the name is borne by those who know not God!

Although many may, and thousands do, fall from works, for want of grace, none ever did, ever will or ever can fall from grace for the want of works. Grace cannot fail to produce a disposition in those on whom it is bestowed, to live soberly, righteously and godly in this world. The absence of grace may be made apparent by evil works, and the existence of grace in the heart may be made manifest by fruits which are unto holiness; but works cannot produce grace, nor sin destroy it. Where it exists, it invariably reigns through righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1848.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.

THE season for exchanging presents draws near, and we would again call the attention of our readers to our list of publications advertised on last page, and ask that they read them and see if they cannot select therefrom a useful, instructing and lasting present for their friend or brother.

WE HAVE

ON our subscription list several hundred new subscribers sent on about a year ago by old subscribers at one dollar for the first year; and as their time will expire with the end of this year, we request all old subscribers who sent new ones to ascertain whether they wish their paper continued another year at the regular rate of two dollars, or wish it discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for, and let us know before January 1st, 1895. We send the first year on trial at one dollar, but cannot afford to continue the paper at that rate. As most of our old subscribers know, we are in the habit of continuing the paper after the time paid for expires, unless otherwise ordered. This fact is not generally known by new subscribers, and they are liable to rely on our discontinuing the paper when their time is out unless they renew their subscription. We print plainly on the little pink slip containing their name the date at which their subscription expires, and if they take the paper from the post-office after that time they are liable for the pay, whether they order the paper continued or not. We never intentionally continue the paper to any one longer than they wish to take it, but we cannot adopt the rule of stopping the paper when the time is out without giving offense to most of those whose papers are thus discontinued. We have lost thousands of dollars by thus continuing the paper, but cannot see how it can be avoided without, as we said before, giving offense to many who wish their paper continued. Experience has taught us that many who are sent us at the one dollar rate for the first year are quite indifferent as to whether or not they notify us if they do not care to take the paper after their time is out; and after our continuing it until they become a year or two in arrears they will inform us that they never ordered the paper, and therefore refuse to pay for it. Indeed, our loss from this source is very heavy every year. To protect us from these heavy losses we appeal to our brethren to let us know if the new subscribers they sent us wish their paper discontinued.

While we never force an account, we think that it would be well to disabuse the minds of some of our subscribers as to their liability in taking a paper after their time paid for has expired, viz.: If a person takes a paper from the post-office, whether they ever subscribed for it or not, they are liable for the payment of the subscription. Furthermore, if a person becomes in arrears with his subscription, the publisher can continue the paper to him, whether he takes it from the post-office or not, regardless of his ordering it discontinued, until all arrearages are paid. This may at first thought seem a little severe; but when you take into consideration the position of a publisher, the righteousness of such a law is apparent. It is impossible for a publisher to know who wish their paper discontinued unless they inform him; and if he discontinues it without being ordered to do so he gives offense to many who would otherwise have continued their patronage, and his loss thereby becomes heavier than it would be by extending credit to the wrong parties. As for ourselves, we never go beyond a question of honor with our patrons, and only give the law in the case to let our readers know what is considered equity by "Cæsar."

B.

POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

BY a recent arrangement of the post-office department nearly every post-office in the United States is now a money order office for at least five dollars; and as it costs but three cents additional to obtain an order of not more than two dollars and fifty cents, or five cents for one not more than five dollars, or eight cents for one not more than ten dollars, and so on in proportion to amount of order, we request that all remittances be sent us by post-office money-order. You simply give the money you wish to send to your postmaster, and he will give you a money-order for that amount. You will inclose the order which he gives you in your letter to us; and if it should be lost in the mail you can get another one from your postmaster without additional charge. Please be sure to have the order made payable at Middletown, N. Y., and never at New York City, as that place is nearly a hundred miles from our place, and it puts us to considerable extra trouble and expense to get them cashed at the New York City office.

As will be seen from the above, an order for five dollars or less can be obtained cheaper than registering a letter, while an order not exceeding ten dollars costs but the same amount; and remitting by money order is a much safer way than sending by registered letter, as the postal department is not responsible for loss of registered letters, but money orders can be duplicated.

BIBLES OF ALL SIZES.

ON our last page will be found an advertisement of some of the sizes, styles and prices at which we can furnish Bibles. The vast variety of sizes and combinations compiled in Bibles is too great to all be given in our space.

The smaller Bibles mentioned in the advertisement are the ones most in demand, and these we will mail postage paid on receipt of price. The larger or Family Bibles, being too large and heavy to go safely by mail, will be sent by express, at expense of party receiving book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of books we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

INDIGENT FUND.

IN calling the attention of our brethren and friends to the necessity of our having assistance in order to be able to continue the SIGNS to those on our indigent list, we wish to emphatically impress on their minds that personally we are not financially profited by their liberality. On the contrary we are, and are willing to be, losers in this matter. The actual cost of supplying the paper to our indigent subscribers always considerably exceeds the total amount of contributions to the fund for that purpose. But were it not for the kindness of brethren and friends in sharing this burden with us we should be obliged to strike from our list many who highly appreciate reading the paper, but who are not able to pay for it.

ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS

RECEIVED from now until the end of this year will be entered on our subscription list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1895. The remainder of this year we will send them free.

We still continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

BOOK NOTICES.

LARGE HYMN BOOK FOR A DOLLAR SIX FOR FOUR DOLLARS AND A HALF

We have had bound in cloth, the same style as the "Editorials" or "Church History," a few hundred of our large type Hymn Books, which we will send post paid at the above prices. These books are especially adapted for aged people, or for pew racks, to be used in churches.

A SMALL ONE FOR SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS, OR SIX FOR THREE DOLLARS.

We also have the small type book bound in cloth, which we will send post paid at prices stated above. These books contain eight hundred pages, and thirteen hundred and eleven carefully selected hymns, together with an index to first line of each hymn.

Cash must always accompany the orders. Address,

G. BEEDE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

PERSONAL.

WE are pained to learn that our dear brother, Elder I. N. Vanmeter, is seriously ill at his home in Macomb, Ill.—ED.

(Continued from page 395.)

feel. But we are the salt of the earth, and therefore the earth would not be seasoned if we were all together here below; but the Lord has promised to be with us. He loves us so much that he laid down his precious life for us, that we through him might live.

This is now October 20th, but I could not do any better were I to write another letter. I have only told you a part of the many blessings which God has given me, and the way he has led me; but now a loneliness, a feeling of sadness, hovers over me, and I am not at all well. I am bowed down in misery; yet through this vale of sin and gloom I see a ray of light, which is enough to strengthen and uphold me with the assurance that there is a bright world beyond.

I will close, for you surely will be weary ere you finish reading this. Love to you and yours, and also give my christian love to sister Bessie. Pray for me when the Lord gives it to you to do so, for I am so sad and lonely. How I do wish I could go to some one, or they come to me. I scarcely feel myself worthy enough to subscribe myself your sister, yet I love you in Christ Jesus my Lord.

Your most unworthy sister,

LIZZIE HIMES.

PINSONFORK, Ky., Dec. 4, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST JESUS:—I have just received and read the SIGNS OF THE TIMES for November 28th, and words fail to express my feelings and gratitude of heart to see the names of our much loved and highly esteemed brethren, Benton Jenkins and F. A. Chick, as editors of the SIGNS. I was much pained in feeling and had many heart throbbings when I learned of the withdrawal of brother Wm. L. Beebe, who served in that capacity so ably, and as much to the mutual comfort and edification of the Lord's children and to God's declarative glory as any one could possibly have done, it seems to me; and I could not reconcile my feelings in that regard, only that God would take care of his own cause, and that there was some one else whom the Lord had already prepared to fill the vacated position, and that we only had to wait till the Lord manifested who it was. So far as I am concerned, I am satisfied, brother Benton, that your steps and the steps of these editors were and are ordered by the Lord; and I feel this morning while writing that I desire to praise the great and exalted name of our God, who is glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders.

When I heard of the withdrawal of brother W. L. Beebe my thoughts at once flew over the wide-spread brotherhood, and it immediately occurred to my mind that brother Chick was the man qualified for the position; and I should have written at once to you, brother Beebe, but I felt too unworthy, weak and sinful to suggest such things to you. As to brother Jenkins, I had thought he already belonged to the office. I am made to rejoice that the Lord our God has not forgotten us, but has remembered us in his mercy. It gives us great encouragement. May the Lord bless and sustain you all as editors and publishers of our highly prized medium of correspondence, the SIGNS OF THE TIMES. As to myself, I am a poor weakling; but I shall, as the Lord will enable me, use my endeavors to aid in securing subscriptions for the SIGNS, and it may be contribute some to its columns if the dear brethren can bear with me.

Yours in much love,

W. J. MAY.

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 7, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN:—As the time has come for me to remit for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES I thought I would try to scribble a line or two to let you know that I am not tired of it, although I have had the great comfort and pleasure of reading it for the last forty-three years, and the last fifteen years I trust the blessed Lord has enabled me to feed heartily on the precious doctrine of the predestination of all things. Truly for many years after I received a hope I was afraid to render unto the one eternal, almighty and everlasting God all that belongs to him; but I trust I have been led to see and believe that he has created all things according to his eternal purpose, and that he created nothing in vain. I cannot see how the purpose of God could have been fulfilled without sin. As dear old John Kent said,

"Sin made the channel for mercy to run,
And all for the lifting of Jesus on high."

I should be glad if brethren Jenkins or Chick would write some on "Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged."

Your brother, I hope,

ROBERT ALEXANDER.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING
THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT
SUBSCRIBERS.

W. E. Frazier, D. C., 1.35, Mrs. T. V. Richardson, Md., 2.—Total, $3.35.

MARRIAGES.

OCT. 24th, 1894, by Elder A. B. Francis, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. Andrew J. Dolby and Miss Lillie A. Messick, both of Sussex Co., Del.

OCT. 24th, 1894, by the same, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Thos. C. James and Miss Emma Tindle, both of Sussex Co., Del.

Nov. 14th, 1894, by the same, at the Old School Baptist meeting-house, Delmar, Del., Mr. Zorah Cordrey and Miss Mamie L. Ellis, both of Sussex Co., Del.

Nov. 28th, at six o'clock p. m., at the house of the bride's brother, Col. Charles H. Banes, 2021 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia, Pa., by Elder Silas H. Durand, Elder Elijah V. White, of Leesburgh, Va., and Miss Margaret B. Banes, of Philadelphia, Pa.

By Elder F. A. Chick, at his residence in Reisterstown, Md., on Thursday evening, Nov. 22d, 1894, Clifton Tansley Ensor and Ada Victoria Ensor, both of Baltimore Co., Md.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Mrs. Mary Gilbert Fellingham died at the house of her son Gilbert, in Verona, Ill., Oct. 8th, 1894. She was born at Heathfield, England, Nov. 16th, 1825, and came to America in 1851. She was baptized and united with the Ebenezer Predestinarian Baptist Church at Verona in June, 1857, and was married the same year to Elder W. J. Fellingham. Her husband died in 1867, leaving her with four young children. She continued to live on the farm until 1890, when she gave up house-keeping, and has since lived with her children. She was a kind, quiet, excellent neighbor, and a humble, consistent church member, resting alone upon the finished work of Christ and salvation by grace. She seemed to come very near the description of a virtuous woman, in Proverbs xxxi. She left all her children and ten grandchildren, with the church, to mourn their loss.

Her funeral was largely attended, all her children being present. Psalm lxxiii. 23, 24, was used as a text; when her body was laid beside the remains of her husband, to await the great resurrection day.

Mary A. Jackson, wife of Drura Jackson, departed this life Oct. 23d, 1894, after a short illness of ten days, with slow fever. Her age was 81 years, 11 months and 12 days.

She was born in Baldwin Co., Ga., Dec. 11th, 1812. She was the mother of eleven children, of whom only four are living, one son and three daughters. In 1838 she was received into the church, and baptized by Elder Elijah Payne. This shows that she was a member fifty-six years. It was not my happy lot to be much acquainted with our beloved sister, but no doubt she was a mother in Israel to many. Being old and feeble, and very nearly blind, it was her lot to be at meeting but very little for the last few years. Her husband died about twelve years ago. Why should we mourn for those who leave evidences behind that they were taught of the Lord? Is not the war over with them? Are they not at rest, where we at times long to be? Believing that she is far better off, and hoping that her God will be ours, let us say,

When the aged has departed,
And the weary is at rest,
May we then with cheerful hearts
Rejoice that it is best.

J. H. BLYTHE.

MONTICELLO, Ark., Nov. 28, 1894.

SISTER Margaret Dunlop departed this life November 16th, 1894, aged 76 years, 6 months and 3 days.

She was born in Scotland. It would seem that she was given a hope in the mercy of God nearly sixty years ago, for she was baptized by one James Thompson, at Argyshire, Scotland, on the 4th of June, 1836. She was a beloved member of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, in the city of New York, having been received by letter from the old South Baptist Church, of New York, Jan. 6th, 1857. During the many years of her membership in the organized church of Christ she was enabled by grace divine to adorn the doctrine of God her Savior, and as a mother in Israel commanded the love and respect of all. She was a fond lover of the gospel of the Son of God, was fully established in the truth, and filled her place in the assemblies of the saints most faithfully. The ministers of Christ were by her held in high esteem, and her love for and fellowship with her kindred in Christ was marked. Two days before the end came she requested the eighth chapter of Romans to be read, and was much melted at the latter part. She said she longed to depart. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. John Evans, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and four grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in the meeting-house on West Thirty-sixth St., on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 18th, conducted by Elder Benton Jenkins, of Middletown, N. Y., on which occasion 1 John iii. 1, 2, was used as a foundation of the remarks made. The interment was in Greenwood Cemetery.—Ed.

G. BEEBE'S SON:—By request of his parents, James A. and Elizabeth Money, I am requested to write a short notice of the death of their son, Clarence M. Money, who died on Sept. 7th last, of typhoid fever, aged about 25 years.

This dread disease first attacked two older brothers of the deceased, the elder of whom was taken first; and this brother never left his bedside and business until he had to take his bed. After about three weeks' illness hemorrhage of the bowels set in, and he breathed his life out like a babe going to sleep. Being in bad health for a short time before, and his efforts in behalf of his brother, made him a fit subject for a fatal termination of this malady. All the nursing that loving hands could tender and medical skill could devise were of no avail.

While not a professor of religion, his life and character made him a host of friends and not a single enemy; and at his funeral, preached by Elder Sawin, of Kentucky, and at his grave, some distance from his residence, there was an attendance that I never before witnessed at a country burial. His parents are Old Baptists, well known in their vicinity; and his devotion to them, being their main stay for several years on the farm, prevented any intention on his part to cause them pain by professing any other faith. As to his private religious opinions I never knew; but I believe that his acts and conduct through life, and the fearlessness and serenity of his emotions when nearing death, are bright evidences that our loss is his eternal gain. May we who are left enter the portals of eternal rest as peacefully as he.

A BROTHER.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 2, 1894.

Margaret Smith, the subject of this notice, was born in Wilson Co., Tenn., June 9th, 1814, and died Oct. 31st, 1894.

She was the daughter of Wm. and Margaret Baird, and while young emigrated with her parents to Illinois, where she subsequently married Wm. Smith, and removed to Iowa, locating at Fremont, Mahaska Co., where she resided continuously until her death. Her husband died more than thirty years ago, leaving her with a family of nine children, of whom four sons and four daughters survive her. She united with the Primitive Baptist Church of Cedar Creek, in Wapello Co., nearly forty years ago, of which she remained a consistent and beloved member to the time of her death; and although she lived about eleven miles distant from the church, she was seldom absent unless detained by sickness. She was a tender, faithful, loving mother, a kind neighbor and friend, ever having a word of good cheer and encouragement for all, and a consistent and humble follower of her Lord, dying as she had lived, in implicit confidence and faith of a complete and finished work of a crucified and risen Redeemer.

A token of love and esteem by all her old neighbors and friends was manifested in the large assemblage that met to pay a last tribute of respect to this old mother in Israel. The writer conducted a brief funeral service at her late home, in accordance with her request, and endeavored to minister a word of comfort and consolation to the relatives and friends; after which the remains were deposited in the grave to await the summons that shall awaken all the sleeping nations of earth.

M. W. BYRAM.

FREMONT, Iowa.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE
TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c. The above described book of 719 pages 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY

OF THE
UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, N. Y.

BUNYAN'S
PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,

And a Complete Account of the Life of John Bunyan, written by himself. To which is added the Celebrated Poem, entitled "The Little Pilgrim."

The work is printed from clear, new type, and comprised in one Octavo volume of 548 LARGE PAGES. It is splendidly embellished with about 130 fine engravings; including a steel plate portrait of the author and 16 engravings in tints.

Bound in Fine Satin Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book. Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,
AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK,

To whom all letters should be addressed, and
money orders made payable.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, Middletown, N. Y. F. A. CHICK, Reisterstown, Md.

B. L. BEEBE, Middletown, N. Y.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

For the convenience of our brethren and friends we have made arrangements by which we can send them Bibles at as reasonable rates as they can be purchased at the book store throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m Is. 53. 9. n ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX. 1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.	Ps. 22. 22. Matt. 23. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.
		18 "Mary Magdalene came and told

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

These large Bibles are too heavy to go safely by mail, and therefore will be sent by express at expense of party receiving the book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of book we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

(BEEBE'S COLLECTION.)

These books contain 800 pages and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth Binding, single copy, 75c; half dozen, $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, Full Gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy, or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth Binding.....	$1 00
Cloth Binding, half-dozen.....	4 50
Blue, Marbled Edge.....	1 50
Blue, Gilt Edge.....	2 00
Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt.....	2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books, postage paid, to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....	$ 05
Twelve copies.....	50
Thirty copies.....	1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"
FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES,

Contain all the Editorial articles written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume, $2.00, or both first and second volumes ordered at the same time and to the same address, $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3.00, formerly $4.50. Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged), $3.50, formerly $5.00.

G. BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD,"

By Silas H. Durand. 400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00 Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1894.

NO. 51.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PATTONSVILLE, Va., Nov. 19, 1894.

MY DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:

—It has been on my mind for some time to write a few lines and suggest a few thoughts on the subject of the atonement. It will not be my object to define the word atonement as given in our dictionaries, but to give its meaning and application as used in the Bible. It seems to me that the so-called religious denominations of the present day are under a great mistake as to the atonement of Jesus as revealed in the Scriptures. It is the general belief of religionists that the atonement simply made the way of salvation possible, but accomplished nothing definitely; that the salvation of every individual depends upon his own will, or "free moral agency," as they call it. If this be the doctrine of the Bible, then there never will nor can be an individual saved; for man's will is enmity against God, is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Paul says, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." He here teaches that we are first under the dominion of the law of sin and death. Now, as long as we are under the dominion of the law of sin and death, are not our natures, desires, and even our thoughts, enmity against God, not subject to his law, neither indeed can be? How are we delivered from this state of death? Paul says, by the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and not by our own will; because our will is averse to God. Adam failed to keep God's holy law. How can we expect man to keep it to-day, when he is surrounded by all corrupting influences of the world, the flesh and the devil? I would ask those who believe in a general atonement, In what sense did Christ shed his blood in order to make the way of salvation possible to every individual? Christ must evidently have known all his people at the time of his crucifixion; that is, all the members of his body; and if he did, does it look reasonable that he would shed his blood for any others, knowing at the time that they would not be saved? Such a thing would look foolish enough for man to do, and would look unreasonable for God to do such a thing. Christ certainly must have accomplished all that his Father required of him in his life, death and resurrection. If we can find out what that is, we shall have found out the whole secret of the atonement. The angel said to Joseph, "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." And Jesus said, when he was about to be offered up, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." What was the work? To "save his people from their sins." Did he do that? He says he did. Men may say that he did not, but that he only made the way possible for man to save himself, or to refuse to be saved. Which shall we believe, God or men? As for me, I will believe God. Jesus says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." Whom did the Father give to the Son? Did he give the whole world to him? If he did, Jesus says they will all come to him, and he will in no wise cast them out; hence they would all be saved. Again, Jesus says, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." What was that will? He says, "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." Was the Father's will accomplished in Christ? Christ says, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." Then, if he has finished the work, he evidently saved all that the Father gave him. Again, he says, "Every one therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." It is written in the prophets, "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children." If anyone will read and examine these Scriptures impartially, and compare them with other Scriptures of the same nature, they certainly must be convinced that a universal atonement is not the doctrine of Christ and his apostles. Jesus says, "The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." He certainly did not mean that the whole world of mankind should hear the voice of the Son of God; because he says, "Every one therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." "And they that hear shall live." If the "dead" in this Scripture means everybody, then every person will hear the voice of the Son of God and live. How contradictory such a sentiment would be to the plain word of God. We are forced to come to one of two decisions, that man is totally depraved or dead, or that he is partially quickened. If he is totally depraved or dead, there is no power in heaven or earth that can give him life, save God, through Christ Jesus. If partially quickened, then Christ and his apostles were certainly mistaken in the plan of salvation. Can a man be partially quickened? He cannot. Yet this is the theory taught by a great many at the present day. If a man is dead naturally, he knows nothing. If God quickens him, he puts life into him, and he becomes a living soul. If a man is dead spiritually, he has no knowledge of spiritual things; but if quickened, God has breathed into him spiritual life, and that life is everlasting life.

Paul says, "If it be by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then it is no more grace; otherwise is work no more work." Man is totally dead in sins, and unless quickened by the grace of God he must forever remain in that dead state. Paul says, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." Paul not only says that they were dead before they were quickened, but he goes on and proves conclusively that they had no knowledge of spiritual things, "and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ." If they were not totally dead, they would not need to be quickened, but that imaginary spark of divine grace would only have to be fed and nourished in order to grow up to a perfect man in Christ. But such a theory cannot be sustained by the word of God. Jesus says, "As the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." That is, as the Father quickens a man naturally dead, even so (that is, in the same manner) the Son quickens one spiritually dead. How does God quicken a man naturally dead? By putting life in him. How does Christ quicken a dead sinner? In the same way that God quickens a man naturally dead; that is, by putting life into him; and that life is everlasting life. Paul says, "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." So we see that the one state of man is death, while the other state is life and peace. Thus we conclude that a man in his natural state is totally depraved, and is incapable of doing anything that would bring about his eternal salvation; neither can he bring about his eternal salvation after he is quickened by the grace of God, for the eternal salvation of an individual is the work of the Lord from first to last. The Scriptures teach that Christ Jesus came into the world to accomplish a definite work, and that work was the eternal salvation of all the elect of God, or the church, the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he said to his Father, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." That work was to "save his people from their sins;" not to make it possible that they might be saved, but to save them. The Scriptures declare that Christ is exalted a Prince and a Savior, to give (not to offer) repentance unto Israel and the forgiveness of sins. It would be unreasonable to say that God offers salvation to the dead sinner. Salvation in the Scriptures means the giving of life to the dead. How can you offer a thing to a dead man? God can give life; that is, he can quicken the dead. But he does not give the dead the choice of life and death. But some will say that there is life enough in the dead sinner to choose eternal salvation. If there is, then the sinner is not dead, and Paul's arguments are all false. The sinner must be quickened unto a new life before he can hear the gospel; and as no being save God can give life, it follows that it is all the work of the Lord, independent of anything that man can do. God says in his covenant with his people, "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." What part has God assigned to man in this work? When does God put his laws into the minds and write them in the hearts of his people? When they are regenerated and born again. If God will put his laws into their minds and write them in their hearts, he certainly will not consult man's will in the matter; for he says he will do it. He further says in that covenant, "And they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest." That is, all his chosen people shall know him for it is written in the prophets, "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children." Jesus says, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me." All who believe these Scriptures must believe that the eternal covenant is as immutable as the eternal God himself; that all God's people were included in this immutable covenant before the foundation of the world; that their eternal salvation was complete in the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews says, "Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." That is, Christ by his death and resurrection has forever delivered his people from the bondage of sin and all its penalties. If this work of redemption was accomplished in the death of Christ, was it left for the creature to decide whether he would be redeemed or not? It could not possibly have been left to the creature, because a very small portion of the human race lived during the days of the Redeemer. We believe that every person that ever has been saved, or that ever will be saved, was redeemed by the blood of Christ, in his death and resurrection. But some say that redemption only made the way possible, and that now it is left to man's choice whether he will be saved or not. But how can one eternally redeem a thing, and yet leave it conditional whether that thing will be redeemed or not? Then how could Christ redeem the church with his own blood, and set her free from sin and all its penalties, and yet leave it conditional with her whether she would accept that redemption or not? Paul could not possibly have meant that Christ obtained eternal redemption for the whole world, because the whole world cannot possibly be saved. "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified;" and thus implying that he perfected none others. If this does not teach the finished, complete, eternal salvation of every heir of God, language cannot teach anything.

Let us examine Paul's testimony a little farther. He says, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Adam represented the whole human race, and when he fell the whole human race fell in him; that is, all that were in Adam fell. Even so all that are in Christ shall be made alive. But who are in Christ? Some say that the whole human family were in him, and that all in some degree are made alive by him. But is that what Paul means to convey by the above language? No. Paul answers the question himself. He says, "But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Then we have no promise of anyone being made alive except those who belong to Christ. Now let us examine the Scriptures a little farther, and try to find out who does belong to Christ. Paul says that Adam "is the figure of him that was to come." When Adam was created, his wife was created in him. Adam's wife sinned and went into the transgression. Even so Christ's wife sinned and went into the transgression. Adam's wife being separated from him, for the great love he had for her he followed her into the transgression. So, inasmuch as Christ's bride had sinned, he likewise came under the law where she was, partook of the same flesh and blood, in order that he might redeem her from under the law. How could Christ give himself for the church, unless he knew who the church was at the time of his death? And if he knew who would compose the church at the time of his death, why would he give himself for any others? The apostle says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." Can anyone say that the apostle meant the whole world when he said that Christ gave himself for the church, that he might sanctify and cleanse it, and present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing? If Christ did not mean any others except the church, in what sense could he have died for any others? The apostle said to the elders of the church at Ephesus, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."

Many other passages of Scripture could be produced to prove that Christ came to earth to redeem his bride only, and to forever set her free from sin and all the penalties thereof. We read in Hosea ii. 19, 20, where God is speaking to the church, "I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord." He says he will betroth the church unto himself forever. Does God consult the will of any member of his church? Is it even left to her to yield obedience to his commands, in order to become his bride, or did he choose her independent of her will, or anything she could do? He certainly did not consult anyone in this matter; because this was all settled before the church had any manifest existence in the world. Hence Isaiah says, "The redeemed of the Lord shall walk there. And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrowing and sighing shall flee away." The prophet spoke this hundreds of years before Christ came into the world; and he spoke of it as all being in the past at that time. The apostle Peter said, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." How could Christ Jesus have redeemed the church unless he knew every member of that body, and exactly the amount of debt she owed? If he possessed such knowledge as this, would it be reasonable to suppose that he would have shed his blood for any save the members of his own body? And if he did not possess such knowledge he is not an all-wise God. John says, "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him [the beast], whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain, from the foundation of the world." This Scripture teaches, as plainly as language can teach anything, that all God's people had their names written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, and compose the church of Christ, which he redeemed with his own blood upon the tree of the cross, and that the remaining portion of the race of mankind are to worship the beast, which, I think, represents all false theories and religious orders of the world. Hence the only reasonable and Scriptural conclusion is that Christ died for his church only, and that by that death he saved her with an everlasting salvation; and in the dispensation of the fullness of time the God of peace, who brought again our Lord Jesus from the dead, through the blood of the everlasting covenant will make them perfect in every good work, working in them that which is well pleasing in his sight, through our Lord Jesus Christ. We may search the Scriptures through, and we will never find a passage that even intimates that Christ Jesus redeemed any others save the church; and he always speaks of it as composed of a definite number, separate and apart from the world.

"But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering. For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee. And again, I will put my trust in him. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me." We are told in the above Scripture that Jesus "should taste death for every man." In the verses that follow we have an explanation of the "every man;" for the apostle says,

"Both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one." That is, Christ and the church are all of one. Then, when Christ died he tasted death for the sanctified only; "for by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." And Jesus calls them the children which his Father had given him. Does not this plainly show who the children are for whom Christ died? We have the same doctrine taught in the first chapter of Colossians: "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church." "For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him and for him."

We see then in what sense Jesus "by the grace of God should taste death for every man." But he in no wise redeemed every man. If anyone should read this, and still hold to a general atonement, in the sense that Christ redeemed every one of the human family alike, or simply made the way of salvation possible to every person who will accept it, they will please read the following quotations of Scripture, and harmonize them with such a theory. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified."—Rom. viii. 28-30. "Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace. And if by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then it is no more grace; otherwise work is no more work. What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded."—Rom. xi. 5-7. Also read the ninth chapter of Romans. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love; having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will;" and not ours. "In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will."—Eph. i. 3-5, 11. "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ."—1 Peter i. 2. Who were elect? Those to whom Peter was writing. Read the first verse. How were they elected or chosen? Peter says, "unto obedience." Then how was this obedience brought about? By election, and not by any choice of their own. "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."—2 Tim. i. 9. This language carries our mind back to a period before this world or any natural object or being had any natural existence, even before man was created. Where were we at the time this language refers to? Paul says we were in Christ Jesus. How are we saved? According to God's own purpose and grace, given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Then Paul was justified in saying, "Not according to our works;" because we then had no natural existence. Hence we are forced to the conclusion that the salvation of all God's people was secured in Christ Jesus before the world began; and in the dispensation of the fullness of time this great and wonderful plan of salvation was carried out; and all God's children will be called by his grace, justified, glorified, and safely housed in that building not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

ROTEN HURST.

THE HIDDEN LEAVEN.

DEAR BRETHREN BEEBE:—It is with a feeling of reluctance that I take my pen to write a few lines for the SIGNS OF THE TIMES; and I would not now do so if I did not believe that you do not intentionally admit anything to its pages that is unsound in doctrine or in experience, or not of general interest to your readers. Hence I feel sure that if my poor scribble should lack in any or all these essentials, it will find its way to the waste-basket. Therefore, notwithstanding my feeling of reluctance, I will offer a few thoughts upon the parable of the leaven as recorded in Matt. xiii. 33, and also Luke xiii. 20, 21, and trust you not to let it crowd out better matter. To be as brief as possible, I will try to come to the subject without further preamble. I wish to say, however, that I do not think any one of the parables, figures, metaphors or symbols used by our Lord and his apostles were designed to set forth the subject referred to in more than one or two particulars.

The word leaven is used by our Lord in this parable to symbolize the kingdom of God, and the three measures of meal to symbolize the quantity and attributes of the subjects affected by the leaven; but the woman does not seem to be intended to symbolize anything; at least she is not likened to anything in the parable. I am aware of the difficulty that presents itself here, and that is, that the word leaven, if we do not except this case, is always used in the Bible in a "bad sense," or to represent something bad; and why, say some, should we except this instance? My answer would be, because our Lord has done so.

I call to mind now that the word beast is almost always made use of to represent some political or ecclesiastical power that is opposed to God and his people; but there is one exception to this use of the word beast; for in the revelation of Jesus Christ to his servant John the word is used to represent something near to and in sweet harmony with the throne of God and the Lamb.

Another difficulty seems to be to determine in what sense the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God, is used in this parable. Can we not arrive at the truth in this matter by carefully noticing the properties of leaven? Matthew's record is, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven." Luke's record is, "Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God? It is like leaven," &c. This is very plain language, and sets forth to my mind that the kingdom of God is the active agent represented by the leaven. It will now be seen that I understand the kingdom of God, spoken of in this parable, as being that kingdom referred to by our Lord when he said, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation [outward show]; neither shall they say, Lo here! or Lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you," or among you. It is true that this language was in answer to a question of the Pharisees, Jesus' disciples composing a part of the audience; and hence if we admit that Christ was formed within them (the disciples), then truly the kingdom of God was within them, and hence among the Pharisees. The kingdom of grace set up in the hearts of God's people is the kingdom referred to in this parable; and the soul-comforting and God-honoring attributes of the kingdom are righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Rom. xiv. 17.

There are only two properties of leaven that can symbolize this glorious kingdom of grace as set up in the hearts of God's people. First, its enlarging nature. Second, its diffusiveness. First, it enlarges the bulk of the meal. In this it fitly represents the heart which David so much desired, and of which he surely had a measure, but desired more, when he said, "Remove from me the way of lying, and grant me thy law [the law of love] graciously. I have chosen the way of truth; thy judgments have I laid before me. I have stuck unto thy testimonies: O Lord, put me not to shame. I will run in the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt enlarge my heart."—Psa. cxix. 29-32. O what wonders this leaven works in the hearts of God's dear children! O what enlargement of heart! It is so large that it contains love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. I have witnessed so much of the working of this kingdom in the children of the kingdom that it humbles me, and makes me feel willing to subsist on the crumbs of the Master's table. I can attribute the love and forbearance which the dear brethren have exhibited toward me, a poor, vile worm, for lo these almost three score years, to nothing but the effect of this kingdom which is like unto leaven. They have borne with me when I have erred, cautioned me when I have stumbled, and lovingly taken me by the hand when I have fallen, and assisted me to rise again. It is from the effect of it that I am now a paid up subscriber to the SIGNS, our dear old family paper.

I have thus far been speaking of the family in general; but we can also see its effects in the preparation of the different gifts in the church for their places in the church. It caused the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, and it causes all his true and faithful ministers now, to be willing to forego all worldly pleasures and emoluments, and to go out through heat and cold, sunshine and rain, fire and flood, to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ to the dear sheep of the fold. I have no doubt that the faithful servants of to-day are in fellowship with the apostle when he said, "O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged. Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels. Now for a recompense in the same [I speak as unto my children], be ye also enlarged." This kingdom not only works in every member of the body of Christ as individuals, but it also has an enlarging effect upon the church as a body. Isaiah, in prophetic view of the setting up of the gospel church or kingdom, uses this sublime and beautiful language, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." "And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." "Thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou shalt see [together] and flow together, and thine heart shall fear and be enlarged."

Secondly, leaven is very diffusive in its nature. It effects the whole lump, all the three measures of meal, and every particle of it. I must be brief here, as I have already anticipated this part of the subject in what I have said. It is said that the leaven was hid, put out of sight, in the three measures of meal, until all were leavened. Very diffusive truly, and wonderful in its symbolic meaning. The number three is used in the Scriptures to represent a fullness or completeness; as, "the fullness of the Godhead," "the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost;" the fullness of the record or testimony in heaven. The complete fullness of the witness in earth, the Spirit, the water and the blood; and these three agree in one. The other three are one. The embodiment of the faith of God's elect is also represented numerically thus, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." I conclude, from this use of the number three, that it was used in this case to set forth more particularly the fullness or completeness of the lump or quantity leavened, rather than any distinct attributes of the lump or measures affected. But, as before intimated, as the three measures represent the whole body of Christ, and every member in particular, they may also set forth the three fold nature of the lump, as body, soul and spirit. This is what Paul seems to refer to, after giving the brethren such a pathetic exhortation, as only a father could give, with regard to how they should conduct themselves, and closes with this benediction, "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." O! my soul, what a sublime, what a glorious mystery, what a precious secret, which none possess but those who fear God; and they cannot reveal it; human language is too weak to express it. It is the white stone with the new name, which no man knoweth but he that receiveth it. O what joy to know that we are of God, to know that the Son of God is come, and that he hath given us an understanding, that we might know him that is true, even his Son Jesus Christ. "This is the true God and eternal life," who "hath wrought all our works in us," and who works in us to will and to do of his own good pleasure. This is the eternal life given us in Christ before the world began, with power also given him over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as the Father hath given him. Eternal life given by him, Christ in you the hope of glory, the Spirit of Christ which is in us, and the kingdom of God is within you, are all expressions meaning the same thing, and all have the effect symbolized by leaven in its diffusive and expanding qualities, hid or concealed in three measures of meal. We can see the effect of it in others, and admire it, and sometimes feel it in our own poor hearts, and rejoice in it with joy unspeakable. We know but little of its mysteries; but this we do know, that "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." So may it be. Amen.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

A SUBSCRIBER.

PINSONFORK, Ky., Nov. 28, 1894.

G. BEEBE'S SON—ESTEEMED BROTHER IN CHRIST JESUS:—I have recently learned that there are some precious, able and influential brethren who seem to be somewhat
(Continued on page 407.)

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 19, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
F. A. CHICK, REISTERSTOWN, MD.
B. L. BEEBE, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.*All letters for this paper should be addressed, and money orders made payable as formerly, to*GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

LUKE XV. 7.

DEAR BROTHER CHICK:—Will you please give your views upon Luke xv. 7, especially upon who the ninety and nine are? Your sister in Christ,

JULIA N. TROTT.

WALDRIP, Texas.

REPLY.

WE desire, whenever we can do so, to comply with any requests which are made by our brethren and sisters, but always feel our great incompetence to write or speak as we would like concerning any portion of the word of God. This feeling of inability is such a constant one with us that it does not seem worth while to refer to it very often at least, but sometimes it seems impossible to avoid doing so. We also realize that a whole page of apologies will not make what we may write any better worth reading. We desire also to say that we have no doubt that very often those who prefer such requests are better prepared to answer them to edification than we are ourselves; still it is our duty and our right to present such views as we have, and leave them to the judgment of our correspondents and the other readers of the SIGNS. We feel especially willing to try to comply with the request of our aged sister Trott, because she is almost entirely cut off from association with her brethren, except by interchange of letters. Without further preface we will try to write concerning the Scripture proposed by our sister.

It reads as follows, "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance." Before speaking particularly of this Scripture we wish to refer to similar expressions of the Savior in other places. One is in Luke v. 29-32. The language there was spoken under very similar circumstances to those which gave rise to the words of the text referred to by sister Trott. Also in verse ten of this fifteenth chapter the same thought is repeated. Matthew xviii. 13 presents the same thought in somewhat different language. Besides, there are several similar expressions of the word like these, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance;" and, "The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." These Scriptures, it seems to us, all teach the same general truth as is presented in the words to which attention is called by our sister.

These words are the conclusion of the parable of the lost sheep, and, as the word "likewise" in the text shows, were intended to set forth just what the parable was meant to teach. Many lessons might be drawn from the various parts of this parable, but these words contain the one certain lesson which the Savior had in view. Also, the first and second verses of this chapter set forth what was the immediate occasion of this parable, and serve to limit its meaning, and show to whom it was addressed, and its design. We cannot feel at liberty to seek out meanings for the parable beyond what its immediate connection will justify. The first two verses of the chapter are the text, so to speak, the next four verses are the sermon upon this text, and verse seven contains the application of the sermon.

The first two verses read as follows, "Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them. And he spake this parable unto them." Unto whom? Beyond question unto the Pharisees and scribes who had found fault with him. Let us consider the whole matter for a little time. He had been preaching to the people who chose to hear him, as recorded in the preceding chapter. The Pharisees and scribes heard him, but simply as a matter of idle curiosity, or, when he said anything humbling to their religious pride, with enmity and reproaches. There was nothing in Jesus nor in his teaching to draw the self-righteous to him. His words to them were always sharp words of rebuke. His doctrine was such as cut off all their good works, whether in ceremonials or in morals. There was nothing in Jesus or his teaching, nothing in the whole temper and tone of his life, that could be pleasing to men who felt and thought as they did. Not only then, but now also, the man who thanks God that he is better than publicans and sinners has no use for Christ; and Christ has in his kingdom no use for them. The self-righteous man, as long as he is self-righteous, can never have any use for Christ. Such an one and the blessed Lord are as far asunder as darkness is from light. The Christ who would suit such as they is not the Christ of the Bible—is not a Savior at all. These same Pharisees were hoping for the coming of the long-expected Messiah, and at the first they had seemed to hope that Jesus might be he for whom they were looking; but they soon found out their mistake. This Jesus was not the one for whom they were looking, but an altogether different manner of man. They were disappointed and angered against him. As they were hoping for a Messiah who should bestow upon them great material glory, they had no patience to hear him when he discoursed of spiritualities, of truth and righteousness, of sin and salvation; and especially were they angered and disgusted when publicans and sinners drew near to hear him, and they at the same time saw no signs of displeasure on his part, but rather a cordial approval.

But publicans and sinners drew near to hear him. That which repelled the one drew the other class nearer to him. There must have been something in his doctrine and in the manner of his teaching which attracted these classes of men, who were so obnoxious to the Pharisees. Jesus upon one occasion told the Pharisees and scribes that publicans and harlots went into the kingdom of God before them. There is something in the doctrine of God our Savior which causes it to be more abhorrent to the Pharisee than it is to the publican and sinner. To condemn the sins of men does not begin to arouse their anger to the extent that it is aroused when their self-righteousness is condemned. Men may simply turn away carelessly when their sins are condemned, but they will hate the man who attacks their fancied goodness. The man who to-day thanks God that he ever "started on the road," that he has "chosen the Lord," who says that he is determined to persevere and to hold out faithful to the end, is thanking God that he is not as other men are, and is saying in spirit that he has no need of Christ. To such an one the doctrine of the cross is hateful, and the atonement has no charms; and when the doctrine of Christ is preached, excluding as it does his own merit, he cannot bear it. But to the publican and sinner such blessed news comes as the power of God unto salvation; and these are gladly compelled to draw near to hear it. There is something in the doctrine of Christ that suits poor sinners; but the Christ who receives sinners, and eats with sinners, and saves sinners, is incomprehensible to the Pharisee, and his words have no charms for them. As it was then, so it is now; the chief objection of the religious world to the doctrine of grace is that it saves sinners. We ought, they say, to preach a doctrine that puts a premium upon goodness, but instead our doctrine encourages badness. When publicans and sinners come near and rejoice in salvation by grace, Pharisees still find fault. This cannot be the true Christ nor the true doctrine, they say, because sinners are saved by it, and not good people. Human nature has not changed. Men think and feel to-day as they did in the days of the Savior's flesh; therefore men are still self-righteous, and the doctrine that saves sinners is hated of Pharisees as much now as it was then.

Now, to those Pharisees and scribes who murmured he spake the parable of the lost sheep which follows.

Also, we would here say that the parable of the lost piece of money and the parable of the prodigal son, which immediately follow, were aimed in the same direction. All of them were uttered upon the same occasion, and all set forth in substance the same thing. The parable of the lost sheep called up to their minds a familiar illustration. It was, they knew, true to the life. It presented what pity and self-interest would cause any man to do. It would be unaccountable if a man would not leave the ninety and nine safely-folded sheep to seek after the lost one. They all knew this. If a shepherd loved his sheep he would not let any perish among them. The one thing that all men would do in such a case would be to leave the flock, which were safe and warm and fed, and seek to find the lost one. We need not enlarge upon this, for all who read will at once admit its truth. They to whom Jesus spoke were compelled to admit it.

Now, we wish to say that this whole parable would be meaningless, under the circumstances which led to its utterance, unless the one lost sheep means the publican and sinner, while the ninety and nine sheep mean the Pharisee and scribe; and so in the seventh verse, to which sister Trott called our attention, the one sinner refers to the publicans and sinners of the first verse, while the ninety and nine just persons mean the Pharisees and scribes of the second verse. The parable makes no mention of Jew and Gentile, and we can see no reference to them, nor to the different ground which they occupy; but the parable does treat of the self-righteous and of the sinner, whether they both be Jews or both be Gentiles, or whether one is of one race and the other of another. Let us keep this in mind. This parable, like those which in the same chapter follow it, is meant to condemn those who found fault with him for eating with publicans and sinners. He shows that they would be more merciful to a sheep than they would be to a poor, penitent, returning sinner. He condemns them out of their own mouth. Is not a sinner of more value than a sheep? If they themselves would take such pains to find and bring back a wandering sheep, how much more should he seek out his flock when they are scattered and bring them home.

Jesus would say to them, "It is true that publicans and sinners draw near, and I receive them; but why should you find fault? These are my sheep, my straying sheep; why should you be grieved and angry when they return? Should you not rather rejoice that one who has strayed has returned to the fold of the Master? As you would rejoice over your one restored sheep, brought back to you, so before God there is rejoicing to see a poor sinner come home."

The ninety and nine just persons in the parable represent the Pharisees and scribes. Not that they were just, but they thought themselves so; and Jesus takes them on their own ground. Granting that they were holy and just and good, as they claimed to be, yet still they ought to be glad that these sinful, unholy publicans and sinners were manifesting repentance and coming to the fold. What a thoroughly fleshly, selfish spirit they were manifesting! "We who are righteous ought to have all that is good. Jesus should not receive such vile persons as these." Thus in their vainglorying because they were righteous they showed that they did not possess even the first principles of true righteousness. Love and humility were both wanting in them; and without love and humility there is no true religion. To sum the matter all up, the Pharisees and scribes were not really just, but they thought themselves so, and despised others; and in this parable Jesus takes them upon their own ground, and shows how contrary, even to reason and our ordinary habits of feeling and life, their course was in objecting to his receiving and eating with sinners. If they were indeed the just persons they thought themselves to be, should they not rejoice that some crumbs of mercy should be extended to those who were yet so much worse off than they were?

This seems to us to be the substance of what these words mean, as spoken to the Pharisees and scribes then; but the question arises now, Have these words no meaning now, no lesson for us? Is this parable a presentation simply of a sort of self-righteousness which then existed, but which earth does not harbor now; or have we to-day need to learn and heed the lessons of this parable? Is there no such thing as trusting in ourselves that we are righteous and despising others to-day? Are believers, children of God, themselves free from the same principle that is here rebuked? It seems to us that all who have made a profession of faith in Christ have need to watch unto prayer, lest they also should enter into temptation—this temptation to think that if our walk is orderly we are therefore superior to those who have erred. Brethren, there is a pharisaical spirit in us all that needs to be watched all the time. This spirit is always envious when another is praised or exalted in any way. The true root of envy and jealousy in our hearts is always that we judge ourselves to be holier and wiser and better and more spiritual than others. O for more and more of the spirit of meekness and littleness among us! Then shall we rejoice when others are received and blessed and exalted.

We leave these thoughts, We trust that our sister and others who may read what is here written may find some food for reflection in them, and that we have not here perverted the truth.

C.

MATTHEW XXIV. 28.

I WOULD like to have Elder Jenkins' views on Matt. xxiv. 28, as the world is full of carcasses. Yours truly,

T. J. BALDWIN.

PACIFIC CITY, Iowa, Dec. 3, 1894.

R E P L Y .

While we have no special light upon the portion of Scripture on which our correspondent calls for our views, yet we cannot truthfully say that we have had no thoughts in connection with the words. Such thoughts as we have had, and such as may be given us while writing, he, and the readers of the SIGNS in general, are welcome to.

In the third verse of this chapter we are told that as Jesus sat upon the mount of Olives, his disciples came unto him privately, and asked him to tell them when the destruction of that wonderful temple in Jerusalem should take place, what the sign of his coming should be, and of the end of the world. In answer to their inquiries, Jesus said to them, "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." But the exact day and hour was not known by any man, nor to the angels of heaven, but by the Father only. It should be as the days before the flood, when the people were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, when suddenly, at a time they were not expecting, the flood came and took them all away, except Noah and those who were in the ark with him. "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." The wrath of God was to be poured out upon that Jerusalem which had killed the prophets, and stoned them which were sent unto them, when they should have filled up the measure of their iniquities in the rejection and crucifixion of Jesus. Said Jesus unto that wicked generation, "Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes; and some of them ye shall scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city; that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, all these things shall come upon this generation." But sudden as the destruction of that city and temple should be, it was not to take place until certain signs should be given by the God of heaven, which Jesus commanded his disciples to diligently look for, and when they should see them, hasten their departure from the place devoted to destruction, lest they be involved in the terrible calamities to be visited upon the ungodly inhabitants, which calamities should be exceeded by those experienced by Sodom and Gomorrah, Tyre and Sidon. Of course these were but temporal judgments, in which even the disciples of Jesus might and would be involved, should they not watch for and heed the signs which were to precede the calamities. The same is declared to be true of the Lord's people who shall be found in Babylon when God shall pour out the plagues upon her. "And I heard a voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities."—Rev. xviii. 4, 5.

When the iniquities of the Jerusalem that had killed the prophets of God, and finally had killed the Son of God, had been filled up, when God ceased to regard them as his people, when he withdrew his residence from them, truly was their house left unto them desolate, and they were as a carcass, or a body without life. What greater desolation can possibly be conceived of than the desolation of a place where the God of heaven had formerly chosen and maintained his residence, but from which he has now forever withdrawn himself? No more would God gather the children of that Jerusalem, for his covenant with them was at an end. "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate," said Jesus.

In the terrible judgments of God which fell upon that Jerusalem, when, according to the declaration of Jesus, not one stone of their beautiful temple was left upon another, was fulfilled that wonderful prophecy of Zechariah, "Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars. Howl, fir tree; for the cedar is fallen; because the mighty are spoiled. Howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; for the forest of the vintage is come down. There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled: a voice of the roaring of young lions; for the pride of Jordan is spoiled." "For I will no more pity the the inhabitants of the land, saith the Lord; but, lo, I will deliver the men every one into his neighbor's hand, and into the hand of his king; and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them." "Then said I, I will not feed you; that that dieth, let it die; and that which is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of another. And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people. And it was broken in that day." The covenant between God and that fleshly, typical people being thus broken, their generations having come to an end, they are represented as a body without life, a carcass, and the eagles or vultures (the Roman armies under Titus) are gathered together to devour it. The history of the world does not furnish a parallel to the calamities and miseries of that forsaken people at the time of their visitation by the judgments of God. Jesus himself wept over the city at the thought of their calamities. They had said to Pilate when Jesus was accused before him, "His blood be on us, and on our children." At Jerusalem alone it is said that over one million of the Jews during the siege perished by the sword, famine and pestilence. They ate the flesh of one another; and even the women are said to have broiled their infants, and to have eaten them. Truly the blood of the murdered Jesus was on them, and also on their children. Away from God, and God away from them, truly is their house desolate, and they a carcass, a body without life, and there the eagles were gathered together to devour.

This now rejected, dead people, who had formerly existed as a type of the spiritual Israel of God, the Jerusalem which is above the law, are henceforth to be looked upon as a type of "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth," in whom "was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth."—Rev. xviii. 24. And as God put it into the hearts of the Romans to fulfill his will in gathering together to destroy the carcass, as mentioned in Matthew xxiv. 28, so shall he put it into the hearts of men to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled. "These shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire."—Rev. xvii. 16, 17. Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth, with all her children, which "is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird," the wine of the wrath of whose fornication all nations have drank, shall finally with violence be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. "Her plagues shall come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord God, who judgeth her." She is but a carcass, a body without spiritual life. How unlike the body of Christ, the church, of which Christ is the life, and which is the only living spiritual body of worshipers to be found upon earth. As our correspondent suggests, the world is full of carcasses, religious bodies without spiritual life, disowned by Jesus Christ, and feeding upon their own flesh, depending for salvation upon the works of their flesh. As a judgment upon them God has declared that he will feed them with their own flesh, "and they shall be drunken with their own blood, as with sweet wine."—Isaiah xlix. 26. Those who are in love with themselves, who have more confidence in their own works than in what Jesus has done, who have no appetite for spiritual things, but who prefer to live upon the "dead works" of the law, who seek for the dead carcass of antichrist, are like the eagles or vultures in nature, which gather together wherever the carcass is found, because their appetites can only be satisfied while feasting upon such dead and putrid matter. How different from this lifeless body is the church of Jesus Christ, who are the circumcision which worship God in the spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. These can be satisfied only with the provision of God's house. These feed not upon their own flesh, their own doings, but live by faith upon the Son of God, who loved them, and gave himself for them. To them his flesh is meat indeed, and his blood is drink indeed. They feed upon him who was dead, but is alive forevermore, and has the keys of hell and of death. Said this living Jesus, who lives in all the members of his body, "I am the bread of life." "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood dwelleth in me, and I in him. As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me." The living, spiritual people of God are the only ones who do or can live upon the living Jesus, and find in him all that their capacious souls can wish or desire. In living alone by faith upon Jesus, upon what he has accomplished by his sufferings, death and resurrection, they eat his flesh and drink his blood, and thereby have the evidence that Jesus dwells in them, and are sealed as the heirs of heaven and of immortal glory. Where the living body or church of Jesus is, there they desire to be gathered together, to speak of his glory and talk of his power, and in sweet harmony sing, "Jesus! my God! I know his name!

His name is all my trust;
Nor will he put my soul to shame,
Nor let my hope be lost."

And O how sweetly sounds the charming voice of the risen and living Jesus in their souls, as he says to them, "Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved." How striking the contrast between the gatherings of the religious vultures or eagles of this world, feeding upon carrion, and that feast of the true Israel of God, in the mountain of God's holiness. "And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people [his people in all nations] a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. xxv. 6-9.

J.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN OLD AND NEW SCHOOL BAPTISTS.

NUMBER TWO.

In pursuing this subject, as proposed in our last, we commence our illustration by a brief exhibition of the various views entertained by the parties on the being and perfections of God. Professions of harmony in doctrine and practice are but mockery where antagonistic views are held of the great object of veneration and worship. Christians and pagans, for this among other reasons, cannot worship together. Nor can this difficulty be obviated by a mere profession of christianity, nor even where a mechanical conformity to the practice of ordinances and rites is strictly observed, if the parties differ in the gods they worship, or in their conceptions of and confidence in the God of Israel. In tracing the discrepancy between the Old and New kinds of Baptists in their views of God, we do not intend to examine the doctrines known as Trinitarian, Unitarian, Arian, Socinian, Sebelian, &c., at this time, as it is not on these points that the difference between them consists.

The Old School Baptists, being taught only of God in their knowledge of him, have much more exalted views of his being and perfections than they can have who have only learned a theory in the schools of those who "teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord." So far as our information extends, the Old School Baptists are the only class of professing christians on earth who answer to the provisions of the covenant which God has made with his people under the gospel dispensation, in this particular respect. The New School Baptists differ as widely from us on this point as do the Roman Catholics or the pagans. The gods they profess to worship, according to their faith and practice, may be "found out by searching," and "known" as the sciences of this world are attained, by schools, books, tracts, missionary labors, &c. On the other hand, the Old School Baptists hold that to know God, and

Jesus Christ whom he has sent, is eternal life; that no man by searching can find him out; that he can only be known by revelation, and that he is never revealed to any until they are quickened by the Holy Ghost. In what the Old Baptists know experimentally of the true God, they are affected very differently from those who have learned what they profess to know of him from their doctors of divinity, or rabbis of their theology. The more the Old Baptists know of God, the more deeply do they feel abased before him. In some instances in which he graciously reveals himself to them, they are constrained to cry out, like the prophet, "Wo is me, for I am undone! because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts."—Isa. vi. 5. Like Daniel, and like John, they fall down before him "as dead men." But those who learn the science of modern divinity at the schools, like the proficients in the schools of mythology, the more they learn the greater conceit they have of themselves, the more inflated with pride (which frequently discovers itself in not only their priestly habiliments and gold spectacles, but in the high sounding titles of reverence which they assume, and the strange ambition they discover for the school-boy playthings of A. M., D. D., and whatever is calculated to make the ignorant stare, and the wise man smile.)

We believe that God is immutable, of one mind, and none can turn him, and that his purposes are as unchangeable as his nature, and consequently it is as impossible that he should yield any design or alter any plan as it is for him to cease to be God. In these exalted views of God we are opposed by the New School. They hold that God can be moved by our prayers; hence they appoint concerts of prayer, in which it is arranged for thousands at the same moment to send up their prayers for some particular object that they have agreed to insist upon, in the vain expectation that such prayers will act upon God as steam acts upon a locomotive; hence the quantity, concert, zeal and earnestness of their prayers are relied on by them, rather than the Spirit's work teaching them to pray in harmony with the sovereign and eternal will of the unchanging God.

The Old School Baptists believe that God is omnipotent; that he never failed to accomplish his pleasure for want of ability to execute his will; but the New School believe there are thousands in hell whom God has labored for years to save, by wooing, pleading and knocking at the door of their hearts; that they resisted, until the Lord gave them up, as too obstinate to be subdued. The balance of power is, in their theory, with men; for they represent that God has labored unsuccessfully for ages to convert the world; but this work they have undertaken to do, and feel an assurance that they shall succeed. They will laugh us to scorn if we either tell them that God can, or that men cannot, evangelize the world.

In their revival making operations they talk of dead sinners storming heaven and taking the kingdom of glory by violence, as of a common business transaction. They not only claim to be co-workers with God, but deny that he can work successfully without them and the means they furnish him to work with. How truly is it written that wicked men wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived; for in ancient times the error of their fathers was in thinking that God was altogether such an one as themselves; but now, forsooth, they affirm that God cannot save sinners, but that they save the perishing heathen and christianize the whole world.

Having glanced at some of the many particulars in which the Old and New Baptists differ in their views and testimony of God, we will in our next endeavor to show how widely they differ on the doctrine of Election.

NEW VERNON, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1848.

INDIGENT FUND.

IN calling the attention of our brethren and friends to the necessity of our having assistance in order to be able to continue the SIGNS to those on our indigent list, we wish to emphatically impress on their minds that personally we are not financially profited by their liberality. On the contrary we are, and are willing to be, losers in this matter. The actual cost of supplying the paper to our indigent subscribers always considerably exceeds the total amount of contributions to the fund for that purpose. But were it not for the kindness of brethren and friends in sharing this burden with us we should be obliged to strike from our list many who highly appreciate reading the paper, but who are not able to pay for it.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

(Continued from page 403.)

opposed to associations, and my mind has become so exercised on the subject that I have concluded to write a few lines this evening and send them to you. If you shall deem them worthy you may give them a place in the SIGNS, after making all due corrections.

I shall not at all presume to enter into a discussion of this question, for I am not competent to discuss this very interesting subject; neither do I wish to do so. However I will show my opinion in a very concise way.

We know that associations are either scriptural or unscriptural; and if they are scriptural they are right; but if they are not scriptural they are wrong. I will not assume the prerogative to say that I know they are right, or scriptural; but there is one thing I do know, that I tremble and quake at the thought of able and precious brethren writing and preaching against them; yet I am well aware that our associations oftentimes do things which are unscriptural and wrong; but this is not prima facie evidence that they are unscriptural, nor evidence at all that they are unscriptural and wrong. If so, upon the same principle we would have to do away with our church meetings; for they sometimes do things, in transacting business, which are unscriptural and wrong. These wrong doings do not prove at all that either churches or associations are radically wrong, but have only erred in their transactions of business, which should be avoided as much as possible. We are too weak, sinful and short-sighted to do business perfectly while we are here in this mortal state of existence. I am well aware that if we hold our associations as constituted bodies separate from the church, they are wrong; and I know also that this is sometimes done. And associations sometimes legislate, and infringe upon the internal rights of churches. These are some of their wrong doings, and these things we should solemnly protest against. I look upon an association as being only the church from different places assembled together to inquire after the welfare of Zion; and forasmuch as it is the church associated together from different portions of the country, it is properly an association. The church appoints a three days meeting. Some call them conference meetings, some call them quarterly meetings, and some call them union meetings. We (Mates Creek) call them union meetings. The name is according to the nature. We are commanded in the Scriptures, "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Now, shall we construe this to mean that just the members of one individual church, as a local body, shall assemble themselves together, and not the church from different places to assemble together? "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," &c.—Psa. cxxxiii. Now, if we leave off our associations we know we are forsaking the assembling of ourselves together in that manner. Why not also our union, three days and yearly meetings, and finally and lastly, our church meetings? For it seems obvious to me that the day is fast approaching, and the love of many is waxing cold; that is, the love of duty of many of God's children is waxing cold, and they are forsaking the assembling of themselves together. When we begin to draw back, and to leave off our duties, none but God knows where we will land. It is our love that waxes cold; cold and delinquent as to our duties. God's love knows no change, never waxes cold, but is ever the same. I know in my own experience the more duties I leave off the more I want to leave off, the colder I am, and the less interested I feel for the good cause. So far as has come under my own notice, where churches meet regularly each month, and also have their yearly meetings, associations, &c., the cause of God flourishes, the brethren are warm and alive in the fellowship of the Spirit, and fervent love and charity toward each other abounds. I have been at so many associations, and have met with so many able ministers of the gospel, and heard them so wonderfully proclaim salvation by grace, and have witnessed such an outpouring of the Spirit of God, and such a manifestation of his love, that I was then, and am yet, bound to believe it was good to be there in an associated capacity; hence an association.

It does seem so very plain to me that the Scriptures justify the idea that the church has a right to convene at any time or place, and on any day of the week, or every day of the week if she choose to do so, and to appoint one, two, three or more days of meetings, call them union meetings, yearly meetings, three days meetings, or associations, and conduct them as such, provided they are carried on in a scriptural manner, to the glory of God and the welfare of Zion; and, so far as I have ever experienced, Old Baptist associations are generally to the honor of God, and to the comfort and edification of his people; and that greatly, too; so much so that I am a warm advocate for them.

May God enable us to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together.

W. J. MAY.

INQUIRIES AFTER TRUTH.

WILL Elder Wm. P. Tolley please give his views through the SIGNS upon what is the antitype in the gospel dispensation of which the Jewish Sabbath was the type?

Oblige an earnest inquirer.

J. W. BENSON.

GRIFFON, Md.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

WE HAVE

ON our subscription list several hundred new subscribers sent on about a year ago by old subscribers at one dollar for the first year; and as their time will expire with the end of this year, we request all old subscribers who sent new ones to ascertain whether they wish their paper continued another year at the regular rate of two dollars, or wish it discontinued at the expiration of the time paid for, and let us know before January 1st, 1895. We send the first year on trial at one dollar, but cannot afford to continue the paper at that rate. As most of our old subscribers know, we are in the habit of continuing the paper after the time paid for expires, unless otherwise ordered. This fact is not generally known by new subscribers, and they are liable to rely on our discontinuing the paper when their time is out unless they renew their subscription. We print plainly on the little pink slip containing their name the date at which their subscription expires, and if they take the paper from the post-office after that time they are liable for the pay, whether they order the paper continued or not. We never intentionally continue the paper to any one longer than they wish to take it, but we cannot adopt the rule of stopping the paper when the time is out without giving offense to most of those whose papers are thus discontinued. We have lost thousands of dollars by thus continuing the paper, but cannot see how it can be avoided without, as we said before, giving offense to many who wish their paper continued. Experience has taught us that many who are sent us at the one dollar rate for the first year are quite indifferent as to whether or not they notify us if they do not care to take the paper after their time is out; and after our continuing it until they become a year or two in arrears they will inform us that they never ordered the paper, and therefore refuse to pay for it. Indeed, our loss from this source is very heavy every year. To protect us from these heavy losses we appeal to our brethren to let us know if the new subscribers they sent us wish their paper discontinued.

While we never force an account we think that it would be well to disabuse the minds of some of our subscribers as to their liability in taking a paper after their time paid for has expired, viz.: If a person takes a paper from the post-office, whether they ever subscribed for it or not, they are liable for the payment of the subscription. Furthermore, if a person becomes in arrears with his subscription, the publisher can continue the paper to him, whether he takes it from the post-office or not, regardless of his ordering it discontinued, until all arrearages are paid. This may at first thought seem a little severe; but when you take into consideration the position of a publisher, the righteousness of such a law is apparent. It is impossible for a publisher to know who wish their paper discontinued unless they inform him; and if he discontinues it without being ordered to do so he gives offense to many who would otherwise have continued their patronage, and his loss thereby becomes heavier than it would be by extending credit to the wrong parties. As for ourselves, we never go beyond a question of honor with our patrons, and only give the law in the case to let our readers know what is considered equity by "Cæsar."

ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS

RECEIVED from now until the end of this year will be entered on our subscription list as soon as received, and the paper sent them to the end of 1895. The remainder of this year we will send them free.

We still continue our offer to send two new subscribers, and credit an old subscriber one year, for three dollars; but we cannot afford to send to one new subscriber, and credit an old subscriber one year, for two dollars. Please do not ask us to do it.

Any one who is already a subscriber is authorized to act as agent for us; and we will send the paper for the first year to any new subscribers they may send us at one dollar each, and they are entitled to retain the other dollar for their commission.

Under no circumstances can new subscribers send to us direct and get the paper for themselves for less than the regular rates.

PLEASE BE SURE

IN sending remittances for renewals of subscriptions to give us the same name that the paper is already coming to. If the party is married, and the paper is coming to the wife's name, and we receive a remittance to renew the subscription, and the husband's name is given, we have no means of knowing that it is meant for the subscription in the wife's name; consequently the husband's name is entered on our list, and the paper sent to both parties. Or if the paper is coming in the husband's name, and the renewal is sent in the wife's name, the same thing is likely to occur. It is a good plan to inclose in the letter one of the little pink slips containing the name, taken either from the margin of the paper or from the wrapper in which the paper comes.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.

THE season for exchanging presents draws near, and we would again call the attention of our readers to our list of publications advertised on last page, and ask that they read them and see if they cannot select therefrom a useful, instructing and lasting present for their friend or brother.

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE
(STUDENT'S EDITION)
CONCORDANCE

TO THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,
OR A
DICTIONARY AND ALPHABETICAL
INDEX TO THE BIBLE,

With a Complete Table of Proper Names, with their Meanings in the Original Languages, a Concordance to the Proper Names of the Old and New Testaments, a Concordance to the Apocrypha, and a Compendium of the Holy Scriptures, &c. The above described book of 719 pages 6½x9½ inches, we will mail postage paid for one dollar and fifty cents; or

FOR ONE DOLLAR

we will mail postage paid the same book without the Compendium, &c.

Although the cheaper book is just as good for reference, we would recommend the one dollar and fifty cent book to those who feel that they can afford to pay the extra fifty cents.

Both these books are in good, substantial cloth binding, and every Bible reader should possess a copy. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

PICTORIAL HISTORY

OF THE
UNITED STATES.

By James D. McCabe.

This work has taken rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to inflame the national pride, but a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to the present time. It gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus and the explorations and discoveries of the different nations of Europe are related with graphic power. Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the sources of those noble and, we trust, enduring institutions, which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. Then follows a clear and succinct account of our great Struggle for Independence, and the establishment of the Federal Union—the events of our career from the close of the Revolution to the administration of Harrison.

The work is printed from plain, new type, on fine calendered paper, and comprised in one octavo volume of 960 pages. It is splendidly embellished with nearly 500 fine engravings, embracing battles and other historical scenes, portraits of distinguished men, views of our principal cities, &c., &c.

Bound in Fine Silk Cloth, Plain Edges, $2.00, Post-paid.

G. BEEBE'S SON,

Middletown, N. Y.

THE EVERLASTING TASK FOR ARMINIANS

By Elder William Gadsby, late of Manchester, England. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been scattered throughout England and America, and read with intense interest by the lovers of the truth, and still the demand has increased to such a degree as to induce us to present to the public this edition, which we will send (postage paid by us) to any post-office address in the United States or Canada at the following rates, viz: a single copy for 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00; 25 copies for $2.00; 50 copies for $3.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address,

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

REMINISCENCES AND LETTERS
OF
MARY PARKER.

303 pages, cloth bound, with photograph taken expressly for this book Price $1. Will be sent post paid on receipt of price. Address all orders to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

THE
"SIGNS OF THE TIMES,"

(ESTABLISHED 1832.)

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE,

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY,

AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR,

BY GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,

MIDDLETOWN, ORANGE CO., NEW YORK,

To whom all letters should be addressed, and

money orders made payable.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, Middletown, N. Y. F. A. CHICK, Reisterstown, Md.

B. L. BEEBE, Middletown, N. Y.

BIBLES, ALL SIZES AND PRICES.

For the convenience of our brethren and friends we have made arrangements by which we can send them Bibles at as reasonable rates as they can be purchased at the book store throughout the country.

We will mail on receipt of price the following:

SIZE, 5 X 7 3-4 X 11-2 INCHES.

Word for Word and Page for Page, a Fac-Simile of the Oxford Edition.

With references, Helps and Maps.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE.

Jesus appeareth to Mary		St. JOHN, XX.	and to his disciples.
Anno DOMINI 33.	42 "There laid they Jesus therefore "because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.	16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.	Anno DOMINI 33.
m. Is. 53. 9. n. ver. 31.	CHAPTER XX.	17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to "my brethren, and say unto them, 'I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to "my God, and your God.
	1 Mary cometh to the sepulchre: 3 so do Peter and John, ignorant of the resurrection. 11 Jesus appeareth to Mary Magdalene, 19 and to his disciples. 24 The incredulity, and confession of Thomas. 30 The scripture is sufficient to salvation.	18 "Mary Magdalene came and told	Ps. 22. 22. Matt. 28. 10. Rom. 8. 29. Heb. 2. 11. 1 ch. 16. 28.

STYLE OF BINDING,

No 10	CLOTH, SILK FINISH, limp, gold edges,.....	$1 95
" 11	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, gold edges,.....	2 65
" 13	AMERICAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, gold edges,.....	2 75
" 14	ROUMANIAN SEAL, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges,.....	3 35
" 16	TURKISH LEVANT, limp, extended covers, leather lined, gold edges.....	4 40
" 17	SUPERIOR LEVANT, limp, extended covers, kid lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	5 10
" 18	BEST LEVANT, limp, extended covers, extra calf lined, silk sewed, red under gold edges,.....	6 50

We will send by express, securely packed.

FAMILY BIBLES 11 X 13 IN'S.

Large, Clear Type. Marginal References. Clearly printed on Good

Paper. Beautiful Marriage Certificate and Family Record.

No. 00.	Containing Old and New Testaments, sixteen Full-page illustrations, Marriage Certificate, and Family Record. Imitation Morocco, sprinkled edges.....	$1 75
No. 10.	Containing the Old and New Testaments, Revised New Testament, Concordance, and Psalms in Metre, sixteen Full-page Engravings, Marriage Certificate, and fine Family Record. Arbesque comb edges.....	2 50
No. 11.	Contents same as No. 10. Gilt edges.....	3 00
No. 12.	Apocrypha, Dictionary, and Index additional to contents of No. 10. American Morocco, paneled, gilt title on side, comb edges.....	3 50
No. 13.	Same Bible.—Gilt edges and title.....	4 00
No. 14.	Same Bible.—Arranged for Sixteen Family Portraits. American Morocco, paneled, gilt edges, full gilt sides and back.....	4 50
No. 15.	Contains an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Department of Reference (containing Chronological and other valuable tables), beautiful Marriage Certificate, and family Record. French Morocco, paneled sides, gilt titles on side and back, gilt edges, beveled boards, antique.....	5 00
No. 15½.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, full gilt side and back, gilt edges.....	5 75
No. 40.	Same Bible.—French Morocco, padded sides, round corners, gilt edges. Elegant new design.....	6 00

These large Bibles are too heavy to go safely by mail, and therefore will be sent by express at expense of party receiving the book, or for fifty cents in addition to price of book we will express at book rates prepaid by us, which is much cheaper for long distances.

G. BEEBE'S SON, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

HYMN BOOKS.

(BEEBE'S COLLECTION.)

These books contain 800 pages and 1311 hymns, carefully selected by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, especially for use in the Old School or Primitive Baptist Churches of America. Also an alphabetical index of the first line of each hymn. Our assortment of the small books embraces:

Cloth Binding, single copy, 75c; half dozen, $3.00.

Blue Plain, single copy, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00.

Blue, Gilt Edged, single copy, $1.18; per dozen, $12.00.

First Quality Turkey Morocco, Full Gilt, very handsome, $2.75 single copy or per dozen, $30.00.

LARGE TYPE EDITION.

We also have an enlarged fac-simile of the small books, being about twice the size, in a variety of bindings at the following prices, viz.:

Cloth Binding.....$1 00

Cloth Binding, half-dozen..... 4 50

Blue, Marbled Edge..... 1 50

Blue, Gilt Edge..... 2 00

Imitation Morocco, Full Gilt... 2 50

At the above prices we will mail the books, postage paid, to any part of the United States or Canada.

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

HYMN AND TUNE BOOK

Sixth edition of shape notes and fifth edition of round notes.

FOR USE IN OLD SCHOOL OR PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCHES, COMPILED BY ELDERS S. H. DURAND AND P. G. LESTER.

The hymns and tunes in this book have been very carefully selected and arranged, and are such as are used in our churches in different parts of the country. The book contains 272 pages of print in all, printed on extra heavy, No. 1 book paper well bound in full cloth. Two kinds are printed, round and shape notes. Be careful to name which kind is wanted.

Price per copy, sent by mail, postpaid, $1.10. Price per dozen, sent by express or freight, as may be desired, at the expense of the purchaser, $9.00. Send draft, money order or registered letter to Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa.

BLACK ROCK BAPTIST CONVENTION.

THOSE wishing to procure copies of No 9 of volume 61, containing the Minutes of the proceedings, resolutions drafted, and the address of the brethren at the Black Rock Baptist Convention, September, 1832, at which time the separation (or "split") took place between the Old and New School Baptists, can obtain them from this office at the following prices, viz.:

Single copy.....$ 05

Twelve copies..... 3 35

Thirty copies..... 1 00

Sums less than one dollar may be sent in postage stamps. Address,

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"THE EDITORIALS,"

FIRST AND SECOND VOLUMES,

Contain all the Editorial articles written by the late Elder Gilbert Beebe, and published in the SIGNS OF THE TIMES from its first issue to the sixth number, volume fifteen (1832-1847), together with an alphabetical index of all the subjects and texts of Scripture treated upon.

These books are reduced to the following prices, viz.:

Plain cloth binding, first or second volume, $2.00, or both first and second volumes ordered at the same time and to the same address, $3.00.

Imitation Morocco $3.00, formerly $4.50. Genuine Turkey Morocco (damaged), $3.50, formerly $5.00.

G. BEEBE'S SON.

Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

"MEDITATIONS ON PORTIONS OF THE WORD."

By Silas H. Durand. 400 pages, cloth bound. Price, $1.00 Will be sent (postage paid) to any address on receipt of price. Address orders to Elder Silas H. Durand, Southampton, Bucks Co., Pa., or to the publishers of this paper

Volume 1894

Signs of the Times.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY, AT TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

DEVOTED TO THE OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST CAUSE.

"THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON."

VOL. 62.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1894.

NO. 52.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CHENEY, Neb., Jan. 4, 1894.

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—Another year is numbered with the past, and a new one is ushered in, with all the fates of men unknown to us; but unto our God are all things known, even before the creation of all worlds, or ere time its race began. His power and wisdom are equally perfect. "Known unto God are all his works from the foundation of the world." "Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." It pleased him to speak this world or earth into existence by the word of his power. "The earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light; and there was light." After God had created all manner of beasts and creeping things of the earth, the fishes of the great deep, and the fowls of the air, last of all he formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. And God gave to Adam a law, saying, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Now, dear brethren, I will try to comply with a request from brother J. S. Ham, of Iowa, for my thoughts upon the portion of Scripture recorded in 1 Cor. xv. 22. I know my weakness and ignorance in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, and it makes me fear and tremble. I know that if I am guided by the Spirit I can say nothing that will be of comfort or consolation to any of God's humble poor. Brother Ham has requested me to write through the SIGNS, and I will present such views as may occur to my mind, and leave them to your better judgment.

"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." We read in the preceding verse, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." God created man in his own image, formed him of the dust of the ground, breathed into him the breath of life, and gave him a law, saying, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

We find that Adam did violate God's holy and righteous law, and fell under the just sentence of that law, in death. But before Adam and his wife partook of the forbidden fruit Satan paid them a visit and preached to them his first sermon, saying, "God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." How ready and quick the natural mind is to fall in with Satan, with his malicious arts and craftiness, wherein he lies to deceive and lead astray, down into the dark chambers of death. Yes, the nations of the earth are willing to pay large salaries for a perverted gospel, of which Satan is the author, in preference to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ free of charge. They not only pay large sums for it, but they love it, and drink it down as the ox drinketh water. They spurn the doctrine of God our Savior, and hate it with a perfect hatred.

"As in Adam all die." Brother Ham asks, "How much difference is there in these two alls, or do they embrace the same number?" According to my understanding one all is just as large as the other. If in Adam all die, how are any exempted from death? Remember that Adam is the father of all the human race. We are all sons and daughters of Adam, multiplied from generation to generation, and have no higher claim by nature than Adam, our earthly father. All the nations of men were created in Adam; just as the stalk of corn, blades and tassel, the husks and silks that grow around the ear of corn, with every root and fiber that spread out from the stalk, to minister nourishment to the stalk, and the stalk to the ear of corn. All were encouched or folded up in the germ of the grain of corn; and when it fell into the ground it sprang forth and grew; and every parcel of the corn stalk, the blade, and all that was encouched in it, was made manifest, and brought to maturity. Just so are all the nations of the earth; they are only Adam multiplied. His whole posterity fell in him. Adam was of the earth, and so are we, his offspring; therefore we cannot rise above our earthly head. All are sinners, "dead in trespasses and sins." None are exempt. "Death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." If a law had been given whereby we could have been redeemed from under the curse of that law, verily righteousness would have been by the law. But without the shedding of blood there could be no remission of sins. And notice, it must be a holy and sinless offering. Nothing but the life blood of God's dear Son, who was ever with him from the creation of this sin-cursed world, could make atonement for the sins of his chosen people, whose names were written in the Lamb's book of life from the foundation of the world. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love where-with he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ." Yes, he loved us with an everlasting love, which was so great for us even when we were in open rebellion against his goodness and mercy toward us. It pleased God to lay hold upon one that was mighty and able to save, and sent him forth, not as a royal king of this world, in pomp and splendor, endowed with all the riches and comforts of this world's goods, and honors of the great and noble of this world; but we see Jesus, who was made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem his chosen people from under the law and its curse. "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."—Matt. i. 21-23. Jesus being both God and man, he was able to make a complete atonement for the sins of his people, being made sin for them. He who knew no sin was made sin for us, taking our sins upon himself, and clothing us with his righteousness, that he might present us holy and without spot to God, his Father. "That we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

"Even so in Christ shall all be made alive." God has given all power into the hands of Jesus. Hence we see that Jesus had power to lay down his life, and he had power to take it again. We hear him say, "I am the resurrection and the life." "But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Who are here spoken of? Let Jesus declare who they are. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live."—John v. 25. "Every one that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Again, "The words which I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." When the life-giving power of Jesus' voice enters the chambers of the dead sinner's heart, he is quickened into life, and for the first time is enabled to see the deep corruptions of his own heart; for it hath pleased "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, to shine in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."—2 Cor. iv. 6. It will be remembered that Jesus says, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: and this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." Now, dear brother, these are they who "are Christ's at his coming," out of every nation, kindred, tongue and people. It was because of that great love wherewith the Father loved us that he sent his only begotten Son into this sin-cursed world, to suffer, bleed and die for just such hell-deserving sinners as we are. "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John v. 26-29. Now, my dear brother, can there be any difference in the number of the two alls? I feel assured there is no difference. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

And now, dear brother, if these few lines should find their way into the columns of the highly prized SIGNS OF THE TIMES, my prayer to God is that you, nor any of the lovers of the truth as it is in Jesus, will accept them unless they set forth the truth; for nothing but the truth will do us any good.

Dear brethren Beebe, this is submitted to your better judgment for disposal; do with it as you desire.

JOSEPH BRUCE.

SELECTED.

EBENEZER.

"THEN Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."—1 Samuel vii. 12.

One of old said, "What one nation is like unto thy people Israel, that thou hast chosen and confirmed to thyself to be thine inheritance?"—2 Samuel vii. 22. There was not another nation upon the face of the earth so led, so fed, and so protected as that one. There were no people who had the Lord so near them as God's Israel; for he was over them in the cloud by day which covered all the people, and he was with them in the fire by night to be a light unto them. He led them into the wilderness, and he wonderfully provided for them there, and blessed them abundantly. But we read that "Jeshurun waxed fat," and then began to kick.—Deut. xxxii. 15. His people turned from the statutes, commandments and testimonies of their God, went after idols, followed and worshiped Baalim and Ashtaroth (these were their gods); they departed from the living God, and chose idols. How often we ourselves, friends, are like this. However good, gracious, merciful and long-suffering our God may have been to us, yet our foolish hearts are prone to wander, and as the hymn-writer says, "Prone to leave the God we love." But when Israel chose these idols, and set them up in preference to the God of Jeshurun, the Lord chastised them for their idolatry; and they generally found that he punished them with the sword of their enemies. At this time they were attacked by the Philistines; and not only did they cut off from Israel thirty thousand men, but they took from them the ark; so Ichabod was written on that favored nation. But you find, when God had so chastised them, they were brought to repentance, and lamented what they had done; and when Samuel saw this in the people, he said, "If ye do return unto the Lord with all your hearts, then put away the strange gods and Ashtaroth from among you, and prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only, and he will deliver you out of the hands of the Philistines." Then the people were gathered together, and Samuel said, "I will pray for you unto the Lord;" and they said, "We have sinned against the Lord." Then, "when the Philistines heard the Israelites were gathered together," the Philistines came up against them to battle; but God defeated the enemy.

O what a God is the God of Israel! When he arises, however numerous his enemies may be, he can scatter them; and this he did once more for his rebellious people; for "the Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them; and they were smitten before Israel." Then, when God had appeared for the people once more, so that they gained a victory over their enemies, Samuel took a stone and set it up, and called it "Ebenezer."

Now, leaving God's ancient chosen people literally, we come to notice the spiritual Israel, God's circumcised people; and the stone that was raised up may be looked upon as setting forth stones set up by them.

In speaking from our text briefly we will, if the Lord be pleased to help us, notice,

First.—The stone, as having a special reference to God's chosen Stone, which he himself has set up, and of whom he said, "I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people."—Psalm lxxxix. 19.

Second.—We will notice that God's people have their stones set up as well in the wilderness; and we may notice, if the Lord will help us, what they are—the interpositions and appearances of the Lord on their behalf, so that they are enabled to set up their stones and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

We will look at this stone as having special reference to the Lord Jesus Christ. He is God's Stone, chosen and set up from everlasting. "Behold, my Servant," saith Jehovah, "mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth."—Isa. xlii. 1.

Then notice, my friends, this stone has been set up from everlasting, or ever the earth was. You find the Lord Jesus Christ, speaking in the name of Wisdom, as having been set up from everlasting, as the covenant Head and representative of the whole election of grace; set up as the Mediator between God and man; set up in the purpose, counsel and unalterable decree of God, to be the Surety, Redeemer and Savior of the people, that the Father loved and chose in him. Hence I say, you hear him, speaking under the name and character of Wisdom, saying, "I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was."—Prov. viii. 23-31. Then you see, my friends, that Jehovah, the Father, had an infinite delight in his Son before the foundation of the world, and he set himself to be a representative person for the whole election of grace; and this glorious One of whom I am speaking is spoken of as the foundation laid in Zion: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth shall not make haste."—Isa. xxviii. 16. And Peter, having an eye to this stone, speaks of him as being "a chief corner-stone, elect, precious," "disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God."—1 Peter ii. 4, 6.

Well, then, I say, this is the stone that was set up of old for a foundation in Zion; and when God gathers poor sinners by his blessed Spirit out of the quarry of nature, and from the ruins of the fall, he brings them all to this living ROCK, to this well laid Foundation, and they are a living people; so there is a living union between a living people and a living foundation; and the building is still going on; stones are being put upon the "foundation that was laid," and by-and-bye the topstone shall be brought with shoutings, crying, "Grace, grace unto it."—Zech. iv. 7.

But now to be as brief as possible upon this part of our subject, let me notice, in the next place, this stone is set up in the gospel of the grace of God. There is no salvation without Christ for poor sinners. O what is that worth which is called the gospel, if it has no Christ in it? My dear friends, the gospel of the grace of God rests on this stone, this living Rock. This precious Christ is its divine substance, its divine source, its divine sustainer; every part and every branch of this blessed gospel of God meet at this glorious centre, the Christ of God. Take away Christ from the gospel, and what have we left? Take away the sun from our firmament and what have we left but darkness and gloom? And if you take away Christ, what have we left? Darkness, bondage, misery and death. But, no; there he remains, the all and in all, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. In the gospel of the grace of God Christ is all and in all; and when this is proclaimed, revealed and made known to the hearts of poor sinners as a blessed solid reality, it is good tidings indeed; it is the opening of the prison doors to them that are bound, the comforting of those that mourn, and the binding up of the broken-hearted. Christ only is the sum and substance of the glorious gospel of the blessed God. Then, when our God commissions his servants and sends them out to preach, they set up this stone in their ministry. How few there are that do set forth and exalt the precious Christ and the glorious gospel of the blessed God ministerially. Many people preach a Christ in the day in which we live, but do they preach the Christ of God as being the way of salvation to his people to all the ends of the earth? Do they preach the glorious Christ as being a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Israel? Every faithful minister proclaims him as being the Savior of his church, the Redeemer of his inheritance, the High Priest that ever liveth to make intercession and to save all that come unto God by him. But there are those, and I thank God there are a few, that exalt the precious Christ, and hold him forth as Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, in the matter of a sinner's salvation. He is exalted in the ministry of the word as a living stone. "To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious," says Peter.—1 Peter ii. 4.

Then notice again, this precious stone is set up in the hearts of his people, and in their affections and love. O! my friends, when Christ was revealed in your heart, when Christ was formed in you the hope of glory, when Christ was made known to you as being your Savior and Redeemer, did you not find the love of your heart going out to him? Yes; the whole affections of your heart centred upon him. Ah! did you not love him, exalt him, and lift him as high as possible for a poor sinner to exalt his precious Savior? I believe you did. I know I did, if I know anything of the revelation of the Son of God in my heart. If ever I did love the precious Christ it was when my sins were forgiven, and he was revealed to me as the Rock of my salvation. If ever I did sing of the loving-kindness of the Lord, and of manifestations of mercy to my heart, it was at that time. Therefore he is exalted in the hearts of his people, and set up there as their Savior and Redeemer.

But now let me just endeavor to notice briefly that the Lord's people set up their stones at different times; and it is called "Ebenezer;" and they say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." I sometimes notice when the Lord puts his people into the way of life, and they begin to go in the path he has appointed for them, he speaks to them as he did to his children of old; and he said to every one of them, "Set thee up waymarks; make thee high heaps." And as they traveled on they reared a stone here, and another there. I remember when I could and did rejoice in Christ Jesus, having no confidence in the flesh. Neither have I now. When the Lord is pleased to bring a poor sinner into the liberty of the gospel of his grace, seal pardoning love and blood upon his conscience, take away his burden, and relieve him of his distress and soul trouble, that dear man sets up his stone at every manifestation of God's favor to his heart. As a waymark, there it is: "Ebenezer; hitherto hath the Lord helped us." "I was brought low, and he helped me." I shall never forget that memorable season at times, when I was first enabled to set up a stone for a waymark.

Sometimes, you know, friends, these stones are set up in the house of prayer; sometimes they are set up in the workshop; sometimes they are set up in the secret watches of the night, on their bed; sometimes as they are traveling by the way or sitting in their own room meditating upon the things of God. I remember the time well when I was enabled to set up a stone in the town of Leeds. I went to chapel with a bowed down soul, sinking under a load of guilt. No soul could be sunk lower than I felt to be, wondering whether mercy would reach me, whether the blood of Christ would be sprinkled upon me and cleanse me. While the minister was preaching the glad tidings of salvation to poor, needy, repenting sinners, ministerally he picked me up as the poor out of the dust, lifted me as the beggar from the dunghill, and set me among princes; and the Lord appeared and proclaimed liberty to my captive soul, and brought me forth into the blessings of the gospel of Jesus Christ, revealing God's dear Son in my heart as my Savior, and making known his pardoning love to my heart. So I felt, as I said, all the love and affections of my heart going out to Christ as my Redeemer, my Savior, my Surety, my Friend. Then did I set up my stone in the wilderness, "Ebenezer." Then I could say, "The Lord hath done great things for me, whereof I am glad." I felt then as I have told you before, as if I never should be brought down again into a low place, and should never more know misery, darkness, bondage or soul trouble. But, dear friends, I find, as I pass along through life, these pleasant times do not last very long. That sweet, precious season did not last very long; I was brought down again into the depths of trouble and sorrow, and had to walk in darkness, and under the powerful hand of temptation, for nearly three years, thinking that after all my enjoyment of his mercy God had forgotten to be gracious for evermore. His promise seemed to fail, and the enemy said, "You are not a child of God. If you were, you would not sink down into that low place; you would not have to walk in darkness; the Lord would not hide his face from you. His people walk in the light of his countenance." The troubles of my heart were enlarged till the Lord appeared again, and enabled me to set up another stone in the wilderness. He spoke these words with power to my heart, "Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee."—Jer. xxxi. 3. Then I was enabled to set up another stone, and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me;" and for a little while I went on my way rejoicing in him, that had done wonderful things for my soul. But by-and-by darkness seemed to come over all my path again, and to hide the Ebenezers from my view. Then, as I have told you, when the people of God are walking in darkness they see not their signs; so I feared I never had any signs, never had been favored to set up a stone in the wilderness.

I remember, when I seemed to be at the ends of the earth, and could see no light on my path, again God appeared and spoke this blessed word to my heart, "I have made with thee an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure." "Why," I said, "this is all my salvation, and all my desire;" and I was enabled to set up another stone in the wilderness, saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me." Perhaps there are some of you, my friends, who have been enabled to set up your stones in the way; because, when a poor, dear child of God is wading through deep waters of distress, the Lord often remembers him, comes where his poor, dear child is, and seals a word home, and with the word of a king there is power. You remember the time, and the place where you were, when the Lord said, "Fear thou not." Why? "For I am thy God; I am thy salvation; I will not leave thee; I will never forsake thee." When this is the case, the child of God sets up his stone in the deep waters of darkness, distress and trouble, saying "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me."

There are times when the people of God are passing through the fires of affliction, at which the Lord appears for them, brings some word suited to their state and circumstances, and applies it with power to their heart; and then he says, "Fear not; I am with thee; the flame shall not hurt thee." O no!

"I only design Thy dross to consume, and thy gold to refine."

And in his own time he brings forth the tried one as gold seven times purified. Job was enabled to say, "When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold;" thus setting up a stone in the midst of his fiery path; and in the fire you have been enabled to set up your stones, and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me."

It may be that in a time of darkness your hope has seemed to be removed, and you have felt to be empty of all good things. The cry of your heart then has been, "Leave not my soul destitute. Do not leave me, Lord, like this. O! when I come to die do not leave me destitute of God, destitute of Christ, without a hope in his mercy. Do not leave me destitute of him in his grace. How destitute of grace I feel to be; but do not leave me like this, Lord. Appear for me, heal me, give me another testimony of thy love in my heart." Do you not remember how the Lord was pleased to break into your poor, burdened heart with some word? Or he may have led you to his footstool, giving you a little nearness to himself, and blessedly sweet it has been if you have poured out the sorrows of your heart at his throne, feeling you have still a little hope in his mercy. Do you not remember that thought springing up, "Who can tell but God will be gracious to me again, and lift up the light of his countenance upon me, that I may walk before him in the land of the living, exulting in his righteousness? Do you not remember, I say, those times and seasons when the Lord favored you, and blessed you, and enabled you to set up your stone in the wilderness, saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me?"

"Ah, but," say some, "I have not set up stones like those. They are very large and high. Those people are greatly favored that have been enabled to set up stones like that in the wilderness." They are, friends, a very highly favored people; but our God said to his people, "Set thee up waymarks;" and when they are set up they cannot be removed. All the darkness that hides them does not touch them; there they remain. It may be compared to the country. If a person is standing on a high place, on a clear day, he can see all the beauties of the country, and all the landmarks; but by-and-by there may come on a dense fog, and then everything is enveloped in that mist, and all the beauty of the scene is hidden from his view. He cannot see it; but does the darkness remove anything that he saw in its beauty around him? O no. All remains there; but darkness hides everything from his view.

I look upon the child of God as standing high. Yes, upon the Rock of ages. Then he can see how God has loved him and chosen him, Christ redeemed him, the Holy Spirit quickened him, making it manifest he is a joint-heir with Christ, while the sun shines. But darkness comes over the scene, and covers all these waymarks and blessed evidences, so that he cannot see them. He can see nothing; but that does not alter God's love to him, does not alter what Christ has done for him, or what the Holy Spirit has wrought in him. That does not alter the loving-kindness God has towards him. O no. That remains the same. God is unchanging in his love; he never regrets what he has done for his people. The work of grace is the same; the work of the Holy Ghost is the same; those promises God has sealed on their hearts are not removed; the waymarks are not taken away. When darkness hangs over the soul it does not destroy one; they are built upon a firm foundation; our God cannot be removed. Then, when the Sun arises, and the darkness begins to lift, you see where the evidences are; you see how God appeared for you at that time, and what he did for you at the other time of trouble and distress. Then you can see signs, and waymarks, and Ebenezers, and can say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me."

Now, I say, these are the great stones. Then dear Zion was commanded, also, to make her high heaps. Well, high heaps, you know, would not be made of great stones only; there would be many small ones. There are those traveling heavenwards who cannot say they have great stones, but who yet have little ones—sometimes just a touch of grace, it may be; so, like a traveler who gets to a certain point and leaves his mark, they can say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped me." What is a small stone? A little evidence of God's mercy is a precious thing. A little light shining in your dark mind, a little nearness at the throne of grace, are precious things. A solemn realization of the Lord's word applied to your heart is a precious thing. The Lord remembering you in his providence is a good thing. The making of a way here and there, where it seemed impossible for a door to be opened for you, and when everything seemed dark, the Lord appearing for you, what do you call these things, friends, but stones cast up? You have said, "The Lord is good, and faithful to his word." You see how he has made his goodness pass before you in the way; these are stones he has enabled his poor, dear people to set up when travelling onward and heavenward. You have seen that some of the dear saints of God, when brought to tread in the swellings of the Jordan of death, have stood firm as when Israel was about to cross the river. When the feet of the priests that had the ark were dipped in the river, the waters divided, and the priests stood firm with the ark, while Israel passed clean over; so you have seen, when the dear saints of God have been brought into the river of death, their feet have stood firm upon the Rock, Christ. He has been at their side, and they have exalted him, and with their lips given praise to his name, and crossed the river telling the triumphs of their King, looking back on the way he has led them, and saying, "Not one good thing of all God promised me has failed."

O may the Lord grant we may be enabled to set up this stone, and to bear this testimony; and when we come into the river of death, may we cross the waters telling the wonders of our God, and saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." May he add his blessing. Amen.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

INDIGENT FUND.

IN calling the attention of our brethren and friends to the necessity of our having assistance in order to be able to continue the SIGNS to those on our indigent list, we wish to emphatically impress on their minds that personally we are not financially profited by their liberality. On the contrary we are, and are willing to be, losers in this matter. The actual cost of supplying the paper to our indigent subscribers always considerably exceeds the total amount of contributions to the fund for that purpose. But were it not for the kindness of brethren and friends in sharing this burden with us we should be obliged to strike from our list many who highly appreciate reading the paper, but who are not able to pay for it.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

TO MOST of our readers the above mentioned book is too well known to need any introduction or a description by us. While many of the Bibles have a Concordance appended, they are generally so condensed or abridged as to be of little or no use. Cruden's Complete Concordance, however, enables one to readily turn to any passage of Scripture of which they can call to mind two or three words, and in our opinion is the most complete and convenient as a reference book of any published. In addition, it contains many other aids in studying the Bible, as may be seen by reference to advertisement on last page. Remember, both the books there mentioned are CRUDEN'S COMPLETE.

EDITORIAL.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., DECEMBER 26, 1894.

Entered in the Middletown, N. Y., Post Office as Second-Class Mail Matter.

EDITORS:

BENTON JENKINS, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
F. A. CHICK, REISTERSTOWN, MD.
B. L. BEEBE, MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

All letters for this paper should be addressed, and money orders made payable as formerly, to

GILBERT BEEBE'S SON,
Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.

2 CORINTHIANS II. 7, 11.

"WILL Elder Jenkins please give his views on 2 Cor. ii. 7, 11? "Lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow." "Lest Satan should get an advantage of us."

J. W. BENSON.

GRIFTON, Md., Nov. 19, 1894.

REPLY.

The person whom the apostle here tells the church at Corinth they ought to forgive and comfort, lest he should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow, is doubtless the same that is spoken of in his first epistle to them, of whom it was commonly reported that he was guilty of fornication, in having his father's wife. The apostle reproved the church for not dealing with the "wicked person" according to the order of the gospel, and cutting him off from membership with them; or, as he states it, "might be taken away from among you." The sin was so heinous, and so "commonly reported," that the apostle commanded the church, "In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deliver such a one unto Satan, for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." It does not appear from the record that the apostle would have the church to labor with this wicked person who was guilty of this scandalous conduct, in order to see if they might convince him of his wickedness; on the contrary, they are commanded to put him away, and this by the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ. This was not a "trespass" against an individual member of the church, but was a sin against the whole body, and did not call for that labor commanded by the Redeemer in the case of individual trespasses.—Matt. xviii. 15-17. If one is a stumbling-block (for that is the meaning of the word "offend" in Matt. xviii. 8, 9) to the body, the church, Jesus says, put such away. "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire," or confusion and distress, as the word hell evidently signifies. The church of Christ should insist on keeping a clean house, and her members walking in the order of the gospel. To be slack in this matter, as the apostle says, is to be "puffed up," which shows the presence and action of leaven, or sin. "Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us: therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. I wrote unto you in an epistle not to keep company with fornicators; yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one no not to eat. For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? Do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person."—1 Cor. v. 6-13.

The object or design of discipline in the church is not the destruction of the transgressor, but their salvation. "For the destruction of the flesh." God dealeth with his people as with sons. As surely as they are his sons, and not bastards, he will discipline them. He will visit their transgressions with his fatherly rod. "When we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world."—1 Cor. xi. 32. Whom he loveth, he chasteneth. Under the chastening of the Lord the saints will surely be humbled, and will learn the meaning of the words, "For the destruction of the flesh." Says the apostle James to the saints, "Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up." Says Peter, "God resisteth the proud [that is, sets himself against them in the way of judgment], and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."

When the church, in the spirit of the gospel, puts away from her any of her members which are in disorder, it is not done in wrath or hatred, but in love and tenderness, and in obedience to the law of her King; and such action of the church, which must always be painful, will result in good to the one put away, as well as to the church; for, as in natural surgery among men, when portions of the natural body are amputated, cut off, taken away, it is done because in the judgment of the operator the good of the individual requires it, and it is a kindness to the body or individual. One diseased member of the natural body, if not cut off, may result in the death of all the members of that body. So it is in the body of Christ, the church. So the apostle says, "Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person."

When the apostle writes his next epistle to the church at Corinth, and who had been obedient to his apostolic command in putting away from them the wicked person, having himself learned that the transgressor was greatly distressed in mind because of his scandalous, wicked conduct, he says to the church, "Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many." As the excluded person, under the chastening hand of God was sufficiently humbled, it was now as much their duty to restore him to membership, to forgive him, and to comfort him, as it had been their duty to cut him off, put him away, by the authority of the Lord Jesus and his inspired apostle. The godly sorrow that the wicked person had experienced was from God; and that was necessary for the destruction of the flesh; and the apostle tells them it is "sufficient," without their adding "overmuch sorrow" to him by a refusal to restore him, or a refusal to forgive and also comfort him. Whenever and wherever it is manifest that God has humbled and forgiven one of his erring children, it is not only the duty of the church to forgive such, but also to comfort them, and to confirm their love toward them.

Peter himself, by a very painful experience, had learned the meaning of Paul's words, "Deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh;" for "the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted [not born again, but converted], strengthen thy brethren." Above all others, those who, like Peter, have been in Satan's sieve, and have been converted from errors, experienced "the destruction of the flesh," are able to comfort their brethren, by the comfort where-with they themselves are comforted of God.

In the tenth verse of this second chapter the apostle says, in substance, I have forgiven the offender, for your sake, for his sake, and for Christ's sake. It is by the authority of my Lord and Master I forgive him. "For your sakes forgive I it in the person of Christ." If forgiveness under the circumstances of this case had not been extended by Paul and the church, Satan might have gotten an advantage of all concerned; and we are not ignorant of his cunning devices. Satan is called the accuser of the brethren; their adversary. Time and space would fail us to enumerate his cunning devices. He began his cunning work in the garden of Eden. In the time of Job, "when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, Satan came also among them to present himself before the Lord." He moved, persuaded, provoked David to number Israel, and so got an advantage of David and Israel. "And David said unto God, I have sinned greatly, because I have done this thing." "I have done very foolishly." And David and Israel suffered for it. Had the church at Corinth refused to forgive and restore the penitent one, Satan might have harassed, distressed and tempted him, suggesting to him that while he had felt and professed that God had forgiven him, he was evidently much mistaken, else the church would be as ready to forgive him and restore him; that he certainly was not a child of God, a subject of God's grace, for now the evidence was that he was disowned and forsaken by God and the church. Under such trying circumstances as these, Satan might so far get the advantage as to suggest to him that there could be no more comfort for him in this world, and that therefore it would be better for him to take his own life. This is not a too highly colored statement, for it has more than once, to our own personal knowledge, been the experience of the tried and tempted children of God. "Swallowed up with overmuch sorrow!" "Satan get an advantage!" Alas! in how many ways does Satan get an advantage of us, even though we are not altogether ignorant of his devices. Behold him working in Balaam of old, "who saw the vision of the Almighty." Balaam saw the people of God dwelling alone, not reckoned among the nations, abiding in their goodly tents, with no enchantment against them. But with Satanic craftiness he sought to injure this favored people, being assured that he could not destroy them. He did indeed get the advantage of them, seducing them by Midianitish women, so that the judgment of God fell upon them, and there died in the plague twenty and four thousand.

Realizing as we do, when tried and tempted, that no man can care for our soul, with David we cry, "But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O Lord, in an acceptable time. O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation. Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink. Let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters. Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me." "Thou knowest my reproach, and my shame, and my dishonor: mine adversaries are before thee. Reproach hath broken my heart, and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for some to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none." In God alone is our help.

May the Lord be graciously pleased to deliver us out of the hand of our strong enemy, and grant us grace to walk in humility and godly fear before him, till all our conflicts end in everlasting rest.

J.

INTERCOMMUNION.

EDITORS SIGNS OF THE TIMES:—Will you please answer fully, and give reasons and Scriptures bearing on the same, the following questions? Is intercommunion of churches right and scriptural? That is, is it right and scriptural for members of one Baptist Church to commune with another Baptist Church, all of whom are scriptural and in order? An early reply will be appreciated by yours in Christ,

MRS. A. L. TILSON.

MERIT, Texas, Nov. 15, 1894.

R E P L Y .

THE question proposed by our correspondent suggests what is to us a comparatively new theme. We have only recently learned that any such question has been raised among professed followers of Christ. As it has been raised, and especially as it has become a matter of interest to our correspondent, and as we suppose to others also, it seems right to consider it with such light as we have. In this, as well as in all that pertains to that "order" which God has established in the churches, the final court of appeal must be the judges in Israel; that is, the apostles of the Lamb. We cannot pretend to be able to cover all the ground nor to exhaust all that may be said upon the subject in the brief time which we can devote now to its consideration, or in the limits of a reasonable editorial. We would be more than glad for others to write upon the subject.

The question is not, Have members of Methodist, Campbellite or New School Baptist Churches a right to commune (that is, partake of the Lord's supper) with Old School Baptist Churches? This, upon the face of it, would be so plain as scarcely to demand an answer, because between them and us there is no fellowship, and the supper sets forth the highest fellowship between those who partake of it. But the question is in substance (and to make the matter simple) this, Have the members of one Old School Baptist Church any right to commune at the Lord's table with another Old School Baptist Church where they are not members? For instance, if our correspondent, who as we suppose is a member of some Old School Baptist Church in Texas, should visit Middletown, N. Y., and attend the meeting of the church there at the time when they administer the supper, would it be scriptural for her to eat the bread and drink the wine with her brethren of that church?

Of late we have seen and read some quite able arguments sustaining a negative answer to this question. They were written by a minister of the New School Baptist denomination. With his arguments we were not satisfied, however, though, as we said, they were able and very forcibly stated. In the course of what we may here write we desire to briefly consider a few things that were presented in the above mentioned argument, though we shall not refer to it again by name. We do so because we suppose that our correspondent has probably heard some of the same arguments used.

From what consideration we have been able to give the subject, and from our understanding of the Scriptures which bear upon it, we are constrained to believe that it is right and scriptural for churches who are in fellowship with each other in Christ to practice what our correspondent calls intercommunion; but before entering directly upon what it seems to us the Scriptures have to say upon the subject, there are one or two suggestions which we wish to make. First we would say this, that whatever the practice of the churches may have been for the past generation, or for the past centuries, or ever since the days of the apostolic churches, that is, those churches which the apostles organized and had a personal supervision over, after all, for authority, we must go back to the teaching and practice of the apostles themselves. Second, we would say that while the above is true, yet the fact that the churches of Christ have almost without a word of protest or any interruption practiced intercommunion in all the eighteen centuries that are past, should cause us to be very slow to give weight or credence to any argument that may now be urged to the contrary. Their universal and continued practice may have been wrong; but the Spirit of God has always been with his people, as well as now, and therefore we should at least be slow to change the practice. Third, we would suggest that the free, spontaneous desire of all who love the Lord will be to come together in the service of their common Lord; and so from their own minds the idea would never arise that it was wrong to come to the Lord's table with their brethren wherever they might be. If it be wrong, then there must be some plain text of Scripture in prohibition of it. Is there any such? We have not been able to so discover. Fourth, as there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of all, it would certainly seem to be only a reasonable conclusion that there is also one communion among all the members of the churches of Christ, and that therefore they all have a right to come to that supper, which is the outward expression of that communion which we have in Christ. As all spiritually eat the true bread and wine, the body and blood of Jesus, it would on the face of it seem to be a just conclusion that they all in like manner have a right to the bread and wine which are the symbols of the true. Fifth, while for the transaction of business it is needful that churches should have in each locality a separate and independent existence, and each must attend to its own internal affairs, yet it is also true that the church of Jesus Christ remains one. "There is one body." Unless we can find in the Scriptures some direct command or example to the contrary, it would follow that the members of this one body, who are really one in faith, hope, love and life, ought also to come to the Lord's table wherever it is spread for any of them. Each member of the one church has a right with all the members to share in every ordinance of the Lord's house. We mean to say this, that this would be the irresistible conclusion, unless there be some express precept or apostolic example to the contrary. The burden of proof would fall upon those who oppose intercommunion, not upon those who practice it, if there be any force or any truth in what we have just now said. We admit that these considerations in themselves are not sufficient to outweigh one single Bible testimony, either by way of teaching or by example to the contrary; but is there any testimony to the contrary in the Scriptures?

It has been argued that there is some analogy between the Lord's supper and the institution of the passover, by those who oppose intercommunion, and that whatever force there is in this analogy would show that intercommunion was wrong, from the fact that each Jewish family was commanded to keep the passover feast by itself; but this is a mistake. We do not here think it needful to discuss the question of analogy between the two, that is, the supper and the passover feast; but if there be anything that bears upon intercommunion in what was commanded concerning the passover, it is all in favor of it; for in Exodus xii. 4 we are told that under certain conditions one family had a right to join with other families in the observance of the passover feast. Now, so far as this has any bearing at all, it would show incontestibly that there are conditions in which others have a right to the supper besides the members of the particular church or family which have met to observe it.

Again, we would say that we think the weight of the Savior's own example in instituting the ordinance of the supper would be altogether in favor of intercommunion among all of the same faith and order. It has long been our view that the first gospel church was organized upon the day of Pentecost. It is entirely a gratuitous assumption that the Savior and the apostles present with him constituted an organized gospel church. Every presumption is against this assumption. We have always understood that the church as a local body was first organized upon the day of Pentecost. If the apostles constituted a church by themselves, they were a traveling church. Did they always remain a church? If not, when were they dissolved as an organization? If they continued an organized church, what local name did they bear? Were they the church at Rome or Corinth or Jerusalem, or what name did they bear? Did they as a body ever exercise any of the functions of a church, such as receiving or excluding members, &c.? If it be admitted that they were not an organized gospel church, then the whole force of the example set by the Savior is for intercommunion among all who have a right to the supper at all. If they were not an organized church, then all the arguments about the supper being limited to any one church which may be observing it fall to the ground. We think we could claim, with far more show of reason than is found in the arguments of those who oppose intercommunion, that instead of this example of the Savior being a proof that only the members of a given church have a right to the supper administered in that church, it is rather a proof that the supper is not to be so restricted, since here were eleven individual believers, who without any church organization at all were given the supper by the Savior himself.

The reasoning that we have seen by those who oppose intercommunion concerning the example at this first observance of the supper could be utilized with equal force to prove that women had no right to the supper. None were present at the institution of the supper; and we do not recall that it is ever directly said that they ever were present or partook of the supper in all the New Testament. A line of argument that proves too much proves nothing.

We turn to call attention to what we can gather concerning this matter from the account given in the second chapter of the Acts of the organization of the first gospel church. Here, we have long believed, is a pattern for the organization and order of all gospel churches to the end of time. Verse 42: "They continued in breaking of bread." Verse 46: "And breaking bread from house to house." It seems to us that the example of this church, so far as it bears upon the matter at all, would seem to show that the supper was not limited to the members of that particular church, for the people then gathered there were from all quarters of the known world; and these devout men, Jews from all countries, who were gathered at Jerusalem upon the occasion of this great Jewish feast to observe it, believed and were baptized, and continued in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in "breaking of bread." Whatever force there is in this narrative that bears upon the question of our correspondent is all in favor of intercommunion.

It has been argued that the teaching of Paul in the tenth and eleventh chapters of First Corinthians would restrict the supper to the particular members of this church; but the arguments in this direction seem to us far-fetched. Paul was not there discussing or laying down rules concerning this matter at all. There is nothing in these two chapters for or against intercommunion except by inference. The main object of Paul in these chapters is to warn this church against divisions, and against the practice into which they had fallen of making a heathen feast out of the supper. The apostle teaches that the church is to see that the supper is administered in decency and order; but how all this can be used as an argument either for or against the practice of intercommunion we have wholly failed to see. The church at Corinth, the church in any given place, is the executive, if we may so speak, to administer the affairs of the kingdom of God in that place; but this does not prove that any who are of the one visible body of Christ, that one church which is built upon the "Rock," and which is the pillar and ground of the truth, can lawfully be kept away from the table of the Lord. The table is the Lord's. The church in any given place sets the table according to his command; and all whom he recognizes as his disciples on earth ought, when gathered on such an occasion, to join in showing forth his death. The first supper at Jerusalem seems to bear this out.

It has been asked, Why invite members of our sister churches to partake with us of the supper if it be already their right and duty? It is inconsistent, it has been said, so to do. We would say that perhaps the word "invite" is not the best nor the most consistent word to use. Perhaps it would be more consistent to say that it is the right of all who are in good standing in the churches of Christ to come to the table of the Lord. In the beginning there was no need of anything of the kind being said, for then there were no schisms nor divisions. All were continuing in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship. Afterward some arose who claimed the name of Christ falsely. There must of necessity be a guard thrown around this ordinance against these. Thence would naturally arise some form of what we have been calling invitation; but, as we have said, perhaps the term "invite" is not the best. Indeed, of late we have been saying it is the right of all who are members in good standing in sister churches to take a seat with us at the Lord's table.

We will briefly recapitulate what we have said, and leave our remarks for the consideration of our correspondent and our readers. The whole presumption from the one experience and fellowship of believers would be in favor of intercommunion. The circumstances connected with the passover, so far as the passover has any bearing at all, are in favor of it. The circumstances attending the institution of the ordinance are all in favor of it. The practice of the first church ever organized sustains it; and there is nothing in all that Paul says to the church at Corinth against it, because that was not his theme. The objection based upon the word "invite" has no weight except against the use of the word "invitation" itself; while the fact that the church is but one body tells with overwhelming force in its favor.

We leave these reflections. May our minds be led still more into the truth. May we have grace both to know and do the will of God in all things. We would be glad to see something from the pens of other brethren upon this matter.

C.

CLOSE OF VOLUME SIXTY-TWO.

WITH this number we complete the sixty-second year of the publication of the SIGNS OF THE TIMES, and an eventful year it has been. For the second time we were left with our name alone at the head of the paper, which to us is the most discouraging of anything that we have been called to pass through in publishing the paper. But God is good, and we were blessed with the christian forbearance of the brethren, and the manifest providence of the Lord in raising up two of the ablest brethren in the ministry to assist in the editorial work of the paper; and so blessed have their labors been that we are daily in receipt of letters expressing the gratitude of the writers that the SIGNS has been so highly favored of the Lord as to have their valuable assistance.

Sixty-two years ago, when the SIGNS was first started, comparatively few of its present readers were yet born. A glance at the columns of names in our index of obituary notices will show how many of the old veterans of the cross are being called home each year. Yet the Lord will not leave himself without witnesses, and is daily adding to the church such as shall be saved.

For many years after the paper was started our enemies consoled themselves with the vain hope that "They will soon all die off;" but to their chagrin the Old, Despised Baptists are more numerous in this country to-day than when the SIGNS first started. Therefore, brethren, let us praise God and take courage.

B.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

MY correspondents will please address all communications to me hereafter at Massey, Accomac Co., Va., instead of New Church, Va.

T. M. POULSON.

RECEIVED TO AID IN SENDING THE "SIGNS" TO INDIGENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Charity Armsworth, Ill., 50c, Mrs. J. S. Ater, Ill., 50c, D. S. Elliott, N. Y., 50c, Henry Ayers, N. Y., 1, Mrs. M. Craven, Pa., 1, Ruth Adamson, Va., 1, M. B. Nivin, Pa., 2, John Downey, Ill., 2.—Total, $8.50.

MARRIAGES.

DEC. 12th, 1894, by Elder Silas H. Durand, at the house of Mr. Asa Shepherd, Hopewell, N. J., Mr. Ira S. Bainbridge, of Lawrenceville, N. J., and Miss Emma K. Hixson, of Titusville, N. J.

DEC. 12th, 1894, by the same, at the house of the bride's father, Mount Rose, N. J., Mr. Charles L. Maple, of Lawrenceville, N. J., and Miss Lizzie M. Blackwell, of Mount Rose, N. J.

DEC. 13th, 1894, by the same, at the house of the bride's father, Rosedale, N. J., Mr. Martin Kintner, of Mount Rose, N. J., and Miss Anna M. Van Dyke, of Rosedale, N. J.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—Please state in the next issue of the SIGNS that our dear father, Elder I. N. Vanmeter, passed peacefully away at 1:30 o'clock Thursday morning, Dec. 13th. A more extended notice will appear hereafter.

SARAH E. RUNKLE.

MACOMB, Ill., Dec. 14, 1894.

DIED—At her late residence in South Wilmington, Del., on the 9th instant, Mrs. Lizzie Green, wife of Samuel Green, aged 45 years.

Sister Green was one of our highly esteemed members of the Bryn Zion Church. It is not many years ago that she knew nothing of us nor we of her. The family knew little or nothing of the Baptists. Visiting at a place where the SIGNS was found, she read more or less in it, becoming interested, and soon after arranged to go a trip of twenty miles to our Saturday meeting. Since then there has been but one kind of meeting or preaching for her. Not long afterward she made her way in the middle of winter to that same place spoken of above to offer to the church. The weather was bad, and I was sick at the time, so that another trip of more than twenty miles became necessary. It is not yet quite three years since she found a home and a place in the love and fellowship of the church. A few months afterward she was stricken with paralysis; and though since improved enough to go about, and get out to meeting sometimes, yet renewed shocks continued until the end came. More steadfast and constant devotion to the church and to the cause we seldom see. The last time I saw her in life she told me calmly that her time to go was near, and told of the text that she wished to be used, viz., "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil," &c. The Lord is not leaving himself without witness that it is his work to build up Zion, and gather together the outcasts of Israel. We like to see his impress upon all the work going on among us. A devoted husband is left alone to mourn.

E. RITTENHOUSE.

STATE ROAD, Del., Dec. 18, 1894.

DEAR BROTHER BEEBE:—By request of the bereaved parents I send you a notice of the departure of Edna Parsons, aged 34 years, at her father's home, Cherry Flats, Pa., August 31st.

Her father and mother have long been members of the Old School Baptist Church at Cherry Flats, which I served for some years. At the last part of that time I noticed a marked attention to the preaching on the part of Edna; and it is a number of years since she first spoke to me of her hope. A few years ago she went to the city of New York to engage in business, and wrote me to know of the church there, which she wished to attend. She was a graduate of the Mansfield Normal School, and had a two years' course in the New York Post-Graduate Training School for Nurses, when failing health compelled her to return home. I had a pleasant and gratifying interview with her at the Chemung Association in June last, and at that time she told me it was her desire and intention to offer herself to the church as soon as a convenient opportunity offered; but the Lord has been pleased to take her from this world of sorrow and trouble to his eternal rest. It is a blessed change for her, I fully believe; but it is a sad bereavement and a sore affliction to our dear brother and sister, and also to an only brother. The pleasant home must be very lonely now. Her mother says, "She was the light of our home and the companion of our old age. Though heart-broken and desolate, we have no desire to murmur at the Lord's dealings with us, but would ever wish to be reconciled to his will."

It is not in mortal power to be reconciled to such great and heart-rending afflictions; but the Lord is able to give the spirit of resignation, and to enable them to feel and say, "Thy will be done." May this be their experience.

Edna was greatly esteemed and beloved by those who knew her. Better than all, she was beloved of the Lord, and his love was shed abroad in her heart.

SILAS H. DURAND.

SOUTHAMPTON, Pa., Dec. 15, 1894.

DIED—At the residence of her brother-in-law, George Church, in Geneva township, Nov. 18th, 1894, Sybil E. Church.

The cause of her death is very sad. Herself and husband were returning from a neighbor's in a buggy. The horse started to run, and her husband was unable to hold him in check. Near a deep rut in the road he moved to the side of the buggy on which his wife was sitting, to keep it from being overturned, when a sudden lurch threw him out, taking the reins with him. The horse, free from restraint, ran with great speed. She jumped out, striking the ground on her feet, and fell over backward and struck on her head. When her husband reached her she was unconscious. The horse stopped at his brother's, who, seeing the buggy with no one in it, ran to their assistance. She was taken to the house, and a doctor was sent for, but he did not arrive until a few minutes before she died. She never became conscious.

The accident happened at half-past three p. m., and she died at half-past five p. m. I was sent for, and arrived there a few minutes before ten o'clock. It was seven miles from this city where she lived. I thought I could not bear it. She lay on the bed, cold in death. I have passed through many hard trials, but this seems the hardest to bear.

Sybil E. Norton was born in La Fayette Co., Wis., Nov. 3d, 1859, and was the eldest daughter of E. A. and Elizabeth E. Norton. When an infant eleven months old she was taken by her grandparents, Elder A. J. Norton and wife, to raise. She came to Hampton with them in the spring of 1859, and was reared to womanhood. Here, on October 5th, 1880, she was married to Walter A. Church, who is left to mourn, with two children (one son and one daughter), father, mother, three brothers, three sisters, and her aged grandparents.

Her funeral sermon was preached at the Congregational Church, conducted by B. F. Snook, of the Universalist faith. She never made a public profession of religion, but held to that faith. She was a dutiful child to me in my long illness, being by my bedside, attending and nursing me.

She is gone, we hope, to a better world than this. Pray for me, brethren, that I may be given grace to bear this deep affliction.

Your brother,

E. A. NORTON.

HAMPTON, Iowa.

INDEX TO VOLUME 62.

COMMUNICATIONS.		OBITUARIES.
A.		A.
Anderson, C. W.	21	Ardes, Mrs. M.	55
Ackles, E. H.	37	Alexander, Mrs. L.	63
Arnn, J. R.	219	Alward, Mrs. N. T.	111
Allison, J. P.	235, 299	Allen, Deacon M.	118
Aydelott, Charles	270	Arnold, Augustus	118
Aydelott, W. S.	270	Allen, Jonathan	159
Allison, Mary	299	Ashbrook, Ethan	183
Alderton, Arah	322	Atterberry, Mrs. E.	207
Alexander, Robert	399	B.
A Subscriber	403	Byers, Mrs. C.	39
B.		Baker, James	39
Bond, C. W.	1	Buckstone, Elder George	39
Baker, Sr., David	6	Ball, Mrs. M. G.	39
Boyd, Mrs. J. K.	6, 150	Bush, Wm. H.	47
Broders, Joseph	10, 83, 202, 306	Biggs, Mrs. S. A.	47
Bartley, D.	13, 70, 233	Bevere, C. H.	71
Bridges, D.	27, 97	Brand, Mrs. E.	71
Ballard, Peace	31	Brown, Mrs. A. N.	72
Beard, W. A.	94, 167	Burrows	103
Ball, J. L.	94, 262	Bruner, David	135
B.	107	Barber, Deacon J.	135
Beck, L. W.	117	Brown, Mrs. E.	151
Byers, E. F.	127	Brome, Mrs. F. A.	207
Brown, A. J.	149	Burcly, Jason	223
Burch, Davis	151	Bogart, Mrs. Betsy	223
Brown, Morgan	170	Butler, M. F.	239
Boggess, S. R.	182	Bogart, Clemma	247
Brees, A. B.	182, 302, 321	Benedict, Mrs. A. A.	279
Bartlett, Eldon	191, 390	Boileau, Mrs. J.	279
Ball, Susie	222	Buck, Deacon G.	303
Bolt, S. E.	237	Boyd, Mrs. J. K.	311
Bruce, Joseph	253, 277, 286, 291, 301, 391, 409	Brasell, Lewis	351
Beebe, Gilbert	282	Bolt, Mrs. C.	351
Beeman, J.	283	Brewer, Enoch	351
Beebe, Wm. L.	305	Boaz, Samuel	391
Butler, Harrison	311	C.
Bronson, W. T.	311	Crask, James	16
Boyd, J. K.	331	Clark, Mrs. E.	23
Bell, U. J.	343, 379	Carter, Deacon G. D.	31
Bond, R. G.	343	Campbell, Wm.	55
Butler, B. F.	378	Cator, Mrs. B.	63
Brown, W. C.	379	Craft, John	63
C.		Corbette, Mrs. H. A.	64
Coulter, B. F.	3, 18, 62, 94, 99, 153, 163, 203, 218, 281, 322, 329	Christopher, Elder. J. W.	87
Canfield, D. B.	7	Coffman, Mrs. Ida	111
Cox, H.	11, 66, 161, 191, 194, 242, 289, 361, 377	Compton, Mrs. S. A.	119
Chick, F. A.	14, 25, 49, 77, 89, 113, 177, 199, 209, 241, 246, 250, 314, 322, 353	Cox, Mrs. S. B.	255
Curtis, Attie A.	35, 51, 67, 354, 386	Chandler, Martha	271
Curry, H. M.	57, 65, 193, 257	Church, S. E.	414
Carter, M. E.	191	D.
Cabbage, S. T.	227	Dorsey, J. P.	23
Carnell, W. I.	254	Davis, Spencer	119
Cox, Mary J.	259	Doremus, G. D.	159
Cox, Fred	259	Davis, Mrs. M. E.	207
Cass, I. A.	331	Dady, Mrs. E.	367
Craig, R. A.	362	Dunlop, Mrs. M.	399
Coddington, Abbie	385	E.
Chambliss, Z. C.	387	Edwards, Mrs. E. S.	135
D.		Ensor, J. C.	367
Durand, Silas H.	23, 26, 41, 54, 86, 114, 172, 195, 210, 217, 230, 231, 238, 243, 261, 275, 286, 295, 313, 331, 354, 378, 387, 390, 394	F.
Dulin, A. L.	35	Faries, Mrs. E. H.	56
Dorman, Mary J.	55	Fetter, W. C.	63
Dance, Milton	55	Frazier, Beatrice	103
Durand, Bessie	101	Fewell, Mrs. S. A.	111
Duley, J. M.	117	Frazier, Mrs. M. R.	175
Dutcher, M. M.	173	Frazier, James	191
Duerson, Polly	270	Flagg, Mrs. R. P.	207
Davis, M. E.	279	Flint, Mrs. R.	287
Devore, Mary	291, 301	Fortner, Elisha	295
E.		Fox, S. S.	319
Elmendorf, R. A.	167	Fellingham, Mrs. M. G.	399
F.		G.
Flanary, T. G.	6	Gilchrist, Andrew	7
Fairchild, J. W.	35, 122	Gardiner, M.	151
Fetter, A. M.	53	Gedney, Mary A.	207
Fuggle, A. M.	150	Gooden, Mrs. Susan	215
Farley, Jefferson	237, 334	Green, J. B.	319
Francis, A. B.	393	Garrett, Mrs. C. C. S.	319
G.		Graham, Mrs. Maria	360
Grafton, Wm.	19	Green, Lizzie	414
Gether, Gera	162	H.
Gilliland, E. F.	179	Hart, Ida M.	15, 247
Garrett, S. A.	270	Hamilton, B. F.	19
Grafton, Barbara	333	Herndon, T. C.	58, 130, 137, 327
Green, M. E.	343	Hart, R. F.	102
Gates, P.	359	Hamilton, Ella M.	105, 141, 201
H.		Howard, Asa	109
Hart, Ida M.	15, 247	Hassell, M. M.	115
Hamilton, B. F.	19	Huntley, E. A.	125
Herndon, T. C.	58, 130, 137, 327	Howard, C. M.	141
Hart, R. F.	102	Hanson, A. B.	151
Hamilton, Ella M.	105, 141, 201	Hart, Mrs. W. M.	203
Howard, Asa	109	Hogeland, Theo.	230
Hassell, M. M.	115	Hames, J. C.	255
Huntley, E. A.	125	Himes, Lizzie	258, 395
Howard, C. M.	141	Hubbell, J. D.	267
Hanson, A. B.	151	Hull, W. J.	278
Hart, Mrs. W. M.	203	Hutchinson, A. D.	294
Hogeland, Theo.	230	Harkey, M. J.	300
Hames, J. C.	255	Hagans, A. H.	302
Himes, Lizzie	258, 395	Harvey, H. A.	315
Hubbell, J. D.	267	Haynes, R. F.	330
Hull, W. J.	278	Hurst, Roten	401
Hutchinson, A. D.	294	I.
Harkey, M. J.	300	Inquirer	55
Hagans, A. H.	302	J.
Harvey, H. A.	315	Jones, H. B.	17, 290
Haynes, R. F.	330	Jones, Sarah	22
Hurst, Roten	401	Johnson, D. G.	123
I.		Johnson, E. S.	131
Inquirer	55	James, Henry	142
J.		Johnson, W. B.	266
Jones, H. B.	17, 290	John, W. H.	295
Jones, Sarah	22	K.
Johnson, D. G.	123	Keene, F. W.	45, 73, 81, 131, 145, 185, 345, 386
Johnson, E. S.	131	Kercheval, W. F.	63, 158
James, Henry	142	Kennard, David	157
Johnson, W. B.	266	Kidwell, Eli T.	166, 318
John, W. H.	295	L.
K.		Lively, W.	46, 222, 254, 261, 367
Keene, F. W.	45, 73, 81, 131, 145, 185, 345, 386	Little, Wm. M.	46, 155, 251
Kercheval, W. F.	63, 158	Lawrence, J. M.	47, 299
Kennard, David	157	Lester, A. B.	102
Kidwell, Eli T.	166, 318	Long, F. O.	129, 253
L.		Lesley, W. H.	131
Lively, W.	46, 222, 254, 261, 367	Libbey, Mrs. N. B.	246
Little, Wm. M.	46, 155, 251	Lowe, J. M.	250
Lawrence, J. M.	47, 299	Long, S. A.	271
Lester, A. B.	102	Mc.
Long, F. O.	129, 253	McConnell, John	5
Lesley, W. H.	131	McInturff, A.	147
Libbey, Mrs. N. B.	246	McDonald, James	165
Lowe, J. M.	250	McKenzie, J.	211
Long, S. A.	271	McDonald, Joe	371
Mc.		M.
McConnell, John	5	May, W. J.	33, 51, 165, 195, 223, 279, 297, 334, 399, 403
McInturff, A.	147	Morris, E. R. W.	34
McDonald, James	165	Mellott, Wm.	102, 181
McKenzie, J.	211	Mayfield, G. E.	121, 187
McDonald, Joe	371	Murphy, Garrett	150, 250
M.		M.	174
May, W. J.	33, 51, 165, 195, 223, 279, 297, 334, 399, 403	Mount, T. J.	187
Morris, E. R. W.	34	Matheny, W. G.	219
Mellott, Wm.	102, 181	Moore, Sarah	230
Mayfield, G. E.	121, 187	N.
Murphy, Garrett	150, 250	Moore, J. J.	283
M.	174	Meredith, W. W.	286
Mount, T. J.	187	Moffit, Wm.	294
Matheny, W. G.	219	Moore, E. F.	301
Moore, Sarah	230	Meredith, Anna	354
N.		Meredith, Jr., Peter	354
Nuckols, J. A.	327	Moore, J. E.	363
O.		O.
Overman, John	38	Overman, John	38
Oliver, J. F.	69	P.
P.		Pearce, S. B.	15
Pearce, S. B.	15	Peterson, Thomas	22
Peterson, Thomas	22	Peters, Newton	38
Peters, Newton	38	Poulson, T. M.	46, 91
Poulson, T. M.	46, 91	Parker, Mary	101, 173, 333, 342
Parker, Mary	101, 173, 333, 342	Powell, P. J.	118, 178, 363, 374
Powell, P. J.	118, 178, 363, 374	Parrott, E. M.	182
Parrott, E. M.	182	Pitman, Mrs. A. J.	251
Pitman, Mrs. A. J.	251	Pilchard, W. J.	294
Pilchard, W. J.	294	Poe, Alvin	298
Poe, Alvin	298	Peters, Bettie	321
Peters, Bettie	321	Purington, Wm. J.	346, 359
Purington, Wm. J.	346, 359	Parker, H. E.	385
Parker, H. E.	385	R.
R.		Rittenhouse, E.	9, 54, 78, 206, 238, 371, 393
Rittenhouse, E.	9, 54, 78, 206, 238, 371, 393	Rood, Mrs. A. B.	235
Rood, Mrs. A. B.	235	Runyan, M. E.	262
Runyan, M. E.	262	Redman, H.	319
Redman, H.	319	Redd, H. J.	374, 387
Redd, H. J.	374, 387	S.
S.		Supplee, S. G.	3
Supplee, S. G.	3	Strong, R. M.	38, 355
Strong, R. M.	38, 355	Swartout, Kate	43, 154, 186, 323
Swartout, Kate	43, 154, 186, 323	Shockley, Amelia	91
Shockley, Amelia	91	Smith, A. E.	91, 271, 378
Smith, A. E.	91, 271, 378	Skinner, J. T.	158, 277
Skinner, J. T.	158, 277	Shipp, N. J.	159
Shipp, N. J.	159	Slawson, W. B.	225, 249
Slawson, W. B.	225, 249	Shanklin, Ella	246
Shanklin, Ella	246	Street, Mrs. J.	265
Street, Mrs. J.	265	Staton, G. W.	282, 347
Staton, G. W.	282, 347	Smith, M. A.	334
Smith, M. A.	334	Scott, T. H.	394
Scott, T. H.	394	T.
T.		Trott, J. N.	14
Trott, J. N.	14	Tomlinson, N.	31, 126, 170
Tomlinson, N.	31, 126, 170	Turner, Ira	110
Turner, Ira	110	Titmus, David	126
Titmus, David	126	Teague, J. A.	127
Teague, J. A.	127	True, J. M.	139, 390
True, J. M.	139, 390	Trussell, E. C.	142
Trussell, E. C.	142	Thornberry, J. E.	234
Thornberry, J. E.	234	Tarusett, Anna	262
Tarusett, Anna	262	Trublood, E. A.	263
Trublood, E. A.	263	Turnidge, V. J.	294
Turnidge, V. J.	294	Tharp, W. N.	307
Tharp, W. N.	307	Tolley, Wm. P.	337
Tolley, Wm. P.	337	Terry, S. E.	362
Terry, S. E.	362	V.
V.		Vail, D. M.	54, 95, 262, 326
Vail, D. M.	54, 95, 262, 326	Varnes, E. D.	79, 169
Varnes, E. D.	79, 169	Vanmeter, I. N.	167
Vanmeter, I. N.	167	Vansteenburgh, Georgia	267
Vansteenburgh, Georgia	267	W.
W.		West, P.	37
West, P.	37	Wyman, S. E.	54
Wyman, S. E.	54	Wells, Rebecca	69
Wells, Rebecca	69	Wyman, T. J.	95, 235
Wyman, T. J.	95, 235	Welborn, Wm. R.	109, 290
Welborn, Wm. R.	109, 290	Williamson, A. H.	171
Williamson, A. H.	171	White, E. V.	222
White, E. V.	222	Walden, Mrs. S. J.	253
Walden, Mrs. S. J.	253	Walton, J. C.	267
Walton, J. C.	267	Winfield, Hattie A.	305
Winfield, Hattie A.	305	Wien, Alice	321
Wien, Alice	321	Whitcomb, L. C.	333
Whitcomb, L. C.	333	Y.
Y.		Yeoman, J. H.	18, 134
Yeoman, J. H.	18, 134	Yarbrough, H. P.	375
Yarbrough, H. P.	375

H.		R.		EDITORIALS.		Titus i. 15, 16	388
Halstead, Minnie	8	Richards, Deacon D.	31	Introductory to Volume Sixty-		Order	396
Hoffman, Mrs. E. J.	24	Reynolds, Deacon C.	39	Two	4	Difference Between Old and New
Henson, R. C.	24	Rimer, Mrs. E. R.	47	Atonement (Romans v. 11)	12	School Baptists	396, 406
Harris, Lena	39	Records, W. S.	119	Egypt Healed (Isa. xix. 18, 19)	20	Revelation xxii. 19	397
Hallenbeck, J. W.	47	Reed, I. C.	159	Potatoes and Missions	28	Luke xv. 7	404
Hess, Reuben	56	Richardson, L. H.	207	Perverted Scriptures	36	Matthew xxiv. 28	405
Housel, Daniel	87	Rittenhouse, E. F.	327	Choose Life (Deut. xxx. 19)	44	2 Corinthians ii. 7, 11	412
Hastings, Anna	88			Godly Fear (Heb. xii. 28, 29)	52	Intercommunion	413
Hesket, Mrs. E. R.	102	S.		The Prayer of Faith (James v. 13-15)	60
Hogaboom, Mrs. J.	103	Skinner, Salathiel	7	Rescinding Ordination	68	CIRCULAR LETTERS.
Harding, M. E.	111	Search, J. M.	15	An Evil Spirit from God (1 Sam. xvi. 14, 15)	76	Baltimore	189
Hanson, Mrs. Mary	175	Silcott, Mrs. M.	39	A Ransom for All (1 Timothy ii. 5, 6)	84	Delaware	189
Hatfield, Mrs. L.	215	Smith, J. E.	55	Sifting the Saints (Luke xxii. 31, 32)	92	Delaware River	197
Hite, Mrs. A. B.	255	Sanders, Arden	63	Prove Your Own Selves (2 Cor. xiii. 5)	100	Warwick	198
Hughes, Barnett	271	Smith, M. L.	71	Constraining Love (2 Cor. v. 14, 15)	108	Chemung	205
Harding, T. A.	303	Stout, Mrs. C. E.	87	Knowing Your Election (1 Thess. i. 4)	116	Licking	302
Hix, Mrs. M.	303	Sutphen, Mrs. M. H.	87	Belief and Sealing (Eph. i. 13, 14)	124	Roxbury	302
Hines, S. E.	327	Spurgeon, Mrs. E. A.	87	Apostolic Entreaty (1 Peter ii. 11, 12)	132	Powell's Valley	309
Hyatt, T. M.	360	Strobeck, G. W.	102	Learned Superstition (Acts xvii. 22, 23)	140	Mt. Pleasant	317
Heckard, P. B.	375	Scarborough, Mrs. P.	118	The Children of Zion (Isa. xlix. 20, 21)	148	Lexington	317
J.		Schutts, Morgan & Mrs. E.	119	Children of the Devil (John viii. 44)	156	Maine Conference	325
James, Mrs. C.	32	Shelton, Ella	151	A Speckled Bird (Jer. xii. 9)	164	Maine Association	325
Jackson, E. L.	183	Stone, Mrs. P.	159	Weary Ones	172	New Hope	335
Jones, Capt. B. F.	183	Slack, Mrs. E. L.	159	The Seed of the Righteous (Psa. xxxvii. 25)	180	Corresponding, Va.	347
Jackson, Mrs. M. A.	399	Sims, Mrs. S. A.	175	The God of Peace (Heb. xiii. 20, 21)	188	Juniata	351
K.		Sherrick, Mrs. R.	207	The Blessed Poor	196	Salisbury	358
Keator, Joel	63	Skinner, A. A.	303	Evil Determined	204
Kugler, Mrs. E.	103	Smith, Mrs. M.	399	Strangers and Pilgrims (Heb. ix. 13)	212	Baltimore	190
Kugler, A. M.	135			The House of Prayer	220	Delaware	190
Kessler, J. P.	159	T.		Death of Elder Wm. J. Puring-	228, 239	Warwick	198
Kiff, Mrs. F. E.	223	Turner, J. A.	8	ton	228, 239	Delaware River	199
L.		True, S. W.	15	Jesus the End of Prophecy	228	Chemung	213
Little, Mrs. M. M.	71	Tompkins, Mrs. E.	71	The Path of Life (Psalm xvi.)	236	Licking	295
Libby, Mrs. Mary	175	Tomlin, Mrs. N.	175	Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen. xlviii. 20)	244	Roxbury	302
Lenon, Mrs. M. E.	183	Terwilliger, Mrs. L.	223	Bochim—Weepers (Judges ii. 5)	252	Powell's Valley	309
Lament, Mrs. Olive	247	Turner, Thomas	287	Withdrawal	260	Lexington	318
Lindsey, Mrs. Jane	295	Terry, N. T.	319	Editorial Matter	268	Mt. Pleasant	318
Lovegrove, Mrs.	303	Truitt, Burton	367	The Temple of God (1 Cor. iii. 17)	268	Maine Association	327
Lake, Mrs. A. M.	319			Ministerial Qualifications	276, 284	Juniata	347
Larue, Mrs. M.	327	V.		Reply to W. J. May	279	Salisbury	359
Lippencott, Mrs. M.	367	Vermilyea, Edward	23	Reply to Silas H. Durand	286
Mc.		Vandyke, Deacon J. S.	39	Follow me	292	SELECTED.
McWilliams, Mrs. N.	7	Vanmeter, Mrs. R. C.	47	Psalm lxxvi. 1, 2	300	Hands Off the School Fund	47
McDonald, Ina C. & Edith L.	47	Vermilyea, Mrs. C.	167	Jeremiah xxiii. 33-40	308	Divine Leading and Teaching	211
McKean, M. D.	56	Vancleave, T. J.	255	Hebrews vi. 1-8	316	The Highway Cast Up	273
McColl, F. B.	103	Vail, Mrs. E.	360	Religious Atheism	324	The Sabbath	337
McMillen, Sarah	119	Vanmeter, Elder I. N.	414	Fellowship	332	Weak Hands and Feeble Knees	369
McKinstry, George	143	W.		1 John iii. 10	340	Spiritual Miracles	379
McKean, Jefferson	175	Welling, H. A.	71	An Able Discourse	348	Ebenezer	410
McGuire, J. W. & Lee	303	Witty, Mrs. M.	103	Building upon the Foundation	348
M.		Winchel, Mrs. D.	103	(1 Cor. iii. 10-15)	348	CHURCH LETTERS.
Miles, Lydia	15	Wicks, Edward	111	Jesus Lifted Up (John xii. 32)	356	Black Rock, Md.	199
Meredith, Lola	102	Weaver, D.	143	A Word to the Dry Baptists	357	Middletown & Wallkill, N. Y.	221
Middleditch, Mrs. Jane	224	Wood, John	143	No Forgiveness (Matt. xii. 31, 32)	364	New Valley, Va.	351
Morgan, Mrs. M. A.	239	Wendell, Mrs. F.	159	Righteousness Wrought Out and	365,	Dry Fork	358
Meredith, Deacon P.	247	Weaver, Dickson	207	Righteousness Brought In	389
Montague, Polly	287	Wright, Jacob	232	Scarcely Saved (1 Peter iv. 18)	372	MISCELLANEOUS.
Milner, Mrs. E. B.	344	White, Mrs. S. E.	263	Predestination (Psalm xevii. 1)	373	Extracts from Minutes of Dela-
Mullock, Mrs. Lydia	375	Wood, Mrs. C.	375	Glad Tidings	380	ware River Association	223
Money, C. M.	399	Wilder, G. P.	375	Salutatories	380, 381
N.				Melchisedec (Heb. vii. 1-3)	381	ORDINATIONS.
Neal, Mrs. S.	16					Chapman, John	80
Newman, M. J.	79	POETRY.				Sanford, R. W.	175
Nave, Mrs. M.	111	When Israel toward the prom-				Kemp, A. (Deacon)	247
Nesley, Jonas	119	ised land	49			Hammons, J. H.	391
Newman, Deacon R. R.	247	I called at the house of the	57
O.		mourner below	57			CHURCHES CONSTITUTED.
Osborn, Mrs. M.	39	Eternal! Infinite! thy name we	121			Loop River, Neb.	215
Odell, D. S.	103	praise	121			Shohola Creek, Pa.	287
Owens, Mrs. M.	111	O how the thought delights my	169			Little Flock, Neb.	391
P.		soul	169
Pruitt, Mrs. E. E.	64	O thou eternal Sun, let grace	209
Poling	143	divine	209
Palmer, W. H. F.	143	Filled with weariness and pain	209
Purington, Wm. J.	239	Spirit from whose operation	225
Potter, Mrs. Huldah	247	O why should the spirit of mor-	233
Pilchard, W. J.	279	tal be proud	233
Pipe, Mrs. Samuel	287	I hear of a land whose inhabit-	249
Pace, Deacon Wm.	303	ants never	249
Peters, Mrs. T.	327	You were longing for the freedom	265
Pettipiece, Mrs. M. J.	352	Art thou with true humility	361
Prichard, Matthias	391	Is the road very dreary	361
Parsons, Edna	414	Son of God, I bow before thee	385				